Local club is devoted to peace

By Nancy Foley
The Manchester Herald

Many drivers traveling East Center Street on a Saturday morning may have noticed what looks like a scene from a different era — a group of young people holding a vigil near the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial, carrying a banner advocating a nuclear freeze.

Despite the warming of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, members of Learnpeace, a club at Manchester High School, believe there is still a need to educate people about the danger of nuclear weapons and war, according to their adviser, William Howie, at teacher at the high school.

"We're not in immediate danger right now," Howie said. But because several countries still have the capacity to end all life on earth through nuclear weapons, educating people about peace is still important, he said.

In the club's weekly meetings, attended by about 30 students, the members educate themselves by debating issues surrounding war and peace, Howie said. He does not push his own views on students. "The only real change is going to come within them, so I try to challenge thought patterns," he said.

Not all students agree on what is the best way to achieve peace, he said. "We've had members who think peace is only maintained by a military industrial complex," he said. Matthew Daube, a senior, said he has become much more aware of what is going on in the world as a result of being part of the club. Daube said he is not a pacifist.

The purpose of the weekly vigil is to raise awareness among people in the community, according to Daube. Reactions from passersby vary, from people honking their horn or waving to show support to a man who was upset that the group was near the memorial. The group chose this spot because it is visible and was suggested by town

Budget hike is proposed for Coventry

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Town Manager John Elieser is proposing a $16,274,197 budget for the next fiscal year, a 14.9 percent increase over this year's budget.

The $16,274,197 proposed budget for fiscal 1990-91 that begins July 1, is up $2,111,100 from this year's budget of $14,163,097. It represents a 6.78 mill increase.

"Insurance costs are killing us, they are 20 percent of the (overall) increase," Elieser said Thursday.

Elieser said too, that allocations to the town's two volunteer fire departments and library are up because of higher utility costs and the need to replace equipment.

The $546,000 fire department grants include $27,000 for a newly adopted pension plan, Elieser noted.

In addition, Elieser said, the town was affected by a stewid slump in new construction, with revenue from building permits and planning and zoning permits dropping.

The grand list is up 5.6 percent but that only generates about 2 mills Elieser said.

"Plus that means I have to provide for more services, more street lights, more roads to plow," Elieser said. "We lose money on a single family home that generally does not even pay the about $6,000 cost for one (school) student."

Elieser acknowledges it is unlikely the budget will be approved by the Town Council, at the $16.5 million amount.

"The obvious targets are new programs, new positions and service reductions ... anything below 3 mills means layoffs," Elieser said, adding he has already spoken to town employees trying to prepare them for the worst.

Elieser said he already cut

School work passes easily in Coventry

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — With a vote of 733-195, townspice soundly approved a $5 million renovation and improvement project for two town schools in a referendum Thursday.

"I'm immensely relieved," Board of Education vice chairwoman Judy Halvorson, who also is chairman of the School Building Committee, said after the results were announced at the Town Office Building following the closing of the polls at 8 p.m.

Turnout was 928, about 20 percent of the 5,000 voters, larger than for recent similar referendums according to Town Clerk Ruth Benoit.

Benoit, who was the referendum moderator for District 1, rejected one ballot because it had been written on, "defaced," Benoit said.

The voter wrote "health and safety" "yes" cosmetic "no," apparently distinguishing between health and safety code renovations required by the state and refurbishments like painting. A "yes" or "no" box is supposed to be checked off.

In District 1 the vote was 312-80, one rejected, and District 2 421-115, and two ballots turned in blank.

"I'm very pleased and very anxious to get on with the work so we can get the buildings in the shape they ought to be," Halvorson said. For Halvorson the victory at the polls is the culmination of ten years of working on bringing the town schools up to building code standards.

Citizen group, insurers agree on need for health coverage

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — An unlikely coalition made up of powerful insurance executives and a grassroots citizens' group has formed behind a package of public and private initiatives that would offer affordable health insurance to thousands of state residents.

The coalition on Thursday endorsed the recommendations of a blue ribbon commission named last year to study ways to offer health insurance to the estimated 250,000 uninsured state residents.

The commission could not agree on a long-term solution, rejecting as too radical a Canadian-style system in which all state residents would receive similar coverage.

Instead, the commission recommended more modest changes, including expanded Medicaid benefits, a state-subsidized health insurance policy for disabled people and pregnant women, and private-sector changes intended to help small companies provide coverage to their employees.

Both the insurance companies and the Connecticut Citizens Action Group, a citizen group that pushed for a Canadian-style system, seemed surprised that they agreed to support the commission's recommendations.

"It's actually incredible that they agree on this," said state Rep. Miles Rapoport, D-West Hartford, a former CAG staff member.

"Today wasn't business as usual for us," said H. Craig Leroy, president of the Insurance Association of Connecticut. "Nowhere else have we come together on a task force like this anywhere in the country."

Three of the highest-ranking insurance executives in the nation appeared together at a legislative hearing to endorse the commission's recommendations. Testifying before a joint hearing of committees on insurance, public health and human services were James T. Lynn, chairman and chief executive officer of Aetna Life & Casualty, John Gummere, chairman and chief executive officer of Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Richard W. McLaughlin, president of the Travelers Insurance Co.

The plan would protect small employers with a guarantee that their insurance would not be cancelled, and would create a special "blue ribbon" policy at low rates for small businesses trying to buy coverage for the first time.

The plan also calls for additional state and federal spending to expand Medicaid benefits, to create a state subsidized program to insure people slightly above the poverty line, and to set up a network of reduced-cost health care services.

Lynn pointed out that more than 90 percent of Connecticut residents have health insurance.

"We must, however, develop mechanisms within our pluralistic health coverage system to provide coverage to those not now covered — in Connecticut, the remaining 10 percent," he said.

White mom, black baby; sperm bank sued

NEW YORK (AP) — A white woman who wanted to have her terminally ill husband's baby has charged in a lawsuit that a sperm bank and fertility service mixed up its samples and she gave birth to a black daughter.

The woman sued Idant Laboratories Inc. and Advanced Fertility Services, saying the girl, now 3, is being subjected to racial prejudice and taunted because she does not resemble her parents.

The woman's attorney, David Gould, would not specify the charges in the lawsuit, which was filed in state Supreme Court last fall but disclosed only Thursday in an article in the New York Law Journal.

"The woman loves her daughter, but she wanted to have her husband's baby," said Gould. "She's the target of scandal and discrimination where she lives, and the little girl is being teased and taunted by her playmates. Little kids are saying to the girl, 'How come you look different than your mommy?'"

