MHS clamps down Owls

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Defense was the name of the game for the Manchester High Indians in their clash with CCC East-leading Hartford Public Friday night at Clarke Arena.

Speared by a tenuous half-court defense predicated on neutralizing Public's 6-6 center Harvey Kendall (14 points), the inspired Indians turned back the Owls, 59-49.

Public, in foul trouble from the opening tip, was outscored from the foul line by a staggering 27-1 count. The Owls were whittled for 29 fouls compared to eight for the Indians. Manchester, which outscored Public, 19-9, in the fourth quarter, converted 13 of 18 foul shots in the final eight minutes.

Three Owls (Kendall, Marlon Jackson, Curtis St. Brice) fouled out.

Manchester is now 7-5 in the CCC East and 10-7 overall. The Indians will play at Enfield High Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Public remains in first in the league at 10-2 and is 13-3 overall.

Senior Emil Issavi turned in a tremendous effort, netting a game- and career-high 21 points. Sophomore Jeff Ross added 17 for the Indians. Junior Rodney Crockett snared eight rebounds to go with his seven points.

Indian coach Frank Kinol was elated with the victory. "The effort was just the best I've seen in a number of years," he said. "From the beginning of the game to the end of the game, these kids played as hard as they could all the way."

Kendall was hounded all night, usually by a trio of Indian defenders. All but two of his points came in the second half. Ed Laiscell added 13, including three 3-pointers, for Public.

"Our kids played great defense," Kinol said. "They did a great job on Harvey Kendall. He had three guys on him whenever he touched the ball which made it very difficult."

Manchester, which led throughout, grabbed a 16-11 lead after one quarter. Two free throws by Devaughn Whitehead gave Manchester a 26-17 lead before the Indians settled for a 28-24 halftime edge.

A pair of Issavi free throws gave Manchester its largest lead of the night, 35-24, with 6:54 left in the third quarter. The Owls, however, outscored Manchester, 16-5, to gain a 40-ball tie after three. Kendall had eight points in the third.

The first few moments of the fourth could have proved fatal for Manchester. Laiscell made a steal and layup giving Public a 42-40 lead. He then buried a 3-pointer to push Public's lead to 45-42. Manchester, however, wouldn't fold.

The Indians went on an 8-0 run capped off by two Issavi free throws and Manchester led, 50-45, with 4:30 left. Public never threatened after that due to Manchester's key foul shooting down the stretch.

"Since those two guys (Erik Johnson, Paris Oates) have been out, Emil's picked up some of the slack," Kinol said. "He really has. He's been playing extremely well. It seems like he's gotten more aggressive in taking the ball to the hole."

"They did what we asked them to do. They just wanted it. I just can't say enough about the effort."

PTA steps up profile on budget

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

The townwide PTA Council, stepping up its activity in a tight budget year, is urging that the first priority in school budget funding be given to hiring a school nurse and for building maintenance.

The council is hoping that the Board of Education's budget will pass the Board of Directors intact, but it is also making clear which parts of the budget it considers most important if the ace should fall.

"This has been the most activity that I have seen in the last few years," Steve Aceto, co-president of the townwide PTA Council, said.

The council is circulating petitions that ask the Board of Directors to pass the Board of Education's budget for the 1990-1991 school year. These petitions are taken to PTA functions for people to sign, she said.

Statements by members of the Board of Directors that the superintendent's budget request is too high are part of the reason for the heightened activity, Aceto said.

Republican directors pledged during their campaign not to raise taxes, and the town is faced with receiving $1.6 million less in state aid than it expected through the Education Cost Sharing Grant.

At a Board of Education meeting last week, before the board trimmed $300,000 from the superintendent's budget, the council made clear its priorities.

Paula Bergenty, co-president of the council, said at the meeting there should be more money allocated for maintenance of school buildings and that each school should have a full-time nurse.

Although the one additional nurse included in the budget is not enough to meet this goal, Bergenty said Friday that she is glad that at least one position was retained when the superintendent announced cuts in many improvements to existing programs.

She also told the board that the council did not want class size to be affected by cuts. This may happen if teachers are laid off. If cuts have to be made, they should be made in extracurricular activities, she said.

The late artist Andy Warhol said that in the age of television everyone would get a chance to be famous for 15 minutes. On April 3 at 8:30 a.m., Manchester will get its chance when the Manchester Musical Players, an amateur theater group that performs musical shows, appears on the Good Morning America show.

"This is an announcement that will put Manchester on the map nationwide," Heidi Bengraff, a member of the group, said.

About 50 members of the group were to gather outside of Cheney Hall at noon today to record the 15-30-second message.

The group got the chance because its director, Donna Dube-Colletta, works for Channel 8, WTNH-TV, an ABC affiliate, and put in a request for the group to appear on Good Morning America several months ago.

Dube-Colletta will begin the message by saying, "The Manchester Musical Players of Manchester, Connecticut, wish America good morning." Then the group as a whole will say "Good morning America," together. The group chose Cheney Hall because it is the most historic place in Manchester, Bengraff said.

The group, formerly known as the Gilbert and Sullivan Players, is in its 43rd season, according to Bengraff, and has between 50 and 60 members. Its members are volunteers, though its director is paid, she said.

BUCHAREST, Romania — Interim President Ion Iliescu today ordered an investigation into a violent demonstration in which hundreds of angry protesters invaded government headquarters and demanded his resignation.

"Down with Iliescu!" demonstrators shouted Sunday as they took over the building on Victory Square used by Prime Minister Petre Roman since Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu was ousted. It was the most violent protest since the December revolution.

"The only solution is another revolution!" the protesters shouted. Iliescu, who has been criticized for his Communist past, went on state radio and TV to demand an investigation into the "acts of unusual violence," committed by what he called "turbulent elements."

