WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur J. Goldberg, who solidified a liberal majority on the Supreme Court in the early 1960s before reluctantly resigning to become U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has died at the age of 81.

Goldberg's body was discovered by his maid when she entered his apartment Friday morning. His physician, Dr. Michael Newman, said Goldberg died overnight of cardiac arrest from coronary artery disease.

Henry Fleisher, a long-time friend of Goldberg who said he had lunch with Goldberg on Wednesday, said the former justice was found lying on a sofa, where he apparently had been reading a newspaper.

Goldberg lived alone since his wife, the former Dorothy Kurgans, died in February 1985 at age 79. She was an artist and author. The couple had two children, Barbara and Robert.

Ralph DeStefano, director of Gawler's Funeral Home, said Goldberg will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Appointed to the Supreme Court on Aug. 29, 1962, by President Kennedy after 19 months as secretary of labor, Goldberg left the bench three years later at the urging of President Johnson.

Johnson then named Goldberg U.N. ambassador on July 20, 1965, after the death of Adlai E. Stevenson at a time when U.S. involvement in Vietnam was escalating dramatically.

Goldberg wrote Johnson: "I shall not, Mr. President, conceal the pain with which I leave the court. ... It has been the richest and most satisfying period of my career."

On the court, Goldberg was allied with Chief Justice Earl Warren and other liberals who asserted the court's authority against other government institutions and expanded its role as a protector of individual rights.

His appointment to the court provided the critical fifth liberal vote needed for many of those decisions.

While an activist, Goldberg noted that the court's power was limited. It could not make war or peace or control how government spent the billions it collected from taxpayers.

But, said Goldberg, the justices "do have the great power to assert our national conscience."

Legislature's staff is now projecting $152 million deficit

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The General Assembly's budget office said Friday the state would end the current budget year with a $152.4 million deficit — a $101 million jump from its estimate issued two months ago.

The Legislature's Office of Fiscal Analysis blamed the growing deficit on sagging revenues from the sales and corporations taxes, and higher-than-expected welfare costs.

The estimate is more than double the current projection from Gov. William A. O'Neill's budget office, which is expecting a $65 million deficit. O'Neill also blames falling tax revenues and rising welfare costs.

Welfare costs for the Department of Income Maintenance are now running $2.6 million ahead of where O'Neill and the General Assembly thought they would be when the budget was approved last spring, according to OFA. At the same time, revenue estimates are $140 million below where they were expected to have been, OFA said.

The Welfare Department now expects to spend $48.9 million more than was budgeted for Medicaid and $21.2 million for the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, the report said.

The governor has already said that despite the deficit, he won't call for tax increases when he outlines his 1990-91 budget next month to the General Assembly.

O'Neill, who plans to seek reelection this year, signed more than $900 million in tax increases into law last year to eliminate a 1988-89 deficit and help keep the current year's budget in balance. The latest estimates are especially frustrating to the governor, because even last year's record tax increases apparently won't be enough.

His budget chief, Anthony V. Milano, said he was reviewing the OFA report and expects his office to increase its own deficit estimate when its next report is issued Feb. 1.

"We've seen the same weakness in the sales and corporations taxes," Milano said. He said he expects O'Neill to stick to his no-election-year tax increase pledge.

Earlier this month, O'Neill moved to reduce the 1989-90 deficit by ordering a 2 percent reduction in spending for most state agencies and said 2,000 state positions would be eliminated over the next 18 months through attrition.

Friday's OFA report does not include those hoped-for savings.

O'Neill said he had not been aware of the OFA estimate and said he would discuss it with his budget chief. "We'll see where it goes," he said when asked if he anticipated taking any further action to keep spending in check.

Barry gives mayor's duties to aide following drug charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry turned over "the duties and functions" of his office to an aide Friday after being formally charged with drug possession in an FBI sting that officials said included a videotape of Barry smoking crack cocaine.

Barry did not give up his office, which he has held for 11 years, and retained authority to sign and veto legislation and approve contracts.

The drug charge added to the turbulence of the political situation in the nation's capital, where Barry had already been under fire and the list of challengers for next November's election had been growing.

Jesse Jackson, the leader in early polls though he has said he would not run against Barry, said Friday he felt only sorrow about the new development and would not talk politics.

Federal prosecutors said Barry tested positive for cocaine in blood and urine tests after he was taken into custody Thursday night at a Washington hotel. His lawyer said Friday he would plead innocent to the charge.

The FBI used a woman to get Barry to the hotel room, said a law enforcement source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The woman was identified by sources familiar with the case as Rabeoda Moore. One source said Ms. Moore agreed to cooperate with the FBI's investigation of Barry after she got into trouble with state authorities in California.

The Washington Times said in an extra edition Friday afternoon that Ms. Moore, according to one law enforcement source, agreed to cooperate with the FBI because she believed Barry "needed help because he had been addicted before and had been showing signs of being addicted again."

According to the newspaper's account, she invited Barry to a party at the hotel. But three of the party-goers were FBI agents.

Barry, the newspaper said, was shirtless when arrested. He repeatedly denied ever using or buying drugs.

Barry had indicated he would seek a fourth term this November,

Guru still evokes strong emotion in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh said his showcase of communal living in Oregon would set an example for the world, but at his death Friday his commune was vacant and unwanted, his followers scattered, his memory reviled.

Rajneesh came to Oregon in 1981. By the time he was thrown out of the country in 1985, authorities were calling him the most notorious figure in Oregon history.

"He was both a charlatan and a very evil person," said Vic Ailyeh, the governor during the guru's years in Oregon. "Evil in the sense of the kind of people he gathered around him and what he allowed them to do, and his own personal arrogance. He was above everything."

U.S. Attorney Charles Turner, who prosecuted the guru on immigration fraud charges, said the 400 sham marriages among Rajneesh's disciples that led to the immigration charges, the poisoning of 750 people at restaurant salad bars and the commune's vast electronic eavesdropping network were the largest cases of their kind in American history.

"The legacy of crime that this man left here is unparalleled in American jurisprudence," Turner said.

The bejeweled guru brought his gospel of meditation and free love to the United States on the pretense of obtaining treatment for a bad back. He never underwent that surgery, but moved to a 64,000-acre ranch his followers had purchased in the remote high desert of central Oregon.

Their stated intent was to farm the land on Rancho Rajneesh, but they built homes, a hotel, restaurants, shops, an airport and a meditation hall, and then incorporated as the town of Rajneeshpuram.

After it all fell apart, an insurance company foreclosed on Rancho Rajneesh, but has been unable to find a buyer.

At its height, some 4,000 red-clad disciples lived at the commune. The gathering swelled to 15,000 when followers from around the world came for summer festivals.

Between morning and evening meditation sessions with Rajneesh, disciples toiled 12 hours a day. In the early afternoon, they would stop work and line the dusty roads for the guru's daily "drive-by" in one of his more than 90 Rolls-Royces. Singing and swaying, the disciples tossed roses onto the car's hood while armed guards hovered overhead in a helicopter.

Sect members won political control of the nearby community of Antelope, renaming it City of Rajneesh, and attempted to control voting in Wasco County by basing thousands of homeless people to the commune in 1984. After state officials ordered eligibility hearings for all new voter registration applicants in the county, the Rajneeshes and their transient guests boycotted the election.

"At the time we were going through it, we didn't realize how extraordinary it was," said Norma Paulus, who was secretary of state at the time. "I can't think of any comparable incidents in American history."

Rajneesh's acid-tongued secretary, Ma Anand Sheela, was a fixture in the state's media as she accused anyone who opposed the commune of bigotry.

Lawsuits were filed by and against the Rajneeshes on issues ranging from slander to the constitutionality of Rajneeshpuram's incorporation.

Rajneesh-loathing spread throughout the state. Caps bearing the guru's likeness inside a rifle target were hot items.

In September 1985, Sheela and about a dozen disciples left the commune abruptly. Rajneesh made accusations against her that angered federal, state and local criminal investigators.

Rajneesh was arrested the next month during a stopover at Charlotte, N.C., on a flight to Bermuda. He pleaded guilty to two counts of immigration fraud and returned to India under an agreement with federal officials.

Sheela, now 39, was arrested in West Germany and returned to Oregon, where she pleaded guilty to charges that included the attempted murder of the guru's physician with a poison-filled syringe.

She also admitted poisoning several county officials and restauranting the salad poisonings at restaurants in The Dalles, the county seat.

She pleaded guilty to creating an electronic eavesdropping system at the commune and to setting fire to the county planning office. A guilty plea to immigration fraud stemmed from charges that she helped arrange sham marriages to allow Rajneesh's foreign disciples to remain in the United States.

Sheela, a native of India, was deported in December 1988 after serving 2 1/2 years in federal prison.

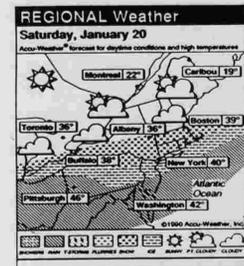

Rajneeshes say about 200 of the guru's followers remain in Oregon, but keep a low profile.

Attorney General Frohnmayer says the Rajneesh episode resulted in the clarification of state laws in several areas.

"We learned from it," he said. "It would be harder for a group bent on breaking the laws of civil government to move in to Oregon now."

Ruling may affect town drug testing

By the Associated Press and the Manchester Herald

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court Friday threw out a bid by the federal Urban Mass Transport Authority to impose random drug testing on local transit system employees.

The ruling could affect the need for ongoing negotiations between the town of Manchester and its employee union over how to implement drug tests for approximately 15 town employees who work with a local Dial-A-Ride service. UMBTA has threatened towns with the loss of grants for transportation programs if the testing is not conducted.

"We believe that Congress intended for such matters to be handled locally with UMBTA's guiding hand, not with an iron fist," the court said in an opinion filed by Chief Judge Patricia M. Wald.

In its decision, the U.S. District Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said UMBTA had exceeded its congressionally mandated authority in trying to impose uniform nationwide rules on local transit authorities.

The Dial-A-Ride service is federally funded and provides free transportation around Manchester for the elderly and disabled. About $53,000, or 42 percent, of its $126,000 operating budget is provided by UMBTA, an agency of the U.S. Department of Transportation.

UMTA wants to mandate drug testing in order to guarantee that its monies are providing wages for drug-free people. Manchester officials were worried that if the town

Werkhoven seeks panel on homeless

By Dianna M. Talbot Manchester Herald

Mayor Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven said he is considering creation of a four-member subcommittee to study and help solve problems related to homeless people in Manchester.

The mayor said he is responding to complaints from Main Street area business owners and managers who say they are tired of having their businesses disrupted by homeless people.

The 40-bed Samaritan Shelter, 466 Main St., is closed every day between the hours of 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. During those hours, people who stay at the shelter must go somewhere else. Many choose to frequent Main Street area restaurants, businesses and the Mary Cheney Library.

Werkhoven said he recently received complaints about homeless people who disrupt business and outstay their welcomes from companies which include Friendly Ice Cream, 435 Main St., and Paul's Paint and Decorating Center, 615 Main St.

Among the questions the mayor said he would like to see a subcommittee answer are these: are area towns doing enough to help their homeless residents, and can Manchester do anything more to help homeless people find housing?

"I would like to appoint two or three volunteers to work with me on the issue, so that we can figure out what to do," Werkhoven said. "I'm open for suggestions."

Werkhoven said he hopes to decide whether a subcommittee should be formed within the next few weeks.

In the meantime, he said, he will continue meeting with business and townspeople who are interested in the homeless, and continue gathering information about how many homeless people there are in Manchester and what they do during the day.

Bush says mortgages too high, wants a drop

MIAMI (AP) — President Bush on Friday issued an election-year call for lower taxes and interest rates, saying he's not satisfied with home mortgage rates hovering around 10 percent.

"We cannot allow the high costs of housing to suffocate the financial life of America's young people. And when it comes to housing, this must not become a society of 'haves' and 'have nots,'" the president said on the eve of the first anniversary of his inauguration.

"The 1990s must be another decade of lower taxes and lower interest rates."

Bush spoke at the National Association of Home Builders convention in Atlanta before flying to Miami to campaign for the re-election of Republican Gov. Bob Martinez.

The homebuilders are experiencing hard times, with housing construction slumping last year to its

New Haven faces crisis

By Larry Rosenhalt
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Mayor John Daniels declared Friday that New Haven was in a financial crisis and he warned of the possibility of "major layoffs" and a reduction in municipal services.

