Wave of morality washing over Florida

Beach, two video store owners were arrested and X-rated videos disappeared from most shops after 100 store owners were warned by State Attorney John Tanner against tapes deemed obscene.

At Sarasota, where charges earlier were dropped against a 19-year-old clerk accused of selling the 2 Live Crew album to a girl not yet in her teens, though bikini — which have only a narrow piece of material covering the buttocks — were banned. The state cabinet on Tuesday approved a rule that swimsuits at state parks must cover at least half of a woman's breasts and everyone's buttocks.

In the Fort Lauderdale area, bars featuring nude dancing were banned last year unless they serve only non-alcoholic drinks.

In Palm Beach County, commissioner Ron Howard is seeking a ban on TV advertising for 900-number "phone sex" operations, in which callers are charged $10 or more to hear a woman talk dirty to them.

Conzelmann called the 2 Live Crew case part of the continuing confrontation between industry and government.

"And anybody who lives in the land of 'Miami Vice' as I do knows that just about anything goes down here," John Thompson, a Coral Gables lawyer who helped lead the fight against 2 Live Crew, said Monday on ABC's "Nightline."

But the days of "anything goes" appear to be

Pumping iron seen lifting the very old to improved vigor

By Lindsey Tanner
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — You might not see many great-grandmothers down at the gym, but a study today suggests the very old may benefit from pumping iron.

The findings, reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association, are based on a study of 10 residents of a Boston nursing home, ages 86 to 96.

After an eight-week training program, most had doubled their weight-lifting ability and some had tripled or quadrupled it, said the researchers.

By the end of the regimen, all nine subjects who completed the study had at least doubled the weight they could lift. The average increase went from 16 pounds at the beginning to about 42 pounds by the end, Ms. Fittarone said.

One 86-year-old woman stopped after four weeks because of pain at the site of a previous hernia. The rest completed the training with little pain and no injuries.

The researchers called the results remarkable considering the subjects' age and poor health at the start of the study. Seven had arthritis, six had heart disease and four had high blood pressure.

After stopping weight lifting for four weeks, the participants lost half the gains, Ms. Fittarone said. A similar loss would be expected in a younger person, she said.

Ms. Fittarone, who works with the elderly as director of cardiovascular rehabilitation at the University of Chicago Medical Center, said the number of subjects studied was too small to apply to the general population.

She added, "The last thing you'd want to happen is have a group of 60- to 90-year-old people going out and weight lifting" because of

Senator admits wrongs, says penalty too harsh

By Philip Brasher
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., says he doesn't deserve the "harsher than warranted" penalty of being denounced by the Senate for financial dealings that he admits broke ethics rules.

The Senate ethics committee's special counsel, Robert Bennett, recommended Tuesday that sanction for "reprehensible" actions by Durenberger that brought "dishonor and disrepute" on the Senate.

"His conduct was clearly and unequivocally unethical," Bennett told the committee after describing allegations that Durenberger broke Senate rules and federal law through a book promotion deal and transaction assignments as well as ordering him to make restitution.

Bennett said Durenberger should be censured, traditionally has been reserved for serious violations of the law.

