Helin whiffs 14 in 6-2 MHS win

Manchester Herald

The Manchester High-South Windsor baseball game on a chilly Friday night at Moriarty Field was a pitcher's duel between the Indians' senior righthander Matt Helin and the Bobcats' southpaw Jamie Murray. When South Windsor scored the first run of the game in the top of the sixth, it appeared that might hold up.

But, Manchester and Helin had other thoughts. Helin, who ran his perfect record to 7-0, struck out 14 Bobcat batters while Manchester rallied for six runs in the sixth and overcame South Windsor, 6-2, in CCC East

The win keeps the Indians in second place in the league at 9-2, 11-5 overall. East Hartford remains in first at 10-1 after it shut out Hartford Public, 7-0. South Windsor falls to 5-10. Manchester will play at Hartford Public Monday afternoon at 3:30.

Helin gave up four hits and struck out one. He struck out the final three batters of the game with the bases loaded. He also struck out the side in the third. "Matt pitched a tremendous game," Manchester coach

Don Race said. "It was great to see the kids come back South Windsor took a 1-0 lead after Helin struck out the first two batters in the sixth. Freshman Gary Burnham (two hits) doubled to right field and slid safely into third when the relay throw got away from Indian senior third baseman Ryan Barry. Helin walked Jamie Lussier and then picked the latter off first. While Lussier was hung up between first and second base, Burnham charged to the plate and scored before Lussier was tagged for the final out. "Maybe that's what ignited us," Race said, referring to the mental error by the Indian defense in the sixth. The Indians stormed back in the bottom of the frame

With one out, senior Lindsey Boutilier reached on an infield single and Murray walked senior Jeff Davis. Sophomore desigated hitter Dave White followed with an RBI-single to left center scoring Boutilier with the tying run. Junior Mike Gilbert hit a dribbler which hugged the third base line and the bases were jammed. Murray was pulled for Lussier, who uncorked a wild pitch allowing pinch runner Marc Sears to score the goahead run. After senior John Cunningham struck out, Barry, who got the first Manchester hit of the game off Murray in the fifth, was hit by Lussier to reload the Lussier walked junior pinch hitter Kevin Bottomley on four pitches which forced in White and the Indians led, 3-1. Southpaw Jeff Goodin relieved Lussier and senior Steve Joyner greeted him with a bases-clearing triple to "They put it together when they had to," Race said. In a joint meeting of the Cheney National Historic District Commission and the PZC, the results of a study of the Cheney Mansion area and Great Lawn — con-sidering zoning changes made by the PZC in October are scheduled to be presented. The study, prepared by Patricia M. O'Donnell of the Westport firm of Landscapes for the Connecticut Trust for Historic Preservation, recommends that the historic commission have the power to regulate changes within the Cheney district. The existing Cheney National Historic District Com-knowledgeable about the historical significance and needs of the district, he said. "They only have one interest. The planning commission has two interests." The PZC is interested in increasing the tax base, as well as preserving historical landmarks, FitzGerald said. For example, if a developer wanted to build apartment buildings in the Cheney District, the architecture should conform to the surrounding historic buildings. But the PZC might waive this requirement for fear of losing the project and the resulting tax revenue, he said. William Bayer, chairman of the PZC, said that increasing tax revenue has not been a factor in its decisions on the historic district. When making decisions involving other areas of town, the PZC may consider tax revenue, but it is never a prime concern, he said. FitzGerald agreed that the PZC has always been supportive of preserving the Chency district. Almost 100 percent of the time, it has accepted the historic district commission's recommendations regarding development. But, FitzGerald said, "That doesn't mean that they always will." The historic district is vulnerable, he said, because once part of it is destroyed, "it can never be recaptured." The lawn and mansions, situated north of Hartford

The Herald supported the proposal. The town's Board of Directors did approve setting up a finance department, but it rejected the idea of an appointed treasurer.

