Women's center stresses counseling over politics

Nancy Giudice doesn't have much to complain about. As director of Manchester Community College's Women's Center, she can't think of much that's wrong at the school. I can't manufacture problems," she said, when asked for an example of something she thinks the college should do differently in its treatment of

Her attitude is reflected in the kind of women's center that Giudice, who has been director since September 1988, runs. The focus is more on counseling and support than politics. "This is a personal place; it's a friendly place," she said.

Located on the second floor of the Lowe Building, the center runs a number of self-help groups, such as a "Women Who Love Too Much" group. The center has also sponsored workshops on assertiveness, divorce, and counseling for battered women. The center also serves as an art gallery for women artists. Each month, a years ago, when she became a volundifferent woman's work is displayed on the walls. A library of woman-oriented books is open to students as well as women in the community. A used clothing exchange offers women free clothing in good condition.

Giudice defends the low-key approach of the center. "I think the world really changes when the individual changes. Don't started with consciousness raising which is very personal and very supportive," Giudice said.

due to Giudice's own background. She received a master's degree in counseling and higher education at Central Connecticut College last year. "My counseling skills come in handy because they're people skills," she said. Giudice, 46, grew up in New Britain and now lives in Plainville. She obtained her undergraduate degree in 1965 from Central Connecticut State College, as the school was then called. She then spent the next several years raising three boys. "I enjoyed raising children," she The lack of day care available at the time also was a factor, she said. "If you didn't have a grandmother or an aunt or a private home to place your children in, you really didn't have a choice," she said. She did not become involved in the women's movement until about 10 teer at the Prudence Crandall Center For Women, a battered women's shelter in New Britain.

"That was the beginning of my education as a feminist," she said. "I learned that society does discriminate against women." She stayed with the shelter for over three years and even-

Democrats are probably right when they say a decision by Republicans to delay funding a study of Center Springs Pond is penny wise and pound foolish. But their protest is made all the less believable by the failure of three of the Democrats to be present when the matter was voted on at a meeting of the Board of Directors last week.

Clearly, public officials cannot be present for every vote on every matter. But the matter here was one staunchly supported by Democrats throughout the political campaign and even before. When it came time to vote on the matter, only one of the four Democrats on the board was present.

Some of the Democrats have said they believed the Republican majority on the board would support the study, designed to determine whether the pond can be used as a skating area.

At least one has said she believed her vote to be "irrelevant" because the Republicans have voted as a bloc on most issues.

That reasoning is inexcusable and gives all the more weight to Republican Director Susan Buckno's claim that the Democratic Party is simply "having a great deal of difficulty" accepting the fact that after 18 years in power they are the

It has been said that the way to become the majority party is to be an effective minority. Manchester Democrats learned that a long time ago. The Republican Party mastered the lesson more recently. Now it appears the Democrats need a refresher course.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to stress my agreement with your opinion of teachers inappropriately using grades as punishment for students' behavior. I still carry resentment (after 15 years) over such ar experience in high school. Toward the end of our senior year, five of us were tardy for math class. It was intentional — a conspired "lark" — and the teacher knew it. Our punishment was a drop of one letter grade for the

Following a mild protest by the parents and students involved, and a little push from the principal, the teacher agreed to give us a "second chance," We would have to earn an "A" on a math test especially designed by this teacher. Only two of us opted to try. Well, I failed the test, so did the other student. Although I was a straight-A student, I never in all my life had seen a more difficult

Granted, intentional tardiness was immature, but none of us had ever given this teacher any trouble before. The punishment might not have remained so clearly in my memory except for the fact that it prevented me from becoming salutatorian of my class, which would have meant a lot to my parents.

It is said that people can touch the lives of others in very significant ways through the smallest of actions. You can bet I'll never forget that teacher's name.

FROM KANSAS DEAR ABBY: I didn't think I'd ever write to Dear Abby, but I can't resist commenting on the controversy about whether a teacher should lower the grade of a student for giving or accepting "help" from another student during an examination Many who responded seemed to feel that a student should receive the grade he or she earned and not have it lowered for any reason. Well, in the state of Idaho, a student must attend 90 percent of the classes or he/she will get no credit for that class. In our school district, that means students who miss seven days of school in a trimester will receive no credit, even if they have done all the work and would otherwise get an "A." To add insult to injury, students are counted absent if they miss a class due to a school activity - band, sports, drama, debate or even counseling. In the parents' handbook sent home from our school, it states that if students have missed more than six days, they will receive no credit, but are still expected to attend school and do all the work. I cannot imagine anything that would do more to encourage a student to drop out of

I am all for preparing our young people to live produc-tively in the adult world. However, I firmly believe that those students who have done all the work and passed a the tests should be given full credit for the class. UPSET IN IDAHO DEAR UPSET IN IDAHO AND FROM KANSAS

Many readers disagreed with me, but I still maintain that for cheating, skipping school and unacceptable behavior, appropriate punishment is in order. Expulsion or suspension might be an alternative, but teachers should not tamper with a student's scholastic record.

If character references are required, the student's character blemishes should be clearly stated, but a student's grades should reflect that student's scholastic ability - and nothing else.