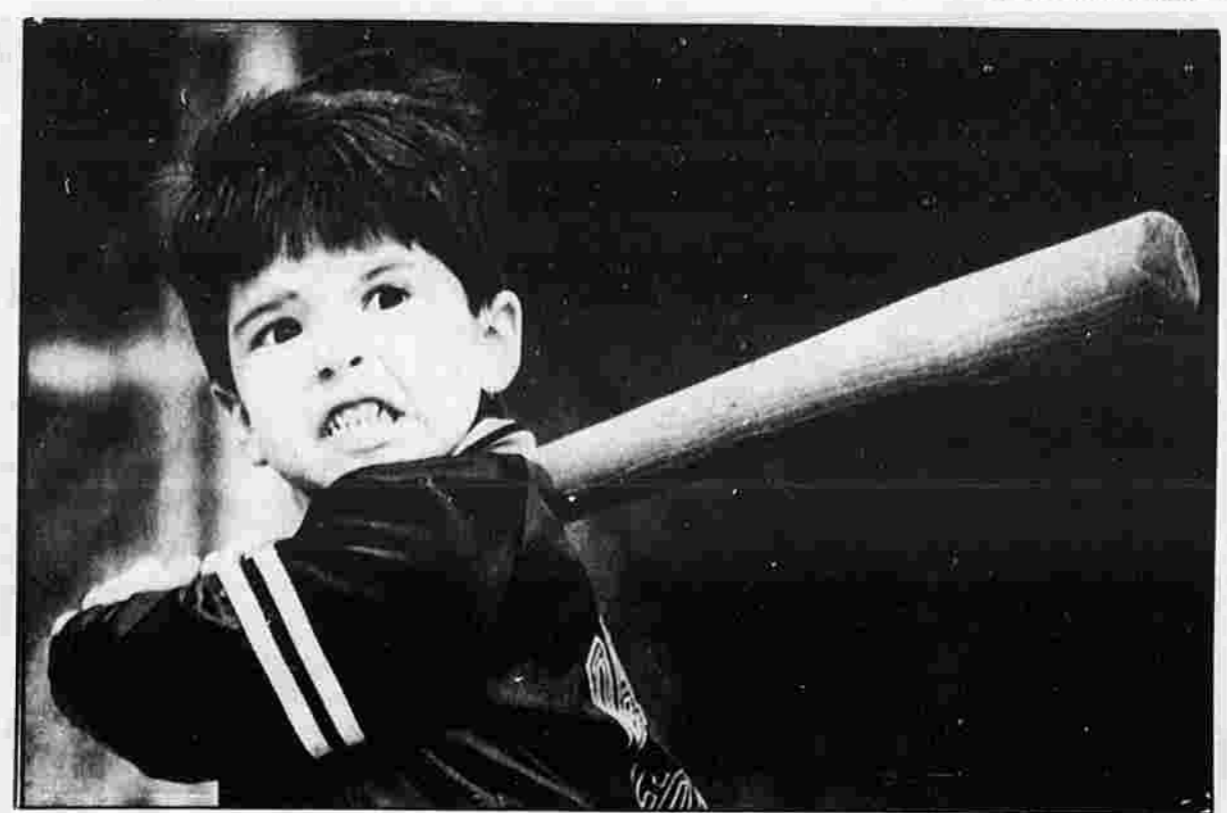

The counsel said Durenberger was guilty of a "pattern of misconduct."

"When one chases loopholes, he sometimes gets caught in the net," Bennett said.

Hamilton portrayed Durenberger as a victim of mistakes and sloppiness who relied on a "bevy of lawyers" to handle his finances. There were no "evil motives" or a "grand conspiracy" to violate the rules.

"He had no intention to violate the rules. He thought he was obeying the rules," Hamilton said.

Bennett accused Durenberger of making false promotional appearances in 1985 and 1986 for his two

FBI agent solves murder by pleading guilty himself

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An FBI agent solved a year-old homicide by confessing he strangled a pregnant woman with whom he had been having an affair.

Mark Putnam, 30, of Sunrise, Fla., was sentenced Tuesday to 16 years in prison after pleading guilty to manslaughter. His confession allowed authorities to find the remains of Susan Daniels Smith off a coal mine road in the eastern Kentucky hills.

Putnam, who had used Ms. Smith as an informant in a bank robbery and auto theft case, is believed to be the first agent in FBI history charged or convicted of a homicide-related crime.

Ms. Smith's sister, Shelby Ward, 35, was ordered to appear in court June 26 after she was released for trying to enter court with a handgun, State Police said. Police gave no further details.

"This is the dirtiest court I've ever seen in my life," Ms. Ward said.

Putnam said that without Putnam's June 4 confession, "we had absolutely no evidence. Not one scintilla of shred or evidence" to bring a charge or convict this man.

In a signed confession, Putnam described the night of June 8, 1989, when he choked Ms. Smith, 27, "in an act of extreme rage." A 27-year-old divorced mother of two, she was four months pregnant and insisted he was the father.

According to her family, she wanted Putnam to leave his wife and two young children in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Their affair began in December 1988.

Putnam, who resigned Friday, is eligible for parole in eight years.

Tanker blaze under control

OIL SPILLED freely into the Gulf of Mexico without being consumed by flames today after firefighters controlled the engine-room blaze that turned the super-tanker Mega Guard into a smoky, listing hulk.

Salvage boats and Coast Guard ships skimmed the water and used floating barriers to try to corral a slick estimated early today at 15 miles long and 600 yards wide, up from 13 miles long on Tuesday, the Coast Guard said.

On Tuesday, firefighters spraying water on the scaring deck boarded the ship and declared the fire controlled nearly four days after the first of a series of explosions ripped through the vessel's 57 miles southeast of Galveston.

The blaze and fire left the 886-foot ship with one deck awash, and crews had feared it would break up or sink with its cargo of 38 million gallons of crude.

