Eagles scare St. Joseph

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

You can bet that the next time St. Joseph High of Trumbull, the top-ranked boys' basketball team in the state, plays East Catholic, it will be properly prepared mentally.

They'd better be, following the young Eagles' gallant performance in a losing effort, 73-62, in All Connecticut Conference action Friday night before a crowd of 700 at the Rev. Robert E. Saunders gymnasium.

East, 1-1 in the ACC and 5-4 overall, gave the visiting Cadets all they could handle for 28 of the 32 minutes.

The Eagles trailed unbeaten St. Joe's, 2-0 in the ACC and 8-0 overall, by a mere point (54-53) after two Billy Evans free throws with 4:23 left in the game. East countered nearly a three-minute scoring drought turning the ball over five times while the Cadets went on a 13-0 run and led, 67-53, after two Pat Petrie free throws with exactly two minutes remaining.

Six-foot-7 forward Mustapha Hoff scored a team-high 24 points, 14 in the third quarter, to lead St. Joe's while guard Doremus Bennerman added 23. Eagle sophomore P.J. Monahan, coming off a 36-point effort versus Notre Dame a week ago, pumped in a game-high 25 points, including five 3-pointers.

Huff and 6-9 center Matt Gras grabbed 14 and 13 rebounds, respectively.

"You see me sweating," St. Joseph coach Vito Montelli said. "You're darn right I was worried. We knew they were a good club. We knew they were good perimeter shooters. We know they have talented sophomores. We tried to get our kids up and told them that this team could be trouble. I thought they'd be ready to play. But, I think they had to see it for themselves."

The Cadets saw enough of East in the first half, especially Monahan. East led by as many as six points (12-6) and held a 14-13 lead after one quarter behind seven Monahan points. Monahan added eight more points in the second, including a pair of 3-pointers, and the game was tied at 31-all at halftime. Bennerman had 10 first-half points.

Hoff totally dominated the third quarter, scoring 14 of his team's 19 points. The Cadets went on a 9-0 tear to open the quarter and led 40-31 before a Monahan 3-pointer with 1:55 seconds left in the third pulled East to within six, 50-44.

"We played a great game," East coach Bill Finnegan said. "I'm really proud of them. We're making progress. He (Hoff) was the difference in the game. Bennerman is a great guard, but I really think that Hoff was the difference."

Monahan's final 3-pointer of the evening to start the fourth quarter cut the Cadet lead to 50-47. After Evans' pair of free throws sliced the lead to 54-53, St. Joe's took control the rest of the way. The Cadets, who attempted only one foul shot before the fourth, sank 14 of 23 foul shots in the final eight minutes to gain a hard-fought victory.

"The beginning of the third quarter, we were going to him (Hoff) inside," Montelli said. "We were careless defensively. They (East) took care of the ball real well. This crew (East); they play well."

"Though very pleased with his club's performance, Finnegan said.

PASS — East Catholic's P.J. Monahan (30) passes to teammate Rob Penders during Friday night's ACC game against St. Joseph. Monahan had 25 points but the Eagles bowed to the No. 1 ranked Cadets, 73-62.

Colleges asking dramatic fee increases

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

Some of the fees we are very much concerned about," said Connie Zak, board spokeswoman. "We realize there are increases needed to cover inflation and collective bargaining. (But) we feel in some cases they may be excessive."

For example, UConn is seeking 19.3 percent, or $328, increase in the $1,700 annual fee for a double room. The board staff is recommending an 11.4 percent, or $193 increase.

The annual meals fee would go from $1,960 to $2,230 a year, a 13.8 percent increase under the UConn proposal. The board staff wants that reduced to 8.7 percent, or $170.

Increases for the dormitory fees at the four Connecticut State University campuses, in Danbury, New Haven, New Britain and Willimantic, are more modest and are expected to be approved by the board.

For example, the double-room fee would go up 5 percent on the New Britain campus, to $1,880, a $90 increase. The fee on the Willimantic campus would rise by 9.3 percent, or $150, to $1,764, under the recommendation expected to be approved by the board.

UConn is seeking a 15.1 percent, or $140 increase in what's known as the general university fee, covering such things as athletic programs, health services and student unions. The board recommends a 10 percent, or $93, boost, which would send the fee from the current $930 to $1,023.

The board is expected to go along with general university fee increases at the Connecticut State University campuses, ranging from 7.3 percent at the Danbury campus, to $428; or 18.7 percent at the New Haven campus, to $298.

Soviets rush troops to 'war front'

Ethnic turmoil kills 32

By Andrew Katell
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Azerbaijanis and Armenians appeared on the verge of open warfare today after the Soviet Union's bloodiest ethnic conflict exploded in clashes and pogroms that claimed at least 32 lives, official media reported.

The Kremlin flew reinforcements of internal security troops to Azerbaijan to try to stop the bloodletting, the worst between the two ethnic groups since their long-simmering feud in the Caucasus boiled over nearly two years ago.

Soviet media said authorities had lost control in some parts of the southern republic, where most of the victims were Armenians attacked by mobs of Azerbaijanis in the capital of Baku. Many Armenians were reported fleeing.

The official Tass news agency said some Azerbaijanis were armed with machine guns and said that in one part of the republic, Communist and government officials were taken hostage.

Soviet radio said high-level troubleshooters were dispatched to Baku, where the killing began Saturday night and continued Sunday, and to Yerevan, capital of the neighboring republic of Armenia.

Armenia is in a state of battle readiness," Karen Shakhbazyan, an Armenian activist, said today by telephone from Yerevan, where Soviet television said people were reported massing outside government offices demanding the return of weapons confiscated from them earlier.

Igor Kudrin, a commentator for state-run Soviet TV, said in a news broadcast today that the latest reports from the region "are reminiscent of news from the war front."

A Russian witness in Baku described a street swash in blood and said victims there included two women tossed from balconies and an old woman who was shot point-blank when confronted by an unruly mob. She spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisal.

Mayor Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven said today he is responding to a complaint from one Main Street business manager who says she is frustrated in dealing with the number of homeless people who loiter and cause problems in her restaurant during the day when the Samaritan Shelter across the street is closed.

The mayor said he met Sunday with Ellis Ribero, general manager of Friendly's Ice Cream, 435 Main St., and plans to meet with officials of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which runs the shelter, to try to find a place where homeless people can go during the day.

Ribero said she is frustrated in dealing with loiterers and homeless people who abuse the restaurant's services, such as its restrooms and "bottomless" coffee cup, in which a purchased cup of coffee can be refilled for free. The general manager said she recently set a three-cup refill limit because of this.

Also, homeless people often loiter in the restaurant for hours, and this causes other problems, she said.

"They don't leave," Ribero said. "The just want to stay here and sit. Many who come in don't have any money, and the ones that do, just order a cup of coffee and ask for refills."

Other complaints she said she has include homeless people who wash themselves and drink alcohol in the STATE OF THE DREAM — Coretta Scott King delivers the 22nd annual "State of the Dream" address Sunday at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

Widow sees 'dream' unfulfilled

By Debra Elliott
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Martin Luther King Jr.'s motto "We shall overcome" has spread from the South to South Africa, Eastern Europe and the Far East, but his dream remains unfulfilled, his widow said before today's holiday honoring him.

Church services, parades, and other celebrations were held nationwide during the weekend before the federal holiday, which for the first time falls on the slain civil-rights leader's actual birthday.

He would have been 61 today.

This year's holiday follows a series of bombings and threats, apparently racially motivated, in the Southeast, and a flareup of racial tensions in Boston after an apparent hoax in which a white man had claimed a black mugger fatally shot his pregnant wife.

It also comes at a time of gains for blacks — the election of David Dinkins, first black mayor of New York City, and the nation's first elected black governor, L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia.

There were plans in all 50 states and 144 other countries for bells to ring and for a moment of silence in honor of King at 12:30 p.m. EST. The Liberty Bell in Philadelphia was to be tapped, and the New York Stock Exchange planned to pause.

Events planned in Atlanta, King's hometown, included an ecumenical service at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where he was pastor, and a "March of Celebration."

The parade was being televised nationally for the first time.

King, the son of an Atlanta Baptist minister, led non-violent marches in the South in the 1950s and 1960s in a quest to end discrimination against blacks and other minorities. He was assassinated on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn.

Police Roundup

Man, found in store, arrested
A 34-year-old Manchester man was arrested early this morning after he was found inside of Sears Roebuck and Co., 348 W. Middle Turnpike, at the Manchester Postcard, police said.

Craig Hinson, of 55 Grant Road, was not supposed to be in the building at the time, and he was charged with burglary and criminal mischief, police said. Police said they found Hinson inside when they responded to an alarm at the store at 12:15 a.m. A police report on the incident has not been filed, and additional details relating to the incident were unavailable earlier today, according to police.

Vending machine theft charged
A 30-year-old Windsor man was arrested Friday afternoon after he allegedly broke into and tried to steal food from vending machines at Calder, 1145 Tolland Turnpike, police said.

Jeffrey M. Moskies used a "copy key," or duplicate key to open up two of the vending machines and dump about $75 in coins into his pockets, police said.

He was charged with larceny and illegal entry into a coin machine, held on $500 bond and is scheduled to appear Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court, police said.

Thoughts

Some time ago, the Herald ran an intriguing column by George Plagens entitled "Morning Worship is Upside Down." He argued there that it would make more sense for Christians to hold their Sabbath worship services in the evening than in the morning. He gave several reasons to back his position, and used the Jewish model as a proof text. Were it only so that we had the correct answer!

My experience is that where we Jews tried evening worship as a substitute for morning prayers, we failed. Contrary to what you would believe reading Plagens' article, the major Jewish Sabbath worship service is in the morning. We also pray on Friday evening, but that is traditionally a brief service before dinner. In the United States, where it was not conducive to observe the Sabbath in a traditional manner on Saturday, many synagogues moved their major worship experience to Friday night after dinner. This worked for many years, but isn't working any more. We now have a large number of worshippers at the morning service and the only time the evening service works is when there is some "special attraction" in the form of a speaker or program.

