Firefighters say goodbye to station

By Alex Grell
Manchester Herald

Town Firefighter Norman "Butch" Gagnon was philosophical this morning when asked how he felt about moving out of the Tolland Turnpike station he had been assigned to for 13 years.

"You do what you gotta do," said Gagnon, who will be moving to a new site thanks to an agreement which specifies that the town must give the Tolland Turnpike station to the Eight Utilities District by midnight tonight.

Two firefighters of the Town of Manchester Fire Department were spending their last day today in Station 5 at 1039 Tolland Turnpike amid spartan surroundings while last-minute work is being done on a temporary new town station at 81 Tolland Turnpike.

The town fire department plans to move its engine into the newly leased quarters tonight, probably about 10 p.m., according to Capt. Jack Hughes, public information officer for the department.

Most of the domestic furnishings, like the refrigerator and television set, were removed from Station 5 Tuesday and stored near the building.

By 8 p.m. today, the station was being painted today and the furniture in the foreground had yet to be removed.

High court backs death penalty 5-4

By Richard Carell
The Associated Press

Writing for the four, Brennan said, "Today, for the first time, the court upholds a statute containing a mandatory provision that gives the legislature rather than the jury the ultimate decision whether the death penalty is appropriate in a particular case."

In a series of past rulings, the high court has struck down laws making death mandatory, the only case for people convicted of certain crimes.

Pennsylvania law says, "The verdict must be a sentence of death if the jury unanimously finds at least one aggravating circumstance..."

Washington — The Supreme Court upheld Pennsylvania's death penalty laws by a 5-4 vote today.

The justices ruled that the state's laws do not limit improperly the discretion of sentencing juries and are not impermissibly mandatory.

Most states have death penalty laws, but many of them do not resemble the Pennsylvania scheme.

More than 100 death row inmates are awaiting execution in Pennsylvania, but there has been no execution in the state since 1962.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said states enjoy wide latitude in drawing capital-punishment laws.

"The fact that other states have enacted different forms of death penalty statutes which also satisfy constitutional requirements casts no doubt on Pennsylvania's choice," Rehnquist said.

"Within the constitutional limits defined by our cases, the states enjoy their traditional latitude to prescribe the method by which those who commit murder shall be punished."

Rehnquist was joined by Justices Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy.

Justice William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Shuttle makes it on the sixth try

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis rocketed into the nighttime sky after five launches and carried a spy satellite into orbit today, riding a dazzling, 700-foot tail of fire seen for hundreds of miles.

After waiting out clouds and rain, the craft thundered from the pad at 2:51 a.m. EST, sending dazzling light and a shock wave of sound across the darkened seaside space center.

It disappeared into clouds in just 38 seconds, leaving behind a glow like a shrouded full moon.

Observers as far north as Washington, D.C., reported seeing the brilliant light of Atlantis' rockets as the craft followed a route never before taken by a shuttle.

NASA administrator Dick Truly congratulated the launch team, saying, "It was a tough one to get off, but a great job."

No comment was heard from Atlantis' astronauts and launch director Bob Slick said a "wax gilded with light from the brilliant cascade of fire powering Atlantis."

The first two scheduled launches were halted by a sick astronaut and uncertain weather. The third and fourth were blocked by bad weather, the fifth by a failed computer.

Because of the payload's classified nature, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration kept secret the flightpath, but the shuttle's orbit through the clouddown was restarted in about nine minutes, proudly braced for a final weather check, then ticked smoothly on to lift off.

As the rocket ignited, light burst from the launch pad and leaped from cloud to cloud as far as the eye could see. Water surrounding the pad was gilded with light from the brilliant cascade of fire powering Atlantis.

Former Manchester man dies after shoot-out with city cops

By Dianna M. Talbot
Manchester Herald

A former Manchester man died Tuesday night from a gunshot wound to the head after being involved in a shoot-out with city cops in the third-floor hallway of a building.

Before police arrived, Azerezo is believed to have been firing a shotgun randomly in the building because he was upset about martial police in an apartment at 813 Maple Avenue, Hartford, Loranger said.

Azerezo, whose reported occupation as a bricklayer could not be confirmed, died of a gunshot wound to the head, a spokesman for Hartford Hospital said today.

Azerezo apparently had been staying at the three-story brick apartment building with a friend for the past two months, Loranger said. The gun fight occurred Monday night in the third-floor hallway.

More state residents now view themselves as being Republican

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A Gallup poll of 1,000 Connecticut residents in January and released Tuesday, indicated to gauge attitudes toward leaders contained a surprising political statistic: slightly more state residents consider themselves Republicans than Democrats.

The slight edge in Republican-minded respondents was within the poll's 4 percent margin of error, but diverged noticeably from state registration statistics, which show Democrats outnumbering Republicans by a wide margin.

The poll, conducted by telephone in January and released Tuesday, asked: "In politics, as of today, do you consider yourself a Republican, a Democrat, or an Independent?"

A plurality, 41 percent, answered Independent or "other." Of those choosing a party, Republicans outnumbered Democrats, 30 percent to 27 percent.

Of the state's 1.6 million voters, 648,000 (40 percent) are registered as Democrats and 430,000 (27 percent) are registered as Republicans. The rest, 540,000 (33 percent), are not registered with parties.

The poll, commissioned by the Connecticut Education Association, surveyed adults 18 or older and did not ask if they were registered to vote. Of those surveyed, 55 percent described themselves as conservative, either very conservative (18 percent) or moderately conservative (37 percent), and 41 percent described themselves as liberal, either moderately liberal (27 percent) or very liberal (14 percent).

Laura Kalb, Gallup's project manager for the poll, said the poll was not intended to analyze party affiliation, and should not be interpreted as a political snapshot.

"If we were doing a political survey, we would have asked a lot more questions," she said.

The question about party affiliation was asked, along with questions about age, income and education levels and political ideology, so that the pollsters could break down their results into smaller groups. For instance, the poll found that 39 percent of Democrats, compared with 34 percent of Republicans, would support higher teacher salaries even if doing so required higher taxes.

Donald DeLuca, a Gallup vice president, said such measures of party affiliation often change dramatically as Election Day comes closer, and the number of voters who consider themselves independent usually drops sharply.

State Rep. Richard Foley, the chairman of the state Republican Party, checked at the results, but read little into them. He said Connecticut Republicans have long believed that their strength in the state is not accurately reflected in

Barry pleads innocent to charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry pleaded innocent today to cocaine possession and perjury charges filed after a 14-month investigation of his ties to a convicted drug dealer.

At the brief hearing, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson set one of the trial on three felony charges of lying to a grand jury and perjury.

The mayor's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, said in a statement outside the courthouse afterward that Barry was "anticipating the trial and anticipating winning the trial."

Mundy said there would be no plea bargaining and Barry would not resign from public office.

Barry, who has denied ever using cocaine or other drugs, has been under court orders in Florida and South Carolina for what aides have said is a "very serious" cocaine possession charge.

Mundy said the mayor's treatment for alcoholism was "going well" and Barry was in "good shape."

Barry entered the courthouse Tuesday after the Penwick Hall hospital outside Charleston, S.C., where he had been receiving substance abuse treatment program.

The charges stem from an investigation into Barry's ties to a convicted drug dealer. One possession charge involved the mayor's Jan. 18 arrest in an FBI sting operation at a downtown Washington hotel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against inclinations today to get involved in situations where the odds are in the favor of others and against you.

Don't make life tougher on yourself than necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're involved with others today don't bring up an issue that you and your mate have not seen able to resolve. There's no strong possibility this could lead to a heated exchange.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to make it a point today to discharge old obligations you have where friends are concerned. This is a delicate area that may need some work in order to maintain harmonious relationships.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In making an important judgment today your decision might be beneficial to you but offensive to a strong-willed associate. This matter must be handled diplomatically.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The entire day could pass your without accomplishing anything productive if you permit yourself to be overwhelmed by what which needs to be done. Tackle tasks one at a time.

VIRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Being around a negative or moody friend today could rub off on you if you're not careful. Try to select companions who are upbeat and optimistic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you have something nice to say about others, you'll find yourself being uninvolved with others today or bring up an issue that you and your mate have not seen able to resolve. There's no strong possibility this could lead to a heated exchange.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Being either too tight-lipped or too extravagant with your funds could bring about the same consequences: poor value received for what you spend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you expect others to do your bidding today, you must first set the proper example. Don't look for companions to do for you what you're unwilling to do for them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you're a free spirit and you're not inclined to analyze situations from a negative perspective. You'll be luckier if you get back in character.