The mayor said spending cuts will have to be made to pull New Haven safely through to the end of the budget year June 30th, and that he will decide by next week where reductions are to be made.

"We may indeed face major layoffs. We may indeed have to curtail city services. We may indeed have to seek new sources of immediate revenue," Daniels said.

Top drug officer 'not happy' with wrongdoing by leaders

By Denise Lavio
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A top-ranking official in the Bush administration's war on drugs Friday refused to comment directly on the arrest of Washington Mayor Marion Barry on charges of drug possession.

Reggie B. Walton, associate director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, declined comment when asked if Barry's arrest made promoting Bush's anti-drug policy more difficult, saying the administration would reserve judgment and allow Barry's case to go through the courts.

Walton, who is second-in-command in the federal drug war behind William Bennett, is traveling throughout the United States to talk with state and local leaders before President Bush unveils the second half of his drug policy to the nation next week.

Walton said he believed the United States is making progress in the so-called war on drugs, but stressed the need for improved coordination between state and federal drug policies.

Barry turned over many of his mayoral duties to an aide Friday, but did not relinquish the job that he has held for the last 11 years. Although he did not enter a plea at his arraignment Friday, his attorney said he would later plead not guilty.

Walton, a former federal prosecutor and District of Columbia Superior Court judge, spoke to reporters about Barry after meeting with House Republican leaders Friday.

Walton said the administration would not consider steps like decriminalizing marijuana or a clean needle program to prevent the spread of AIDS through drug use, saying "the key is to provide better education for our young people."

Asked about Connecticut's "Save our Streets" program in which state troopers are paired with local police to patrol drug-infested neighborhoods, Walton said he favors any program that puts more law enforcement agents out on the street.

He said he hoped "that any kind of turf wars between state and local officials could be worked out," referring to the strident opposition the program has faced from local police unions.

Millionaire owed fortune to CBT, others

CHICAGO (AP) — A young millionaire on the brink of financial disaster failed to turn over all his assets to a bankruptcy trustee because of shoddy legal advice, his attorney argued at his bankruptcy fraud trial.

Prosecutors say William Stoecker, 32, sequestered personal funds and gave his housekeeper thousands of dollars to keep in a secret bank account after declaring bankruptcy, a charge that carries up to five years in prison.

The case is being heard before Judge George Marovich in U.S. District Court.

Bankruptcy documents showed that as of May 1989, Stoecker personally owed $153 million to 32 institutions across the country, including $20 million to Connecticut Bank and Trust Co.

Stoecker's attorney, Thomas Durkin, on Thursday denied prosecution charges that his client lived an extravagant lifestyle. "This case is built on nothing but sand," he said.

Prosecutors contend Stoecker hid $255,000 from court-appointed bankruptcy trustees trying to untangle his personal finances and those of his failed business.

"This case is about lies ... illegal transfers ... concealment of money," Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Crocker told jurors.

Grabill is a conglomerate of small Midwestern manufacturing companies, all acquired in leveraged buyouts. While the business was successful, it afforded Stoecker a luxurious lifestyle, including a pool house in Palos Park and one in Florida, prosecutors said.

But Crocker said that in late 1988 it "started to come apart and ended up in bankruptcy court."

Crocker said that after the bankruptcy filing in January 1989, Stoecker sent his father to a bank where they had a joint account and had him clear it out by getting a $300,000 cashier's check.

Stoecker later had the check broken down into 17 checks of $10,000, $15,000 and $20,000 and had his housekeeper open a new account in her name, Crocker said. He said the housekeeper used the money "to pay for the defendant's ongoing lifestyle."

In an April 14, 1989, meeting with bankruptcy trustee Thomas Raligh, Stoecker concealed the fact he had the funds, Crocker said.

But Durkin told jurors that Stoecker was only doing what one of his attorneys advised him to do.

Durkin said the banks forced Stoecker's corporation into bankruptcy court in January 1989, and the next month forced Stoecker into personal bankruptcy. During the same time, the U.S. attorney's office started a fraud investigation of Stoecker's activities.

"There was enormous litigation going on," Durkin said, adding that Stoecker had a number of attorneys.

The bankruptcy cases are proceeding separately.

Durkin said attorney David Missner of Chicago advised Stoecker in early February to take the money out of the account and put it into checks "to preserve the funds and protect them for all the creditors."

Durkin also said Raleigh knew about the checks at the end of March, two weeks before the April 14 meeting.

"The evidence is going to show that Raleigh has ... a motive to say Stoecker is a crook," Durkin said.

He said that as trustee, Raleigh stood to get "a piece of the action" in the liquidation of Grabill.

Stoecker once owned a snow-plowing company and a welding company before he went into the business of rehabbing houses. His real estate operations burgeoned by 1982 to a point where he founded Grabill Corp. At the age of 26 he was buying medium-sized companies for millions of dollars.

The empire was built on loans, and it began to come apart in December 1988 when he was unable to make full payment on a $150 million loan.

That prompted a nine-bank consortium that loaned him the money to look further into his finances. They forced him into bankruptcy after finding that $100 million in assets had disappeared.

Grandson admitted to slaying

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A man charged in the slaying of his 86-year-old grandmother last month said he beat her to death with a chair and a barbell after she refused to give him money to buy alcohol, according to police.

After the hearing, Judd Borrelli, 23, who lived with his grandmother in North Haven, told police he set a fire in the kitchen and turned on all of the stove's gas burners in an attempt to commit suicide, police said.

"After all this, I could not believe I didn't die," Borrelli allegedly said in a statement to police.

Parts of Borrelli's statement were read Thursday during a hearing in Superior Court. Judge Richard A. Damiani ruled there was enough evidence to order Borrelli to stand trial on a charge of murder in the death of Mae Coyte.

In the statement, Borrelli allegedly said he beat his grandmother with a chair until it broke, and then hit her in the chest with a barbell.

Coyte was discovered dead on Dec. 6, when relatives and neighbors who had not seen her in a few days became suspicious.

Two days after the discovery, Borrelli was picked up for question-

Car is linked to N.Y. slaying

EAST HARTFORD (AP) — Police believe a blood-spattered car confiscated at a carwash is tied to the gangland-style slaying of an actor in the New York City borough of Queens.

The car, a 1988 Chevrolet Corsica, was confiscated at the Mr. Auto Wash on Tollard Street Wednesday after carwash employees became alarmed when they found a bullet shell on the floor of the car.

The driver of the car, Tom M. Chou, 25, of the Astoria section of Queens, was arrested and charged with interfering with police when he tried to pick up the car at the carwash.

Carwash employees told police that Chou asked them to clean the inside of the car. They said the passenger seat was splattered with blood.

A New York City police spokesman said police are investigating Chou in connection with the slaying of Dalton Leong, whose body was found Tuesday night on 58th Street in Queens.

The spokesman said Leong, a free-lance actor, was shot in the back of the head and his body dumped in a parking lot.

The carwash employee who alerted police said when workers told Chou it was late in the day to begin an interior cleaning, "he was very insistent on it."

"One of the employees noticed all the blood all over the back of the passenger seat," said the employee, who asked not to be identified. "It was sopping."

East Hartford police arrested Chou when he returned to the carwash to pick up the car.

Lt. Dennis McQueney said forensic experts will try to determine whether they can use samples of the blood that remained in the vehicle.

McQueney said detectives took Chou into custody and alerted police in New York City, where the car was registered. He said they tied Leong's death to the car, but would not elaborate further.

Chou was released on a written promise to appear in Superior Court in Manchester later this month.

N.Y. officers shoot gunman

NEW YORK (AP) — A Dutchess County burglary suspect was critically wounded when police returned his gunfire as he got off a Metro-North Commuter Railroad train in Grand Central Terminal.

The shooting happened Thursday 7 p.m. near the end of the evening rush hour with thousands of commuters in the station, said Dan Brucker, a Metro-North spokesman.

State police in Fishkill had told Metro-North police that the man boarded a Manhattan-bound train in Beacon, in Dutchess County, Brucker said.

They described him and said he was carrying a blue duffle bag containing stolen furs, Brucker said.

Six Metro-North police met the train and spotted the suspect. When they asked permission to look in his bag, he jumped on the tracks of an adjoining platform and fired at the officers, who fired back, said Marjorie Anders, a Metro-North spokeswoman.

No passengers or police officers were injured, but one woman reportedly was so shaken by the incident that she was taken to a hospital for observation, Brucker said.

The wounded man was taken to Bellevue Hospital where he was in critical condition with multiple gunshot wounds.

Police recovered a revolver, allegedly used by the suspect, that had been fired several times. Of the duffel bag, Anders said: "We don't know for sure but we believe that it had furs in it," she said.

About 95,000 of the 500,000 passengers who use Grand Central daily take Metro-North trains, Brucker said.

Majority leader declines to endorse FICA tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said Friday a proposal to roll back Social Security payroll taxes dramatizes "the inequity and regressive nature" of the tax system, but he declined to endorse it.

Mitchell said he was concerned about the impact that Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan's proposal would have on the federal budget deficit and said he would await two staff studies on this question before making up his mind.

But he criticized President Bush for immediately resisting Moynihan's proposal, saying, "I regret the manner in which the president and the White House has treated it."

Bush on Thursday called the proposal a "charade" and Vice President Dan Quayle said it was "a political trap" and "a subterfuge for a general tax increase."

"I call on the Democrat leaders of Congress to give the American people a break and to let the House and Senate work their will by having an up-and-down vote on the capital gains tax cut," Bush said.

Discussing issues facing lawmakers with the reconvening of the second session of the 101st Congress next week, Mitchell used the Social Security payroll tax issue to attack Bush's tax policies, particularly the president's quest for a cut in capital gains taxes.

The Maine Democrat credited Moynihan, a New York Democrat, with stating "in very stark terms the administration's tax policy, which is, 'Let's cut taxes for the wealthy, but not the working people... Let the little people pay, cut taxes for the very wealthy.'"

"I think that is a tax policy that is unfair and wrong from a policy standpoint," he said, "and

Study says Medigap often unnecessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roughly half of the 3.5 million low-income older Americans covered by Medicaid needlessly spend hundreds of dollars for private medical insurance, according to a private study released Friday.

The study was commissioned and released by the American Association of Retired Persons and prepared by Market Facts Inc. based on interviews with a random sample of 1,500 older people contacted by telephone in January and February 1989.

"These findings clearly demonstrate that much more needs to be done to prevent the sale of Medigap policies to the Medicaid-eligible population," said AAR Executive Director Horace Deets.

Medigap policies are designed to cover certain hospital and other medical costs not covered by Medicare. Other health insurance policies bought by older Americans include hospital indemnity plans and policies covering specific diseases.

The survey found more than 3 million older Americans who do not qualify for Medicaid say they cannot afford to supplement their Medicare coverage by buying medigap or other private health policies.

That number is expected to grow as medigap premiums rise, pushed up in part by the repeal of Medicare's coverage of catastrophic health care expenses, AARP said.

The government's General Accounting Office surveyed 20 major medigap insurers late last year and found that 1990 premiums were expected to rise by an average of 19.5 percent over 1989 levels, with increases ranging from 5 percent to 52 percent.

Envoy Terry Waite enters fourth year as a hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anglican envoy Terry Waite begins his fourth year as a hostage of pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim militants on Saturday with his fate, and those of other captives, apparently hinging on a power struggle in Tehran.

A reliable Shiite source, who is familiar with the thinking of the hostage-holding factions, said the issue of the 18 Westerners missing in Lebanon is "on the back burner" until Iran's political infighting is settled.

"Any settlement to the hostage issue must await the outcome of the power struggle in Iran," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Waite, 50, disappeared in Moshen west Beirut Jan. 20, 1987. He was last seen leaving his seaside hotel to keep a rendezvous with kidnapers holding two Americans — journalist Terry Anderson and Scottish-born educator Thomas Sutherland — to negotiate their release.

No group has claimed it holds Waite and there has been no word on his fate. But Western and Lebanese intelligence officials are convinced he is held by Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, the group holding Anderson and Sutherland. British intelligence sources said they believe he is still alive.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie said he is confident his envoy will be released.

"There are others who have been unheard of for longer and I remain optimistic that Terry is there and that one day he will return to us," the Anglican leader said in an interview televised Friday in London.