Pattis chides McCavanagh as 'phantom,' plans to run

By Alex Girelli Manchester Herald

Norman Pattis, a former member of the campaign committee for Republican gubernatorial hopeful Joel Schiavone, is considering a run against Democratic state Rep. James McCavanagh in Manchester's 12th Assembly District.

Pattis resigned from the Schiavone committee Friday, one day after it was disclosed that he had contributed $500 to the campaign of Schiavone's political rival, U.S. Representative William A. O'Neill.

"Mr. McCavanagh is nobody's man but the governor's," Pattis said. McCavanagh, who has been representative from the 12th District since 1983, ran unopposed in 1988.

He said this morning that he would not deny he is a friend of the governor, but he added that he is not a member of the governing party.

"Every time I've asked the governor for something for Manchester, he says he'll get it for me," McCavanagh said. And McCavanagh said Pattis is assuming McCavanagh will run for office again.

"My goal now is to represent Manchester in the next session of the Legislature," McCavanagh said. "I'll decide later whether to run again."

Pattis was a Democrat until October. He said he left the party because of what he termed "the snugness of party leaders in Manchester and Hartford."

He said he will continue to support Schiavone.

Impasse continues on Route 6

By Rick Santos Manchester Herald

Five months after a wetlands permit was denied for the Route 6 expressway project, an impasse continues between the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Transportation.

Although the DOT is considering making slight modifications to its own rejected plans for the highway project, a spokesman for the corps is saying any revised plans would have to be "significantly different" to be approved.

The corps last August rejected a wetlands permit for the project.

William F. Lawless, chief of the regulatory branch of the New England Division of the corps, said the DOT rejected a wetlands permit in August because "the Clean Water Act requires us to accept only the least damaging practical alternative." "We have the authority to define what is practical," Lawless said.

One of the practical alternatives, according to the corps, is to widen the existing Route 6 from two to four lanes, rather than redirect an 11.8-mile stretch of road, filling in 77 acres of wetlands in the process.

However, James F. Sullivan, the DOT's deputy commissioner for planning, says the plan to widen the road will not work because the highway cannot function as an expressway and a main street, Route 6 would slightly reduce the amount of wetlands affected.

Although the two seem to be at odds, they agree on the need to develop a safer and faster road to tie the Willimantic area to Hartford. Federal money for the project will run up in 1992, Sullivan said, so the plans must be approved by then.

Cleveland refused to comment today on the reassignments, and the three former task force members all were unavailable earlier today.

A fourth task force member, Detective Sgt. Donald Wright, reportedly has left the drug unit voluntarily, preferring reassignment to the patrol division, Wood said.

The three former task force members disagreed with increased administrative requirements, such as more paperwork, that were the result of new police accreditation standards, according to Wood. The department formerly received national accreditation for the first time last year, and now must comply with new requirements, he said.

The reassignments are not demotions, Wood said. There will be no loss of pay for those officers, he said.

Wood said he thinks that Cleveland has done a "terrific" job as commander of the task force. Simply stated, he said, "When you meet resistance in an organization, you change the personnel."

Wood said he is looking forward to working full time with the narcotics squad, as he did several years ago.

Three removed from drug force

By Dianna M. Talbot Manchester Herald

Three members of the Tri-Town Narcotics Task Force have been reassigned to other positions at the Manchester Police Department following disagreements with their supervisor, said Gary Wood, spokesman for the department.

The Manchester officers, considered veteran members of the 4-year-old task force, which also includes police from Vernon and South Windsor, disagreed with certain management practices required by Lt. Ovetta Cleveland, who took over as task force commander in January 1989, Wood said.

According to Wood, Detective Joseph Morrissey, an eight-year member of the department and four-year member of the task force, has returned to the department's detective bureau. Also, Detective Sgt. Spencer Rauten, a 13-year department member, and Patrolman Wayne Rautenberg, a 21-year department member, have gone to the patrol division, Wood said.

Cleveland refused to comment today on the reassignments, and the three former task force members all were unavailable earlier today.

A fourth task force member, Detective Sgt. Donald Wright, reportedly has left the drug unit voluntarily, preferring reassignment to the patrol division, Wood said.

The three former task force members disagreed with increased administrative requirements, such as more paperwork, that were the result of new police accreditation standards, according to Wood. The department formerly received national accreditation for the first time last year, and now must comply with new requirements, he said.

The reassignments are not demotions, Wood said. There will be no loss of pay for those officers, he said.

Wood said he thinks that Cleveland has done a "terrific" job as commander of the task force. Simply stated, he said, "When you meet resistance in an organization, you change the personnel."

Bolton board member is not fazed by budget

By Rick Santos Manchester Herald

BOLTON — A member of the Board of Education said today that he was not surprised by the 14.12 percent increase proposed for next year's school budget by School Superintendent Richard Packman.

Packman, at a school board meeting last week, recommended a $5,887,035 budget for the 1990-91 fiscal year. The proposal is an increase of almost $750,000 from the current budget and is attributed mostly to increasing teacher salaries and insurance premiums and four school building and maintenance projects, said Thomas Manning, a Republican member of the board and the Board of Finance.

Manning said that almost half of the increase is because of rising teacher salaries. Teachers will be getting a 9 percent raise this year, which is the last year of their three-year contract.

Before the budget is enacted, it must be approved by the school board and the Board of Finance.

City council majority wants troopers to aid in drug fight

HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford's deputy mayor said he will ask Gov. William A. O'Neill today to restore a plan teaming state troopers with city police in anti-drug patrols, despite union opposition to the proposal.

Deputy Mayor J. Charles Mathews said the Hartford City Council will also urge local and state officials to meet with union officials to hammer out a patrol plan suitable to both police departments.

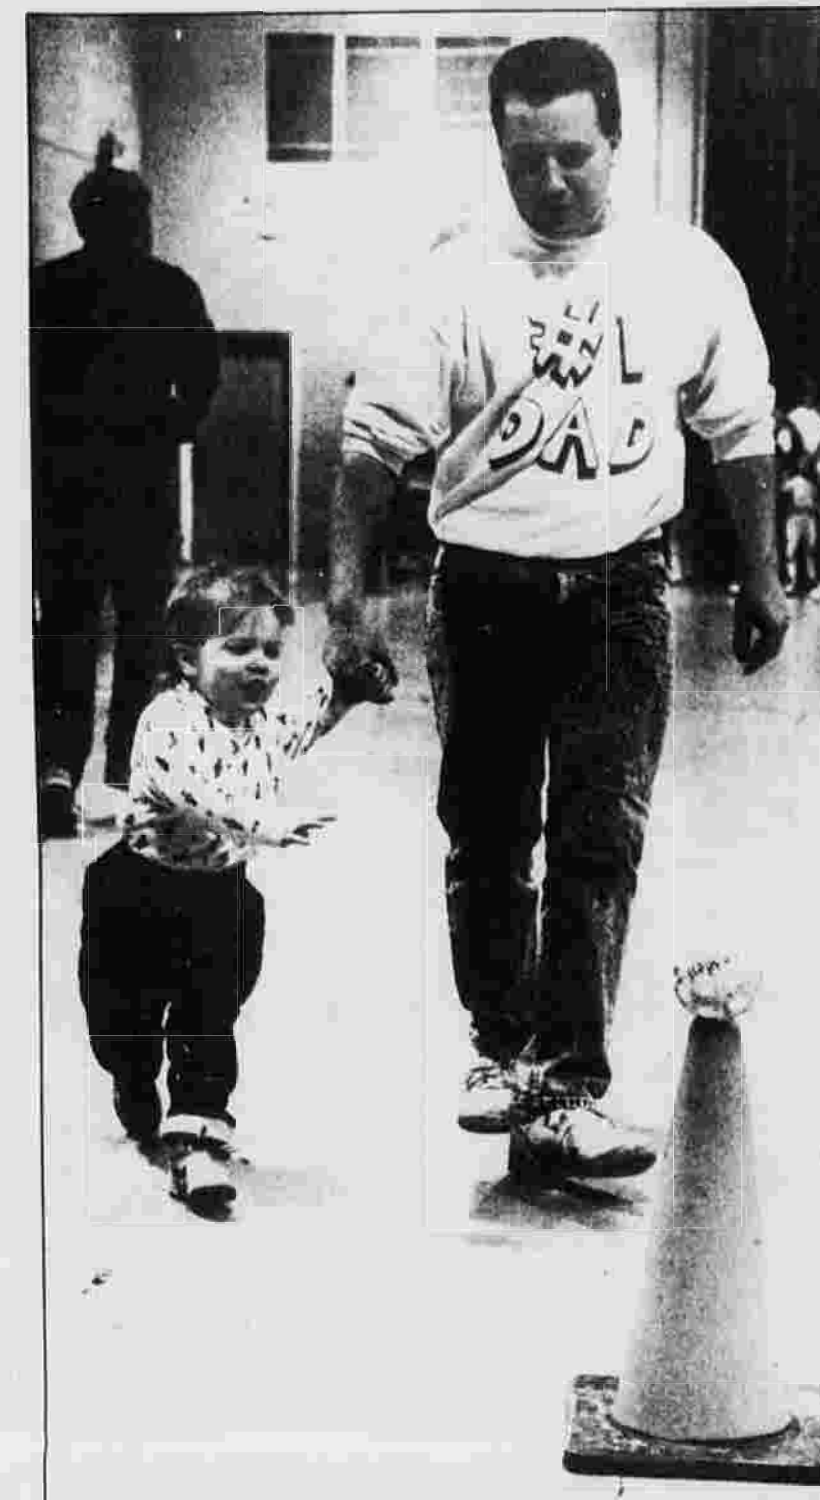

At a Sunday night closed caucus, the nine-member council's six Democratic members agreed to support a plan proposed by Gov. William A. O'Neill to assign six state troopers to the city of Hartford, Mathews said.