More than 1,000 people in front of the headquarters cheered as protesters smashed the windows and glass-and-metal doors using rocks and iron carpet rods. About 500 people poured in and destroyed part of the rooms and furniture.

Hundreds of extra soldiers arrived after the takeover and pushed back the crowd, which grew to around 5,000 people before dwindling to about 100. Ten armored personnel carriers were wheeled to the front of the building.

The army blocked the entrance after allowing many demonstrators to leave.

Government spokesman Dan Radulescu said 120 demonstrators at the government building during the protest were detained, questioned and then released without being charged.

The crowd had demanded that Iliescu step down, saying the government was dominated by Communists from the despised Ceausescu leadership. Ceausescu was overthrown Dec. 22 and executed three days later, following a summary trial.

Opposition to the National Salvation Front, which took power following December's revolution and includes several former Communists, has been evident almost since Ceausescu's fall.

Construction industry still among most dangerous

By John Diamond
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — It has been nearly three years since the concrete slabs of L'Ambiance Plaza thundered down on scores of Connecticut construction workers, killing 28 and sending shock waves through the construction industry.

And labor officials and lawmakers pushing for reform say the proposals announced last week by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration don't go nearly far enough to address the problem.

"It seems that OSHA is relegated to being a paper tiger and it's probably due to underfunding," said Ron Nobili of Laborers Local 665 in Bridgeport, which lost three union members in the L'Ambiance collapse. "I hear they want to add 34 more enforcement officers; that's not even one additional one for each state."

In fact, OSHA is adding 22 site inspectors to a total inspection team of about 1,300. And the inspectors will not specialize in construction sites; they will also be responsible for factories, mines and other workplaces.

Nobili and others who have worked on the L'Ambiance case said they were pleased with the OSHA reforms. But Jason Isaacson, a top aide to U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said it was only last fall that OSHA first even acknowledged that more needed to be done.

It shouldn't take a catastrophe like L'Ambiance Plaza, Nobili said, to shake the bureaucracy into action and "end the carnage that is going on in the construction industry."

U.S. Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., whose district includes Bridgeport, said a key step that OSHA must take is to toughen the laws under which those responsible for construction accidents, assist state governments in developing construction safety programs and work with management and labor in improving training and safety awareness.

OSHA director Gerard F. Scanlon emphasized that the new training and safety awareness plans being announced today are only the initial phases of stepped-up efforts to improve construction safety and health.

Nobili and others who have worked on the L'Ambiance case said they were pleased with the

3 generations share birthday

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Dale Lange and her mother, Rae Atkinson, have always had fun on Feb. 17th, their mutual birthday.

But this year, Lange didn't take her mother out to dinner or bake her a cake — she gave her a grandson.

Shane Monahan Lange was born in the Hospital of St. Raphael at 7:50 a.m. Saturday to Dale and Kerry Lange of Branford, giving a new meaning to the phrase "and baby makes three."

Atkinson said Dale, the middle of five children, was born two weeks late, on Atkinson's birthday. Dale turned 30 Saturday and her mother turned 62.

Kerry Lange called it a miracle that all three were born on the same day in February.

His wife said it was "pretty neat that it can actually happen."

And if three mutual birthdays in one family isn't enough, consider this. All three share a birthday with Otis Ivey Klendike Atkinson, a 4-year-old white German shepherd owned by Rich Atkinson, Rae's son and Dale's brother.

Police Roundup

Car chase leads to charges

Two men were charged Saturday morning after leading police on a high-speed chase on town roads and onto the interstate.

A police officer observed a Toyota Tercel operating without headlights Saturday about 2 a.m. on Deming Street. When the officer attempted to stop the car, it picked up speed and entered Interstate 84 West, where it wove in and out of traffic reaching speeds of 90 to 95 mph, police said.

The vehicle then exited the highway at Exit 56, made a U-turn, and re-entered it eastbound with police in close pursuit, again approaching speeds of 90-plus mph, police said. The driver again exited the highway, this time at Exit 53, but the driver lost control and smashed into a guard rail, police said. No serious injuries resulted, police said.

The driver, Allen Jackson, 23, of Hartford, was cited for engaging police in pursuit, reckless driving, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, operating without insurance and operating without headlights, police said.

His passenger, Manuel L. Gorbea, 24, of East Hartford, was cited for misuse of registration plate, allowing the operation of an unregistered vehicle, and allowing the operation of an uninsured vehicle, police said. He was treated at Manchester Memorial Hospital for a bruised face, police said.

Both men were released on written promises to appear in Manchester Superior Court on March 5, police said.

Drug charge lodged

A Manchester woman who claimed she was teaching a local teenager how to drive was arrested Friday for driving an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle, and then found to be in possession of cocaine, police said.

Theresa Trefethen, 23, of 7 Oval Lane, was charged with possession of cocaine and cited for the misdemeanor of misuse of registration plates, operating an unregistered motor vehicle and operating an uninsured motor vehicle.

She was held on $1,000 bond and scheduled to appear Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court, police said.

A police officer stopped the vehicle after observing it traveling on West Middle Turnpike without an emissions sticker. An 18-year-old was operating the vehicle, but a registration check showed the car was unregistered and uninsured, police said.

Trefethen, who was wanted in Vernon on another charge, was taken to police headquarters, where a search of her purse revealed quantities of cocaine, police said. Trefethen said she was using the drug to numb a bad tooth, police said.

Irish advocates charter revision panel

By Alex Griell
Manchester Herald

Formation of a charter revision commission with authority to make a broad study of the town charter has been advocated by Republican Town Director Val R. Irish Jr.

Mayor Theunis Werkhoven, also a Republican, said this morning that the Board of Directors will be busy now dealing with the budget for the next fiscal year, but in late May or early June will be able to consider forming a charter revision commission.