David Waite said on the program he believed his brother was alive.

"Although there seems to be nothing visible happening, I'm just very hopeful that some time, and please let it be soon, we will see this situation start to turn around. Logically it's got to come to an end some time," he said.

Groups will appeal denial of 'pot' for medical uses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Groups trying to make marijuana available for medical uses such as controlling nausea in cancer patients on Friday appealed the Drug Enforcement Administration's decision rejecting the move.

The DEA acknowledges that marijuana has been used as a drug for centuries and its therapeutic potential has been noted by doctors for 150 years.

But the drug has been illegal in the United States since 1937 — with only a synthetic tetrahydrocannabinol, THC, available for medical use — and DEA administrators for 15 years have rejected bids to make marijuana itself available to patients, most recently last month.

On Friday, the Drug Policy Foundation, acting as attorney for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and the Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics, took the case again to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

"This will be the fifth time," said Kevin Zeese, counsel and co-founder of the Drug Policy Foundation who was with NORML from 1980 to 1986. The Drug Policy Foundation advocates treating drug abuse as a health problem, not a criminal problem.

"Each time we've won," Zeese said. "But this is the first time (the case) is on the issue of whether marijuana has medical value."

Advocates of allowing medical uses of marijuana want the DEA to change marijuana's status as a Schedule I drug, which is available only for research, to a Schedule II drug, which would make it available for patient use.

Previous court cases have been more on procedural matters, such as whether the DEA held appropriate hearings before rejecting applications.

On Dec. 29, DEA Administrator John C. Lawn rejected a longstanding petition to reclassify marijuana to Schedule II, overturning a recommendation by DEA's chief administrative law judge, Francis L. Young, who had recommended that marijuana be placed on the less restrictive schedule.

Young called marijuana "one of the safest therapeutically active substances known to man."

"The evidence in this record clearly shows that marijuana has been accepted as capable of relieving the distress of great numbers of very ill people, and doing so with safety under medical supervision," Young wrote. "It would be unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious for DEA to continue to stand between those sufferers and the benefits of this substance in light of the evidence in this record."

Synthetic THC is available on Schedule II for use as a cancer chemotherapy antiemetic. Marijuana also has been touted as useful in the treatment of glaucoma.

SENTENCED — Robert and Jane Lee Garcia leave federal court house in New York Friday following their sentencing to three years each.

Ex-congressman, wife given 3-year sentences

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Garcia, the popular congressman who resigned his seat after he was convicted of extorting payoffs from the Wedtech Corp., was sentenced Friday to three years in jail.

His wife, Jane Lee Garcia, who was convicted of the same charges, received the same sentence.

The judge, however, ordered that both be eligible for parole after serving six months.

"You yielded to the temptation of betraying your office so you and your wife might enjoy a higher lifestyle," said U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand.

The judge concluded that Garcia's crimes were less than others convicted in the Wedtech scandal, but said he felt Garcia had to spend some time in prison as a deterrent and as an example.

Still, the judge said he thought it was the most lenient sentence he could give the former Democratic congressman.

Sand didn't fine the Garcias after their attorneys said they were completely destitute and recently had lost even their Bronx apartment.

Garcia said in a statement to the court he accepted the jury's verdict and apologized to his former constituents.

"I never tried deliberately to harm them," he said.

He asked for leniency for himself and mercy for his wife, whom he said he loved very much.

"The past three years have been more difficult than anything you can imagine," Mrs. Garcia, 49, told the judge, adding that the hardest part of the ordeal for her and her husband has been consulting those close to them.

The Garcias were the last major defendants tried in the wide-ranging corruption scandal at Wedtech, which forced open with Iran. Others rallied in Baku, with some calling for the violent overthrow of Soviet power and a union of the predominantly Muslim republic with Iran's Azerbaijan region, Tass said.

Facing mounting public opposition, authorities on Friday suspended their emergency callup of reserve troops to stem the warfare. Many of the 29,000 troops sent to the southern republics have been unable to reach their destinations because hundreds of Azerbaijanis have blocked airports and roads with trucks and buses, opposing what they view as Kremlin interference.

Despite attempts by the troops to maintain order in Armenia and Azerbaijan, Gorbachev said the situation was not improving following six days of battles.

"It's still difficult. People's lives are in danger," Gorbachev told British TV. At least 72 people have died and more than 220 have been wounded in the fighting.

A Moscow Radio broadcast said Friday that "additional contingents" of troops were being brought into Armenia and Azerbaijan and "new sub-units" of Interior Ministry troops had arrived in Nagorno-Karabakh, an Armenian-dominated enclave in Azerbaijan. Both Armenia and Azerbaijan claim the territory.

Shuttle sets record

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia, forced to stay in orbit an extra day Friday because of fog at its desert landing site, streaked toward a touchdown early today to end the longest shuttle mission yet.

The spaceship and its five astronauts had planned to return home Friday morning, but the landing was "waived off" first by one orbit and then by a day because of a threat of fog that proved to be real at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

A new landing time of 3:01 a.m. EST today extended the shuttle flight to nearly 11 days, surpassing the old record, set by Columbia in 1983, by 11 hours, 38 minutes.

The weather was expected to be favorable for the new landing time in the Mojave Desert. Columbia carries enough fuel and other supplies to stay in orbit until at least Monday, NASA officials said.

The astronauts had a light day Friday, working on a couple of experiments and snapping some more photographs of Earth before going to bed around noon.

Extremists, Soviet troops battle in Baku

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet troops were reported to be fighting ethnic extremists in the streets of the Azerbaijani capital of Baku early Saturday.

It was the first such combat reported in Baku.

An American journalist in Moscow spoke by telephone before dawn Saturday to a spokesman for the Azerbaijani People's Front, who said Soviet soldiers entered the city and were engaged in street fighting, and doctors were told to stand by to treat casualties.

No immediate confirmation came of deaths or injuries.

The official news agency Tass issued no reports of troops fighting in Baku.

The sounds of gunfire could be heard in the background over the telephone, said the U.S. journalist, Los Angeles Times correspondent Maha Hamilton. Phone connections to the Caucasus from Moscow have been cut much of this week, making confirmation of reported fighting extremely difficult.

Moscow Radio said reinforcements were being sent to Armenia and Azerbaijan.

Earlier Friday, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev blamed extremists opposed to his reforms for the ethnic warfare in the Caucasus and said some Azerbaijanis were calling for a separate Islamic state.

His comments came as Azerbaijanis reportedly brought arms into the country over the border they have forced open with Iran. Others rallied in Baku, with some calling for the violent overthrow of Soviet power and a union of the predominantly Muslim republic with Iran's Azerbaijan region, Tass said.

Facing mounting public opposition, authorities on Friday suspended their emergency callup of reserve troops to stem the warfare. Many of the 29,000 troops sent to the southern republics have been unable to reach their destinations because hundreds of Azerbaijanis have blocked airports and roads with trucks and buses, opposing what they view as Kremlin interference.

Despite attempts by the troops to maintain order in Armenia and Azerbaijan, Gorbachev said the situation was not improving following six days of battles.

A Moscow Radio broadcast said Friday that "additional contingents" of troops were being brought into Armenia and Azerbaijan and "new sub-units" of Interior Ministry troops had arrived in Nagorno-Karabakh, an Armenian-dominated enclave in Azerbaijan. Both Armenia and Azerbaijan claim the territory.

Atwater tells GOP to play it straight on abortion issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater said Friday that the party welcomes pro-choice candidates despite its anti-abortion stance and told candidates to face the divisive issue squarely, whatever their views.

"What no voter likes is vacillating, waffling or double talk," Atwater said at the winter meeting of the Republican National Committee.

"And they don't like the appearance of vacillation, waffling or double talk."

Atwater noted that he, President Bush and the party platform are anti-abortion but said voters "can agree to disagree" with a candidate's view on abortion.

"Our party is big enough to accept different views on many different issues," Atwater said, referring to the internal debate over abortion as one of the "growing pains" of trying to become a majority party.

The RNC meeting has been the scene of much soul searching as the GOP seeks a strategy to blunt Democrats' successful use of abortion as an issue against Republicans in several major 1989 elections.

"In 1990 no candidate can run for public office without squarely facing the abortion issue," Atwater said in trying to rally GOP leaders from across the country for the crucial elections this year that will determine who controls congressional redistricting.

Democrats running in 1989 for governor and lieutenant governor of Virginia, governor of New Jersey and mayor of New York ran and won on pro-choice platforms against GOP candidates who had anti-abortion records but tried to moderate their stance. Those apparent shifts brought attacks from the Democrats, who Atwater said "pulled a reverse twist on us" by borrowing a key Atwater election strategy.

"They defined our candidates before they defined themselves and that's almost always fatal," Atwater said. "Just ask the fellow from Massachusetts," he said in a reference to Bush's win over Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

The message was similar to that preached by Atwater, Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle since the 1989 elections. But it came as the GOP prepares for 1990 contests, in which its hopes in several major races — including the California gubernatorial race — rest on pro-choice candidates.

At a news conference after his speech, Atwater said he, Bush and the national party would work diligently for pro-choice Republicans despite differences on abortion. Other Republicans also should put party loyalty first, he said.

"I would hope Republicans support Republican candidates regardless of their position on abortion,"

Atwater said.

He said that in private sessions with the GOP leaders, talks dominated by abortion politics, "there seems to be a consensus" in favor of his strategy of welcoming pro-choice GOP candidates without abandoning the party's anti-abortion plank.

An attempt by one RNC member to get the meeting to reaffirm that plank failed Thursday, and other participants said it was best to avoid such a move because of the problems it could cause some candidates.

Bush, however, shows no signs of keeping his anti-abortion views under wraps.

He vetoed two bills last year that would have allowed the use of federal funds for abortions in cases of rape and incest and the White House said Friday that Bush will address a rally of abortion foes via telephone Monday, the 17th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

Atwater's remarks about abortion came near the end of a lengthy, partisan speech in which he urged GOP loyalists not to dwell on the party's poor showing last year.

"You get off the canvas and you get back into the arena every time, and that's what we're going to do," he said.

Bob Dylan heads ticket

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Bob Dylan leads a cast of groups including British bands Tears for Fears and The Eurythmics, Scotland's Marillion, Bon Jovi of the United States, and pop artist Terence Trent D'Arby for a six-day, two-city rock festival.

An estimated 90,000 Brazilians turned out Thursday for opening night of Hollywood Rock, which moves next week to Rio de Janeiro.

Dylan, who wore a black leather jacket and jeans despite the near 100-degree summer heat, drew his loudest applause with his 1960s folk hits.

Through the 48-year-old singer was billed as the star of opening night, most of the teen-age fans who gathered Wednesday to see the groups arrive said they were waiting for a glimpse of the New Jersey band Bon Jovi.

Rock musician critically ill

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Allen Collins, who lost fellow members of his rock group Lynyrd Skynyrd in a 1977 plane crash and was paralyzed by a 1986 drunken driving accident, is critically ill, according to friends.

Collins, 37, has been hospitalized for 4½ months at Memorial Medical Center of Jacksonville. His family has asked that no further information be released on his illness or condition, a hospital spokesman said. They also asked that no one call or visit.

Two friends, Barry Harwood and Rick Reichard, said they had been told the former guitarist was suffering from pneumonia and other respiratory infections.

Collins began his rise to success as the lightning-fingered guitarist for Lynyrd Skynyrd, formed in 1966 by a group of Lee High School students.

The band enjoyed national fame in the 1970s with such hits as "Free Bird," "Saturday Night Special," "Gimme Three Steps," and "Sweet Home Alabama."

Frazier guilty of speeding

SHELLSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A judge says former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier didn't have much of a defense when he argued against a speeding ticket he received on the Pennsylvania Turnpike last summer.

Frazier, who attended his hearing without an attorney Thursday, told district Justice Erika McVicker he wasn't feeling well and was in a hurry to get home when state police radar clocked his car at 74 mph on Aug. 23.

He lost the case and paid $143.50 in fines and costs, Ms. McVicker said.

Despite his loss, "He signed autographs and posed for pictures after the hearing," she said.

Frazier was World Boxing Association heavyweight champion from 1970 to 1973. He lost his last fight to Muhammad Ali in 1975 and now operates Smokin' Joe and Son gymnasium in Philadelphia.