"I'm hopeful that when the union has a chance to review this and we put it on the table, any concerns that the union has can be quickly resolved," Mathews said. "I'm very hopeful that by early next week, we will have a team of state officers working with local officers."

Dennis M. O'Brien, president of the Hartford police union, said Sunday that he was disappointed by the decision. O'Brien said he was troubled that council members voted before hearing the union's concerns.

O'Brien has said the union would consider a program bringing troopers into the city, but only if the union is consulted in planning the

Ex-political prisoner now is a media star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In just a few weeks, Jennifer Jean Casolo, the Thomson, Conn., native accused in El Salvador of hiding weapons for leftist guerrillas, has gone from political prisoner to media star.

Since her release after 18 days in a Salvadoran jail, Casolo, 28, has been crisscrossing the United States on an 11-city speaking tour, negotiating movie and book deals and making the rounds of talk shows.

An NBC camera crew has trailed her throughout a recent visit to Los Angeles. Hollywood stars and activists court her at parties.

Casolo says she is learning to live with all of the attention.

"Because I've been thrust here, I have to speak," she says. "This position, of being the center of attention, is the most difficult thing I've ever had to do in my life."

Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who was enlisted to free Casolo from jail, says an entertainment lawyer who works with him has received approximately 10 movie offers for her story.

"It does seem to be a terrific story," Clark said. "Church people working in a country like that, where priests are getting killed, guns

Plea bargain program reduces backlog

HARTFORD (AP) — State court officials are hailing an experimental court program which allows for almost immediate plea bargaining in some cases, saying it helps to reduce court backlogs and ease jail overcrowding.

Under the early screening program, which began in Hartford and is being expanded to other Connecticut cities, a significant number of criminal cases are being resolved on the first day a defendant appears in court.

"I think it's working better than anybody hoped it could work," said Assistant Public Defender John F. Barry.

The program allows for almost immediate plea bargaining in cases where the defendant has been jailed because he cannot make bond.

The basic premise of the program is to have court employees start work earlier in the day to organize the paperwork. The public defender comes in early to interview defendants and then meet with the prosecutor.

In many cases the prosecutor and public defender can propose agreements, ranging from dismissal of charges to a prison term. All the agreements must be accepted by the judge on the first day.

In Hartford, where the program began Oct. 3, in some weeks as many as 41 cases were resolved. The average has been about 26 percent.

Before the program began, about 93 percent of the defendants had to make at least one other court appearance and they often spent the intervening time between their arrest and that appearance in jail.

The program was expanded to New Haven at the beginning of the month and there are indications it is spreading the process up.

Although complete statistics were not available in New Haven, during the first three days, nearly one-third of the cases were settled when the defendant appeared for arraignment, according to Lawrence L. D'Orsi, a Judicial Department official overseeing the program.

"I think it has a very positive effect on justice," said Chief Court Administrator Aaron Ment.

The program was intended to be used mostly for minor crimes. However, Barry, the public defender, said that in a significant

'Unhappy hens' slow supply; egg prices rise

HARTFORD (AP) — Consumers will see already record-high egg prices escalate through the winter months, experts say, as the trend is a good break for local producers.

James Rock, director of the University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension Poultry Division, said prices, which have jumped 30 to 40 cents over the last four months, are likely to remain high through mid-April.

The Farmers' Cooperative shows wholesale prices at $1.10 to $1.39 for a dozen large white eggs. A year ago they were 80 cents a dozen. The price reached a low of 69 cents in February.

The average retail price for large white eggs is $1.39 to $1.49 a dozen.

The market right now is at its highest level in six years," said a spokesman for the Central Connecticut Farmers' Cooperative.

Experts who track market trends expect an increase, he said, but "it went up a lot more than most experts thought it would," he said.

"Wholesale prices have been going up pretty much since October. There's been a steady rise in the Boston and New York markets," said Jane Murdock, Agricultural Marketing and Inspection representative for the state agriculture commission. The New York and Boston markets dictate prices throughout the Northeast.

Rock said last year's prices were unusually low, creating the climate for the price jump.

Some producers went out of business when the prices dropped, leaving fewer hens and fewer eggs.

"The hens aren't happy and they're not laying as much," Murdock said.

Thrill-seeking boat trip ends in man's drowning

CROMWELL (AP) — The body of a 26-year-old Vietnam man was pulled out of the chilly Connecticut River nearly 12 hours after his friend said they went rowing "seeking thrills."

Peter Gangloff's body was recovered by state police divers at 1:34 p.m. Saturday about 200 yards offshore in 20 feet of water a half-mile north of Gilderleeve Island, a Cromwell police spokesman and state police said.

Gangloff died from accidental drowning, a spokesman for the state medical examiner's office in Farmington said Sunday.

Gangloff's companion, Larry Shortell, 25, of Hartford swam to shore in the about 35 degree water near Cromwell after their small rowboat capsized at about 1 a.m. Saturday and told authorities about the accident.

"We were adventurous," Shortell said. "We were just seeking some thrills."

Police Lt. Anthony Salvatore said the men were boating for about three hours when the accident occurred. They were changing positions to switch oars when the boat capsized, Salvatore said.

"It was numb in 20 seconds," Shortell said. "I was sure I was going to make it myself."

Police using boats from the Cromwell and Portland fire departments and an Old Saybrook police helicopter searched for Gangloff through the morning.

Gangloff's brother Rick Gangloff said the two men went on the river to celebrate.

"My brother just thought a new house he was moving into this weekend," he said.

Communists lose edge in Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Parliament voted today to abolish the Communist Party's political monopoly and agreed to discuss further constitutional changes with the opposition, which is demanding a swift transition to democracy.

Lawmakers voted unanimously to delete clauses in the constitution that guaranteed Communist supremacy in Bulgaria for 44 years, following the lead of colleagues in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

On Sunday, more than 50,000 people rallied in Sofia to keep the pressure on legislators and demand the immediate dismissal of old-guard Communists still in the leadership. They chanted "Communists resign! Resign!"

Parliament was also expected to adopt a declaration backing the restoration of the rights of the Turkish-speaking minority that arose from talks last week among Communists, opposition figures, nationalist leaders and ethnic Turks.

The declaration aims to defuse ethnic tensions between Slavic nationalists and members of Bulgaria's estimated 1.2 million ethnic Turks.

They also adopted a proposal by Andrei Lukonov, the No. 2 official in the Communist Party, to set up the group that is to join lawmakers and opposition figures in drafting proposed further constitutional changes.

The changes are likely to include scrapping the reference to Bulgaria as a "Socialist state" and headed by the working class — a move on which Parliament met twice in February.

The country's new President and party leader, Peter Mladenov, is under pressure from pro-democracy opposition forces to speed reforms.

The demonstrators on Sunday demanded a "government of national accord" and the resignation of Premier Georgi Atanasov, a holdover from the hard-line rule of Todor Zhivkov, who was ousted Nov. 10 after 34 years in power.

Leaders of the pro-democracy opposition Union of Democrats also released excerpts from a declaration agreed upon Friday by nationalists, Communists and opposition representatives aimed at ending ethnic discord.

David Berkowitz, New York's "Son of Sam" killer, was caught in 1976 after he was ticketed for parking in front of a fire hydrant during the shooting of one of his six victims.

Ted Bundy, who eluded police for four years following his escape from a Colorado prison, was arrested in 1978 after being pulled over by a Florida policeman for erratic driving.

Atlanta child killer Wayne Williams was caught when police heard him dumping the body of one of his victims off a bridge in 1981.

Randy Kraft, convicted of 16 mutilation-torture murders in California, was caught in 1983 when police stopped him for drunken driving and found a body in his car.

Capt. T. Michael Nault of the King County, Wash., police department, agrees that investigative muscle alone usually doesn't solve such cases. Since 1982, King County authorities have hunted for the Green River killer — blamed for the deaths of up to 49 young women.

"We were told early on... 'You're going to go on an intense, laborious investigative process and you're going to need some good luck,'" Nault said.

"We've been at it seven years, and we haven't had that fortunate circumstance yet."

Investigators said Shawcross' arrest was an unusually quick resolution to a serial-murder case, one of the most difficult to crack. Bodies dumped far from the killing site, often not discovered until long after the slaying, yield little physical evidence. Short volume of cases and lack of a motive also complicate efforts.

Rochester police, after concluding in November that they were dealing with a serial killer, were prepared for a long investigation. Up to 60 officers were assigned to the case.

"Short of some miracle, I would anticipate a very long, tedious, drawn-out investigation," Chief Gordon Urtacher said in early December.

Shawcross was one of hundreds of potential suspects identified by appearance, but not by name, through interviews and surveillance of the area frequented by prostitutes and their customers.

Hard work and good luck lead to serial slaying arrest

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The paroled child killer accused of murdering 11 women during the past two years was not even a suspect until the morning police spotted him sitting in a car near the frozen body of one of the victims.

Arthur J. Shawcross fell into the hands of police the way most serial killers are caught: after months of grueling investigation — and a dose of good luck.

"We've been at it seven years, and we haven't had that fortunate circumstance yet."

Investigators said Shawcross' arrest was an unusually quick resolution to a serial-murder case, one of the most difficult to crack. Short pre-season heating oil supply lead to price hikes

By John Diamond
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Long before the mercury plummeted last month, oil companies made key decisions that helped push heating oil prices to their highest levels ever, according to industry experts and consumer advocates.

A deliberate decision to keep pre-season oil stocks down ensured that when the recent cold wave swept over the nation in December, the laws of supply and demand dictated a rapid price increase.

"To understand why home heating oil prices have nearly doubled, it is critical to ignore oil company propaganda and examine what the companies have been doing," said Edwin S. Rothchild, energy policy director for the consumer group Citizens Action. "The major oil companies have chosen a strategy to keep the system tight, to keep supply and demand in a precarious balance."

The charge of undersupplying the market, which will likely be raised this week at a Senate investigative hearing into the price increases, runs counter to industry explanations.

The industry maintains that the record cold, a simultaneous surge in European demand, and a series of breakdowns, accidents and stoppages in the refining and delivery system fueled the price increase.

