Manchester schools will now inform parents before spraying any pes-ticides. Parents of Keeney Street School students this week complained that students were made ill when a pesticide from an unlabeled can was sprayed at the school. Although the state Department of Environmental Protection informed the town Health Department Thursday that the chemical used in the spraying does not pose a health risk, the incident has taught the schools a lesson, says Richard Cormier, director of pupil personnel. Cormier said the schools now know that any spraying — no matter been for "some years." how small - must be done by licensed exterminators. Deal would aid the low-income

By Alex Girelli Manchester Herald

Negotiating quietly over the past several months, the Housing Authority of Manchester, has reached tentative agreements to buy seven duplex houses in several areas of town for rental to low-income families under a federal Housing and Urban Development program. The proposed purchases are now being studied by HUD officials in Hartford and will also be reviewed by HUD offices in Washington. The negotiations were carried out

BRISTOL (AP) - Lake Comounce Festival Park will open in May with a scaled-back schedule, a new investor and a drop in admission prices, officials said. Park co-owner Joseph Balestrieri confirmed earlier this week that Boston Concessions Group owner Joseph O'Donnell is the newest investor in the park, but the announcement was formally made Thursday. The 150-year-old park is the oldest continuously operated amusement park in the country. Although park owners declined to say how much money O'Donnell is investing, Balestrieri has said the amount totals "many millions of dollars" which will be paid over several months. Park officials said some of that money will be used to help eradicate the park's bills, which total at least "There is both significant shortterm and long-term cash flow" with cination levels among older people may be little more than four in 10, another new survey shows. The national Centers for Disease Control reported that the 1989-90 flu season, now winding to a close, has been marked by a flu type especially troublesome for older people: what researchers know as A-H3N2, The CDC estimates that in the average influenza season, about 20,000 Americans are killed by the flu. But in 1984-85, the last year in which A-H3N2 was so predominant, an estimated 57,000 people died. "This year looks to me like the worst year since '84-85," said Dr. Walter Gunn, a CDC flu specialist.

Final figures aren't in; his estimate was based on the death rate so far. The U.S. flu season, which peaked in late January and early February, was characterized almost exclusively by a type A-H3N2 flu vaccine, which is recommended chiefly for people over 65 or

One student shows signs of illness which may or may not have been related to the spaying. Parents were understandable concerned about the possible effect of spaying with a chemical that could not be clearly identified because it was taken from an unmarked container.

When the problem came to the attention of school officials and the Board of Education, steps were taken to confirm that the chemical, however

WASHINGTON — The United Nations may be downplaying human rights abuses in Iran as part of an effort to free Western hostages held by Iranian-sponsored terrorists in Lebanon.

We have been reporting on the secret negotiations since last fall between Iran and Bush administration emissaries to release the hostages. The United States released tens of millions of dollars in rozen Iranian assets as a goodwill gesture that didn't work.

Now the U.N. has weighed in with a report that downplays extensive human rights violations by Iran.

The Iranians carefully choreographed the January trip to Iran by U.N. observer eynaldo Galindo Pohl and kept up the ressure on Pohl when he went home. Or Feb. 22, while Pohl was finalizing his report, an editorial appeared in the calling for the release of the hostages. On

'Steal Curtain' defense turns tide against BU

HARTFORD - Gotcha!

Sooner or later, the University of Connecticut "Steal Curtain Defense" is going to getcha. In Thursday night's first-round NCAA Tournament game with Boston University at the Hartford Civic Center, it came suddenly and swiftly after the Terriers had taken a three-point lead.

The Huskies (29-5) turned up the defensive pressure, going on a 21-1 run led by Nadav Henefeld (19 points) and Chris Smith (19 points) en route to a deceivingly easy 76-52 victory before a capacity crowd of 15,937. The Connecticut "Steal Curtain" defense totaled an 19 thefts (four apiece from Tate George and Scott Burrell and three each by Henefeld and Smith). Twenty seven Terrier turnovers were turned into 34 points by the opportunistic Huskies, who thrive on opponents' mistakes. "The first 25 minutes were very enjoyable for us," said -BU coach Mike Jarvis. "The last 15 were not."

After the Terriers (18-12) led 41-38, UConn tied it at 41-all on a Smith 3-pointer. The Huskies then scored 18 points, 13 by Henefeld who was quiet offensively in the Big East tournament, while all BU could manage was a Fred Davy free throw. In the final 16 minutes, 20 seconds, BU would score ust four baskets. "Their (BU) 3-2 matchup gave us problems. But then we had Chris run the baseline looking for the 3's and put Nadav up top," Calhoun said. "Once we started to score, "The second half we picked up the intensity of defense," Smith said. "Yes, that was one of our best HARTFORD - When Nadav flies, the University of Connecticut Huskies soar. Nadav Henefeld, the Huskies' wondrous freshman hailing from Ramat-Hasharon, Israel, put up some very mediocre numbers during the first half of Thursday night's first-round NCAA East Regional game versus 16th-seeded Boston University at the Civic Center.

