Police Roundup

Man's death may be suicide

A 51-year-old local man was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head in the driver's seat of his car late Monday afternoon, and suicide is suspected, police said. The victim had been sitting in a white, 1987 Plymouth, four-door car parked on Filley Street for some time, police said. His head was tilted backwards and he appeared to be sleeping, police said.

The dead man was identified as James Lindsey, of 321 E. Center St., police said. The body was taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital, police said.

A Hathaway Street resident called police after he noticed that the car and man had been there for some time, police said.

A gun was found in the man's hand, and the man had been shot in the right front temple, police said.

Teen charged with burglary

A Coventry teen-ager was arrested Monday evening after allegedly stole an auto scanner out of an auto, after being parked at 7-11 convenience store at 513 Center St.

Allan L. Simard, 18, was charged with third-degree burglary, sixth-degree larceny and possession of drug paraphernalia, police said. He was held on a $1,500 bond and scheduled to appear Monday in Manchester Superior Court, police said.

Police responded at 8 p.m. to a report of a theft from a motor vehicle. The victim, who was driving an ambulance, said a scanner located on the dashboard had been stolen.

Police searched the area and found Simard in some nearby bushes at Burger King, police said. A search of Simard allegedly revealed a brass smoking pipe with marijuana resin in it, police said.

Jack Gilford

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Gilford, the droopy-faced actor whose 55-year career included his roles in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" and "Cocoon" movies, died at his home Monday of stomach cancer. He was 82.

Gilford scratched his way back from a blacklisted decade during the McCarthy era with commercials for Crackerjack and potato chips.

In Brief . . .

Turnpike repairs could go to referendum

Approval of bonding for the proposed reconstruction of the section of East Middle Turnpike between Brookfield and Woodbridge streets could be a referendum question on November's ballot.

The four Democratic members of the town's Board of Directors are backing the plan for the project, which has been recognized by Public Works officials as one of the worst sections of road in town.

"We feel it's too big a project to keep putting off," said Democratic minority leader Stephen T. Casano. The town Board of Directors may vote on the referendum question at its meeting at 7:30 in Lincoln Center tonight.

Casano, who raised the possibility of holding a referendum on the work during the budget hearings, refuted the argument made by Republicans, who have said the town should delay the project until state or federal money becomes available.

Because the road is not part of any state or federal highway system, Casano says outside assistance for the project is not likely.

Furthermore, he said, "the longer you put off things, the more expensive they become."

To get the proposal on the November ballot, the Democrats need the support of only one of the five GOP members of the board.

DiRosa is unlikely state rep contender

Former Manchester Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. may challenge Republican State Representative J. Peter Fuscas for the House seat in the 55th Assembly District—but it is unlikely.

DiRosa said Monday that he would seek the seat only under "strange and extenuating circumstances," but he declined to say what those circumstances might be.

DiRosa has never sought state office, although his name has been mentioned at times as a potential candidate. He has served as a Manchester director, both as a Republican and as a Democrat, and is now serving his sixth term on the board.

Water flushing through Friday this week

The Water Division will be flushing water mains from 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. today through Friday in the following areas: from East Middle Turnpike, at Woodbridge Street, east to the town line and south to Highland Street.

Fire flow tests and hydraulic capacity tests will be done during the week also to decrease customer disturbances.

The flushing may discolor water and reduce pressure. If water appears discolored, it is recommended that it not be used until it clears. That will prevent rust and sediment from being brought into the home's plumbing system.

Along with summer comes mosquitoes

By Robert W. Trott
The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — It's barely June and the mosquito season is open. So it's probably little consolation to neck-slapping sunbathers that state health officials say the pesky little bloodsuckers might not be as prevalent in the Northeast as last year — it's just a matter of degrees, anyway.

"If you're being bitten 25 times in a minute or 100 times in a minute, it's still intolerable," Jane Coon man, Rhode Island's mosquito abatement coordinator, said Monday.

Cookman oversees Rhode Island's efforts to control the insects, a job that keeps her summers busy.

"There's no part of our state that's exempt from mosquitoes," she said. "One of the things about mosquitoes that makes them such a nuisance is they're able to exploit a wide variety of habitats."

Siegfried Thewke, state entomologist in New Hampshire, said his office has received a lot of complaints about mosquitoes.

Housing authority rapped

By Alex Girolli
Manchester Herald

A complaint against the Housing Authority of Manchester has been filed with the state Freedom of Information Commission. However, the complainant got the information she sought on the same day she filed the complaint.

Sheila Brown, a leader in the opposition to the authority's plan to purchase two houses near each other in the Horse Street area, voted the complaint May 30. Later that day she was given a tape recording of a public hearing on the proposed purchases.

Brown said Monday that she filed the complaint because she had not been given the tape by May 29 as she had requested.

Hearings on the proposed purchase of seven duplex houses in various parts of town for rental to low- and moderate-income families were held May 14. Residents of the Horse Street area, who are protesting against the plan to buy three houses close together in their area.

When the hearings ended, commissioners of the authority voted to buy only two of the houses there, but the objectors still want one more purchased.

Written minutes of the hearing were provided to the objectors, but Brown said they were inadequate and inaccurate and sought a copy of the tape recording.

In the controversy over the purchases, the objectors have accused the authority's commissioners of having an arrogant attitude. Commissioner Richard Schwolsky, who negotiated purchase agreements, accused the objectors of being misled by bigotry.

The purchases would be financed by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD officials in Washington have not yet approved the purchases.

Plan to close Patriot's beach gets Coventry residents mad

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — A Town Council action that could close one town beach on weekdays has some residents angry.

The council last week had cut $3,000 from the lifeguard account, leaving $17,000 after the proposed $15.5 million budget failed in a referendum.

"It is almost like vengeance, a backlash because the budget didn't get passed," said Peter DiPolola of 82 Wall St.

DiPolola said his family and many of his neighbors are angry that the beach could be cut back in any way. "This is our only recreation . . . if anything it should be increased," DiPolola said during the meeting at the Town Office Building.

DePohla suggested instead that town employee raises be limited to save services.

Town Council Chairman Joan Lewis replied, "Our problem is the budget has failed the first time around — with no new programs. Existing programs must therefore be cut."

She noted other areas such as police overtime and new capital equipment were also cut.

In addition, Lewis said it will be up to the town Parks and Recreation Commission to determine how the cut will affect the recreation program. The council has suggested that Patriot's Park beach be open only on weekends but Littleck Beach remain open all week because it is used more.

Former councilwoman Rose Fowler also came to protest. Fowler said there is a lack of clear communication between the town hall and recreation staff, which apparently thinks it has only a total of $8,000 to pay lifeguards at both beaches. "Communication better be cleared up," said Fowler.

