Indians fall from top spot

Six MHS errors
cause 6-5 defeat

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Before the Manchester High baseball team could get a chance to sit down for a moment and catch its breath atop the Central Connecticut Conference East Division, after defeating East Hartford on Thursday, the Indians had their throne seats pulled out from under them by Rockville High Friday afternoon at Kelley Field.

In its third consecutive outing in 72 hours, Manchester suffered a 6-5 setback at the hands of Rockville which casts the Indians aside from first place in the league. Manchester, which saw a six-game CCC East win streak broken, and Rockville are tied at 6-2 in the league with East Hartford jumping back into first a half game in front at 6-1.

East Hartford's game Friday night with Forni was rained out.

The Indians (8-5), who lost to Rockville twice this season, will travel to Enfield to take on Forni Monday at 3:45 p.m. Rockville is 9-3 overall.

Six Indian errors led to Manchester's demise.

After Rockville scored two earned runs in the top of the first, on an RBI triple by Chris McFarlane (two runs batted in) and a sacrifice fly by winning pitcher Mike Masiotis, the Rams' final four runs were all unearned.

Losing pitcher George Covey allowed six hits, only three in the final six innings, walked two and struck out two in his complete-game effort. Rockville trounced Manchester and Covey, 21-6, on April 9.

"Our defense gave it away," Manchester coach Don Race said. "He (Covey) was shaky at first because they really belted him the last time and it took him awhile to get his confidence. He pitched a game that should have given us a victory."

With the score tied at 5-5 in the top of the sixth, Steve Mikulski reached on an error by Indian first baseman Jeff Davis and stole second base to start the frame. With one out, Neema Shaikha singled moving Mikulski to third base. McFarlane executed a perfect suicide squeeze scoring Mikulski with the eventual winning run.

Masiotis, who rejoined the team two weeks ago after being out with an ankle injury, gained the win in relief. In three innings, Masiotis gave up one hit, walked one and struck out two.

"I think we had the advantage in one way that we didn't play yesterday (Thursday) and they had East Hartford," Rockville coach Art Wheelerlock said. "As much as they (Manchester) sounded like they were up for it, it's tough with two big games in a row. Their kid pitched a heckuva game. I was happy that Masiotis came in and pitched that well. He came up to me and said he had it."

Manchester scored four runs in the third and took a 4-3 lead. Sophomore Dave White and junior Mike Gilbert each had RBI-singles in the third.

Sean Perry relieved Shakhba, the Rockville starter, with two outs in the fourth. Perry's first offering was a

Ewing scores 44 as Knicks trounce the Celtics, 135-108

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 44 points and the New York Knicks beat the Boston Celtics 135-108 Friday night to force a fifth and deciding game in their first-round playoff series.

The Knicks continued a dramatic turnaround from their humiliating loss at Boston last Saturday when the Celtics' record-setting 157-128 rout gave them a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

New York won the third game 102-99 Wednesday and sent the two teams back to Boston for Game 5 on Sunday behind the inspired performance of Ewing, who was 18-for-24 from the field and fell two points short of the Knicks' single-game playoff record, set by Bernard King.

Johnny Newman added 24 points and Gerald Wilkins had 20. Ewing had 13 rebounds after grabbing 19 and scoring 34 points in Game 3.

But the Knicks must snap a six-year, 26-game losing streak at Boston Garden to advance to the second round against Detroit, which swept Indiana in three games.

The Knicks led by eight at halftime, then took control of the game by starting the third quarter with a 27-17 run for a 92-74 advantage. The Celtics got no closer than 11 after that and trailed by as many as 37 in the fourth period.

Kevin McHale led the Celtics with 24 points, Reggie Lewis added 23 and Larry Bird had 21.

Ewing made his first eight shots and scored 20 points on 9-for-11 shooting in the first quarter, carrying New York to a 36-30 lead. Ewing scored the Knicks' first 10 points in the opening 2:33.

The Celtics held Ewing to four points in the second period and started the quarter with a 15-6 run to pull ahead 45-42 with 8:47 remaining in the half.

Multi-family housing tops

In '89, multi- exceeded single-family units: 1711 to 112

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

The number of multi-family units approved for development in Manchester exceeded the number of single-family homes in 1989, and may have set a record high, according to a report by the town planning office.

"Multi-family units were the most visible element of development activity other than the mall going up," Lynne Fike DiSanto, principal planner for the town, said.

In 1989, the PZC approved 112 single-family homes and 1711 multiple-family units, according to the report.

DiSanto will present the report at the meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission tonight at 7 at the Lincoln Center hearing room.

Overall, the number of residential units approved in 1989 increased dramatically over 1988.

In 1988, 725 units were approved: 377 of these were single-family units, 242 multi-family units and 106 duplex units.

In 1989, no duplexes were approved, the report said.

The greatest contributor to the increase in multi-family units were the Town Pavilions, near the mall, which contain 932 units. "They had a significant impact on numbers. That's a lot of units," DiSanto said.

Over the past decade, Manchester has seen a narrowing in the difference in the amount of single-family homes versus multi-family units, she said. In 1980, the census showed that about 57 percent of the housing in Manchester was single-family homes, while 43 percent were multi-family or duplexes.

Now the split is 52 percent single-family versus 48 percent duplex or multi-family.

A number of factors may contribute to the increase in multi-family housing, DiSanto said. "I think that your traditional single-family housing is more difficult to afford these days. People are looking at other options," she said.

South Manchester, below the highway, has continued to retain its character of single-family homes, the report said. The north side of town, especially around the mall, and the Cheney historic district, is where the most significant growth in multi-family units has occurred, DiSanto said, is that there are 1,512 approved multi-family units and 934 single-family and duplex units for which building permits have not yet been issued. This represents a "reservoir" of housing that is likely to be developed when the housing market improves, she said.

Though statewide housing construction was in a slump, in Manchester the number of housing permits was at its highest level since 1982.

Commercial and industrial development also increased last year, the report said, much of it related to the mall. Four subdivisions of commercial and industrial land were granted in 1989, compared with one in both 1987 and 1988.

MHS students enter world of TV programming by doing

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

"I keep thinking of Channel 3. This isn't Channel 3," sophomore Gary Allen reminded himself. He is chief editor of Manchester High School News, which premiered last week on Cox Cable.

It may not be professional TV, but the set of the school news program — featuring student reports on events in town schools — hosted the same problems and confusion that occur during the filming of any news program.

First, the anchors, sophomore Amy Mirzora and junior Christopher Mena, sank too low behind the podium. Teachers and students searched the school for boxes. The problem was solved when a student returned with rulers from the school's choir room.

Then, the anchors began to practice their lines, reading from cue cards. They stumbled on Ronald McCadd, a guidance counselor at the high school and an advisor to the program, coached Amy and Christopher on how to say their lines with the appropriate intonation and enthusiasm.

The assignment seemed simple enough — just film the anchors' introduction to reports that were already filmed — but it was more than forty minutes before the cameras were ready to roll at the instructional materials center in the high school.

Several times, the advisors encouraged the students to leave the script and talk casually — imitating the chitchat that occurs on nightly news programs. But even this "spontaneous" banter was rehearsed several times before the advisors decided it sounded natural enough.

Those preparations were for the second edition of the news program. It features reports on Earth Day celebrations, a Shakespeare festival at Filing Junior High School, as well as on the girls basketball team dinner.

Output drops at 1% annually

By Karen Ball
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American workers' productivity dropped by an annual rate of 1 percent during the first quarter of 1990, the worst showing in a year, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the 1 percent decline in non-farm productivity — defined as output per hour of work — was the biggest drop since productivity fell by an annual rate of 1.3 percent for the January-March period last year.

During all of last year, productivity rose just 0.9 percent, the worst performance since the 1981-82 recession.

While the report showed an overall decline in non-farm productivity, workers in the manufacturing sector registered a seasonally adjusted 4.1 percent increase so far this year.

Meanwhile, today's report showed that hourly labor costs — a major inflation measure for businesses — rose at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the first quarter of 1990.

General Assembly takes up last-minute bills as clock ticks

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — With the legislative clock ready to run out at midnight Wednesday on the 1990 session, the General Assembly will have to scramble to wrap up action on the scores of bills remaining on the House and Senate calendars.

As happens every year, many will die for lack of action.

Issues remaining range from gun control to newspaper recycling and, possibly, the death penalty.

The biggest job of the session, passing a budget and tax package, was wrapped up over the weekend.

A $7.05 billion budget and a $185 million election year tax package to balance next year's budget and reduce this year's deficit, are now on the way to Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill.

Backers of stronger death penalty legislation are looking for a bill to amend with the measure they want, after Friday's rejection of an earlier-to-impose capital punishment bill by the Judiciary Committee.