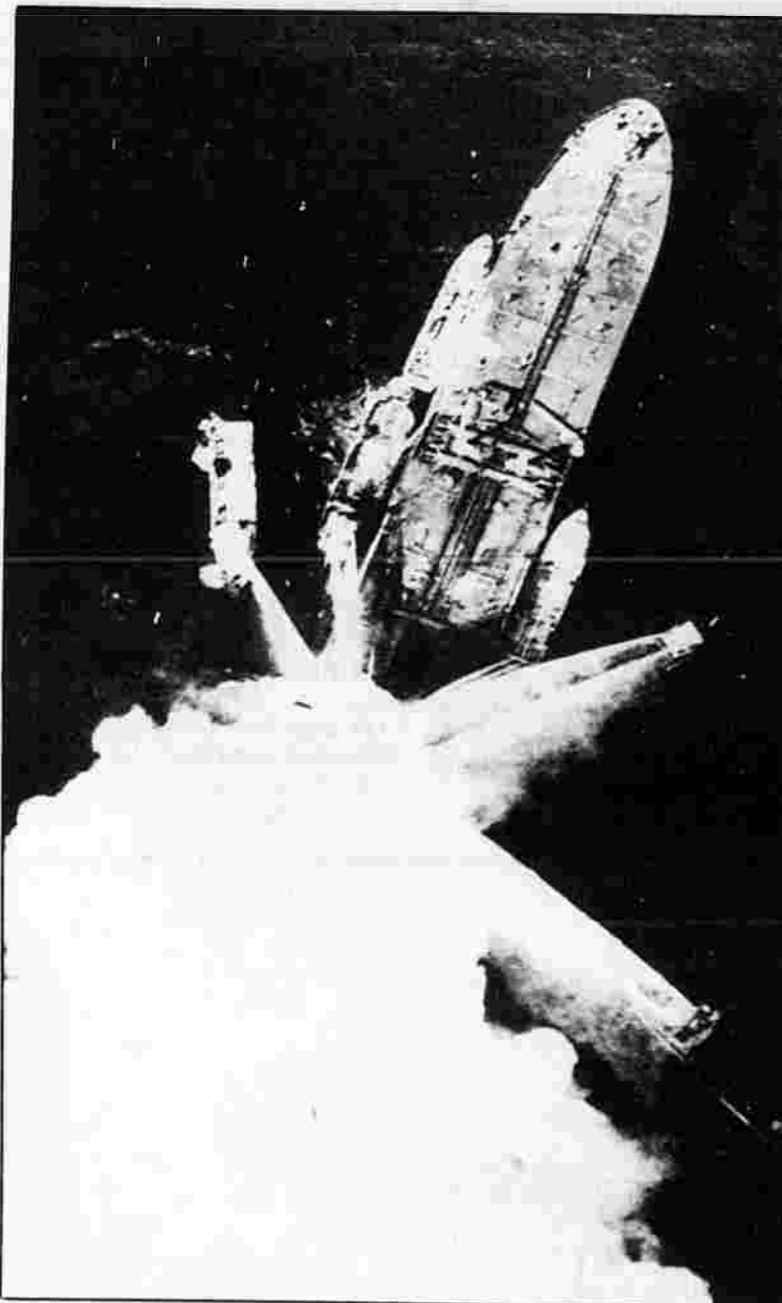

In gaining the upper hand on the blaze, firefighters solved one problem but may have created another.

"What appears to be happening, that since they are getting the fire under control, it's not burning up as much oil and more oil is getting in the water," said Coast Guard Lt. j.g. Robert Garrot.

However, officials had not determined how much was leaking or whether skimming was keeping pace with the spill, he said.

At least 100,000 gallons of oil spilled since an explosion Saturday crippled the tanker, Coast Guard officials said. Most of that burned or evaporated, Garrot said.

The Norwegian government scheduled a hearing today in Galveston to interview crew members who were aboard when the tanker exploded while transferring cargo to a smaller vessel. Two of the 41 crewmen died, two were missing

Retail sales continue decline for third month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales slumped 0.7 percent in May, posting their first three-month decline since the last recession in 1981, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said sales decreased to a seasonally adjusted $146.84 billion from $147.93 billion in April.

After remaining unchanged in February, retail sales fell a revised 0.4 percent in March and 0.9 percent in April. That was worse than the 0.3 percent decline first reported for March and the 0.6 percent dip in April.