Irish and Werkhoven both said the commission should have a broad charge permitting its members to investigate all aspects of the charter.

Irish said one of his thoughts is that Manchester might call its council a city council instead of a Board of Directors. He said that Manchester has grown since 1947 when the present charter was framed and "there were as many farms in town as there were big businesses."

During his election campaign, Irish advocated studying the possibility of having a mayor directly elected by the people instead of by the Board of Directors. He also favored considering election of directors from separate districts instead of at large.

Today, he said he still thinks those ideas should be explored, but he stressed that the directors can only appoint the charter revision commission. The commission itself has to make the recommendations for changes.

Werkhoven said the Republican director has discussed charter revision only casually so far.

Irish said that while many have served Manchester with distinction, he feels the duties of the mayor should be expanded. He also said that he does not intend to criticize Town Manager Richard Sartor or any past town managers, but he feels that managers serve for a long time, they gain too much power.

Both Werkhoven and Irish said that while specific aspects of the charter have been reviewed by charter revision committees in the past, there has not been an overall review since the charter was adopted.

Irish said he would hope the decision to elect a commission, in a split vote, decided he might have the

Sears' requests on ethics issues go nowhere fast

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

It is unclear whether or not the town's Board of Directors can or will take any action regarding two requests made by Ethics Commission member Mary Sears.

The requests, which Sears made in early December, have been shuffled around town government without any body or individual taking any action on them.

Her first request is for an investigation of the town Planning Department to see if staff members know of connections between then Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Alfred W. Sieffert Sr. and Preferred Equities, a business partnership that includes local developers.

The second request Sears, a Republican, made is to establish a commission for elected town officials to disclose business connections.

"Without a broader explanation of the requests, Republican Mayor Theunis Werkhoven said he is not sure if the directors can act on the matters. He said he will try to talk with Sears today to find out precisely what she is requesting."

However, Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano said he knows where both of the requests should be decided.

Because the planning staff is hired by town administrators, the investigation of the department should be handled by the town administration, Cassano said. When the directors receive the requests, they had forwarded both of them to Town Manager Richard Sartor.

Cassano said the request concerning disclosure should be examined by the Ethics Commission, and any recommendations it decides to make should be approved by directors.

"They were created to establish their own guidelines," Cassano said. "That's why we appointed them."

He said the Ethics Commission owes it to the town to review regulations regarding conflicts of interest because of a controversial vote it made last month. The vote advised attorney Thomas Cella, a Democrat, not to seek an Ethics Commission post because his law firm sometimes represents clients involved in litigation with the town.

Like Werkhoven, Democratic Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. says he also does not know if the directors can act on the requests.

"I don't think it's the board's prerogative to get involved with ethics. The proper place is the Ethics Commission," DiRosa said.

"Mary Sears raised the questions," DiRosa said, "and it's kind of confusing as to why now she doesn't want them answered."

The Democrat was referring to the most recent request by Sears to have her questions removed from the agenda of the Feb. 22 Ethics Commission meeting.

Sears said that this has been done because she has intended, from the beginning, that the matters be handled by the directors. Sears is the request in a letter to the directors, but they, agreeing, it was not in their jurisdiction, had forwarded it to Sartor, who then forwarded it to the Ethics Commission.

Deputy Mayor Susan Buckno, a Republican, said she understands why Sears does not want her own commission to handle her own request. "Ultimately, what we're asking them to do is judge themselves, which is not appropriate," she said.

Buckno said the disclosure request is something that could be examined by a Charter Revision Committee — a move is afoot to set up such a committee to look at many sections of the Town Charter.

The disclosure proposal also could be reviewed by the directors themselves, but Buckno said she was unclear on the appropriate procedure. She said she thinks the board should wait until after the upcoming budget hearings before those tasks are undertaken.

Buckno said she would approve of the establishment of disclosure regulations.

"I have no problem with that, and I don't know why anyone else would," she said. "Why not put all your cards on the table and be honest and forthright?"

On the other hand, Democrat DiRosa and Cassano said they would favor disclosure only if it was restricted to revealing sensitive financial ties when cases come before boards and commissions.

But they said they oppose full disclosure because the volunteers that hold positions in town government would not be willing to reveal all their business dealings and would opt to forego serving.

Werkhoven disagrees. "If you don't have anything to hide, at least it's documented. And if there are any problems, this disclosure statement will back you up. I have nothing to hide."

Republican Mayor Theunis Werkhoven has told Democratic members of the town's delegates to the General Assembly that he cannot attend a meeting they have planned Thursday to discuss town legislative concerns, and he has invited them in turn to meet with the Board of Directors March 6 along with the Republican delegates.

Democratic state Sen. Michael Meoni, one of those involved in setting up the Feb. 22 meeting, said Friday afternoon the meeting will probably be held even though Werkhoven cannot attend because other people have been invited.

Richard Dyer, chairman of the Board of Education and a Democrat, said he expects to be free March 6 to do so.

And Meoni said he will be happy to meet with the directors at another time and he expects to be free March 6 to do so.

In letters to Meoni and to Democratic state Reps. John W. Thompson and James R. McCavanagh, both of Manchester, Werkhoven said he would be unable to attend the meeting due to scheduling conflicts.

In other letters Werkhoven has invited Republican state representatives Paul Munns and J. Peter Fuscuso to the March 6 meeting.

Purdy Corp. faces probe by Pentagon

HARTFORD (AP) — The Pentagon is investigating whether a Manchester company sold the Air Force defective engine parts that could pose a "potentially serious hazard" for F-16 fighters, according to a published report.

The Hartford Courant reported in Sunday's edition that a recent Pentagon memorandum stated that the Defense Criminal Investigation Service is investigating whether the Purdy Corp. sold a defective part that could cause the fighters to lose power.