Opponents of the bill say they're confident the issue is dead for this year, and time is on their side. Death penalty legislation traditionally prompts long debate, and Democratic leaders trying to take care of remaining business just don't have the time.

Supporters are resigned to waiting until next year, trying to get an early start when the 1991 session convenes in January.

Several gun control bills are still pending.

One requires a two-week waiting period before the purchase of any firearm. Current law requires a waiting period for handguns only. The House. During the wait, a criminal background check would be conducted.

Another, on the Senate calendar, extends the requirement for a permit to assault weapons and imposes a mandatory 10-year prison term for anyone convicted of a violent crime while brandishing or using an assault weapon.

Still another would require anyone purchasing a firearm to have completed a firearm safety course.

A bill requiring newspaper publishers and other printers to phase in the use of recycled paper is hanging in the Senate. Under the bill, the publishers and printers, as a group, would have to be using a minimum of 11 percent recycled paper by Dec. 31, 1992, and at least 50 percent by Dec. 31, 1999. Fines could be levied if the quotas aren't met.

One bill that seems unlikely to survive, primarily because of the governor's opposition, would alter the way Connecticut awards Electoral College votes in presidential elections. Rather than having all eight Connecticut votes go to the statewide winner, the bill would

UConn not alone in New England as colleges compete for presidents

By David Tirrell-Wysocki
The Associated Press

Members of a presidential search committee at the University of Vermont are putting away their files after eight months of work ended with the selection of a new president last week. But New Hampshire searchers are still looking, and university officials in Rhode Island and Connecticut are just beginning presidential searches.

Of the region's six public flagship universities, only the University of Maine and University of Massachusetts have permanent leaders in place.

At UMass, the chancellor of the main campus also is the university system president in a two-year experiment that began when the previous president retired in March. The move is intended to save money as Massachusetts — and the other New England states — struggles to stabilize state budgets in a weakened economy.

Cuts in state university budgets — and tuition increases including a mid-semester one in New Hampshire — have spawned recent student protests in all six states.

At the University of Rhode Island, Vice President Thomas Pezullo said the situation will at least help screen applicants.

"It's a different kind of candidate who is willing to go into an institution that is facing hard times," he said. "We don't look forward to a president to come in who might think it will be easy here, but to one with energy and excitement about the particular task."

Observers say the abundance of presidential openings in the region is not unique, because of scattered openings nationally, and that having interim presidents is not necessarily detrimental.

But they say the openings, combined with generally fewer public dollars for public universities, helps complicate an already complex process, possibly affecting salary negotiations and forcing searchers to worry about losing prospects to other schools.

Search committees in Vermont and New Hampshire, for instance, had to scratch one of their top choices when she took a president's job on the West Coast in mid-April.

"These people are not only interested here, but they are interested elsewhere," said James Yakovakis, chairman of the search committee at UNH, which screened more than 110 candidates.

He said less money and more openings could cause a

Thoughts

Few people have not experienced a sense of loneliness. But to confess this feeling and run the risk of being viewed as a "loser" by our peers causes most of us to mask our loneliness—and therefore ourselves.

Susan Jacoby, ("McCall" magazine, Sept. 1989) says, "The admission of being lonely is surprisingly difficult to make. Although widespread, it's a dirty little secret."

Dr. Perlen (Social Psych. U. of Calif.) believes that many lonely people do not see any point in discussing their feelings with anyone else because they are convinced it is their own "fault." In this week's Thoughts let us talk about loneliness openly because part of the overcoming of its power is to distinguish between what you can control and what you can't, what is your "fault," and what is not.

Loneliness comes disguised in many forms. How does one benefit if, for we all know what it feels like? Dr. Robert Weiss of the Harvard School of Medicine, defined loneliness as a "deficient condition — the absence of a significant other." Lawrence Chang in December '83 "Glamour" magazine, defined it as "a senseless a hunger." Loneliness reminds the emotions that important psychological needs are not being met; the need for intimacy, the need for community, the need for friends.

Hunger needs to be satisfied by searching out and finding food. Loneliness needs to be satisfied by searching out and finding relationships.

A Manchester man was arrested for second-degree assault early Sunday morning after he allegedly hit his wife and caused her to suffer a fractured nose, a hematoma under her eye and a facial bruise, police said.

His 23-year-old wife was cited for breach of peace in Manchester Superior Court, police said.

Infant's death linked to lighter

OXFORD (AP) — Fire investigators continue to search for clues to what caused an early morning blaze that took the life of a 13-month-old girl.

The state Fire Marshal's Office has not officially determined the cause of the fire on Sunday, but evidence indicates the blaze ignited as a child played with a lighter in the bedroom containing the baby's crib, Oxford Fire Marshal Fred Pummer said.

Amanda Giordano was found dead in her crib in a rear bedroom of the house, where flames blocked repeated attempts by rescuers to enter the home. The toddler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giordano, and six relatives staying at the large two-story house escaped.

In addition to the victim, three other children and five adults were at home at the time of the 9 a.m. blaze, which took firefighters 90 minutes to bring under control. The injured were taken to Derby's Griffin Hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Giordano, 35, apparently was the most severely injured, suffering from burns and cuts to the arm.

Oxford Fire Chief Scott Pelletier said Giordano and firefighters made several attempts to rescue the child but were driven back by the flames. Firefighters from several volunteer companies battled the flames, he said.

"It took us a longer time than expected to control the blaze to the point where we could get in," Pelletier said, adding that the house consists of several additions.

One wing of the brown, wood-framed home, which sits at the end of a gravel driveway that winds for about a quarter-mile through thick woods, was severely charred by the flames.

The home belongs to Audrey Von Wetberg, the grandmother of the young children. The names of the other adults living in the house are not known, but all were related to Ms. Von Wetberg, Pummer said.

Looks like 'typical' teen, but she's blamed in death

HARTFORD (AP) — She could be any teen-ager walking to school on a warm spring afternoon, chattering and sweet in her blue-and-white floral dress and silver-rimmed glasses that set off her dark, wavy hair.

Coleman appeared ready to take sole blame, but abandoned his civility when a state police detective showed him Karin's diary, in which she described her sexual exploits with Alexander Markov, the 24-year-old son of her victim's father.

Aparo told Coleman she had slept with Markov only once, but her diary entry on July 28, 1987, told a different story.

"The grant said is 24 — one for every year of his life," the entry in the diary said.

Mrs. Aparo's nightgown-clad body was found damped under a bridge in Bernardston, Mass., near the Vermont border, 70 miles from the condominium the 47-year-old mother shared with her only child in the town of Glastonbury, a pastoral suburb near Hartford.

Her killer struggled her with a pair of pants, struggling with her in her bed for at least 10 minutes before she died, then loaded her body into a car and drove up Interstate 91 to Massachusetts.

Mrs. Aparo's violent death on Aug. 5, 1987, shattered the tranquility in Glastonbury, a town of 30,000 where longtime residents say they have trouble remembering the last murder. But the events of the next few weeks would be even more shocking.

Budget packed with doubts

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — When Gov. William A. O'Neill's proposed $7.24 billion budget was under fire, he dubbed his critics the "wand patrol," saying they believed a wave of a magic wand could somehow pay for state government without a tax increase.

"If anyone had such a magic wand, it now seems, it was the Democrats in the General Assembly.

How else could they have dealt with a dump in revenues much worse than O'Neill anticipated, added back about $50 million to restore popular programs the governor was ready to cut, and still remain $150 million from O'Neill's bottom line?"

The Republicans had their own answers to that question. In four months' debates last week, they said the $7.05 billion Democratic budget would lead to a huge deficit in 1991 because of its reliance on $300 million in one-time windfalls

Senate to debate bail-reform bill

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A bill allowing judges to consider the possible danger posed by an accused criminal when setting bail has easily passed the House.

The bill, which cleared the House by a 150-1 vote Saturday, also gives judges greater power to sentence first-time drug offenders to community service and puts aside money to hire 89 new probation officers. The bill now goes to the Senate, where passage is expected.

"It puts teeth in the courts," said William Carbone, undersecretary of the state Office of Policy and Management.

To pay for the new probation officers, the bill calls for increasing the surcharge on speeding fines from $10 to $20 per ticket, which would raise $6.2 million, legislative analysts predicted.

The change in bail laws, pushed by Rep. Michael Lawlor, D-East Haven, grew out of a well-publicized murder in Hartford last year of a bank executive, allegedly at the hands of a convicted rapist who was out on bail.