Many economists had expected a slight improvement in sales in May. It was the first time since September, October and November 1981.

Poll reveals 49 percent think incurably ill have suicide right

WASHINGTON (AP) — About half the American people believe the incurably ill and those hopelessly wracked with pain have a moral right to commit suicide, according to a survey described as relevant to "suicide doctor" Jack Kevorkian's case.

But an expert on the legal aspects of medical ethics says patients have "absolutely no right" to demand that a physician assist them in ending their lives.

"You shall not kill" still stands in this society, especially for doctors," Susan M. Wolf, a lawyer with the Hastings Center, a research institute that studies medical ethics, said in a telephone interview from Bristol Manor, N.Y.

The poll, conducted for the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press, showed that 49 percent of the public believe a person with an incurable disease has a moral right to commit suicide. It said 55 percent believe in such a right for people suffering great pain with no hope of improvement.

The telephone poll of 1,213 adults was conducted during the first week in May, about a month before Kevorkian touched off a furor by assisting in the suicide of a 54-year-old woman who had been diagnosed as being in the early stages of Alzheimer's disease.

Surgeons re-attach torn-off scalp

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A woman whose scalp was torn off from the eyelids to the nape of her neck, exposing the skull, had her scalp sewn back on in a 14-hour operation. "She going to be just fine," the lead surgeon said.

A team of five surgeons worked with high-powered microscopes to replace the woman's entire scalp, small blood vessels and other tissues torn from her head last week in a vineyard accident in Napa Valley.

"She was an attractive woman before...she will be an attractive woman when it's over," said Dr. Alfonso Oliva, who conducted the surgery at Ralph K. Davies Medical Center.

The 33-year-old vineyard manager, whose family asked that her name not be released, was working in the field at Domaine Chandon on July 4 when her hair caught in the rotor of a sprayer crankshaft, the hospital said Tuesday.

Though horrified, the woman's co-workers had enough presence to preserve the scalp. The woman

Black candidates win in primaries

Black candidates won primaries for governor of South Carolina and lieutenant governor of Arkansas, propelling them into uphill general election races against powerful opponents. In the Arkansas race, businessman Kenneth "Muskie" Harris trounced Ku Klux Klan sympathizer Ralph Forbes by more than a 6-1 margin on Tuesday to win the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor. In South Carolina, state Sen. Theo Mitchell soundly defeated state Sen. Ernest Passalunghi in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. In one other election with racial overtones, the first black mayor of Atlantic City, N.J., James L. Ury, was ousted by a white challenger in a runoff. Ury was recently indicted on corruption charges.

Some banks gain as others dive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas banks are back in the black after more than four years of steady losses, while once-thriving Massachusetts institutions have become the industry's biggest money-losers. Nationally, commercial banks earned $6.2 billion in the first three months of 1990, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Tuesday. The performance, except for a sharp earnings dip in the last half of 1989, was in line with bank profits over the past two years. But the overall performance masked dramatic turnarounds in some states. Texas banks, which lost $42 million during the first quarter of 1989, turned a profit of $164 million in the first quarter of this year. It was their first quarter in the black since the last quarter of 1985. Massachusetts banks went the other direction. They earned $202 million in the first quarter last year but lost $171 million in the

Club-swinging cops clear protesters

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Hundreds of club-wielding police broke up a nearly two-month sit-in before dawn today, arresting more than 260 people as they cleared a central square of anti-Communist protesters. A photojournalist said several dozen protesters were beaten. The police took about 20 hunger strikers, some of whom had gone without food for a month, to the hospital. The hunger strikers had been camped in a small tent city in University Square, protesting what they consider the Communist domination of the National Salvation Front, which has been in power since the December revolution. A government spokesman hours after the crackdown said 263 people were detained for investigation. It accused protesters of attempting to resist the police with violence and said some arms were confiscated. Brindusa Muresan, who had been on a hunger strike since May 9, said some of her colleagues were clubbed by police in the lobby of the nearby