The investigation involves housing assemblies for Pratt & Whitney engines and in F-16s flown by the allied forces, the newspaper reported. The housing encloses a gearbox on the outside of the P100 Pratt & Whitney engine that powers the F-16s. Gears in the box drive a pump that provides oil to lubricate bearings on the engine's main shaft.

The memo said that the study designed to hold the housing in place were damaged in faulting, and might not stand up to engine vibration.

The alleged defect represents a hazard because oil leaking from a loose housing can cause metal fatigue to gears and bearings and ultimately lead to engine failure, according to a memo from the Navy's inspector general's office.

STATE More older women are having babies

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Laurie Hutchinson decided at age 40 that she and her new husband, Fred Zimmerman, wanted to have children together. Now, at age 45 — more than 25 years after she had her first daughter, Ariel, and after years of doggedly pursuing a career in theater — Hutchinson is the mother of 39-year-old Zoe and 17½-year-old Jamie.

Hutchinson said she felt like a pioneer, having children at an age when some are becoming grandparents, but health officials say she is one of a growing number of Connecticut women who spend their 30s building a career and are now spending their 40s having children. The number of women giving birth at age 40 and older has grown from 263 in 1982 to 477 in 1987, the most recent five year span the state Department of Health has statistics for.

Women over 40 planning babies make up one-third of the patients at Yale-New Haven Hospital's division of reproductive endocrinology, which treats infertility, compared to one-fifth five years ago, said Dr. Alan DeCherney, the division's director.

While women can have babies until menopause, which commonly occurs between 50 and 54, only eight women over 45 had babies in Connecticut in 1987, DeCherney has one 48-year-old patient. He says women nearing 50 trying to conceive are still uncommon.

Dr. Siegfried Rotemesh, a doctor in maternal-fetal medicine at Yale-New Haven, believes late pregnancies are considerably safer than many women think.

He is embarking on a study to reassure women that improved medical technology and healthier women have lowered the overall risks of late pregnancy.

Laotians' dream mired in zoning

WILLINGTON (AP) — A year and a half ago, a group of Laotian refugees bought 54 acres here to build a community where they could speak their own language and practice their religion. Plans called for 52 homes, a Buddhist temple and a Laotian-American cultural center.

But today they are out of money and disappointed, their American dream adrift in the wetlands on the property they bought.

Last fall, Mecham Associates, an engineering firm in Manchester, told the refugees that the property has wetlands over 85 percent of its land.

After more than two weeks of surveillance, police raided the house, Kovach said. Three children — the boy, his 8-year-old sister and a 15-year-old cousin — were inside when officers smashed open the front door with a battering ram, he said.

Upon searching the house, police found three bags of heroin and a large quantity of cash, Kovach said. Officers also found syringes in kitchen cabinets and other items used in the preparation of heroin, he said.

Kovach said he thought about waiting until after the school's winter recess was over next week, but decided that the "best interest of the children" required immediate action.

He said he was particularly concerned about protecting the Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines Fund, established by the General Assembly in 1919 to assist the veterans of World War I and their families.

America's sex life dull compared with media stereotypes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — American adults say they have intercourse an average of once a week, but those over 70 have sex less than once a month and one person in five claims to have abstained entirely in the past year, according to a survey released Sunday.

The findings, based on a long-running survey of 1,500 households across the country, suggest that Americans are not as sexually adventurous as they are often portrayed.

"This shows that the sexual behavior of Americans is more circumspect and traditional than the libertine impression we get from the popular media and fiction," said Tom W. Smith of the University of Chicago, who directed the survey.

A separate survey found that teen-age boys are also less sexually active than their on-the-ground image would imply. It found that adolescents seem to be having sex less often, with fewer girls and at a later age than teenagers did a decade ago.

"This contrasts sharply with the view that most young men are sexually promiscuous," said Fredya L. Sonenstein of the Urban Institute in Washington, who analyzed the results.

Both reports were among sex surveys outlined at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The University of Chicago results were based on interviews and questionnaires administered to a cross-section of adults in 1988 and 1989. The questions were added to the General Social Survey, which has been conducted annually since 1972.

Surprisingly little is known about the sex lives of ordinary Americans, said Smith.

His survey found that on average, adults have sex 57 times a year, or about once a week.

"We don't know what night of the week," he said, "but it sounds like the traditional stereotype of every Saturday night."

Sexual frequency dropped with age from about 78 times a year for those under 40 to eight times for those over 70.

Soviets complete mission

MOSCOW (AP) — Cosmonaut Alexander Viktorenko and Alexander Serebrov returned to Earth today, ending a 22-week mission that included the first American experiment aboard the Soviet space station Mir.

Their TM-8 space capsule safely touched down at 7:36 a.m. near Akahyk, 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow, and both cosmonauts were reported in good health, the official Tass news agency said.

Viktorenko and Serebrov were launched into space Sept. 5 on a mission that featured the successful production of a "space motorcycle," a repairing satellite and designed cosmonauts in distress.

A replacement crew, Anatoly Solovoyev and Alexander Balandyn, blasted off Feb. 11 and will remain aboard the Mir for about six months to continue experiments that include the first orbital factory for the production of biotechnological materials in the weightlessness of space.

Radio Moscow said Viktorenko and Serebrov successfully completed experiments that included production of semiconductors in zero gravity.

The American experiment, created by Boyard Systems Inc., was launched on Dec. 20 and exposed protein crystal to weightlessness. The Cambridge, Mass., company was the first authorized by the U.S. Department of Commerce to have experiments performed aboard the Soviet space station.

The crystals will be analyzed next month at the Brookhaven National Laboratory in Upton, N.Y., according to Payload officials.

Viktorenko and Serebrov were the fifth crew to live for an extended period aboard Mir, the primary building block of the Soviet orbital station launched in February 1986.