Gould cited her emotional distress in asking reporters not to disclose the name of the woman, whose husband died of cancer in April.

The couple paid Idant to store the husband's sperm in 1985 after he was diagnosed with Ewing sarcoma, a cancer that requires chemotherapy the couple feared could damage his sperm, according to the lawsuit.

"As my husband's illness progressed," the woman was quoted as saying in court papers, "I decided that having his child was the bond that would link us together forever."

In March 1986, the woman contacted Advanced Fertility Services to get the sperm samples from Idant and use them for insemination.

Advanced Fertility and Idant disagree about what happened then.

Robert Whitaker, a lawyer for Advanced Fertility, said the sperm samples it used to inseminate the woman came from Idant.

Idant's president, Dr. Joseph Feldschuh, said the sperm used by Advanced Fertility was not from the sample his company provided.

The child was born in December 1986, and soon after, "It became apparent that she was not my husband's child," the woman said.

Feldschuh said the DNA of the husband's sperm stored at Idant does not match the child's DNA.

"The DNA tests done in this case definitively establish that the problem was not with Idant labs," Feldschuh said. "The child is not from our donor."

Whitaker refused to comment on the child's paternity, saying he had not seen any DNA test results.

Under New York law, the woman will have to prove which party is at fault. If the case goes to trial, the defense could try to suggest that neither defendant is at fault, that the woman conceived the child in an extramarital affair and not as a result of an insemination procedure.

Gould said that because of the likely scandal, the woman would never have sued had it been up to her. He suggested that her request for cooperation in a state case against Idant resulted in her case becoming public.

Unemployment steady despite gain in jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.3 percent for the ninth consecutive month despite the biggest increase in jobs in 20 months, the government said today.

The Labor Department said a survey of employers showed a seasonally-adjusted, non-farm job gain of 372,000, the largest since June 1988. And, the department revised its figure for January to a gain of 332,000, up from an earlier estimate of 275,000.

February marked the first increase in factory jobs in 11 months. Manufacturing payrolls added 90,000 workers.

The department cautioned that the job gain, as measured by its survey of employers, was heavily influenced by temporary factors and probably overstates the underlying strength of the economy.

About all of the manufacturing gain was attributed to the return of auto workers after a temporary layoff in January. Factory employment elsewhere was lackluster.

Construction payrolls swelled by 60,000 jobs, the result of unusually mild weather for most of February.

A separate survey of households showed a seasonally adjusted

Thoughts

"Open my lips, O Lord, and my mouth shall proclaim your praise." Psalm 51:16

When we hear the word "stewardship," many of us involved in churches and synagogues immediately think of money. We are taught in our congregations that money is a gift from God of which we are but the "stewards." We are thus called to be faithful stewards by giving this money back to God to support God's work in the world. It is not the money that is important, but the faithfulness of the steward. But what about the other aspects of our lives? Prompted by the poet of the above lyrics, I wonder: are we not also to be stewards of our lips, our conversation?

What would it mean to be a faithful steward of our speech? What would it mean to speak as if our lips were not ours alone, but God's? Would it change some of the things we say — the comments we make about others, the way we spend our energy on so-called "idle chitchat?"

Coventry parents fault board for cutting transitional grades

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Some parents blasted the Board of Education Thursday night for cutting the transitional grades at the two elementary schools when they recently slashed $400,000 from their budget for the next fiscal year.

The $10.1 million budget for fiscal 1990-91, which begins July 1, also was reached with some staff cuts, and was approved by the board in February.

"We are against the transitional grades being cut," said Pat Cote, a parent, during the meeting at Coventry High School.

Woman charged with fabricating harassment info

By Staff and wire reports

When Nancy Kelley returned from vacation in Florida to her upper-middle class home at 66 Joan Circle Thursday night, she knew the fun was over.

What she didn't expect was to see her name plastered on a newspaper's front page today, telling the world she was accused of fabricating evidence that landed a former troublemaker and teen-age neighbor in jail for over two weeks.

It's been a rough two years," said the 36-year-old Kelley, referring to time that has passed since Sheldon L. Gerstenfeld, 20, who used to live across the street from her, first engaged in a mysterious allegation that since has escalated into a harassment war and eventually led to both of their arrests.

Richard, described by his former Joan Circle neighbors as a young man who often squealed around the neighborhood in a souped-up, brightly yellow Dodge, leaving rubber tire burn marks in the street and revving up the car's engine to the point where neighbors were disturbed, moved last year with his family to a new home in Colchester.

Now, the latest news related to Richard has shocked residents of this quiet and pleasant-looking neighborhood. Kelley, apparently very upset with the young man, wanted him put behind bars.

Aware that police were putting together a warrant for her arrest before she went on vacation, Kelley turned herself in to Manchester police Thursday night, police said.

She is charged with 16 counts of fabricating physical evidence and 16 counts of falsely reporting an incident in a scheme which police say was designed to lock up Richard again, police said.

Most of us find it challenging enough to try to be faithful stewards of money. But what about the other aspects of our lives? Prompted by the poet of the above lyrics, I wonder: are we not also to be stewards of our lips, our conversation?

What would it mean to be a faithful steward of our speech? What would it mean to speak as if our lips were not ours alone, but God's? Would it change some of the things we say — the comments we make about others, the way we spend our energy on so-called "idle chitchat?"

Catholic schools merge

By Staff and wire reports

STAMFORD — A new consolidation plan for Norwalk's Catholic schools is being announced today. The Diocese of Bridgeport announced on Thursday that the three elementary schools will close this fall and consolidate. Classes will be held in Central Catholic High School, which has 404 students in a building made for 900.

Similar realignments have been taking place across the country in face of declining enrollments and increased expenses.

In Manchester, Peggy Siegmund, superintendent of the Diocese of Bridgeport, said there has been a decline in freshman enrollment for several years. "Three years ago, we had about 1000 students. Now we have close to 800," she said.

Siegmund believes the decline is due to demographics, a decline in the birth rate several years ago that now means a smaller pool of eighth grade students from which East Catholic draws its freshman class.

The trend is beginning to turn around, however, Siegmund said. Though the school does not have exact figures yet on the enrollment for 1990-1991, it appears that the same number or a greater number of students will be enrolling than last year, she said.

At least one Catholic elementary school in town has been expanding in enrollment. "I'm afraid I'm going to have to turn people away from our primary grades," Sister Helen Hart, the principal of Saint Bridget School, said. Twenty-three students were enrolled in the kindergarten in 1987, and it now has reached its limit of 30 students, Hart said.