DiPolola said there is $17,000, but $3,000 that was cut by the council is equal to the cost of two lifeguards.

Eisesser also said it is too late in the season to adequately put together a fee schedule for beach use to make up for the cut. However, he said such a plan would be a good idea for the future.

Higher rate of asbestosis found at UTC

HARTFORD (AP) — More workers in East Hartford and Windsor Locks got job-related asbestosis and asthma than in other Connecticut towns, and most of the cases involve employees at two United Technologies Corp. divisions, according to research by clinicians at Yale-New Haven Hospital.

The data, which documents occupational diseases diagnosed at the Yale-New Haven clinics between 1979 and 1987, reveals clusters of asbestosis-linked diseases among workers in East Hartford, Groton, New Haven, and Stratford.

It also shows smaller groupings of occupational asthma cases concentrated among workers in Windsor Locks, Wallingford, Groton, and New Haven.

As presented in a general study of job-related illnesses released by the state labor and health services departments, the clinical data does not identify the workplaces where employees apparently contracted their ailments.

But Dr. Mark Cullen, director of the Yale Occupational Medicine Program, said the asbestosis and asthma victims were mainly workers at UTC's Hamilton Standard and Pratt & Whitney divisions.

Asbestosis is a lung disease caused by the inhalation of asbestos, a heat-resistant fiber. Besides asbestosis, asbestos has been shown to cause tumors, lung cancer, and other diseases that are serious, irreversible, and often fatal, according to the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Ex-speaker Wright has no regrets

By Patricia Gravino
The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Jim Wright expresses little bitterness or remorse over his downfall as House speaker after 34 years in Congress and spends his time a year later with gardening, lecturing and family.

"I didn't get everything done that I wanted to, but for three and a half decades I was able to . . . apply my wit and my intellect and my physical strength to some of the most intractable problems and see if I could make them budge," Wright said.

"That was a great gift. Not many people are given that. So, why shouldn't I feel fortunate?" he said in a recent interview.

A relaxed, unassuming Wright, 67, reflected on the benefits of his resignation, which he blames on political enemies, as he sat in a sun-lit room at his home in Fort Worth on Friday.

Exactly a year earlier he gave his resignation speech, and he formally relinquished the speaker's post on June 6, 1989.

"Now I'm home, among people whom I know, who know me," Wright said. "I am able to do a lot of things that I denied myself during those years when I was trying to be a leader."

Wright stepped down after the House Ethics Committee said he violated House rules 69 and 70 in his dealings with his friend George Mallick of Fort Worth.

He is fatalistic about his resignation, which came after the longtime Democratic leader had been speaker for about two years.

"There were so many peculiar circumstances that fell together to create this jigsaw puzzle out of which there was no escape, none of my own making, none of my mind, predictable . . . that I'm inclined to think that that's what was supposed to be," Wright said.

Wright's office is cluttered with memorabilia and boxes from 34 years in Capitol Hill, along with notes for a book he is writing on Central America. Wright donated congressional memorabilia to Texas Christian University for a memorial library.

FEELING FORTUNATE — Former Speaker of the House Jim Wright discusses life away from Washington during an interview in his Texas home recently.

"I think that it leaves scars. I don't think there's any way to get away from it," he said.

Wright maintained that the ethics charges were falsely brought by his enemies and that he never knowingly violated House rules. He said the behavior of his nemesis, Republican Rep. Newt Gingrich, and special prosecutor Richard Philbin amounted to "character assassination."

Wright also blames the media for a "voracious thirst for scandal," saying reporters never gave him a chance to tell his side of the story.

Wright assigns scant culpability to himself.

"It is altogether possible that I may have been too insensitive, too demanding, too firmly determined to achieve the maximum in pushing for legislation, he said.

Wright said he didn't do enough to protect himself once the ethics allegations started flying.

"I thought I could . . . let the other guy wear brass knuckles if he wanted to, and I could still win," he said. "Maybe that's hubris. It turned out that it didn't work that way."

Nevertheless, he insists he's not bitter.

"I'm happy, I'm as busy as I want to be," he said.

Wright has time for things that had been squeezed out by his busy schedule, such as having dinner with his wife and spending time with his children and grandchildren.

He still works long days writing, giving speeches or guest lectures at colleges and appearing at fund-raising for fellow Democrats.

Wright recently attended a gathering for the man who filed his ethics case, Pete Oren, who often seeks his advice.

"As for worry, Wright said he doesn't worry how his life will read.

"I'm at peace with myself," he said. "I intend to rest my case on the things that I was able to achieve."

Congress, Bush remain at odds on foreign policy

Trade benefits for two countries main contention

By Joan Mower
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress, returning today from a long holiday, finds itself at odds with the administration on policy toward China and the Soviet Union.

In both cases, President Bush opted to grant trade benefits to the countries that were longtime U.S. adversaries. He now faces broad opposition to those decisions on Capitol Hill.

China flared as an issue before lawmakers left the capital on May 24 for the Memorial Day holiday. Bush announced then that he would extend for one year the most-favored-nation trade status that grants China lower tariffs on goods imported to the United States.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, who opposes the trade benefits because of China's human rights practices, said he would meet with other lawmakers this week to map out a course to try to reverse Bush's decision.

Many members of Congress, including Mitchell, are upset that Bush signed a trade package with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the summit last week without pressuring the Soviets to relax their economic stranglehold on the independence-minded republic of Lithuania.

"That was unfortunate and unwise," said Mitchell, who characterized Bush's action as "effectively abandoning the Lithuanians."

Bush did tell Gorbachev he will not send the trade agreement to Congress for its approval until Moscow puts into law its promise to allow free emigration of Soviet citizens.

In the legislative arena, meanwhile, the Senate is taking up a wide-ranging crime-fighting bill. More than 250 amendments were stacked up when Congress recessed, and the Democratic leadership will seek a vote to curtail debate.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, urged his colleagues to curb the debate, saying "this legislation should not be killed by delay."

Amid this jockeying, former White House Press Secretary James Brady, felled by John Hinckley Jr.'s March 1981 assault on President Reagan and now a gun-control lobbyist, announced a "Brady Bill Bill."

Brady's campaign seeks support for a provision requiring a seven-day cooling-off period for the purchase of handguns. The provision is designed to give police more time to conduct a record check of would-be handgun buyers.

House members were expected by Wednesday to try to override Bush's veto of a bill authorizing $2 billion for Amtrak. The president objected to one provision in that measure that would give police oversight of railroad acquisitions in a way he said would be "a step backward for the rail industry."

On Monday, Mitchell criticized the president's decision.