They also carried out biological experiments on super-pure preparations for use in medicine, the radio report said.

Loan fees on VA mortgages based on gloomy forecasts

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's proposal to start requiring veterans to make down payments on home loans uses a forecast that a top veterans' affairs official acknowledges is too pessimistic.

The administration, in its 1991 budget proposal, said it wants VA loan borrowers to make a 10 percent down payment on loans over $25,000. Currently, the VA loan program is distinguished from other mortgage programs by the lack of a required down payment.

The administration also proposes raising from 1.25 percent to 1.75 percent a loan-making fee that took effect in January. And, it wants to limit the number of veterans who can gain exemption from the fee because of service-connected disabilities.

The Department of Veterans' Affairs says the changes are needed to keep the program afloat in the face of rising losses due to foreclosures. Officials attribute the foreclosures problem to national and regional recessions in the past decade.

But the administration's fiscal 1991 budget relies on more optimistic economic assumptions.

According to the Bush economic projections, personal income is supposed to rise more than one-third over 1988 levels by 1995, while wages and salaries are supposed to rise by more than one-half. Unemployment, the forecast says, likely will stabilize at 5 percent of the labor force.

The VA based its fee-raising proposals on a projection of likely future foreclosure rates of 10 percent to 11 percent over 10 years, said Bill Latel assistant director for program management in the VA's loan guaranty service.

He said that figure represents a balance between the relatively low foreclosure rates of the 1970s and the double-digit rates of the 80s.

But during a hearing last April before the House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee on housing, Keith Pedigo, director of the VA loan guaranty program, acknowledged the 11 percent projection was too high.

Space launch Thursday to carry secret satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A hush-hush countdown ticked away today for the Thursday launch of space shuttle Atlantis with a spy satellite that reportedly will help monitor Soviet compliance with arms-control agreements.

A Soviet official on an unprecedented tour of the Kennedy Space Center on Sunday said with a smile the shuttle's classified payload was a waste of money as his country has "no special secrets."

After announcing that the launch clock had started Sunday night, NASA pulled a curtain of secrecy over the countdown because of the shuttle's secret satellite.

The count will be made public just nine minutes before the planned liftoff on Thursday. Officials have said only that the launch will take place between midnight and 4 a.m., but sources close to the program report Atlantis and its crew of five military officers are to take off at 1 a.m.

Once Atlantis is in orbit there will be a news blackout on what is happening until an hour before the shuttle returns to Earth. The flight is expected to last four days.

It will be the fourth after dark flight and the sixth dedicated to the military in 34 shuttle missions.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the shuttle's payload is a 37,300-pound satellite with a dual role to snap high-resolution reconnaissance photos and eavesdrop on military and diplomatic communications.

They said the satellite will be launched into a higher orbit that includes visits to the Pentagon, several military installations and aerospace factories. The trip follows a similar visit to the Soviet Union last August by members of the U.S. House Armed Services Committee.

Boy tells school his mom uses drugs; she's arrested

STRATFORD (AP) — Police say the drug education classes given youngsters in school paid off when a 6-year-old boy told school officials "my mommy is using drugs."

Carolyn Womack, 26, of Stratford, was charged Friday with possession of narcotics, possession of drug paraphernalia, and risk of injury to a minor, said detective Capt. Michael Kovach. Bond was set at $25,000.

"This tells me we are getting our message across to the young people," Kovach said. "All these drug education classes are paying off. That's the only way we are going to beat this problem."

Kovach said the youngster told a school attendance officer in late January that he was not attending classes because his mother was taking drugs and could not get him ready for school.

The state Department of Child and Youth Services in Bridgeport investigated the child's claim and found no evidence of child abuse, but police continued to monitor the house, Kovach said.

After more than two weeks of surveillance, police raided the house, Kovach said. Three children — the boy, his 8-year-old sister and a 15-year-old cousin — were inside when officers smashed open the front door with a battering ram, he said.

Upon searching the house, police found three bags of heroin and a large quantity of cash, Kovach said. Officers also found syringes in kitchen cabinets and other items used in the preparation of heroin, he said.

for a workplace accident are prosecuted. According to Shays, there have been only 13 convictions in the nation in the 20 years OSHA has been in existence for construction deaths and none of those resulted in anyone serving prison time.

During that same time period, there have been more than 100,000 deaths in the construction industry, Shays said.

"We have tolerated murder in the workplace," Shays said. "We as a society tolerate, as a cost of doing business, a tremendous number of injuries and deaths in the construction industry."

Shays said that current federal law forces OSHA to prove that negligence was virtually the cause, not just a contributor, to a construction accident. It is, he said, an almost impossible standard of proof.

Some elements of legislation proposed by Dodd and Shays were used by OSHA in drafting their new regulations for construction sites. But Shays said several other provisions of the legislation were left out.

Among other things, the legislation calls for developers to pay for on-site inspectors and to notify OSHA within 24 hours in the event of a death or accident at a work site. Under current rules, a contractor or developer could wait 48 hours and would not have to report at all if there were fewer than five fatalities.

Nobili said that in addition to increased random inspections by OSHA officials, the construction industry must work to clean up its own problems.

A key contributor to the L'Amiance disaster, he said, was that no one contractor had overall control of the site and several different subcontractors were working at the site simultaneously.

"Nobody had sole responsibility for coordinating any kind of safety program there," Nobili said. "In this case it was a lot of different players in the same ballpark."

A requirement that gave a head contractor some financial incentive to oversee on-site safety would go a long way toward preventing serious accidents, Nobili said.