Twins named for dad

HOUSTON (AP) — The identical twins of the late U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, killed in a plane crash in Africa, will be named Cameron George and Austin Mickey Leland, their mother says.

Alison Leland, who gave birth to the twin boys 10 weeks prematurely Sunday in Atlanta, said Thursday the children will be named after their father.

"George is Mickey's real name, Mickey is actually a nickname," she said. "What I was thinking is that my oldest son Jarrett has the gift of having memories of the father. The others have his names."

Mrs. Leland was in Atlanta for observances of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday at which her late husband was honored. Leland was killed in August while on a hunger relief mission.

Show biz vet had jitters

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Hank Snow, celebrating his 40th anniversary on the Grand Ole Opry, remembers having butterflies during his debut on the show.

"I remember it very, very well," he said in an interview Thursday about his first Opry performance in 1950. "I was nervous, not to the point of passing out, but I was nervous."

Murder trial is ordered in slayings of 6 Jesuits

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The director of the Military College and a former head of military intelligence, became the highest Salvadoran officer ever charged with a high-profile crime.

No officer has been convicted of such a crime, even though rightist death squads, sponsored or tolerated by the armed forces, killed thousands of suspected leftists in the early 1980s.

"I don't want any witnesses," two accused lieutenants — Gonzalo Guevara and Jose Espinoza — quoted Benavides as telling them shortly before midnight Nov. 15, when he allegedly ordered that the priests be slain.

Shareholders to soon receive takeover booklets

Nekoosa, Georgia-Pacific duel for stockholders' fancy

STAMFORD (AP) — Great Northern Nekoosa Corp.'s shareholders will soon find thin, white booklets in their mailboxes asking them to do what's best for their portfolio and their pocketbook.

The booklets are being sent by Great Northern and Georgia-Pacific Corp., as part of Georgia-Pacific's hostile effort to take over the Norwalk-based paper products company.

"No one knows what will happen to the price of Great Northern shares if our offer isn't consummated," says a letter by Georgia-Pacific chairman T. Marshall Hahn Jr. "What we do know is that if our offer is consummated you would get $63 per share, in cash."

Great Northern is countering with its own materials — 86 pages of arguments, lists and legal documents. Then the ballots will be used at a March 2 meeting in Maine essentially to determine whether stockholders want the deal to go through.

Georgia-Pacific, an Atlanta-based forest products company, offered to buy Great Northern for $3.8 billion late last year. Great Northern said the offer was too low and would give the new company an unlawful monopoly on certain cardboard and paper businesses. An antitrust suit is pending in federal court in Bridgeport.

Cap Cities buys 8 more papers

MILFORD (AP) — Capital Cities/ABC Inc. has purchased the Milford Publishing Co., publishers of the daily Milford Citizen and seven other community newspapers, the Citizen reported Friday.

The Milford company, previously owned by Goodson Newspapers of New Jersey, will now join Capital Cities' Share Line Newspapers Group, which publishes 18 weekly and semi-weekly newspapers and shoppers from the Rhode Island border to Hamden.

Capital Cities announced Monday that it had purchased Imprint, a chain of 14 weeklies in northeastern Connecticut.

Ricki Smith-Coyne, publisher of Milford Publishing, will remain in the position. No immediate changes in personnel are anticipated, the Citizen reported.

"The Citizen and its papers have a great reputation of community involvement and service," said John C. Peterson, president and publisher of the Share Line group. "We respect that record, and look to enhance it in the years ahead."

Smith-Coyne called the purchase "a good move for the staff, the papers and the communities we serve."

In addition to the Milford Citizen and the Sunday Citizen, newspapers printed by the Milford group include the following weeklies: West Haven News, Stratford Bard, Orange/Woodbridge/Bethany Bulletin, Valley Drummer, Suburban News, Monroe's Drumbeat Reporters, and the Milford Reporter, a shopper.

Greenspan calling the tune

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Whatever dance the stock and bond markets do in the days and weeks ahead, Chairman Alan Greenspan of the Federal Reserve Board is likely to be calling the tune.

That's the near-unanimous expectation on Wall Street as Greenspan prepares for a series of appearances before various committees of Congress beginning this coming week.

Greenspan makes his Capitol Hill rounds at a time when hopes are dimming for any further moves by the Fed to relax its credit policy.

If the outlook for the U.S. economy alone were at issue, analysts say, the central bank would have a few problems pushing interest rates lower right now, given a recent revival of worries about inflation.

But that's not the biggest deterrent hobbling the private analysts and economists who make their living trying to guess the Fed's next move.

There also is the new variable of rising interest rates in Japan, West Germany and other industrialized countries, in some cases to their highest levels in several years.

This tends to exert upward pressure on U.S. interest rates, because yields on American securities must remain competitive to attract money from international investors.

If the Fed should choose to fight that pressure, many analysts believe, the result could well be a dollar decline in foreign exchange.

But many observers see potential pitfalls as well in a restrictive Fed policy. Such an approach theoretically increases the chances of a recession.

Beyond that, many believe it is a perilous approach in a period of shaky credit conditions in the "junk" bond market and at banks with problem loans on their hands.

"During a period of financial distress, many shocks can occur and overwhelm the financial markets," said Hugh Johnson, an analyst at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

"The effect of these shocks can be aggravated by a Federal Reserve that is reluctant (justifiably so) to add liquidity to the markets each time a decline occurs."

"There is a risk that the Federal Reserve will be seduced, by declines in the dollar or intermitently strong inflation and economic data, into keeping interest rates too high, too long."

With such worries dragging it down, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 11.31 to 2,677.90 in the past week.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell .76 to 187.56; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 1.16 to 440.88, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 6.15 at 366.08.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 172.26 million shares a day, against 161.92 million the week before.

Who sets the tone for society today?

By George R. Plagenz

One of my Christmas presents was the book "Chic Savages," an inside look into the greed-and-consumption society of the '80s whose members "claw and buy their way up" the social ladder.

The author, fashion publisher John Fairchild, refers to it as a "society of material luxury that is impoverished in its relations with just about everybody else."

I enjoy getting these glimpses into the world of the Trumps, William Buckley, the designer Oscar de la Renta and the ambitious young hostess Susan Outfriend and in eavesdroppings on the lunchtime conversations at the fashionable La Cirque restaurant in New York City.

But living that glitzy life would hold no charms for me. If I were to mingle with the uppercrust, I would prefer the world of that proper Bostonian George Apley.

As a Christmas present I gave one of my sons John Marquand's 1936 novel "The Late George Apley." Marquand intended this Pulitzer Prize winner as a satire on the facade of manners that prevailed in Beacon Hill society in the first third of this century.

But given the deplorably low state of manners and morals today, 50 years after Marquand wrote, much of the book's satire comes across as good sense if not wisdom.

Our "happiness is everything" culture could afford to take to heart George Apley's counsel to his son, "I believe a large part of life consists of learning how to be unhappy without worrying too much about it."

On the subject of marriage: "Marriage in those days was a more serious matter than it is at present where the possibility of the breaking of ties may from the first be treated plausibly." At the time of George Apley's marriage such an eventuality was beyond even faint consideration, and this is the reason so much of the life of the period moved tranquilly without friction.

"Those concessions so necessary in the bonds of matrimony were more readily arranged because, in a sense, they were inevitable."

George had his own reasons for making concessions in his marriage. In a letter he wrote, "I find it just as well to do what Catherine (his wife) wants. It saves such a great deal of trouble."

When disagreements arose Apley followed the New England principle that "the least said is soonest mended." This probably is an improvement on "open communication" in marriage. Talking it out in many cases only makes matters worse.

Apley's father's advice to his son on business dealings: "After a glass or two (of liquor) refuse politely to do any business until the next morning. Commit yourself to no agreement not made over clear, cold water."

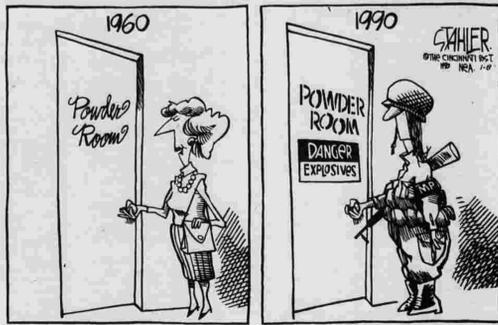

George Apley to his own son John at the birth of his grandson: "I hope when he grows up that he may be able to recognize a lady by her manner and by her dress. I hope he will see what so many of you have forgotten, that there must be certain standards, that there must be certain formalities in art and thought and manners."

"There must be a class which sets a tone, not for its own pleasure, but because of the responsibility it owes to others."

That may sound elitist but E.B. White once said something similar regarding lax standards of English usage. "Unless someone is willing to entertain notions of superiority and say what those standards should be," said White, "the English language disintegrates, just as a home disintegrates unless someone in the family sets standards of good taste, good conduct and simple justice."

In an age of disintegrating social standards, I'd rather have George Apley's crowd — with their credo of "plain living and high thinking" and "distaste for lavish expenditure" — set the tone of society than the "Chic Savages" of today.

Abortion seen as losing issue

By Walter R. Meers

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater and his strategy team look at the abortion issue, they see a loser. So they are urging GOP candidates to deal with it early in the campaign year and try to put the subject to rest.

They figure that in 1990 state or congressional campaigns in which abortion becomes the dominant issue in the final weeks before the Nov. 6 elections, Republican candidates who campaign against abortion rights probably will be defeated.

That's an ironic judgment in a party pledged by platform to oppose abortion, and led by a president who enforced his own opposition with three vetoes late last year. Despite those positions, President Bush and Atwater both maintain there is plenty of Republican room for abortion rights advocates.

Those crosscurrents are likely to come up at Republican National Committee meetings, with anti-abortion Republicans pressing to put the party out front on their issue.

The numbers would indicate there is more mileage in Atwater's pragmatic approach to the abortion issue.

The abortion rights argument clearly worked to Democratic advantage in the handful of 1989 elections, notably in the election of Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder. This year, with the House, 34 Senate seats and 36 governorships to be filled, the GOP problem could worsen.

Pollsters Peter Hart, a Democrat, and Robert Teeter, a Bush

Republican, see the issue as one that could offer an important opening to the Democrats in 1990.

In a poll they conducted for NBC News and the Wall Street Journal, voters said they would prefer abortion rights candidates by a margin of nearly two to one. That survey, conducted in November, showed that in a contest between a candidate favoring women's right to an abortion and a candidate who wanted to ban most abortions, 48 percent would be more likely to vote for the pro-choice candidate. Twenty-five percent said they would more likely vote for the anti-abortion candidate.

The rest said they would base the choice on other issues, or weren't sure.

People who identified themselves as Republicans leaned that way, 59 percent to 33 percent.

Asked which party could better deal with the abortion issue, voters said Democrats, 29 percent to 21 percent.

Bush used vetoes to block two appropriations bills that would have provided government funds to pay for abortions for poor women pregnant because of rape or incest; the poll indicated that voters disagree.

It showed 75 percent favored public funding of such abortions, 20 percent opposed.

Atwater says he is advising candidates to be clear, concise and quick in spelling out their abortion views. Having done so, he says, they should stand firm on that position and move on to other issues.

"So I tell candidates 'Stake your position out loudly and clearly. Don't back off.' And the second piece of advice I'm giving them is

'You define your position. Don't let your opponent define your position for you.'

Atwater and other party leaders maintain that the voters will accept differences and vote for a candidate anyhow, on other issues, but that they don't like politicians who waffle or shift sides.

Perhaps. But there's a lot of shuffling and shifting going on among politicians in both parties as the campaign year begins.

And the issue is not likely to be pushed off, or even down the agenda by candidate efforts to get it out of the way early. It is too emotional, and it has been recharged by the 1989 Supreme Court decision empowering states to impose some restrictions on abortion. In most states, legislatures are meeting for the first time since that ruling.

All of that points to an escalating debate in the 1990 campaign. That is not promising for a GOP effort to settle the issue early and put it aside.

On the cutting edge of art

Power tool used to sculpt wood

By Maura Griffin
The Associated Press

Chain saws aren't just for massacres anymore. Now they're for art, too.

In Vermont, as in some other rural areas of the country, the power tool best known for felling trees — or as a prop in horror movies — is being used to sculpt figures out of wood.