Justify asbestos removal

Town directors Terry Werkhoven and Ronald Osella are right when they express reservations about spending money for costly asbestos removal until they are convinced it is necessary.

Manchester, like many other towns, spent large sums to remove asbestos from old school buildings. Since then, there has been evidence to suggest that asbestos is not so dangerous as originally supposed.

Some people have been questioning the need for asbestos removal all along. Paul Phillips, former chairman of the building committee, argued against it in school renovation projects.

Removal is very costly. Encapsulating the asbestos is less costly. When possible the less costly alternative should be used.

The state grant program complicates the situation. The town can get the state's 58 percent reimbursement for asbestos treatment only once. That discourages officials from making an interim repairs out of fear that the town will have the bear the full cost of any future job.

With municipalities cutting budgets and the state in a budget crisis, it would be a shame if money that could be spent on needed operations or improvements has to be diverted to asbestos removal unless there is clearer evidence of the need.

Responsibility

To the Editor:
Should area residents pay higher taxes to educate Bolton students?
The obvious objective of The Neglected Taxpayers is to choke off the funding in order to close the high school in Bolton and bus our students to Manchester or Hartford. Why should citizens in other towns be asked to pay higher taxes to educate Bolton children? As the elementary school enrollment declines, the number of children in Bolton continues to rise in surrounding towns over the next five to ten years, those high schools will only be able to accommodate Bolton students? Do we build a new high school in Bolton? Do residents in other towns add more additional tax dollars to pay for the school in Bolton? Do residents in other towns add more additional tax dollars to pay for the school in Bolton? Do residents in other towns add more additional tax dollars to pay for the school in Bolton?

Revaluation

To the Editor:
As you readers know, the residents of Bolton are going through a difficult budget fight at this time. We have two groups in the community fighting long and hard for their respective goals.
At this time TNT is still striving to see the budget increased by only five percent. This is a goal that they have expressed over and over. What they have not informed the people who have become their followers is that this will save a homeowner with a home assessed at one hundred thousand dollars a mere one hundred dollars for their 1990/91 year. This is less than ten dollars per month.
The key issue that keeps being buried in all of this is that the revaluation that has just taken place is what is really raising taxes for many people. For the past several years with the rise in housing prices throughout the area the value of many of our homes has greatly increased, I for one am going to see an increase of 34% but I don't feel that the minimal amount that is being saved by TNT's budget fight will have much of an impact.
I think it is time we realized that our own ways and go back to being the great

Crude and rude is OK today

By Vincent Carroll
Is there any doubt that American values have coarsened during the past 20 years — grown callous to shock or insult? For one answer, consider the behavior of John K. Van de Kamp. The California attorney general and candidate for governor is outraged — or so he claims — that anyone should even consider outlawing abortion for sex selection.
For sex selection, for heaven's sake! Not because the woman or couple doesn't want a baby, but because she'd prefer a rather not have (for example) a baby girl! Now, there was a time not long ago when someone who entertained such an opinion would keep it strictly private, for fear of what friends might think. Killing a fetus just because you happen to dislike its sex is a first cousin to eugenics — and hadn't the Nazis given that devil's science a very bad name?
Not only has Van de Kamp aired his views on the issue, he did so voluntarily, at a public debate — apparently confident that many Californians would agree. He attacked his opponent for the Democratic nomination, former San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein (a longtime defender of abortion rights), for admitting she'd consider outlawing abortion for purposes of sex selection.
Once under the heat lamp, even Feinstein wilted, soon giving voice to a second thought. Meanwhile, Feinstein's handlers gamely argued that Van de Kamp's rally was born less of conviction than desperation. Lagging polls made him fling the issue, they say.
Yet even if he's right, politics is the art of the possible, meaning Van de Kamp clearly thought he could drive a wedge between Feinstein and her supporters with an early abortion that followed an accidental and unwanted pregnancy and an abortion — an all-out assault on its legality, and so rally to his cause.
Heaven help us if he was right. It means the public has lost the ability to distinguish any ethical difference between before a brain or neural system has developed) and one much later, when the child is essentially formed.
But for proof of our coarsening values, you needn't turn to California, nor to the politician. America's elite is full of people who have trouble drawing a line anywhere these days. They're expansive, they're tolerant, they're open to new distinctions of the most elementary kind, lest they be considered intolerant or prudish.
The elevation of Tower to chairman is something Bush has wanted to do for a long time. Bush is not ready for a pure member of PFAB from Ronald Reagan, but he hasn't made much use of the board since he became director.
Knowledgeable White House sources tell us that Bush is eager to replace someone on the board except his good friend Tower. Our sources predict it will happen in June, or later if FBI background checks on the appointees drag on.
Ironically, many of the current members are closer to Bush than Reagan, including chairwoman, Anne Armstrong, an old Texas beauty of Bush's. In 1985, when Reagan streamlined his cabinet from 21 to 14 members, some Reaganites complained that the members who survived did not cluster to Bush's right. Bush's reluctance to use PFAB and Tower at the helm may have something to do with his own day as director of the Central Intelligence Agency during the Ford administration. Ford's PFAB decided that the CIA's right-wing intelligence agencies were underestimating the Soviet threat.
The Ford PFAB set up two teams to analyze the CIA and the "A Team," outside constraints. The B Team ratcheted down the CIA's most powerful strength, the CIA had assumed, and Bush eventually adopted that point of view to drive the CIA. But he received plenty of grief from the rank-and-file CIA members who all rightly thought he was a political hack and didn't like being told what to do by outsiders. At the time Bush was struggling to win respect at the CIA.
What addition to be driven by some of our most powerful officials, Bush now wages a smaller battle made up of military, academic, business people and consultants.
One PFAB member told us that Bush has not used us effectively at all. That doesn't mean that we have been inactive. But we have not had the direct and frequent contact with him as with past presidents. The board has continued to meet several days every other month and has reported its findings to the National Security Council and the CIA.
Sweeping changes
The White House is quietly studying ways to overhaul the nation's intelligence system. Some of the changes being considered include cutting in half the current $100,000 deposit insurance guarantee, limiting savers to one insured account, merging the banking and savings-and-loan industries and combining the deposit insurance funds for banks and thrifts. Many officials are worried about the last one because of the thrifts being tapping into the insurance fund, the banks could be drained.
Mini-editorial
The Census Bureau surveys 60,000 households each year and according to the most recent survey, 65 percent of mothers work outside the home. But according to Gallup Polls only half of those working mothers had changed their work habits so they could spend more time at home. It would be easy for the federal government to use statistics to prove the need for more day care. The nation does not need better day care, but the statistics should alert the government that women want to care for their own children. Congress is beginning to put more energy into day-care legislation. But it needs to concentrate more on reforming the workplace to accommodate parents who don't want to turn their children over to professionals.