Gorbachev proposes union of sovereign states

MOSCOW (AP) — Faced with a splintering empire, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is proposing to counter accession drives by transforming the Soviet Union into a looser federation of sovereign states, officials say. The Soviet leader has also significantly softened his position on German reunification, saying a united Germany could be an "associate member" of the NATO alliance while at the same time joining a new pan-European security order. He did not define exactly what "associate membership" would entail, but the Kremlin up to now has opposed a new Germany whose sole military allegiance is to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Gorbachev made his proposal about the Soviet republics on Tuesday, the same day the parliament of the huge Russian republic approved a resolution declaring its laws to carry more weight than federal statutes. Also Tuesday, Gorbachev met with the presidents of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia after refusing for weeks to negotiate with the secessionist Baltic republics until they agreed to abide by the Soviet constitution. President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania hinted that the Kremlin might soon end the economic embargo imposed on his republic. Soviet Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, who attended the session, said today that it produced definite progress on the impasse over the Baltic states' independence declarations. He said if the Baltic republics went ahead and accepted the Kremlin proposal that they suspend their independence moves and begin negotiations, "great possibilities for future talks will be opened."

foreign policy and defense. Others have added control of some industries, overall economic planning and other duties to the list. Landsbergis asked whether Gorbachev would lift the economic embargo imposed on Lithuania in April, said, "The blockade will not be canceled tomorrow, but the day after tomorrow, we shall see." Gorbachev cut off shipments of oil and other raw materials to Lithuania after the republic refused to repeal laws stemming from its March declaration of independence. The other two Baltic states have taken a less rapid course toward secession, declaring indefinite transition periods to independence. In an hour-long address to the Supreme Soviet legislature, broadcast live on Soviet TV, Gorbachev said "huge reactions" were achieved in arms control at his Washington summit with President Bush.

Bottle law should be national

New Hampshire, whose go-it-alone attitude often puts it in conflict with its neighbors, is back to being a pain in the neck again. It might take an act of Congress to ease the pain.

New Hampshire is the only New England state without a returnable container law. Some soda manufacturers find it simpler to ship just one type of container — returnables — to all six states.

As a result, a lot of people find it profitable to buy those beverages in New Hampshire, where they don't have to pay a deposit, and cart the empties across the border to redeem in neighboring states. The practice is so widespread that distributors in Maine and elsewhere are beginning to complain that it's costing them money.

It's hard to get greatly worked up over the problems of distributors in returnables states; they make out well enough under deposit laws. But New Hampshire's position on returnables deserves criticism from an environmental standpoint.

In the decade-and-a-half since Maine became one of the first states to adopt a returnable container law, the approach has proved effective not only in reducing roadside litter but in cutting down substantially our solid waste volume as well.

Meanwhile, solid waste disposal has become a matter of grave national concern. America is almost drowning in garbage. Bottle laws help to address that problem.

What's needed is a national returnable containers law. That would take the ball away from holdout states like New Hampshire and grant a sizable percentage of trash out of the nation's solid waste stream.

I have a very high opinion of the people who are employed by the Westside Multicare Center (formerly the Meadows). They are hard-working dedicated workers who care for patients well.

On my weekly visits to my mother I found the buildings spic and the patients well taken care of. During the ten years that I have been visiting the former Meadows Convalescent Home I have seen many improvements in the care of the patients, as well as the buildings and grounds.

Water pollution

To the Editor:

I am a concerned citizen who lives near the reservoir on South Main Street. For the past few years, we have been drinking that water. South Main Street passes directly through the center of two reservoirs, on a man-made causeway.

In the winter the snowplows throw the dirty and salty snow off the causeway, right into the water. When it rains the rain washes the pollutants off the road, also into the water.

I feel that there should be some protection for the water, and subsequently for us. I know the water goes through a treatment process but even after that how safe is it? After all life of all kinds is entirely dependent upon a healthy water supply.

Baggage weighs down Cibes

By Bob Conrad

Bill Cibes probably knows more about current state government in Connecticut, most importantly its budget and taxes, than all of the other candidates for governor this year put together.

Part of the reason is his deficiency in name recognition, usually enough of a problem for congressmen who decide to run statewide but even more of a handicap for state legislators.

So it is ironic that this well-informed, thoughtful and bright Democrat is also representative from New London is also leading badly in the polls.

Part of the reason is his deficiency in name recognition, usually enough of a problem for congressmen who decide to run statewide but even more of a handicap for state legislators.

Equally troublesome for Cibes as he cheerfully follows a killing schedule on the stump is his self-imposed baggage of advocating a state income tax. He knows it, but he won't back off because he believes it's the answer for this financially worried state.

Even criticism by Democrats who would otherwise love to have an alternative to the front-running U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison doesn't bother him. He is convinced the state cannot continue its present course of patchwork taxation and one-cot gimmicks any longer.

"I'm sorry, I think you're wrong — it's not a realistic position," said Audrey Morrison, party chairwoman of Litchfield, at a meeting of 6th Congressional District leaders in Bristol last week. "It's not what people want to hear. It's unsalable as an issue," she said. Four nights earlier, Cromwell Democrats said "no way — cut spending first."