"There was nothing deliberate about it," said John Lichtblau, president of the New York-based Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc. "No industry makes a decision. Individual companies make decisions" about supplies, he said.

And Lichtblau said that nationwide, heating oil reserves going into this winter were only about 5 percent below the 1988 pre-season level.

Until state troopers conducting a helicopter search spotted Shawcross in a county park on Jan. 3, the case seemed far from being solved.

"We were just on a search, just going over an area that we had covered previously," said Sgt. Kent R. Hundt, one of the two pilots. "As far as I'm concerned, it was just a matter of luck."

But without a laborious investigation, the evidence to make a case against Shawcross, said Jim Martin of the district attorney's office in New Bedford, Mass., where nine women were found slain in 1988 and 1989. Those slayings are not solved.

And although the amount of oil on reserve nationally was down only slightly from a year before, individual sections of the country were sharply down in their pre-season reserves.

In New England, the hardest hit region of the country where prices rose to the highest levels, the amount of reserve oil was down 25 percent from a year before, according to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

In remarks sent to the House Energy and Power Subcommittee, Dukakis said his constituents "do not understand why the price of heating oil can rise 54 cents a gallon in 29 days when there is a worldwide glut of oil."

Dukakis' remarks were echoed by Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill in the wake of consumer complaints about the swift increase in prices during the December cold spell.

Homeowners straining to keep up with skyrocketing fuel bills deluged their elected officials with complaints. State Rep. Matthew Rinaldo, R-N.J., called the situation "the biggest crisis on the minds of the people" of his district.

Members of the subcommittee, over the objections of the oil industry and the Bush administration, are seriously considering a proposal to create a government-funded oil reserve that could be used to hold down prices.

U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said he plans to file legislation that would allow the government to cap oil prices during emergencies such as the December cold snap when some low-income individuals shivered because they couldn't afford fuel bills.

Shelter example for others

Al Cardini, a 35-year-old homeless man from East Hartford, was more than a little angry when he was told he could not stay at the Manchester shelter one cold day before Christmas. Cardini had already stayed at the shelter five nights and that is generally the limit for out-of-towners.

In Cardini's view, the origin of a person in need should not matter when it is decided whether or not he should be offered shelter. No doubt, that is a view shared by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches which runs the shelter.

The hard reality, though, is that it does matter. While the number of homeless increases across the nation, the resources available to help those in need lags far behind.

At some point, someone may have to say 'no,' not because of a lack of sensitivity to those in need, but because of the limit on the amount of resources to help them.

This is not say that the town of Manchester is being overrun by homeless people or that those who were not residing here should be or are being turned away from the shelter without regard to their circumstances.

But Director Stephen Casano is right when he says that towns such as East Hartford should do more to provide shelter for their homeless. It is not only a legal obligation, it is a moral obligation.

It is also a moral obligation to try to understand the plight of the homeless.

There are those of us who would call some homeless people no-good deadbeats who live off the government rather than work for a living. Those people, no doubt, have never spent a night in Center Springs Park with only a makeshift tent to keep out the cold. They probably have never been so stiveken that they have been unable to recover.

Some may even see in the homeless that which they despise most in themselves, a vulnerability to weakness and despair that all of us, as human beings, share.

Manchester is fortunate that it has an organization like MACC to care for the fallen few among us. As one homeless woman says, "It's one of the nicest and cleanest (shelters) around."

We can only hope that all towns will follow MACC's lead.

Dictator's death spells end of era

One of the striking things about the blood-soaked Romanian revolution against Nicolae Ceausescu's brutal, enslaving government in the manner in which it expresses the symmetry of Soviet dominated European communism.

In July 1918, nine months after he was deposed, Czar Alexander II and his family were shot to death by Lenin's Bolsheviks. The last of the Russian emperors was an inept man who could neither confront nor deal with the social injustices that resulted in his people's October Revolution, brought Lenin to power, and would establish communism as a major world force. Alexander ruled for 23 years.

Three days after he was forced by the immensity of the popular uprising to flee Bucharest, Ceausescu and his family were shot to death by forces of Romania's National Salvation Front, leaders of the December Revolution. Until his swift downfall, the dictator had been as ruthlessly efficient as the czar had been helplessly ineffective. Ceausescu ruled for 24 years.

The two men, czar and despot, are like bookends of history. Alexander died by firing squad because he was the symbol of royalty, and his death deprived his faithful of their figurehead. Ceausescu died by firing squad, partly to deprive his followers, now being a maniacal battle against the tide of revolution, of their leader.

The killing of the last Russian emperor and his heirs marked the beginning of the communist era that was to trouble Europe and the West for more than 70 years. The killing of Ceausescu, the last great Stalinist, and his family marks the virtual death in Europe of that purely totalitarian system.

Of all the nations once in Moscow's immediate orbit, only tiny Albania still clings to Lenin's historic oxy-moron: The Party is the people, and the Party rules the people, absolutely and without recourse.

The people of Romania are bringing history's wheel full circle.

King's influence lives on

By Thomas L. Stringfellow

The first month of 1990 brings a new chance for a better decade to benefit humankind with medical, technical, recreational and vocational improvements worldwide. Today is the actual birthday of the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. His birthplace in Atlanta, Georgia, and the site of his assassination in 1968 are historical places. His sister Mrs. Christine King Farris, his widow Coretta and their four children are the surviving relatives who are trying to keep his dream for an equitable society alive. Dr. King would be 61 years old today.

Rev. Joseph Lowery, the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference will receive the highest national award, the Presidential Medal of Freedom, for his role in the non-violent social change from Mrs. King. Lowery has recently taught a court-mandated race relations course to a small number of Ku Klux Klansmen as part of a monetary damage settlement from Klan violence in Alabama in 1979.

Lowery marched and served valiantly with King during the civil rights movement, as shown in the first six-part documentary "Eyes on the Prize in 1967."

However, the number of race-related acts of both violence and vandalism has gone up gradually. Parcel and letter bombs have been used three times by a splinter hate group called Americans for a Competent Federal Judiciary. The FBI, postal inspectors and agents of the Bureau of Firearms, Alcohol and Tobacco are cooperating to apprehend the suspects.

A handbook entitled "Extremism on the Right" by the Anti-Defamation of B'nai B'rith and an article "The Divine Right of Whites: Euxenicist Ideology in the United States" by Deborah Green and Fred Nagwan in a recent edition of Practice magazine reaffirms that hard work among law-abiding American citizens is vital to achieve both racial and sexual tolerance. King stated once that "We must accept finite disappointment but we must never lose infinite hope."

The legacy of King's philosophy has reached the world as well. The Dalai Lama, 14th spiritual leader of Tibet received the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, and Rev. Alan Boesak of South Africa and other leaders around the world still battle against oppressive dictatorships.

There is a common humanity which makes us sensitive to the suffering of one another. There is one faith that binds us in brotherhood, a hope for the salvation of the world. Although there are man-made barriers and a man-made wall, there is something that unites us, Jesus Christ. The Berlin wall did come down last December and both East and West Germans were reunited. The Dalai Lama of Tibet received the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, and Rev. Alan Boesak of South Africa and other leaders around the world still battle against oppressive dictatorships.

It's mistake to bet on Aquino

By William Rusher

The most recent coup attempt against the Aquino government in the Philippines took place in four years, and the last one — surely ought to tell us that there is something seriously wrong with that government, and with our policy toward it.

There was nothing wrong with the decision of the Reagan administration to topple Ferdinand Marcos out of office. He was too old, too sick and too corrupt to be of much use, any longer, either to his own people or to the American people. But, having reached that right and necessary conclusion, the State Department has proceeded to fumble the Philippine ball ever since. Its first and worst mistake was to bet its chips on Corazon Aquino. This wealthy tobacco heiress is a nice lady and a devout Roman Catholic, and was of course the object of a lot of sentimental enthusiasms as the widow of the assassinated Benigno Aquino, a well-known anti-Marcos politician.

But she is a weak woman, with no knowledge of or talent for politics, and she has about as much business being president of the Philippines as I do. Worse yet, it is far from clear that she even beat Marcos in the election he called to consolidate his power. Certainly Marcos remained highly popular with a substantial segment of the population, and it is equally certain that four years in office gave gravely eroded whatever public backing Aquino once had.

Undulating Cher makes Navy blush

WASHINGTON — If battleships could blush, the U.S.S. Missouri would be bright red.

This proud World War II vessel that hosted the 1945 surrender of Japan in Tokyo Bay has become the center of a brouhaha over taste. Should the Navy have allowed Cher to film a video in which she pranced around the deck of the Missouri wearing a bikini G-string?

The video, "If I Could Turn Back Time," was so raucous that MTV — that arbiter of bad taste — wouldn't show it until after 9 p.m. Now a few Navy officials are wishing they could turn back time.

The military services get plenty of requests from Hollywood asking for their equipment, bases and people. Most of the projects are turned down. If they are approved, the producers must generally agree to accept suggestions from military critics.

The conversion of bases, ships and planes to movie sets amounts to nothing more than taxpayer-subsidized giveaways. If the producers are charged a fee, it is rarely enough to cover the costs. The Pentagon justifies it by saying that the films are good recruitment tools.

That was the thinking when Cher applied to use the Missouri, but not the Navy brass is wondering if the recruitment benefit is enough to outweigh the criticism from veterans' groups.

The Navy was at first thrilled with the recruitment value of a Cher video. The pop star had come a long way since the 1960s when she was dismissed at the clothes store and airfield. (She once admitted that she thought Mount Rushmore was a natural rock formation and that the sun was the back side of the moon.)

A Cher video "was an opportunity for us to get national exposure and reach the lucrative teenage youth audience that watches MTV," one Navy official told us. The viewers would be subjected to the "subliminal advertisement of the Navy seeing Cher around a battleship with sailors."

The Navy was right about the "recruitment" and "subliminal" parts. Cher's producers initially approached the Navy with the idea of doing a modest "Dear John" letter aboard ship. But when Cher saw the massive (dare we say, painful) guns on the Missouri, all modesty was thrown to the wind.