Ex-senator resurfaces as nominee

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — John Tower, the former senator who couldn't pass muster to be secretary of defense, is about to be named chairman of a secretive intelligence advisory board to President Bush, called "Jiffy-87" for its acronym, PFAB.
Our sources say that in two months or less, Tower will take over the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, a position of honor and prestige that he held last year as a consolation prize after the Senate refused to give him the job he really wanted, secretary of defense. He does not need Senate confirmation to be chairman of PFAB, so the questions of nomination, drafting and conflicts of interest that dogged him through the Senate hearing will not find a public forum this time.
But since White House officials have privately raised objections, noting that Tower would continue to work as a consultant for government contractors while he has access to national security secrets as a member of the board.
PFAB has been around in one form or another since the Eisenhower administration, although Jimmy Carter disbanded it during his term. It exists to advise the president on the quality of intelligence being gathered from the rest of the world. It is getting from the rest of the world what the CIA board technically does not oversee those agencies, but it second-guesses their work and suggests ways they can do a better job.
The elevation of Tower to chairman is something Bush has wanted to do for a long time. Bush is not ready for a pure member of PFAB from Ronald Reagan, but he hasn't made much use of the board since he became director.

Travis comes up empty

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Travis, top entertainer the previous two years at the TNN-Music City Country Awards Show, came up empty Sunday despite being a finalist in five categories.
Ricky Van Shelton was chosen entertainer of the year and top male vocalist, and Patty Loveless was named female vocalist of the year.
"I'm shocked, really shocked," Shelton said Monday night after the 24th annual fan-voted awards. "I'm really, totally in awe."
The Statler Brothers were double winners, taking the vocal group award for the seventh straight time and copying single honors for "More Than a Name on the Wall."
Hank Williams Jr. and his late father also were double winners, for video and vocal collaboration for "There's a Tear in My Beer."
Tennessee Ernie Ford won the Minnie Pearl award for dedication to the music business and humanitarian efforts during a career that has spanned 50 years.
Veteran Merle Haggard, best known for "Okie from Muskogee," received the living legend award.
Also honored were Clint Black, star of tomorrow's front and top album; the Judds for vocal duo; Ray Stevens for comedian; Ricky Skaggs for instrumentalist and The Chuck Wagon Gang for gospel group.
The winners were chosen by subscribers to the Music City News, a monthly country music publication, and viewers of The Nashville Network, a cable station that televised the two-hour ceremony live.
Feldman pleads innocent
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Corey Feldman pleaded innocent to four felony counts of possession and transportation of heroin and cocaine.
Feldman, 18, entered his plea Monday before a Superior Court judge who set a pretrial hearing for July 9. He remains free on $5,000 bail.
Feldman was arrested March 9 after police allegedly found 25 balloons of the narcotics in his car during a downtown traffic stop.
The actor appeared in such films as "Stand By Me," "The Goonies," "Dream a Little Dream" and "The Babe."
During a court appearance in April, Feldman read a statement urging children to stay away from drugs.

Hepatitis case is very unusual

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had hepatitis for 76 days, and my doctor says mine is an unusual case. I might be the first of my type. My whole body is yellow. Is there any cure or medication I can take?
DEAR READER: In the United States, hepatitis (liver infection) is most frequently caused by a virus. The most common types of viral hepatitis are hepatitis A (transmitted by food contamination and raw shellfish) and hepatitis B (transmitted by infected blood needles or shared needles among drug addicts). Irregular use of acupuncture, acupuncture needles, or the type of virus, hepatitis is customarily marked by jaundice (yellow skin), due to a backup of bile from malfunctioning liver cells.
Hepatitis is also caused by alcohol abuse, mononucleosis, drug allergies, and non-A-non-B viruses. Most forms of viral hepatitis last two to four weeks. Therefore, your hepatitis, which has been present 2 1/2 months, is distinctly unusual. I worry that you may be slipping into subacute or chronic hepatitis, more serious conditions for which you should be under the care of a liver specialist or gastroenterologist. Chronic hepatitis is associated with more extensive liver damage and a much poorer prognosis.
However, I cannot comment on your prognosis because I don't know the cause of your hepatitis. You should obtain this information from your doctor.
In any case, following your recovery from this ailment, you may remain infectious for many years, meaning that the virus — although dormant in your liver — still lives in your tissues and could be transmitted to another susceptible person through a needle stick or a blood transfusion. This is the reason the Red Cross prohibits patients who have had hepatitis from donating blood.
I suspect you are going to have to wait out your hepatitis, if it is caused by a virus. There is no cure for viral hepatitis; treatment is for symptoms only and consists of rest and a balanced diet. Ask your doctor — or the gastroenterologist — what, if any, treatment might help you feel more comfortable during your recovery.
In addition, if you are developing a more chronic form of hepatitis, you will need further testing, such as a liver biopsy, to establish a diagnosis and prognosis, as well as to assess your prognosis.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a man who experiences cramping and pelvic pain after orgasm. My doctor cannot explain this uncomfortable experience. Can you?
DEAR READER: Perhaps. During sexual arousal, the pelvic blood vessels become engorged. If an orgasm, the blood vessels return to normal. However, in some cases, for inexplicable reasons, the pelvic area becomes congested, leading to discomfort and cramping. This may be accompanied by spasms or tension of the ejaculatory muscles that cause orgasm.
I suggest you see a urologist for advice about how to manage these symptoms. Also, the specialist will wish to check you for prostatic infection which, because of chronic irritation, can be a source of post-orgasmic pain.