Cibes is willing to take his from his own party because he believes a wider current taxes and ready for reform. He cites figures from surveys that purport to show 59 percent favoring an income tax coupled with spending cuts.

Cibes, who does his homework on every town before appearing there, says leaders in Bristol last week. "It's not what people want to hear. It's unsalable as an issue," she said. Four nights earlier, Cromwell Democrats said "no way — cut spending first."

Meanwhile, he's giving the income tax idea its strongest promotion in years. It's not surprising that he is a syndicated columnist.

3M makes firm commitment

By Robert Walters

MAPLEWOOD, Minn. — For most corporations, concern about the environmental consequences of their actions is a matter to be handled by a hollow public relations gesture on special occasions such as Earth Day.

At other times, those firms' business-as-usual approach to the release of toxic and carcinogenic materials into the air, water and soil means that abatement of industrial pollution has only a low priority on their agenda.

In 1988, the most recent year for which comprehensive statistics are available, the nation's manufacturers released into the environment 6.2 billion pounds of contaminants suspected or known to endanger human health or safety.

But for the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., widely known as 3M, the reduction of air or elimination of company-generated pollution has been the object of a 15-year campaign believed to be unmatched by any other major corporation.

3M, whose headquarters are located in this Minneapolis suburb, launched its Pollution Prevention Pays initiative in 1975 — when corporate concern about the environment was hardly fashionable.

Corporate officials estimate that the 3P program has reduced company-generated air pollutants in the United States by 224 million pounds and water pollutants by 30.6 million pounds. The company also claims to have greatly cut releases of waste water and solid waste.

Those figures, says 3M, represent savings only in the initial year of each implementation. Moreover, the company claims that the more than 2,500 projects initiated under the 3P program at 63 domestic and 22 international sites have reduced its costs by $500 million.

Crucial to the initial success of the 3P initiative is its emphasis on eliminating or reducing contamination at the source — usually during production — rather than generating pollutants and then attempting to treat, store or dispose of them.

"We must get our emissions down further," says Reiner. "We make the point that many of the approximately 60,000 products 3M makes involve the use of adhesives or other coatings. (The company's best known consumer products are Scotch tape and Post-it notes.)"

Large quantities of petroleum-based solvents, which become harmful air emissions when they evaporate, long were assumed to be required in the manufacture of those items. Now, however, 3M is turning to water-based solvents or eliminating their use entirely in its manufacturing processes.

"Our biggest problem is air pollution, much of it caused by solvents," says company spokesman Richard H. Renner. "Because we want the trust of the people who are breathing the air, we contain our emissions, we've got (pollution control) research programs going for every major solvent we have."

Humorous EPA ads backfire

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — An attempt by the Environmental Protection Agency to humor Americans into protecting the planet has backfired. The media campaign called "How to Destroy the Earth" used reverse psychology to pass along environmental tips. But there was a small problem. Many of the tips were wrong, and a few of them were too radical for the Bush-era EPA to endorse.

The embarrassed EPA has withdrawn some of the ads and put out a story that minor tinkering had to be done.

The good news is that a well-meaning Boston ad man, Steve Cosmopolous, donated $1 million worth of his creative time and energy to come up with the campaign. Many of the tips were wrong, and a few of them were too radical for the Bush-era EPA to endorse.

Delvecchio sparks Manchester to Zone win

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

After being outscored, 49-2, in its first three games of the summer season, the Manchester Legion Post 102 baseball team looked to stem the tide in its Zone Eight opener against Rockville Tuesday night at Moriarty Field.

Spurred by Doug Delvecchio's three runs batted in, Manchester overcame a 5-2 deficit and pulled out a 6-5 victory.

Five 102 will play Enfield tonight at 5:45 at Fermi High School in a Zone encounter.

With the score tied, 5-5, Don Sauer (three runs scored) led off the bottom of the seventh with the fourth walk of the game. Sauer stole second base and Ryan Barry drove a walk. Delvecchio, who sliced open Sauer with the winning run.

"We're not real aggressive with the bats," Morency said. "We were timid at the plate. Dougie was one of the players who shook it up for us tonight. He came up big for us. He led the charge offensively tonight with a couple of aggressive at bats on the ball. I think he (Delvecchio) surprised them. He was down in the order (No. 8) and I think they overlooked them."