"This amendment creates a major change in the state's criminal justice system," said Lawlor, a former prosecutor. "It would allow the court to consider in virtually any

Congressional leaders say budget talks likely

By Christopher Connell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Leaders of Congress say serious budget negotiations with the White House now appear likely, with everything on the table — including the possibility of new taxes.

The leaders left the White House Sunday night after a private 90-minute meeting with President Bush saying they would be back for more talks with the president after consulting with other lawmakers.

They said they discussed no specifics with Bush, but established that whatever negotiations take place will be without preconditions.

Under questioning from House Speaker Tom Foley, asked if things now were on track for full-scale budget negotiations, said, "I think that's going to be the outcome."

Asked if Bush stood ready to drop his no-new-taxes pledge, Foley said no specifics were discussed, but he added, "The assumption is that all matters would be on the table, that we would not enter any talks with preconditions."

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said, "There was a general agreement that any discussions will be without preconditions, if and when they occur."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said the lawmakers expect to meet again with Bush late Tuesday after conferring with colleagues, including leaders of the key budget and tax-writing committees.

The White House had no comment on the talks, deputy spokesman Stephen Hart said.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel also took part in the unusual 90-minute session in Bush's private residence. The talks took place after Bush, the congressional leaders and 200 other guests attended a lecture on Theodore Roosevelt's presidency by author David McCullough.

The full House and Senate Budget Committees approved Democratic versions of the 1991 budget last week.

Congress and the White House have made repeated efforts in recent years to forge grand compromises on the deficit. Most have fallen short of expectations.

Congress has ignored the $1.2 trillion budget blueprint that Bush submitted Jan. 29. That budget was supposed to meet the Gramm-Rudman target of a deficit no larger than $64 billion for fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1.

Sluggish economic growth and rising interest rates have driven up the deficit since then.

Foley said he expects more lasting results this time.

"All of us who took part in this meeting today feel that we need a major and meaningful effort that has been somewhat lacking for various reasons in past years" to narrow the deficit for next year and over several years, the speaker said.

"I think there's goodwill on all sides in attempting to deal with the fiscal problems the country faces," said Sen. Mitchell.

Still, Democratic leaders said they were prepared to defend the budget when they go before the voters in this fall's elections.

The 1990 deficit was supposed to be $99 billion under a budget deal that Bush and Congress struck in April 1989.

Gen. Powell: total review of budget due

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman's review of U.S. defenses could permit spending cuts of 20 to 25 percent, the nation's top military officer was quoted as saying today.

Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said American weapons systems, personnel levels, training practices and military strategy should be reviewed to adjust to the much-diminished Soviet threat, the Washington Post reported.

"We know we have to get smaller," Powell said in the Post interview. "We can go down considerably."

But Powell, an Army general who served as national security adviser in the Reagan administration, said some congressional critics were proposing to cut the defense budget "in too steep a dive."

The aim of a top-to-bottom review would be to determine the minimum forces the United States needs, he said.

"There is a base level below which you can't go... because we are a superpower with worldwide interests," the newspaper quoted him as saying.

Powell said he did not want to spell out his views for future budgets, but said he believed a "fundamental break point" would occur "somewhere in the neighborhood of maybe a 20 to 25 percent reduction from where we are now" in both force size and military spending, the Post reported.

He said the search for bond underwriters includes a bidding process and reviews by a selection committee that includes state officials from outside the treasury.

An award to manage part of the pension fund investment is "probably an even more exhaustive process," he said.

Alleged members of cartel nabbed in missile plot

MIAMI (AP) — The FBI has made several arrests in a plot by Columbia's Medellín drug cartel to buy Singer anti-aircraft missiles, officials say.

The cartel's plan may have been to use the shoulder-fired missiles to assassinate Colombian President Virgilio Barco, according to a federal official in Florida who spoke on condition of anonymity.

No missiles changed hands, the source said.

The number of people arrested was unclear, and Larry Curran, FBI spokesman in Tampa, refused to comment Sunday. News conferences were scheduled for this morning.

But a law enforcement official in Washington who demanded anonymity said several people were arrested in Miami over the weekend in an undercover operation. And another man was arrested in Tampa area, the Florida source said.

The Washington source said the suspects claimed to be working for reputed cartel leader Pablo Escobar, who is wanted by U.S. authorities on drug trafficking charges.

Also Sunday, ABC News reported that the drug cartel had offered nearly $6 million for more than 100 Singer missiles and a thousand machine guns.

The New York Times today put the number of missiles involved at 24.

Driver careens into ball game, killing 3 youths

RIVERSIDE, Ill. (AP)

The driver of a car that careened off a road and plowed through a Little League baseball game, killing three children, had blacked out at the wheel, his wife says.

The driver, James J. Harasak, 59, has refused to answer investigators' questions on the ad hoc of his attorney, said Don Donese, police chief in this Chicago suburb.

Donese said police would ask a grand jury today to subpoena Harasak and look over his medical records.

Two boys and a girl were killed and nine people injured in Saturday's accident, including Harasak and six children. All the youngsters were 7 or 8 years old.

Two children were listed in critical condition at Loyola University Medical Center today, and one was in serious condition.

A woman who identified herself as Harasak's wife, Loretta, said her husband remembered little of the accident.

"He blacked out. He doesn't remember hitting anything, he hit the building, that's when he knew he hit something," she said in a telephone interview.

Downtown has leg up on renewal

The group that is planning for the future of downtown Main Street got off to a good start last week not because it came up with any unified plan, but because it began to explore a wide range of possibilities, some of which may prove fruitful after they have been subject to close examination.

Despite the lure of mall shopping, particularly the giant new mall in Buckland, downtown heads into the future with a number of advantages. Downside is that downtown did not enjoy as the retailing revolution took its toll.

In Manchester, the traditional downtown remains the civic center of the area and it is still surrounded by concentrated residential areas. With the conversion of the Cheney Historic District into residences the density has increased.

Furthermore downtown is still a major center for personal services, and, in fact, the number of professional offices has increased.

And despite the concern of many downtown merchants about parking, there is much more than in many other old established towns.

Some stress at the meeting last week was put on the need for accessories like park benches and plantings and on the repairing and redesigning storefronts in some uniform pattern.

Downtown should look and feel as pleasant as it can. But it should be distinct and not a carbon copy of a slick and rather sterile mall. Look. Nor should there be a wholly contrived facade dreamed up by some planner superimposed on it.

But after the reconstruction of Main Street makes downtown more accessible, its success will only begin at the street and on the faces of the buildings.

The real key will remain indoors, with the kind of knowledgeable personal service that attracts the downtown shopper.

New battlefield

To the Editor: After reaching 70, one has seen a bit of life, and a few changes in the world. Backward glances are frequent. I remember my grammar school, named Lincoln School. On the wall, over the center staircase landing was engraved The Gettysburg Address. "A new nation, conceived in Liberty..."

Again we are on a great battlefield, to preserve part of that field, so that today and tomorrow our nation might live. And, as in the past, America has always rallied around a need.

Earth Day. Wise men and women and children waking up to preserve open fields, trees, air to breathe, streets to cross without

Mother Nature doing fine

By Vincent Carroll
This old Earth has survived quite a bit of mischief in 4.6 billion years. It's withstood the swelling of the continental crust, ice ages, even a slowdown in rotation from 425 to 365 times a year. It's endured hothouse epochs when you could play baseball in the Arctic. It may have taken a direct hit from a comet.

And the Earth will most certainly survive the human race, too, whatever we pesky primates choose to do.

Not at all, despite what you might have heard during recent Earth Day observances. Whatever the state of the planet elsewhere, the story at home is in many respects one of formidable progress. Here's a summary:

• Air quality: Emissions of most major pollutants, from carbon monoxide to sulfur dioxide (a major cause of acid rain), have been trimmed by substantial amounts. And the next clean air law will cut them even more.

• Energy use: Until 1973, the upswing in U.S. energy use outstripped population growth. Since then, the trend has reversed.

• Toxic dumps: More than 1,200 remain on the Superfund priority list. Whether they warrant so much hand-wringing is another matter. In a 1987 document, EPA scientists assessed environmental risks in order of importance, and such dumps were nowhere near the top. For good reason: Not a single study has demonstrated a general public danger from toxic dumps.

• Trash and garbage: Each American generated a daily average of 2.4 pounds of trash in 1980; today the figure is 3 pounds or more. On the other hand, most of the leastlandfills have been closed or will shut down in the next few years, and recycling of some materials has soared.

• Cancer risk: The best assessments of cancer deaths suggest that exposure to artificial substances is associated at most with 2 percent to 3 percent of cancer. Those estimates pale before the 35 percent of cancers associated with diet, 30 percent with smoking, and 3 percent to 6 percent with "geophysical factors" such as sunlight and other natural radiation.