Cher donned her mesh and leather strap outfit, and the controversy was on. Navy officials told us the costume was "an unanticipated change during final stages of production. And it produced an unintended result in respect."

One can only imagine how retrospective the Navy felt about the costume when officials told us the costume was "an unanticipated change during final stages of production. And it produced an unintended result in respect."

Aternocks have subsided since the earthquake of 7.1 magnitude shook Northern California on Oct. 17, but the recovery efforts expected to take years are apparent as hammering and the hum of heavy construction equipment fill the air from San Francisco and downtown Oakland to Watsonville.

The 15-second tremor injured 2,500 people, killed 67 and left 10,000 homeless, $7 billion damage made it the nation's costliest quake ever. Almost 70,000 claims have been filed with the Federal Emergency Management Agency in the San Francisco Bay area for temporary housing help, home and business loans, grants and other aid. The American Red Cross says 14,000 families probably will have received temporary shelter, clothes, blankets, food and other help.

When it comes to taste, the Pentagon's standards are spotty. Clint Eastwood was not allowed to use military facilities to film "Hombre." "Raiders" because his character used profanity.

The Army turned down "Platoon" also, according to a 1984 confidential memo, because "The script presents an unfair and inaccurate view of the Army."

The first Rambo movie, "First Blood," was rejected because it implied that the Army trained people to kill, unlike the Navy which apparently trains people to dance.

Forgive and forget

The Bush administration is close to approving massive lending programs to China that were suspended last summer. The money would come from the World Bank, where the United States controls 20 percent of the shares. Approval of the loans will bring a new round of congressional criticism, but the White House is determined to forge close ties with China, and the matter what. Since the crackdown under reformists there, the Chinese government has moved toward centralized planning and away from the market-oriented policies that had created so much hope in the West.

Bizarre twists leave 'hero' saddened

By Allison J. Pugh

The Associated Press

BOSTON — The police dispatcher who became a hero for his 10-minute conversation with a frantic, wounded Charles Stuart says the tragic turn of events impacting Stuart orchestrated the scheme leaves him saddened and empty.

But if Charles Stuart called him today, Gary McLaughlin said, he would coax and plead and try to soothe him through the ordeal again.

"The tragic, twisted, bizarre end leaves you with that little bit of emptiness — how another human being, or beings, however it turns out, could do that to a person," said McLaughlin, 35.

But, noting his job as the dispatcher was to get medical attention to people in need, he said: "Despite the tragic end, I would say the mission was a success."

Charles Stuart used his cellular car phone to contact police after he and his pregnant wife, Carol, 30, were shot Oct. 23.

Carol Stuart, who had just left a childbirth class with her husband, fired a bullet wound to the head. Her son, Christopher, who was delivered by Caesarean section, died 17 days later.

Authorities now say Stuart, who had blamed the shootings on a black mugger, probably shot his wife and himself and at very least planned the shootings. Stuart killed himself Jan. 4 as the scheme was coming to light.

During the riveting 10-minute conversation, parts of which were later broadcast on national television, a seriously wounded Stuart moaned and seemed on the verge of passing out periodically as police sought to find out where his car was.

"Bear with me, Chuck; I'm going to get someone to you," McLaughlin told him. "Hang in with me, now. Just calm down for the moment."

California continues quake recovery

By Kathleen Maclay

SAN FRANCISCO — Quake-related calls to suicide hotlines have dropped to a fraction after three months, but unsettling reminders of the earth's fury remain. A shopping mall in a seaside town resembles an abandoned movie set, hundreds of people are still homeless and major sections of freeways are still closed or detoured.

Aternocks have subsided since the earthquake of 7.1 magnitude shook Northern California on Oct. 17, but the recovery efforts expected to take years are apparent as hammering and the hum of heavy construction equipment fill the air from San Francisco and downtown Oakland to Watsonville.

At the end of the tape, after police reached the car, McLaughlin is heard saying telling Stuart to give his phone to the officer, adding, "I don't want to terminate until someone can hear me. Want me to terminate, Sarge?" The tape becomes a jumble of voices, and Stuart can be heard saying, "Get my wife out!"

McLaughlin, an earnest, sober man who uses phrases such as "negative" and "stand by," has been a state police dispatcher for 14 years. He usually fields calls from local police, not members of the public, but "911" calls from mobile phones go automatically to state police rather than to a local department.

McLaughlin said he had no inkling Stuart's story was a genuine one. He never thought of a minute that there was anything suspicious about the call, especially when the EMS team got there and found the people shot," he said.

Stuart never contacted McLaughlin afterward, but the dispatcher says that's not unusual; he's never heard of a crime victim who called back to thank a dispatcher.

"You can't think anyone in the nation is as deeply touched by the bizarre and twisted end."

McLaughlin said the call, and the ensuing publicity, was as arduous as any he had ever handled. "Something that's difficult for a lot of people to understand is that this is the job we do, but that's all," McLaughlin said, although he acknowledged "as a human being (the shooting) gives you a sour feeling."

Astronauts test navigation system that sounded alarm

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts settled into a day of medical and science experiments today after being roused early from sleep by an alarm signaling a brief problem with a navigation system.

The three phonon signals that triggered the buzzing alarm posed no threat to the mission, and the five crew members went back to bed. After waking at the normal time, commander Dan Brandenstein successfully tested the system and brought it back on line.

Mission Control reported the fleeting signals were in a speed-measuring accelerometer that is part of what's known as an Inertial Measurement Unit, a key component of the shuttle's guidance system.

When the alarm sounded in the cabin as the astronauts slept, Brandenstein woke up and asked the control center if there were anything he could do.

Controllers told him the spacecraft computer had shifted automatically to a second IMU, that everything was OK and to go back to sleep.

There are three such devices aboard. Only one is needed for a safe flight, but flight rules dictate that if one failed, Mission Control would control bringing the astronauts home as soon as possible because of the possibility of a common problem in all three units.

When the astronauts were wakened at the regular time two hours after the alarm, they were told to get ready for the launch. The launch site at Cape Canaveral was all right.

Mission Control said the weather for Friday's planned landing at Edwards looked good. A nighttime touchdown is scheduled for 2:59 a.m.

The wakeup music today was the University of Washington fight song. One of the crew members, mission specialist Bonnie Dunbar, is a Washington graduate.

"Good morning for your second wakeup of the morning," the control center said, referring to the earlier alarm.

Brandenstein, Dunbar, pilot Jim Webber and mission specialist Marsha Ivins and David Low are deactivating the final days of the flight at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

A secondary site, at White Sands Space Harbor, N.M., also had been problems today. But a runway at the Kennedy Space Center launch site at Cape Canaveral was all right.

Ceausescu son, cronies face trials this week

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Members of the fallen Communist elite, including a son of executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, face trial this week on charges of aiding genocide and bringing on economic ruin, state television reported.

The trials were to begin today with 11 members of the hated Securitate secret police going before a court in Timisoara, police said.

The security forces' slaughter of demonstrators in that western city ignited the December revolution.

In its report Sunday, state television showed Valentin Ceausescu, a son of the deposed dictator, former Communist Party Secretary Emil Bobu; former Interior Minister Tudor Postolnicu; Marin Nageau, who directed personal security for Ceausescu; and Dumitru Popescu, former director of the Sociopolitical Academy.

A survey by the San Francisco Economic Development Corp. shows the city's $3.4 billion tourist industry has been hard hit. The number of spouses coming with conventioners and the number of leisure travelers — who account for half of all visitors from outside the region — is down a third from a year ago.

It's been hard to convince outsiders the city is safe, that "this isn't Soviet Armenia," said San Francisco Visitors and Convention Bureau spokeswoman Sharon Rooney.

whites in Manchester than blacks. The commemorative is important because it honors a man who brought great changes in American society. "I think what Dr. Luther King did was start another American Revolution," O'Loughlin said. "He preached a non-violent revolution that achieved some great accomplishments."

She does not think that King's memory has been tarnished by a recent book by Ralph Abernathy, a former associate of King. In his autobiography, Abernathy claimed that King spent the night before he was assassinated on April 4, 1968, with two women, neither of whom was his wife. "The book is hotly disputed by civil rights leaders, who say two women have impaired Abernathy's mental abilities. "Maybe it keeps him human," O'Loughlin said of the accusations. "People will realize this was a real person who had strengths and weaknesses and faults just like all of us." Stringfellow said that what Abernathy wrote is being disputed by

On Sunday, Coretta Scott King delivered her annual "I have a dream" address as Ebenezer Baptist Church. The widow applauded pro-democracy shifts worldwide and said the civil rights movement would not be deterred by the recent wave of bombings and threats against blacks. A federal judge and a black Savannah lawyer were killed in two bombings. "In the last year, we've seen hundreds of thousands of people marching through the streets of Berlin and Beijing. Budapest and Pretoria, Moscow, Warsaw and Prague, all singing 'We Shall Overcome' in a host of languages," she said. "We're not going to be turned around by letter bombs or threats or kind of violence," she said. "Instead, we're going forward, with unity and courage and commitment."

Also in Atlanta, more than 500 students and teachers at Booker T. Washington High School joined a civil rights leader Rosa Parks to paint a mural dedicated to King. The mural displayed "Let Freedom Ring."

other sources. "No one knows for sure what happened," he said. King's message of non-violence achieved a great deal for blacks, Stringfellow said. But he said blacks also need to be ready to defend themselves and their families, as other black leaders, such as Malcolm X, preached. Minorities have come a long way since King's campaign for racial equality during the 1960s, Stringfellow said. He pointed to the fact that both he and his brother are college graduates, something not as likely 30 years ago. He also noted that a black man, L. Douglas Wilder, was recently inaugurated as governor of Virginia.