Tom Strano, who tossed two innings of shutout relief, gained the win. Post 102 starter Max Hein went the first five innings and gave up five runs on five hits. He walked four and struck out five. Only two Rockville runs were earned due to five Manchester errors. It was Delvecchio's throwing miscue in the fifth which allowed Rockville to score two runs.

O'Brien fanned 11 in his six-inning stint.

"This will do a world of good for his confidence," Morency said of Strano's performance.

In the bottom of the second, Sauer scored an apparent run for Manchester on a single to right field by Ryan Barry. Rockville appealed to third base following the play and Sauer's run was nullified because he failed to touch the bag.

"Yeah, he missed it," Morency, the third base coach, said.

Steve Joyner and Lindsey Bouffler collected two hits each for Manchester while O'Brien had two for Rockville.

UConn to pay for some of past success

Ah, the price of success. The University of Connecticut, coming off its first Big East Conference basketball championship in 1989-90, has been lapped the tone to bear in the '90-91 season.

In the preseason coaches' voting, UConn was tabbed No. 1 followed by Georgetown, Syracuse, St. John's, Pittsburgh, Villanova, Providence and Boston College.

The No. 1 ranking "earned" UConn the privilege and distinction of meeting North Carolina at the Smith Center in Chapel Hill, N.C., on Dec. 6 as part of the Big East-Atlantic Coast Conference Challenge Series.

That's quite a change from a year ago when UConn was tabbed No. 8 in the preseason voting, and got a home game at the Hartford Civic Center against Maryland. The Huskies, fans will recall, soundly drubbed the Terrapins in that one.

This is a different scenario, to say the least. Playing on the road is one matter. But playing at the "Dean Dome" against Dean Smith and the Tar Heels, who have one of the best recruiting classes coming in for the 1990-91 season, is something that Coach Jim Calhoun's club won't enjoy in the slightest.

The Huskies lose only one critical player from the Big East championship club, 6-5 Tate George. But George's departure creates a void which many a Husky fan is not sure can be filled by those left behind.

Nolan Henefeld lent maturity to what many continually called — and rightfully so — a young squad. His international experience bode well for Connecticut and his cool demeanor on the court helped keep UConn on a steady course in many a tight game. Chris Smith was a quiet assassin for Connecticut. He'd drain two or three long-range jumpers, and all of a sudden have 18-20 points before anyone knew it.

But if anyone was the heart and soul of the 1989-90 club, it was George. He worked on his jump shot before the season, and became an offensive threat, and while there were times he and Calhoun seemed to clash, the pair more times than not were on the same page.

People won't know how much Connecticut will miss from an individual until the '90-91 season arrives. And Calhoun's hopes of having 6-foot-3 guard Richie Ashmeade out of Holy Cross High in Flatbush, N.Y., help fill the void were derailed Tuesday when it was announced that Ashmeade has not met the minimum guidelines for eligibility and will have to sit out his freshman year as a Prep 48 victim.

Ashmeade, who according to Calhoun is a good student but does not do well on standardized tests, scored a 680 on his last SAT test. A minimum of 700 is needed for eligibility.

He'll have to sit out. I hate leaving Smith, John Gwynn and Steve Pikiel, who has had an injury-filled college career, for service in the backcourt.

That's a scary thought. Gwynn does his best work coming off the bench. And his ballhandling skills are questionable. Pikiel/Calhoun doesn't know from game to game what physical shape the former St. Paul of Bristol star will be.

The Big East coaches a year ago tabbed the Huskies eighth.

They placed first. This time they pick them to win it all. It doesn't make that much sense, if you look at the total picture, but that's the price of success the Huskies have to pay.

Pistons put the Blazers on guard

By Howard Ulman
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Beating the Trail Blazers three consecutive games in Portland is tough. So is winning two consecutive NBA titles.

The Detroit Pistons can do both one more victory.

The Pistons made a championship celebration Thursday night a possibility in a building where the Pistons, until this week, hadn't won in 116 years.

"I leave Detroit to a 112-109 victory Tuesday night.

The Blazers must make history — by no means an easy task. Detroit's guards held an 80-51 advantage Tuesday night. Joe Dumars, playing two days after his father's death, had 26 points and Vinnie Johnson 20.

But the Pistons' victory wasn't assured until a 3-point basket from 25 feet by Danny Young, first ruled good, was determined to have been launched after the buzzer. Replays confirmed the reversed call was correct.

"I couldn't tell," said Young, who was scoreless as part of a bench that scored 26-8. "I was trying to get as close to the basket as I could."