Along Route 100, between Waterbury and Stowe, roadside menageries have sprouted, featuring life-size bears, buffaloes, eagles, moose, skunks and giraffes carved with a chain saw.

In Vermont, as in some other rural areas of the country, the power tool best known for felling trees — or as a prop in horror movies — is being used to sculpt figures out of wood.

Along Route 100, between Waterbury and Stowe, roadside menageries have sprouted, featuring life-size bears, buffaloes, eagles, moose, skunks and giraffes carved with a chain saw.

At one Waterbury shop, hidden behind layers of sawdust, ear plugs and a pair of welding goggles, Max Osorio bobs and jabs like a boxer — except he's armed with a chain saw and his opponent is a block of wood.

Wood chips fly. Curious tourists stop and watch. But Osorio does not stop. It takes him eight hours to make a 6-foot bear or Indian, the two pieces that sell the most.

Osorio starts with a tree trunk and envisions the figure. Then, he hacks at it with unwavering attention, and recognizable parts begin to appear. First the coarse head, the back, then a wing, the talons, and slowly, an eagle is born.

"It is still very rough, but when you consider I am working with a chain saw, it's remarkable," boasted Osorio.

"I try to make the most detailed, realistic sculptures as possible with the tool," said Osorio, who placed second last summer in the fourth-annual World Championship Chain-saw Contest in Hill City, Minn.

"It just takes practice."

Osorio, a naturalized U.S. citizen who was born in Mexico, began carving after working as a dishwasher in Stowe.

"One day I drove by a place and saw the wooden bears — they were selling them for $500 — and I thought to myself, 'I could do that,'" Osorio said.

Carving wasn't as easy as it looked, but he started with a 12-inch seated bear and has worked his way up to life-size animal and human figures.

The Associated Press

GAS-POWERED CHISEL — Max Osorio puts the finishing touches on a sculpture of a bear last week. Osorio, who calls himself the best chain saw sculptor in Vermont says "it's very rough, but when you consider I am working with a chain saw, it's remarkable."

"Once I learned how, I wanted to do more than just the static bear sitting, doing nothing. I try to get detail and action," he said.

There is plenty of action in Osorio's latest creation, an old man on skis chasing a bison skier in a bikini. Even the locals turn their heads.

Osorio, like other Vermont carvers, learned the craft at the Spinning Wheel, a Route 100 gift shop.

Owner Milo Marshall said he learned the skill six years ago from an Arizona man who was traveling through Vermont.

Marshall's wife, Emma, said half of the shop's $400,000 gross annual income comes from chain-saw sculpture sales.

After two years at the Spinning Wheel, Osorio moved to the Mousetrap, a gift shop down the road. Some of Osorio's sculptures sell for $2,000, and most between $250 and $500, with a 10 percent commission to the shop, but Osorio is reluctant to disclose how much he makes.

"All I'll say, is for somebody without a degree, who doesn't speak good English, it's a good living."

One statue of an Indian that Osorio made was so perfect, he said, he wanted to keep it for himself so he put a high price on it.

"But a man from Long Island came and his girlfriend liked it. He was not scared of the price," Osorio said. The man also paid Osorio to drive it to Long Island, where the man wanted to stand the 10-foot Indian behind his desk.

With three shops on Route 100 in Waterbury selling chain-saw sculptures, the competition is fierce, but friendly.

"If the place down the road specializes in pigs, I won't do a pig," Osorio said. "But bears, everybody does the bears."

Pine Tree Creations, the smallest of the three, feels the competition, owner Doug Joslyn said. He said he recently put up a sign that now brings more tourists to his shop.

"But if I had a quarter for every person who took a picture, I'd be better off than selling them," said Joslyn.

Mrs. Marshall said tour buses often stop in her shop.

"Some buses stop just because the people on the bus start screaming, 'Stop!'" she said. "The life-sized buffalo stopped traffic for a long time."

Congregations are shrinking

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A United Methodist bishop says congregations in that big but shrinking denomination are not evangelizing as much as they should.

Bishop George Bashore of Western Pennsylvania told a recent denominational congress on evangelism, "We are developing processes for the evaluation of clergy throughout our denomination, but I believe we are much more cavalier in calling our congregations to accountability for what they are doing."

The United Methodist Church has 8.9 million members, making it the nation's second largest Protestant denomination, but the membership has declined steadily for 25 years from a high of 11 million in 1965.

"We need to redirect resources from places that aren't taking off to churches that will take off in the name of Jesus Christ," Bashore said.

By Nancy Carr

Conference of Churches

A "home aid concert" will be held to benefit Manchester's homeless. A group of Manchester bands (the T-Bags, the Love Dogs and Stiff Little Fists) have joined to offer a popular concert featuring rock and roll, blues, jazz and ragga music at a benefit concert for the Samaritan Shelter on Friday at 8 p.m. at Woodruff Hall, Center Congregational Church, 11 Center Street.

The suggested donation will be $5. We hope people will join us Friday night to show support for the shelter. Our thanks to Brian and Josh Majewski and Brian Larch of T-Bags, Ken Morton, David Kinney and Andy Cole of Love Dogs, and Marc Ferera and his band of Stiff Little Fists.

By now you are all aware that we have a home for the clothing bank, thanks to the Manchester Christian Fellowship, 509 E. Middle Turnpike. The wife of Rev. Dan Boisvert, pastor of the Fellowship, read an article in the Herald, and then the Fellowship offered the full use of its second large room to house the clothing bank.

Since the rooms are not heated during the week, MACC needed to find some funds to pay for utilities and Mary Ann Handley conducted a quick personal mini-fund drive which raised another $475 (our thanks to Mary Ann, Naze Agostinelli, Barbara Jolly and Ray Damato).

We now have a site and funds to get us open and pay the utilities for the next year. Even with a site and money, we still couldn't have opened up without all the sweat and toil of some very dedicated persons. To observe the dictate of these verses, Jews will not eat both meat and dairy at the same meal, and following a meat meal will wait at least three hours before eating any dairy foods. This stricture very effectively makes eating a sacred act because one must think before eating anything. Eating is thus transformed from being a mindless fulfillment of a physical need.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

Nominal Christians entertain numerous misconceptions regarding worship to God. That one can worship God privately as well as publicly is true only in part. We need both (see 1 Cor. 11:17-18, 14:26). That our lives are worship only partly true (Rom. 12:1). There are set times and expressions (Acts 20:7). That worship is in the heart is also true, but it needs verbalization as well (Eph. 5:19). That outward forms are needed is true, but they must come from a heart and committed life (Amos 5:21-24, 1 Cor. 14:15). That worship makes us happy, so whatever does this, God accepts. The first part is true, but our stimulation is not the primary aim. Rather it is the glorification of God who desires "worship in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24). Now is public worship a performance by professionals. All Christians are participants (Col. 3:16).

Changes due on 'Island Son'

By Jerry Buck
The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Richard Chamberlain's Hawaii-based medical series is undergoing cosmetic surgery to make it more attractive to the audience.

Social Security

QUESTION: I understand that I need to get my 2-year-old daughter a Social Security number. Isn't this a bit young to have to get a number?
ANSWER: Beginning with the tax return you'll file next year — the tax return for 1989 — you'll have to have a Social Security number for any children 2 or over that you claim as dependents on your return.

The actor says he's been traveling consistently for 25 years and "wouldn't have missed a second of it." But he adds:
"I wanted to put down some roots. I wanted to stop living out of a suitcase. Besides staying put, another reason I wanted to do a series was that I wanted to be involved on the production side. I'm co-executive producer of 'Island Son.' That makes the job even more interesting for me."

Marion has nostalgic image

No doubt about it, the Marion, with its wide wrap-around porch, matches the nostalgic image of a farmhouse every American keeps tucked in a back corner of his or her mind. Fortunately, it can be built anywhere, and inside it's not in the least bit old-fashioned. Except for the formal parlor, that is. Its double doors swing open only on the most special occasions.

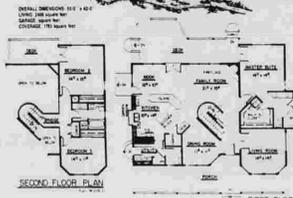

Two bedrooms and a deck are upstairs. Everything else is on the main floor, including the master suite. Once the kids are gone, an older couple could easily confine their living to the main floor, keeping the two upper bedrooms ever-ready for guests or converting them to other uses.

High ceilings and bright, the kitchen, nook, family room and dining room are completely modern in their free-flowing layout and the area opens onto a wide deck. Invite 20, even 30 people, over for the evening, and still it won't feel crowded.

The first thing you see, entering the room, is the polished wood of a graceful open stairwell. At the second floor landing, it forms an open bridge—a great vantage point for watching goings-on below. A quiet observer might even go completely unnoticed for awhile.

The kitchen, with both a huge butcher-block work island and another long eating bar island, provides plenty of elbow room for couples or friends who enjoy cooking together. It also features a large walk-in pantry and built-in desk. Utilities and a small water closet are tucked conveniently behind the kitchen, and also accessible outside.

The master suite has a spa and a huge walk-in closet as well as a shower, double vanities and its own access to the deck.

Clean mold from concrete

By Popular Mechanics
For The Associated Press

QUESTION: I recently moved to a newer house and found the basement was damp. I was able to dry things out by running a dehumidifier for a few days. The problem I have is that mold keeps forming on the floor. How can I clean it off and prevent it from forming again?

ANSWER: Mold and mildew spores are always present in the air and thrive in damp locations. A mold buildup is not very unusual in a new house due to the initial high moisture content of the building materials, which eventually dry out. To address your problem, clean mold and mildew from concrete and tiled floors and walls with a solution of 1/2 to 1 cup of household bleach to one gallon of water. Rinse with clear water, then dry. Wear gloves and avoid skin contact while cleaning. Also, keep the dehumidifier running to reduce further moisture buildup.

QUESTION: Our garbage disposal can't drain the dishwasher discharge fast enough so there's a momentary backup into the sink. The disposal works fine when used alone, with no backup. The plumbing downstream has been checked and the sink trap replaced. The drain lines appear to be clear. Is it possible to have a partial blockage of the disposal? If so, how is it cleaned out?

ANSWER: Sounds like you have some sort of blockage in the drain system. The disposal itself has no way of holding any water so that is most likely not your problem. To check this, disconnect the power to the disposal, then disconnect the trap. Look into the disposer's discharge port to make sure it's all clear. Then, with a bucket under the garbage disposer, pour some water through it to make sure it flows freely. Reconnect the drain trap and the electrical power. If the garbage disposer appears to be clear, have a plumber or sewer

Weeders Guide Making wine takes pride

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

"The bottle of sparkling wine we are making, we realize, is for someone's celebration and should be good," said the winemaker. "It makes you take production very seriously. It is going to be enjoyed on some happy occasion."

This is the philosophy of Dan Karlsen, the tall, red-bearded assistant winemaker at Domaine Carneros winery in California's lush Carneros region north of San Francisco.

As we toured the winery, Karlsen explained that they were looking for balance and stability, and alcohol and fruit intensity, more than in still wines. "We use pinot noir grapes for round, flavorful variety and richness; chardonnay gives fruitiness and acidity and sharper background. Chardonnay and pinot noir are the two main grapes grown in the rich clay soil."

While sparkling wine and champagne have similarities in production, the French appellation is not used.

Domaine Carneros is a partnership of the prominent French producer Taittinger Champagne, New York importer-distributor Kobrand Corp., and Peter Onkway, 3M Co. heir.

Many of the 316 wineries in the Napa and Sonoma valleys of California have foreign winemaking connections, including French, British, Swiss, Belgian, Swedish, Japanese, German, Spanish, Italian and others.

Carneros is a 36,000-acre district (only 15,000 acres plantable) encompassing both Napa and Sonoma valleys. The microclimatic region is characterized by early morning fog rising from San Pablo Bay in the south and trapped in by the Mayacamas Mountains in the north to warm the temperature in winter and cool it in summer, providing a long growing season.

Karlsen explained sparkling wine: "We get carbonation from secondary yeast fermentation. Each wine has its own ability as to dryness. The grapes must not be abused before they reach the press. They are picked and placed in small boxes, then loaded into the press, which has an inflation bag to squeeze the grapes gently."

The juice is made in three "cuts." The first, cuvee, the most valuable, is clear, highest in flavor. The second loses acid and gains in tannin and phenol. The last hard press is not acceptable for sparkling wine because it is too low in acid; it is sold to still wineries.