Bridge

Length or strength?
By James Jacoby

The first lesson of bidding is to show your longest suits first. And that rule would certainly seem to apply when your partner makes a taken double asking you to bid. But should this always be the case?

In fourth position South opened one spade. After the double and redouble, East bid his longest suit, hearts. As expected, South duly got to four spades. Who can fault West for leading the king from K-Q of hearts, particularly when his partner had bid the suit? Unfortunately declarer quickly shed his losing diamonds and then made his contract.

Thoughts

I've been told that there are too many hypocrites in church, I agree. There are too many Webster's dictionary defines a hypocrite as "one who affects virtues or qualities he does not have."
As I see it, there are two types of hypocrites. The first is the person who acts like they have certain virtues or qualities, because they are working at developing them. Like the young person who tries to act grown-up, knowing that in time they will be an adult. The second is the person who pretends to have virtues or qualities, but has no intention of developing them (this is the one I wish there were less of).
There are both types in most churches. But on the surface we cannot always tell them apart.
The real problem is that hypocrites keep some people from getting close to Jesus. What a shame it is when a person lets someone else's failure keep them from Jesus. Don't let a hypocrite keep you from the One who is your closest friend. Think about it.

CELEBRATING HISTORY — Robert Bryan, musical director of the group Sankofa-Kuumba, a group dedicated to preserving African heritage, accompanies a group of dancers at Bennet Junior High School Monday. The performance came as the school celebrated Black History Month.

Some blacks say celebration not enough

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald
Black history should be taught all year round, not just during February, according to Robert Cooper, a history teacher at Billing Junior High School and advisor to the school's multicultural club.
Black History Month "gives teachers a chance to pay lip service to black history during one month and then forget about it for the rest of the year," Cooper told a meeting of the Board of Education on Monday night.
"I'd like to see it integrated all year," Cooper added today. "To separate it gives students a very distorted version of history."
But black history month is better than nothing, Cooper said, because it does give an opportunity to highlight the positive achievements of black Americans.
Throughout the month, Manchester schools have been holding special events and disseminating information about black history. These include an African cultural program at Bennet Junior High School Monday, that included traditional African music, dance, folklore and poetry.
At Billing, a sociologist who frequently visits Africa spoke to students, and at the high school daily announcements were made about important events in black history.
Lou Irvin, coordinator of multicultural education for the three secondary schools, also said he believes black history would ideally be incorporated into the mainstream curriculum.
Irvin and Cooper said that the achievements of all groups of people need to be recognized, not just those of blacks.
Allan B. Chesteron, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction, said today he thought that setting aside one month was needed to raise consciousness.
"But my goal is to make all twelve months black history months," he said.
Some teachers ignore black history during the rest of the year, Chesteron said. But textbooks purchased by the schools during the last two or three years show much more positive portrayals of blacks and women, he said.
A human relations committee at the high school, which includes students, teachers and members of the community, is also examining textbooks, Irvin said.

Commuters favor rail service

By Dianna M. Talbot
Manchester Herald
A majority of Hartford area commuters think mass transportation dollars should be spent on construction of a commuter rail service, according to a local state legislator who recently conducted a poll.
Rep. Paul R. Munns, R-Manchester, chairman of the House Republican's Policy Committee on Mass Transportation, said his January poll results have been analyzed and most respondents support the need for new ideas in mass transportation.
"I was impressed about the support for a light rail system," said Munns, who has proposed establishment of a Connecticut Mass Transit Authority to oversee establishment of one. "It's good to see the public in favor of it because that's what it's going to take to get one built."
Of the 300 questionnaires distributed, Munns said he has received about 150 completed ones back. Anyone wishing to contact the representative can reach him at the Legislative Office Building in Hartford at 240-8700 or his Manchester home, 645-0895.
Of those polled who answered, 77 percent said they would support and use a commuter rail service, and 81 percent said mass transportation funds should be spent on construction of one, Munns said.
A majority of those polled also said that bus service should be increased, he said. Few commuters think more highways should be constructed.
Most of those polled said they use mass transportation to save money and because Hartford area highways are backed up with commuters, Munns said.
Twenty-six percent of the respondents said they live in Manchester; 23 percent, Gloucester; 22 percent, South Windsor; and the remainder, from a consortium of area towns, Munns said.
The idea of establishing a rail system is not a new one. The proposal has been under study, and it also has attracted some support from Democrats.

Meeting on schools draws few residents

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald
COVENTRY — Just under two dozen people turned out for a Special Town meeting Tuesday night on a $5 million renovation and improvement project for two town schools.
The project now goes to a referendum on March 8 from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. by paper ballot.
An open house is being held at Capt. Nathan Hale School and Coventry Grammar School March 6 to acquaint the public with targeted renovations.
"We were able to take advantage of bidding at a good time," Judy Halverson, chairwoman of the School Building Committee and vice-chairwoman of the Board of Education said during the meeting at Coventry High School.
Newfield Construction of Hartford was the lowest of 21 bidders, she said.
Halverson said a year ago it was estimated the project would cost $5 million, and since then due to changing building codes some things had to be changed or added.
The project, which is likely to raise the tax rate 1.2 mills, is being done to bring the schools up to current building code standards as required by the state.
"The prime thrust of building codes is to protect the people in the buildings," said Art Hall, a member of the School Building Committee.
Hall said some changes will provide youngsters with a safe way out of buildings. For example, many classrooms at Coventry Grammar School empty into a courtyard and the school so two doors will be provided from the courtyard, he said.
The roofs at both schools leak, and Hall said the roof at Capt. Nathan Hale is split.
In addition to renovations for fire and health code safety, there will be energy conservation work like replacement of all windows, cost cubicles put in to avoid the spread of lice, and better lighting in the parking lots.
"We would like to leave the buildings looking like they've been redone," Hall said, adding that means some cosmetic improvements will be done, such as new carpeting, ceilings and all walls repainted.
But resident George Coons warned officials to make it clear to the voters the term "cosmetic" really means "necessary renovations" or the project could get shot down.

Zaborowski is named editor of the Herald

Penny M. Steffert, publisher of the Manchester Herald, announced today that Walter Zaborowski, 32, of Waterbury, has been appointed editor of the newspaper.
"In his position, Walter will direct the editorial staff at the newspaper," Steffert said.
Zaborowski comes to the Herald after more than 10 years with the Post Publishing Co. in Bridgeport.
He was night city editor of the Bridgeport Post and The Telegram there from October 1988 to January of this year. Previously, he had been assistant city editor of The Telegram from 1984 to 1988.
Other positions he held at Post Publishing included state and regional news editor, copy editor and reporter.
"In Manchester, I want to make a good community newspaper the best that it can be. We'll continue to give the best local news coverage, balancing it with features on people," Zaborowski said.
The University of Bridgeport graduate lives in Waterbury with his wife Elaine and their 9-month-old son Mark.

STATE Homeless angry over census plan

By Jill Arabas
The Associated Press

STAMFORD — Some of Connecticut's homeless are protesting the U.S. Census Bureau's plan to count their population, saying the March 20-21 count will greatly underestimate the number of homeless across America.

Demonstrators planned to torch census cards and warm their hands over the flames outside a former shelter and soup kitchen in downtown Stamford today.

"We'll have them step forward and light it and warm their hands over it. It's Ash Wednesday, so we're going to treat it as such," said Marvin Minkler, a homeless advocate who helped organize the protest.

A similar demonstration took place in Washington last month by the Community for Creative Non-Violence. Today's action is believed to be the second, although more may occur next month when the Census count takes place, said Mary Ellen Homb, director of the Washington-based National Coalition for the Homeless.

The national coalition supports the bureau's plan and is encouraging its members to participate, even though it agrees with Minkler that the count will not be accurate, said spokesman Kim Hopper.

"My point is we gain credibility as critics better by participating in it," he said. "I think our credibility is enhanced, as opposed to participating in probably some very successful and good theater demonstrations and boycotts that will be forgotten by the time the numbers are released."

Census workers will hit the streets March 20 and 21 in the agency's most comprehensive effort to count the homeless. Workers will survey emergency shelters from 6 p.m. to midnight on March 20 and use the next 6 1/2 hours to survey people in the street and abandoned buildings.

Minkler said the count will miss the "hidden homeless" who won't be found or admit they don't have a home.