An old roll top desk, two apothocarys desks full of materials, (fur, eathers, hooks) and countless cigar boxes, and shirt materials. But one thing I haven't done, and that is stopping the car to go back and pick up road kills of squirrels, ground hogs, raccoons and/or opossums. And all these years, I have tied countless trout, pan-

There aren't too many people tying them today, partly because most of the materials are difficult to get, but mostly because these most colorful of all flies, are difficult to tie. And hair wing flies do as good a job, are more durable, and can be tied in a much shorter time. Plus materials are So classics, almost a lost art, have become an artform for display, tied on extremely large hooks, and are mounted in shadow boxes and glass domes.

it with all those "cute" little toddlers in restaurants whose yelling and screaming make it impossible for other diners to carry on a conversation? Well, I have a message for her: Parents of toddlers like to eat out occasionally, too. It's nice when you can take the family out to eat and have someone else clean up the mess (and toddlers do make a mess).

DEAR ABBY: So "Indigestion in Anaheim" has had

Don't criticize toddlers for whining and crying that's what children that age do. You were no different when you were a toddler. (Ask your mother.) Adults can be loud and irritating, too, so please don't pick on tod-

OFFENDED IN PHILLY DEAR ABBY: I agree with "Indigestion in Anaheim." I, too, am tired of going to restaurants and having my evening ruined by families with small children. Here are some tips for parents:

'1) The party at the next table does not want to say '20 times to your toddler. (2) If a baby needs a shopbag of toys to keep him busy, he is too young to be g out. (3) If your child acts up, don't wait until he ts screaming at the top of his lungs. Take him outside immediately. Your waitress will be happy to pack up your leftovers and get you out of the place.

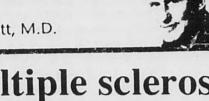

You say the reason you take your child to restaurants is to teach him how to conduct himself in a public place. Fine. There is something else your child needs to learn at an early age - respect for other people. ROYAL OAK, MICH

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Indigestion in Anaheim" People like you give me indigestion. We have three children under 5 years old, and we take them out to eat once a week. They are not always angels, but whose kids are? We are tired of the long sighs and dirty looks we ge from other diners if one of our kids acts up. We supposely avoid the "family" restaurants because they're full of kids, and it just doesn't work out. Where we come from, sitters charge by the child, which is too expensive. So when you see families with small children eating out, give us a break and don't treat us like we have some kind of contagious disease.

PARENTS WITH CHILDREN DEAR ABBY: You may have noticed that the parents of children who misbehave in restaurants are the fastest eaters in the world. My wife and I enjoy eating out but we can't always find sitters; therefore, we have to take our children with us and hope they behave. Children are unpredictable. At times, ours behave so well that strangers compliment us. Other times, we end up gulping our food and running out of the place red-

Multiple sclerosis is serious disease

What are the symptoms and treatment?

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is multiple-sclerosis virus

DEAR READER: Multiple sclerosis is a serious, progressive neurological disease of young adults, marked by weakness, stiffness, clumsiness, tingling and numbness, double vision, lightheadedness, nausea, incontinence and impotence. The symptoms typically occur in a cycle of attacks and remissions.

However, weakness eventually becomes permanent and inexorable, leading to a profound degree of handicap.. Patients may need total nursing care. When the respiratory muscles are affected, breathing must be mechanically maintained. At present, there is no treatment for MS; symptoms are treated as they arise. In the past few years, there has been considerable in terest in whether a type of virus might cause MS. In

Sea cruise ships appeal to families

Cruises for a long time were thought to be the province of old folks, newlyweds and lonely singles. Not so today. The cruise lines are competing with theme parks for family vacations. This development, as dramatic as the rising popularity

f cruising among all vacationers, is understandable. Travel has become a pocketbook issue. Increasingly, Americans are finding the cruise ships affordable, a sure way to stay within a budget. Twenty years ago the cruise lines served 500,000 passengers. In 1990, that figure will be in excess of 3.5 million, says the industry's trade association. With 36 competing lines operating 100 ships, the industry expects continued growth of more than 10 percent annually. By the year 2000, the industry projects sales of $15 billion in a potential market of more than $50 billion. Although many Americans spend 10 percent of their annual income on vacations, the cost of travel, says American Express, is the greatest inhibiting factor to travel industry growth. Even more people would travel if their time and resources permitted. Since last summer, the travel business has softened, due in part to the slack economy and inflated air fares. But with 14 new or refurbished cruise ships coming into service this year, there may be considerable excess capacity. That's good news for you. The typical oneweek cruise costs about $1,000 to $1,200 per passenger. But discounts can bring those prices down by 20 percen or more. Consolidators (frequently large travel agencies) buy up blocks of cabins and, by cutting their commissions, sell the tickets at reduced prices. Also, because of the expanded capacity or in off-peak months, the cruise lines themselves may offer substantial discounts. They are doing so right now. Cruising, one of the most popular types of vacation, is heavily promoted in the press and on TV. No wonder. Americans view Hawaii and the Caribbean as the most romantic vacation destinations. On a cruise ship you can go to either place, with little hassle, on ships that have the facilities of a luxury resort and offer the vacation features Americans most prefer: adventure, warm weather, entertainment and good food.