• Species loss: The alligator has crawled back from the brink, while the brown pelican, bald eagle and whooping crane are recovering, too. But dozens of other animal species remain threatened.

• Water quality: It either stayed the same or improved in most of the nation's streams and lakes. Among the reasons: An additional 50 million people were provided with secondary sewage treatment, and farmers cut pesticide use (after it peaked in 1976). But there is some bad news, too: "Non-point" pollution from agricultural fertilizers rose in many places, as did water salinity.

• Wetlands: More than half of this country's original wetlands have been destroyed, but the loss slowed rapidly once wetland laws took effect in the mid-1970s.

• Public lands: Pressure on some national parks has grown to the point that they are as overrun as the Washington Mall. Yet the past 20 years also witnessed the designation of most of the 90 million acres of official wilderness and the 7,000-plus miles of protected "wild and scenic" rivers.

• Energy use: Until 1973, the upswing in U.S. energy use outstripped population growth. Since then, the trend has reversed.

• Toxic dumps: More than 1,200 remain on the Superfund priority list. Whether they warrant so much hand-wringing is another matter. In a 1987

Trucking hogtied by rules

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — The American trucking industry is so hogtied by out-of-date state regulations that truckers would be better off driving hundreds of miles across state lines and back just to save the costs and paperwork of in-state trucking.

Consider these examples:
• It costs more to ship a truckload of blue jeans from El Paso to Dallas than it does to ship the same jeans from Taiwan to Dallas.

• Ryder Systems Inc., the truck rental company, spends $3.3 million a year and uses 100 employees just to stick on the $7,000 tax decal required by 22 states.

• In Michigan, it costs Savannah Foods more to ship sugar across a 82-mile delivery route inside the state than it does to send the same sugar 138 miles to another state.

• Prior-Lay finds it cheaper to ship its goods from Mississippi to San Antonio to Lubbock, Texas, 200 miles closer.

In-state trucking remains one of the most anti-competitive and least efficient forms of transportation in the country. By some estimates, reforming the system could save consumers up to $12 billion a year.

In 1980, the Motor Carrier Act deregulated trucking between states, but in the spirit of states' rights, the law left in-state trucking up to local officials. The result is that commerce moves relatively freely on trucks traveling between states. But a shipment between two points in the same state is a nightmare.

Companies that rely on the roads for shipping say the state taxes are tantamount to highway robbery. If trucking regulations were organized crime, then Texas would be the godfather.

Our sources estimate that restrictive Texas trucking rules cost consumers nearly $1 billion a year. The red tape of the Texas Road Commission, which regulates trucking, has resulted in a virtual in-state trucking monopoly. Sources told our associate Dean Boyd that 10 large Texas shippers control upward of 95 percent of the market.

The legal monopolies and the state red tape across the country add up to a serious handicap for the American in the world trade market. America's competitors know that they can ship goods to us cheaper than we can ship them to ourselves. A recent European Community study of trade barriers in the United States cited in-state trucking regulations as one of the major barriers that inhibit trade in the U.S. domestic economy.

Rep. J. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill. has heard the horror stories and introduced a bill to preempt the states' rights and establish uniform rules for taxing trucks.

The states predictably are crying foul, claiming that small rural shippers will be pushed out of the market and that highway safety will suffer.

But we have seen evidence from the few states which have deregulated them, and there have been no such side effects. In Florida, trucking went down after deregulation. In California, which has toyed with the idea of deregulation, the Highway Patrol found there was no connection between in-state trucking regulations and safety.

Until Congress has the courage to reform the state red tape, American consumers will continue to lose out to a morass of state bureaucracies that few of those consumers know anything about.

Costume causes couple's fight

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Bert," and I are both "thirtysomething," and for the first time in our six-year marriage we are quarreling. Please settle it if you can.

Last Halloween our country club had a costume party and all the members were asked to come in costume. Bert and I went to a costume rental place, and after trying on several costumes, we decided to go as Adam and Eve. Our costumes were almost identical — flesh-colored elasticized tights decorated with some strategically placed leaves and vines. I carried a snake and an apple.

At first I was very hesitant about my costume because I usually dress very modestly, and this costume made me look naked. Bert kept telling me he thought I looked great, so even though I was a little self-conscious, I wore it.

Well, I attracted a lot of attention from the men — and some unfriendly stares from their wives. I was the belle of the ball — dancing every dance and loving it. Bert was furious.

Abby, that was seven months ago, and he still brings it up, telling me I flirted with all the men at the club and made a poor choice of costumes, etc. Abby, I chose that costume only to please him. Now he won't let me forget it. Whose fault was it?

DEAR ABBY: It was your husband's fault, that's whose! He may not admit it — even to himself. He wanted to show you off, but he got more than he bargained for. It takes two to make a quarrel, so if Bert brings it up again, let him talk to himself.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you advised "Kid Sister" to contact her Department of Motor Vehicles and suggest that her older sister be retested because age-related changes made her driving hazardous to herself and others.

Please tell "Kid Sister" and all others with a similar problem to take big sister by the hand and run, do not walk, to the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and sign up both of them in a "55-Alive Mature Driving Course."

This classroom-refresher course was designed specifically for those 55 and older. It makes those who participate aware of age-related changes (hearing and vision) that affect our driving, teaches us methods to compensate for these changes, and also to recognize that eventually we must give up driving in some situations, or altogether.

A large-scale study in California showed that those who have completed the course are approximately 16 percent less likely to be in an accident involving injury or death. It is well worth the $7 fee.

An added incentive: Many insurance companies give a reduction in automobile insurance premiums to those who have taken the "55-Alive" course. If you cannot find a course listed with local information, write to: 55-Alive, American Association of Retired Persons, 1909 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049.

'Phony' vitamins have no benefits

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on substances claimed to be health-food advocates to be "vitamins."

DEAR READER: Real vitamins are trace elements essential to human metabolism. In the past, non-vitamin or phony vitamins have been touted to cure various ailments. Such substances include:

• Vitamin BT is not a vitamin and is abundant in animal tissue. More familiarly known as carotene, it was discovered in 1948 and was originally believed to be a vitamin; subsequent scientific studies have proved that it is not a dietary essential.

• Vitamin P is not a vitamin. The designation "vitamin" was withdrawn when the compound, now called bioflavonoids, was discovered not to be essential for humans. Bioflavonoids were discovered in 1936 and, at that time, were believed to cure scurvy and help prevent colds and flu. These claims have not been substantiated by scientific testing.

Sean Lennon helped Yoko survive John's murder

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono says her son, Sean, helped her pull through after the murder of her husband, John Lennon.

"Some days, I felt like I wasn't worth it, but it was important that I stay around for Sean, or he would have lost two parents," Ono said in an interview in Sunday's Daily News Magazine.

Sean, now 14, was 5 when his ex-Beatle father was slain. He attends school in Switzerland and hopes for a music career.

Ono said she prefers he choose another path but won't stand in his way.

"I love him very much, wish John was here to see him grow," she said. "Maybe he's watching."

Lennon was shot to death in 1980. His killer, Mark Chapman, is serving a life sentence.

URRINO, Italy (AP) — Prince Charles' artwork is on display in surroundings that could humble a heir to the British throne.

Charles attended an invitation-only unveiling Sunday of 57 of his watercolors at the Raphael Academy, in the building where the Renaissance artist was born in 1483.

"I still can't believe that my amateur sketching work got on display in Raphael's house," Charles said. "I only hope the great master doesn't turn in his grave."

Captured in the prince's drawings are, among other images, the Tower of London, a study scene in Saudi Arabia and places in Scotland and Hong Kong.

The exhibit runs through June 14.

Insurance firms face problems

Should you be concerned with the financial strength of your life insurance company? The answer is yes. But you should have been concerned at the time you bought your policies, as you would be in making any other investment.

The insurance industry is faced with liquidity problems far beyond any it has known in the past. This doesn't mean you should cancel or switch your policies, or lose very much sleep about it, unless you discover your company is one of a handful that is approaching insolvency. It does mean you should find out more about the people you are depending on to secure your retirement or protect your family in the event of your death.

Just how bad is the situation? That depends on which expert is speaking. Of the more than 2,000 life insurance companies in the United States, some 600 are members of the American Council of Life Insurance. These 600 companies hold more than 93 percent of the life insurance in force in U.S. legal reserve companies, and almost 99 percent of the insured pension plan business. The council claims all of its members are financially sound.

Martin Weiss, a financial newsletter publisher and head of Weiss Research, Inc. of West Palm Beach, Fla., disagrees. He is concerned that the junk bond crisis will get worse, that there may be a recession, and that "all bonds which bear a better-than-junk rating" are not immune to default.