But, Stringfellow said, minorities have a long way to go. Some blacks still face harassment when they move into neighborhoods where they are not wanted, he said. The commemorations will be open to the public at no charge, but collections will be taken for the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund, which offers financial assistance to minority college students. Connecticut joins every other state in the nation today remembering Martin Luther King Jr. through a host of commemorative activities including the ringing of the state's Liberty Bell and the performance of community service work. State officials planned to toll the state's replica Liberty Bell at the state Capitol at 12:30 p.m. today as part of the national holiday celebration. "Let Freedom Ring." Each state plans to simultaneously ring a bell to celebrate what would have been the slain civil rights leader's 61st birthday.

"Across the country, everyone rings a replica of the Liberty Bell at the same time, which I think has a nice romantic spirit to it," said Anita Gagnon, a spokeswoman for the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights, which is overseeing the state celebration. State offices closed today in honor of King's birthday, as will many — but not all — municipal offices. Events are planned across the state to commemorate King, who was 39 when he was shot to death by a sniper in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Spain mourns deaths of 43 in fire at disco

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — About 2,000 people filled the city's main cathedral today for a one-hour funeral Mass for the 43 people killed in a discotheque fire, which medical examiners had found released deadly fumes. Medical examiners had found levels of carbon monoxide in blood samples taken from all of the victims of the fire early Sunday, said Judge Javier Seoane, who is heading up the judicial investigation in this northeastern city. He added the samples had been sent to Madrid for further tests to determine if other poisonous gases were present. The victims apparently died from the hydrocyanic acid as well as carbon monoxide poisoning, government spokesman Ignacio Bruns said. Many of the victims died in their seats in the basement lounge. Both types of fumes can be given off when carpets, drapes, furniture coverings and other synthetic Soviet media said the "pogroms of Armenian homes and murders" continued Sunday. It gave no details. Azerbaijanis and Armenians are locked in a feud over who should govern Nagorno-Karabakh, a mainly Armenian enclave of 160,000 people controlled by Azerbaijan since 1923. Most Armenians are Christians; most Azerbaijanis are Shiite Muslims. Two ferries evacuated about 660 Armenians, mostly women and children, from Baku across the Caspian Sea to Krastovodsk in the republic of Turkmenia and about 200 others were sheltered from attacks in the capital, Soviet TV said.

In Yerevan, 300,000 people rallied Sunday night to demand Azerbaijan take more resolute action to protect their brethren. Shakhbaryan said at least 100 armed police met at Yerevan's airport today hoping to fly to villages in Azerbaijan to defend Armenians under siege. Armenian journalists working for state-run agencies said the death toll in Baku had risen to 32. Others were killed in other parts of Azerbaijan.

rejection of a proposed new $25 fee to cover laboratory equipment in UConn classes. There is no such fee now for those classes. Under the board's recommendations, tuition, required fees and average room and board fees for full-time, in-state undergraduates would total $6,997 for the 1990-91 school year. That's a $706, or 11.2 percent, increase over the current year required fees for full-time, in-state undergraduates at UConn. Tuition charges are the same at the four CSU campuses, but the fees vary depending on the location. Costs to in-state undergraduates living on campus would range from a low of $4,943 at Danbury to a high of $5,366 at New Britain. Commuting students would pay anywhere from $1,690 at New Haven to $3,246 at Storrs. The total costs, including tuition, for full-time, in-state students at the community colleges would increase by 6.1 percent, from $880 to $934.

49ers, Broncos set for the Big Show

Broncos promise no blowout

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

DENVER — This time, it will be different. This time, there will be no Super Bowl. The Denver Broncos believe. Never mind that everything they've got and have been overlooking all season. Who cares that the 49ers are 10-point favorites after they blew out the Los Angeles Rams 30-3 while the Cleveland Browns 37-21 Sunday in the championship game? Or that the decade's most successful Super Bowl team will face its biggest flop in the NFL title game? "I think our past Super Bowl experience will help us this year," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "We've just got to try and repeat today's performance two weeks from now." He said. "I'll give it everything I've got and leave everything on the field."

Against the Giants and Redskins in the Super Bowl, Denver left the field humiliated. "This is a new year and a new team," insisted Sammy Winder, who came off the bench to score two touchdowns against the Browns in his final home game. "I've got to try and reverse Denver's habit of flopping with the NFL crown on the line."

More striking still, the 49ers have allowed only two TDs in their last five postgame games — one on a kickoff return in last year's Super Bowl win, another on a harmless late score by Minnesota against their second unit on Jan. 6. San Francisco has allowed just four points in those five victories while the offense, hitting on extra abuse, has scored 153. This year the margin is 71-16 in two games, and if the 49ers don't remind anyone of memorable teams like the 1985 Bears or the 1986 Giants, maybe it's about time they did.

Even the hard-to-please defensive coordinator of last year's champions was impressed. "This is a very good team."

The 3-2 conference record marks the Denver Broncos' best since the 1982-83 season when it began 6-2.

Conneticut's pressure defense forced Seton Hall into 13 first-half turnovers. The Pirates would finish with 23. That helped the Huskies take a 42-31 halftime lead. "We have a turnover problem," Seton Hall coach P.J. Carleino said. "We made too many mistakes playing a good team. Quietly, they (Conneticut) are 1-3. They've played to 30-27 at Anaheim Stadium."

It started like it might be. Mike Lansford's 23-yard field goal on the Rams' first possession gave them a 3-0 lead and it looked like it might be 10-0 later in the first quarter when Anderson broke wide open at the San Francisco 5 and Everett lofted the ball toward him. But the ball floated two much and Lott broke all the way across the field to knock it down.

"He could have put a little more zip on it," Robinson said of the pass and Anderson added: "Lott came out of nowhere. I thought it was a touchdown but the ball was in the air too long."

The only things in the air after that were Montana passes. He hit Jones 3-33 into the second quarter at the end of an 89-yard, 13-play drive on which Montana went 5 for 5 for 67 yards. Tim McKyer's interception led to a 27-yard drive on which Craig, who finished with 93 yards in 22 carries went over from the 14-minute mark. "Then came the killer — the 87-yard drive capped by Montana's TD pass" Taylor said that made it 21-3 at halftime and left the outcome a foregone conclusion. Montana was 8 of 10 for 90 yards on the drive, which included a 15-yard unorthodox conduct

Montana on target for 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO — On the third play from scrimmage, Joe Montana did the unthinkable. He threw a pass wide of Roger Craig. "Oh God, no," Montana said to himself. "Is this the way it's going to be?" With Joe Montana? Of course not.

Three hours later, Montana had finished a 30-3 NFC title game victory over the Los Angeles Rams with just three more incomplete passes — 26 of 30 for 262 yards were the precise totals — and the San Francisco 49ers were on their way to New Orleans. There, in two weeks, they will meet Denver and attempt to assure their place in NFL history by becoming the first team in a decade to win two straight Super Bowls and emulate Pittsburgh's feat of four Super Bowls in a decade. And despite a defense that shut down the Jim Everett-Henry Ellard-Flipper Anderson combination that nearly matched San Francisco's passing statistics, and the running of Craig and Tom Rathman, the day belonged to Montana.

In addition to his overwhelming completion and yardage numbers, Montana threw touchdown passes of 20 yards to Brent Jones and 18 to John Taylor. Montana was 12 of 14 for 156 yards in the second quarter alone, when the 49ers blew the game apart with 21 points to go off 21:33 at halftime.

49ers don't remind anyone of memorable teams like the 1985 Bears or the 1986 Giants, maybe it's about time they did. Even the hard-to-please defensive coordinator of last year's champions was impressed. "This is a very good team."

Conneticut's pressure defense forced Seton Hall into 13 first-half turnovers. The Pirates would finish with 23. That helped the Huskies take a 42-31 halftime lead. "We have a turnover problem," Seton Hall coach P.J. Carleino said. "We made too many mistakes playing a good team. Quietly, they (Conneticut) are 1-3. They've played to 30-27 at Anaheim Stadium."

It started like it might be. Mike Lansford's 23-yard field goal on the Rams' first possession gave them a 3-0 lead and it looked like it might be 10-0 later in the first quarter when Anderson broke wide open at the San Francisco 5 and Everett lofted the ball toward him. But the ball floated two much and Lott broke all the way across the field to knock it down.

"He could have put a little more zip on it," Robinson said of the pass and Anderson added: "Lott came out of nowhere. I thought it was a touchdown but the ball was in the air too long."

The only things in the air after that were Montana passes. He hit Jones 3-33 into the second quarter at the end of an 89-yard, 13-play drive on which Montana went 5 for 5 for 67 yards. Tim McKyer's interception led to a 27-yard drive on which Craig, who finished with 93 yards in 22 carries went over from the 14-minute mark. "Then came the killer — the 87-yard drive capped by Montana's TD pass" Taylor said that made it 21-3 at halftime and left the outcome a foregone conclusion.

Montana was 8 of 10 for 90 yards on the drive, which included a 15-yard unorthodox conduct

'SUPER' PASSING DAY — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana throws a pass to Brent Jones (not shown) for a touchdown over the outstrutched arms of the Rams' Sean Smith (97) in the second quarter of their NFC Championship game Sunday at Candlestick Park. Montana completed 26-of-30 passes in leading the 49ers to a 30-3 victory.

49ers defense in supporting role

SAN FRANCISCO — If Joe Montana switches from quarterback to cornerback, the San Francisco 49ers' defense might receive the star billing it deserves. Until then, it will have to settle for best supporting role in a post season series.

Syracuse is next up for UConn after Huskies bump off Pirates

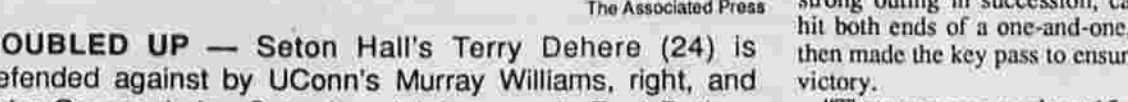

By Tom Hynes
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It was like a heavyweight boxing match with Conneticut getting in most of the punches during the first 10 rounds. Seton Hall came back in the 14th to make it interesting, but then the Huskies delivered the knockout punch at the end as they held off the Pirates, 79-76, in Big East Conference action Saturday night at Brendan Byrne Arena. The Huskies will run into a different kind of heavyweight tonight at 7:30 as they host No. 5 Syracuse (12-1, 12-1) at the Hartford Civic Center. Syracuse is coming off back-to-back wins over St. John's and Boston College after being knocked down by the No. 7 ranking in the country.