ABC's new executive tries to win battles first

By Deborah Hastings
The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — It's a tough time in the world for television executives. First, there was the May sweeps period. Now, it's time for the network affiliates to annualize their conventions, where the questions often come loaded.
Sundwiched between the all-important fall schedule announcements, an event tantamount to a presidential candidate picking a running mate — and not one of the Big Three wants anything in the fall lineup that gets the reception Dan Quayle got.
So here is Robert Iger, entertainment president of No. 2-ranked ABC, coming off his first year in his big new job. He likes it, thank you very much, even if things are a bit hectic of late.
And almost as much as he likes the job, it appears, Iger likes to take chances. He calls them gambles "where we have nothing to lose."
But in the high-stakes, out-of-control television world, there always is something to lose. Most of the time, it's your job.
The 39-year-old former weatherman who now runs programming at ABC has an affinity for the weird. This is the man who brought you "Twin Peaks" and is

Weather info crucial to some

By Larry Blasko
The Associated Press

The weather may be fodder for small talk at the office, but it's crucial for farmers, transport and construction workers and a host of other industries. A personal computer program from Mindscape won't change it, but it can help you plan for it.
WeatherBrief allows your IBM-compatible PC to dial a data base called WeatherBank for pre-selected information and conditions for just about anywhere from around the corner to around the world. It costs $49.95 and requires a hard disk. Hayes-compatible modem, 512,000 characters of memory and a monitor compatible with either EGA or VGA standards.
That's a fairly expensive setup, but this is a program for those with more than a casual interest in the climate. The software offers access to satellite maps, radar maps, current conditions and forecasts from 6 to 90 days hence. There are alerts to severe weather watches (possible severe weather) and warnings (duck!). If your interest is professional, you can access the kind of data meteorologists use to prepare their forecasts.
The information comes from the National Weather Service, Federal Aviation Administration, U.S. military, U.S. Post Office and WeatherBank Inc.
The software comes with a clear, concise manual and both 5.25 and 3.5-inch disks. Installation is almost foolproof. A thorough glossary at the back of the manual suggests the information can get technical. "Adiabatic Process. A thermodynamic change of state of a system in which there is no transfer of heat or mass across the boundaries of the system."
Got that?
The on-line service costs between 20 and 43 cents a minute, depending on whether and when you use the 800-number. Billing is by credit card or check. You send a check you send. It's possible to check on 300 items. I took about a minute to get 16 items at 1,200 words per minute. The service receives transmissions at 300 and 2,400 words per minute as well. Heavy users obviously would be well advised to consider the higher speed. For more information, call 1-800-885-9000. Don't be surprised when the number answers "The Software Toolworks" — Mindscape is now a Toolworks company.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, June 5, the 156th day of 1990. There are 209 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight in History:
On June 5, 1968, at 12:16 a.m. Pacific time, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was shot and mortally wounded at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles shortly after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. Kennedy's assassin, Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, was immediately arrested.
On this date:
In 1723, economist Adam Smith was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland.
In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.
In 1883, economist John Maynard Keynes was born in Cambridge, England.
In 1894, Civil War hero General William T. Sherman refused the Republican presidential nomination with the words, "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected."
In 1888, the Democratic National Convention in St. Louis nominated President Cleveland for a second term. (He lost to Benjamin Harrison, but was elected president again in 1892.)
In 1917, about 10 million American men began registering for the draft in World War I.
In 1923, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the federal government could not regulate interstate commerce.
In 1940, 50 years ago, the Battle of France began during World War II.
In 1952, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University outlining a program of aid for Europe that would become known as "The Marshall Plan."
In 1967, tensions between Israel and its Arab neighbors erupted into the Six-Day War. The fighting ended June 10 with a United Nations-negotiated cease-fire.
Today's Birthdays: Brockton Lansing is 61. Broadcaster Bill Moyers is 56.

about to bring you singing police officers in "CopsRock."
This is the man who says, "I don't believe in being No. 1 at all costs."
Do the guys over at parent company Capital Cities know that? They must. They put him in this position last March.
Iger's predecessors include Walt Disney Co. Chairman Michael Eisner, producer Fred Silverman, Fox Inc. Chairman Barry Diller, and, most recently, Brandon Stotler.
No, Iger says, he doesn't have a quick plan to bump off NBC as the top-rated network. "You don't want to do that. We're going to be No. 1 this year."
Rather, Iger says, you shoot for innovative programming, for winning certain time periods, for incremental battles that eventually add up to winning the war.
So how did Iger, a 35-year-old former weatherman who came up through its sports division, devise the upcoming season?
"There were time periods we weren't going to worry about," he says.
despite recent lackluster ratings. Will it do better?
"I hope so," Iger says.
The upcoming season presented a number of problems for ABC, namely, what do you put on after "America's Funniest Home Videos," the hottest show on television? "Elvis" died there, as did other programming tries.
Iger's solution? He cloned it. In the fall, "America's Funniest Home Videos" will be broadcast at 8:30 p.m. EDT Sundays. And despite a glut of home video hybrids on other networks and local affiliates, Iger said he's not worried about his own show.
"I think 'Home Videos' has proven to be an extremely durable product," he says.
Asked to explain how he decides when to cancel a show that is a critical success but a ratings loser, Iger replies:
"It's very difficult. That's probably one of the most difficult things we have to do. Yes, we're in this business to be No. 1 and yes, we're in this to make money, but if a show is still successful demographically (i.e. in certain age group demographics), we won't be ignored."
ANOTHER TV FIRST: Greg LeMond, Sports Illustrated's 1989 "Sportsman of the Year," will do his first national commercial, peddling his bicycle for Taco Bell's "Taco-to-Go" summer campaign.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the people who elected me as director of the Eighth United District at a annual meeting on May 23.
It gives me great pride to know that these residents have placed their confidence and trust in me. I will make every effort to live up to the trust that has been placed in me. I would also like to extend my appreciation to the individuals who supported me during my campaign.

Changing times

Having been born and raised in Manchester, I can remember the good old days when you didn't have to lock your doors or nail down anything you had outside. Things have really changed through the years. I say this because this week an intruder from planter was stolen from our yard. While the hard working people are sleeping, the night people are robbing. The planter had a base with three long necked birds on it. The birds heads curving out. Setting on the base was the container with dirt to plant flowers. It has been in the family a long time. Should any antique dealer, or anyone be approached to buy it, be aware that it is a stolen piece. The police have been here to check out the theft.

Bud takes Hodges' office, but Mets' play is amazing

By Jim Donaghy The Associated Press

NL Roundup

NEW YORK — Bud Harrelson would like to follow in the managerial footsteps of Gil Hodges. After one week, Budly knows more how Casey Stengel felt.

Since Harrelson replaced Davey Johnson as manager last Tuesday in Cincinnati, his New York Mets have lost four of five games to fall to 21-26.

Harrelson's first game managing the Mets at Shea Stadium turned into a 5-3 loss to Montreal on Monday night when the Expos rallied for four runs in the seventh inning.

"I see things changing," Harrelson said. "I see a little more aggressive running on the bases."

When Harrelson looks at the National League East standings today, he will also see the Mets trail first place Pittsburgh by 8 1/2 games.

"This was a special day for me," Harrelson said. "My wife and some of my kids were here. We lost, but I approach every day with a smile."

For a while, David Cone (1-4) gave Harrelson reason to smile as the Mets led 3-1 after six innings on Mike Marshall's two-run homer in the second and an error allowing Darryl Strawberry to score in the fourth.

It was a strange game for Cone, who matched a career high with 12 strikeouts but also allowed five runs and 11 hits in 6 1/3 innings as the Mets lost for the seventh time in nine games and 11th in 16.

