ILLEGAL CONTRABAND — These bags and boxes of fireworks were among the items seized by the Manchester police.

Police confiscate illegal fireworks

Manchester police confiscated about $3,000 worth of fireworks Friday morning after arresting a Hartford man they said was selling them out of the back of a pickup truck.

David Gillis, 47, was charged with possession and sale of fireworks, released on a $5,000 bond and scheduled to appear Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court, police said.

He was arrested at 11 a.m. in the parking lot of Lynch Toyota, 500 West Center St., after employees of the automobile dealership noticed the truck in its parking lot, police said.

Among the fireworks confiscated were: 2,276 M-80s, 14,000 "bricks" of firecrackers, 2,600 bottle rockets and 150 other rockets, police said.

Democrats hedge pledge on Buckno replacement

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Democratic members of the Board of Directors say they will not block the appointment of a Republican to replace former GOP Director Susan Buckno — unless the candidate is ultra-conservative.

With a board left with four Republicans and four Democrats after Buckno's resignation this week, the GOP will need the support of at least one of their counterparts to approve any nominee.

Although they are not sure who the candidate will be, the Republicans desire someone who has "traditional" GOP values.

"We're going to leave it wide open," said Republican Director Ronald Oella.

Oella, who probably will take Buckno's place as second-in-command on the board, said, "There may be someone out there in the community that perhaps has never been involved in politics, but shares our views on education and the budget."

Buckno did not share the party's view on the education and the budget. Her tough stance on the issue — along with votes from Democrats, not Republicans — led to the adoption of a school budget that is greater-funded than the GOP would have liked.

The party's inner squabbles preceded her resignation. Whether or not the Republican's urge to nominate a conservative successor to Buckno will stall or block an appointment depends on such Republican definition of such values, says Democratic minority leader Stephen T. Cassano.

"We're not going to be obstructionists, but we're not going to appoint Willy Nilly just because he's nominated," Cassano said. "If Oella considers himself as having traditional conservative values, then it will remain a 4-4 board."

However, he says, "There are many good, sensible, reasonable people in the Republican party, who are active in the community — starting with Geoffrey Naab."

Naab, a former director, opted not to run for re-election last fall. A lawyer, Naab currently serves as an alternate member of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Democratic Director Peter P. DiRosa said also that the Democrats do not plan to stand in the way of the Republican nomination.

"If it's some known severe ideologue, then there could be a problem because of the ramifications for the town," DiRosa said.

He added that the GOP membership on the board, particularly Oella, is already quite conservative.

"We've witnessed first hand the worst. Maybe we should welcome someone who may be better," he said.

Oella, who calls himself conservative, struggles off such attacks, saying their based on the liberal philosophy to which most Democrats subscribe.

"Liberalism, I hate to say it, is dead in America," Oella chuckles. "That's what the people in Manchester said last fall is that their tired of liberalism, and they don't want that bull anymore."

But even though last fall's election was the first time in 18 years that Republicans captured a majority of the directors' seats, that majority is weak, Democrats say.

DiRosa said the entire Buckno affair is disturbing because the image of the town's government has been tainted.

"I'd never seen a situation quite so muddled as the situation we have here now," he said. "The net result is town government has suffered tremendously."

"Lost in all this, if Oella's budget passed, there would have been a 2-mill tax increase," DiRosa said, adding that the GOP had promised conveniently during the campaign not to raise taxes.

However, the Republicans contend they had pledged to make an effort not to raise taxes.

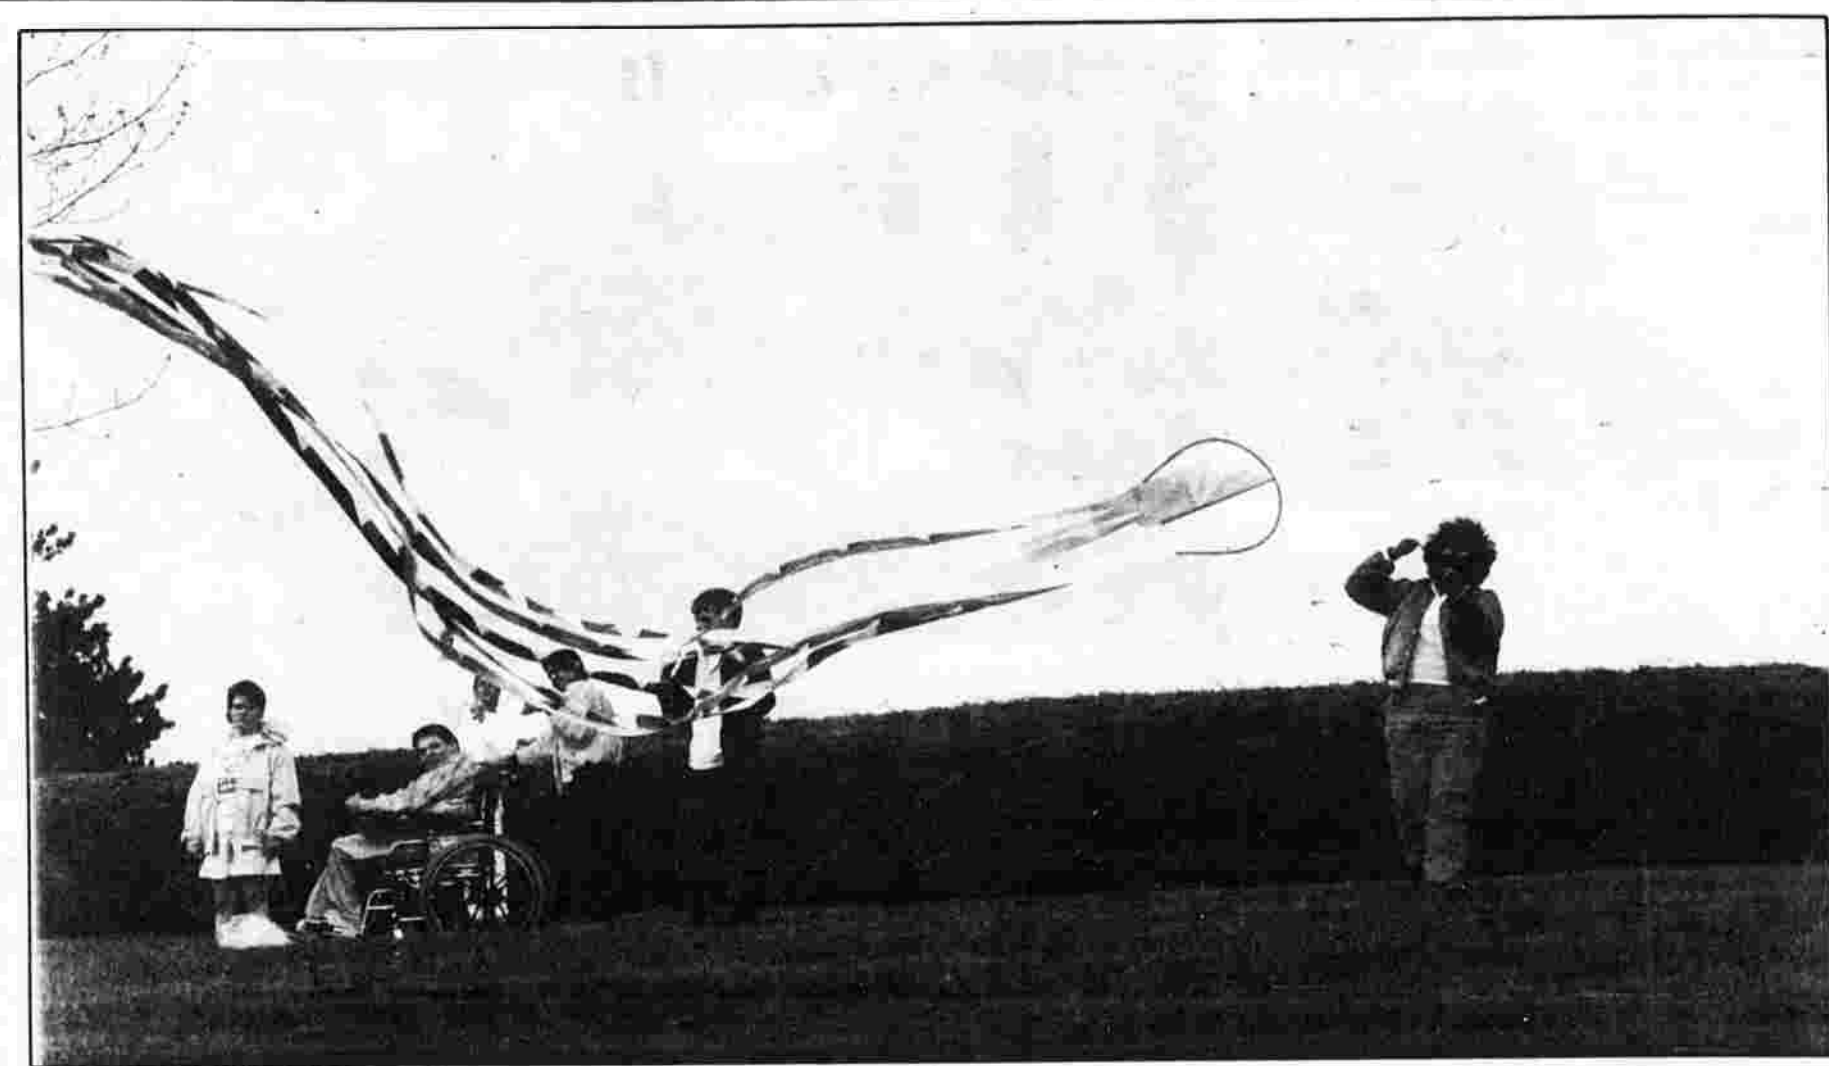

Regardless of taxes and the Buckno budget, the Republicans say they think they must get back to work.

"We should get it aside," said Republican Mayor Terry Werhoven. "We can't dwell on the past, but must look to the future."

Werhoven and Oella say the key issues ahead are getting votes to accept a plan to renovate town hall, revising the Town Charter, and facilitating the reconstruction of Main Street. But first they must find a replacement for Buckno.

"We're looking for someone who will serve the best interests of the town," Werhoven says.

Cassano says, "We want someone who will work for the goals of the town."

Cocaine addicts use hemorrhoid cream

For pain and itch of sore noses

NEW HAVEN — Cocaine users and addicts who use Preparation H to soothe their aching noses are giving New Haven-area pharmacists a headache by stealing bundles of the hemorrhoid ointment.

Besides shoplifting over-the-counter medications to relieve nasal membranes irritated by snoring or smoking cocaine, addicts also steal laxatives (for cocaine-induced constipation) and compact tampons (for packing nose bleeds).

"In some cases, they'll clear a whole shelf. It boggles our mind," said Don Zettervall, the manager of Brooks Pharmacy in Milford. "You can always tell a junkie — they always want a brand name."

The frenzy for such products has forced many pharmacy managers to keep only a few boxes on the shelf at one time, they said this week.

Many of the more popular stolen goods are often even sold on the street at discount prices, pharmacists said.

Police say the suppository form of Preparation H is also often used as a base to form chunks of cocaine for smoking in pipes.

Carol Emerling, spokesman for Whitehall Laboratories Inc., which makes Preparation H, said the company would not discuss uses of the product not listed on the label.

Area drug enforcement officials say they are aware of the non-traditional uses of Preparation H, but they seldom find large quantities during drug busts because it is mostly used by individual users or low-level dealers.

Michael Prior, head special agent for the Drug Enforcement Agency's Hartford and New Haven offices, has seen some more atypical uses of suppositories with drugs.

Nicaragua threatens firings as public employees strike

By Filadelfo Aleman
The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — About 60,000 government workers staged sit-in strikes Friday, demanding 200 percent pay increases and paralyzing the new administration as it struggles to rebuild Nicaragua's shattered economy.

In a showdown with the Sandinista-dominated civil service, President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's government threatened to declare the strike illegal and fire those who do not return to work.

The strikers also are demanding the restoration of a repealed civil service law that protected public employees from firing and gave fringe benefits that Mrs. Chamorro said her government cannot afford.

"We have inherited a country that was virtually sacked and in complete bankruptcy and it is our responsibility to get it going again," she told a news conference.

Mrs. Chamorro, inaugurated April 25, announced her government would review all laws passed by the leftist Sandinistas their last two months in office.

At the time, the Sandinistas had control of the National Assembly, but Mrs. Chamorro's 14-party United National Opposition took a majority in the parliament with its victory in elections Feb. 25.

Public employees — a majority of them Sandinistas — occupied almost all ministry buildings Thursday night and early Friday, virtually paralyzing her government.

The 300 employees at the presidential office building where she talked to reporters sat around idle.

Labor Minister Francisco Rosales told the news conference: "Workers on strike should return to their jobs, otherwise we will declare the strike illegal and apply the Labor Law and those who do not show up will be fired."

"We are revising all the laws and decrees enacted by the previous government from Feb. 25 to April 25, since what constitutes the nation's capital cannot be appropriated in an arbitrary manner," she said.

Mrs. Chamorro said some of the earlier laws passed by the Sandinistas will also be revised, including some that confiscated private businesses and turned them into state enterprises.

They include laws forcing big landowners to rent their land to state-run cooperatives. She said a return to privately run farming was needed to revive farm production for the next planting season, which begins in about two months.

Food production dropped so sharply under the Sandinistas — and during the U.S.-imposed economic embargo — that Nicaragua was forced to import crops it used to export and shortages occurred of such staples as rice and beans. The Bush administration lifted the embargo on the day the U.S.-backed candidate was inaugurated.

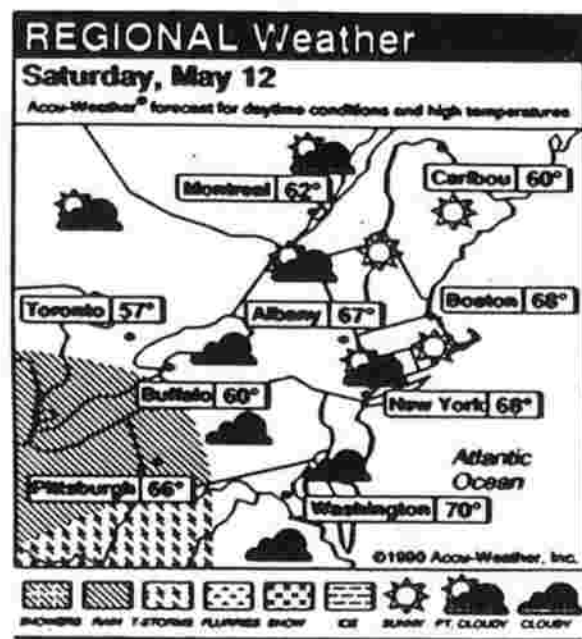

Another law being revised allowed senior Sandinistas to confiscate homes of the wealthy.

Rosales said the government will negotiate wage increases "but it will not do this under pressure." He said the civil service law, which organized public employees, was unconstitutional.

He talked to reporters as he struggled with his keys to open the door of the Labor Ministry, which the strikers had locked shut.

Government employees rejected a 60 percent pay increase Mrs. Chamorro had ordered this week when she announced a 9 percent devaluation of the cordoba, Nicaragua's currency. The cordoba has been devalued four times in less than a month.

HEARING THE BUDGET — A sparse crowd turned out Friday night at Coventry High School for the annual meeting on the town budget. Town officials have received a petition to force a referendum on the budget, leading to the small turnout Friday.

Annual meeting discussion centers on May budget vote

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Talk at the Annual Town Meeting Friday centered on the $15.9 million budget being petitioned to referendum and not the budgets themselves. Only 105 people attended the meeting in the Coventry High School gymnasium, which holds 500 people.

Resident Roland Green had collected the needed 200 signatures to petition the meeting to a referendum. The referendum will be held by paper ballot on May 22 from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Compared to past years, the 2 1/2-hour meeting was less emotional and almost without incident. The only tense moment came when Board of Education Chairman Patrick Flaherty called for a point of order when put on the spot by a resident who asked him if he will vote for the budget.

Flaherty replied that the question was inappropriate. Meeting moderator Vincent Moriarty agreed with Flaherty, and they were later supported by a meeting vote.

Most of the discussion centered on the referendum instead of the town meeting vote or the proposed $10 million school budget.

"We have 6,000 voters in town. To pass a $16 million budget with 100 voters is not a democracy," said resident Robert Olmstead.

The positioning of the meeting to referendum has been criticized by people who say it delays the budget process and detracts from direct input with elected officials. Others called the referendum a "necessary evil" in order that a large number of people can vote on the budget.

Green criticized the 4.5-mill increase that would result if the budget passes.

"I think the goal should be not to raise the mill rate," he said. "Live within the grand list and revenue."

He also criticized the Board of Education for approving a window installment in the school superintendent's office at a cost of about $3,000, and for reinstating the transitional grade program for children not ready for grade one. The program affects about 20 students at a cost of $30,000. Green questioned the value of the program.

Flaherty noted the program was restored as an "ethical commitment" to parents who had been told it would be available.

One resident complained that students were being "brainwashed" to get parents to support the education budget by some teachers who told children in classes they were going to lose jobs. Also, a flyer sent home by the PTO at one school supporting education spending was criticized.

"I didn't realize being in favor of the best quality education for your child was a political stand. I thought it was just common sense," said resident Robert "Skip" Walsh.

Many spoke in support of the education budget and some even criticized a recommendation to replace more experienced teachers with less experienced ones to save money in salaries.