L'Amiance Plaza is a vacant lot located in the $41 million, six-story, 12-level building reached several involved parties and the families of victims of the collapse call for a new plan to be built and for the surviving families to receive payments from its income.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the slow work of erecting a construction safety edifice continues.

under the law had accepted their suspensions without protest, said Andrew W. Nelson III, a spokesman for the state Department of Motor Vehicles. Almost 200 more were waiting for their appeals to be heard.

Under the new law, which took effect Jan. 1, the Motor Vehicles Department is required to suspend the license of anyone who either fails a blood-alcohol breath test or refuses to take one.

The per se law gives motorists a chance to appeal their suspensions and requires the Department of Motor Vehicles to hold an administrative hearing within 45 days of the original arrest. In the meantime, motorists are issued a temporary license.

Based on figures covering Jan. 1 through Jan. 31, it was difficult but not impossible for motorists to persuade the department's hearing officers that they had been treated unfairly.

Included in the 19 who had their licenses restored — with no suspension — were an Essex woman who was charged with refusing to take a test when, in fact, she had taken it; a Bridgewater man who was not driving at the time of his arrest; and an East Lyme man who discovered that his first breath test, which he failed.

"The officers are still new to this," said Nancy E. Ryan, who heads the department's per se unit.

The first month's figures suggest that motorists were aware of the new law, which imposes a 90-day suspension on anyone who fails a breath test, but a 180-day suspension for anyone who refuses to take one.

Of the 1,233 motorists arrested in January, 994 failed the breath test and 329 refused to be tested.

The figures also underscored the widespread view that most drunken drivers are young men. Of those charged with driving while intoxicated last year, 75 percent were under the age of 20, and 38 and 66 percent of them were men.

Reunified Germany hinges on Soviet acceptance of NATO

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union may ultimately accept full NATO membership for a reunified Germany because it would provide stability that is in Moscow's own interests, two top Western officials said Sunday.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Manfred Woerner, secretary general of the Western alliance, said they do not believe objections to full NATO membership would be over.

"I think the Russians will accept some Soviet officials are the final word. We're going to have to see the degree to which they really feel that way," Baker said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" program. "For myself, I would tell you that I'm not so sure that they really strongly feel that way."

Baker said the alliance, as the basis for the presence of U.S. troops in Europe, is something that few on either side of the former Iron Curtain want to dissolve in the current unstable climate in Eastern Europe.

"I think, without putting words in the mouths of the Soviets, that they see the stability that is afforded by the continued presence of United States forces in Europe," he said.

On Saturday, a top adviser to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, Valentin Falin, said in a radio interview monitored in West Berlin that if the Western alliance insists on "NATO membership for all of Germany, then there won't be any German unification."

Without an anchor in NATO, Woerner added, a neutral Germany would "revert into national rivalries" of the sort which led to World Wars I and II, and we want that not to happen again.

Both Baker and Woerner repeated assurances that under NATO membership, military forces of the alliance would not be advanced into what is now East Germany.

The discussions are likely to be driven ahead faster than either side is prepared for because of economic discontent in the East and a flow of fortune-seekers across the border to the West.

"Unification is taking place as we sit here this morning, on the ground, economically," Baker said. "There is de facto economic integration, unification, taking place," he said, adding that there is "an excellent chance" that the two Germanys will be back together before the year is out.

Horst Teltschik, foreign policy adviser to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, also predicted that unification would occur this year.

"Nobody can slow down that process, neither the Soviets nor we, because the people in East Germany are the only ones who are responsible (for) what will happen," he said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

Teltschik said the German Democratic Republic is near economic collapse and its Western neighbor expects 100,000 immigrants this month alone. "This is a development the GDR can't survive," he said.

Tax on golf course was shot in rough

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The plan announced last week by Mayor John C. Daniels to send Yale a tax bill for the golf course was done for "dramatic effect" and may not become a reality, a spokesman for the mayor said.

During a press conference Friday to announce his latest proposals for dealing with the city's budget deficit, Daniels said he had instructed the city's tax collector to bill Yale for the taxable value of 287 acres of its Westville golf course. He also announced plans to lay off 95 city workers and to consider placing a Tweed-New Haven Airport, which New Haven owns and operates, in private hands.

At the time, Daniels said the golf course doesn't carry out an educational purpose that would qualify it as tax-exempt. He called it a "luxury facility (that) must bear its share of the city's tax burden."

But on Saturday, a spokesman for Daniels said the mayor didn't intend for his statement to be taken literally.

"We didn't mean to give out the idea that we were literally sending them a bill for the golf course," said the spokesman, Khalid Lam. "We used that as an example ... for dramatic effect."

Lam said Daniels and members of his administration are in "friendly and cooperative negotiations" with Yale officials about the tax-exempt status of the golf course and other financial matters.

Yale Secretary Sheila Wellington said Saturday that Daniels and Yale President Bruno C. Schmidt Jr. have had "preliminary conversations about Yale and New Haven working together" on the city's financial problems but they have not gotten into specifics.

Wellington said she and city Chief Administrative Officer Douglas Rae, who is on leave as chairman of Yale's political science department, have met to review "a number of areas of mutual concern," including the golf course. She said no agreements have been reached.

Daniels said Friday he had no idea how much tax revenue the golf course would generate, but other officials said they expected it would be at least $200,000.

Daniels also said his administration would conduct a review of other tax-exempt properties that are potentially taxable, such as the Yale Repertory Theatre.

A city budget deficit of $12 million had been projected before Daniels began taking measures last month to cut municipal expenses. Daniels said the new measures, including the layoffs, will reduce the deficit for the year ending June 30 to about $3.5 million.

At one point, demonstrators found Voiculescu and dragged him onto the balcony where he was jeered. Soldiers moved in and hustled him back to the East and a flow of demonstrators yelling "Voices! Voices!"

An army colonel said that authorities did not issue orders to shoot. "If we had gotten an order to fire, we would have fired and finished this off in two seconds," he said on condition of anonymity.