St. Bridget was a junior high school until 1979, but by the fall will be a kindergarten through eighth grade school, Hart said that interest in Catholic education in the Manchester area is strong. "Parents want a continuation of the values they teach at home in the school," she said.

Hart said she had heard no discussion of any Manchester schools being closed or regionalization. Other Catholic schools include St. James School and Assumption.

Brother John McGovern, superintendent of Catholic schools for the Archdiocese of Hartford, said he does not have specific figures on Manchester schools available now, but said that enrollment for the largest in the state with 24,026 students in 100 schools.

Declining enrollment has led to the development of regional systems in Stamford, Bridgeport and Greenwich, said Monsignor Nicholas V. Grice.

He said the Bridgeport diocese

Some new board members had complained at previous meetings it was an "elitist" program and wanted it cut.

However, Dizeck noted many lessons and projects begin in the CEP classes, then flow over to the rest of the student population if they are successful.

"I like to try ideas out with the talent pool first just to see how they fly," said Dizeck. The CEP is from grades 3 through 8. Out of 721 students, 146 students — 20 percent — are in the "talent pool" identified as gifted. Gifted is defined, Dizeck said, as a student with three characteristics: above-average ability, creativity and task commitment.

He cited projects that have been extended from CEP to the other students such as a court visit which includes seeing a jail cell. Dizeck said it was a popular activity with the kids that "leaves a strong impression."

Also, the ham radio club is now open to local adults due to its popularity. Other projects include debates, playwriting, a Soviet pen pal project, and various science activities.

Dizeck said his room is also often used by all students as a resource room.

Benefit auction needs more aid

COVENTRY — The town Historical Society is seeking items for an auction planned for April 28, says the fund-raising committee chairman Rose Fowler.

"We have to know by March 31 if we'll have enough items to auction off or we'll have to cancel," Fowler said this week.

The auction is the Historical Society's major fund-raising event of the year. It is scheduled to be held at the Strong House Museum on South St., not far from the home-site of Revolutionary War hero Nathan Hale.

Fowler said the society welcomes donations of collectibles, antiques,

North set to open testimony in trail of his former boss

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter's lawyer says the former national security adviser may be guilty of bad memory but did not deliberately lie to Congress about secret arms shipments to Iran.

Oliver North, a former National Security Council aide, takes the stand today as testimony opens in Poindexter's trial before U.S. District Judge Harold Greene.

In an opening statement Thursday, defense attorney Richard Becker denied that Poindexter engaged in a criminal cover-up of the Iran-Contra affair, declaring that he was acting under President Reagan's orders.

Becker said Congress was fully informed of North's secret Contra re-supply network and that Poindexter labored to provide Congress with the story of the Reagan administration's Iran initiative once it became public during November 1986.

"Why would anybody have to hide and deceive?" asked Becker. "The answer is that Poindexter didn't have to hide. The answer is there was nothing illegal."

Earlier Thursday, prosecutor Dan Webb said, "John Poindexter and Oliver North decided to renege on the history of the Iran-Contra affair" through a conspiracy of "cover-up, deception and concealment."

Poindexter and North tried to cover up a 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels to "avoid tarnishment of the Reagan administration," Webb said.

But Becker told the jury Poindexter

Rafsanjani: hoax proves Iran's stature

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush was the victim of an elaborate hoax last month when he tried to speak by phone to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani to discuss the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon, the White House says.

An impostor, and not Rafsanjani or a representative of his government, was on the other end of the line, officials said.

"We don't really know" who was behind the prank, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "This was the first time that this has happened."

Rafsanjani said today that the incident shows how important Iran is in the world.

"Iran's stature in the world is so high that the biggest bully, the most arrogant nation in the world is engaged in an effort to contact Iran," Rafsanjani said in a sermon broadcast on Tehran Radio and monitored in Nicotia, Cyprus.

The incident "shows that the U.S. needs to talk to Iran, but with God's grace, it is deprived (by Iran) of this blessing," Rafsanjani said.

Fitzwater and other White House officials said the bizarre chain of events began when a man identifying himself as an Iranian government official called the White House to say that Rafsanjani wanted to talk to Bush about U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

"The call came in, a number was given for us to call. We were suspicious and began checking," Fitzwater said. "But, ultimately, the president needed to make the call as part of the check. He did make the call."

The initial call came to national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, White House aides said. The episode was first reported Thursday by CBS News.

Fitzwater said the fact that the call turned out to be a hoax is unfortunate, but that Bush — who frequently speaks to foreign leaders by telephone — remains determined to "talk to anybody, anytime, any place" to try to gain the release of the hostages.

Eight Americans, including Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and 10 other Westerners are being held hostage in Lebanon.

Most of them are believed to be held by factions loyal to Iran.

The disclosure of the hoax came amid a flurry of recent reports on hostage-related developments.

Although he was tricked once, Bush would do the same thing again if he thought it would help with the release of the hostages, his spokesman said.

"If a call came through at some future point that we believed was real, he would take it," Fitzwater said. "The president has made it known he's willing to talk to Iran at any time. And the ball is in their court. So it's up to them to signal a willingness to talk."

The Bush administration contends that Rafsanjani's government has influence with those holding the hostages.

Fitzwater said the administration has let Rafsanjani know "through diplomatic channels as well as publicly, that we're willing to talk whenever they're ready. And they have come back and said, 'we're not ready.'"

Becker said Congress was fully informed of North's secret Contra re-supply network and that Poindexter labored to provide Congress with the story of the Reagan administration's Iran initiative once it became public during November 1986.

"Why would anybody have to hide and deceive?" asked Becker. "The answer is that Poindexter didn't have to hide. The answer is there was nothing illegal."

New hires complicate Greyhound pact talks

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc.'s hiring of replacements for its striking bus drivers shows how management has shifted the rules of labor conflict in the nine years since President Reagan broke a strike by air traffic controllers.

Hiring replacements "is far different from the old strikes we used to have," said Mark Kahn, a labor arbitrator and professor emeritus at Wayne State University in Detroit.

In the past, he said, there has been "a clear-cut understanding that whenever the dispute is ironed out, those workers will go back to work and the company will resume its operations. This tends to create a relatively civilized atmosphere in which answers can be worked out."

The use of replacements could prolong the strike because it "makes it far more difficult for the union to agree to a settlement under which many of its members won't come back to work," Kahn said.

Greyhound said the replacements will keep their jobs regardless of how the strike is settled.