The victory Saturday ended Conneticut's two-year, five-game losing streak against Seton Hall (6-5, 1-2), but the Huskies (13-3 and 3-2) needed some clutch play in the closing minutes from freshman Nadav Henefeld after the Pirates cut a 16-point deficit to just one with 40 seconds to play. Henefeld (14 points, eight rebounds, six steals and five assists) hit two big free throws with 31 seconds left after Seton Hall had erased all but one point of a 69-53 deficit with $1.0 to play. Henefeld's long outlet pass after getting the ball after Lyman DePriest rebounded a Michael Cooper miss found Rod Sellers in the frontcourt, and the latter went in for the clinching dunk with 10 seconds left. "Words can't even explain the things he (Henefeld) does," said Sellers, who was 8-for-11 from the field and led Conneticut with 19 points. "We're lucky to have him."

"They didn't panic." UConn coach Jim Calhoun said of Seton Hall. "They did a terrific job of coming back at us. Having a very young team, they were very proud of the fact that we were able to stand up and win the basketball game." The victory was the third in a row in conference play for Conneticut, its second in succession on the road.

"We're 13-3 and we're probably a pretty good team," Calhoun said. "And if you're not going to be (good) road team, then you're not going to be a very good team."

Aging character actors take center stage in the ring

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — George Foreman and Gerry Cooney are a couple of aging character actors in the heavyweight drama that stars young and mauling Mike Tyson.

Tonight, they will have to stage in themselves when they meet in a scheduled 10-round bout at the Convention Center. It's billed as "The Preacher and The Promoter." Cooney has been two of Foreman's fights in the former heavyweight champion's comeback, which began in 1987.

Some critics have called it a farce, a shameless burlesque that exploits the 41-year-old Foreman, the 33-year-old Cooney and the paying public.

Cooney, 231, sees it as a chance to prove himself to himself. He believes he has been too concerned with Foreman's fights in the former heavyweight champion's comeback, which began in 1987.

Back then, Foreman was a fighter, his mind and heart at 220-plus pounds.

He also wants to prove what kind of a fighter he can be when he has his head and heart at 220-plus pounds.

He still has the punch, but his fifth round in his last fight, June 15, 1987.

Foreman, a 9-5 favorite, sees the bout as a step that could lead to a challenge of unbeaten Tyson for the heavyweight championship Foreman won from Joe Frazier in 1973 and lost to Muhammad Ali in 1974.

Back then, Foreman was a fighter, his mind and heart at 220-plus pounds.

Foreman has a 19-0 record, with 18 knockouts, in his comeback. His overall record is 64-2, with 60 wins by knockout.

Cooney, who failed in a title bid against Larry Holmes in 1982, has a 28-1 record, with 24 knockouts.

Each fighter is guaranteed $1 million for the bout, which will begin between 10:45 p.m. and 11 p.m. EST and which is shown on pay-per-view and closed-circuit television.

The victory Saturday night at Whalers arena will be good for both of them in the (Adams) division if they win as the NHL's best road team extended its record to 13-7-2.

Verbeck scored his first goal in the first period to tie the score at 1-1 on a power play. The record was set by former Whaler Paul MacDermid on Jan. 23, 1987.

Verbeck's second goal and 23rd of the season came on a power play at 2:29. Dineen got his first goal of the night with 4:53 left in the first period for a 3-1 lead.

The Whalers made a 4-0 run in the second period on a goal by Randy Cunyworth.

"Beating 15 is great, but the way the league is designed your division is what matters, and we've still got to lose to prove there. We've got to clean up our act on home," Kevin Dineen said after a 6-3 victory over the slumping Los Angeles Kings with Pat Verbeck and Kevin Dineen each scoring two goals.

Manchester wrestling team rolls to its 11th win of year

NEW BRITAIN — The Manchester High wrestling team rolled to a 53-19 victory over host New Britain High Saturday afternoon.

The Indians, winners of nine of 13 bouts with another ending in a draw, are now an impressive 11-1 for the season. New Britain drops to 4-7.

Two of the state's best in the 130-pound class, Manchester's Easy Lubati and Justin Sustain, came up with a special effort, and they tied that effort today. We had to force them to throw the ball more inside, away from their wide receivers, and we did.

After being halted all week as the Montana of the '90s, Everett finished 16-0-36 for 14 days, including just 38 in the second half. He was intercepted three times and underthrew a wide-open Flipper Anderson on a first down pass that should have gone Los Angeles 10-0-0.

San Francisco successfully mixed up its defensive coverage to put pressure on Everett and limit his downfield options.

"We were going to give the easy stuff," linebacker Matt Miller said. "We wanted to take Flipper and (Henry) Ellard out of the game and contain their tight-end combination."

The 49ers' secondary also had a big hand in Everett's off-day — sometimes literally. Ronnie Lund and Tim McKyer batted down long passes on back-to-back early plays, the first one on Anderson's overthrow at the 49ers' 5-yard line.

Louis McKyer and Keena Turner all made interceptions, McKyer's a pivotal grab and 27-yard return off a Don Giffin deflection that sent San Francisco on the way to a 14-3 lead in the second period.

"I want to be known for how I play, not what I say," McKyer, the outspoken comeback whose comment blunts last season's playoffs, said before the game.

King's words are remembered

DEAR READERS: Today we pay tribute to a great American, Martin Luther King Jr. His words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were 23 years ago, when he said: "One day, somebody should remind us, even though there may be political and ideological differences between us, the Vietnamese are our brothers, the Russians are our brothers, the Chinese are our brothers; and one day we've got to sit together at the table of brotherhood."

Time-sharing is not a bargain

You may remember all the hoopla a few years ago about time-share resorts. It certainly sounded wonderful: For a relatively small investment, you could buy a share of an apartment for a week or two each year. And you often were led to believe that if you ever wanted to sell your share, you probably could realize a potential gain. What a great idea! An investment you could enjoy at vacation time!

In many cases, however, the expectations exceeded reality by a substantial margin. Today many time-share owners are trying to unload their shares and are finding that they will have to sell at an enormous loss — if they can find a buyer at all.

According to the Resort Property Owners Association, a Chicago-based group of time-share owners, there are about a half-million time-share units up for sale in the U.S. right now. That's more than 38 percent of the country's 1.3-million time-share units.

Owners have learned that they don't necessarily want to vacation at the same place year after year. Maintenance fees continue to rise. Sometimes other owners have left the property in less than perfect condition.

So they have decided to sell. What they have discovered is that it's difficult, even at a profit. To begin with, many developers offered no provision for resale of units. They'd rather sell new developments.

Selling your own time-share requires expenditures for advertising and, if you do not appear on the resale arrangement for showing it. Other owners of your unit may not welcome the intrusion of prospective buyers during their week there.

(One strategy that has worked for some has been to sell the week to other owners of the same unit. In fact, there are many ways to sell, and co-owners can work together to attempt to sell, reducing the problems, but not eliminating them.)

This has led to a second industry in the form of time-share resale brokers. But a dispute has developed between the brokers and developers — who see brokers as competition. To make things worse, brokerage commissions can run to 35 percent or even higher.

"It costs us a lot to sell them," says Wayne White, president of an Orlando, Fla., brokerage firm. "Our sales fee is 35 percent, of which less than 3 percent is our profit."

Even so, it's highly unusual for the seller to recover his or her initial investment. While says that the average seller realizes only about two-thirds of the original investment on resale.

Developers themselves are coming to recognize the necessity of offering some kind of resale program. A few of the larger ones have begun to offer resale services that in some cases even include financing for buyers of older units. Even so, the commissions are high.

Today is Monday, Jan. 15, the 15th day of 1990. There are 350 days left in the year. This is the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

Today's Highlight in History: On Jan. 15, 1929, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was born in Atlanta.

On this date: In 1559, England's Queen Elizabeth I was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1777, the people of New Connecticut declared their independence. The tiny republic later became the state of Vermont.

In 1870, the Democratic party was represented as a donkey for the first time in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in "Harper's Weekly."

In 1919, pianist and statesman Ignace Paderewski became the first premier of the newly created republic of Poland.

In 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon.

In 1967, the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League defeated the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League 53-10 in the Super Bowl.

In 1973, President Nixon announced the suspension of all U.S. offensive action in North Vietnam.

In 1976, Sara Jane Moore was sentenced to life in prison for her attempt to shoot President Ford in San Francisco.

"People can watch 'B&B' and see themselves reflected in it," she said.

Its stories about grief, loneliness and loss tend to touch people intimately, she said. "They take it very personally and they take that feeling out into the world."

"That feeling" also has inspired many fan clubs to get fans to support local charities, especially those for the homeless, the abused and the outcast. Right now, though, Best-friends want their show to survive, said Debi Tolson, president of Jacksonville (Fla.) Supporters of Beauty and the Beast.

"We've started writing telegrams and letters and phone calls to the folks at Fox," she said. "The general feeling is that because Fox is innovative and ... I cannot remember ever seeing a program so strictly under control by the Nielsen, they might do better there," she said.

"We even want a feature film one of these days."

Ms. Witte allows herself to hope for a happy ending. When interviewed recently, she said she'd been taking calls for two days and two nights from concerned fans. "These people aren't going to let this thing die. One way or another, it will be with them."

The Helper's Network Beauty and the Beast Information Hot Line number is 714-447-3377. The address for the Pelpee newsletter ($12 for six issues) is 186 Western Ave., Albany, N.Y., 12203.

Leland's widow gives birth to premature twin boys

ATLANTA (AP) — Alison Leland, widow of Texas U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, has given birth to twin boys, a hospital spokesman said.

Mrs. Leland, 31, arrived at Grady Memorial Hospital early Sunday, and gave birth to the boys about seven hours later, according to spokesman Jim Driscoll.