The opposition says the front seeks a return to one-party rule in Romania, which lacks a democratic tradition. Ceausescu had brutally suppressed opposition during his 24-year rule, carrying on the intolerance of his predecessors in postwar Communist Romania.

Long-dormant political parties whose leaders spent decades in exile or prison thus face formidable obstacles in organizing campaigns to challenge the provisional government. The military and all major industry.

"We got some good performances," Calhoun said. "But we need total performances for 40 minutes. We played well, but not nearly as well as we think we should."

"In the first half I don't think we executed the way we can, like we did against Syracuse and Georgetown," said reserve guard John Gwynn, who led Connecticut with a career-high 18 points. "Coach Calhoun wants us every single game to play hard defensively. In the first half, we didn't play hard on the defensive end and that's why Boston College hung in there."

"The second half, we picked up the defense," Gwynn continued. "Against Providence, we're going to have to execute the first half and second half."

"This has been, said many times over, an unprecedented season for Connecticut basketball. The nine wins in Big East play is already its best showing ever with the previous best being 8-6 in 1980-81. The 22 wins is one shy of the school record for wins, now held by the 1953-54 and '64-65 clubs.

Why the success? Why, at this year, calls it having the right components. "Chemistry isn't the right word. I'd say the key is our opponents," he said. "We didn't have the mix last year as we do now," he added.

The Hukies, as Calhoun says, can throw a big team at you, or a quick one. It can put five ball handlers on the court at the end of a game. It can match up with several style opponents, if need be.

"There's no question this team has surprised me," Calhoun added, "but like I like to say, every time we throw it up I expect to win."

"I knew we as a team had the ability to do what we've done," Gwynn says, "but to be in first in the Big East at this point of the season, I had no idea. I'm happy that we are, but the season isn't over and we have four games left."

It's that prevailing attitude that's put the Hukies in the NCAA Tournament, fighting for its first ever Big East title.

Sabres lose fights, war to the feisty Whalers

By John F. Bonfatti
The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres lost most of the fights, the war and several key players to the Hartford Whalers.

The sedate season series between the Adams Division rivals turned frenzied as the Whalers pounded their way to a 6-4 victory Sunday night.

The teams had averaged 18 penalty minutes each in their previous five encounters this season, but referee Denis Morel called a total of 207 minutes in penalties during a game that featured about a dozen altercations.

"I think there's a better word for it than physical," said Hartford's Kevin Dineen when asked about the rough stuff. "It was plain chippy out there."

The Sabres clearly won only one of the fights and it may prove to be an expensive victory.

In a game where there were enough punches thrown to confound the best boxing judge, Sabres captain Mike Foligno delivered the most devastating blow when he wound up and tagged Scott Young with a straight left.

The punch knocked the fight and a large amount of blood out of Young, but it also may have left Foligno with a broken bone in his hand.

The loss of Foligno was compounded by injuries that may also sideline the team's best two defensive defenses — Mike Ramsey and Uwe Krupp.

Ramsey was knocked wrothy when Hartford's Tom Martin elbowed him into the glass behind the net. Martin received a major penalty, but Ramsey suffered a possible concussion.

Krupp went down at the end of a rush up ice, injuring his knee and ankle.

While the status of Ramsey and Foligno is uncertain, Krupp said he definitely won't be going on the team's road trip to Winnipeg and Edmonton this week.

As he has often this season, Buffalo coach Rick Dudley complained bitterly that there was too much illegal restraining. That, in turn, led to the fights, he said.

"There's so much clutching, grabbing, holding, chopping, hacking and slashing," said Dudley. "It's unfortunate. I don't go after the officials themselves, I go after the interpretation of the rules."

Because they weren't allowed to skate, the Sabres team lost some composure and began to play chippy and grab themselves.

"There's no question we were frustrated," Dudley said. "You cannot get grabbed and clutched and hacked and slashed and not get upset."

The Whalers saw it another way, with Dineen maintaining it was the Sabres who started the rough stuff after getting behind 3-1 and 5-2.

A team gets down, and they figure they can intimidate you," he said. "It's up to the visiting team to stand up and that's what I think we did. It was nice to show ourselves as a team, but we can't take it."

But Whalers coach Rick Ley admitted it didn't take much to get his team going after a demoralizing 7-3 loss at Montreal the night before.

"We came off a very disappointing loss in Montreal," he said. "I kind of felt our team would be a little nastier tonight and come prepared to play and play physical. They wanted to make amends."

Ley had a long talk with his club following the loss to Montreal, and didn't mince words.

Randy Lacourse and Randy Curneyworth gave the Whalers a 2-0 lead before Benoit/Hogue scored Buffalo's first goal at 3:26 of the second period.

But only 24 seconds after that goal, Buffalo goalie Daren Puppa allowed a Dave Babych shot that was going wide of the net to bounce in off his glove.

Mike Hartman made it 3-2 at 13:05 of the second period, but third-period goals by Ray Ferraro and Todd Kryger — the latter coming while the Whalers were killing time — Martin's major penalty — allowed Hartford to pull away.

Ed Kastelic closed out the Hartford scoring before Dave Andreychuk scored twice in the game's final four minutes.

Hartford is back in action Wednesday night at home against the Quebec Nordiques.

WEST HARTFORD — Trendy as it may seem, the Manchester High hockey team wanted to celebrate Saturday night's 9-4 victory over Newington by dumping water on their coach.

But Eric Farno, who will bring his team to the Division II State Tournament next month, would have no part of it.

"We haven't won anything yet," Farno said. "This (qualifying for the tournament) is just one obstacle. We have a lot of work to do before we can celebrate."

Will a state title loosen the coach up a bit?

"We'll just have to wait and see," Farno said.