By contrast, to make room for returning union members after a 47-day walkout in 1983, Greyhound — then under a different ownership — fired the replacements it had hired during the strike.

Replacements are "indicative of some of the more bitter, confrontational disputes that we are seeing," said Mike Jadell, an arbitrator and a professor at Georgia State University in Atlanta.

Abortion refugees discovering Bush policy a hollow promise

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — With a stroke of his pen last fall, President Bush invited people fleeing countries where population control is accomplished by forced abortions and sterilizations to seek asylum in the United States.

But a Chinese family that is apparently the first to accept that invitation is beginning to wonder whether it was made sincerely.

The order enabled Li Jin Lin and his family, who previously had been separated and threatened with jail, the right to live and work temporarily in the United States.

Government officials refuse to say what's holding the case up, but the family's lawyer, Kathleen Rimar, said she is beginning to doubt Bush's commitment to protecting Chinese refugees.

"These four Chinese people came here right at the worst time," Rimar said. "They seem to be the testing case for whether this is going to work. So far, I think the executive order isn't doing very well."

Bush's directive allows foreign nationals who are fleeing forced abortion or sterilization policies to apply for political asylum in the United States.

The directive, though not specifically for Chinese, was part of a Nov. 30 order allowing many Chinese citizens to remain in the United States indefinitely after the June

Chain denies labor abuses

MIAMI (AP) — Stunned by allegations of child labor law violations, Burger King Corp. said it has strict policies governing young employees but would review the rules at its U.S. restaurants.

An executive at the nation's No. 2 fast-food chain called the Labor Department suit "a complete surprise," adding: "We fully support the spirit and letter of the law."

"This is the first time we have received any indication of alleged violations," said Nigel Travis, senior vice president for human resources.

Burger King, a subsidiary of Britain's Grand Metropolitan PLC, was charged in U.S. District court Wednesday with violating federal child labor laws in its more than 800 company-owned restaurants in the United States.

It was the first major suit since Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole last month announced a campaign for tougher enforcement of regulations on young workers.

"This action serves as a notice to employers that we will not hesitate to use available legal processes, in addition to investigative efforts, to protect America's children," Mrs. Dole said Thursday.

Chain denies labor abuses

The lawsuit claims Miami-based Burger King assigned workers under 16 to more hours per week than permitted under federal laws and allowed the young employees to work at times of the day and in activities not allowed under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The violations began no later than 1986, the suit claims. No charges were made against Burger King's nearly 4,600 U.S. franchise outlets, which are independently owned and operated. Burger King has about 6,000 restaurants worldwide.

Federal officials say the number of child labor violations has doubled since 1982 as worker shortages in some areas pushed employers to hire more high school-age employees.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated about 901,000 14- and 15-year-olds were employed in 1988.

Under federal laws, 14- and 15-year-olds can't work more than three hours on a day when school is in session and a maximum of 18 hours during a five-day school week. On weekends, an eight-hour work day is permissible, and a 40-hour work week is allowed during summer and school vacations.

Employees under 16 can work only between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. or up to 9 p.m. from June 1 to Labor Day.

Different standards apply for farm labor.

The suit seeks to enjoin Burger King from all child labor law violations in its U.S. restaurants. It also asks the company to pay all legal costs associated with the suit.

Get off the dime on Rt. 6

J. William Burns, the state's commissioner of transportation, acted strong language Wednesday in his comments on the impasse over plans for a highway through Eastern Connecticut.

He sharply criticized the Army Corps of Engineers, saying again that the corps does not have the expertise or the authority to say that widening the existing Route 6 is more practical than building a new highway.

And he made it clear the state will not settle for widening the road through the towns along its path.

"I won't participate in a major widening of Route 6 through these communities," Burns said bluntly.

That kind of attitude in exactly what his audience of about 100 local political leaders and citizens wanted to hear.

Burns made it clear the state will continue to fight for rerouting the road.

His attitude suggests that there will be no early solution to a problem that has already lingered too long.

The Army Corps of Engineers objects to the state's plan for a new road because it requires filling in about 77 acres of wetlands. The state has hired a consulting firm to study alternatives to the plan and it appears possible to build a new road in such a way as to affect only 40 acres of wetlands.

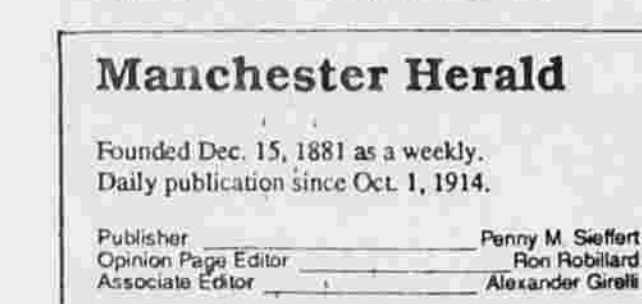

The tradeoff, according to William Lazarek, the DOT's deputy commissioner, is some compromise in safety because part of the highway would have only concrete barriers to separate eastbound and westbound lanes.

Some of the people attending the meeting Wednesday in the Legislative Office Building, concerned over safety, were not enthusiastic about that prospect.

Joseph Gill, former commissioner of the state's Department of Environmental Protection, observed that "the environment includes people and a safe environment is safe for people."

Gill may have a point, but it's time the DOT and the corps, both of whom have legitimate concerns, reach a compromise to this standoff.

The alternative is more politics and more confrontation. We have had enough of that.

It costs to stand up
To the Editor:
The old adage "You can't fight city hall" is apparently true in this town if you are a neighborhood group in opposition to a developer's plans before the Planning and Zoning Commission. Our neighborhood has been working since November to oppose an application for development of 27 acres of land abutting our homes. We have had the burden of informing neighbors of the proposal and engaging professionals (an attorney, appraiser, environmentalist, a traffic consultant and a graphic artist) to address the legal issues involved. We have endured subsequent changes in the proposed plans which required alterations in our presentation. We have arrived to become a cohesive group and obtained more than 200 signatures of "concerned parties" on petitions. The public hearing date has been changed three times necessitating communication to inform all members of the change. Finally, three days before the last scheduled hearing, the plans have been withdrawn with the inference they will be re-submitted after technical changes are made. At that time no one from the town planner's office made any attempt to contact representatives from our group — people who have been working closely with this office since December. Several concerned members had made plans to fly in from Florida for the day they were so committed to the cause!