"We find that the life and health insurance companies are the most vulnerable at precisely the most dangerous time in history. This unique convergence of circumstances can lead to only one outcome: a wave of failures that will rival those of the savings and loan crisis," he reports.

Not surprisingly, you'd be hard put to find an insurance industry executive or another rating service that will agree with him.

"Despite nervousness in the market and apparent fears by some that high-yield bond holdings present a near-term threat to solvency, most life insurance companies that hold a significant amount of high-yield bonds have both the liquidity and capital to absorb problems and remain financially secure," according to a report from Standard & Poor's.

Robert Hunter, president of the National Insurance Council of Organizational Services, Inc. of New York, N.Y., agrees that the talk about widespread insurance company insolvencies is off the mark.

Norwestern Mutual says that 4.5 percent of its total assets are in high-yield issues, but that poses virtually no risk to the company's financial stability.

If the junk market collapses as the result of a weak economy, explains Mark DeWitt, company treasurer, the Federal Reserve would ease monetary policy to bring interest rates down. That would be phenomenal for the investment grade bonds in our portfolio. If, on the other hand, the economy were to heat up, and interest rates rose, our investment grade portfolio would suffer, but Standard & Poor's and the junk bond market would probably benefit.

A handful of insurance companies do have liquidity problems, but those companies are readily identifiable, according to Dennis Mullane, CEO of Connecticut General. "Consumers can make judgments of their own based on size, age and the ratings assigned by Moody's, Best's and Standard and Poor's," he says.

Using a rating system that is extraordinarily penetrating, the 10 companies he considers the strongest in America.

They are: Employers National, Superior Life, United Insurance Company, Tennessee Farmers Life, Pikan 600, Liberty National Colonial Life & Accident, Jefferson-Pilot Life, American Family Life and State Farm Life.

dilemma when it comes to talking salary.

"It's a most difficult situation to be in, without question," Yakovakis said. "Not only the budget crunches in public universities, but the far greater salaries being paid by private institutions make it extremely difficult to attract a person at the salaries a public institution can afford to pay."

Though UVM lost one of its four finalists, search committee Chairman Stevenson Walcott said other openings and the economy didn't have a major impact on his search.

"I think the University of Vermont is viewed as a very plum presidency," he said. "We had no difficulty at all attracting top-rate scholars and academic administrators to be nominees for this position."

Though none of the departed or departing presidents has cited funding as a reason, all have devoted considerable energy to the battle of the budget recently.

In March, two days before John Casteen announced he planned to leave UConn for the University of Virginia, about 350 students flocked to the statehouse to ask lawmakers to restore money to the university's three-year budget.

The demonstration symbolized the last days of Casteen's five-year tenure. He fought constantly against budget cuts, which one Casteen supporter blames in part for his departure.

"I'm not saying he left just because of that — he was offered a great job at a dynamic university," said Rep. Jonathan Polis, chairman of a legislative subcommittee on higher education. "But I know he has been very frustrated by the lack of state support for the university."

State auditors often criticized the university's private fund-raising foundation for inadequately monitoring accounts or placing state money in accounts not subject to spending laws.

"I don't think it changed our opinion of him, but I think it certainly changed his opinion of us and of the state," Polis said. "He was constantly hounded by bureaucrats more intent on bookkeeping than on the vision."

URI President Edward Eddy, who plans to retire in June 1991, has come under heavy fire, from on and off campus. When the state cut the university's funding because of a potential state budget deficit, students and faculty accused Eddy of not doing enough to protect URI from the whims of politicians.

When they blasted the politicians, Eddy got more heat. Gov. Edward DiPrete blamed "deplorable conditions" at the university on URI management, not state cutbacks.

At the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, President Robert Clodius said that in the past, the average tenure of a public university president was about 10 years. "Now, it seems that it's half that," Clodius said.

Clodius cited increasingly difficult financial and management challenges as part of the reason. "Another thing that many of these people are finding wearing and wearying is the greater intrusion from outside the management of the university — intrusion by the state, the governor or whoever, and intrusion from their own board of trustees, who become less of a policy board and more of a management board," he said.

He said 19 of the 149 institutions in his group have acting or interim leaders or leaders who have announced resignations or retirements.

"The boards may have to take a few more risks on some people who are less experienced," he said. Observers agree that while a university is changing leaders, it pays a price. Though UNH has "an excellent interim president, any time you have an interim president, you don't have the capacity to make long-range decisions and create stability that is needed," said search chairman Yakovakis. "It's a status-holding, rather than moving forward."

Clodius agreed, but said that paradoxically, a temporary leader sometimes has more clout. "There is greater credibility in the person who says, 'I have nothing at stake here. It's not my career.'"

Financial leaders boost loan fund, but is it enough?

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Finance leaders of the world's seven largest industrial powers are paving the way for a 50 percent boost in the International Monetary Fund's capacity, far less than it being sought by loan-hungry nations in Eastern Europe and the developing world.

A weak yen helps boost the U.S. trade deficit by making American goods more expensive in Japan and Japanese products cheaper in the United States.

Also on the agenda of the session, closed to reporters and the public, were the economic effects of the reunification of Germany and a review of progress since Brady launched the new debt strategy in March 1989.

The Group of Seven, meeting in the Capitol, endorsed a proposal to raise the capital contributions of the IMF's 152 member nations to $180 billion from the current $120 billion. The increase "would provide the fund with the resources to fulfill its central responsibilities in the world economy," said the group, composed of finance ministers and central bank chiefs of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Great Britain, France, Canada and Italy.

IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus originally sought a 100 percent increase to enable the fund to support emerging capitalism in Eastern Europe and back Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady's strategy for easing the crushing $1.3 trillion Third World debt.

Many developing countries are pushing for a bigger increase, and 70 percent of the IMF membership has supported an increase of two-thirds or more.

BOSTON — Their worst beating of the season was the best thing that happened to the New York Knicks.

They lost more than a game in a 157-128 rout by the Boston Celtics nine days ago. They lost respect. But they found a reason to go on.

"It gave us a lot more fight," New York's Patrick Ewing said. "We wanted to come out and prove something to everybody in America."

They proved that they weren't a bunch of athletic underachievers. They proved that properly channeled skill and determination could lift them out of a deep hole.

The Knicks shocked the Celtics 121-114 Sunday, becoming just the third NBA team to survive a 2-0 deficit in a best-of-5 series and ending a 26-game, six-year losing streak at Boston Garden. The other two were the 1956 Fort Wayne Pistons and 1987 Golden State Warriors.

Shocked, Boston's Kevin McHale said, doesn't describe his feelings. "Disappointment is a better word," he said. "You go out with expectations for yourself and your team, and then you fail."

NO. 1 — The Knicks' Patrick Ewing shows the Boston Garden crowd Sunday what he thinks of New York's performance against the host Boston Celtics. Ewing led the Knicks to a 121-114 victory, giving them the best-of-five series 3-2.

DOWN AND OUT — Boston's Kevin McHale, left, glumly sits on the Celtics' bench and Dennis Johnson drapes a towel over his head in the waning minute of their loss Sunday at Boston Garden. The Celtics, who had a 2-0 lead in the series, are now done for the season.

They lost more than a game in a 157-128 rout by the Boston Celtics nine days ago. They lost respect. But they found a reason to go on.

"It gave us a lot more fight," New York's Patrick Ewing said. "We wanted to come out and prove something to everybody in America."

They proved that they weren't a bunch of athletic underachievers. They proved that properly channeled skill and determination could lift them out of a deep hole.

The Knicks shocked the Celtics 121-114 Sunday, becoming just the third NBA team to survive a 2-0 deficit in a best-of-5 series and ending a 26-game, six-year losing streak at Boston Garden.

Shocked, Boston's Kevin McHale said, doesn't describe his feelings. "Disappointment is a better word," he said. "You go out with expectations for yourself and your team, and then you fail."

Knicks ahead 113-101 with 2:02 left. They stayed ahead by at least seven points the rest of the way.

Cheeks had four points and an assist during the surge.

"He's the consummate pro," New York's Trent Tucker said. "We put the ball in his hands, and I have no fear because he knows what to do with it in clutch situations."

Boston led 54-50 at halftime and 73-66 with 6:42 left in the third quarter. But Ewing's short shot started an 18-6 run. He ended it with a dunk, giving New York an 84-79 advantage with 1:23 remaining in the period.

"Patrick Ewing was phenomenal," Boston's Joe Kleine said. "The Celtics tied the game 87-87 on a wild 15-foot jumper early in the fourth, but Tucker's 3-pointer put the Knicks ahead for good as they hit 69 percent of their fourth-quarter shots, including the playoffs, did I mention the streak," Jackson said.