"By reducing the magnitude of the problem of homelessness in America, on paper at least, we can take from the homeless what little is left of them — their very existence," he said.

He faulted several previous population studies, saying they excluded homeless who never use shelters or soup kitchens. The Urban Institute in 1987 estimated the population at 600,000, while the Department of Housing and Urban Development placed it at 250,000-325,000 in 1984. Homeless advocates have placed the number as high as 1 million.

Minkler also questioned how the government would use the information.

"Since 1984, the Reagan-Bush administration and some members of Congress have done everything possible to minimize and trivialize the problem of homelessness in America, statistically at least, as a way of reducing pressure on themselves to do something about it," he charged.

The Census Bureau said it was not attempting to count every homeless person. Rather, workers are collecting figures that analysts and planners can use in constructing a more accurate count.

"I think there tends to be too much focus on the size of the count of the homeless population that will result from the 1990 census," bureau spokeswoman Cynthia M. Tauber said in a statement. "Perhaps it is more important to view the census as an opportunity to get a clearer idea of relative differences among areas of the country. The data should also give the nation a better picture of the diversity of the homeless population."

Bridgeport, in fiscal trouble, braces for layoffs

By Jill Arabas
The Associated Press

BRIDGEPORT — The city of Bridgeport is considering layoffs, education cuts, giveaways from unionized city workers and even new taxes to reduce a $28 million shortfall projected for the 1990-91 budget, said Mayor Mary C. Moran.

Fifteen workers in City Hall will get layoff notices in the next 10 days, while the mayor's chief administrative officer sat down with labor representatives Tuesday to discuss concessions, as city officials try to cut the shortfall by the time the budget goes to the city council April 2.

Finance Director Richard Robinson said the budget will be balanced, "and we will do it with legitimate cost control and cost containment and not smoke and mirrors."

The cost-cutting alternatives were presented Tuesday in Moran's first state of the city address. The 56-year-old Republican, who defeated two-term incumbent Thomas Buccini in November in her first bid for a major public office, vowed to deal honestly with taxpayers as she struggles to put the city's finances back in order.

"I will make the decisions that must be made. I will take whatever heat and frustrations will be thrown at me from the overburdened taxpayers. But they will know up front what must be done. The city may try to restructure employee health care benefits.

Moran's chief administrative officer, George Dunbar, began speaking to the crowd after her speech at the Bridgeport Hilton.

The Associated Press

Her message got a less enthusiastic response from city workers who would be affected by her proposed austerity measures.

"We have lost almost 40 police officers in the past year, and 40 have requested in the budget have already been taken out of the budget," acting Police Chief Guy Izzo said when told of the possible cuts. "What we need is more police officers, more vehicles and more equipment."

Moran's chief priority is Bridgeport's financial problems, which were so bad three years ago that the city went to the Legislature to secure state-backed bonds to cover a $60 million deficit. The Legislature agreed to guarantee the bonds but appointed a special panel to oversee the city's finances.

The city implemented reforms that have included new accounting procedures along with more immediate measures like the sale of assets, a hiring freeze and a 10 percent cut in personnel from July 1988 to July 1989.

City officials project a slight surplus for the fiscal year that ends in July. But they foresee a $28.6 million gap between expenses and revenues in the 1990-91 fiscal year if Moran's administration does not propose cuts or find new revenue.

Moran said the alternatives include layoffs in the Police, Fire, Parks and Recreation departments and in City Hall. The city may try to restructure employee health care benefits.

Moran also said Dunbar has streamlined city government, allowing her more time to market the city. To illustrate the point, she played a videotape extolling Bridgeport as a major New England hub filled with opportunity, ethnic diversity, a strong work ethic and such amenities as beaches, marinas, colleges, a 36-hole municipal golf course and the state's only zoo.

Moran talked tough on drug abuse, saying she was "putting the drug-dealing merchants of death" on notice that the city will fight the drug trade. She said the city is seeking grants to fight drug abuse and is working with the school system to spread drug messages to students.

She disclosed that her staff has agreed to submit to drug testing and other health care programs. She said she is encouraging to do the same because "the people of Bridgeport deserve to know that their taxes are financing a drug-free City Hall."

Teachers get support in poll, but salary issue draws debate

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut residents are largely satisfied with the job done by public school teachers, but have conflicting opinions about whether teachers should be paid higher salaries, according to a Gallup poll of 1,000 state residents.

The poll released Tuesday also found that most state residents support the continued use of binding arbitration to settle teachers' contract disputes.

The poll, commissioned by the Connecticut Education Association, the state's largest teachers' union, found conflicting opinions about teachers' salaries. Fully 75 percent of those polled said they support more government spending to increase teacher salaries, but only 35 percent would do so if it meant higher taxes.

Asked if the salaries of experienced teachers are adequate, only 25 percent said the salaries are too low, compared to 44 percent who said they are about right and 6 percent who said they are too high. Thirty-one percent said starting salaries are too low, and a legislative committee is now considering a bill that would make only minor changes in the law.

The Gallup poll found that 73 percent of state residents approved of the binding arbitration law.

CEA officials were upbeat about the poll, which they said countered media reports and complaints from local officials that rising teacher salaries are becoming a burden to local governments.

Other three children, ages 6 years, 3 years, and 8 months, were living in the apartment as well as Francine's grandmother and aunt.

The child's mother is incarcerated at the state prison in Mianis, Scanlon said.

The X-ray showed the mummy was a young man — and revealed four mysterious tubes in the mummy's torso.

"It was one of the most purist things I've ever seen," said Abel, of Wilmington, Del. "I looked at my bed and there were all these skin chips and little chips in it. It was pretty disgusting."

The episode is being investigated by Middletown police and campus security officers. Wesleyan President William M. Chase is also planning to look into the question of the mummy to make sure it receives proper care and respect, a school spokesman said.

The mummy took about 110 years to travel from the hot land of the pyramids to the bed of a college freshman.

A Wesleyan classics professor purchased it in Athens in the 1880s, at a time when pilfering Egyptian tombs was popular.

The Hamden Legislative Council voted last August to restrict the use of polystyrene and polyvinyl chloride food packaging on the grounds that neither is readily recyclable and that, when burned, has as ash residue that is heavier than that of other plastics and more expensive to dispose of.

The plastics industry, however, has been a pilot polystyrene recycling program, and even environmentalists have questioned whether polystyrene bans will have any significant effect on the solid waste problem.

At least five other cities across the United States have instituted similar bans, the closest being Newark, N.J., according to Jerry Johnson, of the Polystyrene Packaging Council Inc. in Washington, D.C.

New Haven has also approved restrictions on plastic food packaging, but they are not scheduled to go into effect until July.

In Hamden, where the law is being implemented, some considerable confusion over what items are exempt, dozens of restaurants and eateries are being forced to switch from polystyrene cups, food containers and cutlery to paper or foil products.

STATE OF CITY — Bridgeport Mayor Mary Moran tells the Greater Bridgeport Regional Business Council Tuesday she may resort to layoffs to deal with a fiscal crisis.

Stabbing suspect in court

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A 37-year-old mental patient charged with murder in the stabbing of a 9-year-old girl at a Middletown street fair last summer will be tried by a three-judge panel.

David A. Peterson told Middlesex Superior Court Judge Richard T. O'Connell on Monday that he would rather be tried by the panel than a 12-member jury. The trial in the case is scheduled to start March 14.

Peterson is accused of fatally stabbing Jessica Short on July 28, 1989, during a sidewalk sale.

Police say Peterson, a patient at Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown, had walked off the hospital grounds and taken a bus downtown shortly before the stabbing.

Public Defender Christopher James Peterson's attorney, said that, based on psychological tests, he hopes to convince the judges that his client was insane at the time of the murder and is innocent by reason of insanity.

Peterson is being held without bond at the Whiting Forensic Institute in Middletown.

The stabbing last summer focused attention on state mental hospitals and prompted calls for increased security.

Girl, 9, killed as she slept

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A 9-year-old Bridgeport girl was fatally shot as she apparently lay sleeping on the living room couch in her aunt's apartment, police said.

Francine Olivia Rowell died at Bridgeport Hospital at 3:35 p.m. Tuesday of a single gunshot wound to the head, hospital officials said.

She had been placed on life-support systems after being shot at her aunt's home about 6:50 a.m. Tuesday.

Gloria Walker, the victim's aunt, told police that she was in a bed in the bedroom at the rear of the apartment when she heard a single shot.