This move by the developer has now rendered all our petitions invalid and will force us to redo our presentation. More than 200 people will have to reschedule their plans for the third time to accommodate the new hearing date. There is no guarantee the above scenario will not occur again and again.

I strongly urge you to take a good look at this process in which "city hall" and the developer hold all the cards. No wonder we are losing our "City of Village Charm!"

AFTER A FEW MINUTES WITH ANDY ROONEYS FANS...

Cooperation key to success

By John B. Larson
In the 1930s, when the United States was struggling to emerge from depression, Europe suffered even deeper economic turmoil which led to violent political upheaval. An analogy was adapted which implied that when the United States sneezes, Europe catches a cold.

The Northeast, in general, is suffering from economic influenza and we need a remedy for the situation. Our state's economic ills come less from within but are affected by outside factors including national and regional influences. Although we need input from Washington, support from the federal government has not been forthcoming. It is through our own initiative that we must find a cure to our economic ailment.

Connecticut's current case of economic influenza is directly attributable to three sneezes.

From Washington, reductions in defense outlays turned manufacturers' headlocks into migraines when defense contracts fell from 12 percent in 1982 to six percent today, with defense dependent states, Connecticut is feeling the strain.

Manufacturing, representing 50 percent of the state's labor force in 1960 has declined to 25 percent in 1988. In 1989 alone, approximately 1,550 defense jobs were lost in the state.

In New York, temperatures rose to a fevered pitch when the stock market plunged in 1987. While Dow Jones has recovered from the crash, the financial industry is still feeling the repercussions.

Investor doubts, plagued by the market's volatility caused tens of thousands of layoffs in vital sectors of the financial community as witnessed by the downsizing of insurance and banking industries in Connecticut.

Massachusetts' economy took a turn for the worse when the computer and high-tech industries, which once proudly re-located after technical changes are made. At that time no one from the town planner's office made any attempt to contact representatives from our group — people who have been working closely with this office since December. Land gobbled up

To the Editor:
The recent approval by the Manchester Planning & Zoning Commission to allow 81 homes to be built on 70 acres of land behind the Shady Glen restaurant seems to be the first step for an active Land Conservation Commission in Manchester.

Thanks to the rising prices of homes during the last decade, developers have been devouring land at an unprecedented pace. Unfortunately, developers build homes for people at the expense of other species that inhabit this earth, including many indigenous animals that make their homes in the area behind Shady Glen: white-tail deer, cottontail rabbits, snapping turtles, raccoons and a variety of snakes.

Most of Manchester's adjacent towns including Glastonbury and South Windsor have attempted to impede the encroachment of civilization on nature by establishing a Land Conservation Commission with the necessary funds to acquire farms, meadows and wooded areas. Voters of these towns were apparently fed up with the insid-

Do-gooders are killers in disguise

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — George Alexander, a third-generation mill worker, was just starting his shift at the Louisiana-Pacific lumber mill in Cleveland, Calif., when the log that would alter his life rolled down his conveyor belt toward a high-speed saw he was working on.

It was May 1987, and Alexander was 23. His job was to split logs. He was nearly three feet away when the log hit his saw and the saw exploded. One half of the blade stuck in the log, the other half hit Alexander in the head, tearing through his safety helmet and face shield. His face was slashed from eye to chin, his jugular vein was nearly severed. His teeth were smashed and his jaw was cut in half.

Alexander had never even heard of a sabotage tactic called tree spiking until he became a victim of "eco-terrorism."

Someone who objected to tree cutting had imbedded a huge steel spike in the log that violently jammed the saw.

Now the whole timber industry knows and searching for tree spikes has become a fact of life in lumber mills across the country.

After years of fruitless battles in court and pleas that fall on deaf ears in Congress, some radical environmentalists are using guerrilla warfare to save the woods.

Armed with spikes, bolt cutters and sledgehammers, the growing militant faction is combing the countryside disrupting timber, mining and ranching operations, all in the name of protecting Mother Earth.

Tree spikes are among the most vicious of the strategies. While the tree is still in the forest, the spike is driven in at an angle so the hidden blades in the bark. It can shatter a chainsaw on impact sending pieces of razor-sharp steel flying.

The purpose of tree spiking is not to hurt anybody, it's to keep trees from being cut," says Dave Foreman, co-founder of Earth First, the most radical arm of the environmental movement.

Since its formation in 1980, Earth First has lived by the slogan "No Compromise in Defense of Mother Earth." Its followers have been known to chain themselves to trees, lie down in front of bulldozers and vandalize machinery.

Many Earth First followers don't take part in the eco-sabotage, but the tactics advocated by the group have made it the target of FBI scrutiny. Foreman and company are currently awaiting trial on a charge of conspiracy to tear down an electric tower.

He established a book, "Eco-defense: A Field Guide to Monkeywrenching," and it is an underground best seller. He borrowed the term "monkeywrenching" from the late Edward Abbey whose book "The Monkey Wrench Gang," romanticized environmental sabotage.

Foreman's book includes diagrams for proper tree spiking and instructions on how to cut down power lines, flatten tires, burn machinery, jam locks and set sink bombs. "...this is where the occult can have fun," Foreman wrote.

This kind of "fun" brings the radicals into direct conflict with mainstream environmentalists. Eco-saboteurs told our reporter Melinda Mass that they think militant tactics will bring quicker results and that the mainstream plodders are selling out. The moderates fear that monkeywrenching sets back the entire environmental movement.

While the environmentalists argue about the best way to save the trees, the timber cutters have more important things to worry about — saving their own lives. They have turned to metal detectors, increased security and rewards for the capture of eco-saboteurs.

Congress has helped the timber cutters with a law passed last year imposing a life prison sentence on the culprit if a tree spike kills a logger.

The book on banks
Bank regulators have a recurring nightmare: What if one of America's biggest banks or savings and loans should go belly up? There isn't enough money in the U.S. Treasury or the deposit insurance system to bail them out. Banking regulators are alarmed over the prospect for large banks with heavy Third-World debt and real-estate loan portfolios. Real estate is in a slump across the country. That, combined with a sluggish economy, could ruin many big banks. Should one of the giants fail, the government might have to dole out billions of dollars in plans calling for the nationalization of the biggest banks until a permanent solution could be found.

Mini-editorial
The Pentagon is falling all over itself to spend $3 billion on the MX and Midgetman missile systems this year. But the three respected insiders, all of whom once enthusiastically backed mobile missiles, now say they aren't needed, and the country can save billions of dollars to boot, it sounds like good advice.