In the wake of the news that the town treasurer made an investment that, at least in hindsight, proved to be a bad one, former Republican Mayor Nathan Agostinelli, a leader in the move for appointment of the treasurer, has renewed his call for Making the office appointive will not automatically guarantee that the no mistakes in investment judgment will ever be made. Such errors would still be possible, but they would be less likely. The chief arguments advanced for having an elected treasurer is that the officer provides some kind of check on the professional administration on use of public funds and gives the public more voice in government. That argument was not persuasive 12 years ago, and it is not persuasive now. Following is the editorial published by the Herald on Aug. 8, 1978. It's conclusions still It is very difficult to see how electing a town treasurer give voters a larger voice in local representatives or their appointees. The Charter Revision Commission came rightly to the conclusion that the elected treasurer should be replaced by an appointed finance officer, but that decision proves to be politically unpopular. To repoint a finance officer as other administrative officers are appointed, acknowledges the administrative realities of the office. What the present system does for most voters is to give the choice between a Democratic candidate for treasurer and a Republican candidate for treasurer, and the treasurer will almost inevitably be a member of the majority party in the election. What the present system does of active members of the party is to give them a small piece of patronage in a system from which patronage has virtually disappeared. The arguments against an appointed finance officer are akin to the arguments that crop up now and then in favor of eliminating the councilmanager government. They stem from the mistaken feeling that Manchester's government is "professional" and not responsive enough.

In fact Manchester's government is "amateur" in the best sense of the word. Dozens of citizens serve unpaid and almost unrewarded capacities. They study issues. They listen to public opinion. They make decisions affecting the community. They pass on information to the administration and the Board of Directors to guide the elected directors in formulating public policy. Control of the government is not concentrated in the hand of a few persons, but well spread over a wide spectrum of citizenry. Hanging on to an anachronistic elected officer

Short Marine above others

DEAR ABBY: Please permit me to add my own experiences to those of the woman who signed herself "Itty-Bitty Betty in Boise," who wrote about the problems she encountered because she is only 4 feet 10 inches tall. She said she'd been accused of trying to "sneak" into R-rated movies - and needed two IDs to Please don't feel disadvantaged by your small stature and youthful appearance. I am 5 feet 11/2 inches tall and couldn't get a girl to dance with me in high school. Neither could I play football or basketball, but I did win the 100-yard dash! My dream was to join the U.S. Marine Corps, so upon graduation from high school in 1946 (and after nine months of unsuccessful attempts to enlist), I received a height waiver from Gen. A.A. Vandergrift, then commandant of the Marine Corps. I became the shortest man in the Marine Corps. In 1947, I was stationed in Hawaii with the tallest man in the Marine Corps. He was 6 foot 9 inches! During the Korean Conflict, I got two field promosergeant when I got an appointment as a federal correctional officer at Alcatraz Island in 1955. Yes - all 5 feet 11/2 inches of me! I became a black belt in judo, then a judo instructor. Subsequently I was a deputy sheriff in Jacksonville, Fla. I'm no hero, but I wore 17 ribbons on my Marine uniform, and at 62, nobody takes me for a day over 50.

DEAR J.J.V.: At 5 feet 11/2 inches, you have a lot of guys looking up to you. Semper Fi, Sarge!

J.J.V. SR., MOBILE, ALA

DEAR ABBY: I always thought conversations be tween social workers and clients were strictly confidential — like doctor-patient relations.

Eight years after my graduation from high school, I was a "suspect" in a paternity case and was interviewed by an old buddy who later blabbed it all over town. She did not mention that a second guy was also a suspect and was also interviewed. Nor did she consider my constitutional right to be presumed innocent until proven guilty. Abby, how can anyone in this situation clear his name after what this blabbermouth said? Unfortunately, my innocence was proven later when the girl gave birth 10 months and three days after my last date with her. LONGTIME READER DEAR READER: You could sue for defamation or character, but that would require proving that the gossip damaged you. You would also have to provide witnesses to testify that "the old biddy" blabbed. If it's any consolation, you're in prestigious company. In 1863, Abraham Lincoln said: "If I were to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I can, and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, then angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

900 numbers are profitable

The new 900 telephone numbers that you can call to find out everything from your horoscope to the latest sports scores have proved to be popular and profitable. But, as is true any time there's money to be made, the sharks have been circling - and callers to some 900 numbers have lost more money than they bargained for. "Because they've become so commonplace, uncrupulous people have started to use them as well," says Sarah Cooper of the National Consumers League. Numbers with 900 as an "area code" have been in use for about a decade. They were first known to most people through television network polls. The 50-cent charge they carried at that time helped keep the tally honest, because of an issue who would dial over and over to make support for their opinion look strong.