There's a good reason cruise lines are promoting famiy vacations. Broadening the market is their best bet to fill up the ships. The Cruise Line International Association reports that nine of 10 families who have their their children with them in recent years say they had highly satisfying experiences. It's quite an addition to the gambling casinos and night club entertainment. For families with infants, the ship JSUSVA QDII CSZBF may be equipped with cribs and high chairs, and babyitting will be available at a Carnival Cruise Lines, which GYH UHBSLDJW LA laims to book more family cruises than any other line. no time to ruff the third diamond, so South had to lose three diamonds and the club ace. But something could have been done about it.

The trump lead by West was best pose then that East ducks the first club led to the king. Declarer still ruffs the last heart, and East has the same type of discarding problem. Needless to say, if East hits upon the unusual play of ruffing a heart in front of declarer, South now makes 10 tricks by simply ruffing his third diamond.

Handy tips for covering your walls

When papering your walls, keep these helpful tips guaranteed wallcoverings in mind. When hanging a large scale patcenter the first strip over the fireplace and hang to the right. Then go back and hang to the left. If you're going around the whole room, plan to end in an inconspicuous comer.

· Never "wrap" a whole strip around inside corners, without cutting and realigning, it may look okay at first, but in a few weeks, wrinkles and creases might appear. When using no-match, plain textured wallcoverings, reverse every other strip top to bottom for uniform color.

 Never use a seam roller on flocked wallcoverings. Gently tap the seams with the edge of a · Check the run numbers on your rolls before you start to make sure they're the same, as color may vary lightly from run to run. . If you're not going to paper into he inside of an arch or frameless window or door, trim the wallcovering with your razor 1/4" from the outside edge. This will prevent fraying or pulling from the outside edge. · Ceilings, like walls, are not always "true". So plan to end the ceiling wallcovering on the less critical side of the room, like above the

· When using the same pattern on the ceiling and walls, it can only be matched one way, so choose the direction most frequently looked at. To match the pattern, trim the ceiling wallcovering so there's a 1/ 4" overlap on the sidewall. Match the first sidewall strip at the ceiling line, overlapping 2" as usual. Smooth the strip down. To trim the overlap, score it with a pencil at the joint. Pull the wallcovering back and cut on the scored line with scissors. Smooth it back down. It's matched! · Where vinyl wallcoverings overlap in corners, at ceilings, etc., you'll probably need to use a vinyl to vinyl adhesive to make them stick together. Ask your dealer.

Some prefer to buy and ac quire equity, but property values are unpredictable in today's market, as New Yorkers learned after the Wall Street crash known as Black Monday, when many saw the value of their apartments plummet by the tens of thousands of dollars.

Whether renting or buying, i there any wise way to live in a city' One factor that becomes important in cities is landmarking, not only are landmarked structures likely to be more beautiful than newer shoebox developments, chances are, where there's one landmark thee are others, even if the whole neighborhood is not preserved. landmarks cannot be torn down, and in many historic neighborhoods, thee are regulations prohibiting the construction of high rises that will ruin a million dollar view. Even those buildings that are not landmarked but possess some historical value are sound investments, provided the buildings themselves are sound. Unlike location, the popularity of which is always changing (remember that Harlem was once the most fashionable neighborhood in new York City), and other city pluses such as light and a view (which are at the mercy of the zoning board), beauty is always a marketable commodity Apartments with the most character are found in converted churches, schools, hotels, and warehouses. When renting an apartment in a metropolitan area, keep the following in mind: 1. Who is showing you the apartment? Is it the superintendant, the landlord himself, the former tenant, a real estate broker employed by the landlord or one who will charge you a fee? It is often in the interest of the person showing the apartment to keep his identity vague, making you think he has more or less power than he actually does to raise or lower the rent or to charge or waive a fee. 2. Before you sign the lease, insist that all repairs or special conditions you and the landlord have agreed upon are added as riders to the lease. This is a simple procedure that only requires your initials and his to be legally binding. Do not accept verbal consent such as "That will be repaired." Ask how, when, and with what materials, and get it in writing. If the lease says you may not have pets but the landlord says he doesn't mind, add this as a rider as well.