"Our mentality coming in here was healthy because of the games in New York and what was on the line."

The Knicks began the game with losses in 10 of their previous 11 road games but snapped Boston's 13-game home winning streak. They had lost 15 of their last 21 regular-season games to drop into third place in the Atlantic Division behind Boston, which was 9-1 in its last 10.

Then the Celtics won the first two playoff games.

"We felt we were in control, and we were," Boston's John Bagley said. "But they won three games in a row and we couldn't win one."

"We've gone through a rough slide this year," Tucker said. "People lost confidence in me as a team of pro athletes, we came back."

Hezekiel confirmed the mound difference, but said it had little to do with his early exit, the first time in four starts he's not pitched at least six innings.

"You can't blame it on that; everybody else has to go out and pitch on it," said Hezekiel. "It just felt like every pitch I threw was a little late."

Henderson's home run, Jose Canseco walked, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Ken Caminiti's two-run single.

Carney Lantford's two-run single in the second gave Oakland a 4-1 lead, scoring Terry Steinbach and Mike Gallego. Hezekiel lasted only 1 2-3 innings, but reliever Dennis Lamp came on to hold the A's to two hits over the next 4 1-3 innings.

Hezekiel warmed up with good stuff, and was completely different when the game started, said Morgan. "I think the mound is a lot higher than the bullpen mound."

The first edition — which Amy also anchored with Cary Stappelman, a senior — featured a report on DARE, a drug education program in some of the town's elementary schools as well as a report on the senior prom and the menu in the high school cafeteria.

It included an introduction by Schools Superintendent James P. Kennedy, and closing remarks by NHS principal James Spafford.

Robert Digan, director of Youth Services and an advisor to the program, said that despite its small size the program will feature news from all the town's public and private schools.

Cable officials have told him the program is the first of its kind in the state.

A segment on a particular school will feature a student reporter from that school whenever possible, he said, even in the elementary grades.

"I think there would be a certain appeal to having a fourth-grade student introduce something that is happening at their school," Digan said.

The programs are pilots, Digan said. Four shows will be produced this school year, and each will be broadcast Monday and Wednesday nights at 7 p.m. for two weeks.

Next year, the school will announce auditions for the entire school.

The second edition can be seen tonight on Channel 32, Cox Cable.

Greyhound declares win in bus strike

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey declared victory today in the 2-month-old drivers' strike.

"We are no longer driver-inhibited," Currey told reporters at a news conference called by the company at its Dallas headquarters. The statement came a day after the company proposed a four-year wage freeze and the elimination of 4,500 union jobs, a proposal the union called an "insult."

There was no immediate comment from the union.

Currey declared "a new day in the life of the new Greyhound," which he said is currently serving the cities that brought in 98 percent of its revenue last year. Total revenue is about 70 percent of last year.

Unbridled brings everyone else back to earth with Derby victory

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Unbridled is headed to the Preakness with a shot at the Triple Crown. For the rest of them, it's back to earth.

"The Kentucky Derby is the premier race in the world, and you've got to try every angle to get into it," trainer Ron McAnally said. "Then, you go back to reality."

McAnally's horse, Silver Ending, finished fifth in the Kentucky Derby on Saturday, and that was enough reality for him. Silver Ending's going back to California and will skip the Preakness on May 19.

But Unbridled goes to Pimlico after a stunning haul of speed that carried him past Summer Squall at the head of the homestretch, giving the 3 1/2-year-old colt a 1 1/2-length victory in the Derby.

"It looks like we're going to be the favorite because the horse came back good," said Unbridled's trainer, Carl Nafziger, a former professional rail rider who turned trainer in 1968.

Unbridled, winner of the Florida Derby but third in the Blue Grass to Summer Squall, is owned by 92-year-old Frances A. Genter, who has owned horses for 50 years but never got one to the Derby.

"This is such a thrill," said Genter, who watched the race from a wheelchair. "I'm really, really thrilled. I couldn't see the race, so Carl made the call for me. He said, 'He's sixth, he's fifth, he's going to win.'"

Summer Squall, who finished second after going off the 2-1 second chance, also is going to the Preakness, along with the 9-5 Derby favorite, Mister Frisky, who finished eighth.

"The Preakness is indicated," said Cot Campbell, head of the Dogwood Stable syndicate that owns Summer Squall. "We'll give ourselves a day or two to sort things out, but we're leaning in that direction."

"The winner was sure impressive, and I'm delighted for Mrs. Genter and for Carl."

Unbridled and Summer Squall both made their moves on the final turn, Summer Squall coming from fourth, Unbridled from sixth. Mister Frisky got his nose ahead of Kral Cash briefly in midturn, then Summer Squall went by. With a quarter-mile left, Craig Perret sent Unbridled to the lead on the outside and won going away.

Summer Squall was six lengths ahead of Pleasant Tap, and Mister Frisky faded to eighth.

For the pride of Puerto Rico, it was the end of a perfect run. Mister Frisky, owned by Jose and Maria

Young's luck changes against Bosox

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Curt Young spent last season as the hard-luck member of the Oakland Athletics pitching rotation, going 5-9 during the regular season and not even seeing action in the playoffs or World Series.

His luck, until Sunday, had not changed much in 1990. One week after giving up 10 runs in Boston, Young came back to pitch a two-hitter over eight innings at the same Red Sox in the A's 4-2 victory Sunday.

"I came into the game with something to prove," said Young (1-1). "Not to Boston, but to myself. I can't let a bad game dwell on my mind."

Young, after walking five batters in the first 3 1/3 innings, settled down to retire the final 14 he faced. He was not that far from a no-hitter.

Tony Pena's infield hit in the second led to an unearned run. Wade Boggs' double in the third led to the other Boston run. Both his could have been outs.

Young threw away Pena's dribbler at first base and Tom Brumansky, who led off with a walk, scored on the overthrow. Pena was credited with an infield hit. Boggs' double was a high fly to the base of the wall that self-fielder Rickey Henderson said he could have caught with a better jump on the ball.

Boggs later scored on Brumansky's sacrifice fly, but the A's were ahead 4-2 by that time and Young never let go of the lead.

"When you pitch with the lead, you feel more comfortable," said Young. "For me, it means I don't have to come inside."

Young said the five walks were surprising to him.

"I was making the pitches I wanted to throw, but they weren't hitting," said Young. "I forced me to concentrate on getting ahead in the count."

Bonds was the longtime record-holder of leadoff homers until Henderson came along.

One out after Henderson's home run, Jose Canseco walked, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Ken Caminiti's two-run single.

Carney Lantford's two-run single in the second gave Oakland a 4-1 lead, scoring Terry Steinbach and Mike Gallego. Hezekiel lasted only 1 2-3 innings, but reliever Dennis Lamp came on to hold the A's to two hits over the next 4 1-3 innings.

Home run derbies totally unscheduled

AL Roundup

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

Time was, they used to hold home-run derbies. The top sluggers on each team would show off before games and get going hot. So, just like doubleheaders, home-run derbies aren't scheduled any more — but occasionally they still happen.

In more recent times, players became afraid of messing up their swings and getting hurt. So, just like doubleheaders, home-run derbies aren't scheduled any more — but occasionally they still happen.

On Sunday in Toronto, Detroit's Cecil Fielder hit three home runs as the Tigers and Blue Jays continued for 10 homers, one shy of the major-league record.

In Cleveland, Candy Maldonado connected twice as the Indians and Texas Rangers hit a total of seven shots in the first game of a doubleheader.

In Oakland, there was only one homer. It came from Ricky Henderson, who hit a leadoff home run for the second straight game and for the 43rd time in his career.

"I know there were a lot of homers flying out of here today," Jimmy Key, the winning pitcher in Toronto's 11-7 victory over Detroit, said.

Fielder went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs. He increased his major-league-leading total to 10 home runs and 23 RBIs.

"I'm the kind of hitter who gets homers in bunches and today was definitely one of those bunches," he said.

Chet Lemon hit two home runs for Detroit. Kelly Gruber homered twice for the Toronto and Fred McGriff, Pat Borders and Manny Lee also connected for the Blue Jays.

There have been 11 homers in a game seven times, the most recent on Sept. 14, 1987, when Toronto hit 10 and Baltimore had one.

In other games, New York beat California 4-2, Oakland beat Boston 4-2, Cleveland swept a doubleheader from Texas 9-5 and 3-0, Kansas City got past Chicago 7-6 in 10 innings, Seattle stopped Baltimore 5-4 and Minnesota defeated Milwaukee 4-0.

Fielder became the first Detroit player to hit three home runs in a game since Bill Madlock on June 28, 1987, and the first big leaguer to do it since Von Hayes Aug. 29.