"It's worth it to save a few dollars and not get the best experience?" asked resident Archie Haynes.

Town Council Chairwoman Joan Lewis said in an interview that the deciding factor in passing the budget will be if parents get out and vote for education spending. She said that the budget only supports existing programs and not new programs or personnel.

Some raised questions as to whether it was truly a bipartisan budget despite all council members and board members voting for it.

Board Republicans, the minority party, said they do support the budget because they feel it is what most of the townspeople, who elected them, want.

Blanche Strater, chairwoman of the Republican Town Committee, said she opposes it and will work to defeat it in favor of a zero-mill increase.

Bruce Stave, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, said the committee voted unanimously to support the budget.

Despite sour deal, town pension fund sound

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

The rate of return for investments with town pension fund money exceeds the amount expected by the firm which studied the accounts, according to Pension Board Chairman Fred Geyer.

The about $28 million pension fund has been the subject of recent controversy because a bad deal is expected to cost the town a $200,000 investment plus the $32,000 in interest that the investment was to accrue.

Geyer said Friday that the actuarial study by the Martin E. Segal Company indicated to the town that the should attain an 8-percent yield from pension fund investments. However, Geyer said the about $28 million pension fund has been the subject of recent controversy because a bad deal is expected to cost the town a $200,000 investment plus the $32,000 in interest that the investment was to accrue.

return rate, which he could not estimate, has been greater.

This windfall is the reason that the town's pension contribution included in next year's budget had been reduced by more than $67,000.

Geyer outlined the major investments and the way in which they are controlled. About half of the investments are in stocks with the other half in more secure holdings such as corporate and government bonds and real estate.

All of the transactions, Geyer says, are monitored by a consultant from Smith Barney Inc. The consultant, Matthew Saltzman, helps the Pension Board decide which of the hired investors should be retained by the town.

Presently, five institutions make major investments for the Pension Board — three dealing in stocks and two in bonds and real estate.

Constitution Capital Management of Hartford, KRM Management of San Francisco, and Gubelli Asset Management of New York manage about $6 million, $3 million, and $2 million in stocks, respectively.

Renaissance of Cincinnati and Gardner & Preston Moss of Boston manage $3 million and $2 million in bonds, respectively.

The sour investment was not made by the Pension Board, but by Town Treasurer Roger Negro, who is charged with making short-term investments.

The town believes the investment with the Colorado-based Merus Corporation went sour because the company folded. And the town is working with federal and state law enforcement agencies to determine if Merus has acted fraudulently.

Ames appeals for help in restocking shelves

ROCKY HILL (AP) — The new head of Ames Department Stores Inc. has appealed to creditors to help the discount retail chain restock its empty shelves, especially in time for back-to-school sales at the end of summer.

Nearly 400 of the company's creditors gathered Thursday in New York to discuss Ames' bankruptcy filing and how the company plans to dig out of its problems.

Stephen L. Pister, Ames' new chief executive officer, had little to say about the decisions that led the 680-store retailer into U.S. Bankruptcy Court last month. But he asked for cooperation.

"I expect no favoritism from you, but I expect your honest effort to get us back in business quickly," he said.

Ames has sought protection from creditors while it files a plan to reorganize. Thursday's meeting was called by the U.S. Trustee's office, an arm of the bankruptcy court, to choose a committee of creditors to participate in the case.

Michael Cook, a bankruptcy attorney representing Ames, said the company owes an estimated $528 million to 33 banks, $355 million to bondholders and an estimated $350 million to suppliers.

Antonio Alvarez, a financial consultant, said the company has $45 million in cash available. Ames has also received court approval to borrow $25 million from Chemical Bank in New York.

Chemical has agreed to lend Ames up to $250 million. A hearing to approve that financing is scheduled for next Tuesday in New York, Alvarez said.

Pister said Ames intends to use the money to restock its stores. Company President George Granoff said the shelves are bare because many manufacturers stopped shipping merchandise in March when they feared the company could not pay its bills.

Pister said he and Granoff are studying the chain's merchandise to determine which items the company will continue to sell. He said they will also decide how many stores to close.

In addition, Pister said he is evaluating Ames' managers. "Very quickly I'll be changing key members of the team," he told creditors. "You'll see quite a few changes and you'll recognize some of the names. I've had literally hundreds of calls from people asking to join up."

Legislation designed to create a Public Transportation Commission was passed by the state Legislature before the legislative session closed Wednesday. The legislation, which will assist the state in developing mass transit programs, was co-sponsored by state Rep. Paul Munnis of Manchester.

"Transportation experts in our area have concluded that mass transportation is the only viable solution to transportation problems in the greater Hartford region," said Munnis, R-Manchester. "Yet the Department of Transportation has been reluctant to put significant resources into mass transportation and is instead conducting a huge road-building project."

Munnis is the co-chairman of the House

Republican Policy Group on Mass Transit.

The approved but proposed commission will be comprised of 18 members representing a wide range of business and transportation concerns. It will advise and assist state officials with planning, development and maintenance of adequate rail, bus and other public transportation services in the state.

Once per year, the commission will hold public hearings in each metropolitan area to evaluate the adequacy of such mass transit facilities. It also will have the power to issue bonds to fund public transportation projects.

Munnis said he believes the commission will do a better job at managing mass transit than the state Department of Transportation has done. He also said the advisory commission approved by the house must have a strong voice within DOT to combat the present philosophy of continued road building.

Probe widens into accident of fire truck

WATERBURY (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board on Friday joined local officials in investigating whether mechanical problems were responsible for a fire truck accident Thursday that killed two firefighters and injured three others.

Alfred Whitehead, president of the International Association of Firefighters, said the union asked the NTSB to investigate because of initial reports that the pumper may have had faulty brakes.

Whitehead also said there was a question about the condition of the tires on the truck.

"It has been suggested that this vehicle should not have been operating on the streets," he said, although he stressed that no official cause had been determined.

Robert Massicotte, director of training for the Waterbury Fire Department, confirmed that the NTSB had joined the investigation, but declined to comment about the brakes or condition of the tires.

"It is still being investigated," he said. "Nothing's been confirmed."

Waterbury officials were still making funeral plans late Friday for Howard Hughes of Waterbury and Herberto Rivera of Bristol, who were killed when the truck went out of control and struck a tree on West Main Street.

Two others were treated at Waterbury Hospital and released. A third, Raymond Lodge of Waterbury, was upgraded to stable condition after being listed as critical at the hospital Thursday night, a hospital spokesman said.

The accident occurred as firefighters, responding to what turned out to be a false alarm, swerved into the driveway of Robin Ridge Apartments and smashed into the huge elm tree at the entrance.

Witnesses said the driver sounded the horn over and over again as the truck careened down the hill of Highland Avenue toward busy West Main Street. Eyewitnesses said the driver was apparently warning motorists to clear out of the way, suggesting that the truck's brakes had failed.

"I've seen other trucks come down Highland Avenue many times, and they always slow down when entering West Main Street," said Judy Manuvec, an office manager at a business located near the crash site.

The firefighters were on their way to Arett Sales at 1875 Thomson Ave., answering an automatic alarm that apparently was set off accidentally.

Wesleyan students continue their fast

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A group of Wesleyan University students continued their fast Friday as they sought administration approval of a varied list of student demands.

The students gathered in the basement below the university president's office Wednesday, charging that the university is not fulfilling its commitment to non-discrimination and diversity.

University spokesman William Holder said the students continued fasting Friday, and also sponsored a forum that drew more than 300 students to discuss the fast and recent problems on campus.

Wesleyan was the scene of two firebombings last month, including one that damaged the president's office. Last Friday, racist graffiti was found throughout the basement of a black student dormitory. No one has been arrested.

A spokeswoman, sophomore Laura Ruderman, has said at least 11 students would participate in the strike, with some taking part in shifts. She said the students would abstain from all food but would drink water and juices and take multivitamins.

Lawmakers urged to establish clear policy on nuclear power

WASHINGTON — Lawmakers grappling with the nation's energy strategy must establish a clear policy for or against nuclear power so either the industry can expand, or alternative fuels can be found to meet future energy needs, the chairman of the New England Council said Thursday.

The vicious 17-year battle over Seabrook Station has cast a dubious shadow on the future of nuclear power, and unless federal leaders step in and draft a "clear and defensible" position, the country may be caught off guard in the face of an energy shortage, said former Vermont Gov. Thomas Salmon, who now chairs the New England Council.

"It's important to settle the process and the problem and decide whether nuclear power, as an energy option for the future, is feasible," Salmon said during a congressional hearing on issue. "If not, we're going to have to fill in the blank with something else."

Salmon charged that most of nuclear power's problem is political, caused in part by two decades of protests and legal struggles over Seabrook. The battle over the plant — which some claim is the sole reason its costs have escalated from about $1 billion in 1986 to about $6.5 billion today — symbolizes the current nuclear stalemate between the industry and environmental groups, he said.

But "what are our energy options?" Salmon asked members of the House Interior subcommittee on energy and the environment. With the clean air act, Congress virtually has "declared war on coal." Natural gas has "source and transportation limits," as does oil, which fuels about 50 percent of New England's energy needs, he said.

By process of elimination, we come back to nuclear power," which means lawmakers must sort out the politics and establish a policy.

California Rep. George Miller, chairman of the energy panel, agreed, but said there are many regulatory problems which must be solved in the process.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which oversees the licensing, construction and operation of nuclear facilities, was first established as the Atomic Energy Commission in 1954 to be an advocate for nuclear power. Since that time, the agency has always been staffed with commissioners who are professed nuclear power advocates, said Corbin McNeill, president of Philadelphia Electric Company.

Under that kind of leadership, some of its decisions seem suspect, said Connecticut Democrat Sam Gejdensen, a member of the committee.

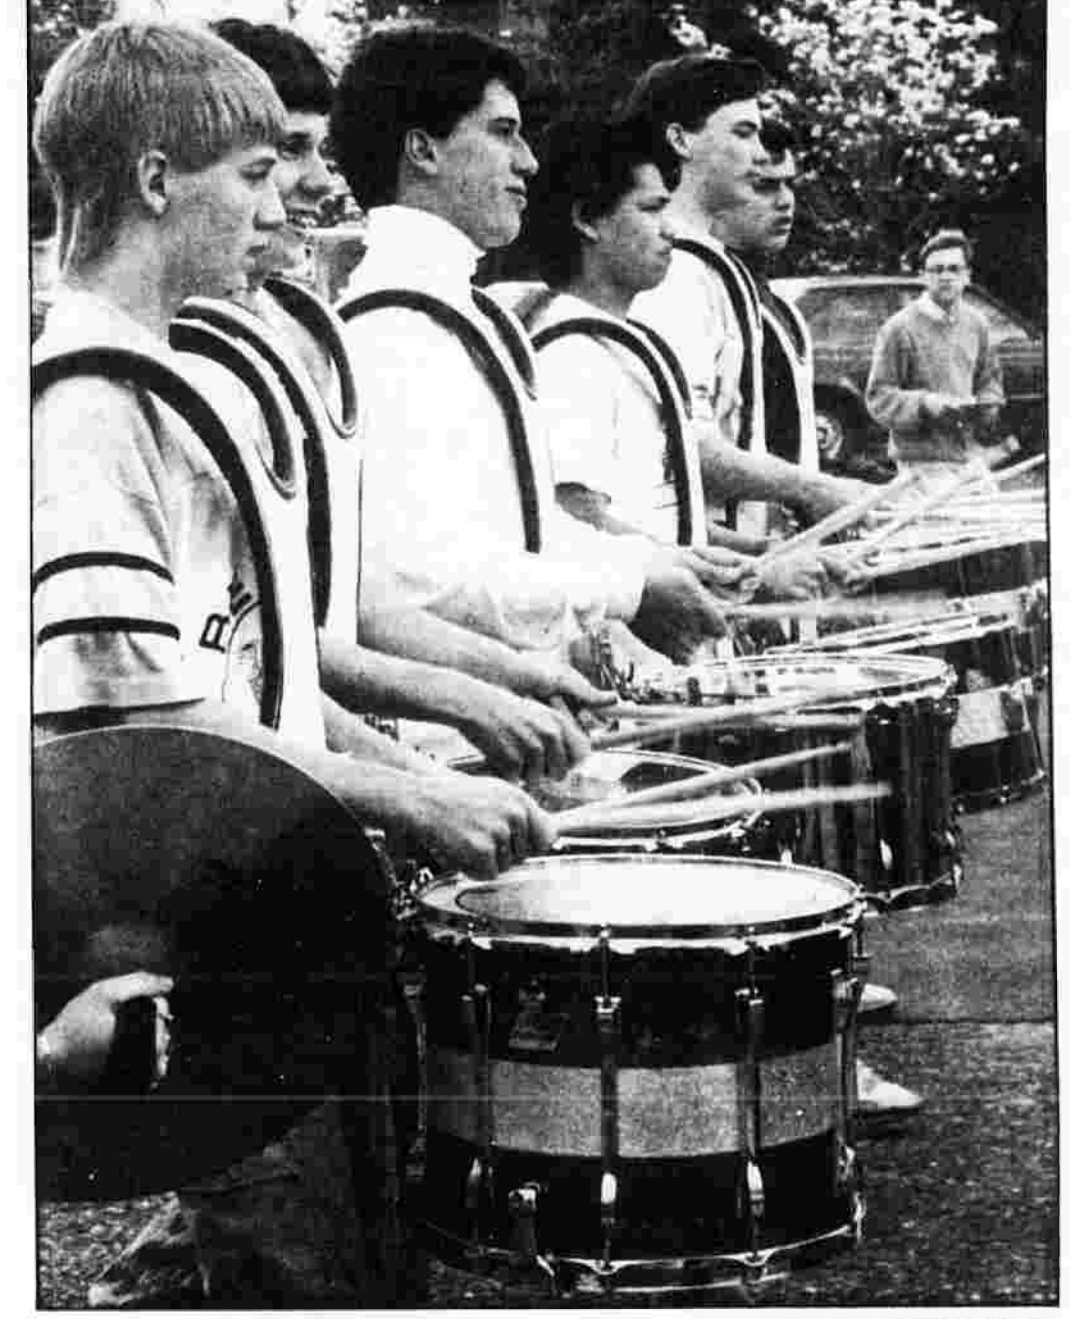

"They go through the hearings, and issue regulations and ... several companies go ahead and build. They put billions of dollars on the line, then it becomes very hard institutionally to go back and re-examine when one agency is the judge, jury and prosecutor for the whole process," he explained.

But it can be done successfully, Salmon said. Vermont may be the most environmentally sensitive state in the nation, but it's also the most reliant on nuclear power.

"Somewhere, we've demonstrated we can run a nuclear power plant the right way," he told lawmakers.

"The plant has strong support from the people, in fact in March, residents in the town of Vernon voted overwhelmingly to site a low-level nuclear waste repository adjacent to the plant."

Despite Vermont's success, McNeill said the uncertainty of the whole regulatory process has boosted the price of bringing plants

Nuclear plants are shut down

WATERFORD (AP) — Three of Northeast Utilities' four nuclear plants were shut down Friday, as the company coped with seaweed from a rainstorm and uncertainty over the radiation level of water in one reactor.

Northeast shut down Millstone 3 on Thursday when seaweed from Long Island Sound became clogged in the filters that clean the water used to cool steam in the reactor, said company spokesman Louis J. Keating. The plant was expected back on line late Friday or early Saturday.

The company also decided Thursday to keep Millstone 2 off line for a month because engineers were uncertain about radioactive water in the reactor. The plant has been shut down since Tuesday.

Connecticut Yankee has been off line since September for refueling, maintenance and repairs. It is expected back on line in July.

Millstone 1 is operating at full power.

Northeast had shut down Millstone 2 on Tuesday when the water level in the steam generator dropped. The company had planned to restart the turbines this week, but decided to keep the reactor off line because engineers were concerned about fluctuations in the level of radiation in reactor water, Keating said.

"The problem was a lack of consistency," Keating said. "They felt it was prudent to not bring the plant back on line."

He stressed that the radiation levels in the water never exceeded those allowed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and said no radioactivity was detected leaving the plant site.

Keating said Millstone 3 was shut down because of seaweed and other debris clogging filters at the plant. High winds from Thursday's storm drove the seaweed into the filters.

He said all four plants were expected to be operating for the peak summer season.

"Right now this is a really low-demand part of the year, so it's not having any impact on power supply," he said of the triple shutdown.

Ex-UTC exec sentenced for role in Navy contract

By W. Dale Nelson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A former executive of United Technologies Corp. was sentenced to six months in prison and fined $5,000 Friday for conspiring to obtain inside information about Pentagon competition for a lucrative Navy contract.

Roger K. Engel, 49, who was vice president of the company's Norden Systems division in Norwalk, was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton in Alexandria, Va.

Engel could have received a sentence of up to five years and been fined as much as $250,000.

The former executive cooperated with the Justice Department's investigation of Pentagon procurement fraud, which the department called "Operation Ill Wind."

Engel was the third former Norden Systems executive to plead guilty to participating in a conspiracy to obtain inside bid information about a $150 million contract to build a battlefield air traffic-control system for the Marine Corps.

A former senior vice president of Norden, James E. Rapinece, 54, and a former marketing executive of the division, C.C. Richardson, entered guilty pleas in December and agreed to cooperate with prosecutors.

The three men said they arranged in 1988 for Norden to pay defense consultant Thomas E. Muldoon $49,500 to get information about the Navy's contract competition from his contacts in the Defense Department.