"We kept getting people on but Cone was getting the big strikeouts," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said. "Until the seventh he got the big pitches when he needed them."

Dolino DeShields, who scored in the third, led off the seventh with a bunt single and Dave Martinez followed with a triple. With the infield in, Tim Lincecum looped a double down the left-field line to tie the score. It was Raines' first two-base hit in 173 at-bats this season.

After Cone fanned Andres Galarraga for his 12th strikeout, Tim Lincecum singled to third and Jeff Musselman relieved. Musselman walked ing error by third baseman Rick Schu and Rafael Palmeiro's two-out single sent the Angels to their seventh loss in 21 games.

Orlones 6, Brewers 4: In Milwaukee, Cal Ripken hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly that broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth inning and Baltimore won its third straight game. Manager Frank Robinson won in his return to the Orioles after a three-game suspension for abusing an umpire.

A throwing error by third baseman Gary Sheffield, Milwaukee's 58th mistake of the season, helped Baltimore lead the bases against Bill Krueger (2-2). Ripken was in an 8-for-57 slump when he hit his go-ahead fly ball.

Joe Price (1-2) got the victory. Greg Olson worked a scoreless ninth for his 12th save in 12 tries.

Wolff in Who's Who book

WEST HARTFORD — Keith Wolff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gregg Wolff of Manchester, has been selected to appear in the 1990 edition of Who's Who in High School Sports.

Wolff is a junior at Kingswood-Oxford School where he averaged 24 points and 10.2 rebounds per game this past basketball season. Wolff has been elected co-captain for the 1990-91 season.

Calhoun on Whalers' board

HARTFORD (AP) — Jim Calhoun, who coached the Hartford of Connecticut men's basketball team to its most triumphant season this year, has been named to the Hartford Whalers Advisory Board.

"Jim Calhoun is one of the most respected college basketball coaches in the country," said Whalers managing general partner Richard Gordon. "We feel Jim's record of achievement and his knowledge of what it takes to win will make him a valuable member of our advisory board."

Under Calhoun, the Huskies won the Big East Tournament title this year and made it to the NCAA final eight. They lost to Duke on a last-second shot and ended the year with a 31-6 record.

Calhoun will join former National Hockey League great Gordie Howe and Bobby Orr, tennis star Ivan Lendl and former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach on the board. Also on the board are five Hartford-area business professionals.

Brixton rots Harrisburg

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Left hander Tom Fischer went the distance giving up three runs and Mike Twardoki stroked three hits scoring three times leading the New Britain Red Sox to a 10-3 Eastern League victory over the Harrisburg Senators Monday.

Fischer fanned four and walked two in Monday night's game raising his record to 5-4.

The Red Sox took advantage of four first inning walks by Harrisburg starter and loser Ben Webb (4-6) and an error to score four runs.

Twardoki had a triple and two singles while teammate Randy Radtke, Jeff Bagwell, and Mike Zepic and Mike Kelly each contributed two hits.

The Red Sox had 13 hits off three Harrisburg pitchers. NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle's Randy Johnson, who pitched a no-hitter Saturday against Detroit, was named the American League player of the week.

Fitzgerald is eliminated

MIDDLETOWN — Manchester High's Ed Fitzgerald was eliminated in the quarterfinals of the CIAC state tennis tournament by No. 5 ranked Kris Lappinick of Westhill-Stamford 6-3, 6-4 Monday at Wesleyan University.

Fitzgerald, despite the loss, has qualified for Saturday's State Open at Farmington High School.

MHS 6th, EC 12th in golf play

Manchester High finished sixth in the Division I Golf Championships Monday at Simsbury Farms Country Club while East Catholic placed 12th at the Division II tournament at Westbrook Park Country Club in Water-town.

Parfield Prep took the Division I title with a total of 326 with the Indians, who went in ranked seventh, finishing 10 strokes back with a total of 336. Matt Kohut led the Manchester effort with a 78, two strokes off the winning performance of Scott Chaisson of New Canaan.

Johnston, a 6-foot-10 left-hander, struck out eight and walked six against the Tigers. Dystra, who has a .418 average, had 10 hits in 25 at-bats during the week. He has a 17-game hitting streak.

Blue Jays draft Burrell

University of Connecticut freshman Scott Burrell was drafted in the fifth round by the Toronto Blue Jays in Monday's amateur free agent baseball draft.

Burrell, who was drafted in the first round by Seattle in the June 5 draft, was eligible for the draft again because he didn't play for the UConn baseball team this past spring.

Burrell's father, Sam Burrell, said the family has not been contacted by the Blue Jays' organization. Sam Burrell said his son would stay in school.

Blazers not shocked by their year

By Bill Barnard The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Portland Trail Blazers, who barely made the playoffs a year ago, say they aren't surprised the team is in the NBA Finals for the first time since 1977.

The Blazers' team won 59 games, and people still say, 'Portland Who?' Jerome Kersey, the Trail Blazers' leading playoff scorer, said on the eve of tonight's championship series opener against the Detroit Pistons.

"But I knew we had a good team at the beginning of the season, and I knew we had a good chance of making the finals if we made the playoffs."

Clyde Drexler, Portland's closest threat to a marquee player, said the Trail Blazers expect to beat the Pistons, who are making their third consecutive trip to the finals and hope to become the third NBA franchise to repeat as champions.

"A lot of people think we're just happy to be here, but even early in the season we expected to be early," Drexler said. "We're coming in with the idea that we can beat the Pistons."

Detroit coach Chuck Daly doesn't gracefully accept the Pistons' favorite's role.

"They have guys who have been around for a long time and I don't think our championship experience will make much difference," Daly said.

Daly said Portland "is balanced, tough and quick on transition. It's a mental adjustment to go from one kind of team to another. You can't cheat on defense on any player in their lineup. They've got too many guys who can play, and they're bigger than us at nearly every position."

The Finals have a lot more in common than their identical 59-23 regular-season and 35-6 home records. Both play a physical style, with strong rebounding and balanced scoring.

Another similarity between the teams is that each on the other's hometown in two regular-season games.

Portland won its home game 102-82 on Nov. 26, another source of worry for Daly.

"We got totally annihilated and were rested," Daly said. "I don't think anybody beat us that badly all season."

Pistons guard Isiah Thomas agreed with Daly that the Trail Blazers' balance makes them a tougher team to defend than Chicago, which was held under 80 points in the seven-game Eastern Conference Finals.

"We have to respect everyone on our team because they have three or four guys who can score 25-35 points," Thomas said. "In the other series I've been able to dominate the other point guard most of the time."