3. Never rent an apartment without questioning the other tenants in the building, preferably those on the same floor and side of the building as the apartment you are considering. They will give you a better idea than anyone of whether the building is suitable for you.

Wet basements a problem for thousands of homeowners

Each spring, thousands of homeowners are faced with an unpleasant side effect of seasonal rainfall: Wet base- leaks into the basement through cracks in the floor, ments. After the past year's above-average precipitation in many areas, this spring could well be worse than most.

This joint or "cove" is seldom water-Chronic basement leakage is a serious problem that can destroy personal property, furnishings and appliances, different times during the construction of the house and sometimes even cause permanent structural damage (walls are first, floors generally last). to a home's foundation. Excessive moisture also can create a breeding ground for insects, mold and mildew.

• Water also can seep laterally through the foundation walls, either because of a rising water table, or because Common causes

In many cases, this can be alleviated simply by re-grading the yard to slope slightly away from the home's grading the yard to slope slightly away from the home's

 Other common culprits include poorly positioned downspouts and missing, leaky or plugged gutters.

 There are a number of less avodable, temporary permanent solution. The best waterproofing firms will do sources of basement leakage including plumbing leakage, storm-sewer backups, outdoor flooding above ground level, and condensation caused by simple "sweating" of walls in humid weather. Normal condensation usually can be corrected with the way of a good drainage system that is constructed along the leak including plumbing a site inspection before estimating the cost of the job, and will offer a warranty on their work," Anderson said.

"The most effective method for waterproofing a basement that leaks," Anderson maintains, "is an internal drainage system that is constructed along the leakage. usually can be corrected with the use of a good drainage system that is constructed along the inside

Despite the pervasiveness of the problem, few home the ground itself is saturated after heavy rains. Foundaowners are aware of the causes of water leakage. Accord-tions in different parts of the country are constructed ing to Bill Anderson of B-Dry System, Inc., "The first from a variety of materials, including poured concrete, step in selecting effective treatment options is to discover concrete block, brick and stone. Poured concrete walls, the source(s) of basement leakage, which vary from one especially those in newer homes, are the most resistant to leakage; however, they sometimes develop cracks or air pockets that allow water to get through, in addition to Downspouts should direct water runoff from the roof to a discharge point runoff from the roof to a discharge point several feet away from the house. A downspout that is improperly positioned to drain against the side of the house allows water to build up along the foundation wall, until spot to enter the basement.

Basement leakage that is caused by a high water table or saturated ground can be corrected, according to B-Dry System, Inc. "These situations require professional attention, since this source of water leakage cannot be eliminated and, if left untreated, will eventually damage

Clean gutters

By Reader's Digest For The Associated Press

Your home's gutters and downspouts serve an important By carrying water away from the foundation, they help to prevent dampness in the basement and damage to the foundation. Water cascading over a clogged gutter can damage plants and wash away topsoil. In winter, icicles along an eave are a sign the gutters and downspouts are not functioning properly. Here's what you can do: In the spring and fall, clear gutters of leaves, twigs and other debris. Clear the gutters by hand, wearing gloves. You'll probably need to use

Wherever possible, lean the ladder against the house, not the gutter. Use a tall stepladder or add a stabilizer to your extension ladder to hold it out from the wall. Move the ladder often so you don't have to reach more than two feet on each side of the ladder.

If the upper part of a downspout is clogged, use a plumber's snake to clear it. Then, flush the gutters and downspouts with a garden hose to ensure proper water flow. To prevent future clogs, insert stainless-steel or copper leaf strainers in the top of each downspout. Overflow is often caused by improper gutter pitch (a gutter should slope downward toward the downspout) and dripping is usually a sign of sagging. Here's what to Check that the gutter is touching the overlapping shingles at the high end; adjust the gutter if necessary. · Sight along the gutter to make sure it maintains an even downward slope. You can also run water from a garden hose into the gutter. If pools of water form, look for and fix the damaged hangers or brackets that allow the gutter to sag. Tip: When adjusting the pitch of strap-supported gutters, you can raise specific areas just by twisting the straps with

 For a precise check of the gutter pitch, try this: 1. Drive a nail into the fascia (the board at the very top of the wall) 1inch below the bottom of the gutter at each end.

2. Draw a string taut between the 3. Using a line level, run a level string a few inches below the first. 4. Measure between the two lines every 4 feet. This distance should increase 1/4-inch for each 4 feet. If it does not, adjust the gutter. Starting at the downspout end, disconnect and then reconnect three or four hangers at a time. You can fix holes in a gutter with a fiberglass patching kit. Follow the manufacturer's directions and make sure the area is clean and dry so the resin bonds well.