A load takes four hours to press. A ton of grapes yields 175 gallons of juice. Domaine Carneros planted its first grapes in 1964-65. The original 85-acre planting has grown to 100 acres, the vines mostly American stock with French hybrid budwood.

Eileen Crane, Domaine's winemaker, vice president and managing director, says: "Over the past 20 years, we've realized that California, particularly Carneros, can make very fine sparkling wines. We believe it can be a classic, world-class wine."

When asked to compare it with French champagne, she replied, "It's like saying, 'Is modern art as good as impressionistic?'"

Karlsen, who has a degree in marine biology and formerly made beer, has been with the company since its inception. He says the vineyard produces 3 to 4 tons of grapes per acre, compared with 12 to 15 tons in table-grape vineyards.

IRONS — This ancient sadorin had to be held with a cloth. It had a removable wooden handle.

Take a look at irons of past

"Flat, Pin, Sad." A breezy story with this title in the Americana magazine for October gives us a new look at some irons of the past. The writer, Carol Walker of Texas, is surrounded by 1,500 of the things: "I just love them." Husband Jimmy did the photos, showing glass electric models in Kelly green and apple-red, highlighting it all with two-page views of a 1910 folded-handle monstrosity where the part you grip is six inches above the action. In the above photo, we see an ancient sadorin that had to be held with a cloth, together with a Mrs. Potts type with a remodeled wooden handle. Both of these were made to be heated on a stove top. Another type was hollow with a space for a hot metal slug. Or you could have a hol-

Dental care, disease related

One of the best ways to prevent congestive heart and kidney disease in cats and dogs is proper dental care. Gingivitis, inflammation of the gums, is a contributing factor in kidney disease in cats. Many cats have gingivitis by middle age or before and the condition becomes progressively worse with age. Although dry food helps "exercise" the gums and prevent some tartar formation, it certainly doesn't do the whole job. In dogs, gum disease is a major cause of heart congestion. The showings of bacteria periodically (or continually) released by chronic cases of gum disease set up foci of infection on the heart valves or in the kidneys. In time these lesions compromise the function of these five major organs and organic disease develops. Congestive heart

Photography Categorize your pictures now

By John Dingman For The Associated Press

By now, your holiday prints probably have been processed by the lab and returned to you in those colorful envelopes they use. Did you put these prints into a pile with all the shots you took last year, and maybe even the year before? You know how it goes: Company stops by, you haul out your color prints for display and start going through the envelopes, one after another, looking for the Christmas shots, but all you can find are summer's vacation pictures. A resolution is in order right now to get things organized for 1990.

Start by sorting all your loose prints into categories: vacation, birthdays, parties, picnics, Christmas, New Year's, whatever you have. The next step can be a painful one. Go through the pictures in each group and eliminate the bad shots, unless they are absolutely essential to the story of a particular occasion. Remember, you are setting up a display for your enjoyment and for that of your audience, so you want your best shots on view. Although you may know that a certain shot is of Aunt Geri cutting her birthday cake, if her head is cut off in the picture, no one else will know who she is. So, put this picture aside as part of your private archives.

When you have culled all the good pictures, put them in some kind of order. A vacation section should begin with pictures of your departure, not of your return. And, don't drop a pool scene among pictures of a mountain climb. Organizing them is easy, and the pictures will make more sense that way. When I try to mount my prints into an album, I often get more pain on the front of the picture than on the back. So, I enlist my wife to handle the job of neatly mounting the pictures. When it comes to selecting an album, you will find all kinds at various prices, so it's really up to your own judgment. Naturally, the more expensive ones look better, but there are plenty of reasonably priced albums that look neat and should last well under normal use. If you are skilled at lettering, you might do yourself a favor and avoid getting too cute. Once those awful puns are glued onto the page, you'll be re-faced every time you look at them, and you'll eventually wonder why you wrote them in the first place. However, with a little careful planning, your album will be something you will be proud to show your friends and to look through yourself.

CAMERA RED-EYE: Some of the new point-and-shoot cameras are getting a bit flirtatious: When you press a button, they wink at your subject. However, it has nothing to do with the charms of the person in front of the lens, but rather with the "red-eye" that has plagued flash-photo snappers for years. Red-eye occurs when the flash is too close to the lens and its light is reflected from the back of the subject's eyes into the lens. You know the result — blood-red eyes in the print.

Borderline hand

By James Jacoby The opening weak two-bid is a popular treatment. It is usually defined as showing a six-card suit with 6-11 high-card points. The general intent is for most of the strength to be concentrated in the suit that is bid. When properly used, the bid can be most effective. But don't ever let the weak two-bid replace the opening one-bid. Many hands with a six-card suit and only 11 high-card points should be opened with one suit. Today's deal is a good example. When West opened two diamonds, North had a problem. The king of diamonds was well placed, and the good heart suit made the hand too good to simply overcall two hearts. So North doubled for takeout, intending to bid hearts over whatever South responded. When South surprisingly bid hearts, North jumped right to four, reasoning that as little as any four hearts and the queen of spades would be enough to give South a good play for game. Unfortunately South held the wrong black queen. The defenders took two spade tricks, the ace of diamonds and a club to defeat the contract by a trick. This was still an excellent result for North-South, since East-West can make four spades. We can argue that perhaps East should have bid two spades over North's takeout double, but the real fault lies with the poorly conceived opening by West. Opening two diamonds with a hand that might play very well if East had five spades resulted in West's pre-empting his own partner rather than the opponents. James Jacoby's book "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (revised with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Each one published by Plume Books.

Yount's asking for $3.4 million

By Jim Donaghy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Milwaukee's Robin Yount asked for a record $3.4 million in salary arbitration Friday as 45 players submitted figures for $1 million or more.

On Dec. 19, the Brewers held a news conference to announce Yount had agreed to a contract for $9.6 million for three years. But the contract was never signed.

Yount was the American League Most Valuable Player in 1989 when he hit .318 with 21 homers and 103 runs batted in.

The previous record figure of $2,425,000 was submitted last winter by Orel Hershiser, who later agreed to a three-year deal with the Los Angeles Dodgers for $7.9 million. The history of the process indicates that, like Hershiser, most players will settle before their hearings.

A Brewers spokesman said Friday that the exchange of figures was a formality. Owner Bud Selig said last week that only technicalities were holding up a three-year deal.

A total of 135 players exchanged figures with their clubs on Friday. Last season, 136 players exchanged figures but only 12 went to a hearing.

Seven players who were eligible to file, including Carlton Fisk, Andres Galaraga and Jose DeLeon, agreed to contracts on Friday.

The Expos will pay Galarraga more than $6.1 million for three years.

Also on Friday, the San Francisco Giants signed free-agent catcher Gary Carter to a one-year contract.

Carter, 35, is an 11-time All-Star selection and a career .265 hitter with 304 home runs over 15 seasons, but he struggled last season with a knee injury.

Carter hit just .183 with two home runs and 15 RBIs while playing in a career-low 50 games for the New York Mets in 1989. He was out much of the season with an injured right knee.

Contract terms were not released by the Giants. Last year, Carter's contract with the Mets was valued at $2.16 million.

Joe Carter got $1.63 million last season in the year's biggest arbitration award. The record award was in 1987 when New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly got $1,975,000.

In addition to Yount, teammate Paul Molitor and San Francisco first baseman Will Clark also submitted $3 million figures.

Molitor asked for $3,250,000 and was offered $2.6 million. Molitor hit .318 with 11 homers and 56 RBIs in 1989.

Clark, the MVP of the National League playoffs, asked for $3 million and was offered $2.3 million. The first baseman hit .333 with 23 homers and 111 RBIs. Clark made $1,125,000 last season.

Kansas City's Bo Jackson, who also dabbles in football, asked for $1.9 million and the Royals offered $1 million. Last season, Jackson made $610,000 while hitting .256 with 32 homers and 105 RBIs.

The Royals are also far apart with outfielder Jim Eassey, who asked for $899,000 and was offered $375,000.

Royals catcher Bob Boone, who won the Gold Glove award at 41, submitted a figure of $2.05 million and was offered $1.5 million.

Carson, who missed half of last season with a wrist injury, submitted a figure for $2.2 million and was offered $1.6 million.

Paris throwing weight around along the line for the 49ers

By Dave Carpenter
The Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — This time, "The Refrigerator" won't be raiding New Orleans in the Super Bowl. Leave that job to Bubba Paris.

Paris, weighing in at 300-something, isn't any more swifter than a year ago when he was reduced to mop-up duty under Bill Walsh. Walsh was fed up, so to speak, with Paris' inability to slim down.

The Associated Press

GETTING READY — San Francisco's Roger Craig gets in some practice at the 49ers camp. Craig has been successful in the playoffs behind the 49ers' revamped line, headed by Bubba Paris.

But new Coach George Seifert, deciding there were weightier issues, let the seven-year veteran play his way back into a starting job at left offensive tackle, with help from Steve Wallace. A rejuvenated Paris has responded by throwing his weight around like never before, and he's been a key factor in the line's resurgence.

Last Sunday, Paris and Wallace teamed up to give Seifert the traditional beverage bath after the 49ers beat the Los Angeles Rams to earn a return trip to the Super Bowl.

The last time the Super Bowl was in New Orleans, William "The Refrigerator" Perry, the Chicago Bears' 300-pound-plus defensive lineman, was getting the heavyweight attention.

Now it's on Paris, who admits he would like to be playing the entire game, but his stamina won't allow it until he sheds more than a few pounds. One teammate estimated his weight at 360.

"The fact that I split time allows me to use my weight as a weapon, because I can be destructive with the understanding that someone else will come in," he said.

"I try to hit people, grab 'em, hold 'em, lean on 'em, use all of my weight on 'em or wear 'em out."

The 6-foot-7 Paris, 29, has been battling a weight problem for most of his career. A second-team All-American his senior year at Michigan, he arrived as a second-round draft pick in 1982 and managed to be the starter for five straight years despite Walsh's dissatisfaction with his weight.

"Sometimes, I felt I had a great game," Paris said. "And I'd be out stretching and waiting for Coach to say, 'Great game.' He'd say, 'How much do you weigh?' I was never made to feel my play meant anything."

After trying fumes, diet regimens and weight-loss counseling on his tackle, the exasperated Walsh finally benched him last year.

"I was a 20-20-20 man — 1 played when we were 20 points up, 20 points down or there were 20 seconds to go," Paris quipped.

What transpired with the change of coaches is an example of the subtle alterations Seifert made to a championship team.

"Basically it came down to a question of 'Can the man perform?'" Seifert said. "I told him, 'If you perform, you'll play. If you don't, you won't.'"

It didn't hurt Paris' situation that Wallace had broken his left ankle on the first offensive series in the Super Bowl, then started slowly this season due to injury rehabilitation and a five-week contract holdout.

But mostly he has felt liberated by his new boss' de-emphasis on pounds this season.

"I'm not fighting against me," Paris said. "If you destroy a person's self-esteem, you destroy everything that makes a person a person."

"I'm the first one to admit that there's a problem. But to allow me to go out and perform, and to allow me to be evaluated on my performance allows me to at least feel good about something about myself."

Early in the season, the offensive line, struggled and Paris admittedly became weary playing entire games.

Before the New England game on Oct. 22, Seifert decided to play Paris and Wallace in alternate quarters, and protection has improved steadily under his system of line rotation.

Paris and Wallace, his best friend on the team, combined to shut down some of the NFL's top pass-rushers without a sack — Tim Harris of Green Bay, Richard Dent of Chicago, Bruce Smith of Buffalo, Chris Coleman of Minnesota.

Paris said he didn't like platooning at first, "but I learned to make it fun, to go into with the idea that we'd tag-team tackle, we'd have a 1-2 punch on people, something that would be unique and different."

"It's my guess when that situation was described on television, my hope is that the people of that school will speak to their people about it," he said.

"It's the head coach's responsibility for controlling his own players, yet I also realize that we have a group of highly emotional young men playing the game today and the coach can't prevent everything."

Tim Allen, Big Eight assistant commissioner, said he did not believe Erickson had evaluated the film yet.