She said that after she went into the living room and found her niece, she ran out of the house and told a cab driver to get an ambulance.

Police said the apartment had no telephone.

Detective Capt. Thomas Scanlon said there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment. He said investigators were trying to establish a motive for the shooting.

Three other children, ages 6 years, 3 years, and 8 months, were living in the apartment as well as Francine's grandmother and aunt.

The child's mother is incarcerated at the state prison in Mianis, Scanlon said.

Cops arrest man in beating that killed Redding couple

REDDING (AP) — A 35-year-old Vermont man has been arrested in the deaths of a Redding couple who were badly beaten before they were found inside their home in this affluent town, state police said.

Guy F. Levine of Rutland, Vt., was arrested at 8:20 p.m. Tuesday as Connecticut and Vermont state police searched his home for evidence, said Richard Sealander, a state police spokesman.

Sealander would not identify the victims, but neighbors said the residents of the house where the bodies were found were Seth and Grace Levine.

Sealander declined to comment on the relationship of Guy Levine to the victims, but WFSB-TV in Hartford reported that the couple's son was a suspect in the slayings.

Levine was charged in Vermont with being a fugitive from justice and in being held without bond in jail in Rutland pending arraignment today, Sealander said. A warrant was issued in Connecticut charging Levine with two counts of murder, he said.

The man and woman, found Monday night, apparently died from injuries to the head and their deaths have been ruled homicides, said a spokeswoman for the chief state medical examiner's office.

The victims had been beaten so badly that dental records would be needed to identify the bodies, WFSB reported.

A local constable discovered the body of the male victim on the floor inside the gray colonial house on Wayside Lane Monday night, police said. The woman's body was found later in another part of the house by state troopers and officers from the state police major crime squad who were called to the scene.

Sealander declined to provide additional details, including a motive for the slaying.

Sylvia Hawkins, a neighbor of the Levines, said police interviewed her Monday after the police noticed the Levines' mailbox full of mail.

Hawkins said the Levines usually asked her to tend their mail when they were going away but had not done so.

The Connecticut Conference of Municipalities endorsed several of the bills, and said that the assault weapons bill didn't go far enough. CCM lobbyist Gian-Carl Casa said the sale of assault weapons should be banned outright. He also voiced support for the two-week waiting period before all gun purchases. Current law requires a two-week wait only before handgun purchases.

The panel also heard from Susan Kenney of Naugatuck, whose son, D.J., was fatally shot by a neighbor's child at the neighbor's home.

The committee is not expected to vote on the bills for at least a week, probably later, according to committee Co-Chairman Lawrence Anastasi, D-Norwalk.

Gun hearing targets rights

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut legislators on Tuesday said the bills would do little to keep guns out of the hands of criminals, while restricting access to guns for law-abiding citizens.

"The problem is not with the honest citizen, the problem is with the person ... who's already made a decision to break the law," said Gregory Biesha of Ellington. "Arrest the criminal ... leave the honest citizen alone."

Others testifying at the 4 1/2-hour hearing said that even constitutional rights can be somewhat restricted if it's in the interest of public safety, such as forbidding someone from selling "fire" in a crowded theater, even though that may appear to abridge the right to free speech.

Rep. Malcolm L. Loney, D-New Haven, said that "all constitutional rights are subject to reasonable regulation for the public good."

The public favors reasonable weapons controls," said state Rep. Robert Godfrey, D-Danbury. "Let's get assault weapons off our streets and guns out of the hands of unsupervised children."

Student at Wesleyan finds mummy in his dorm bed; cops probe prank

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A Wesleyan freshman was shocked when he returned to his dorm room ready for bed and found there was someone already asleep there. He was even more shocked when he discovered the person was dead and had been for a long, long time.

The body was a 2,500-year-old unwrapped Egyptian mummy that had been swiped from its campus hiding place and slipped into Tim Abel's bed as a practical joke, campus public safety officials and Abel said.

"It was one of the most purist things I've ever seen," said Abel, of Wilmington, Del. "I looked at my bed and there were all these skin chips and little chips in it. It was pretty disgusting."

The Hamden Legislative Council voted last August to restrict the use of polystyrene and polyvinyl chloride food packaging on the grounds that neither is readily recyclable and that, when burned, has as ash residue that is heavier than that of other plastics and more expensive to dispose of.

The plastics industry, however, has been a pilot polystyrene recycling program, and even environmentalists have questioned whether polystyrene bans will have any significant effect on the solid waste problem.

At least five other cities across the United States have instituted similar bans, the closest being Newark, N.J., according to Jerry Johnson, of the Polystyrene Packaging Council Inc. in Washington, D.C.

New Haven has also approved restrictions on plastic food packaging, but they are not scheduled to go into effect until July.

Gun hearing targets rights

HARTFORD — Connecticut legislators on Tuesday said the bills would do little to keep guns out of the hands of criminals, while restricting access to guns for law-abiding citizens.

"The problem is not with the honest citizen, the problem is with the person ... who's already made a decision to break the law," said Gregory Biesha of Ellington. "Arrest the criminal ... leave the honest citizen alone."

Others testifying at the 4 1/2-hour hearing said that even constitutional rights can be somewhat restricted if it's in the interest of public safety, such as forbidding someone from selling "fire" in a crowded theater, even though that may appear to abridge the right to free speech.

Rep. Malcolm L. Loney, D-New Haven, said that "all constitutional rights are subject to reasonable regulation for the public good."

The public favors reasonable weapons controls," said state Rep. Robert Godfrey, D-Danbury. "Let's get assault weapons off our streets and guns out of the hands of unsupervised children."

The committee is not expected to vote on the bills for at least a week, probably later, according to committee Co-Chairman Lawrence Anastasi, D-Norwalk.

The panel also heard from Susan Kenney of Naugatuck, whose son, D.J., was fatally shot by a neighbor's child at the neighbor's home.

Exxon to fight Valdez indictment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Exxon Corp. facing criminal charges and $700 million or more in possible penalties from last year's tanker spill that polluted hundreds of miles of Alaska shoreline, says it will fight the charges.

A federal grand jury in Alaska brought a five-count indictment against the giant oil company and its shipping subsidiary on Tuesday, charging it violated a number of federal laws in connection with the Exxon Valdez oil spill.

The indictment... represents our best shot at prosecuting this incident," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in announcing the indictment.

The massive spill occurred when the huge tanker veered off course in Prince William Sound and struck a reef on March 24, 1989, spilling 11 million gallons of crude. It was the worst oil catastrophe in U.S. history and caused widespread damage to wildlife and Alaska's ecology.

In New York, Exxon chairman Lawrence G. Rawl in a statement called the grounding "a tragic accident" for which Exxon and its shipping subsidiary "have apologized to the American people, especially the people of Alaska."

By Linda Deutsch
The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Jurors in the Joseph Hazelwood case were warned not to read news reports, while defense lawyers worried that word of the federal indictment of Exxon Corp. might prejudice the skipper's trial.

Hazelwood lawyer Michael Chalos criticized the timing of Tuesday's indictment of Exxon and its subsidiary, Exxon Shipping Co., on two felony charges and three misdemeanors stemming from the nation's largest oil spill.

"It is wonderful if there isn't a bigger political force at work here. They've waited 11 months. Why, as we're finishing the trial, are they putting out press releases and an indictment?" Chalos said.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone warned jurors that if they could not avoid news reports he had the power to sequester them in a hotel, although he added that step wasn't necessary yet.

"Any information concerning the oil spill is off limits," Johnstone said.

The defense indicated no plans to seek a mistrial, Chalos said. "A mistrial at this point would only help the state because we feel it's going very well for captain Hazelwood."

The indictments came on a day when an expert prosecution witness denounced Hazelwood as reckless and guilty of bad judgment. Robert Bevers said Hazelwood had risked his ship and crew with every action he took before and after the grounding.

Until now, Hazelwood, 43, had been the only defendant charged criminally in the tanker grounding. He is charged with a felony, criminal mischief, and three misdemeanors: reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil. If convicted, he could get 7 1/2 years in prison and $61,000 in fines.

The 987-foot Exxon Valdez spilled nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska crude oil into the clear waters of Prince William Sound on March 24, killing countless birds, fish and other wildlife and tarring beaches for hundreds of miles.

The Exxon indictment accuses the company of employing crew members "knowing such persons to be physically and mentally incapable of performing the duties assigned to them."