Muldoon, 60, was sentenced to 27 months in prison and fined $10,000 in February for participating in an unrelated scheme to bribe a Pentagon procurement official. He is appealing his conviction.

Muldoon obtained information with the help of another defense consultant, Mark Saunders. Saunders in turn obtained information about Norden's ranking in the competition from George Stone, then a senior Navy procurement official.

Stone agreed on May 4 to plead guilty to charges of conspiracy and conversion of government property. He was the 37th guilty verdict or plea out of the "Ill Wind" investigation, which began in 1986.

Native Americans are reburied in Indians' sacred ceremony

LEDYARD (AP) — About 150 Indians have reburied the remains of seven native Americans, amid smoke from ritual campfires and solemn chanting to a drumbeat.

The sacred ceremony Thursday was conducted at the Mashantucket Pequot tribe's ancient burial ground, to bury remains unearthed in 1988 when a resident found bone and teeth fragments while digging a foundation along the Niantic River in Waterford.

The ceremony reflects a growing spirit of cooperation between archaeologists and Indians over the handling of unearthed remains. Not too long ago, the bones would have been sent to a museum.

"But now we realize scientific information doesn't take precedence over moral and ethical issues," said University of Connecticut professor Kevin McBride, whose team of archaeologists unearthed the bones.

McBride praised the Mashantucket Pequot tribe's cooperation for their cooperative approach to scientific study.

"They're showing everybody, archaeologists included, that there's a way to do research that can be a cooperative venture," he said.

In return, McBride said, archaeologists "have to respect their ceremony. Archaeologists don't go looking for graves any more."

McBride said the remains are believed to have been those of Pequots who lived nearly 400 years ago. They included a young woman, three teen-agers, a man in his 30s, a child of about 6 and a 1-year-old baby. For the reburial, the remains were wrapped in traditional deerkin shrouds, placed in wicker baskets and lowered into two graves.

Slow Turtle, supreme medicine man from Massachusetts' Wampanoag Tribe, and Wildcat, spiritual elder of Nova Scotia's Mic Mac Tribe now living in Warren, R.I., officiated.

The three fires burning in front of the graves, Wildcat explained, symbolized the past, the present and the future.

"Fire is a sacred entity," he said.

Indians from 18 tribes from Maine to Florida, most of whom are attending a convention this week hosted by the Mashantucket Pequot, participated.

A GIFT OF FLOWERS — Alyce Frigon, 2, watches as Becky Petrone hands flowers to her neighbor Tracey Russell at Wickham Park Friday. All are from Vernon.

Homeless man held in death of woman

STAMFORD (AP) — A 35-year-old homeless man was charged Friday in the slaying of a homeless woman whose body was found last week in a Stamford park.

Thomas Brady Olson was being held in a Stamford city lockup in lieu of $500,000 bond, said Stamford Police Lt. Joseph Falzetti. Olson was scheduled to be arraigned Monday in Stamford Superior on a charge of murder.

Police questioned Olson about the slaying of Teresa Watson for several hours Thursday after arresting him on an unrelated charge of being a fugitive from justice. He was wanted by the Pima, Ariz., County sheriff for violating probation on a robbery conviction.

Falzetti refused to say what led police to Olson. When he was arrested Thursday, he gave police an address of 300 W. Broad St., Stamford, but police said it was not clear how recently Olson had lived at that address.

The body of Watson, 32, was found May 1 by two children playing softball on a wooded hillside in Cummings Park.

An autopsy by the chief state medical examiner in Farmington determined she died from a single stab wound to the neck up to a day before her body was discovered.

Police still have no motive for the slaying, Falzetti said. Police have said there was no evidence of robbery.

Concorde forced to land at Bradley

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) — A British Airways Concorde jet was forced to make an unscheduled landing at Bradley International Airport because of heavy rain and fog.

The Concorde, a narrow-bodied jet that travels at speeds of 1,350 miles-per-hour, was diverted from John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York to Bradley Thursday night.

John King, assistant operations specialist at Bradley, said the Concorde landed at Bradley at about 6 p.m., and remained until about 8:30 p.m., when it was cleared for takeoff to New York.

King said the plane was refueled during its stop at Bradley. All of the passengers remained on board, he said.

Norma Mosia, a reservation agent for British Airways in New York, said the Concorde flight originated from Heathrow Airport in London. The British Airways Concorde travels between London and New York twice a day, at flight times of 3 hours and 50 minutes.

Daniel's brother enters guilty plea on drug charges

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Mayor John Daniels' younger brother, Robert Daniels, faces a five-year prison term after pleading guilty to cocaine charges, court officials said.

Robert Daniels, 48, pleaded guilty Tuesday to sale of cocaine and conspiracy to sell cocaine. As part of the plea agreement, New Haven Superior Court Judge Richard A. Damiani said he probably would sentence Daniels to 10 years in prison, suspended after five, and probation for three years.

Daniels is free on $25,000 bond pending sentencing June 28. He has been receiving treatment for his drug addiction since his arrest.

The mayor is not going to make any comment at all on that," said Carol Smith, a spokeswoman in his office. In February, Robert Daniels surrendered to his brother, Melvin Daniels, a New Haven police detective who has since retired from the department.

Police raided Robert Daniels' house on Feb. 1 and seized 3 ounces of cocaine and 27 bags filled with smaller amounts of cocaine in Daniels' room.

During the investigation, police also watched while Daniels sold $100 worth of cocaine to an undercover officer from Wallingford.

Three of Daniels' roommates were arrested in the raid and have pleaded guilty to conspiracy to sell cocaine, court officials said.

Weekly Health Tip

MOTORCYCLE HELMETS
Medical and hospital care costs (averaging two years) for 100 motorcyclists at a major trauma center were over $2,700,000 — nearly $26,000 per patient. Two-thirds was paid by public funds, mostly by Medicaid. Researchers at the U. of Washington urge that wearing motorcycle helmets be mandated by law, especially as 67% of the cost is borne by taxpayers.

John E. Hedlund

John E. Hedlund, 77, of 386 Pater St., a successful athlete and coach who led several town teams to championship seasons, died Friday (May 11, 1990) at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of the late Edna (Tedford) Hedlund.

A lifelong resident of Manchester, he was born Nov. 13, 1912. He coached the British American B.A.'s, the only baseball team from Connecticut invited to play in the national semi-professional tournament. The tournament was held in 1949 in Wichita, Kan. The B.A.'s were the champions of the Manchester Twilight League for the years 1946-49.

Hedlund, who served briefly as town recreation director in the mid-1950s, was considered a great baseball and basketball player.

"He was certainly one of the outstanding athletes in Manchester history," said Earl Yost, former sports editor of the Manchester Herald who played baseball and basketball for Hedlund.

Yost said Hedlund was a great excellent baseball catcher, but his playing days were cut short when he was hit in the eye with a foul ball. Thereafter, his vision was impaired.

Before taking a job in the purchasing department of the Hamilton Standard Division of United Technologies in Windsor Locks, Hedlund operated a sporting goods store on East Center Street.

He was also a member of the Manchester Lodge of Masons No. 73. Hedlund is survived by two granddaughters, Jacqueline and Jennifer.

Poll: Kennedy most 'in' over Roseanne, Turtles

STAMFORD (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will be more "in" in the 1990s than either comedienne Roseanne Barr or the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, according to a survey of 1,000 children across the country.

The youngsters polled by Waldenbooks also think a female president is more likely in this decade than either a black president or the fall of communism, according to the survey results released this week by the Stamford-based book company.

This is the third year Waldenbooks has surveyed the members of its book clubs to gauge opinions and attitudes on current events.

"The survey provides us with valuable insight into what American readers really care about, which is why we regularly survey them and share the results with the public," Ron Jaffe, the company's senior director of marketing, said in a statement.

Surveys were sent to the 4,000 adults and 1,000 children in the clubs, with a majority of the members responding by the end of April. Eyan Urbas, a spokesman for the company, said Friday.

Kennedy, the liberal Democratic senator from Massachusetts, was voted by 55 percent of the children to be most "in" in the 1990s. He was trailed in the polling by MTV, bubble gum, comedian Eddie Hedlund, one grandson, John Hedlund; and a brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Fred and Dorothy Tedford of Manchester. He was predeceased by a son, John A. Hedlund.

Memorial services will be held at a date and time to be announced in St. Mary's Episcopal Church. Burial will be private at the convenience of the family.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society.

The Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., is in charge of arrangements.

Arthur Van Sicklin

Arthur M. Van Sicklin, 88, formerly of 29 Community Road, South Windsor, husband of Hazel (Parkington) Van Sicklin, died Friday (May 11, 1990) at a local convalescent home.

Prior to his retirement, Van Sicklin was a projectionist at many area movie theaters including the Manchester and the Hartford State Theater. Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Arthur R. Van Sicklin of South Windsor; a daughter and son-in-law, Shirley and Henry Wayne of South Windsor; seven grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren.

A graveside service will be at 12:30 p.m. Monday at the Wapping Cemetery, South Windsor. There are no calling hours.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wapping Community Church Building Fund, 1790 Ellington Road, South Windsor 06074, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

The Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., is in charge of arrangements.

David F. Roach

David F. Roach, 58, of 348 Lewis Hill Road, Coventry, husband of Marjorie (Lawrence) Roach, died Thursday (May 10, 1990) at the Windham Memorial Community Memorial Hospital.

Roach was born Nov. 2, 1931 in Hartford and had lived in Manchester before moving to Coventry in 1964. He served as a draftsman in the U.S. Army during the Korean Conflict. He was the owner of Ramshead, Inc. of Coventry.

He is also survived by his daughter and son-in-law John and Colleen Gally, also of Coventry; a brother, Thomas Salkauskas of Glastonbury; a sister, Sally Fitzpatrick of Millisnocket, Maine; and a step-father Charles Kaiser of Plainville.

The funeral will be at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the family's home at 348 Lewis Hill Road. Calling hours are from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Burial will be private at the convenience of the family.

Memorial donations may be made to Visiting Nurse of Community Health of Eastern Connecticut, Inc., Route 6, Columbia 06237.

Alice Brown

Alice (Granstrom) Brown, 75, of 50 Oakwood Road, the wife of John A. Brown, died Thursday (May 10, 1990) at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Brown was born May 25, 1914, in Indian Orchard, Mass. She moved to Manchester in 1952. She was a secretary and bookkeeper for New England Matchplate Company of West Hartford before retiring in 1981. She was a member of the Wapping Community Church.

She is also survived by a daughter, Susan B. Robs of Schenectady, N.Y.; two brothers, Carl E. Granstrom of Seabring, Fla. and Herbert S. Granstrom of Holyoke, Mass.; a sister, Ruth G. Carlson of Centerville, Mass.; two grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Monday at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Burial will be in the East Cemetery. Calling hours are from 1 p.m. to the hour of the service.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wapping Community Church Memorial Fund, 1790 Ellington Road, South Windsor 06074.

Laurence J. Cahoon

Laurence Joseph Cahoon, 75, husband of the late Helen Aukstolis, of East Hartford, died Friday (May 11, 1990) at an area convalescent home. He is survived by a son, Richard M. Cahoon of Manchester.

He was born in Boston, June 30, 1914, son of the late Horace E. and Delia (Anabro) Cahoon. He lived in the Hartford area for 60 years. Prior to his retirement, he was employed as an assembler for the former Royal Typewriter Co. of Hartford.

Cahoon is survived by another son, Robert L. Cahoon of Bloomfield.

The funeral will be 9 a.m. Monday in St. Rose Church, 30 Church St., East Hartford. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, East Hartford. There are no calling hours.

The Newkirk & Whitney Funeral Home, 318 Burnside Avenue, East Hartford, is in charge of the arrangements.

Cyclone relief under way

By Vijay Joshi
The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Medical teams and troops began a massive relief operation today to repair the damage from the decade's worst cyclone, which battered India's southern coast for two days and killed at least 210 people.

The cyclone roared in from the Bay of Bengal on Wednesday and swept inland Thursday, swamping 100 villages, flattening thousands of houses and affecting more than 2 million people. The storm weakened today.

At least 200 people were killed in Andhra Pradesh state, which bore the brunt of the high winds, heavy rains and tidal waves, said the state's top relief official, Arjuna Rao. In neighboring Tamil Nadu state, 10 people died.

"The toll will be higher as more and more bodies are surfacing every hour," Rao said.

Officials in the Andhra Pradesh state capital, Hyderabad, said four districts were hit hard by the cyclone, whose winds peaked at 155 mph. Six million people live in the districts.

Many towns and villages were still without electricity because the storm ripped off power lines. Trains stopped running, and about 100 telephone exchanges were damaged.

A 1977 cyclone in the region, although less intense, left more than 10,000 people dead. This time, early satellite warnings resulted in the quick evacuation of 150,000 people, officials said.

News reports quoted a state government spokesman saying that eight air force helicopters, which were ready to drop food packets to people in marooned and inaccessible areas, could not take off because of more bad weather.

A mobile telephone exchange with a satellite link was sent to Krishna district, where the entire telecommunications network had broken down.

Troops and medical teams were in many affected areas. A team of army engineers with motorboats and pumps to remove water from buildings were en route to Vijayawada and Machilipatnam towns which were still under water.

Travel between the two towns remained difficult because of water damage and thousands of uprooted trees littering highways.

Reports said large tracts of rice, a major crop of the region, were badly damaged. Commercial mango and banana gardens also were affected.

Administration blames Soviets for stalemate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's vaunted "Open Skies" proposal is snagged at the negotiating table and the Soviet Union is mostly to blame for the stalemate, the State Department said Friday.

In a brief statement confirming reports from Budapest, the site of the East-West talks, the department said several key issues were in dispute the day before the deadline for a treaty.

These include the territory to be overflown by unarmed aircraft and the number of such surveillance flights.

Richard Boucher, a department spokesman, said the Soviets had blocked agreement on most of the issues because they "favor a less intrusive regime."

Last year, when Bush reworked a 34-year-old proposal by the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Open Skies was celebrated as an example of declining East-West tensions.

Bush was signaling his determination to match Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in overcoming Cold War suspicions. Meeting in Brussels in December, the 16 NATO allies approved Bush's proposal to let unarmed Warsaw Pact aircraft fly over their territory in search of military activity.

Then, in February, NATO and Warsaw Pact countries meeting in Ottawa, Canada, agreed to set annual quotas for overflights and to invite neutral nations to participate. Details were to be settled in time for a treaty signing today.

Inner city landlady battles drugs, foreclosure

By Lauren Neergaard
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Sandra Hartman, a pistol-packing landlady, banged on the open apartment door with her .380-caliber automatic and peered in at the litter of cocaine bags and razors lying among broken toys.

"Maintenance. Anybody here?" she called, crunching broken glass underfoot as she made sure no one was hiding in the apartment.

"Look at this, they've been burning in here," she said, pointing to carpet burns and blackened aluminum cans, more evidence of cocaine. "But I could fix this place up, this apartment, real easy — the cabinets are still here and the floor's OK — for about $5,000."

Gordon Valley is 200 bullet-riddled, low-cost apartments in a seedy section of Martin Luther King Jr. Drive. It's also the newest stop on Ms. Hartman's daily — and nightly — patrols of her 11 low-cost apartment complexes.

Wearing her bulletproof vest, Mrs. Hartman evicts drug users and pushers, disperses loiterers and punishes litterers. She says it's the only way to keep the "good tenants."

During a visit in December, U.S. Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp praised Mrs. Hartman's anti-drug approach to housing. But she says she will lose all her properties unless someone in the government lends a hand.

In a city where 20 percent of low-cost housing is substandard and more than 700 people are on the Atlanta Housing Authority's waiting list for openings, Ms. Hartman has a reputation as a firm but just landlady.

"Ms. Hartman, she'll work with you," said Am Parks, who has lived at Oak Valley Court, a complex that won a federal Rental Rehabilitation award, for a year. "I help, though. When they fight out here, I talk to both sides to try to stop it. I say this neighborhood ought to get along together."

Ms. Hartman spends about $10,000 a month on a 24-hour security for the complexes. She has fenced in the largest, Overlook Atlanta, where tenants say they now feel secure.

"One time, a lot of young kids would be hanging around the corner all day, and you know what they were doing, with their gold chains on and their cars with the gold trim," said Donna Dawson, who has lived at the complex two years. "Now, the tenants are real proud at how clean it is."

Ms. Hartman doesn't believe she can stop drug trafficking. The traffic from Overlook Atlanta simply moved across the street to a convenience store, she says. And one dealer — known to tenants as Frog — has managed to elude her.

"He was hassling me one day," Ms. Dawson said.

The Associated Press

NO FOOLING AROUND — Sandra Hartman carries her pistol at the ready as she makes her nightly tour of her 11 apartment complexes in Atlanta.

"He said he was going to shoot me. But he's not as big as he'd like us to think he is." Other dealers repeatedly have threatened her.

Ms. Hartman, 41, bought her first low-cost complex eight years ago. Three years later, she had 1,400 units throughout the city and a 5 percent vacancy rate. Drug-related evictions have dropped her occupancy rate to about 30 percent.

She lost her own home and 122 units to foreclosure this year and hasn't made mortgage payments on some complexes since January. She expects a response on her request for federal aid, including a moratorium on back payments, within the month.

Without it, she says she could lose everything.

"If I don't get the (mortgage) payments reduced, all the efforts I've made, risking my life, all I've done for my tenants and my kids will be for nothing because they will be boarded up again," Ms. Hartman said.