Rice, Thompson out to impress pro scouts

The Associated Press

SHRINE PARTICIPANT — Notre Dame's Tony Rice will be out to impress the professional scouts in Saturday's East-West Shrine Game.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Tony Rice and Anthony Thompson, close runners-up in their quests for a national championship and the Heisman Trophy, don't care as much about winning in Sunday's East-West Shrine Game.

But the game means every bit as much to their careers.

Rice, the Notre Dame quarterback, and Thompson, Indiana's record-breaking running back, are two good reasons why the nationally televised game (ABC-TV, 2-40 p.m. EST) has the potential to be more explosive than usual.

Toss in little-publicized quarterbacks John Friesz of Idaho and Mike Buck of Maine — two top prospects at this position in the NFL draft — and the 65th annual college all-star classic has drawn a horde of pro scouts and executives.

Most of the players in last year's game were taken in the draft's first three rounds.

"We hope we can live up to the style of play that's expected," said Rice, who was named the West's California coach Bruce Snyder, coach of the West squad. "We'd like to see the ball moved up and down the field."

So would Rice, particularly while he's calling signals. An outstanding option quarterback, Rice completed less than 50 percent of his passes this season for just two touchdowns and nine interceptions while running for 884 yards. Pro scouts have him pegged as a wide receiver.

"I think I can play quarterback in the NFL," Rice said. "I can make things happen."

East teammate Thompson, who finished second in the Heisman voting to junior quarterback Andre Ware of Houston, wants to show the handful of skeptics that his NCAA-record 377 yards rushing on 52 carries against hapless Wisconsin was no fluke. He finished the season with a 5.0-yard average for 1,793 yards and was the nation's leading rusher and scorer.

The 6-foot-4, 229-pound Buck, the starter at quarterback for the East, threw for 19 touchdowns and only three interceptions. He was honored as the best player in New England and is a likely first-round pick in April.

Friesz, 6-4 and 216 pounds, is considered even better. He threw 31 TD passes and had just eight interceptions, winning his second straight NCAA Division I-AA total offense crown with a 350.3-yard average.

Blocking for the West will be Brigham Young guard Mohammed Elewonski, the Outland Trophy winner as the nation's premier lineman.

"It was fun to be in the Hula Bowl and in Hawaii for a week," Elewonski said. "But here, you feel like you accomplished something besides playing football."

The game is played for the benefit of Shriners Hospitals for Crippled and Burned Children. Over the years, it has raised nearly $11 million for the cause.

A crowd of 70,000 is expected at Stanford Stadium. The East won last year's game 24-6, but the West leads the series 32-27-5.

Sooners' play angers Kruger

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State coach Lon Kruger won one battle with Oklahoma this week. Now, he's starting another.

Kruger has asked the Big Eight Conference to punish the No. 3 Sooners for flagrant play — including a spitting incident that drew a technical foul — in Kansas State's 66-51 victory over Oklahoma Tuesday in Manhattan.

It was the first loss this season for Oklahoma, which was held to about half its average scoring.

Kruger phoned John Erickson, the Big Eight director of basketball operations, on Wednesday and forwarded game tapes to inquire about the possibility of using films as evidence against players accused of flagrant acts.

Kruger said he is concerned about the incident in which Oklahoma's Skeeter Henry spit on Kansas State's Jean Dorville and about elbows thrown by Oklahoma players on three occasions in the first half.

"I'm talking about the forearm across the back of the head," Kruger said. "That's very, very concerning and it happened on three distinct occasions. There's not any room in the game for elbows and spitting."

Erickson, who was at the Oklahoma-Kansas State game, was not available for comment Friday.

Earlier in the week, he said, "It's difficult to take a film and discipline someone from that. But that's not to say that I will not look at the film."

Erickson said the spitting incident had been discussed with Big Eight Commissioner Carl James, but no call had been made to Oklahoma.

"It's my guess when that situation was described on television, my hope is that the people of that school will speak to their people about it," he said.

"It's the head coach's responsibility for controlling his own players, yet I also realize that we have a group of highly emotional young men playing the game today and the coach can't prevent everything."

Tim Allen, Big Eight assistant commissioner, said he did not believe Erickson had evaluated the film yet.

Pooley sets pace at Hope Classic

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Don Pooley, playing in something approaching solitude, took the third-round lead and didn't know it Friday in the great-out Bob Hope Classic.

There are no scoreboards, no leaderboards over there and I didn't know whether I was leading or close or what," Pooley said after he'd completed a 6-under-par 66 at Bermuda Dunes.

It was not until he telephoned a PGA Tour official that the 39-year-old veteran learned his 201 total, 15 strokes under par for 54 holes, was good for the lead.

Peter Jacobsen and Australian Steve Elkington played that course in the third round and were tied for second, a single shot behind Pooley at 202, 14 under par.

"It doesn't really matter," Pooley said. "Not yet. We all play different courses tomorrow, then, on Sunday, we'll know where we are."

He referred to the unique format for this five-day, 90-hole event spread over four desert resort courses separated by almost 20 miles.

The 128 pros, each accompanied by a three-man amateur team, will complete a circuit of one round on each of the course Saturday.

After the field is trimmed to the low 70 scorers, the pro-only final round will be held Sunday at the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

Elkington had a string of seven consecutive birdies in his 65. Jacobson shot 69 in the mid temperatures and gentle breezes.

Tom Kite, the 1989 Player of the Year, played his front side in 29 and, despite three-punting the last two greens, finished with the best round of the tournament, a 64.

He played at Indian Wells, where most of the gallery gathered to watch the celebrity amateurs, many of them show-business friends of the host.

"I had it smoking there for a while," Kite said. "I played so well, made so many putts even those last two holes don't hurt so much."

But the 8-under-par effort, which included a chip-in eagle-three, was necessary to get him back in the title chase.

"If you're going to be in contention in this tournament, you'd better walk off Indian Wells with a good number," said Kite, who was tied at 203 with Chip Beck, Mike Reid, rookie Robert Gamez and Don Shirley.

Beck had a 66 at Indian Wells and Reid played Tamarrisk in 69. Gamez, the 21-year-old who won at Tucson last week in his first start as a member of the PGA Tour, and Shirley each shot 67 at the Palmer course.

Neumann leads Jamaica Classic

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (AP) — Sweden's Liselotte Neumann tamed the winds Friday to grab a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the Jamaica Classic, the LPGA tournament opener.

"The front nine is OK because of the trees; the wind isn't too bad," Neumann said after touring in Tynall Golf Club course in 3-under-par 68 "But down on 10, 11, 12, it gets really difficult."

"I tried to hit the ball very low," Neumann birdied the third, fourth and fifth holes in a dashing start in a bid for her second LPGA victory. She toured the front nine in Sunday 31, then matched par-37 after the turn.

Missie Bertocci and Patti Sheehan were tied at 69, one shot back of Neumann, while Cathy Morse, at 70, was the only other player to crack par on the sunny day.

Four players — Myra Black-welder, Cathy Gerring, Dale Eggeling and Cindy Rarick — were bunched together at even-par 71.

Defending champion Betsy King, who shot a brilliant 64 on the first day of the tournament here last year, found the windy conditions much to her dislike on Friday, ballooning to a 4-over-par 75 after bogeying the third hole and double bogeying the par-3 fourth.

Other top names who struggled through the wind included Jane

Goedde, who shot a 73, Pat Bradley at 74, Muffin Spencer-Devlin at 76 and Beth Daniel at 78.

"Although the wind was troublesome at times, it was not too bad generally, and I found the greens quite good," Neumann said.

Sheehan, however, said it was "a war out there — a war of winds."

"At times it was four-club wind; at times it was a three, and other times a two," Sheehan said. "It was tough staying balanced, and it is the sort of course on which you will make mistakes. The important thing, however, is not to make too many."

The wind took its toll on the back side.

Caroline Keegi made the turn just one shot behind Neumann at 33.

Schultz can't see football playoff soon

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NCAA executive director Dick Schultz says he sees no possibility of a Division I-A football playoff being adopted in the next few years.

Speaking at a sports business conference, Schultz said a study found 72 percent of Division I-A coaches opposed a playoff.

"The Division I presidents are strongly opposed," Schultz said. "I think the only purpose would be to produce more money. ... 'Never' is something you can't say. I can see the possibility that some day we may have one. But I don't see it in the immediate future."

When Notre Dame beat Colorado in the Orange Bowl and Miami beat Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, there was a debate over which team should be national champion since there was no season-ending head-to-head matchup. Schultz, however, said he heard no huge demand for a playoff.

"When you cut away the fat, there aren't really that many coaches who want a playoff," he said. At the NCAA convention last week, presidents pushed through a cut in basketball schedules and spring football practice. But the convention rejected a proposal to study freshman ineligibility in football and basketball.

"I was surprised at the overwhelming vote against the proposal," Schultz said. The NCAA last year agreed to a seven-year, $1 billion contract with CBS for the NCAA basketball tournament. A committee has been appointed to study how the money should be distributed. Currently, 60 percent goes to the schools in the tournament and 40 percent goes to the NCAA to fund its office and championships in non-revenue-producing sports.

"I'd like to see money distributed for quality academics, given to broad-based program, to schools with high graduation rates," Schultz said.

Clemson may go after Air Force's DeBerry

By Rick Scoppa
The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Clemson University has received permission to talk to Air Force coach Fisher DeBerry about the head football job vacated by the resignation of Danny Ford, a school official said Friday.

Clemson contacted Air Force Athletic Director Col. John Clune on Wednesday — a day before the school announced Ford was resigning — about talking to DeBerry, said Troy Garnhart, assistant sports information director for Air Force.

Garnhart said DeBerry, a South Carolina native whose son plays baseball for the Tigers, was on the road but was expected back in the office late Friday.

"As far as an interview or anything like that, we haven't got word on anything," Garnhart said. "We don't know what his plans are as far as an interview or anything like that — or if he's interested in it. But there was contact made and permission was granted."

DeBerry's name also surfaced last year when South Carolina was looking for a new head coach after Joe Morrison died. DeBerry turned down an opportunity to interview for the job.

Several things would make Clemson interested in DeBerry. The 51-year-old DeBerry is a native of Charavon, S.C., and was an assistant at Wofford in Spartanburg, S.C. He also is considered by his colleagues as a man of integrity who won't bend the rules.

A 'new' McEnroe keeping his cool at the Aussie Open

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — The new John McEnroe, Mr. Nice Guy, smiles sweetly, talks politely with the umpire, even tells jokes.

He kills with kindness, yet once again brandishes a left-handed serve-and-volley game as lethal as it was when he ruled men's tennis in the early 1980s.

McEnroe is not only a model of decorum these days, he's winning again, gliding easily into the round of 16 at the Australian Open on Friday with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 victory over fellow American Dan Goldie.

A month shy of 31, McEnroe says he's realized at last that the temper tantrums that once fired him up now merely burn him out.

As he looks ahead to his next match against Sweden's Mikael Pernfors on Sunday, and a possible quarterfinal meeting with Yannick Noah, McEnroe is trying to conserve his energy.

If he gets just those two, he would likely meet defending champion Ivan Lendl in the semifinals.

"It's not the sort of situation where you have energy to burn in this weather," McEnroe said. "The heat can catch up to you at times."

Not even hecklers and chatty fans in the record crowd of 21,028 could ruffle McEnroe, who displayed his full repertoire of shots and bounced around the court as if he were 21.

"I feel like I'm controlling play, that's the main thing," said McEnroe, who hasn't dropped a set in three matches or given up more than three games in any set. "In the majors in the last few years, I've sort of gone out there flat — that's suicide." McEnroe, who has given up fewer games — 15 — than any in the men's draw, is easily in his best shape since winning his last

Grand Slam titles, the U.S. Open and Wimbledon, in 1984. He's hoping to combine his old-time savvy with his new-found desire and fitness.

"We can always make it interesting," Versace said. "We have terrific 3-point shooters."

"We knew exactly what they were going to do (shoot 3-pointers) and they still did it," Rodgers said. "That makes our win that much more impressive."

Johnson hit 10 more foul shots with 21 seconds left, then fouled Kiefer with 12 seconds remaining. Miller made the first shot and deliberately missed the second. Bird got his 12th rebound and lobbed a long pass to Johnson, who fed Lewis for the game-clinching layup with 4.7 seconds to go.

Robert Parish added 22 points for Boston and McHale had 20. Miller had a career-high 10 assists.