Drug may help stop urine block

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is finasteride? DEAR READER: Finasteride is a drug made b Merck and Co., Inc. for treatment of benign prostatic hyperplasia, or BPH, in men. BPH is non-cancerous overgrowth of the prostate gland, leading to blockage of urine. The customary treatment for BPH is surgery, to remove part of the gland and allow proper drainage from

Because BPH affects most men as they age, the development of a drug to shrink the prostate would have far-reaching consequences. As yet, finasteride has only investigational status, meaning that until it has been fully tested, it will not be released for general use. However,

Tailored suits make the man

Retail clothiers, long before the time of haberdasher Harry Truman, were saying, "Clothes make the man." But all men are not created equal, and off-the-rack suits do not always show them at their best. Consider the man with broad shoulders and a thin waist, or short legs and wide hips, or large stomach and small neck. In the past, men like these have had to settle for ready-niade suits that may not fit properly. Now, as ready-made suits have increased in price - the best, like within the reach of more buyers at prices not dramatically different from suits off the rack. "Suits that fit do a lot for a man's frame of mind," says Claude Barchi, a leading New York-based custom tailor. "No man has a perfect body, and a good custom tailor can camouflage his physical shortcomings. If one leg is shorter than the other, if one shoulder slopes, if he's flat or barrel chested, custom tailoring can compensate for it. There's no problem. What's more, he gets his choice of fabric, style, silhouette and color." Prices for custom tailoring can be as low as $400 from Hong Kong tailors to the more elegant suits, which begin at $900 and go higher from tailors like Barchi. Better men's stores may also offer custom tailoring, often from the same workshops that cut their top ready-made suits. To make sure you get true value from a purchase that costs that much money, Claude Barchi has compiled some rules for those buying their first custom suits: Consider the style and color. Deep, darker tones, subdued patterns and stripes help you look taller and slimmer. Also, the most practical colors are navy blue and solid gray or a pin-striped version of the colors.

Oxford, go for more than $1,000 - custom suits are

2. Examine the fabric. The best fabric is super 120 percent or super 100 percent wool made in either England or taly. When you're selecting fabric, ask the tailor to show you the label so you can ascertain that the wool comes from one of these two countries. Never be bullied into accepting polyester or wool blends. 3. Check the weight of the wool. Pick a 9 1/2-ounce wool, if you want a suit you can wear 12 months a year. A suit made of 11- or 12-ounce wool will be uncomfortable during the summer months, but will be functional during the rest of the year. And a suit made of 14-ounce wool is designed to be worn during the winter months. 4. When you go for your first fitting, it is a good idea to put the items you usually put into your suit jacket and trousers. In addition, wear the type of shirt and shoes you plan to wear with the suit.

5. During the fitting, make sure that everything sewn with silk thread, that the edge of the jacket, the area around the collar, the sleeves, the button holes and waistband of the trousers and the button hole in the trousers are all hand-stitched. Also check to see if there are four button holes in the sleeves and one on the left

6. Look in a three-way mirror to make sure that the collar is snug to the neck and doesn't move. The jacket should fit the back and the shoulders without wrinkling or creeping up and there should not be too much of a break or too much padding in the shoulders. When the jacket is buttoned, it should fit smoothly across the chest with the collar hugging the shirt collar snugly without wrinkles or gaps. The shoulder sleeves should be smooth without puckering and the lapels should lie perfectly flat. The jacket collar should fall one-quarter inch below the shirt collar. Shirt cuffs should end where the hand joins the wrist, with the jacket cuffs exposing one-half inch of the shirt. The hem of the jacket should be at the midpoint of the thumb.

7. In terms of the trousers, the waistband should be above the navel and horizontal to the ground, with just enough room to slip your hand into the waistband when it's fastened and the seat area and crotch must be comfortable without being baggy. It's always a good idea to sit down in the trousers after the fitting to determine that they fit comfortably.

dozens killed in Romania

VIENNA, Austria (AP) - Gunfire was reported early today in the streets of a western Romanian city where witnesses say security forces have shot and killed dozens of people in anti-government rioting that began over the weekend. Unconfirmed reports have put the death toll at up to 400 and one witness was quoted as saying he saw helicopters fire on crowds in the city of Timisoara.

Romania has virtually scaled its borders in an apparent attempt to prevent details from emerging of the unrest, which a Hungarian newspaper said had spread to two other Transylvanian cities - Arad and Brasov.

The unrest is the most serious since November 1987 in the country whose leaders have refused to stray from orthodox Communism. State-controlled Romanian media have made no mention of the unrest, and Western reporters have been prevented from entering the country. Most reports have come from travelers leaving Romania or from dents by telephone. In Timisoara beginning on Saturday, thousands of people have violently vented rage at hard-line President Nicolae Ceausescu for his intolerance and the hardships he has forced Romanians to endure. Greek dental students, who had been attending school in the city, said late Monday after crossing into Yugoslavia that they had seen soldiers shoot indiscriminately at protesters, "killing dozens." The students said they heard protesters shout "Freedom!" "Down with Ceausescu!" and "Bread!" A Western resident of Timisoara who crossed into Yugoslavia told The Associated Press that the extent of the weekend violence was "horrifying" and that he saw several corpses on the streets. "Tiananmen is nothing compared to Timisoara," he said, speaking on killed in June when Chinese troops