"How could they allow 1,400 units to be stum again?"

Ms. Hartman has $500,000 in federal funds to renovate Gordon Valley, but no one will lend her the $700,000 more she needs. And Mayor Maynard Jackson hasn't answered her proposal to house the homeless in her projects instead of building more projects, as Jackson has proposed.

Bonn, Moscow negotiate Red Army costs

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany disclosed Friday that the price for German unification may include temporarily picking up part of the tab for Soviet troops based in East Germany.

In another development, West Germany's chief government spokesman accused East German communists of inciting labor unrest in that country. He also said the two Germanys are close to agreeing on the final terms of a treaty that would merge their economies in two months.

The economic merger, which will make the West German mark the official currency of East Germany, will cause financial problems for the Soviet Union, which keeps 380,000 troops in East Germany.

A West German government official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Soviet-West German talks began this week in Bonn over how to cover the living costs of the Red Army troops in East Germany.

It appears that Soviet soldiers in East Germany could start receiving West German marks for their living costs in exchange for Soviet rubles after the economic merger.

Such an arrangement would mark the first time a NATO country ended up paying in its own currency for the stationing of Soviet troops.

Under current troop-stationing agreements with East Germany, the Soviet Union buys East German marks in exchange for so-called transfer rubles at a preferential rate.

The East marks are then used to pay for goods and services for Soviet soldiers stationed in East Germany. These are relatively inexpensive because of state subsidies.

But West German officials say two complex problems have to be worked out in the talks on covering the troop costs.

When the West German mark becomes the East German currency, some sort of an exchange rate will have to be established with the Soviet transfer ruble, which now is not convertible to Western currencies.

Also, the economic merger will result in the scrapping of East German subsidies, and the steep price rise that are anticipated will also have to be taken into account.

The West German official said the bilateral talks with Moscow are just starting and that it is not clear what kind of arrangement covering the Red Army's stationing costs will be worked out.

It also remains unclear how much West Germany would end up paying in deutsche marks to maintain the Soviet troops, or whether the average Soviet soldier would come out ahead.

The official said he did not know what the current costs for the Soviet troops are.

Any arrangement would be seen as temporary by West Germany. Bonn has said it is willing to let Soviet troops remain on what is now East German territory but only during a transition phase in the unification process.

Blackwell's schnoz realigned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The designer Mr. Blackwell, best known for his annual worst-dressed celebrity lists, had his face redesigned Friday.

The 60-something-year-old designer underwent a $20,000 "complete face sculpturing," including cheekbone augmentation, eye restoration, removal of silicone from previous cosmetic surgery and retiling of his nose, said publicist Michael Sands.

Regaling of his nose? Blackwell, whose real name is Richard Sylvan Selzer, had a nose job previously and it got out of line recently when he bumped his schnoz, Sands said.

Blackwell, who won't reveal his age except to say he's "under 100," said in a telephone interview from the plastic surgeon's office: "You take in a dress if it's a little big, don't you? Well, it's a little big."

The six-hour surgery was videotaped for airing on a medical show, Sands said. "We will have an unveiling later. He will look like he did when he was young."

The caustic Blackwell, who in the past designed clothes for Marilyn Monroe and Zsa Zsa Gabor, has heaped disdain on celebrity fashion frumps for 30 years.

Cleese divorced second time

LONDON (AP) — Comedian John Cleese and his second wife, Barbara Trentham, were divorced Friday.

Publicist Theo Cowen quoted the former Monty Python star as saying the couple's two-year trial separation "had gone so well they decided to make it permanent."

Cleese, 50, did not contest the petition filed by Ms. Trentham, 44, according to the news agency Press Association. The couple had no children.

Musburger goes to the source

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Sportscaster Brent Musburger says journalists should bypass public relations people and go directly to the source of stories.

"To me, the entire notion of ballclubs or individual players issuing statements through public relations people is laughable," he told about 350 people at the University of Montana on Thursday night.

Musburger, who was fired by CBS last month and recently signed a contract with ABC Sports, said he spoke from experience. When journalists reported his firing, Musburger said, many accepted the version presented by CBS spokesmen and failed to call him directly.

Musburger was in Missoula this week to receive an honorary doctorate of humane letters from the university. Musburger is a Billings native and owns a ranch near Big Timber.

Couple makes music together

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — Gov. Gaston Caperton and Rachael Worby, conductor of the Wheeling Symphony, announced Friday they plan to get married in a small ceremony later this month.

The couple made the announcement at a news conference at Ogletree Park Amphitheater, where the orchestra appears during the summer.

Ms. Worby said she didn't think her first lady obligations would affect her conducting duties.

"I intend to be music director for the Wheeling Symphony for as long as everyone in the Ohio Valley wants me," she said.

"She'll do a great job, a great job," the Democratic governor said.

Ms. Worby said she plans to keep her name as well as her Wheeling home. The governor's mansion is in Charleston.

The announcement comes less than seven months after Caperton and his wife, Dee, divorced. They had been married 23 years. Her fraud lawsuit against him was settled for a reported $11 million.

Taylor takes turn for worse

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor suffered complications including new infections in her fifth week of hospitalization for pneumonia, and will remain hospitalized for about six more weeks, doctors said Friday.

The recovery of Miss Taylor, near death two weeks ago with viral pneumonia, was dealt a setback by bacterial pneumonia and a yeast infection, her doctors said.

During the next 12 months, she will require intravenous therapy in the hospital, they said in a statement released by St. John's Hospital and Health Center.

Earlier this week, Ms. Sam said the 58-year-old actress was improving and would be released from the hospital this week to recuperate at home.

During a news conference last month, Miss Taylor's doctors revealed she was near death on April 22.

The Oscar-winning star of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "Butterfield 8" entered Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital on April 9 with a sinus infection, but her condition deteriorated and she was moved to St. John's for treatment of viral pneumonia.

She is tolerating this therapy extremely well and her doctors are pleased with her progress," Miss Taylor's publicist, Chen Sam, said after talking to doctors.

Hospital spokeswoman Paulette Weir said she couldn't go beyond the statement. Miss Taylor was still in a private room and not the intensive care unit, she said.

Bacterial pneumonia is generally considered less serious than the viral pneumonia Miss Taylor initially contracted. That's because antibiotics are effective against bacteria but not viruses.

College head charged in calls

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — American University President Richard Berendzen was charged Friday with two misdemeanor counts of making indecent telephone calls, Fairfax County police said.

Berendzen was served with a summons by a county police investigator. He was released after agreeing to appear for trial before a judge on June 28, said Fairfax County prosecutor Robert Horan.

Police spokesman Michael Profitt said an investigation found that obscene calls were made to two women on March 28 and 29. Police had evaluated about a dozen telephone calls, added Horan.

Gerard Treanor, Berendzen's attorney, was not immediately available for comment.

Berendzen, 51, of Washington, resigned as the university's president on April 8, citing "exhaustion." His resignation takes effect at the end of the school year.

In a statement read by his attorney last month, Berendzen said he was embarrassed by unspecified actions he had taken and apologized for any pain he may have caused.

Profitt said Friday that "the investigation indicates that, with the exception of one additional victim who is no longer in the area, no other violations of criminal law by Berendzen were found to have occurred."

Berendzen was a patient for about a month at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore. The hospital has a Sexual Disorders Clinic, but the hospital would confirm only that Berendzen was receiving psychiatric care.

Girl's abduction leaves parents wary of outsiders

BOSTON (AP) — The parents of a 5-year-old girl who was allegedly abducted and held for 39 days by an obsessed babysitter said Friday they'll never let anyone get so close to their family again.

Debra and Frank Ravasi, who were reunited with their daughter, Nicole, after she was found in Florida, spoke with reporters at Boston's Logan Airport on route home Friday evening.

They said the girl had yet to talk much about the 39 days she allegedly was held by Kenneth M. Cole II, who authorities described as being "obsessed" the girl. Mrs. Ravasi said Nicole didn't understand that she had been kidnapped.

"She thinks she was on vacation with a friend," Mrs. Ravasi said.

The girl, who had been missing since April 3, was found safe Thursday in the Florida Panhandle fishing village of East Port by FBI agents and a county sheriff. Cole was arrested without incident and was held Friday in Florida on federal kidnapping charges.

Medical examinations showed Nicole hadn't been abused in any way, her mother said.

Cole had Nicole call him "Dad," and had asked her to dress up as a little boy, Mrs. Ravasi alleged. She said Nicole's hair had been trimmed sometime during her disappearance from their home Milford, a town 25 miles southwest of Boston.

"He asked her to do that and she said yes," Mrs. Ravasi said.

The Ravasis had at one time taken out a restraining order against Cole after social workers alerted them that the sometime baby sitter's attachment toward Nicole appeared obsessive. However, the family allowed Cole to see the girl at least twice after the order expired.

Asked what she would do differently if they could turn back time, Ravasi said: "We probably wouldn't let anyone get as close to our family as we did before."

Nicole was reunited late Thursday with her parents. They arrived in Tallahassee, Fla., on a private jet provided by the Fox Network television program "America's Most Wanted." They were taken to a hotel to join their daughter.

"Has Ken been good to you?" Mrs. Ravasi asked the girl at their reunion. Nicole responded with a nod.

"Do you think I'm mad at you?" she asked her daughter.

"No," Nicole said.

"Because I'm not," Mrs. Ravasi said.

Two camera crews from "America's Most Wanted" were the only ones allowed inside the hotel to witness the reunion.

Sunlight affecting telescope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Each time the sun comes up or goes down on the Hubble Space Telescope, the $1.5 billion instrument wobbles slightly for reasons engineers still don't fully understand.

"It extends for several minutes, 10 or maybe 30 minutes after we come from the dark to the sunlight," Jean Olivier, a top NASA telescope official said Friday. "It's only in the later two-third of the sunlight portion of the orbit that it begins to die down."

The telescope orbits Earth every 97 minutes and goes through the dawn-to-dusk cycle nearly 15 times a day. The stabilization problem, which showed up earlier this week, is one of many headaches that have put setup work on the telescope far behind schedule.

Still, astronomers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland hope they will see the first photograph from the telescope Wednesday or Friday.

Olivier said scientists are all but certain that the telescope's solar arrays are causing the wobble. The two arrays, 40 feet by 8 feet, gather energy from the sun. The energy is converted to electricity to provide power for the telescope.

"What we haven't determined is what is exciting the solar arrays," Olivier said. "We don't know whether it's something on board the vehicle that is moving... it could be the thermal changes."

The telescope also is rolling slightly, but project scientist Ed Weiler said that problem is expected to disappear once the instrument finds star arrangements that match the pattern stored in computers.

Officials blame jetliner explosion on bomb

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An explosion and fire tore through a Philippine Airlines jet Friday as it prepared to leave Manila, killing seven people and injuring 52. Officials said a bomb may have caused the explosion.

Panic-stricken passengers trampled one another rushing for the exits, survivors said. Survivors and witnesses gave conflicting accounts of how many explosions there were before the fire, with some saying as many as three.

"They were still demonstrating the safety equipment when it occurred," said Isidro Retaso, 33, of Iloilo, the flight's destination. "There were three explosions, loud explosions, and the ceiling shattered. On the second explosion, I immediately opened the emergency exits."

Another survivor, Sony Villareal, 30, also of Iloilo, said she heard one loud explosion.

"After the explosion there was fire and thick smoke billowed. Everybody panicked after that. People were stumbling over each other trying to get out of the plane," she said.

Flight PR143, a Boeing 737-300, was bound for Iloilo, 290 miles south of Manila. It carried 119 passengers and crew members and was being towed onto the runway at about 3:20 p.m. when the explosion occurred.

Oscar Alejandro, director of the government's Air Transport Office, said the planes engines had not even been turned on yet. Police were examining the aircraft to determine the cause of the explosion.

"We're looking into the possibility that a bomb was placed there," he said without elaboration.

Eduardo Carrascano, the airport manager, said no bomb threat was received.

None of the Philippines' insurgent groups has a history of random terrorism, such as bombing airliners.

The last time any such incident occurred was in 1976, when a bomb carried by a would-be hijacker exploded in the toilet of a Philippine Airlines aircraft flying from Manila to Cebu. The hijacker was sucked out of his motive was political.

In 1986, a bomb exploded aboard a Thai Airways jet flying from Manila to Japan, killing one man. Police concluded the man had bought explosives in the Philippines and was returning to Japan when he accidentally detonated a grenade in the aircraft's toilet.

Enrique Santos, vice president of Philippine Airlines, said the plane in Friday's incident was being towed to the runway when it was rocked by a single explosion.

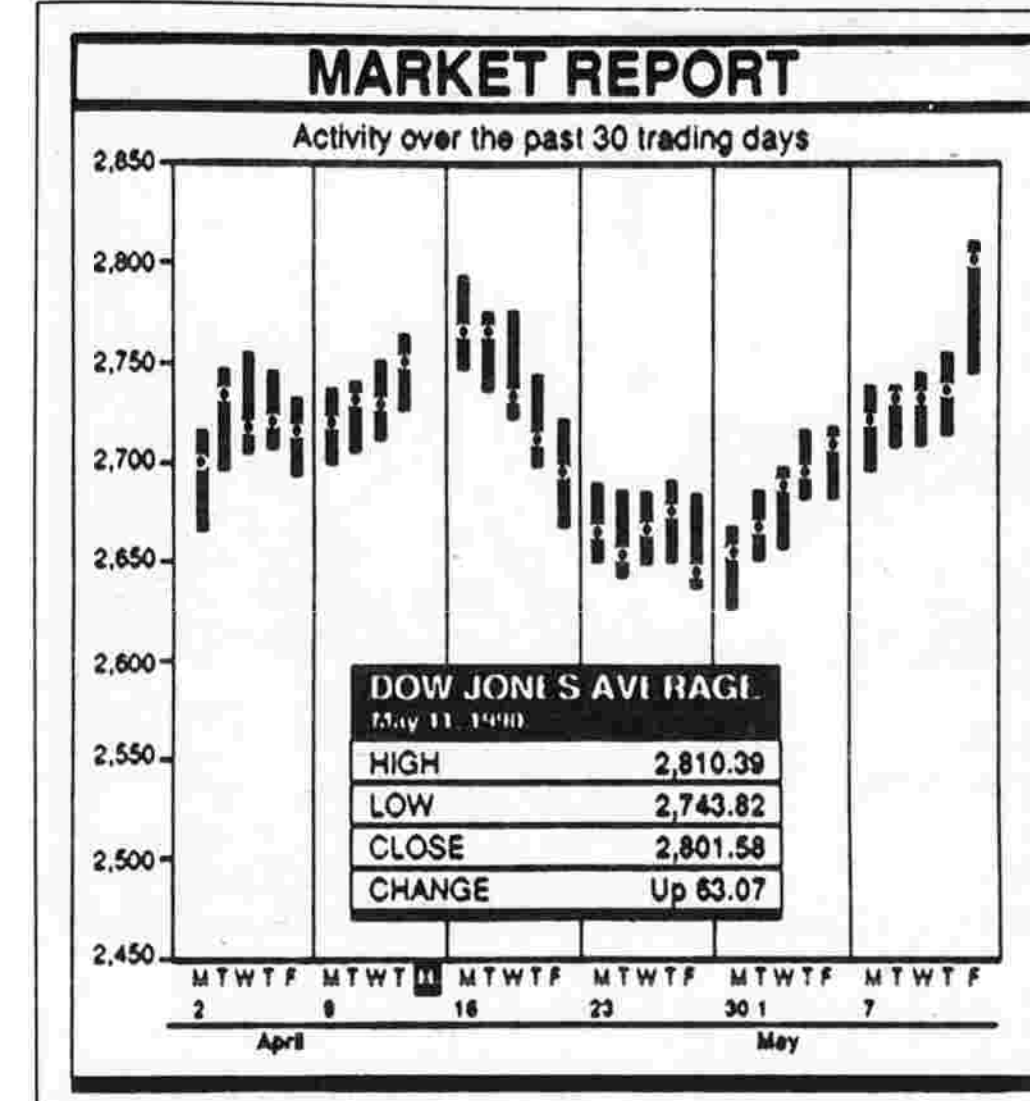

Dante Santos, the airline president, said flames swept through the plane in only four minutes. One blast apparently occurred near the center of the passenger cabin, near where the bodies were found, he said.

The cabin filled with smoke. Most of the people escaped by sliding down emergency chutes before flames spread, survivors said.

Airline employee Alvin Rieta said he was a few yards from the plane and heard only one explosion. "Immediately the door opened and people scrambled out," he said. "We suspect it's a bomb, but we can't confirm it."

The bodies of six adults and one child were found inside the burned-out cabin. The child, a girl, was found clutched to the chest of an adult woman, presumably her mother, rescuers said.

BUSINESS

Hints of economic health help lift market to near records

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In the long-running debate over whether the economy is growing too fast or too slowly, Wall Street has begun to entertain the possibility that neither side is right.

A surprising run of statistical reports in recent days has prompted some analysts to toy with the idea that conditions are close to a happy medium — favoring continued slow but steady growth without any drastic change in inflation.

Few people in the forecasting business are content simply to proclaim "clear skies ahead" and flip the switches off on their computer-powered crystal balls. As practitioners of the dismal science, they are paid to worry continuously about whatever might go wrong.

Still, just a few hints that the economy might be maintaining a healthy, sustainable momentum have been enough to lift the stock market to near-record levels of late.