It mentions that the skipper left the ship's bridge in the hands of an uncertified third mate and "a helmsman who was known by Exxon Shipping Company to be incompetent at performing his assigned duties."

The latter was a reference to Robert Kagan, the helmsman who has been blamed by witnesses for failing to steer the ship properly. He remains an employee of Exxon. Hazelwood was fired shortly after the accident.

Of Hazelwood, witness Bevers said, "He created the risk of grounding, of losing the vessel, of fire, explosion and death to his crew and of pollution that occurred."

He accused Hazelwood of trying to drive his stranded ship off a jagged reef in Prince William Sound without taking necessary tests to determine its stability. He said Hazelwood risked sinking or capsizing the ship.

"I feel that he used very poor judgment in his actions basically from the time they grounded to well after the engines were stopped," Bevers said.

Bevers said he is being paid $35,000 for his services in helping prosecutors prepare their case against Hazelwood. He worked 14 years as a tanker captain and retired from the merchant marine in 1987.

Hazelwood lawyer Dick Madison asked, "Mr. Bevers, you're not perfect, are you?"

"No, I'm not," said Bevers, who acknowledged he sometimes had used bad judgment.

"And have you ever had someone hired to say you exercised bad judgment?" asked Madison.

"No," said the witness.

"Nobility willfully grounded the ship or caused the spill," said Rawl.

Exxon has spent more than $2 billion in cleanup efforts, but environmentalists argue that the job is far from completed and the total damages to natural resources may not be known for years.

The indictment included three felony and two misdemeanor charges that could lead to a total $1.6 million in criminal fines. In addition, the government said it would seek at least $700 million — perhaps substantially more — in penalties under a separate law that allows recovery of twice the amount of proven losses.

Thornburgh said the eventual penalties against Exxon could be substantially higher, depending on the amount of losses determined at the time of a court verdict.

Rawl's statement said: "We will defend ourselves in court against these charges. We believe there is no statutory basis for the amount of the fines mentioned by the U.S. attorney general."

Thornburgh told a news conference the indictment was presented to the grand jury after a proposed plea deal fell through. He said the plea talks fell apart because of the unwillingness of Exxon to meet the government's terms; in addition, state officials objected to part of the proposed agreement.

The indictment charged that Exxon employees aboard the tanker acted inappropriately and that the corporation "willfully and knowingly" allowed individuals who either lacked the required license or were "known to be physically or mentally incapable" to operate the vessel.

The charges stemmed from reports that Exxon officials were aware that Valdez captain Joseph Hazelwood had a history of drunken driving convictions in New York state, but was allowed to remain in command of the huge tanker.

Hazelwood is on trial in a state court in Alaska on charges including reckless endangerment, criminal mischief and operating a vessel while intoxicated. He has denied being drunk at the time of the accident.

The plea bargain discussions resulted in sharp exchanges between Alaska state officials and the Justice Department in recent weeks.

Aide cleared in potty training death

By James Martinez
The Associated Press

BARTOW, Fla. — A state social worker has been cleared of a charge of failing to report suspected abuse in the weeks before a 2-year-old boy fatally thrust headfirst into a toilet for soiling his pants.

Judge Jesse Barber on Tuesday threw out the misdemeanor charge against Kenneth Houk, saying the prosecution hadn't proved its case. Barber granted the acquittal two hours into the trial and before the defense even presented its side.

Houk was the first of three Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services workers to be tried in the case arising from the death of Bradley McGee.

"There is no reason for us to accept the breakdowns in this city," Herbert Rickman said Tuesday as he announced the formation of New York Pride, a foundation described as a citizen's army whose objective is "to make New York livable once again."

Their theme song: "Try A Little Tenderness."
The pervasive nastiness, Rickman said, threatens the city's No. 1 neighborhood, said Ralph Destino, chairman of Carter and co-chairman of New York Pride.

was 3 months old and lived most of his life in foster care until the state gave him back to the mother and stepfather two months before his death.

The prosecution's case hinged on a July 3 report played to Houk in which a family friend said Bradley's mother had forced the child to eat feces for violating potty training.

Theresa Jacobs, a prosecution witness who originally reported the case complaint, told the jury Houk had urged her numerous times to telephone the child abuse registry when she had something to report.

She said she didn't follow his advice because she "never got any satisfaction from the registry." She also said she did not have firsthand knowledge of the alleged abuse.

Case worker Judy Ross was called by the state in reports that she relayed the feces complaint to Houk. But she wavered when asked whether she thought such a secondhand report warranted a call to the HRS hotline.

After the acquittal, defense attorney Jack Wilkins said, "Hopefully this will lead to a different wording of the law. ... People who work for HRS must be given the freedom to make judgment calls."

Prosecutors contended Houk twice failed to notify the state child abuse registry after receiving reports about Bradley's case. The last call came weeks before the toddler's July 28 death from head injuries when his pants were repeatedly thrust into a toilet for soiling his pants.

Bradley's mother and stepfather — Sheryl McGee Cox, 21, and Thomas Cox, 22, of Lakeland — face trial in New York City. They were charged with child abuse charges. Bradley was abandoned at a shopping mall when he

Founder of shelter resigns

MANCHESTER HERALD, Wednesday, Feb. 28, 1990

NEW YORK (AP) — The priest who founded the nation's biggest network of shelters for runaways has quit, saying he didn't want allegations of sexual misconduct against him to affect "the well-being of thousands of street kids."

The Rev. Bruce Ritter stepped down Tuesday from Covenant House at a board meeting.

Since December, four young men who took shelter at Covenant House have accused Ritter in news reports of having affairs with them. The district attorney and state attorney general are investigating Covenant House finances.

"The controversy that has surrounded me for the past three months has made it impossible for me to lead Covenant House effectively," Ritter said in a statement.

"Therefore, after a great deal of thought and prayer, I have come to the conclusion that in the best interest of Covenant House and, most especially, for the well-being of thousands of street kids, I should resign."

Former city schools chancellor Frank Macchirola, who served as acting president of Covenant House while the allegations were investigated, also resigned.

James J. Harneit, executive vice president and chief operating officer, will replace Ritter until a permanent successor is found.

"The focus has got to be on the needs of the kids," Harneit said. "Covenant House is not one man. It's not me, it's not Father Ritter. We were not all of Covenant House. But his vision, his courage and determination remain."

Harneit said the controversy has "been very upsetting to the kids and the kids are going to be very upset" by Ritter's decision to leave.

The charges against Ritter, 62, arose in December, when the New York Post quoted Kevin Kite, a former prostitute, as saying he had had an affair with Ritter last year. Three more men have since said they had affairs with Ritter.

Ritter, who is accustomed to laudatory coverage and was once hailed by President Reagan as a hero, called the accusations "garbage."

The Roman Catholic priest started Covenant House by putting up runaways in his apartment. It now serves 25,000 youths annually at 17 shelters in the United States, Canada and Latin America. Nearly all of its $85 million annual budget comes from donations.

Contributions to Covenant House were said to have fallen off since the allegations against Ritter surfaced.

Macchirola, named acting president Feb. 7, said in a statement he resigned after Covenant House's board rejected his proposal for the organization's future. His spokesman, Maureen Connelly, said Macchirola had wanted to "conduct reviews, investigations and audits of current practices and make changes."

Harneit said the board "accepted all of those recommendations" and plans to hire consultants to revamp procedures. But he said the board disagreed with Macchirola on who was best qualified to replace Ritter.

OPINION

Democrats need a real spark

Is there anything the Democrats can do to make themselves look better? Is there any Democrat who would excite voters in the 1992 presidential race?

Is there any way for Democrats to improve the image of Congress, their stronghold for years? These are not idle questions. The national Democratic Party is in disarray.

This is in part why President Bush does so well in the popularity ratings. It also explains in part why the American people hold Congress, controlled by the Democrats, in such low regard.

Democrats running for president have gotten soundly whipped in five out of the last six elections. Only Jimmy Carter broke through the Republicans' monopoly of the White House since Richard Nixon won in 1968.

While Republicans get elected, the Democrats grope for issues that can improve their pathetic record.

The issue does not seem to be the Democrats' view of how America should be. Americans frequently identify with the values that Democrats espouse.

The American people are much more magnanimous toward meeting the social needs of people, much closer to the Democrats than they are to the Republicans.

Clearly, something else is at work. Something else explains why the Democrats have lost center stage to the Republicans and can't seem to regain it.