Manchester hosts Windsor Hill in a make-up game Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at the Bolton Ice Palace. Snow and a lack of officials postponed this contest twice in January.

Manchester (10-7) played the first period like a title contender, outshooting Newington, 13-5, and taking a 3-0 lead on a pair of Mike Russo goals and Tim Jordan's 12th of the year.

But Newington came out smoking in the second period. After a lawless opening frame in his first varsity start, MHS sophomore goalie Greg Lemelin began to feel the heat.

Ryan Donahue converted a clean pass from Kevin Barry in the corner to put Newington on the board at 1:16. Chris Kramer became a slapper in off Lemelin's court at the end of a game. It can match up with several style opponents, if need be.

Boston College only a warmup for Providence

STORRS — What Boston College gave Connecticut on Saturday night at the Gampel Pavilion was only a sampling of what the Hukies are going to get tonight against Providence College.

The last-place Eagles stunned the capacity crowd on the first seven minutes, grabbing a 14-9 lead. But these Hukies are unlike those of recent history. They ran off 16 unanswered points in a four-minute span, led by 11 at the half and the No. 10 team in the AP national poll.

At one point, demonstrators found Voiculescu and dragged him onto the balcony where he was jeered. Soldiers moved in and hustled him back to the East and a flow of demonstrators yelling "Voices! Voices!"

Dixon and Lata second in Class LL wrestling

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

EAST HARTFORD — The Manchester High wrestling team saw two of its individuals take runner-up honors, and the team took ninth place in the team standings, at Saturday's state Class LL Championships at East Hartford High.

Danbury High School took the Double L title with 206.5 points with Simsbury High second at 193 points and Norwich Free Academy third at 183.5. The Indians totaled 73 points for their ninth place finish in the 22 team competition.

"It was a strong but somewhat disappointing team finish," noted Manchester coach Barry Bernstein.

"We were hoping for a top five to seven placement, but had to settle for ninth place."

Seniors Aaron Dixon (152) and George Lata (275) each took runner-up honors in their weight class and advanced to next weekend's State Open at Bristol Central High School. Dixon lost by decision in the 152-pound championship to Fairfield's Matt Grapski, while Lata was pinned by NFA's Paul Goupple in their title bout.

Also for the Indians, senior Pete Fongemie (135) was sidelined by an injury and had to settle for sixth place with Tom Provençal (171) also garnering a sixth placement for Manchester.

At the Class M championships at Foran High in Milford, Cheney Tech freshman Rick Olinatz took fifth place in the 103-pound weight class. Olinatz is an alternate to the Open, but won't be able to compete due to a fractured elbow suffered in his quarterfinal match. He wrestled three more times after that with the injury not diagnosed until Sunday morning.

Cruz sets pace for MHS girls

NEW HAVEN — Led by Alexia Cruz' two first-place performances, the Manchester High girls' indoor track team took fifth place at Saturday's state Class I Championship at Yale University.

Weaver High of Hartford took team honors with 63 points followed by Ridgefield High 55, Staples-Westport 38, Fitch-Groton 37 and Manchester 26.

Cruz captured the long jump with a leap of 17 feet, 3 1/2 inches and the 55-meter dash in 37.45 seconds.

Also, Heidi Howland and Kristina Trombley had their best efforts of the season in securing fourth and sixth, respectively, in the 500-meter run with times of 1:29.63 and 1:31.05.

Erica DeJoannis was sixth in the shot put with a personal best of 30 feet, 4 inches.

Michelle Simpson missed placing in the 300 by six-hundredths of a second while Beth Cool was seventh in the 1000 and Phitsany Sourinbo was 10th in the 55-meter hurdles.

MHS indoor track qualifies for states

NEW HAVEN — Several members of the Manchester High boys' indoor track team qualified for Saturday's state championship meet to be held at Yale University in qualifying action last Friday night at southern Connecticut State University.

Dave Ghabrial won the 1000-meter run with a time of 2:43.41; Dave Campbell placed third in the shot put with a toss of 47 feet, the 4 X 800 relay of Dan Chesney, Brian Schwarz, Ted Stanfield and Dave Hoagland qualified by taking sixth place.

Doug Hemmavanh was second in the 55-meter hurdles; Harold Barber was second in the 55-meter dash; Pat Dwyer had a personal best of 1:09.24.

Also, Ghabrial was fourth in the 3200 with a time of 10:06.77; Macka Jones and Jason DeJoannis each passed the qualifying height of 5 feet, 8 inches in the high jump; the 4 X 400 relay of Dave Jarvis, Barber, Dwyer and Campbell was third; and the 4 X 200 foursome of Hemmavanh, Dave Hightower, Macka Austin and Tai Min Kim was sixth.

The sprint medley of Jarvis, Austin, Hightower and Joe Moriarty was seventh. They missed qualifying for the state meet by eight-hundredths of a second.

Lakers surge by Celtics

NBA Roundup

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — When it comes to playing Boston, the Los Angeles Lakers have long memories.

The last time the two teams met in an NBA championship series was in 1987, when the Lakers won four games to two.

The Lakers won again Sunday, 116-110, in a game nearly as hardfought. Boston led by as many as 12 points in the first half and led by four early in the third quarter before a fourth-quarter surge by the Lakers.

"Any time you get a rivalry that started a long time ago, back with (Jerry) West and (Bob) Cousy, it's never going to change. Not the intensity, not the respect," said Magic Johnson, who scored 30 points. "It's definitely still nice and very special to beat them. It's the biggest game of the year, because the fans are so into it. It's always like a playoff game."

Orlando Woolridge tied the score at 98 on a slam dunk with 8:51 to play. After Byron Scott hit his third 3-point shot of the game to put Los Angeles up by four, he had a breakaway slam dunk that gave the Lakers a 104-98 lead.