Synthetic molecule attacks viruses; human use way off

WASHINGTON (AP) — A molecule created in a California laboratory has shown in a test tube experiment that it can ambush the AIDS virus and keep the deadly disease from spreading, according to a study published today.

Dr. John J. Rossi, a researcher at the Bechman Research Institute of the City of Hope in Duarte, Calif., reports in the journal Science that his laboratory has made a synthetic ribozyme that can genetically cripple the AIDS virus and prevent it from reproducing.

The ribozyme, said Rossi, "is inside the cell and it's waiting there like a soldier waiting for the enemy to come."

Ribozymes eventually could be useful in combating AIDS and other virus infections, he said, but the technique is still years away from being ready to treat patients.

Rossi, in a telephone interview, said his team first developed the ribozyme and then made a gene that instructed cells to make the molecule.

The synthetic gene then was placed into living human cells in test tubes and the cells were exposed to the AIDS virus. Rossi said the ribozyme was able to block the AIDS virus from reproducing inside the cells.

The ribozyme works like "molecular scissors" that slice the ribonucleic acid of the AIDS virus, thus blocking the virus from making copies of itself.

Ribonucleic acid, or RNA, is used by the virus to force cells to make more virus. By cutting the RNA, said Rossi, the virus is permanently crippled.

The ribozyme itself is a copy of an RNA that other scientists found in a plant virus. Those researchers discovered that a small part of the plant virus RNA acted like an enzyme and was capable of selectively cutting any part of the genetic pattern in a target virus.

The team ribozyme refers to an RNA that acts as an enzyme by permitting a reaction to occur within a cell.

Rossi said a major advantage of the ribozyme is that after it attacks and cuts the RNA in one virus, the molecule releases itself and then can attack other virus particles.

"It can do it again and again and again," said Rossi. "It is like one soldier cutting down 10 or more of the enemy."

The ribozyme can be designed to attack any part of the viral RNA and leave other portions alone. Rossi said he believes the ribozyme also could be used to combat virtually any kind of virus, including those that cause colds and flu.

"It could be used to treat any virus at all because they all use RNA," he said. "By destroying the RNA, you can inactivate the viral function."

Rossi said two other laboratories now plan to test his ribozyme in combating viruses in laboratory animals.

Even if it proves effective in animals, Rossi said the ribozyme cannot be used against AIDS until some way is found to introduce the synthetic gene clinically into humans, a technique that could take years to develop.

He said researchers must find a way to assure that the ribozyme gene goes directly to the proper place within the target cells. He said there are several theoretically possible ways of doing this, but none is ready for tests.

Lithuanian nationalists slate vote on secession for Sunday

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuanian nationalists said today their republic's legislature still plans to vote this weekend on whether to secede from the Soviet Union, contradicting an early report that the move had been postponed.

Lienginas Vasylyauskas, spokesman for the Sajudis people's movement, said the Supreme Soviet legislature will vote on a declaration of independence Sunday. Sajudis members have a two-thirds majority in the newly elected legislature.

He disputed a report by Eduardas Pozashtinkas, an editor at Lithuanian government-run television, who said the parliament would vote on a declaration of independence Sunday.

Pozashtinkas, who has previously supplied accurate information, said nationalists had dropped plans to vote on a declaration this weekend and instead seek the proclamation "in the nearest future."

The Lithuanian parliament is scheduled to meet Saturday, with a secession vote on the original agenda.

A vote on a proclamation of independence would bring the Baltic republic into conflict with the Kremlin, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had warned this week that Lithuania would own the central government about $4 billion in convertible currency for investments made in the 50 years since the Kremlin imposed the once-independent state.

Tass quoted Lithuanian's president, Algirdas Brazauskas, as saying such a payment "would be an extremely difficult task."

Gorbachev reportedly indicated Moscow may demand Lithuania turn over the port of Klaipeda if allowed to secede, as well as a small section around Drushkinai in extreme south Lithuania.

Sajudis, buoyed by its sweeping victories in Lithuania's recent elections, has decided to force the issue of secession, a right granted in theory by the Soviet Constitution to each of the country's 15 republics.

Pro-secession sentiment in Lithuania has been swelling for months, but Sajudis moved this week to preempt Gorbachev's plan to introduce a vastly more powerful presidency with the right to crack down on restive republics.

The national Congress of People's Deputies is scheduled to meet Monday in Moscow to consider the presidency proposal. The latest Sajudis decision would provide time to work out a compromise between the Kremlin and representatives from republics like Lithuania and Georgia.

civilian jobless rate of 5.3 percent. The unemployment rate for auto workers, which had zoomed to 20 percent in January, fell back to 8 percent last month.

Overall, total civilian employment edged up to 118 million. The index numbered 6.6 million above the same as January.

The average manufacturing work week held steady in February at 40.7 hours. Overtime fell slightly from 3.7 hours to 3.6 hours.

The service sector of the economy added 221,000 jobs, including a gain of 47,000 for health services, 28,000 in government, 17,000 in retail trade and 15,000 in finance real estate and insurance.

Average hourly earnings posted a 0.6 percent rise in February to $9.87, up from $9.52 a year earlier.

Over the rest of this year, many economists forecast a rise in unemployment, but not a big one. The consensus of 51 economists surveyed by the Sedona, Ariz.-based Blue Chip Economic Indicators was for a 5.6 percent rate this year.

That's a shade less optimistic than the Bush administration, which expects a 5.4 percent rate, but in line with Federal Reserve policy-makers, who foresee a rate between 5.5 percent and 5.75 percent.

The Federal Reserve, aiming to reduce inflationary pressures, used relatively high interest rates to hold economic growth to an annual 1.9 percent in the final three months of last year. But that hasn't been enough to drastically affect the job market.

"What's happening is the growth of the economy has been rapid enough to absorb the new labor supply, but not so rapid as to reduce it," said economist Samuel Kahn of Fuji Securities Inc. in Chicago.

A recession this year could drive unemployment up to 6 percent, while stronger-than-expected growth could drive it below 5 percent, Kahn said. However, most analysts see the economy remaining sub-par but skirting a contraction, thus keeping unemployment stable.

While a steady unemployment level is good news for wage earners, it may prove to be bad news when the same workers try to stretch their paychecks. A low jobless rate will fuel rising wages, which in turn will make it hard for the Federal Reserve to lower the consumer inflation rate appreciably below last year's 4.6 percent.

The unemployment rates among major demographic groups last month were:

•Adult white men, 4.1 percent, up from 4 percent in January.

•Adult white women, 4.1 percent, up from 4 percent.