A's take a shot at Van Poppel

NEW YORK (AP) — The Atlanta Braves took Todd Van Poppel at his word. The Oakland Athletics, however, did not.

The Braves almost certainly would have made Van Poppel the No. 1 choice in Monday's free agent draft, except the 19-year-old pitcher from Arlington, Texas, convinced them that he is going to the University of Texas. Atlanta then changed direction and made high school shortstop Chipper Jones from Jacksonville, Fla. the No. 1 pick and then promptly signed him late Monday.

Oakland was undeterred, though, and when Van Poppel and his 90 mph fastball were still available at No. 14 of the first round, the A's — using a pick obtained from Milwaukee as compensation for the signing of Dave Riske — grabbed him. Hank Van Poppel, the youngster's father, can't imagine why.

"As far as we're concerned, it was a wasted pick," Van Poppel said. "Out of courtesy, we'll permit one visit. Why they drafted him, I'm not sure. He's set to go to Texas."

Jones' contract with the Braves contains a record signing bonus of $275,000. His father, Larry Jones, said that the terms of the contract are "extremely fair," covering $68,000 in college education and a bonus that covers the record $241,000 the Braves gave prep catcher Tyler Houston last year.

"It's a package," said Larry Jones, who negotiated the deal with Braves assistant vice president Paul Snyder at the Jones home in Pierson, Fla. "It's the most substantial signing bonus a high school kid has ever gotten. We weren't trying to hold anybody up."

The Braves hardly view Jones as a consolation prize, however, not after he hit .488 with 10 doubles, five home runs and 25 RBIs and led the Bolles School to the Florida state finals for the second straight year. He is expected to be a scholarship-waiting at the University of Miami.

"Chipper is a blue-chip high school talent," Snyder said. "The fact that he can switch-hit is a definite bonus, as is his tremendous speed. For us, it's a quality draft at a quality position."

Detroit, like Atlanta, was not scared off by a college draft at a quality position.

Dazzled by Tony Clark's .543 batting average and 10 home runs in 35 at-bats for Christian High School in El Cajon, Calif., the Tigers picked right after the Braves but he has a commitment to play basketball at the University of Arizona.

Burrell's father, Sam Burrell, said the family has not been contacted by the Blue Jays' organization. Sam Burrell said his son would stay in school.

Agassi charges past Chang in French Open tourney

By Larry Siddons The Associated Press

PARIS — Andre Agassi muscled defending champion Michael Chang out of the French Open today.

Stubble-bristling and hot-pink outfit brighter than ever, the third-seeded American reached his fourth Grand Slam semifinal and his second in three years in Paris with an overpowering 6-2, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2 victory built on sheer power.

Two streaks — five games in a row in the first set, the last six in the second — put Agassi in a dominating position. And when he is in such a spot, he seems to get even stronger. He finished the match by breaking Chang with a sledgehammer backhand volley.

Agassi next plays the winner of a match between two unseeded defending champions Michael Chang and Gabriela Sabatini at the French Open on Monday.

The 14-year-old Floridian and the youngest Grand Slam tournament finalist in history, played seventh-seeded Martina Navratilova.

On the same court Monday when she defeated Martina Navratilova in the French Open final two years ago, Martina Navratilova, who reached the quarterfinals of a tournament he almost failed to make.

A wild-card entry through the grace of the French Tennis Federation, Leonce eliminated a genuine contender, a 1987 Wimbledon title.

Andre Chesnokov, 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 2-6, 6-3.

Wanderer in the semifinals in Paris two years ago, Agassi has taken on a strenuous training program to improve his power and stamina. The results showed in the second set.

Agassi pounded groundstrokes deep into the corners, running Chang out of position then coming to the net for winning volleys. He had Chang in constant trouble, even when the 11th seed saved a break point and hold serve in the first game. That was the only one for Chang in the set. Agassi ran off six in a row, jumping on Chang's serves for stingy winners to break in the fifth game and move to 15-40 in the seventh game. Chang saved one of those break points but Agassi closed the set with a putaway off a short lob, set up when he sent Chang deep into a corner to retrieve one of his bullets.

Martinez, the ninth seed from Spain, threw a momentary scare in the No. 1 seed when she took a 3-0 lead in the second set and had game point for 4-2. But Graf used her powerful forehand and some aggressive tactics at the net to win the last six games, finishing the match on a bullet-like service return winner.

U.S. soccer team has high hopes at the World Cup

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

PISA, Italy — The United States soccer team believes it will advance to the second round of the World Cup, a rather off-center view according to soccer experts.

So, quite appropriately, the players on Monday visited the most famous tiled building in the world — the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

"There's not a player on this team that doesn't believe we're not going to make it to the second round," midfielder Paul Caligiuri said. "That's the attitude we have. Our chance exists until it's taken away. I'm not a psychic, I can't predict the outcome. But I believe in my teammates, my coaches and myself."

The U.S. team, which plays Czechoslovakia on Sunday in its opening match, had its first workout Monday at the Italian seaside Tuscan town nine miles from Pisa.

Police patrol the camp with 9-millimeter Beretta machine guns and large dogs. Undercover Italian police and two U.S. State Department security officers also accompany the team wherever it goes.

"I guess the scariest thing they told us was that we probably have more questions than any one of the 24 teams because the U.S. is the target for terrorism," goalkeeper Tony Meola said. "Just the word scares you a little bit. But you look out here and I don't see how anybody can get through this place. So we're pretty safe. We're doing our own thing back here. We can't be bothered by very many people."

The team ventured into the Italian public for the first time Monday afternoon and was the center of attention at the Italian fan fests.

"We didn't even know they were here," said Lisa Andrew, a tourist from Dearborn, Mich. "It's kind of neat," said her sister, Celeste, who took pictures of Lisa along with several players.

Most of the American players brought their cameras along and took turns taking pictures in the middle of the Quadrilatero, a main street where the teams appear to be holding up the tower.

The building, constructed in 1173, sits 14 feet off center. The soccer world still even more if the United States beats Czechoslovakia, Italy or Austria, its first-round opponents.

"I think we're going to display some attractive soccer," said Caligiuri, who scored 18 goals in 82 games at UCLA and then scored the goal at Trinidad last November that put the United States in the World Cup. "We're going to surprise most people, and I hope we win the fans' support."

Meola, whose parents are from southern Italy, speaks and reads Italian. He said he was slightly upset with the lack of regard Italian newspapers have for the U.S. team. "People here don't seem to be very pleased with the way we play," Meola said. "But we haven't been in the World Cup for 40 years. We can't expect them to tell us we're going to be shoe-ins for the second round."