For the moment, neither the inflation nor the recession worries that have beset the financial world in recent months appear to have come to fruition.

"Some economists are convinced that the economy could fall into a recession because there is a credit crunch in the financial markets," said Edward Yandori at Prudential-Bache Securities. "We've argued that this is just another scare which will soon blow away. So far the optimistic approach seems to be outperforming the pessimistic approach to investing, although we admit that the first four months of the year were not kind to bond investors."

"We believe the inflation scare which unnerved the bond market is just about over, and the credit crunch scare may soon be over as well."

The mood in the markets began to brighten early this month, with interest rates having hit their highest levels in a year.

The Labor Department's report on April employment, showing much slower than expected growth in jobs, seemed to signal that the pace of business wasn't strong enough to support the kind of inflationary expectations that had been building.

That positive view took on some fresh urgency Friday, when word came of a 0.3 percent drop in the producer price index of finished goods and a 0.6 percent decline in retail sales last month.

That helped the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials post a 91.22-point gain for the past week to 2,801.58, not far short of the record closing high of 2,810.13 reached on Jan. 2.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index up 6.83 at 192.24, the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market up 9.49 at 438.10, and the American Stock Exchange market value index up 6.77 at 352.50.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 164.34 million shares a day, up from 139.90 million the week before.

Pennsylvania pol raps Aetna decision

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Robert P. Casey is calling Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. "arrogant and callous" for its decision to stop selling car insurance in the state.

Aetna said Wednesday it was pulling out of the car-insurance market in Pennsylvania and began notifying 200,000 customers that it would not renew their policies.

The Sears, Roebuck and Co. unit, the state's fifth-largest insurer, said Pennsylvania's new car-insurance law would cause it to lose $20 million during the next year. The company also asked a state court to block the state Insurance Department from trying to foil its exodus from the car-insurance market.

The Insurance Department filed a cease-and-desist order on Thursday against Aetna, seeking to force the firm to stop sending out renewal notices.

OPINION

Whatever happened to sin with an I?

By George Plagenz

It was once "a proud word, a strong word, an ominous and serious word," as the noted psychiatrist Karl Menninger reminds us. But then the word went away. Today we hardly hear it or see it at all. The word is sin — "sin with an I in the middle," meaning sin as personal wrongdoing. Whatever became of "sin with an I in the middle?" The permissive society had something to do with its disappearance. Things once regarded as sins were no longer thought of as sinful. Sin became an outmoded notion.

In an episode of a popular TV situation comedy of a few years ago, Rhoda is trying to think of some reason why the shouldn't move in with her boyfriend Joe. "I know one reason," said Rhoda's sister. "It's a sin."

Rhoda's sister was old-fashioned by today's standards. "Modern" people no longer talk like that.

Of course, bad things still happened in the world after we banished sin. But it was ruled that society as a whole shared responsibility for these. The heavy weight of guilt was lifted from individual shoulders.

The liberal mainline churches hailed the new emphasis. Their average member wanted a little hope and cheer for a change anyway. When the Episcopal Church revised its Book of Common Prayer, the phrase "there is no health in us ... miserable offenders" was deleted. Too much of a downer.

In its slick promotional ads, the Episcopal Church boasts that it doesn't "throw the book at you" — a reference presumably to the Ten Commandments and all those rules of right and wrong that the Bible is filled with.

But some ministers are starting to question the wisdom of the course the church has taken regarding sin. They are having doubts like those that plagued Peter in the novel "Bodies and Souls."

Peter is a minister — but not for him the stern doctrines of sin and hell. "He would prefer to bring God into his parishioners' lives through the doors of hope and wonder rather than through the doors of fear. But what if, by his tolerance, he was making it possible for his congregation to slip into sin? The idea of sin was passe now, he knew, yet all the same it existed, as alluring as a cool blue lake on a hot summer's day. He felt as though he was leading his flock near that lake when he should perhaps be angrily shouting them away."

Menninger, in his book "Whatever Became of Sin?" comes down hard on the clergy for refusing to deal with sin.

"The clergyman cannot minimize sin and maintain his proper role in our culture," he says. "We need him as our umpire to direct us, to accuse us, to reproach us, to exhort us. Failure to do so is his sin."

It gives people hope, says Menninger, to have somebody point out to them that, painful though it may be, they have a personal responsibility when this or that awful thing is happening.

When no one is responsible, no one is guilty, no moral questions are asked. When there is, in short, nothing we can do, we lose hope and fall into despair.

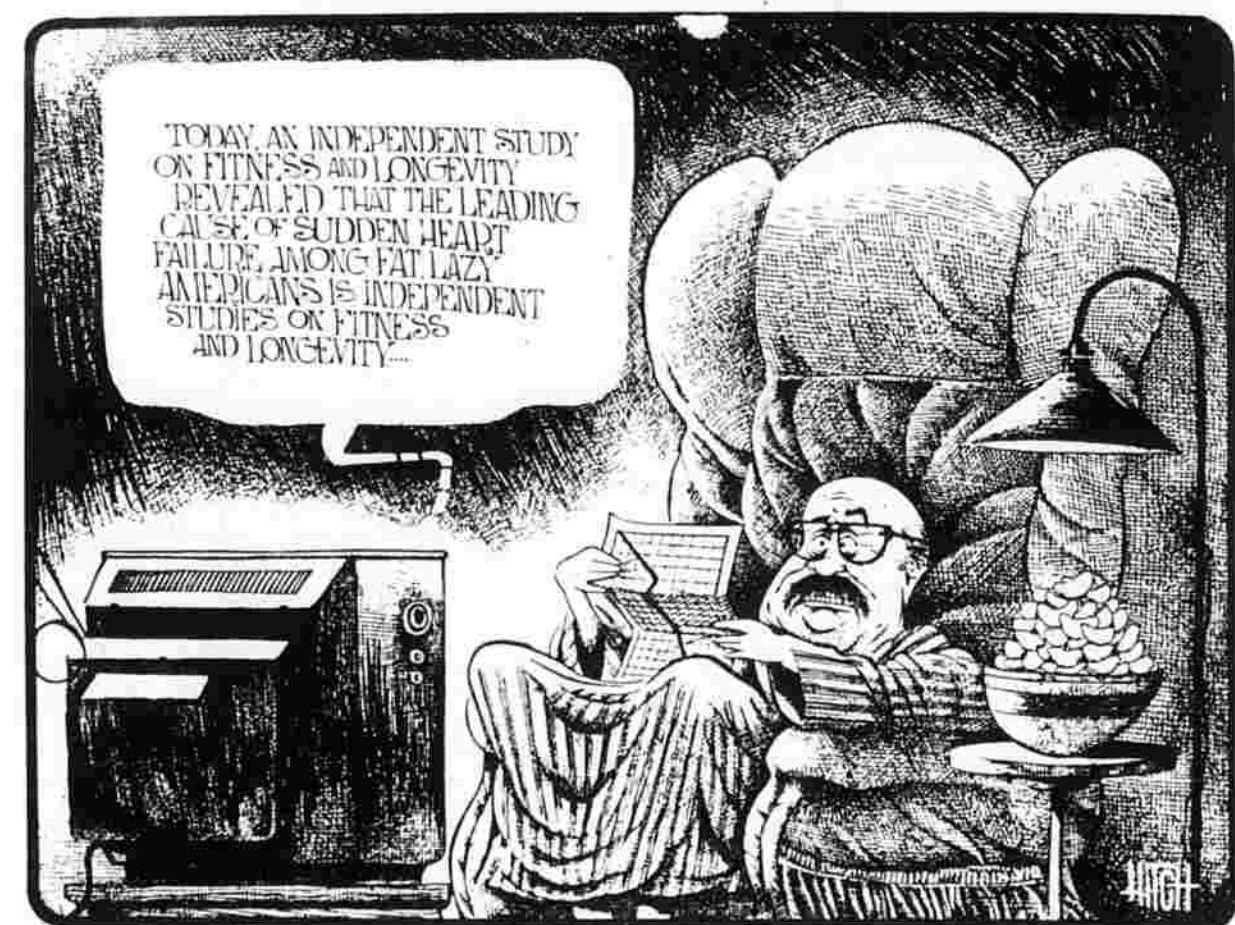

George Will, who has just written a book on baseball, grew up in central Illinois halfway between Chicago and St. Louis. When he was seven, he said he had to decide whether he would root for the Cubs or the Cardinals.

"Most of my friends became Cardinal fans and grew up happy," says Will. "But it didn't prepare them for life. Being a Cub fan does that."

It may make us happy to be told we are running with a winner — that we are "the salt of the earth, the light of the world." But when we realize that such a description doesn't square with what we know about ourselves, the effects of the "feel good" sermon evaporate.

Coming to terms with "sin with an I in the middle" may be a better preparation for life as it really is.

Bentsen weighs options

By Walter R. Mears

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen's potential campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination is at that awkward age — too promising to preclude, but with too many uncertainties to begin this soon.

No, he's not running, Bentsen says in one breath. In the next, no, he's never been one to shrink from the kind of odds that would favor President Bush for re-election in 1992. And in the breath after that, a lot of people come to see him to suggest that he run for the Democratic presidential nomination two years hence.

"If anybody had told me I'd get in a race for vice president and get my tail beat and come out of it better than I went in, I'd never have believed that," Bentsen said over a salad in his hideaway office at the Capitol.

An office in that warren near the Senate floor is one of the perquisites of seniority and legislative power. That is station of the senator from Texas, 69, a senator since 1971, chairman of the Finance Committee, vice presidential nominee who came away from the 1988 campaign regarded as the stronger figure on the defeated Democratic ticket.

There is a parallel, 20 years back, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, No. 2 on the Democratic ticket with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, starred as the underdog on the 1968 ticket and seemed the man most likely to succeed to the 1972 nomination. He tried, but his campaign collapsed before the season was half over. "Too bad," said Bentsen. "A good man." But he sees no bearing on his circumstances.

And those circumstances are good ones for a man who might run, because he doesn't have to. "I enjoy the responsibilities I have," said Bentsen, who heads the Senate's tax-writing committee. "And I can make a difference where I am."

Age would have to be a factor; Bentsen will be 71 when the next round of presidential primaries begins in the winter of 1992. That's older than Ronald Reagan when he started, but not when he finished. Reagan's presidency defused age as an issue.

And with the eclipse of Gov. Michael Dukakis, now limping toward the end of his term in Massachusetts, Bentsen is the survivor of 1988, in demand as a campaigner and fund-raiser for Democrats.

Coming up: North Carolina, then Kentucky, then "I've forgotten what other states. They just point me and I go." But Bentsen said when he was pointed toward New Hampshire, he declined the invitation, because it would have prompted speculation that he was getting a head start in the first 1992 primary state.

"If I was seriously interested in the race, I would be out there trying to pre-empt the deal right now, and raising all the funds right now, getting all the commitments right now," Bentsen said.

He said he's doing none of that. "I have no plans to, either."

At this point, neither is any other Democratic prospect, at least not visibly. Bentsen said a candidate without a national reputation would have to be active by now to stand a chance, and a name candidate would have to get started no later than next fall.

Can a Democrat defeat Bush? "As of today, no," said Bentsen. "But 1992 is a long way away politically. One day can be a lifetime."

Bentsen said his role in trying to change those odds will be in urging a consensus on moderate lines, to broaden the appeal of a future Democratic ticket. "So far we haven't had a candidate that could appeal to mainstream America," he said.

But again, he said he doesn't plan to try to be that candidate.

"Still, he's tried national candidacy twice before.

"Take it from one who has the scars to prove it," he said in a speech this spring. "National politics is a rough game... But if we are tough, if we are united, if we stand by our principles and step up to leadership, we can win."

Bentsen sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, but it didn't go well. He dropped out after gaining little support in the first round of caucuses. "I never got started," he says now.

Then as in the 1988 vice presidential race, he made his national bid with the safety net of a Texas law, tailored for Lyndon B. Johnson, permitting dual candidacy so that he could run for Senate re-election at the same time.

Holy cow, bats live in own houses

Group battles extinction of bats around the world

By Ruth Sinal
The Associated Press

Is it a laundry hamper? A mailbox? No — it's a bat house.

Thousands of oblong-shaped, beakless bat roosts are popping up on tree branches, house walls and garden poles throughout the country.

Forget your belly. These wooden structures provide partitions and perches so that bats can hang out with some measure of privacy during the daylight hours.

But when the sun sets and the mosquito swarms shut the calm of the night, the bat patrols swoop into action. One brown bat, the most common species in the United States, can gobble 500 mosquitoes an hour, according to Bat Conservation International. Your ultraviolet mosquito zapper can't improve on that batting average.

BCI, a non-profit group based in Austin, Texas, battles the extinction of bats around the world and debunks commonly held fears about the warm-blooded mammals. "Most people still believe bats are blind flying mice that spread disease, suck blood from your neck and get caught in women's hair," said Gary Graham, associate director of science at BCI.

"Wrong, on all counts." Bats are more closely related to men than to mice, only about one-third of 1 percent are vampires, and those all live in Latin America and bother cows, Graham said. Bats can see just fine. But to help them fly in the dark, they have a sonar system that emits high-pitched sounds. The echo helps direct them to insects. "The system is so sophisticated they don't bump into women's heads," Graham said.

As for disease, only 15 people in the United States and Canada are known to have died in the past 40 years of rabies transmitted by bats, far fewer than die annually from sick dogs or other pets, BCI says.

For the past four or five years, BCI has been selling about 10,000 bat houses a year. And this year, BCI is trying to get more contact with the public — and raise public awareness — by getting commercial suppliers into the game.

Gardener's Supply, a Vermont-based catalogue house, advertised pine-made bat houses in its January catalogue for the first time. "They're selling very well... about 300 in three months," said Steve Kovaric, a buyer with the firm.

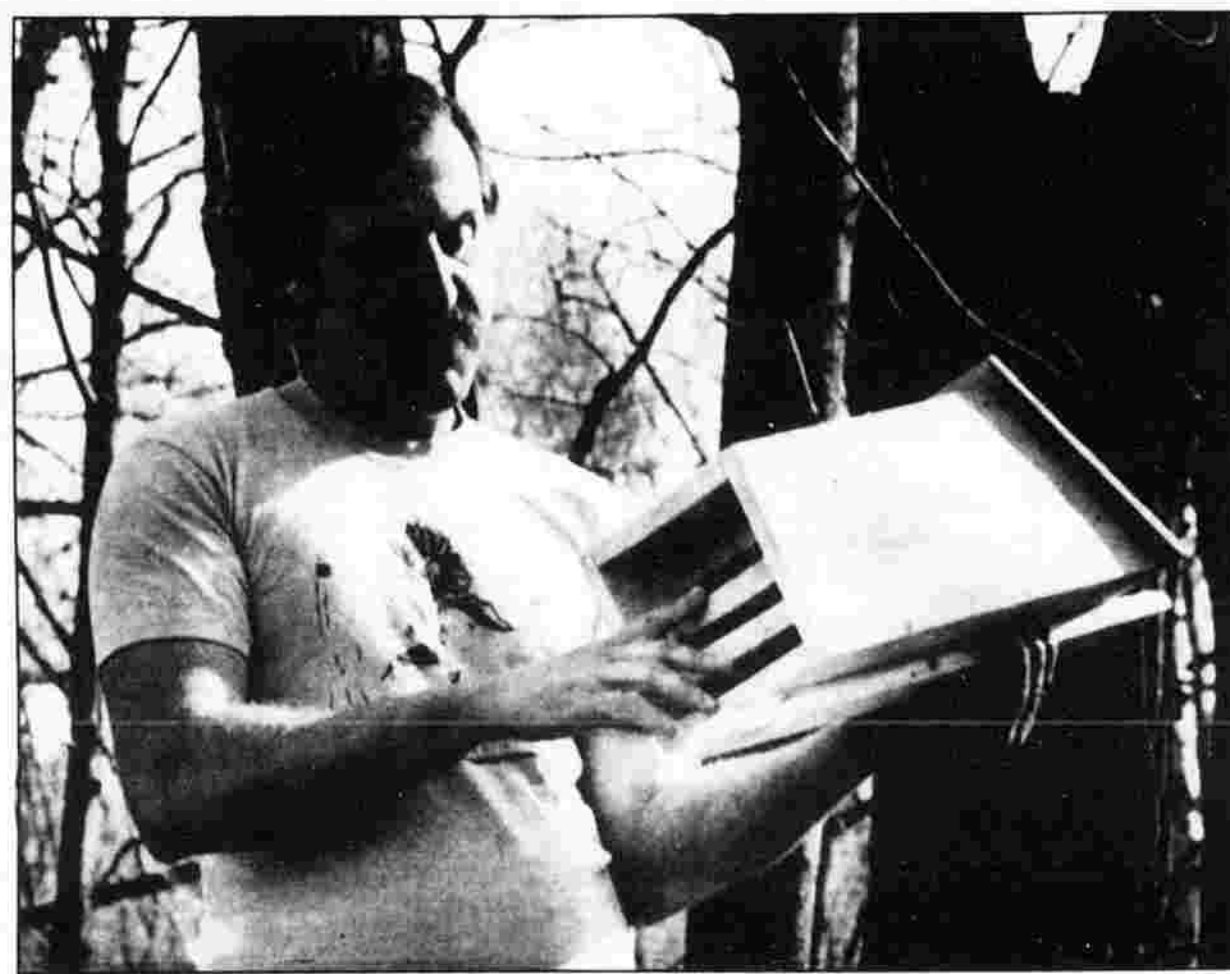

The average bat house, which retails for about $25, can hold as many as 30 female bats at a time. Usually, when the females bat their lashes, a male or two will fly into the house to visit. But "the males like their space" so only about 6 would congregate in a bachelor bat house at one time, Kovaric said.