Fielder, who hit three home runs in a spring training game, formerly played for the Blue Jays. He spent last season in Japan and led the Central League with 38 homers, before signing with Detroit as a free agent.

Yankees 4, Angels 2 — New York completed a three-game sweep in Anaheim as Andy Hawkins won for the first time in five decisions this season.

Hawkins allowed four hits in 5 1/3 innings. He lost his shutout in the sixth when ex-Yankee Luis Polonia homered and Devon White had his third double of the game with one out. Lee Gueterman allowed White to score on Chih-David's infield grounder, but pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings before Dave Righetti finished the game with one out.

Bill Swift (0-0) pitched 1 2/3 innings and allowed three runs in the first game. The Yankees got all their runs in the first three innings off Jim Abbott (1-3), who allowed eight hits.

Indians 9-8, Rangers 5-0: Maldonado drove in five runs, then sat out the second game because of a strained left side as rookie Jeff Shaw, making his first major-league start, combined with Doug Jones on a shutout.

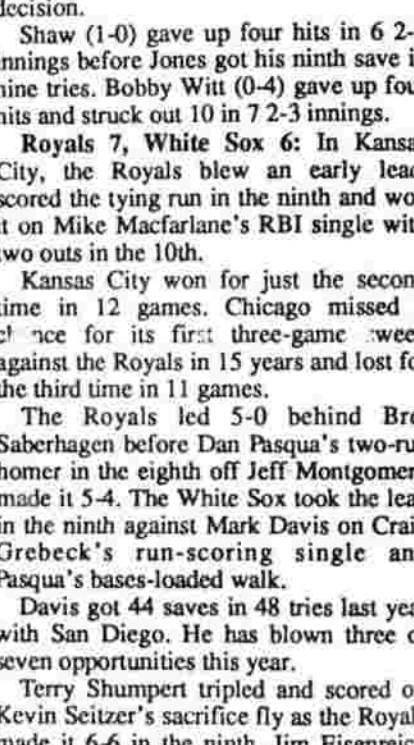

Maldonado, signed as a free agent, had seven home runs and 20 RBIs in 23 games this season before Tapani (3-2) took over. He scattered five singles, struck out a career-high nine and walked no batters.

Toddy Higuera (3-1) became the first Milwaukee starter to lose this year after 11 victories.

Twins 4, Brewers 0: In Milwaukee, rookie Kevin Tapani pitched his first major-league shutout as Minnesota won its fifth straight game.

Graf posts another victory

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Steffi Graf of West Germany rallied to beat Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario of Spain 7-6, 6-4, 6-1 Sunday for her fourth straight title in the Citizen's tournament.

With her 62nd consecutive match win, Graf now has the second longest winning streak in tennis history.

Graf, the top-ranked player in the world, needed more than two hours to fight off a strong challenge from Sanchez-Vicario, the French Open champion who is ranked fourth in the world.

Kansas City won for the second time in 12 games. Chicago missed a 6-1 lead in the ninth. Jim Eusebio pitched for the Royals in 15 years and lost for the third time in 11 games.

The Royals led 5-0 behind Bret Saberhagen before Dan Pasqua's two-run homer in the eighth off Jeff Montgomery made it 5-4. The White Sox took the lead in the ninth against Mark Davis on Craig and Blue Jays continued for 10 homers, one shy of the major-league record.

In Cleveland, Candy Maldonado connected twice as the Indians and Texas Rangers hit a total of seven shots in the first game of a doubleheader.

In Oakland, there was only one homer. It came from Ricky Henderson, who hit a leadoff home run for the second straight game and for the 43rd time in his career.

"I know there were a lot of homers flying out of here today," Jimmy Key, the winning pitcher in Toronto's 11-7 victory over Detroit, said.

Fielder went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs. He increased his major-league-leading total to 10 home runs and 23 RBIs.

"I'm the kind of hitter who gets homers in bunches and today was definitely one of those bunches," he said.

Chet Lemon hit two home runs for Detroit. Kelly Gruber homered twice for the Toronto and Fred McGriff, Pat Borders and Manny Lee also connected for the Blue Jays.

There have been 11 homers in a game seven times, the most recent on Sept. 14, 1987, when Toronto hit 10 and Baltimore had one.

In other games, New York beat California 4-2, Oakland beat Boston 4-2, Cleveland swept a doubleheader from Texas 9-5 and 3-0, Kansas City got past Chicago 7-6 in 10 innings, Seattle stopped Baltimore 5-4 and Minnesota defeated Milwaukee 4-0.

Fielder became the first Detroit player to hit three home runs in a game since Bill Madlock on June 28, 1987, and the first big leaguer to do it since Von Hayes Aug. 29.

Fielder, who hit three home runs in a spring training game, formerly played for the Blue Jays. He spent last season in Japan and led the Central League with 38 homers, before signing with Detroit as a free agent.

Yankees 4, Angels 2 — New York completed a three-game sweep in Anaheim as Andy Hawkins won for the first time in five decisions this season.

Hawkins allowed four hits in 5 1/3 innings. He lost his shutout in the sixth when ex-Yankee Luis Polonia homered and Devon White had his third double of the game with one out. Lee Gueterman allowed White to score on Chih-David's infield grounder, but pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings before Dave Righetti finished the game with one out.

Bill Swift (0-0) pitched 1 2/3 innings and allowed three runs in the first game. The Yankees got all their runs in the first three innings off Jim Abbott (1-3), who allowed eight hits.

Indians 9-8, Rangers 5-0: Maldonado drove in five runs, then sat out the second game because of a strained left side as rookie Jeff Shaw, making his first major-league start, combined with Doug Jones on a shutout.

Maldonado, signed as a free agent, had seven home runs and 20 RBIs in 23 games this season before Tapani (3-2) took over. He scattered five singles, struck out a career-high nine and walked no batters.

Toddy Higuera (3-1) became the first Milwaukee starter to lose this year after 11 victories.

Twins 4, Brewers 0: In Milwaukee, rookie Kevin Tapani pitched his first major-league shutout as Minnesota won its fifth straight game.

The Brewers had scored first in all 21 games this season before Tapani (3-2) took over. He scattered five singles, struck out a career-high nine and walked no batters.

Toddy Higuera (3-1) became the first Milwaukee starter to lose this year after 11 victories.

Stirred up Mets take it out on Astros

NL Roundup

By Jim Donaghy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's hard to imagine Jim Franco in a fury. He has a soft grin, a nice word for all and an easy-going personality. In the 11th inning of the opener of Sunday's doubleheader against Houston, however, the New York Mets found out you don't get a Brooklyn boy bothered.

With the score tied 3-3, home plate umpire Doug Harvey called a bases-loaded ball on Franco. Harvey ruled the left-hander failed to come to a full stop.

Franco charged off the mound with his arms flying wildly and mouth running freely.

"I just jumped out of my shoes," Franco said. "Doug's a good umpire but I thought he had a bad call. My brother was sitting behind the plate and almost jumped over the screen."

Franco's brother stayed in the stands and Johnny cooled off enough to stay in the game.

In the bottom of the 11th, the Mets tied the score on Tim Lincecum's RBI double and Kevin McReynolds followed with a three-run homer for a 7-4 victory.

McReynolds wasn't done, either. He led off the eighth inning of the second game with a home run to give the Mets a 7-6 victory and a sweep.

New York entered the twelfth having lost six of seven and was looking for something — or someone — to get it going.

"We may be able to look back and say Doug Harvey's call got it going," Mets third baseman Howard Johnson said.

Franco (1-0), who had walked just one batter all season before Sunday, got himself in trouble with a pair of walks in the 11th inning.

Franklin Stubbs led off with a bunt single and Eric Anthony followed with a walk. One out later, Gerald Young walked to load the bases but Alex Trevino hit into a force play at home.

With a 1-1 count on Eric Yelding, Harvey called the ball and the Astros took a short lead.

"Once in a while certain things happen to get the blood pumping," said manager Dave Johnson, who argued the call and said, "That got everybody arguing and hot."

The Mets were anything but hot in the first five innings against Jim Delella.

The Astros, meanwhile, took a 3-0 lead in the first inning off Dave Cone on Ken Oberkell's RBI double and Stubbs' two-run homer.

But the Mets tied the score in the sixth, pinch-hitter Gregg Jefferies walked, Mark Carreon sang for the Mets' first hit and Teufel hit a three-run homer to wake up the crowd and his teammates.

"Delella comes to you with heat and the primary thing you have to do is lay off his fastball," Teufel said.