Earrings subject to dress code

CHICAGO (AP) — Earrings may be fine on pinates and punk-rockers, but not on politicians in rural Pocono, an appellate court ruled.

The 7th U.S. Circuit of Appeals ruled Monday that Pocono officials who wore earrings were not in violation of a dress code that prohibited "excessive" jewelry.

"I really shouldn't comment about the appellate court ruling without talking to my attorney, but one thing is certain — I'm not quitting the force or leaving Pocono," Zybak said Monday night in a telephone interview.

"I'm very happy here, I've been here since 1968, and I consider it my hometown."

Homeowners values prevailed in the appellate decision, which upheld an earlier ruling by U.S. District Judge James Holdman in favor of Pocono Chief Gary N. Bogart and other officials in Pocono, 45 miles south of Chicago.

The record shows that even some family members and officer colleagues were disturbed by the earrings as much as were the city officials, wrote Appeals Judge Harrison Wood Jr.

"It is obvious from the record that the plaintiffs not only caused an adverse impact on police discipline, esprit de corps and uniformity... but caused great public dissatisfaction as well," Wood added.

Zybak and Rathert bought the studs and had their ears pierced in December 1986 at a jewelry store in Matoson. Zybak said he and Rathert were just trying to make an off-duty fashion statement.

"We didn't mean to wear them on duty, but unfortunately, when you get your ears pierced, you have to keep the studs in for about six weeks so they won't close up," he said. "On-duty, we kept Band-Aids over them, but that wasn't good enough, I guess."

Officials in the town of about 3,000 received complaints from some of Pocono's four other full-time officers, residents and even Rathert's wife.

"We both received a strong reprimand about the earrings in January 1987, and Officer Rathert — he was a sergeant then — was demoted and suffered a pay cut," said Zybak, explaining why the two men filed a federal lawsuit.

The lawsuit contended the village's real motive was to promote "conservative or narrow-minded views."

"The important responsibilities of these police officers do not include attempting to change the village's political and social outlook, whatever it may be for about six weeks so they won't close up," he wrote for the three-judge panel.

Americans gave $114b to charity

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans gave nearly 10.5 percent more to charity last year, and about half the $114.3 billion donated went to religious groups, a report says.

The report attributed the increase to an 8.9 percent rise in personal income, a 21.1 percent jump in the stock market, intensifying fund-raising efforts, growing awareness of AIDS, homelessness, the environment and other concerns.

The report was issued Monday by the AARFC Trust for Philanthropy, an arm of the American Association of Fund-Raising Councils.

The trust found in 1989 Americans gave $114.7 billion to charity, up 10.43 percent from the year before — or 5.5 percent when adjusted for inflation.

The biggest chunk of the donations, 47.4 percent, went to houses of worship, religious organizations and the social services they provide.

Two natural disasters in 1989, San Francisco earthquake and Hurricane Hugo, generated an outpouring of financial aid. The Red Cross, for example, received $155 million in donations, unchanged; and corporations gave $5 billion, up 4.17 percent.

"For every $5 we spent on food, we gave more than 80 cents, almost $1, to a worthy cause," said the report. "For every $2 we spent on shoes and clothing, we gave $1 to philanthropy."

"Clearly, these comparisons show that philanthropy is not ancillary to our lives, not something we do on the side," it said.

Discovery has been at the center of the disaster since its April filing with the Hubble Space Telescope. That mission was checking for damage to the 60-foot door and the workers, which enables the door to open and close on Earth.

The accident occurred in a hangar while Discovery was being prepared for its October flight with the Lyman-alpha satellite, which will explore the Sun's poles.

Second shuttle suffers problems

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery, the shuttle's latest space shuttle to encounter trouble when a crane jammed one of its payload bay doors.

A hydrogen leak somewhere inside Columbia has shut down the shuttle's astronomy mission on hold. NASA plans a fueling test Wednesday in a last-ditch attempt to find the leak without having to roll the shuttle back to its hangar — a move that would mean a month's delay.

Discovery sustained possible damage Monday when a corner of a payload bay door was snagged by an overhead bridge, which acts as a crane. NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham said. The open door flexed 10 to 12 inches upward, then snapped back into position when the bridge operator moved back.

"There is no visual damage. However, the orbiter has several very critical components that aren't meant to be bent," Buckingham said. Workers were checking for damage to the 60-foot door and the workers, which enables the door to open and close on Earth.

Greyhound files for protection

DALLAS (AP) — Fears that creditors would begin repossessing buses and closing off terminals led Greyhound Lines Inc. to seek protection in federal bankruptcy court, the company says.

The only nationwide bus system filed for Chapter 11 protection from its creditors Monday. The move allows Greyhound to continue operating under court supervision while it tries to reorganize its finances.

"There will be no interruption of service," senior vice president J. Michael Doyle said.

The Dallas-based company has seen ridership and revenues plunge after most of its 6,300 drivers walked out March 2 in a dispute over wages and job security.

The drivers' union had no immediate comment on the Chapter 11 filing.

The company has hired about 3,000 replacement drivers and claims to have restored service to locations that provided 98 percent of revenues last year.

But the drop in ridership and the cost of fighting the sometimes violent strike drained the company's cash, including a strike fund estimated at more than $54 million.

Greyhound blamed the strike for much of its $56 million first-quarter loss. The company also has missed more than $17 million in interest, lease and principal payments, putting it in default on many financial agreements.

In the past few days, there has been a lot of pressure by creditors' who own buses and terminals and lease them to Greyhound, said President Frank Schmeider.

Two weeks later, however, the company proposed repurchasing $225 million of its junk bonds at a steep discount to junk bondholders.

Jettison an ace to survive

By James Jacoby

Would you hesitate to go down an extra trick in an unbalanced vulnerable contract, if putting yourself in that position gave you a better chance of success? I think not. On the other hand, you would need the imagination to see the play, since it involves throwing away an ace.

Club-bidding back and forth, North-South wandered into six no-trump and led a spade. West ducked the first spade, then took the second (South throwing a heart) and continued with the heart 10. Dummy's king was down and declarer played all his spades, discarding a heart, two clubs and a diamond. West, who had to make four discs, let go two hearts and five cards of clubs, keeping his four diamonds to the 10. When declarer then played the ace of clubs, West was free to set the trick back at the finish with the diamond 10.

South can succeed by jettisoning his ace of clubs as he runs his spade winners. If he ever throws a diamond, declarer makes five diamond tricks. But throwing away the club winner, declarer makes five diamond tricks. And throwing away the club winner, declarer makes five diamond tricks. And throwing away the club winner, declarer makes five diamond tricks.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" written with his father, the late Charles Jacoby are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Phane Books.