For best results, experts suggest placing your bat house about 15 to 25 feet above the ground facing the morning sun — bats like temperatures of 80 to 100 degrees — and near a source of water.

Don't get impatient or insulted. It could take a year or more for your bat house to attract its first occupants. Bats find their houses just like birds do, especially if your neighborhood lacks natural roosts which bats prefer, such as caves or hollowed-out tree trunks.

Also, bats may only stay for a short while and then take off to roost elsewhere. Bats migrate seasonally and radar has tracked them as high as 10,000 feet at a cruising speed of about 30 miles per hour.

Bats have one of the lowest birthrates among mammals — usually one pup per year. Fortunately, conservationists say, they live to be 20. Nonetheless, the world's bat population has declined dramatically in recent years because of vandalism and hurting of the animals in some countries.

The destruction endangers fragile ecosystems that rely on bats for pollination and pest control. A recent BCI study identified 300 plant species in the tropics that rely on bats.

Bat houses, BCI says, aid conservation and conversation. Squatters are no problem, because the bat houses are closed at the top and have no bottom, birds, squirrels and other animals can't stay.

And how can you tell if bats live in your neighborhood? Either watch street lamps at night to see if bats are chasing moths and mosquitoes attracted by the light. Or, buy yourself a bat detector that picks up the critters' echolocation signals. The device is battery-operated.

Church housing group meets

The Ecumenical Senior Housing Group will meet Wednesday at St. Maurice's Church, Hebron Road, Bolton at 10 a.m.

Anyone interested in developing affordable elderly housing is encouraged to attend. The meeting is open to all seniors. There will be a pot luck luncheon at 11:30 a.m.

At the meeting an update on the visits to area elderly housing developments will be made. There will also be a presentation from the New Samaritan Foundation of North Haven.

Unitarians have plant sale

Unitarian Meeting House, East, 153 W. Vernon St. will have a plant and yard sale today from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the meetinghouse grounds.

Besides a variety of plants on sale there will also be many flea market items such as toys, books, furniture and sporting goods. There will also be a baked goods booth, free coffee and a hot dog concession.

Musical at two churches

A new musical, "Promised Land" will be presented at Emanuel Lutheran Church, 60 Church St., and Center Congregational Church on May 17.

The musical, sponsored by the Capitol Region Conference of Churches, will be presented at Emanuel at 1:30 p.m. and at Center Church at 8 p.m.

The musical is about the life of Moses. The cast is made up of professional singers. Tickets are available at either church office. The cost is $10 for a regular ticket; seniors and youth, $5. Patron tickets are $25 and they receive special seating.

Sacred concert planned

Lenny Seidel, sacred concert pianist, will be at the Faith Baptist Church, 52 Lake St., Sunday at 10:30 a.m. The public is invited.

Seidel is a native of Connecticut and after 14 years as a music director, he began Grace Unlimited, an organization dedicated to upholding the great music in the church.

Council gives thanks

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The executive council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) said of the revolutionary changes in Eastern Europe: "We give thanks for the strong and courageous leadership of the many Christians who were at the forefront of the movements for freedom, for truth and for human rights."

In Chicago, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America's social-concerns commission said, "Largely peaceful revolutions have brought down oppressive regimes and opened walls between East and West, offering new possibilities for freedom and peace."

TV series on hunger

CHICAGO (AP) — The Interreligious Coalition for Breakthrough on Hunger, including Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish bodies, is urging television viewers to tune in to a four-part series on the subject.

The series, called "Local Heroes, Global Change," produced for the Public Broadcasting Service by World Development Productions Inc., of Boston, is being broadcast by PBS on Mondays in May.

Group calls for boycott

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Catholic Women, a reform-advocating organization, has called for a boycott of churches on this Mother's Day, protesting exclusion of women from governance of Roman Catholicism.

The group, which scheduled a demonstration Sunday on the cathedral steps here, distributed a brochure saying all church laws and rules about women "are made solely by the following men" — a male pope, 151 male cardinals (nine in the United States) and, 3,238 male bishops (352 in the United States).

This month is MACC month

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director
Manchester Area
Conference of Churches

May has been designated MACC Awareness Month.

Did you know that MACC feeds 1,500 men, women and children over 11,000 meals each year with the $21,000 worth of food donated to the Emergency Food Pantry. In addition, between 65 and 80 men and women receive a hot nourishing dinner and a bag supper every week-day at Shepherd's Place, thanks to the 50 volunteers, and with the assistance of over 380 volunteers from local churches.

MACC supplies free clothing to an average of 159 families each month, and over 400 pieces of good used furniture to over 120 families each year; welcomes and counsels the 405 households who come to the MACC Department of Human Needs each year seeking support and assistance with a variety of problems; keeps over 130 warm with fuel assistance grants (amounting to almost $17,000 in 1989); offers crisis intervention to over 300 families with grants and small loans (amounting to over $27,000 in 1989) enabling them to pay rent, make security deposits, or purchase needed medications; holds out a helping hand through Project Henry to some 150 men and women returning to Manchester from jail and prison each year; encourages and supports the men and women attending Honor Court at Manchester Circuit Court 12.

MACC enables 50 Manchester children, referred by local social workers, to attend the free two-week Interfaith Day Camp each summer. Volunteers, 18 adults and 30 teenagers, make the camp possible. Also, MACC brings fresh fruits and vegetables within reach of the low-income and elderly living in downtown Manchester through the Farmer's Market; distributes monthly surplus foods (cheese, butter, dry milk, rice, honey) valued at $13,027 to an average of 255 Manchester low-income households through the MACC Food a Friend program coordinated by 25 volunteers; transports the elderly, the handicapped and low-income mothers to doctors, dentists, labs and well child clinics, thanks to volunteers of FISH of Manchester; shares our bounty with some 440 families and elderly at Thanksgiving and over 500 at Christmas through the MACC Seasonal Sharing Appeal, providing hot meals for shut-ins, a week's supply of food for families plus new clothing, blankets, toys and a variety of other needed gifts to the poor, the isolated, the disabled in Manchester.

Did you know that last year over $61,134 in cash assistance was provided to needy families in Manchester plus in-kind assistance (food, clothing, furniture) valued at $207,843.

Did you know that together the 17 member churches of MACC are committed to strengthening the unity of Christians by sponsoring The Way of the Cross Good Friday Service, the Easter Sunrise Service, WINFEST, the Christmas carol sing, and daily "Thoughts" in the Herald; offering prayers of the Christian community and spiritual strength to those with serious illness and their families through Healing Services held in the spring and fall; furthering sound human community relations through the Interfaith Thanksgiving Service, the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast, Jewish-Christian Dialogue and Manchester Interfaith Council; forming a Church-School partnership combating the use of drugs and alcohol among our young people.

Benefit concert for Samaritan Shelter for the Homeless tonight at 8 at Woodruff Hall Center Congregational Church. Back by popular request the Stiff Little Fish (Marco Ferrero, Chuck Warda, Mark Castropo, John Arneson), the T-Bags (Brian and Josh Majewski and Brian Larch) and the Midnight Sun (Barry Seelen, Eamon Cronin, Steve Powers and Kent Oldham) are back presenting an evening of rock and roll, blues, jazz and reggae music.

The musicians are volunteering their talents to provide a fun evening and Center Church is once again providing free space. Suggested donation for the evening is $5.

Our sympathy to the family and friends of Neil Clendaniel. Memorial gifts in memory of Neil has been received from Geoffrey and Tom Nash, Gil Boisjournis, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Keith, Neil and Betty Ellis, Bob Ahlness, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Moseley, the Penny Saver Thrift Shop and Nash, Beach and Clendaniel, Inc. Also, to the family of Mary White, Patricia Varesio and Frank Pinto who also have named Samaritan Shelter recipient of memorial gifts.

Eugene Brewer

Last week I wrote of common reactions of people to having confidence in cherished beliefs challenged. In religion perhaps more than in any other area it is difficult to remain unemotional and objective as we examine the evidence.

If one accepts the premise of a supernaturally revealed religion or authority, then his source of authority is limited to that which is revealed. Christianity makes a claim (2im, 3:16-17). Thus, if a Christian can not believe in the Bible, he is not a Christian. If he believes in the Bible, he is a Christian. If he believes in the Bible, he is a Christian. If he believes in the Bible, he is a Christian.

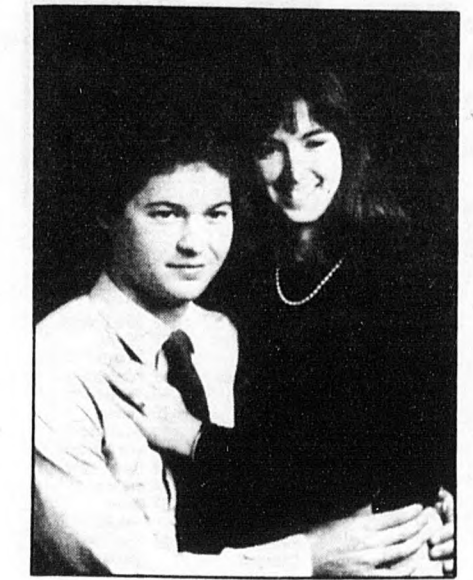

It matters little that a doctrine or practice can be traced back to a religious man or woman, or that "miracles" occurred, if the one who professed to believe in it is not a Christian. Lacking that, you are not put into the category of a Christian.

Clegg talks about apartheid

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

Johnny Clegg, who is from South Africa, will talk to audiences as he opens shows on Tracy Chapman's American tour from May 18 through July 4. "I talk about the fact the issue in the '80s is going to be 'One (Hu) Man One Vote' in a united South Africa," Clegg said, referring to the song, banned from radio in South Africa, on Johnny Clegg and Savuka's new Capitol album, "Cruel, Crazy, Beautiful World."

The title song is in the new movie "Opportunity Knocks," and "Scatterlings of Africa," from their second album, "Shadow Man," in 1988, was used in the movie "Rain Man."

The fact that Clegg's band, Savuka, is three black and two white musicians makes an anti-apartheid statement. On stage, he and percussionist Dudu Zulu break into Zulu dances. But Clegg considers himself an artist, not a political activist. "My main thrust has always been trying to find a meeting point between West and African experience and expressing that musically."

"Essentially, I'm singing about the South Africa experience and my reactions to things that happen there. At the same time, I'm trying to create new forms of music, taking forms from inside South Africa and international forms." The music has been called a combination of Western rock, Zulu guitar music and urban black townships' jive.

Some songs, Clegg says, like "Rolling Ocean" on the new album, are aimed at South African people. "Certain songs are sung entirely in Zulu. At the same time, what I have to say I think is also very important for the world. The problems we're dealing with are the preview for what I think the world is going to go through in the next 20 years."

South Africa is being forced to "confront" all its problems, which include race, class, ethnicity, rural-urban conflicts, first-third world problems, into a very quick solution. The world has to also deal with these problems as the East meets the West.

Starting Jan. 4, Clegg says, "We did nine shows to 62,000 South Africans over 14 days. We are a major force, especially for the progressive white youth in South Africa who identify strongly with what we try to do." They performed in Europe before coming to America.

Clegg, 36, was born in Manchester, England, lived there six months, and as a child lived briefly in Rhodesia and Zambia. The rest of his life has been in South Africa.

At 12, he heard guitar music he liked and asked the player, Charlie Mzila, a Zulu migrant worker working as a janitor in Johannesburg, to teach him. Mzila taught him guitar and the language.

In February 1989, Mzila was one of the best men when Clegg was married in a Zulu ceremony. Clegg laughs: "I married my wife twice, just to make sure. Once was in the Western tradition."

As a teen, Clegg went to migrant Zulu hostels and learned Zulu dances. He met young Sipho Mchunu, who continued his musical education. They made a single record in 1976, formed South Africa's first integrated band, the folkish Juluka, in 1979, and first performed in public in 1981. Juluka made seven records. In 1985, Mchunu, tired of the road, went to tend his family's livestock.

Clegg says: "I think I'm cautiously optimistic, more than I've been for a long time. I think it is most important that suddenly South Africans have been given something they've never been given before — information. It was hard not to see the Africa National Congress as a demonic, violent black organization."

Bookstore aims at the theater

By Phil Thomas
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The play really is the thing at Applause Books.

"Our aim," says store owner Glenn Young, "is to have every book in print about the theater."

Judging from the overflow of books crowded into the long, narrow basement shop, Young's dream is close to fulfillment. He estimates that his New York City space houses more than 14,000 different titles and a total of about 75,000 books.

All of them deal, in one way or another, with the legitimate theater and with movies. Nothing else.

"Selling just this type of book does not limit my sales," says Young, 37. "Or, you might say, it limits sales the way a good French restaurant's sales are limited because it does not serve Italian food."

"I'm constantly being tempted to put in other stuff — cards, ashtrays, that sort of thing. But I feel I have a responsibility, and that responsibility is to have every translation of Chekhov available."

"If a person comes in and asks for a specific translation and I don't have it, I can't see offering him an ashtray as a solution."

Young says that about half of his business is done on the floor of his shop and the other half by mail.

"All the major repertory companies around the country deal with me, as do hundreds of universities and libraries."

A glance through Applause's 156-page catalog shows a plethora of film and theater books from which to choose. The thick paperback is divided into categories that range from "Acting & Directing" to "Voice & Movement" to, of course, "Plays." The multitude of titles range from "Stage Fright" by Stephen Aaron to "An of Breathing" by Nancy Zi and from "Sunbat" by Mitali Ambrose to Paul Zindel's "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds."

Young, who trained as an actor at Yale but has never worked as a professional actor, says "I consider myself to be in the theater. The role I play is that of a publisher and purveyor of books."

He opened to the public in 1981. There were two stores at first — one for the theater and one for the movies. But he later decided to combine the two and says proudly that his store is "10 times the size of the originals in footage."

He says he decided to get into publishing about six years ago, and some 100 titles with the Applause imprint have been issued since then, among them "Acting in Film" by Michael Caine, "The Best Short Plays 1989," edited by Ramon Delgado, "Black Heroes: 7 Plays" by Errol Hill and "Other People's Money" by Jerry Sterner.

Not content with that, Young also teaches graduate playwriting courses at Columbia University — "I see no difference between business and teaching. They are both transactions of the mind" — and is involved in play producing.

He says his production of "Other People's Money" will open in London in October.

He also writes plays. "But I don't bill myself as a playwright. I've had three plays produced in places without huge marquee. But then, how big does your marquee have to be?"

Murdoch's work is captivating

THE MESSAGE TO THE PLANET. By Iris Murdoch. Viking, 563 Pages, $22.95.

This latest work from one of the most distinctive English writers of our day is a captivating and energetic entertainment. It is, as usual, peopled with characters whose philosophical speculation is matched by their engaging readiness to fall passionately in and out of love at the drop of a hat.

The reader is drawn into the concerns of a circle of friends, middle-class English intellectuals, affected by the return to their lives of the most eccentric and charismatic of their group.

He may be a miracle-worker, raising one friend from the verge of death. He may be a prophet or a martyr, with the power to save mankind through his "message." He remains an enigma. Everyone else is burning to explain and interpret him and does so with fury and fervor.

According to his irreverent daughter, for example, "He wants to exact the spiritual or something destiny of the human soul. He wants to fall into awful depths of suffering and degradation and die a terrible and famous death and be taken to heaven in a fiery chariot, it's all in the mind, just as you say, and he still expects to get his breakfast on time."

With spellbinding assurance, Iris Murdoch draws the reader into the lives of her characters. Sometimes in painstaking detail, at other times with abrupt cuts, through a sequence of extraordinary scenes — ludicrous, poignant, astonishing, highly comic, in turn.

These characters can be paradoxes: very individual personalities who have the aura of mythological beings, who appear like magic and behave in unpredictable ways with godlike disregard of logic. They can work miracles, break hearts, cause doom, deeply embarrass themselves and each other, and generally foul things up, given the slightest chance. They are never simple, rarely straightforward. They are certainly never boring.

Dahlia 2: look of permanence

Reader response to the 1990 Dream Home Survey in this area revealed a range of housing needs and requests too diverse for inclusion in one home design, so our architects have come up with three. This particular design is for those who want a home between 1500 and 2500 square feet in size.

A peak-to-peak gable with shutters brings plenty of light into the two-story vaulted entryway in the otherwise one-story Dahlia 2. The home's cultured brick facade gives a feeling of permanence to this contemporary country home.

Families who enjoy watching fires will find plenty to please their eyes here, with fireplaces in both the living room and the family room. Woodstove fireplace inserts could easily fit into the spaces provided, if more heat production is desired. Storage areas for firewood are incorporated into the hearth in both rooms, keeping wood nests to a minimum. Having a wood storage unit which opens to the outside, as it does in the family room, is obviously the most convenient.

An eating nook, which tucks neatly into a windowed corner of the large family room, has a clear view of the deck and the back yard. In the large country kitchen, the cooking island, and extra counter and cupboards next to the pantry, provide plenty of space for multiple cooks.

Isolated from the other bedrooms, the master suite offers both spaciousness and privacy. It has its own private deck, and a huge walk-in closet with double sinks in the dressing area outside the water closet. This arrangement is a sure cure for the steamy mirror problem couples face when one is showering and the other is trying to see into a mirror to shave or apply make-up.