Trailing 66-60, Boston went on a 14-point run starting with McHale's two free throws with 6:09 left in the third period. McHale's layup with 4:18 remaining in the quarter gave the Celtics their first lead, 68-66. They never trailed after that.

"We lost our poise for a while but we came back and executed well down the stretch," Versace said.

The Celtics led 87-74 with 10:21 left, but an Indiana rally capped by Deltek Schrempf's two foul shots with 2:15 to go made the score 99-97.

The score was 52-52 at halftime. Indiana held its biggest lead of nine points three times, the last at 45-36 with 5:26 left in the first half.

But Boston finished the quarter with an 8-2 run capped by Johnson's desperation jumper from the left corner at the buzzer. "76ers 102, Heat 95: At Miami, Charles

Celts finally get homecourt Friday night win

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics ended their Friday night flops, but the Indiana Pacers went down fighting.

Larry Bird scored 29 points, and the Celtics carved last-minute 3-point field goals by Chuck Person and Reggie Miller for a 109-104 victory, their first at home on a Friday night after five consecutive losses.

"There are trends that, unfortunately, show up," Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "We lost to some pretty good teams" on Friday nights, including Denver, Philadelphia, San Antonio and the Los Angeles Lakers and Clippers.

They beat a pretty good team Friday night because, "we had good ball movement, good passes and took good shots," Boston's Kevin McHale said.

The victory was Boston's eighth in 11 games. Indiana has lost eight of its last 11, including seven straight road losses.

Bird added 12 rebounds and nine assists and made 12 of 23 shots. Indiana coach Dick Versace scooped it at talk earlier in the season that Bird was having trouble fitting in after missing the last 76 games of last season following heel surgery.

"I've said many times all this consternation about Larry is folly," Versace said. "Given time, everything's going to work out fine."

"He was the Larry Bird of old," Miller said.

Two free throws by Dennis Johnson gave Boston a 103-97 lead with 59 seconds remaining. Person, who had 20 points, then hit his second 3-point shot of the game to cut the gap to 103-100 with 46 seconds to go.

Two foul shots by Reggie Lewis with 30 seconds left put Boston up by five. But Miller, who had 15 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter, sank his fourth 3-point shot and sliced the lead to 105-103 with 24 seconds to play.

"We can always make it interesting," Versace said. "We have terrific 3-point shooters."

"We knew exactly what they were going to do (shoot 3-pointers) and they still did it," Rodgers said. "That makes our win that much more impressive."

Johnson hit 10 more foul shots with 21 seconds left, then fouled Kiefer with 12 seconds remaining. Miller made the first shot and deliberately missed the second. Bird got his 12th rebound and lobbed a long pass to Johnson, who fed Lewis for the game-clinching layup with 4.7 seconds to go.

The Celtics led 87-74 with 10:21 left, but an Indiana rally capped by Deltek Schrempf's two foul shots with 2:15 to go made the score 99-97.

The score was 52-52 at halftime. Indiana held its biggest lead of nine points three times, the last at 45-36 with 5:26 left in the first half.

Barkley scored 32 points Friday night and the Philadelphia 76ers took advantage of poor Miami shooting to defeat the Heat 102-95.

The Heat, who shot 58 percent in winning their last two games, dropped to 42 percent and missed 18 of 24 shots midway through the second half as the 76ers increased their lead from 71-70 to 88-82. Philadelphia, which has won three consecutive games, stayed in front the rest of the way.

Barkley scored 23 points in the first half, including six in a row on dunks. The first was the most spectacular, a one-handed stuff of an alley-oop pass from Johnny Dawkins.

Barkley drove from the midcourt circle to slam home another score, then stole the ball in the backcourt and dribbled in for a dunk, giving Philadelphia a 53-46 lead.

Rony Seikaly led the Heat with 23 points and 14 rebounds. Rookie Glen Rice scored 13 points in the first quarter but only six the rest of the game.

The close game was in contrast to the previous five meetings the past two years between the teams, all Philadelphia victories by an average margin of 21.5 points.

Magic 126, Nets 105: At Orlando, Fla., Otis Smith matched his career high with 29 points Friday night as the Orlando Magic snapped a four-game losing streak with a 120-105 victory over New Jersey.

The expansion Magic grabbed the lead with seven minutes left in the first period and never trailed again. They led by as many as 17 points and withstood a fourth-quarter rally that drew the Nets as close as three.

Smith hit 13 of 19 shots and added three free throws to his career high set three seasons ago at Golden State.

Reggie Theus added 20 points and reserves Jerry Reynolds and Sam Vincent scored 19 each for Orlando. Vincent also had 12 assists.

Bulls 92, Hawks 84: At Atlanta, Michael Jordan, held to two points on 11-for-10 shooting in the first half, scored 32 points in the second half Friday night, leading the Chicago Bulls to a 92-84 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

The loss extended Atlanta's longest losing streak in five years to six games, while Chicago stayed a half-game behind Detroit in the Central Division.

Jordan scored 18 in the third quarter, including 10 during a crucial 21-5 run late in the period. He was 11-for-14 in the second half.

The Bulls led 65-64 entering the final period, but the lead changed hands four times before the Bulls took the lead for good at 76-74 on a field goal by Bill Cartwright with 6:10 left.

The Hawks were ahead 54-40 with 8:06 left in the third quarter on a dunk by Dominique Wilkins, but six minutes later, the Bulls were ahead 61-60.

Wilkins topped Atlanta scores with 26 points. Moses Malone had 13 and 13 rebounds.

Mavericks 117, Knicks 103: At Dallas, Brad Davis scored a season-high 25 points while Derek Harper hit five of seven 3-pointers and also scored 25 points, leading the Dallas Mavericks to a 117-103 victory over the New York

Knicks Friday night. Dallas had four players with more than 20 points, tying a team record. Adrian Dantley scored 23 and James Donaldson added 21 as Dallas snapped a five-game losing streak.

Patrick Ewing had 38 points and 15 rebounds to lead the Knicks, who had won 15 of 19 heading into Friday night's game.

Dantley's output gave him 23,006 career points, making him the 10th player in NBA history to surpass the 23,000 plateau.

Pistons 125, Warriors 118: At Auburn Hills, Mich., Joe Dumars scored 23 of his 30 points in the second quarter and the Detroit Pistons survived a late threat by Golden State to beat the Warriors 125-118 Friday night.

The win was the Pistons' eighth straight at home and 13th in their last 15 games. The Warriors have dropped seven straight road games and four in a row on their current trip, as Golden State coach Don Nelson once again failed to post his 600th coaching win.

The Pistons led 117-107 with 2:23 to go, but the Warriors got six points from Mitch Richmond — including four in one play — to narrow the gap to 121-118 with 16.8 seconds left.

But Bill Laimbeer's four free throws in the final 14 seconds sealed the outcome. Chris Mullin's 37 points paced the Warriors. Terry Teagle and Richmond both added 19 points.

John Salley scored 21 points for the Pistons, as he and Dumars paced eight players in double-figures.

Spurs 104, Cavaliers 101: At San Antonio, David Robinson scored 32 points and Terry Cummings 29 Friday night as the San Antonio Spurs claimed their 15th consecutive homecourt victory, 104-101 over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

San Antonio trailed 96-92 with 3:30 to play, but scored seven straight points for a 99-96 lead with 1:32 remaining.

Larry Nance's two foul shots cut the margin to one, but Willie Anderson and Vernon Maxwell each hit a pair of free throws to give the Spurs a 103-98 badge with 16 seconds left.

Randolph Keys, who matched his career high with 22 points, sank a 3-point shot to make it 103-101, but Robinson countered with a free throw to account for the final margin. Nance's desperation 3-point attempt at the buzzer was off line.

Nance finished with 21 points, while Mark Price added 18, including 15 in the first half to help Cleveland pull ahead 49-46.

San Antonio is now 16-1 at home.

"We played zone all game but in the last 15 seconds we went man-to-man on who we thought were their 3-point shooters," Phillips said.

Ferraro goal gives Whalers a 3-3 draw

NHL Roundup

HARTFORD (AP) — Ray Ferraro scored a power-play goal with 41 seconds left in regulation after Hartford pulled its goalie Friday night to give the Whalers a 3-3 tie with the Calgary Flames.

It was the second straight game the Whalers scored in the final minute of regulation to earn a tie. Kevin Dineen scored with 17 seconds left to tie Boston 0-0 on Wednesday night.

This time, Ferraro tapped in a rebound after Calgary goalie Mike Vernon stopped Scott Young's shot from the top of the slot. It was the third time the Whalers came from behind.

Dineen and Pat Verbeek also scored for Hartford. Kevin MacLellan, Gary Roberts and Sergei Marakov connected for the Flames, who moved into a first-place tie in the Smythe Division with the Edmonton Oilers.

Dineen's power-play goal at 10:53 led the game at 2-2, but MacLellan, who has seven goals in the last four games, gave Calgary a 3-2 lead with 3:44 to play. However, Calgary defenseman Jamie Macoun was called for holding Todd Kryger at 18:32 and wound up with a double-minor when he complained to referee Don Koharski. Moments later, the Whalers pulled goalie Peter Sidorkiewicz for another extra skater.

Roberts' goal gave the Flames a 2-1 lead and came on a wrist shot from the slot after passes from Marakov and Joe Nieuwendyk.

The Whalers outshot Calgary 16-6 in the opening period but managed only a 1-1 tie. Calgary led 1-0 when Vernon made a series of stops and Al MacLean was able to clear the zone quickly. Makarov gained control of the puck in the neutral zone and converted a breakaway at 10:28.

Hartford tied the game at 18:02 when Verbeek blasted a 40-footer past Vernon. Ron Francis advanced into the Calgary zone down the right boards and centered the puck to the high slot, where Verbeek drilled home his 25th goal.

Capitals 6, Sabres 3: At Buffalo, N.Y., defenseman Kevin Hatcher scored two goals, including the tie-breaker with 7:08 left, and the Washington Capitals beat the Buffalo Sabres 6-3 Friday night, their second straight victory since Terry Murray replaced his brother, Bryan, as coach.

With the score tied 3-3, Hatcher split the defense while cutting in on the right side. Buffalo goalie Daren Puppa, who replaced Clint Malarchuk after one period with Buffalo trailing 3-1, got a piece of the shot but not enough of it to keep it out of the net.

Former Sabre John Tucker made a 5-3 at 18:17 when he was left alone in front of the net and Mike Ridley added an empty-net goal with 11 seconds left.

John Druce and Geoff Courault got the other Washington goals. For the Sabres, defenseman Doug Bodger scored twice, both times on power plays, and Dave Snuggard had the other goal.

Buffalo, which suffered its fourth consecutive loss at home, remained three points behind first-place Boston in the Adams Division. The Capitals moved into fifth place in the tight Patrick Division, one point behind the New York Rangers and one ahead of Philadelphia. Five points separate the six Patrick Division teams.

UPS ARM — East Catholic's P.J. Monahan, left, is among several players reaching for the basketball during Friday night's game at the Eagles' gym. With his back to Monahan is Xavier High's Andy LeGoulain (44). Xavier won, 67-63.

The Eagles, whose biggest lead was six points (36-30 in the second), received baskets from senior John Griffin and Paradiso at the start of the fourth which put them ahead, 52-48. A 3-pointer by sophomore Corey Bike (14 points) placed the Falcons in the lead for good at 57-54 with 4:40 left to play. Two free throws by Adam Brown gave Xavier a 61-56 advantage with 1:09 left.

Sophomore Rob Penders was limited to three points (all from the foul line) and Monahan scored only six (two 3-pointers) in the second half.

"We guarded them pretty well," Magner said. "We worked the Monahan kid pretty hard. Penders missed his shots. I said that their three sophomores are their better players. That's a nice club (East he's got." Finnegan couldn't put his finger on the lackluster effort from his Eagles.

"It seemed that we felt we were going to win the game, that we could go out there and go through the motions," he said. "We're a young team. We'll chalk this up to experience."

Politicos see ramifications in recent conflict decisions

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald
Some people jokingly, or maybe quite seriously, call the phrase "ethics in government" a contradiction in itself. In Manchester, ethics, or more specifically conflict of interest, is a hot political issue. And although few are saying publicly that charges of ethics violations in the past few years have been used as a political wedge, the impact of recent actions of the town Ethics Commission — spurred by politicians — have sparked fears that the number of people willing to serve on town boards will be depleted.