Democrats lack the colorful leadership, the kinds of candidates who can capture the fancy of voters.

George Bush did not excite the electorate in 1988, but he clung to the Reagan coatails with tenacity and ran on the record of a strong defense and solid family values.

This is nothing new. It just happened that Mr. Bush ran against Michael Dukakis, who did not understand how to run a national campaign and who made Mr. Bush look exciting by comparison.

A man of the abilities of Gov. Mario Cuomo excites many Democrats when he gives a national "all to arms, but how would he play in the South and the West, where Republicans continue to kill the Democrats? Probably not very well.

The Democratic Party faces the next election with no visionary, exciting leader other than Gov. Cuomo. Sen. Bill Bradley, of New Jersey, is bright, dedicated and appealing, but not exciting.

The extent to which such a charismatic figure is lacking among the Democrats is illustrated in the positive responses that the Rev. Jesse Jackson evoked in many sections of the country.

The Democrats are waiting for a leader who can ignite them.

The Day, New London

So the speculation became the story — became the gospel within the Democratic Party. Barbara would be the organizational candidate if Bill got out. Or she'd be the one — never U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison of Harnden to whom the party would turn if the outlook were too bleak.

Kennelly re-took control

By Bob Conrad

Big Dan ("Love me or leave me") Rostenkowski had the scoop on U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly's news last week days before she broke it in Connecticut — that no way would she run for governor this year. Quite simply, she "leaked" it to him.

That was proper enough, because as chairman of the status-laden House Ways and Means Committee he was entitled to assurance that she'd continue as a member instead of bailing out on some rescue mission for her Democratic Party back home.

Speculation that she might run, or be available if Gov. Bill O'Neill turned away from his expected bid for re-election, was beginning to kill the Hartford congressionalwoman in Washington. Political pros in that town, and Rostenkowski is certainly one of the toughest, quickly lose interest in any insider, and Mrs. Kennelly is one of them now, who appears to be flirting with a candidacy elsewhere.

She was, of course, partly responsible for the talk. Last fall, she told reporters she would consider running if O'Neill decided against seeking his third full term. "I'd look at it," was the way she phrased it. She always followed him by saying she would not challenge him for the nomination.

So the speculation became the story — became the gospel within the Democratic Party. Barbara would be the organizational candidate if Bill got out. Or she'd be the one — never U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison of Harnden to whom the party would turn if the outlook were too bleak.

Vice bust didn't stop appointment

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — A close friend of George Bush was arrested in a sleazy prostitution sting in 1988. Less than a year later, he was given a key government position and security clearance.

Until Feb. 2 of this year, Jonathan (Jack) Sloot was a special assistant to the president. He was given a key position and security clearance. The president also knew about the arrest, but did not ask Sloot to resign.

Sloot and Bush got back on the way. They were contemporaries at Yale and soccer teammates. Sloot became an ardent Bush backer and fund raiser during the 1980 presidential campaign. Bush stayed at Sloot's home during campaign visits to Washington. The two play tennis together.

In 1981, Bush put Sloot in the job as general counsel at USA and then as congressional liaison for the agency. He lasted for four years under USA head Charles Wick. Wick didn't think Sloot was suited for USA, so he gave him six months to find another job. Sloot didn't, so Wick gave him another six months, and then another six months. Finally, Wick simply let him go.

Sloot, a lawyer, found work at the Washington Area Tennis Patrons Foundation. At least that was who he listed as his employer on the night of his arrest on sexual solicitation charges March 29, 1988.

Confidential police files in Washington, D.C., say that Sloot was arrested by a policewoman posing as a prostitute. The policewoman, Karen Moss, and her partner, Mark Gilkey, reported that Sloot offered Moss $15 to perform a sex act in his car.

Sloot's guilt or innocence was never determined. He took a route offered to first-offenders — doing community service in exchange for having the charges dropped. Sloot completed 40 hours of community service work in Washington and the charges were dismissed.

He took up the whole thing was a misunderstanding, he said he stopped to ask the woman for directions to a gas station and she must have misunderstood.

Sloot thought the embarrassing incident was behind him when Bush was elected president and appointed him to head the USA transition team. Then Sloot was made a special assistant to the new USA director, Gelb, at a salary of $63,900.

Gelb tried to get Sloot "Top Secret Codebook" security clearance so he could read the national intelligence. Daily, which goes only to the president and less than 100 top federal officials. When the Central Intelligence Agency did a background check on Sloot, it was found that the USA began its own investigation.

A knowledgeable source told us Sloot then called the FBI and told them he was in Maine, home and told him about the arrest. Sloot refused to tell us what happened last week, saying Democratic leaders and reviving talk that he will look into being a candidate again soon. A likely target, the State Senate. Meanwhile, she is practicing law in Bridgeport.

Passions remain strong in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Entering tense transition talks, President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro called on the Contra rebels to immediately disband and the defeated Sandinistas promised never to allow their revolution to die.

Working sessions on transferring power were to begin today, but indications were that the process would be troubled as passions ran strong about what Nicaragua's future should hold.

The victorious opposition coalition favors a free market economy but the leftist Sandinistas insisted Tuesday that banks and industries stay in the hands of the state and land seized by the government remain in peasant hands.

"A change of government does not mean the end of the revolution," President Daniel Ortega told a cheering crowd of thousands after a meeting of Sandinista party leaders.

Despite being trounced at the polls Sunday by Mrs. Chamorro's loose coalition, the Sandinistas remain the country's largest and most cohesive political force. They control the military and police and have the allegiance of a large bureaucracy.

Late Tuesday, Mrs. Chamorro called on the Contras to lay down their arms. Rafael Solis, a high-ranking military commander, said earlier that the Sandinistas would not cede control of the police or Central America's largest army until the Contras disband.

The top Contra leader, Israel Galcano, said from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Tuesday that the rebels would not disband until after Mrs. Chamorro is inaugurated April 25 for a six-year term.

Officials in Honduras estimate 10,000 rebels and some 42,000 dependents are living in makeshift camps near the Nicaraguan border. President Rafael Leonardo Callejas of Honduras said Tuesday that they must leave as soon as possible.

Vice President-elect, Virgilio Godoy, early today accused election officials of delaying the vote count in the National Assembly races in order to fiddle with the results and deprive the opposition of the two-thirds majority required to make constitutional changes.

The last time election results were announced — Monday after weeks with 82 percent of the vote reported — the United National Opposition (UNO) had 55 percent of the vote, to the Sandinistas' 41 percent.

The pro-government newspaper El Nuevo Diario estimated that under the proportional system UNO would thus win 52 seats in the 90-seat legislature, short of the necessary two-thirds. It said the Sandinistas would have 38 and the Social Christians 11.

Former President Jimmy Carter, a mediator between the two groups, said UNO was concerned because the Sandinista army is written into the constitution and the coalition would be several weeks short of a majority needed to amend it.

VA considering benefit changes

By Robert Greene The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs says it is considering several changes in benefits, including a stricter definition of service-connected disability and a uniform death benefit.

Other possible changes include an extension of psychiatric disability payments for disturbed veterans while they try to get jobs and a shorter waiting period before people can claim total service-connected disability.

VA said Tuesday the possible changes are part of an effort to put more emphasis on less expensive outpatient care and expand eligibility for nursing home care.

Undersecretary Anthony Principi, who heads the group studying the changes, said the VA is trying to bring the system up to date with the "trend in modern medicine to more ambulatory care."

He said VA wants more emphasis on prevention and more use of alternatives to hospitals, such as hospice care, for the terminally ill.

Any proposal to change service-connected disabilities is bound to be controversial. Nearly 2.2 million veterans receive such payments, ranging from $67 to $1,300 and even higher for some of the totally disabled. The total annual cost is close to $7 billion.

Currently, any disability that arises during military service is considered to be service-connected, entitling the veteran to compensation payments based on the degree of disability.

The possible tightening would rule out disability payments — but not VA medical care — for "disabilities that would have arisen regardless of the individual's vocation."

Diabetes, for example, would be excluded. So, too, would AIDS if contracted from injecting drugs.

VA said some of the proposals released by the Disabled American Veterans had been abandoned, such as the proposed elimination of cost-of-living allowances for certain disabled veterans and for different disability payments for wartime and peacetime veterans.

Any proposed changes would have to be approved by the Office of Management and Budget before being sent to Congress.

VA said the proposals being considered would not be retroactive. The only exception would be to increase the death benefit retroactively for survivors of lower-ranked veterans.