She and the boys — one 3 pounds, the other 2 pounds, 11 ounces — are doing well, Driscoll said.

Mrs. Leland was about six weeks pregnant when her 44-year-old husband was killed Aug. 7 in a plane crash in Ethiopia while on a hunger relief mission.

Leland, a Democrat, was first elected to Congress from Houston's 18th District in 1978.

Mrs. Leland was in Atlanta to accept a "Salute to Greatness" award on Leland's behalf from the King Center on Saturday night.

In late August, Mrs. Leland declined to run for his seat in Congress, saying her top priorities were her son — Jarrett, now 4 — and the "new baby on the way."

Fonda's son arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Troy Hayden, teen-age son of actress Jane Fonda and her ex-husband Tom Hayden, was arrested early today after police caught a group of boys spray-painting graffiti at a parking lot, authorities said.

"I can't give out his name since he's a juvenile," said Sgt. Rick Walker. "He indicates he's the son of Jane Fonda. We've verified it."

The 16-year-old, Ms. Fonda's only son, was arrested about 1:30 a.m. near the San Diego Freeway, Walker said.

He and seven other young gentlemen were applying graffiti to phone booths and posts at a park-and-ride lot in San Diego. The sergeant did not know what the graffiti said.

West wins the Hula Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Washington's Cary Conklin passed for three touchdowns and James Francis of Baylor blocked two field goals and a punt as the West defeated the East 21-13 in the Hula Bowl on Saturday.
Conklin hit Washington State running back Steve Broadus for an 11-yard third-quarter touchdown that broke a 7-7 halftime tie. His 8-yard TD pass to Oregon State's Phil Ross in the fourth quarter put the game out of reach. He completed 23 of 34 passes for 232 yards.

O'Brien Award to Ware

FORT WORTH (AP) — Andre Ware, the NCAA record-smashing All-America selection and Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Houston, was named the winner of the ninth annual Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Award on Saturday.
Colorado's Darian Hagan finished second in voting and Notre Dame's Tony Rice was third.

Rookie Game wins in Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — With his veteran opponents unable to apply any pressure, rookie Robert Gamez romped over his home course to a four-stroke victory Sunday in the Tucson Open.
The 21-year-old Gamez needed only a final round of 2-under-par 70 to tie the TPC at Star Pass to become the first player since Ben Crenshaw in 1973 to win his initial start as a member of the PGA Tour. The victory was worth $162,000 to Gamez.

Strange loses in a playoff

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Australian Rodger Davis eagled the second playoff hole to beat Curtis Strange and win the $625,000 Daijiko Palm Meadows Cup on Sunday.
The two tied at 17-under-par 271 after the final round on the par-72, 7,008-yard Palm Meadows resort course. Davis closed with a 65, and Strange shot a 72. Strange missed a 13-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole that would have given him the victory.

McEnroe wins exhibition match

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — John McEnroe beat Stefan Edberg 4-6, 7-6 (3-6), 6-4 in the final of the six-man round-robin Rio Challenge exhibition tournament.
Kroell wins World Cup event

VALLBADIA, Italy (AP) — Richard Kroeel of Austria claimed his first World Cup victory Sunday as the Austrians swept the men's giant slalom event.
Kroeel had a two-run time of 2 minutes, 26.55 seconds to edge teammates Guntner-Mader, Radolf Nerlich and Hubert Strolz.
Mader was second, eight hundredths of a second behind. Nerlich and Strolz were tied in third place in 2:26.77.

Schoolboy hoop player dies

LOSTANT, Ill. (AP) — A 17-year-old high school basketball player collapsed shortly after taking himself out of a game and died two hours later, officials in LaSalle County said.
Senior Bryan Simecek of Lostant High School removed himself from the Lostant-Nemaha game with about three minutes to play, school officials said. Simecek collapsed a short time later and was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Streator.

Rangers' 1,000th home win uplifting

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Since the 1926-27 season New York Rangers have had a lot of exciting victories at Madison Square Garden.
Victory No. 1,000 was right up there with the best of them.

"The way we won tonight is really going to fill this team," Brian Mullen said after the Rangers rallied for three goals to beat the Philadelphia Flyers 4-3 in overtime Sunday night.

"That was a landmark victory for the Rangers on Garden ice, where they are 1,000-715-373.

It couldn't have come at a better time for the Rangers, who are involved in the torrid NHL Patrick Division race where the six teams are separated by merely eight points. With the win, the Rangers are 2-0-1 — in their last three games — moved from fifth to a second-place tie with the New York Islanders.

"It'll take more than two wins and a tie to get back on track," Tomas Sandstrom said. "But we're still in the race for first place in a tough division."

For the third straight game, the Rangers got a solid effort in goal from rookie Mike Richter, the former U.S. Olympian. The Rangers are 2-0-1 in their last three games with the young goaltender.

"He made the stops and kept us in it," Coach Roger Neilson said. "It was another great job. He stopped a penalty shot (in the first period). A goaltender comes up with a big save like that, he picks up the whole bench."

Richter only faced 22 shots, but many of them were tough. Included in his night's work was a penalty shot in the first period by Pelle Ekholm. Richter was called for tripping his sick during action around the Rangers net.

Brian Leetch, the Rangers' all-star defenseman, won't go with a goal at 1:16 to overtime. Leetch beat Ken Wreggett with a slapshot from the left point.

Apparently, the Flyers' goaltender was screened on the shot, which came after the Rangers won a faceoff in the Philadelphia zone.

"That was an important game for us," Flyers forward Rick Tocchet said. "Games with the Rangers are always intense, but we just didn't have enough intensity tonight."

Jets 6, Blues 5: Dave McLewin scored two goals and set up Paul Fenou's winner with a 2-0 remaining as Winnipeg beat St. Louis despite three goals by Brent Hull.

Hull has a league-leading total of 41 goals in 45 games. Peter Zedl and Paul Cavallini also scored for the Blues, who overcame a four-goal deficit before Fenou won it in the Jets.

Flames 6, Blackhawks 5: Brian MacLellan scored four goals and Sergei

SAVE — New York Rangers' goalie Mike Richter keeps his eyes on the puck along with the Flyers' Scott Mellanby, left, during their NHL game Sunday night at Madison Square Garden. The Rangers won in overtime, 4-3.

MacLellan got the tiebreaker with eight minutes remaining as Calgary beat Chicago and stopped the Blackhawks' six-game unbeaten streak.

MacLellan, who had just three goals in 33 games this season, got the game's first goal for the Flyers. He had his fifth career hat trick and his second four-goal game.

Pitino in a little play acting against LSU

By The Associated Press

THE last time Rick Pitino saw a first in his face, it belonged to a real heavyweight, a foot-10 Georgetown coach John Thompson. This time, it was just a pair of lightweight faces off.
Pitino, the Kentucky coach, and Louisiana State counterpart Dale Brown had to be restrained from punching one another in a dispute at the scorer's table Saturday.

Fourteenth-ranked LSU beat Kentucky 94-81. The outcome of the game was a foregone conclusion. A pitched battle between Pitino and Brown might have been more interesting, but Pitino seemed to pooh-pooh Brown's menace.

"I was very concerned when John Thompson shook his fist at me," Pitino said. "It was not that concerned about Dale."
The confrontation took place with 4/2 minutes left in the first half after players for both coaches were called for fouls in a near punch-out.

"I think Rick staged the whole thing," Brown said. "I think he was just trying to motivate his team. I'm not that good of an actor. I was pretty mad."

In the rest of Saturday's games, it was No. 1 Kansas 91, Oklahoma State 77; No. 2 Georgetown 74, DePaul

3-pointers.
No. 1 Kansas 91, Oklahoma State 77: The Jayhawks remain unbeaten at 18-0 after taking care of Oklahoma State with a 14-0 run in the second half, sparked by Pekka Markkanen.
No. 2 Georgetown 74, DePaul 64: Alonzo Mourning had 26 points and Mark Tillman 21 for Georgetown (13-0). Georgetown took the lead for good at 53-52 on two free throws by Tillman with 9:20 left.
No. 3 Michigan 87, No. 16 Minnesota 83: Rumeal Robinson had 26 points, leading Michigan. The Wolverines (11-2) had a 20-point lead cut to 84-83 with 35 seconds left, but Terry Mills hit two free throws eight seconds later for Michigan. Melvin Newburn had 20 points for Minnesota (10-5).

No. 6 Syracuse 81, Boston Col. 66: Syracuse outscored Boston College 13-4 in a three-minute span after leading 50-49. Stephen Thompson had 23 points for the Orangemen (12-1).

John's (14-3) held on to lead at 67-64 with 35 seconds left, but Terry Mills hit two free throws eight seconds later for Michigan. Melvin Newburn had 20 points for Minnesota (10-5).

No. 15 St. John's 71, Pittsburgh 70: Jayson Williams scored all but two of his 18 points in the second half and St. John's (14-3) held on to lead at 67-64 with 35 seconds left, but Terry Mills hit two free throws eight seconds later for Michigan. Melvin Newburn had 20 points for Minnesota (10-5).

"I have no animosity toward Dale," Pitino said. "He knew it was just part of the game."
Said Brown: "I hold no grudges. I like Rick. Rick is an aggressive coach."
Chris Jackson scored 28 points for LSU (10-2), and Jeff Brassow had 25 for Kentucky (6-8). Brassow had 23 of his points in the second half and connected on seven ill-fated overall

By James Jacoby
If North had made the standard Blackwood response to show one a five diamond, East would have had a lead-directing double and been in a better position. But North and South were using key-card Blackwood. In the bidding scheme, five clubs shows either no key cards or three, five diamonds shows one or four, five hearts shows two key cards without the trump queen and five spades shows two key cards including the trump queen. When the responder isn't sure which suit is meant as trumps, he/she help the partnership.
Not knowing which slam to bid, South tried six no-trump. He won the opening club lead and quickly rattled off six heart tricks and the second club. The discards by the defenders