McReynolds' 11th-inning homer came off Astros reliever ace Dave Smith (0-2). Smith allowed one home run in 58 innings in 1989 and was only the third homer he has given up in the last 204 innings. It was also Smith's third longest winning streak in tennis history.

"I felt good about our chances in the first game," Astros manager Art Howe said. "One run lead, Smitty on the mound ..."

In the ninth, Oberkell gave the Astros a 6-2 lead against struggling Ron Darling with a three-run homer in the fourth inning. It was only Oberkell's 29th career home run in 144 games.

But the Mets tied the score with four runs in the sixth off starter Mark Portugal on Darryl Strawberry's solo homer and a three-run shot by Mickey Sasser. Jefferies hit a solo homer in the third to move New York within 3-2.

The Mets had six home runs in the doubleheader and led the National League with 33.

"These were two games we could have won," Howe said. "They hit the home run, but if we had made a couple of bunts it might have been different."

McReynolds hit a 3-1 pitch from Dan Schatzeder (1-1) over the left field fence to give the Mets the sweep of their home-run derby.

"Hopefully this will get us over the hump and put a little life into this team," McReynolds said. "It might get our blood flowing."

It was Earnhardt's third victory at Talladega but his first Winston 500 triumph.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Conchico Ferreira, a Portuguese cross country runner adapting well to a hilly course and strength-training humility, led nearly all the way in winning the women's division of the Pittsburgh Marathon on Sunday.

Ferreira, 28, collected $26,385 for winning in 2 hours, 30 minutes, 33 seconds, nearly a minute ahead of runner-up Kersin Pircard of West Germany.

Twins 4, Brewers 0: In Milwaukee, rookie Kevin Tapani pitched his first major-league shutout as Minnesota won its fifth straight game.

The Brewers had scored first in all 21 games this season before Tapani (3-2) took over. He scattered five singles, struck out a career-high nine and walked no batters.

Floods devastate suburb

DALLAS (AP)—A record flood crest on the rain-swollen Trinity River surged southward toward the Gulf of Mexico today, threatening to swamp rural areas along the way after devastating a Dallas suburb.

The death toll from the flooding caused by last week's thunderstorms stood at six today, all in Texas. Twelve Texas deaths have been blamed on weather in the past several weeks.

The Red Cross in Texas counted 723 dwellings destroyed and more than 2,000 damaged in the last two weeks by the state's most serious flooding since 1958.

Water from the Trinity stood several feet deep in the Rochester Park area outside Dallas, and some homes were submerged. Flood stage is 30 feet and the Trinity stood at 43.8 feet in Dallas early today. More than 400 residents were evacuated last week.

Alister Crumley said this is the third time in a year his home has been flooded. He moved back in two weeks ago after spending $11,000 and several months rebuilding from two floods last year.

"I don't think I'll be able to do it again, I'm so deep in debt," he said. North Texas has had 22.06 inches of rainfall in the first four months of 1990, the most since 1922. As much as 7 inches of rain fell within 24 hours in some areas in past days.

Flooding continued in rural counties along the Trinity south of Dallas, as high water washed out levees. At Trinidad, 60 miles southeast of Dallas, the river was 47 feet above flood stage, far above the 28-foot flood stage.

In Dallas, the Red Cross has opened shelters for evacuees since heavy rain, flooding and tornadoes swept across North Texas last week. Through the weekend, about 1,500 people had been sheltered and more than 12,000 meals served, the Red Cross said.

OVERFLOWING — The Arkansas River covers lands and surroundings Sunday in Pine Bluff, Ark., as the river was expected to crest at its highest level since 1957. Heavy rains have caused flooding throughout the South.

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Former hostage Frank Reed, in Dallas, said he was "in a better mood" than he was when he was held for 44 months by Islamic captors, says he kept his spirits up by using matches to draw pictures of his family.

He drew images of his Syrian-born wife, Fred, and son, Tank, on the ceiling and the door of his cell to remind himself that he must stay alive if he wanted to see them again, Reed said Sunday at a news conference.

"I knew... if I didn't keep my life going there certainly wasn't going to be any Fred or any Tank," he said. "And that permeates and transcends all of our thinking."

Reed called for negotiations to free the remaining 45 Americans and 10 other Westerners held captive in the family.

He said that on several occasions his captors told him that "all they want is someone to talk to us... We had some not so nice (thoughtful)... We had some we thought weren't willing to trade or negotiate for our lives."

Pope cheered in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II was cheered wildly by crowds as he began an eight-day visit here today. He is the first pope to visit Mexico since 1968, and his visit is seen as a landmark in the relationship between the Catholic Church and the Mexican government.

In a gesture that indicated warmer relations lie ahead, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari changed plans at the last minute and met the pontiff at the airport Sunday instead of sending his foreign minister.

Salinas, greeting the pope, said: "Your visit is a new encounter with the generosity of a nation of many cultures, plural visions and deep religious sentiments."

He said he took office two years ago, Salinas has encouraged improved ties with the Vatican while officials have widely ignored strict decades-old laws that intend to keep the church out of politics.

In February, Salinas named a personal representative to the Vatican, a sign the diplomatic ties Mexico severed in 1926 might soon be restored.

During his 13-hour flight to Mexico, the Polish-born pope told reporters that his trip was "something new and very important... We are making efforts to improve relations between the state and the church."

The Roman Catholic Church bucked the pope in the 19th century, which is why restrictions on the church were written into the constitution during the country's 1910-1920 revolution.

The 1917 constitution denies recognition to the church and bars priests from speaking about politics from the pulpit or wearing robes in public. The church is also barred from owning property.

But Mexico is a country where some independence leaders were priests, and where the Catholic church claims 90 percent of Mexico's 85 million people. The government has thus struck a working arrangement with the church, which runs schools through intermediaries while priests speak out on political issues.

Arrest fuels home release outcry

OREM, Utah (AP) — A retired man whose release to a group home after three decades in a mental hospital spurred a public outcry was behind bars today for investigation of theft and attempted burglary.

Born Murphy, 52, was jailed Sunday following a report of an attempted break-in Saturday at a home about seven blocks from where he lives, said Detective Gerald Nielsen. Murphy awaited arraignment today.

The incident renewed the outrage of neighbors who have argued that releasing a man with histories of violence should not be housed in a residential area.

Murphy spent 31 years in the Utah State Hospital after being arrested in 1957 for the rape of a 5-year-old girl. During police interviews, he confessed to killing a 23-year-old woman.

He was judged incompetent to stand trial for rape and was never charged in the slaying.

In 1989, the Utah Supreme Court ordered his release after finding Murphy had been mistakenly ruled insane. He moved into the group home in January, and within days neighbors formed a City Council meeting to demand his removal.

In the weekend incident, the house was not entered, but the homeowner's dog was stolen and trophy bearing Murphy's name was discovered outside the back door and a pair of his sunglasses was found in the animal's doghouse, Nielsen reported seeing Murphy with the dog, police said.

Nielsen said it was unlikely, based on the evidence, that Murphy had been framed. He would not elaborate.

Murphy had called police at least twice Thursday and Friday to report he was being harassed by boys, but officers found no indication of trouble, Nielsen said.

The group home houses three other men under a restrictive permit issued by the City Council.

negotiations. He said he agreed with President Bush's position of refusing to negotiate for their release. "I don't like the thought of negotiating for human lives," Pollitt said. "I just don't see it right."

Reed said other hostages were mistreated but not as badly as he was.

He was as shocked as you were to hear what Frank has been saying here," Pollitt said. "I can't say I was mistreated. I was never beaten or mistreated. I did everything in my power not to cry out and not let himself be any Fred or any Tank," he said. "And that permeates and transcends all of our thinking."

Reed called for negotiations to free the remaining 45 Americans and 10 other Westerners held captive in the family.

He said that on several occasions his captors told him that "all they want is someone to talk to us... We had some not so nice (thoughtful)... We had some we thought weren't willing to trade or negotiate for our lives."

Hostage drew pictures to keep up his spirits

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Former hostage Frank Reed, in Dallas, said he was "in a better mood" than he was when he was held for 44 months by Islamic captors, says he kept his spirits up by using matches to draw pictures of his family.

He drew images of his Syrian-born wife, Fred, and son, Tank, on the ceiling and the door of his cell to remind himself that he must stay alive if he wanted to see them again, Reed said Sunday at a news conference.

"I knew... if I didn't keep my life going there certainly wasn't going to be any Fred or any Tank," he said. "And that permeates and transcends all of our thinking."

Reed called for negotiations to free the remaining 45 Americans and 10 other Westerners held captive in the family.

He said that on several occasions his captors told him that "all they want is someone to talk to us... We had some not so nice (thoughtful)... We had some we thought weren't willing to trade or negotiate for our lives."