A slightly elevated oversized tub, which could easily be outfitted as a spa, nestles into a bay window made of glass blocks, providing both light and privacy. This bathroom features a separate shower and a sky light.

Twin bedrooms at the front of the home also have two lavatories, one of them compartmentalized outside the water closet. A third, very minimal, bathroom, is conveniently located just inside the entryway. Utensils, along with a laundry sink, are close to both the kitchen and the bedrooms.

Use vacuum gauge to check pump

By Popular Mechanics For The Associated Press

QUESTION: I use a shallow-well jet pump for watering my garden. The problem is that it pumps too much air. The point is located 20 feet below the surface and there's always about 8 feet of water standing in the pipe. I attached a 30-gallon tank to the pump to hold reserve water for priming the pump. Every week I must release 10 pounds of air from the tank. Why am I getting all that there's a point at the end of the well piping. I assume you have a driven well and not a drilled or dug well. The pipe that's driven is the pipe through which the water flows. The problem with removing the pump and measuring the water level is that it's being measured under static conditions. When the water is being drawn up the pipe, the level will drop.

You can check the level of water in the pipe when it's being pumped by connecting a vacuum gauge to the suction line after the check valve. The gauge is calibrated in inches of mercury. One inch of vacuum will pull up water 1.13 feet. If the gauge reads 20 inches, the pump is lifting water 22.6 feet. This includes the effort needed to overcome the friction of the water against the inside wall of the pipe.

If all the joints are tight, then your problem appears to be caused by a low level of water when the pump is running. As the water is pumped, the level descends to the strainer at the end of the point and sucks air from around the pipe.

QUESTION: We would like to refinish the hardwood floor that's under the linoleum in our kitchen. Is there an easy way to remove the linoleum?

ANSWER: Unfortunately, there is no easy way. If the hardwood floor consists of oak strips and was originally smooth, then the linoleum was probably glued directly to the floor. Begin by cutting the linoleum into 12-inch strips with a utility knife. Be careful to set the blade depth so you don't cut into the wood. Use a long-edged trowel to pry up the linoleum strips. A heat gun will help to soften the adhesive as you go. Eventually, you'll remove all the linoleum and some of the adhesive.

Weeders Guide
Lettuce rated easy to grow

By Earl Aronson The Associated Press

Lettuce is an easy garden crop to grow. It may be planted almost anywhere, and there are quite a few varieties.

The three main lettuce types are head, leaf and romaine. You can plant only one variety, or some of all three to stretch the garden harvest throughout much of the year.

Lettuce is a cool-weather crop and may be set out as soon as the ground is workable in the spring. You can grow plants indoors during the winter. Keep the crop coming by planting more for leaves or heads as the season progresses. Seeds planted in late summer should provide you with lettuce well into late fall.

Another good thing about lettuce is that you can plant it in such places as along walks, or in garden beds, tubs, winter boxes or secluded corners.

How to plant lettuce:

Barely cover seed in rows about 14 inches apart. Lettuce needs good light to germinate. Head lettuce should be spaced about 14 inches apart in rows, but leaf varieties may be planted closer — about 6 inches apart. Some gardeners pull up the entire plant, while others prefer to pick and eat only the outer leaves as they mature.

Lettuce grows best in good, well-drained soil. A sunny spot is best for early and late-season crops. If you want lettuce during the hot summer months, plant some where it receives at least partial shade in the middle of the day. Hot, midday summer sun isn't good for lettuce.

Lettuce doesn't want heavy fertilization, but it does respond to light side dressing during the growing season. Regular watering is essential if weekly rainfall is inadequate.

SLEEPING SEEDS — The aim of Sharon Sowa is to put millions of seeds to sleep for a while and to someday treat them "much like doctors treat their patients in surgery."

Sowa, a chemist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is looking for new ways to preserve seeds, ranging from food staples to passion fruit and ginseng (a source of rubber).

Sowa said the same anesthetics "used to slow human respiration during surgery also slow the life processes inside seeds."

"The lab is 'insurance' against seeds becoming extinct and keeps them available to breed agricultural plants for drought tolerance, disease resistance and other traits," said Sowa from the National Seed Storage Laboratory at Fort Collins, Colo.

She related that on a test of snap beans, air that is 80 percent nitrous oxide was blown over the seeds. It slowed cell respiration in the beans by 35 percent, which is "enough to anesthetize the seeds." A half hour later, Sowa revived the seeds from their nap by exposing them to fresh air. All the seeds eventually woke up and germinated normally.

"We also are looking for ways to store citrus and other tree crops," she said. "Currently, we must keep trees growing in orchards if we want to preserve their unique genetic traits for future breeding experiments."

doors for the cars. It also offers plenty of storage space, and room for a small shop.

EIGHTH UTILITIES DISTRICT
PRESIDENT'S REPORT

It has been my great honor and privilege to serve as President of the Eighth Utilities District for the past two years. These past two years have been full of change and great events. We have had more change in the past two years than we have in the past twenty years.

The Manchester Fire Department, Eighth Utilities District, one of the finest fire departments in the State, has expanded its responsibilities and its size tremendously in the past year. We have created another Engine Company and a Truck Company in addition to the three existing companies. We are recruiting new members to meet future needs. We have a new Fire Station to meet the needs of the expanding Buckland area. Station Three will serve our needs well into the next century. We have a new fire engine on order which will be delivered in September or October of this year.

Our fire department has been kept and must continue to be kept on the cutting edge of the technology available to the fire service. With the continued support of the residents of the Eighth Utilities District we will continue to have the best fire department in the State.

We have installed two million dollars worth of new sewers this year on North Main Street and Tolland Turnpike and in the Irving, Chambers, Broad Street area, to serve the residents in these areas.

We have a new municipal office complex to better serve the residents of the District and we are in a position to better meet the needs of the next decade and the next century.

We have been able to keep the tax rate stable and next year with reevaluation and the new construction in Buckland we will be in a good position to keep the tax rate stable or reduced from its present rate.

I have been very proud to have been on the Board of Directors during this time of change and expansion. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Board of Directors, the Clerk, Treasurer and Tax Collector and staff of the Eighth Utilities District Fire Chief, Fire Marshal and Public Works crew for their efforts and their cooperation. I have enjoyed working with all of them in the past year and look forward to working with them in the coming year.

Thomas E. Landers, Jr.
President
Eighth Utilities District

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT
ANNUAL REPORT

The Public Works Department had another good year with no apparent problems. Thus far our crew has responded to 39 calls, 1 involving a main line backhoe, 34 involved homeowners lines and 4 pump station calls. We continue to maintain 29 miles of sewer lines. Approximately 20 miles of these lines were reroofed during our summer maintenance program and 12 miles were flushed out.

The Public Works crew consists of two full time employees and two part time employees. They are doing an outstanding job keeping the fleet, as well as the property under their jurisdiction in excellent condition. Added responsibility for the maintenance of the grounds at our new administrative building, as well as the newly acquired Firehouse #3 have been added to their list. We've added a new Sander and an Ariens Snow Blower to our equipment, and don't anticipate the need for any new equipment in the upcoming fiscal year.

The past year saw the commencement of two major sewer projects. Phase One of the North Main Street/Tolland Turnpike project is well underway, in fact the residents of North Main Street can hook up to the system at anytime. The long awaited Irving Street sewer project has begun and we look forward to its completion.

The department expects and looks forward to providing the Eighth Utilities District with excellent service in the upcoming year.

Respectfully Submitted,
Thomas H. Ferguson

ANNUAL REPORT OF FIRE MARSHAL'S OFFICE 1989-1990

The major growth within the District, The Ravines at Buckland Hills and the Trammell Crow apartment complex, overshadowed the other responsibilities of this office. The "Mail" opened March 14 with the four anchor stores and 50 tenant stores ready for shoppers. Full time effort was given to this project for 3 months to assure compliance with the Connecticut Fire Safety Code while construction was nearing completion.

This office is continuing its State mandated duties on a two days a week schedule devoted to its

LEGAL NOTICE

FIRE CHIEF'S REPORT 1989-90

The Manchester Fire Department has responded to 811 alarms from July 1, 1989 to April 30, 1990. There were 54 box alarms, 334 still alarms, 72 service calls, 244 medical calls, 25 mutual aid responses, and 82 false alarms.

At the present time the Department is comprised of 116 members; 40 in Company #1, 37 in Company #2, 13 in Company #3, 16 in Company #4 and 10 in Company #5. The Department formed has 20 officers, 30 EMT's and 50 apparatus drivers. On February 1, 1990 the department formed the two new companies, Engine Company #4 and Truck Company #5. This was due in part to the acquisition of the Buckland Firehouse on March 1, 1990 and the increased responsibilities in the Buckland area.

Our apparatus consists of 3 class A pumpers, 1 elevating platform, 1 heavy rescue truck, 1 utility truck, 1 service truck, 1 alarm truck and 1 rescue pumper. A new pumper has been ordered from the training department and is expected in September or October of this year.

The training department conducted 27 drills covering the various aspects of firefighting. The department also sponsored a Firefighter 1 course and 23 members of the department were certified.

During fire prevention week the fire prevention team made their usual visits to the schools in the district. Fire Prevention also sponsored a booth at the product show. The team prepared an outstanding program for both events.

The Manchester Fire Department has strived to serve the residents and merchants of the district in a professional and responsible manner.

On behalf of the members of the Manchester Fire Department, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of the district for their continued support in helping to make our community a safer place in which to live.

Respectfully Submitted,
John G. Maco
Chief MFD

RETAINS LEAD — Fred Couples had a second-round 74, but held onto the lead at The Memorial Golf Tournament at Muirfield Village Golf Club Friday afternoon.

Couples holds onto golf lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Gale-force winds subdued somewhat and scores improved, but Fred Couples remained the only man under par Friday at the halfway point of the Memorial tournament.

"There was some wind and it seemed to be gusty — blow a little, stop, blow a little — and it was a little warmer, a lot more playable," said Couples, whose bogey-bogey finish on Friday dropped him to a 74 and a one-shot lead over Don Pooley.

"A 74 is nothing to be ashamed of," Couples said. "It's nice to be able to shoot 74 and still be leading."

Couples, who won at Los Angeles earlier this year, finished two rounds over Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course in 143, one under par. He said that one under might be good enough to win the tournament if weather continues to be the factor it was the first two days.

"You might not even need to be under par," he said. "A couple of 72's wouldn't hurt anybody over the weekend."

Pooley, who won the Memorial in 1987, managed a 71 on Friday and was second alone at par 144.

Wind of 10-15 mph and warmer temperatures on Friday were in sharp contrast to Thursday's extremely difficult conditions that tormented the invitational field and produced some bizarre scores on Thursday. The field averaged 78.9 strokes.

Jay Delaney, a journeyman who has yet to win in six seasons on the PGA Tour, was third alone at 145 after a round of par 72.

Knicks hoping history repeat

By Harry Atkins
The Associated Press

ALBURN HILLS, Mich. — The New York Knicks and Detroit Pistons both will have history going for them when their NBA series continues tonight at Madison Square Garden.

The Pistons, seeking to become only the third franchise in league history to repeat as champions, haven't lost a game to the Knicks this season, sweeping them 4-0 during the regular season and leading 2-0 in their best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series.

The Pistons also are bidding to tie the NBA record of 13 consecutive playoff victories, held by the Los Angeles Lakers (1988-89).

But the Knicks have shown they can overcome adversity. In the opening round, they fell behind the Boston Celtics 2-0, before rallying to win the next three games — becoming only the third NBA team to overcome such a deficit and win a five-game series.

"In New York, they're going to be sky high, like they were against Boston," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said.

The Pistons overwhelmed the tired Knicks 112-77 in Tuesday night's opening game. The Knicks were much more competitive Thursday night in Game 2. They led twice in the fourth quarter, before James Edwards made a three-point play and Isiah Thomas hit three of his five 3-point field goals as the Pistons won 104-97.

"It's not going to be easy, but we're not going to look at it like that," New York coach Stu Jackson said. "Let's hope that for Isiah, the rim's tilted in Madison Square Garden."

That might be the only way to stop Thomas, who is playing much better during the playoffs than he did during the regular season.

Thomas shot 43.8 percent during the regular season and 30.9 percent from 3-point range. His turnover and assist rate was a little better than 2-1 (322 turnovers, 765 assists).

But in the first five playoff games, including a three-game sweep over Indiana, Thomas has shot 37 of 71 from the field, including 11 of 18 from 3-point range, committed only 16 turnovers and handed out 45 assists.

"Everybody plays a lot better at home," New York's Patrick Ewing said. "I still feel we're capable of beating this team. We're going to try to prove it Saturday."

In all five of their playoff games, the Pistons have held opponents under 100 points. Over the past two seasons, Detroit has held playoff opponents to less than 100 points in 20 of 22 games.

Last year, Detroit needed 17 games to win its first NBA championship, including a sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers in the finals. The Pistons held playoff opponents to an average of 92.9 points, the best defense since the introduction of the 24-second clock 35 years ago. They allowed fewer than 100 points in 15 of the 17 games.

This season, the Pistons held opponents to a league-low 98.3 points, the sixth-best ever in an 82-game schedule.

"Our defense is our constant," said Bill Laimbeer, who led Detroit with 13 rebounds in Game 2. "Our offense is in spurts."

"If we win the home games, we're in the finals. So far, we've won them all."

The tough Detroit defense limited New York to one basket in the final 5:02 Thursday, a dunk by Gerald Wilkins with four seconds remaining.

"We've got to pick it up a notch and play good on Saturday," said New York's Charles Oakley, who had 22 points and 15 rebounds in Game 2.

Mochrie leads LPGA event

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Dottie Mochrie continued her comeback from a shoulder injury with a 5-under-par 67 that gave her a two-shot lead after Friday's opening round of the LPGA Crestar Classic.

"I've spent a good deal of time in rehab, so I'm thrilled with today," said Mochrie, who returned to the tour last week after being sidelined since early April.

Mochrie got all five of her birdies on the back nine of Greenbriar Country Club's 6,275-yard layout. Following her bogey-free round, Mochrie's closest pursuers were Rosie Jones, Kathy Quadagno and Dee Dee Lasker.

Opening with 76 were Patsy Sheehan, Vicki Ferguson, Meg Mallon, Sally Little and Carolyn Hill.

The group at 71 included Juli Inkster, who is bidding to become the first player in two decades to win the same LPGA event three years in a row. This is Inkster's fourth tournament since giving birth to a daughter in February.

Owens leads senior golf

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Charles Owens overcame blustery conditions Friday to shoot a 5-under-par 67 and take the first-round lead in the Southwestern Bell Classic.

Owens held a three-stroke lead over Terry Dill and put himself in a position to become the first player to win a Senior PGA tournament and the Classics portion of the event. The Classics is for players 60 and older and winds up after two rounds.

"I would love to do it. I have a chance to," said Owens, who despite knee and back problems wasn't bothered by cool temperatures, rain and strong winds while playing the 6,708-yard Quail Creek Golf and Country Club.

Don January led a group of five players at 71. Mike Hill, the second-leading money winner this year, was tied even par along with two others. Arnold Palmer finished at 5-over 77 after playing the front side in even par. Defending champion Bobby Nichols shot 78.

Sabatini ousts Capriati

ROME (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini gave Jennifer Capriati a tennis lesson in the first set, then fought off a late charge by the 14-year-old American to post a 6-2, 7-5 victory Friday night in the quarterfinals of the Italian Open.

Joining Sabatini in the semifinals were top-seeded Martina Navratilova, No. 2 Monica Seles and No. 11 Helen Kelesi.

Navratilova trounced sixth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-2, 6-0. Seles beat No. 5 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-0, 6-2 and Kelesi beat No. 13 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden 6-4, 6-3.

On Saturday, Sabatini will play Navratilova and Seles will face Kelesi.

Capriati lost to Sabatini for the second time since turning pro in March. The Argentine won 6-4, 7-5 in the final of the Virginia Slims of Florida, Capriati's first pro event.

"She was awesome," Capriati said. "She did everything right."

Becker wins; Agassi ousted

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Boris Becker, the fans' favorite, led the way into the semifinals of the German Open on Friday, and three Americans were ousted, including second-seeded Andre Agassi.

Becker swept past Jimmy Arias 6-3, 6-1, while Agassi was upset by Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden in a rain-interrupted third-round match.

Agassi, trailing 7-6, 4-4 when the match was halted Thursday, saved a match point in the 10th game of the second set Friday, but was then beaten 7-6, 7-6 by the 15th-seeded Swede.

Agassi's brushback was not dimmed by the loss.

"Let me put it this way, if this match was the French Open over three out of five sets, and in the middle of the day with no interruptions, he was dead," said Agassi.

Toronto upends Tigers

AL Roundup

DETROIT (AP) — Manny Lee hit a two-run home run and Junior Felix added a solo shot to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Friday night.

Lee's two-out home run in the second inning scored John Olerud, who started the inning with a single off Brian Dabois. The rookie left-hander lost for the second time in as many decisions this season and is 0-6 in his major league career.

Lee's homer was his second of the season. Both have come off Dabois, who left the game after three innings with stiffness in his left shoulder.

Toronto starter Jimmy Key (4-1) allowed four hits, including Tony Phillips' leadoff homer in the sixth, in six innings. Duane Ward pitched 12-3 innings, but left after walking Tom Henke hit Cecil Fielder with a pitch to force in one run, but got Dave Bergman to foul out to end the inning, then pitched a scoreless ninth inning for his third save.