•White teen-agers, 13.0 percent, up from 12.7 percent.

•All blacks, 10.5 percent, down from 11.3 percent.

•Adult black men, 9.2 percent, down from 11.2 percent.

•Adult black women, 9.4 percent, up from 9.2 percent.

•Black teen-agers, 28 percent, up from 26.7 percent.

•Hispanics, 7.8 percent, up from 7.1 percent.

In a separate calculation of unemployment that counts members of the armed services stationed in the United States, the February jobless rate was 5.2 percent.

police, Daube explained. In addition to their vigil and discussions at the meetings, the group has taken concrete steps to put their idealistic beliefs into action, Daube said. They have started a recycling program at the high school, he said, which is a way of maintaining peace with the environment.

Several members helped build houses in Norwich and New London for poor people as part of a program called Habitats for Humanity.

The club has been involved in a sister city project with Oenot, Nicaragua, sending goats to that war-torn country, he said. Peace is not the only issue in Leampeace, Howie said, because war stems from the inequality that exists in the world and the frustration it brings.

The group has been in existence for over 10 years, but did not officially become a club until last spring, Howie said.

Daube said that the reaction from other students in the school to Leampeace was generally positive and that young people are interested in social issues. "Kids our age don't get enough credit for caring. There are a lot of people at the school who care," he said.

Howie, who has been a teacher at MHS for 20 years, said that the concern of young people today is different from that of his own generation during the 1960s. "In the sixties, they were angry," he said. Because their brothers and friends were being killed in Vietnam, issues of war and peace were very real to students, Howie said.

Today, students approach the issue from a more intellectual standpoint, he said.

"Howie, who grew up in the south, said he was very militaristic when he was young, going through four years of a military academy. He was not sent to Vietnam, but people he knew were killed there, and that began to change his mind about the war."

Work at Coventry Grammar School will cost $2,650,000 and work at Capt. Nathan Hale School will cost $2,200,000. After receiving assessments from the state, according to Halverson, the final cost to the town will be $2,184,000.

Newfield Construction of Hartford will do the work. Coventry High School and G.H. Robertson have already been redone.

CCAG political director Ehan Rome estimated the programs, if fully funded by $24 million in state money in the budget year that begins in the summer of 1991, would bring health insurance to 60,000 state residents now uninsured.

"We hope the Legislature will realize how remarkable it is that the commission came to agreement on this," Rome said. He acknowledged, however, "It's impossible, really, to spend $24 million in the first year."

Leroy was hesitant to estimate how many uninsured people would benefit from the program, but said the number would reach into "the tens of thousands."

He was also hesitant to predict how quickly the Legislature will enact the entire program.

"I think we're going to make a down payment this year," he said. "But you have to remember, there are budget realities."

The budget includes $4,567,843 for general government, up $546,820; $10,149,331 for Board of Education, up $1,258,100; $1,146,036 for debt service, up $205,674; $131,000 for capital expenditures, up $13,000.

Elesser will formally present the budget to the Town Council at a special meeting Monday at the Town Office Building at 7:30 p.m.

The council will meet with the Board of Education and department heads at meetings over the next few weeks.

A public hearing on the budget will likely be held March 26 at Coventry High School at 7:30 p.m.

Ultimately the budget goes to the voters at the Annual Town Meeting May 11, which is traditionally petitioned to an adjourned referendum.

Senate leaders decide to delay effort to complete clean air bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders today abandoned efforts to complete key parts of a clean air bill before an upcoming weeklong recess after a dispute emerged over whether the government should provide $700 million in assistance to coal miners.

The coal miner assistance proposal, aimed at helping workers who lose their jobs because of tougher acid rain emission controls, threatened a compromise agreement on clean air legislation with the White House, which has vigorously opposed the measure as being too expensive.

"It has become apparent that we cannot complete action on the bill this week," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. He said he expected the remainder of the day to focus primarily on the coal miner assistance proposal.

Senate leaders had been prepared Thursday night bring the amendment, offered by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., to a vote, but when debate dragged beyond midnight action was postponed.

Mitchell said negotiations were under way with the White House to attempt to work out an agreement. But he said he was opposed to the assistance plan and said he

Bank firm names new chairman

BOSTON (AP) — Bank of New England Corp. announced today the appointment of Lawrence K. Fish as chairman and chief executive officer, as officials restructure the troubled company in an attempt to restore financial health and public confidence.

Analysts generally praised the decision to hire Fish, a former Bank of Boston Corp. executive vice president, but they warned he might not be able to rescue the bank.

"He's coming into a situation that's very grave," said Gerard Cassidy, an analyst with Tucker Anthony Inc. "If the economy does not cooperate, a miracle worker is going to have a hard time. A major part of it is out of his hands."

Fish, whose hiring was expected for more than a week, replaced Walter Connolly, who oversaw the bank's dramatic growth in the 1980s but was ousted this year after the company suffered massive losses.

Much of the trouble has been traced to the bank's aggressive lending practices during a construction boom in the mid-1980s. When the economy slowed near the end of the decade, the real estate market tumbled, and the bank was saddled with a mountain of problem loans.

Last month, the bank announced its 1989 losses were $1.11 billion and also disclosed it was reviewing financial data from previous quarters to see whether larger provisions against bad loans should have been made earlier in the year.

Hartford blaze leaves one dead

HARTFORD (AP) — A fire swept through a wood-frame building early this morning, leaving one man dead and an elderly woman critically injured, fire officials said.

Fire Lt. Thomas Jacobucci said the woman had been flown to a Massachusetts hospital specializing in burns following the fire at her home on Edgewood Street near the corner of Albany Avenue.

No further details were available because investigators were still on the scene, Jacobucci said.

FINAL SCORE — Stamford Catholic's Marc Romano (9) skates to the left of the Indian net after depositing his club's seventh and final goal behind Indian netminder Ian Dalrymple in Thursday night's Division II semifinal clash at the Bennett Rink. The Indians' Jeff Grote (15) moves in too late to help.

INDIANS BLANKED in semifinals

WEST HAVEN — Manchester High goaltender Ian Dalrymple sat alone in his crease with 2:41 left in the Division II semifinal Thursday night at Bennett Rink.

Tom Gallagher's slapper from the right face-off circle had just been deflected into and then over Dalrymple, falling softly behind the goal-line.

The reality had just trickled in. Stamford Catholic was going to the Hartford Civic Center and Manchester was going home.