Benefits range from $539 a month for survivors of privates and corporals to $1,381 for survivors of generals and admirals. The possible change would create a uniform payment of $700 to $750 a month.

Those benefits cost about $2.3 billion a year, with the largest share going to the lower ranks.

Drug rule appeal rebuffed

Prisoner advocates to try state courts

By James H. Rubin The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prisoner-rights advocates disappointed by a Supreme Court decision say they'll continue to fight on the state level to assure inmates are not given anti-psychotic drugs indiscriminately.

"The trend is for state courts to give more protection" to inmates than the Supreme Court, said Brian Reed Phillips, a lawyer for a Washington state prisoner forced to take the drugs.

The justices, by a 6-3 vote Tuesday, said prison officials don't need a judge's permission before forcing inmates to take the drugs.

Robert D. Feischer, representing a prisoner-rights coalition in Massachusetts, said some states guarantee a judicial hearing before prisoners can be forced to take the medication.

"Massachusetts requires judicial intervention and the system has worked to protect people's rights," he said. "Requiring the appropriate care has not been overly burdensome."

Washington State Correctional Secretary Chase Riveland said Tuesday's ruling won't lead to a medication binge for disruptive prisoners.

"I'm not suggesting that we should be willy-nilly running around medicating people," he said. "I think that... if medically appropriate it's very helpful."

Riveland said the ruling may affect 10 to 15 Washington prisoners. The Supreme Court ruled that prisoners' rights are safeguarded as long as staff psychiatrists say the drugs will help, and not merely pacify, the inmates.

"An inmate's interests are adequately protected and perhaps better served by allowing the decision to medicate to be made by medical professionals rather than a judge," Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote for the court.

But the dissenters, led by Justice John Paul Stevens, said the ruling means prison officials seeking to maintain order may face inmates to take dangerous, even life-threatening drugs with little regard for the prisoners' well-being.

In other decisions, the court: Ruled 5-4 in a Florida case that patients involuntarily committed to state mental hospitals may sue officials in federal court for monetary damages over failure to get legally required hearings.

Ruled unanimously that the Boeing Co. did not violate a federal conflict-of-interest law when it paid $485,000 in severance to five employees who left to take government jobs.

The prisoners' rights decision overturned a 1988 Washington state Supreme Court ruling that convicted robber Walter Harper, diagnosed as schizophrenic, must be given a court hearing before he is given anti-psychotic drugs.

The case pitted the American Psychiatric Association, which supports the prison officials, against the American Psychological Association.

Clifford Stromberg, a lawyer for the psychologists group, said the court "unfortunately seems to have underestimated the danger of these drugs, particularly when no objective decision-maker decides when they're going to be used."

Harper, paroled on condition he take the drugs, was returned to prison after he attacked two nurses at a Seattle hospital. Back in prison, he refused in 1982 to take the medication, saying it was poisoning his brain and causing other side-effects.

He sued when prison officials forced him to take the drugs. The officials said the drugs were for his own good and needed to control his violent behavior.

The state Supreme Court, calling the drugs as intrusive as electroshock therapy, ruled that an inmate who has not been found mentally incompetent has a right to determine what should be done to his body.

While the drugs are beneficial to seriously ill patients, they also can have serious side effects ranging from involuntary spasms to permanent brain damage.

Prisoner-rights advocates say physical restraints or isolation are preferable methods to control unruly inmates. But public health and law enforcement officials say it makes little sense to give an irrational or mentally disturbed person the right to refuse anti-psychotic drugs.

But, according to some studies, judges in those states almost always decide that anti-psychotic drugs may be administered against the individual's will after holding hearings in individual cases.

No games foreseen

By The Associated Press

No runs, no hits, no games. That's the linensore for what should have been the first week of exhibition baseball.

More than 100 exhibition games have been canceled, including Thursday's World Series rematch between Oakland and San Francisco that was to be held in the Bay area earthquake. And more games are certain to be called off if there isn't an unexpectedly quick settlement between the owners and players.

"Within the next day or so, probably will cancel everything up to March 12 and go from there," Minnesota Twins spokesman Tom McE said. "To expect the players to play before then would be unreasonable."

In addition to the Oakland-San Francisco game, three other exhibition openers scheduled for Thursday were called off.

No games will be played until 10 days of spring training are completed, according to a memo sent to teams Tuesday by presidents Bobby Brown of the American League and Bill White of the National League.

However, some teams began canceling exhibition games after negotiations broke off Monday. With no further talks scheduled, the immediate forecast for baseball fans in Florida, Arizona and California is gloomy.

Another big loser is the Northern California Earthquake Fund, which was to receive proceeds from the Oakland-San Francisco spring opener at Phoenix. About 6,000 tickets were sold for the game, and refunds are available. However, money from tickets not returned by March 31 will go to the earthquake fund.

Baseball now a waiting game

By Ken Peters
The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Baseball has become a waiting game. The players' union is waiting for the owners to budge off some of their far intractable positions.

The owners apparently are waiting for the union to back off its demands, and hoping player unrest during the lockout will pressure union chief Donald Fehr into compromising.

The owners will be keeping waiting, Fehr said Tuesday after meeting with a group of 100 players.

"It's safe to say there's no sentiment among any of the players here that they should roll over and concede to the owners," Fehr said after a spending some four hours talking — and listening — to the union's executive board and other players on hand for the meeting.

"We will let them know (that) if they were waiting for a change in our position because of this meeting, they're not going to get it."

Although a few players around the country have questioned whether the union's demand that eligibility for arbitration be rolled back from three years to two is worth jeopardizing the start of the season, the players who met with Fehr on Tuesday emphasized solidarity.

"I didn't feel any disharmony what-so-ever," New York Yankees player representative Don Mattingly said. "I felt a huge vote of confidence for Donald Fehr and the negotiating committee."

Fehr and the players also said that it was incorrect to consider the negotiations stalemated because of the single issue of arbitration.

"People are trying to make it all one issue and it's much more than that," infielder Steve Lyons of the Chicago White Sox said. "We have been having these things jammed down our throats for eight months now."

"They (the owners) think they've made it look like our turn to make some movement, that they've pulled stuff (demands) off the table. All those things, though, like revenue sharing, didn't make any sense to anybody. They've really made no concessions at all."

Outfielder Pete Incaviglia of the Texas Rangers had been quoted as saying he didn't think the arbitration battle was that big a deal and wondering whether the players should drop their demand and settle with the owners.

Incaviglia backed off that statement after meeting with Fehr and the other players, saying, "I said I didn't know the issues at hand. There are a lot of things, like pension and starting salary. I think everybody's pretty firm on what we're doing."

Still, on the 13th day of the spring training lockout, some other players who hadn't attended a status briefing had different views.

"It sounds silly that one year is going to make a big deal," infielder Randy Velarde of the Yankees said. "I don't see why we can't leave it the way it is. I really wish they'd resolve this and let us get going."

In Brief . . .

Northeastern Wins Central
NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Junior forward Steve Carney scored 16 of his game-high 18 points in the first half to lead Northeastern to an 81-61 win over Central Connecticut.

Central was led by junior guard Lerzon Campbell who scored 15. Patrick Sellers added 14.

Martina Remains Unbeaten
INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova remained unbeaten in 1990 by overpowering Nicole Provis of Australia 6-2, 6-0 in a second-round match of the $350,000 Virginia Slims of Indian Wells.

NFL adds to its schedule
NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL schedule, but not the season, will be getting longer.

The league said Tuesday that it will extend its 16-game schedule over 17 weeks in 1990 and 1991, and to 18 weeks the following two years. That will give teams one week off for the next two seasons and two weeks off in 1992 and 1993.

It also will provide an extra week of games for television. The NFL currently is negotiating with the networks for a new contract. The NFL already has four-year deals with ESPN and Turner Broadcasting, beginning this season.

With the 17-week schedule, the dark week between the conference championships and the Super Bowl will be eliminated next year, when the NFL title game will be played at Tampa.

THERE IT GOES — Manchester High's Emil Issavi (30) watches the flight of his jumper during Tuesday night's game with Bristol Eastern High (30) at Clarke Arena. The Laners' Sean Fitzgerald (22) looks on. Issavi and fellow senior Devaughn Whitehead were feted before the game. Eastern won, 63-43.