The Blue Jays, winners of five of their last seven games, made it 3-0 in the fifth off reliever Urbano Lugo when Tony Fernandez walked, stole second and scored on Kelly Gruber's pop-fly single to center field. Felix hit a two-out homer to right in the sixth inning.

The Tigers lost shortstop Alan Trammell and manager Sparky Anderson in the third inning. Trammell was ejected by home plate umpire Rocky Roe for arguing a called third strike that ended the third inning. Anderson came out to argue with Roe while Lugo warmed up to replace Dabois at the start of the fourth inning and also was ejected.

Brewers 6, Twins 3: At Minneapolis, Paul Molitor had four hits, including a game-opening home run, and drove in two runs as the Milwaukee Brewers returned to their well-scored first ways and beat the Minnesota Twins 6-3 Friday night.

Bill Wegman (1-0), the Brewers' final spring training cut, allowed six hits and two runs in five-plus innings in his first start since being recalled from the minors on April 28. Dan Plesac, Milwaukee's fourth pitcher, pitched the ninth inning for his seventh save.

Alan Anderson (1-4), winner of 33 games the last two years and the American League's earned-run average leader in 1988, yielded four runs in three innings as his ERA swelled to 3.06.

The Brewers scored first in their first 21 games to take the AL East lead with a 14-7 record. Opponents scored first in the next four at Milwaukee went 2-2.

HELPING HIMSELF — New York Mets' pitcher Dwight Gooden (16) slides safely into third with a bases-clearing triple in the fourth inning of Friday night's game against the Dodgers at Shea Stadium. The Mets won, 9-4.

Gooden fans 15 in Mets' victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden struck out 15 in seven innings, hit a bases-loaded triple and drove in four runs Friday night, leading the New York Mets over Los Angeles 9-4 and extending the Dodgers' losing streak to five games.

Gooden's strikeouts were the most in the National League this season and his best since fanning a career-high 16 on Aug. 20, 1985, against San Francisco. He gave up three runs, all in the third inning, and time his and walked only one.

Gooden (2-3) improved his lifetime record against Los Angeles to 10-1 and beat the Dodgers for the seventh straight time. He struck out the side three times and, with a chance at Roger Clemens' major-league record of 20 strikeouts, was pulled after throwing 127 pitches.

The Mets beat Mike Morgan (4-2) and won for the fifth time in six games, partly because of Gooden's bat. He tied a team record for pitchers with four RBIs.

Gooden, who had a run-scoring second career triple in 452 at-bats to cap a five-run third inning that made 3-0, Mike Marshall had an RBI grounder and Daryl Boston doubled home a run before the Dodgers intentionally walked Mackey Sasser with two outs to bring up Gooden.

Gooden, a lifetime .182 career hitter, drove in only one run last year. His four RBIs matched the team mark for pitchers across accomplished five times, most recently by him on Sept. 21, 1985, against Pittsburgh, and gave him five RBIs this season.

MHS girls' tennis still unbeaten in CCC East

By Herald Staff

SOUTH WINDSOR — Challenged maybe — but beaten in CCC East Division play — never. That's the state of affairs for the Manchester High girls' tennis team.

The Indian netters, five-time CCC East champions, knocked off No. 1 challenger in 1990 Friday afternoon as they beat South Windsor High, 5-2, in a battle of unbeaten.

Manchester, which has never lost a CCC East match and is now a perfect 39-0 in league play, is 4-0 in the CCC East this year, 9-3 overall. The Bobcats slide to 3-1, 9-2.

Manchester's next match is Monday at Hartford Public.

South Windsor took the Nos. 1 and 2 singles matches, but the Bobcats couldn't win another match. Jen Clon and Jessica Anicin at Nos. 3 and 4 singles tied it for Manchester, with the Indian tandems of Melissa Daversa-Michelle Merzitz, Nancy Bray-Jen Karpe and Laura Sines-Jane Ma sweeping the doubles.

Results: Double Noyes (D) def. Kate Cheburn 6-7 (6-8), 6-4, 7-5; Amy Bond (D) def. Marisa Turner 6-3, 6-2; Clon (H) def. Kristin Shup 6-4, 6-2; Anicin (M) def. Jill Parry 6-3, 6-3; Daversa-Merzitz (M) def. Lisa Shup-Cherry 6-7, 6-3, 6-4; Bray-Karpe (M) def. Heather Madigan-Hopson 7-5, 7-6, 6-3; Sines-Ma (M) def. Ester Song-Jen Gasa 6-2, 6-1.

Cheney nine upsets Cromwell

CROMWELL — Call it sweet revenge.

A year after it was embarrassed by a 34-0 count, Cheney Tech got revenge on Cromwell High. After putting a scare into the Charter Oak Conference West Division leading Panthers earlier in the year, bowing by a slender 8-6 margin, the Beavers tasted victory Friday with a 4-2 eight-inning verdict.

"It was a big win. The kids were really excited," Cheney coach Paul Soucy said. "It was bittersweet revenge."

Cheney goes to 3-12 with the victory while the Panthers are now 13-4. Cheney's next game is Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at Coventry High.

Four Tech hurlers — Brian Courville, Jason Breaux, Eric Morrow and Jim LeBlanc — combined on a three-hitter. Morrow picked up the win, his third against two losses.

"They all pitched well," Soucy said of his foursome. Morrow singled to lead off the top of the eighth inning. Nate Paradis grounded into a force before walks to Jason Gagnon and Dan Resendes loaded the bases. Bob Goulet followed with a clutch two-run single for the 4-2 lead.

Cheney plated its other runs in the fourth. Paradis and Resendes singled with Goulet's groundout plating Paradis. Mike Horvath and Jason Goulet singled with a Tom Murphy single plating Goulet.

Cromwell plated its runs in the second and fifth inning.

"We had timely hitting and adequate defense. We had two errors but they really didn't hurt," Soucy said. Seven different players had hits for Cheney. Goulet had three RBIs.

Cheney Tech 000 200 00— 4-2
Cromwell 010 010 00— 1-0
Brian Courville, Jason Breaux (D), Eric Morrow (R), Jim LeBlanc (R) and Tom Murphy (D) were Cromwell's pitchers. Justin Virel (D) was Cheney's pitcher. WP: Morrow (2-2); LF: Breaux.

Coventry softball downs Tolland

COVENTRY — Two unearned runs in the fourth inning snapped a scoreless tie with Coventry High going on to record a 3-1 win over Tolland High Friday afternoon in non-conference girls' softball action.

The victory qualifies the Patriots, 10-4, for the state tournament in the Class S Division for the seventh consecutive year. Tolland falls to 8-5 with the loss. Coventry's next game is a make-up at home Monday against Vinal Tech.

Coventry's Christy Gagnon fired a five-hitter with Tolland's Leslie Bolger allowing just four hits. But Gagnon received better defensive support.

Ronald Piro/Manchester Herald

MAKES THE PLAY — Coventry High second baseman Marlene Dolat makes the catch as rightfielder Renee Eckert moves in during Friday's game against Tolland High in Coventry. The Patriots won, 3-1.

"This was our best defensive game we've played this year," Coventry coach Rich Page said, noting his club had only one miscue.

Gagnon walked one and struck out six while Bolger walked none and struck out one.

Tolland scored its lone run in the sixth with Coventry countering with its final marker in the bottom of the inning.

Marlene Dolat had two hits and scored twice for Coventry. Centerfielder Kris Spencer made a couple of nice catches for the Patriots, including a game-winning running stab to end the game with Tolland having runners in scoring position at second and third base.

MHS softball loses to Bobcats — Six runs in the first inning were more than enough as South Windsor High downed Manchester High, 12-5, Friday in CCC East girls' softball action.

The Bobcats improve to 6-8 while the Indians are now 5-9. Manchester resumes action Monday at 3:30 p.m. at Hartford Public.

South Windsor collected two hits and four walks to do its scoring in the first inning.

Tricia Skinner was 2-for-3 and Allese Moore 2-for-4 to lead Manchester's nine-hit attack.

MHS boys tennis triumphs — The Manchester High boys' tennis team won three of the singles matches en route to a 5-2 decision over South Windsor High in CCC East Division action Friday at the Memorial Field courts.

Manchester improves to 6-7 with the victory while the Bobcats slip to 8-4. Manchester resumes action Monday at home against Hartford Public.

Ed Fitzgerald, Danny Ma and Jon Borgida were singles winners for the Indians.

Results: Fitzgerald (M) def. Jonathan Wrenick 6-4, 6-2; Ma (M) def. Dan Burnett 6-4, 6-1; Borgida (M) def. Scott Madson 6-4, 6-7 (12-16), 6-1; Stephen Davenport (D) def. David Sheenon 6-3, 7-6 (7-0); Jon Cooper-Cory-Saint (D) def. Jeff Casper-Dan Prew 2-6, 7-6, 6-4; Jim Ma-Han (D) def. Jeff Hills-Todd Erickson 6-2, 6-2.

East softball is beaten — After getting the early jump, East Catholic High saw host Ellington High score 12 times in the first two frames in its 20-10 decision Friday afternoon in non-conference girls' softball action.

The Purple Knights improve to 11-1 while the Eagles are just the reverse, 1-11, following the loss. East's next game is Tuesday at South Catholic High in Hartford.

East scored six times in the top of the opening inning before Ellington scored five in the bottom of the frame. Ellington, which had 13 hits, took the lead for good with seven runs in the second.

Lisa Clapp slapped four hits to lead the Knights. Lynn Krawczyk and Chere Torsello each had two hits and sophomore Cara Zdanis had an RBI safely for the Eagles.

Cheryl Constantine was the losing pitcher for East. Chris Lenzeng pitched well in relief for the Eagles.

EC girls tennis shut out — The East Catholic High girls' tennis team was blanked by host Berlin High, 7-0, Friday afternoon to fall to 0-4 for the season.

Berlin goes to 8-5 with the win.

Results: Jennifer Morer (R) def. Maureen Begley 6-0, 6-1; Jen Dorso (R) def. Andrea Wisniewski 6-4, 6-2; Karen Pao (D) def. Lisa Carvato 6-0, 6-4; Diana Crowl (R) def. TRADED — The New York Yankees dealt Dave Winfield, shown in a file photo, to the California Angels but the veteran outfielder rejected the trade. The case has been sent to arbitration.

Winfield

Witt will stay with New York.

"We felt we had a pitching surplus and we expect Winfield to improve our run production capabilities," Angels general manager Mike Fort said. "We want him here, he fits into our plans."

The Yankees said other compensation would have to be considered if Winfield remains in New York.

New York general manager Harding Peterson said the Yankees will use 24 players until the matter is resolved.

The attempted trade was the latest confrontation in Winfield's long-running feud with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner. Steinbrenner's criticisms of Winfield have ranged from the outfielder's clutch hitting abilities to the operation of the David M. Winfield Foundation, an charitable organization for poor children.

Winfield, who is batting .213 with two homers and six RBIs, was taking batting practice before Friday night's game at Seattle when he learned of the trade.

Winfield, who drove in 100 or more runs per year from 1983-1987, had back surgery before the 1989 season. When he returned after a year layoff, he went 0-for-17 in spring training before getting a hit.

Winfield was upset by his recent relegation to platoon status and the Yankees' failure to put his name on the All-Star ballot.

"I've seen what happened the last few weeks," he said. "Of course you know something is up."

Winfield said he planned to return to the Yankees hotel and think. He said he hadn't discussed the trade with his agent.

"I don't think I was surprised by

Angels, the player said. "I might be treated as a human being."

Peterson then interrupted. "That's not a very nice comment Dave."

Winfield, a 12-time All-Star, responded by requesting a meeting with Steinbrenner.

"He's the man who makes the decisions," Winfield said. However, Peterson said Steinbrenner played no part in the deal.

Angels spokesman Tim Mead declined to elaborate on the deal.

"We've spoken to the Yankees like we have to other clubs about personnel. They've made the announcement. That's all we can say," Mead said.

Winfield, 38, is in his 17th major-league season and has a lifetime batting average of .287 with 359 home runs.

He broke into the major leagues in 1973 with San Diego and signed as a free agent with the Yankees prior to the 1981 season. His 10-year deal paid him more than $2 million.

"I don't think I was surprised by his reaction," Peterson said. "He's going to have to give this a lot of thought."

The Yankees have previously tried to trade Winfield, who is in the final year of his 10-year contract. In 1988, then General Manager Lou Piniella nearly traded Winfield to the Houston Astros for outfielder Kevin Bass.

Winfield's feud with Steinbrenner often revolved around the operations of the Winfield Foundation.

Winfield sued Steinbrenner in January 1989, claiming the Yankees owner failed to make promised contributions to the foundation. Steinbrenner then charged in a federal lawsuit that the foundation had paid personal expenses for Winfield and his friends.

The dispute was eventually settled out of court.

Throughout the 80s, Steinbrenner often suggested that Winfield couldn't hit in the clutch. However, Winfield had several outstanding seasons for the Yankees, hitting 37 homers with 106 RBIs in 1982 and bating .340 in 1984.

In Winfield's only World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1981.

Witt, 0-3 this season, is 109-107 lifetime and pitched a perfect game against Texas on Sept. 29, 1984. He will be 30 on July 20.

Barkley key as 76ers win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 34 points and Philadelphia withstood a furious fourth-quarter rally to beat Chicago 118-112 Friday night and cut the Bulls' lead to 2-1 in their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Bulls, who trailed by 27 points in the first half and by 20 after three quarters, rallied behind Michael Jordan to pull within three points with 1:10 left.

But Barkley made a free throw with 32 seconds remaining, the Bulls threw the ball out of bounds on their next possession and Barkley hit two more free throws to give the 76ers a 116-110 lead.

Jordan, who scored 24 of his 49 points in the final period, hit a basket with seven seconds left to make it 116-112. But Hershey Hawkins, who finished with 27 points, made a pair of free throws with five seconds left for the final margin.

Ron Anderson scored 17 points and Johnny Dawkins 16 for Philadelphia, and Mike Omilinski and Rick Mahorn had 10 each.

Indians overcome Bobcats

Helin whiffs 14 in 6-2 MHS win

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

The Manchester High-South Windsor baseball game on a chilly Friday night at Moriarty Field was a pitcher's duel between the Indians' senior righthander Matt Helin and the Bobcats' southpaw Jamie Murray.

When South Windsor scored the first run of the game in the top of the sixth, it appeared that might hold up. But, Manchester and Helin had other thoughts.

Helin, who ran his perfect record to 7-0, struck out 14 Bobcat batters while Manchester rallied for six runs in the sixth and overcame South Windsor, 6-2, in CCC East action.

The win keeps the Indians in second place in the league at 9-2, 11-5 overall. East Hartford remains in first at 10-1 after it shut out Hartford Public, 7-0. South Windsor falls to 5-10.

Manchester will play at Hartford Public Monday afternoon at 5:30.

Helin gave up four hits and struck out one. He struck out the final three batters of the game with the bases loaded. He also struck out the side in the third.

"Matt pitched a tremendous game," Manchester coach Don Race said. "It was great to see the kids come back the way they did."

South Windsor took a 1-0 lead after Helin struck out the first two batters in the sixth.

Freshman Gary Burnham (two hits) doubled to right field and slid safely into third when the relay throw got away from Indian senior third baseman Ryan Barry.

Helin walked Jamie Lusier and then picked the latter off first. While Lusier was hung up between first and second base, Burnham charged to the plate and scored before Lusier was tagged for the final out.

"Maybe that's what ignited us," Race said, referring to the mental error by the Indian defense in the sixth.

The Indians stormed back in the bottom of the frame with six runs.

With one out, senior Lindsey Boutiller reached on an infield single and Murray walked senior Jeff Davis.

Sophomore designated hitter Dave White followed with an RBI-single to left center scoring Boutiller with the tying run. Junior Mike Gilbert hit a dribbler which nudged the third base line and the bases were jammed.

Murray was pulled for Lusier, who uncorked a wild pitch allowing pinch runner Marc Sears to score the go-ahead run. After senior John Cunningham struck out, Barry, who got the first Manchester hit of the game off Murray in the fifth, was hit by Lusier to reload the bases.

Lusier walked junior pinch hitter Kevin Bottomley on four pitches which forced in White and the Indians led, 3-1. Southpaw Jeff Goodin relieved Lusier and senior Steve Joyner greeted him with a bases-clearing triple to centerfield.

"They put it together when they had to," Race said. "To see them come through like that shows they've got

Winfield rejects a trade, his status placed in 'limbo'

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The New York Yankees tried to trade Dave Winfield to the California Angels on Friday, but the controversial slugger refused to go and the deal was sent to arbitration.

"I was traded but I ain't going nowhere," Winfield said. "I'm not packing for California, but I can't put on a Yankee uniform, either. I'm in limbo. Get me a cab for limbo."

Winfield, who missed all of last season after back surgery, said he has the right to turn the deal down because he has been in the major leagues for 10 years, the last five with the same team.

The Yankees claim Winfield's contract contains seven teams he was willing to be traded to and the Angels are one of them.

The Yankees said the deal — for pitcher Mike Witt — will be decided by an arbitrator, but no timetable has been set. Until the dispute is settled, Winfield won't play for the Yankees or the Angels. Witt has 72 hours to join New York.

The Angels have agreed that even if Winfield does not join the club, Please see WINFIELD, page 47
