Man faces sex assault charge

A Manchester man has been charged with first-degree sexual assault of a 9-year-old girl, police said.

Carl White, 32, of 430 W. Middle Turnpike, was arrested Wednesday and charged with first-degree sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor after the girl's mother told police he had been molesting the girl and forcing her to watch pomographic movies, according to police reports. He was held on a $25,000 cash bond. A trial date has been set for March 22.

Willard was released on $250 non-surety bond, but was arrested again when he returned to the store and drove away in his vehicle. The police officer who made the initial arrest followed him and charged him with operating under the influence, the report said. He was released on a $500 bond, according to police.

Consumers 3 must share the blame

The Federal Trade Commission, in announcing an investigation into the environmental claims being made these days on behalf of more and more products, has selected a difficult target in its longstanding campaign against false advertising. (The task) ... promises to be tricky because deceptive environmental claims in some instances may be responses to unfounded or exaggerated

Witness some of the alarming but ill-founded things that have been said in the past year or so. There was the panic about Alar on apples - a risk that turned out to be practically nonexistent. Lately, the fear peddlers are having a field day with malathion spraying, which most scientists do not consider a threat to health, though the few dissenters get a disproportionate share of attention. And the talk of global warming goes on and on amid mounting evidence that the atmosphere really isn't heating up significantly.

concerns that may be traced to fearmongers. ...

The FTC has an obligation to protect consumers from hucksters who use phony evironmental claims to hawk their merchandise. However, it would be helpful if those consumers looked more critically at claims made by the activists and others who have agendas, if not products, to sell in the marketplace of ideas.

Dear Abby

Former friend is not welcome

DEAR ABBY: A few days ago out of the blue, I received a phone call from a man that I have neither seen nor heard from in years. We dated for two years, during which time he led me on, promising that he would leave his wife and marry me. Then his wife found out about us and he dropped me cold, refusing to accept any of my phone calls. Our beautiful love affair ended abruptly - said he just wanted to know how I was - that he had been thinking about me a great deal lately. I was so shocked and angry I told him very sharply that I had nothing to say to him and to please never call me again. Then I hung up on him.

Abby, I am now happily married to a wonderful man, and I have long forgotten any feelings I once had for this man. I also would never want my husband to know that this person was calling me.

What could have possessed this man to call me after all this time and act as though nothing was wrong? I can only imagine that he wanted to resume some kind of relationship, Perhaps I overreacted, but I was really annoyed that this man had the nerve to think that after dropping me like a hot potato, he could just walk back

Now I'm worried that he might call again, and it' very upsetting. What should I do if he calls me again? I am now happily married and I do not want to see him SHOOK IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you on behalf of my friend. Her son, not quite 2-years old, has ears that stick out very noticeably - in fact, that's the first thing you notice about this beautiful child.

Recently, she was at the grocery store when a woman she had never seen before walked up to her and said in a voice loud enough for everyone around to hear, "Boy, look at those ears! He looks like he's gonna take off!" Needless to say, my friend was shocked and hurt. She wanted to say something back to that rude stranger but didn't know what to say.

HURTING FOR HER DEAR HURTING: Since it's not possible to educate an insensitive, boorish stranger - especially with other strangers looking on - an appropriate response might have been: "Thank you, he is a beautiful child, isn't he?"

Tobacco smoke causes reaction

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 61-year-old male and have been smoking for the past 40 years. Whenever I quit, my voice gets very hoarse, and my sinuses seem to plug up. Can you explain why this happens, and is there anything I can do to prevent it? DEAR READER: I'm not sure why, after stopping cigarettes, you experience the very symptoms usually caused by tobacco smoke. However, this paradoxical reaction does occur; it is probably due to a phenomenon called "rebound." Your sinuses and upper-respiratory system reacted to the withdrawal of smoke. As an alternative explanation, your upper respiratory

Collector cars are selling fast

Remember that old '57 Buick Roadmaster you owned 5 years ago? The one with tailfins, white walls and enough chrome trim to permanently blind passerby on a sunny day? That's right, the one you drove for a few years and then traded in on a new 1965 Falcon for $450. Don't get upset, but a 1957 Buick Roadmaster just old at an auction for $42,000. Yes, 42 grand for an ancient Buick! Calm yourself. New-car sales may be slower than molasses in Alaska ht now, but the market for interesting old cars - soilled "collector" cars - is white hot. And based on the nnual Barrett-Jackson Collector Car Auction, held ecently in Scottsdale, Ariz., the market shows few signs

The event's organizers bill it as the world's largest ollector-car auction, that may or may not be so, but the Barrett-Jackson auction is the keynote for the rest of the year. Biddes come from around the world. As the auctioneers drone on from 9 a.m. to midnight for four days straight, large-screen monitors in the auction tent continuously project sales figures in five international currencies. This year, some 60,000 people attended the event, and more than $37 million changed hands - both record figures. Nearly 1,000 cars went on ie auction block and half of them were sold. The selection of cars this year was truly awesome. A otball-sized field was covered with Cadillacs and Corvettes, Duesenbergs and Delahayes, Lamborghinis and incolns, Maseratis and Mercedes, not to mention some 40 Ferraris — perhaps the ultimate collector car. And almost every car was in dazzling condition. It night make you feel better to know that unlike your old $450 Buick, that $42,000 Roadmaster was no clunker, its paint and upholstery were flawless, and its vast acreage of chrome shone like a mirror under the Arizona sun. moreover, it was a convertible, and rag-topped cars always bring the highest prices ("When the top goes down, the price goes up," is the saying.) The price of the typical car sold at the auction was

"As far as the collector-car industry is concerned, the interest and money is still there," said Thomas W. Barrett Nevertheless, a close look at the final tally sheet shows a good number of cars sold for modest sums - prices even we average wage earners might afford. True, a '59 Cadillac Biarritz convertible sold for $120,000, but a nice '55 Coupe De Ville went for $10,000. A '58 Chevy Impala "tri-power" convertible sold for $50,000, but a decent '59 Impala soft top sold for just $14,000. A spectacularly original, mint-condition '64 Pontiac GTO convertible sold for $47,500, but a presentable '67 GTO convertible went for $13,250. And while rarer Mustangs that sold for $10,000 or less.

Which is to say, that if you hanker to put a collector car in your garage, it may not be out of reach. Despite the orgy of price hikes in the last few years for the most desirable cars, there are still plenty of interesting cars available for under $15,000 or $20,000. They're probably better bets to appreciate in value than a good mutual fund, and they're certainly a whole lot more fun.