MHS nips EC in swim action

The Manchester High boys' swim team wound up its season on a winning note, edging crossover rival East Catholic High, 82-80, Tuesday at the Manchester High pool. Manchester, which will compete in the CCC Divisional meet Thursday at East Hartford, finishes 4-9-1.

East, which had seven first-place finishes, winds up at 1-9.

Matt Miner (50 freestyle) and Dave Phillips (breaststroke) set personal records for Manchester while other Indian winners were Kirk Ringbloom (diving) and Mark Flores (500 free).

Matt Martin (200 individual medley, 100 butterfly) and Neal Freeman (100, 200 free) were double winners for East while other winners were Jason Martin (100 backstroke) and both relays.

Guard night for Pistons

NBA Roundup

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

The Detroit Pistons have played well this season whenever Coach Chuck Daly has put a new starter on the front line.

On Tuesday night, however, it was veteran guards Isiah Thomas and Joe Dumars who pulled the Pistons out of trouble.

Thomas had a season-high 37 points and 10 assists and Dumars scored 27 points while Detroit's revamped frontcourt struggled in a 106-102 overtime victory over the Houston Rockets.

"It was a game that we were going to have to go out and win," Thomas said of fellow guards Dumars and Isiah Thomas.

Frontliners Dennis Rodman, James Edwards and Bill Lambert combined for only 26 points on 9-for-29 shooting and 27 rebounds. Akem Olatunji alone had 37 points and 25 rebounds for Houston.

"It looked like for a long time, it was one you couldn't win," Daly said. "We struggled with our shot. . . . We missed a lot of easy shots."

In Brief . . .

MHS girls host Simsbury

Top-ranked Manchester High (20-0) begins play tonight at 7 in the Class LL girls' basketball tournament as the Indians host 17th-ranked Simsbury High (14-7) at Clarke Arena.

Simsbury advanced to second round play with a 59-51 win over Mercy.

Manchester is led by seniors Cheryl Fowler (11.0 points per game), Trish O'Connell (10.0), and juniors Shelly Dietzler (9.6) and Jen Britaldi (7.8).

The winner advances to Friday's quarterfinals against the Southington-Greenvich winner at a site to be announced.

Whalers host the Canadiens

HARTFORD — The Hartford Whalers 28-28-7 resume National Hockey League action tonight at 7:30 (SportsChannel, WTTV) as they host Adams Division rival Montreal (35-23-7) at the Civic Center.

The Canadiens are 4-1 against the Whalers who have 10 of their last 15 road games. Hartford has lost two straight. This is the first of three remaining home games against the Canadiens.

Patrick Roy (25-13-2) will be in goal for Montreal while Mike Liut draws the start for Hartford.

UConn women No. 1 seed

PROVIDENCE — The University of Connecticut women's basketball team won the coin flip Monday morning and will be the No. 1 seed for the Big East Basketball Tournament that starts Friday at the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion on the UConn campus in Storrs.

The Huskies and Providence College finished the regular season each 14-2 in league play and with identical tie-breakers.

St. John's (5-11, 11-16) and Villanova (1-15, 9-18) will play the 8-9 game Friday night at 8 with the winner advancing to Saturday's quarterfinals. UConn (14-2, 23-4) will play the Providence (14-2, 23-4) opponent No. 6 p.m. on Saturday while Villanova (1-15, 9-18) will play the 10-11 game at 7 p.m.

The other quarterfinal matchups are: No. 3 Seton Hall (11-5, 21-6) vs. No. 6 Pittsburgh (6-10, 14-13) at 1 p.m. and No. 4 Boston College (9-7, 15-12) vs. No. 5 Syracuse (7-9, 15-12) at 8 p.m.

The semifinals are Sunday at 2 and 4 p.m. with the title game Monday at 7 p.m.

Little League sign-ups set

Manchester Little League will conduct sign-ups for the 1990 season on Sunday at the American Legion Hall on Legion Drive from 1 to 4 p.m.

Registration is for all children between the ages of 7 and 12. Youth must be 7 by July 31, 1990 and turn 13 after that date.

A birth certificate is required at time of registration. There is a $20 registration fee per player with a family limit of $30. Anyone interested in umpiring, coaching or the league auxiliary is asked to attend the sign-up session, too.

Tryouts are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, March 17-18, weather permitting.

For further information, call Ed Dettore at 643-4482 or Bernie Laidout at 649-7072.

East needs boys' tennis coach

East Catholic High School is looking for a boys' tennis coach for the 1990 season. Interested applicants should contact athletic director Tom Malin at the school at 647-8627.

Soccer Club teams planned

The Manchester Soccer Club is reorganizing three teams for the spring season. The club is looking for players born in 1974, '75 and '76 to establish these teams.

Tryouts will be held Saturday at noon at the Martin School. Rain or snow date is Sunday.

For further information, call Don Kelsey (643-5252), Paul Calvo (647-9384), Chris Silver (646-5910) or Mike Dennis (646-6262).

Celtics re-sign Brian Shaw

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, who appear to have resolved some of their problems in the backcourt, announced Tuesday they had reached agreement on a contract to re-sign guard Brian Shaw beginning next season.

Shaw left the Celtics after his rookie season in a contract dispute and signed a lucrative deal, valued at around $1 million, with I Messaggero Roma in Italy. He leads the team with 25.1 points and 9.4 points a game.

"Playing in Italy this past year has been an interesting and educational experience, but playing in the NBA is the dream of every basketball player," the Celtics' top draft pick in 1988 said in a statement. "I am looking forward to rejoining my Celtics teammates and playing with and against the best players in the world."

"It's a great relief for me to have my contract and my future clarified, and I'm anxious to be back playing in Boston," said Shaw, who played in all 82 games, including 54 starts, and three postseason games in the 1988-89 season, averaging 8.6 points.

Hartford five tops Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Lamont Middleton led Hartford with 25 points, including 11 of 16 free throws, as the Hawks rallied to defeat Miami 62-58 Tuesday.

The victory Tuesday night improved Hartford's record to 16-10. The Hurricanes' record dropped to 11-15.

Jerome Scott's three-point basket with 3:56 remaining gave Miami a 56-55 lead, its first since early in the second half.

Hartford then regained the lead, 58-56, on a basket by Ron Moye and free throw by Middleton. Thomas Hocker's two free throws tied the score at 58 for Miami. But Alexander Jones' hit a layup and Larry Griffith's dunk with 21 seconds left ended Miami's comeback attempt.

Sooners say see you later to another No. 1

By Owen Canfield
The Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Billy Tubbs knew early on that his Oklahoma Sooners would have another easy time with the top-ranked team in the country.

In the first two minutes of the game, 1 really felt like we were going to win and I thought we had a chance for the first time since we lost to Kansas last year.

He spoke shortly after the fifth-ranked Sooners had blitzed No. 1 Kansas with a dizzying first-half defensive display, then cruised to a 100-78 victory in a Big Eight game.

After 48 hours earlier, Oklahoma had handed then-No. 1 Missouri a 107-90 defeat.

Tubbs knew he wasn't a bit surprised at the outcome of either game.

"You only limitations in life are your imagination," he said. "I could imagine that, why shouldn't we?"

There's no mystique with playing No. 1 when it's Missouri or Kansas because we play 'em all the time. That's the most important thing. The rivalry and the inter-conference thing hits you more than No. 1.

Oklahoma (22-4, 10-3 Big Eight) hit Kansas with a 76-63 upset of 15th-ranked Louisiana State.

This time, there was no backing off. Kansas (27-3, 10-3 Big Eight) had won the Sooners went on a 24-4 run in the second half to clinch at least a tie for the Big Eight title.

Power up with newspapers.

Automobile marketers compete on a hard-driving track.

There are more players in the game, gunning for a share of the prize money. New models appear with bewildering frequency. What was always a big ticket item gets bigger. Technology gets higher tech. Automotive advertising has a big job to do.

With newspapers you can fine tune your marketing program. They offer plenty of space to talk about product features, quality, value, options.

Newspapers provide plenty of news, features, and special sections about new cars, car care, auto shows. Classified sections are the nation's automotive marketplace, with 26 out of 100 readers saying they read the auto listings at least once a week.*

And newspapers reach affluent consumers, able to pay today's new car prices. Among those earning $30,000, 73% read a newspaper yesterday.

Of those who bought a new car in the past two years, 72% read a newspaper yesterday.

Even if your business isn't cars, you can use these special qualities of the newspaper—its large space, interesting editorial environment, affluent audience—to power up your own marketing.