The final score was 7-0, but Dalrymple and the Indians did a fine job of holding down a clearly dominant team. Stamford Catholic will play Fernald, which beat Norwich 7-1 Thursday, in the Division II title game Tuesday at 6 p.m.

"I was going to make a different save," Dalrymple said of the Gallagher drive which gave Stamford Catholic a 6-0 lead. "But it was deflected in front and rolled over my blocker. It's the kind you see, but it just rolls over you."

The sixth unanswered goal was hardly the difference, but it was symbolic of Manchester's evening. The Indians played the body and cleared the slot all night, but it was Crusader available to score.

"It was a culmination of 45 minutes of a team pounding on us," Eric Pardo said, as his fifth season behind the Manchester bench ended at a very respectable 14-9.

Stamford Catholic's first three goals were scored on rebounds in the goalmouth area.

"They waited for the puck and Peter Lyden scored just 13 seconds into the power play at 2:23 of the first period to give Stamford Catholic a 1-0 lead."

Scott Winton was awarded a penalty shot when he was booked down on a breakaway at 5:16, giving Manchester a chance to tie the game. Winton appeared to have beaten Crusader goalie Shane Kinahan with a backhand, but his bid was foiled.

Kinahan's statement was clear; he and his Stamford Catholic mates had plans to play one more game. The

Leafs fall on the Whalers

HARTFORD (AP) — It isn't often that a coach can find positives for his team after allowing six goals but Toronto's Doug Carpenter found plenty of them.

"This is first time we have won here in five years," said Carpenter, after his Maple Leafs defeated the Hartford Whalers 7-6 on Thursday.

"It's great to finally win," Toronto had not beaten the Whalers at the Hartford Civic Center since Feb. 17, 1985. But the Maple Leafs ended their winless streak with a dose of offense.

The Maple Leafs, who lead the league in goals scored with 297, had been outscored 17-11 while going 1-3 in their previous three games.

"We want to get back to our old play and that is to score goals," said Carpenter.

The key to the offense against the Whalers was the play of the line of Gary Leeman, Ed Olczyk and Scott Pearson. The line combined for four goals and 11 points with Leeman posting his fourth career hat trick and increasing his seasonal goal total to 46.

Leeman said that the Maple Leafs, (33-28-7), were fortunate to win considering several ill-timed penalties which kept the Whalers in striking distance.

Leeman scored twice in the opening period to help Toronto stake a 4-2 lead. But the Maple Leafs picked up five straight penalties in the second period enabling the Whalers to tie the game at 4-4.

"We can't keep taking the penalties we're taking," said Leeman. "We have to stop taking the penalties. We want to come on and to utilize it, we have to avoid stupid penalties," said Leeman. "It can be a long time for all of us if we're forced to kill penalties."

The Whalers, clicking on 4 of 9 power-play opportunities, were able to recover from several deficits in the game. Scott Young scored twice while Ron Francis, Mike Tomiak and Mikael Andersson also had goals for Hartford, 32-29-7.

"We had our troubles defensively," said Whalers Coach Rick Ley. "We struggled and the Whalers are eight points behind the third-place Montreal Canadiens.

Hollik signs 4-year deal

HARTFORD (AP) — Robert Hollik, Hartford's first pick in last June's entry draft, has agreed to a four-year, $600,000 contract and will join the Whalers next season.

Ross, Indians in remarkable comeback win

By Len Auster Manchester Herald

WETHERSFIELD — Ed Steier, father of the 3-point shot, didn't really know what kind of a monster he created.

Manchester High can only say thanks.

The 19th-ranked Indians appeared hopelessly out of matters in its first-round Class 1L clash against No. 14 Wethersfield High. But behind three tries from sophomore Jeff Ross, they erased a 12-point fourth-quarter deficit, eventually pulling out a hair-raising 61-58 overtime decision.

The win pushes the Indians (12-9) into Saturday's second round against No. 3 Weaver High of Hartford (19-2), a 102-55 winner over Norwich Free Academy.

Manchester will visit the Owls in Hartford in a 3 p.m. affair.

Ross' fifth 3-pointer 13 seconds into the extra session gave the Indians their first lead of the night (57-54). They were able to hold onto it thanks to four free throws from junior guard Darren Goddard (19 points).

Ross, who threw up an air ball and admitted to a lack of confidence in his shot early on, would finish with 18.

"A shooter (like Ross) has to keep sticking them," Manchester coach Frank Kinel said. "We tell them if they're open they have to take the shot. When you're behind like that, you have to shoot from the perimeter (3-point land)."

Wethersfield (12-9) did most of its damage on the inside. It didn't have an answer from the perimeter. Two desperation shots in the final three seconds of the OT were off the mark.

Manchester had a dreadful first two quarters. "The first quarter we were awful," Kinel said. "But Wethersfield was playing well."

Manchester trailed 38-26 after three periods. Emil Issavi (9 points) sparked the Indians right after the half with three buckets, but he picked up his fourth foul and he would miss his fifth personal with 5:58 left in regulation.

After three, Kinel said he firmly believed his club still had a shot. "I want to like they had an insurmountable lead, but it could've because of the way we were playing offensively," he said.

The Indians trailed 40-30 at the time of Issavi's departure, leaving them without a senior on the floor.

Goddard and Dwayne Goldston, who did a terrific job taking Wethersfield's point guard Bob

East hockey protest denied by the CIAC

HAMDEN — The Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference (CIAC) hockey committee of five administrators and two coaches acted swiftly and promptly as it denied Thursday night East Catholic's appeal of its 5-4 loss to Greenwich High in a Division I semifinal.

Greenwich meets West Haven in Tuesday night's championship at the Hartford Civic Center.

"Federation rules (5-2a and 5-3a) do not permit the CIAC hockey committee to hear appeals on decisions made by game officials," CIAC executive director Mike Savage said in a prepared statement.

Rule 5-2a states the referee is the sole authority in decisions on the ice and there can be no appeal. Rule 5-3a says the official has control of all players during a game and any decisions he makes cannot be appealed.

East played the final 11 minutes and 24 seconds under protest after goalie Brendon Wheeler was assessed a 10-minute penalty for using an illegal facemask. East coach Graham Leveson called a timeout and showed the officials the rulebook which stated that Wheeler's infraction warranted a two-minute penalty. But the officials said they couldn't change the call once it was made.

Hollik, a 19-year-old center from Czechoslovakia, is regarded as one of the top junior players in the world. The Whalers, who signed Hollik Thursday, took him despite not knowing if or when he would become available.

Hollik is 6-foot-1, weighs 175 pounds and shoots left.