They have come since to be used for all kinds of enterainments and services, including the "party lines" that have surprised many parents whose teen-agers have talked on them for hours at a rate of $30 or more per hour. You can get a credit card by dialing a 900 number or play trivia games with the promise of impressive

While these matters may seem a little ridiculous and expensive, they generally are not crooked. Some of the 900 numbers, through, are out-and-out scams. "We find this particularly true in credit repair offers nd appeals on television aimed at children," says

In some cases the telephone companies themselves, that do the billing for the 900 calls, have begun to take action against the worst offenders, reasoning that the last thing the phone companies want to do is serve as bill col-

"The basic problems," says Cooper, "are a lack of disclosure of the cost, or companies that put you on hold for a long time when you make the call, without understanding that you are paying for each minute that you're on Many consumers have confused 900 numbers with the toll-free ones carrying an 800 prefix. All 900 numbers have a charge beyond normal telephone calling rates. "What we have seen for the most part is that calls with the higher charges are more likely to be fraudulent," says Cooper. "That is not necessarily the case, because you will sometimes receive a legitimate service, and the 900 number charge is how you pay for it.

"But we've had cases where people pay up to $50 per phone call for essentially nothing." An example, she says, are credit repair firms that, in exchange for as much as $50, will send you a few photocopied pages with the names on banks on them. In one case, the $49 fee came with a money-back guarantee. The only catch was that the customer would have to follow all the steps outlined in applying for credit. To prove that this had been done and that he or she had been turned down for credit, the customer would have to write a report on his or her efforts to gain credit and enclose all the information provided in "the original, undamaged package." Only then would a refund be forthcoming. Needless to say, few kept the envelope the information came in, and those that did, of course, damaged the envelope by opening it. Forget the money-

WASHINGTON (AP) - Industrial production dropped 0.4 percent in April, the Federal Reserve said today, resuming the sluggishness that prevailed through much of The fall followed two months of gains, up 0.5 percent in March and 0.9 percent in February. The advances were revised from increases of 0.7 percent originally reported for March and 0.8 percent for February. Output had fallen 1.0 percent in

The Fed also said the operating rate of the nation's factories, mines and utilities - which usually move in tandem with industrial production - slipped 0.5 percentage point to 83.0 percent in April. The operating rate measures not only output but also changes in productivity levels. "A sharp drop in the production of motor vehicles and parts, affecting both consumer goods and business equipment, accounted for the April decline in industrial production," the Fed said. "Industrial production excluding motor vehicles and parts was unchanged in April and has shown little movement since January." Industrial production at manufac-

disappeared from escrow By Dianna M. Talbot

A manhunt is under way for a New York attorney who was in charge of a defunct company's money, including $200,000 invested by the town of Manchester that apparently has been lost, town officials said today. If the town is to recoup any of the funds, plus an addiional $32,000 in interest the investment was supposed to accrue, Edward Westlow of New York City must be found, they said. He apparently has no current listed phone number or

"He is the only individual we can't get a hold of," said Assistant Town Manager Steven Werbner. Werbner, Town Attorney Maureen Chmielecki, Town Treasurer Roger Negro and Mayor Terry Werkhoven met Monday with Peter Sollinger, a Hartford-area businessman who last year persuaded Negro to invest in the start-up Merus Corp., a Denver, Colo.-based blood bank operator that has gone out of business. During Monday's meeting, Werbner said officials learned that Westlow held the town's investment in an escrow account at Chemical Bank in New York under his name. At some point, he said, Westlow withdrew the town's funds. Whether that withdrawal was illegal is under investigation, Werbner said. The town is working with the bank to determine the terms of the escrow account, he Reginald Pinto/Manchester Herald said. Although it is not known exactly what was done with the town's money, Werbner said he thinks it became part of about $3 million that Merus apparently used to finance promotions, blood laboratories and other operating costs

> Monday's meeting primarily revealed more about the lefunct company's background, Werbner said. The firm was incorporated in 1986 as Merus Corp. Verbner said, "Merus" means pure in Greek.

But a lack of investment money plagued the company

Town police go by the book ... literally

By Dianna M. Talbot Manchester Herald

When the Manchester Police Department succeeded in its 2 1-2year bid for national accreditation, a ist of more than 800 standards for local police was produced.

The standards were published in a 2 1-2-inch-thick manual titled "General Orders," so all police officers could have a copy. The manual became available shortly after the department was accredited in November.

Sgt. Gary Benson, the department's training officer. No manual can exist for that type of learning because every situation is different, he said. But the manual is useful for many