Detroit, trailing 32-22, held Portland to 14 second-quarter points and led 51-46 at intermission. The lead was 65-60 midway through the third quarter.

Then Thomas went crazy. Starting with 5:13 left, he scored Detroit's next 16 points in a span of 2:56, making the score 81-65. Twelve of those points came on four 3-point baskets.

Foul trouble limited Thomas to just one minute in the second quarter and he had two points at halftime.

"While I was sitting on the bench watching," he said, "I saw that we had the chance to really go after them and knock some wind out of them."

"So when I got in the third quarter, I just wanted to take it to them and take it to them, and after I made my first few shots I felt like I could make them from anywhere out there."

But it took the Blazers just 8:57 to wipe out that entire lead.

Their defensive trap flustered Detroit and their aggressiveness in driving to the basket drew fouls or resulted in layups.

Porter's short jumper with 5:20 left climaxed a 28-11 run that put Portland ahead 93-92.

The lead changed hands for the sixth time after when Drexler's two foul shots gave Portland a 107-106 lead with 31 seconds remaining.

"We're fortunate in that we have three big-time guys who can create and penetrate in Utah, Joe and myself," Johnson said. "We didn't panic. We just kept playing and we never gave in."

Portland's basket from the far right corner put Detroit on top 108-107 with 25 seconds to go. Then with 8.4 seconds remaining, Thomas stripped the ball from Porter from behind, was fouled by Young and made both shots.

Porter's two free throws cut the lead to one with 6.5 seconds to play, but Gerald Henderson's breakaway layup with 1.3 seconds left made the score 112-109.

Referee Mike Mathis then ruled Young's 3-pointer beat the buzzer, but the decision was changed after he consulted with partners Earl Strom and Hugh Evans.

"You can't catch the ball, take a dribble, cross over (midcourt) and shoot, all fill the void were derailed Tuesday when it was announced that Ashmeade has not met the minimum guidelines for eligibility and will have to sit out his freshman year as a Prep 48 victim.

Ford takes final step as Celtics' head coach

By Ed Golden
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Chris Ford cut his NBA roots during 10 years as a player and seven years as an assistant coach. Dave Gavitt earned his wings in just 12 days.

Ford, known for his lack of speed and accurate shooting eye, on Tuesday was named to succeed Jimmy Rodgers as coach of the Boston Celtics. But first he had to sit back while Gavitt, named chief operating officer and executive vice president on May 30, courted at least one other coaching candidate for the job. Rodgers lost on May 8, two days after the Celtics were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs by the

New York Knicks. "I was very confident," Ford said of the wailing period while Gavitt and Red Auerbach discussed the job with Mike Krzyzewski, who eventually declined last Thursday that he would remain at Duke University.

"When I spoke to Dave he told me that nothing had been offered to him, the job had not been offered to him and that he was still discussing contacts to see who would be the best for the job," Ford said. "He told me to be patient, and good things have happened since then."

The 41-year-old Ford, who becomes the 11th coach in the Celtics' distinguished history and the sixth player to go from Celtics player to head coach, inherits a team that includes the same front line from the 1981 NBA championship team. He played on it with Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish.

No problem, according to Ford. "They know that there's a distance between me now. And there was when I went from a player to an assistant coach," Ford said of his switch to assistant coach for K.C. Jones in 1983. "And now I'll have to take one more step back. I'm a tough disciplinarian."

"He's not been adverse to being strong and direct and hard with players as an assistant coach, including those who he played with," Gavitt said of Ford, who played with Detroit and Boston, and is credited with making the NBA's first 3-point shot in 1979.

McHale, part of the over-30 front line, praised Ford's potential as a head coach.

"What we all like about him is that he's not going to take a lot of things that have happened over the past few seasons," McHale said. "He'll put his foot down and run the team the way he wants to run it."

Bird, in a statement released through his agent, said Ford "has a great knowledge for the game of basketball. He's great with the younger players and I'm looking forward to playing on his team." Gavitt, instrumental in forming

West German admits helping Libya build weapons plant

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP) — A West German businessman testified today that the company he once ran helped build a chemical weapons factory in Libya. West German television reported, Jürgen Hippenstiel-Inhauen, former director of the Imhausen-Chemie company of Lahr, also said at his trial that the Rabta plant in Libya was built to make poison gas, the television news said.

According to the news report, Hippenstiel said the company "participated in construction of the Rabta factory," delivering production plans and equipment. Hippenstiel said the project began in 1984 when a "middleman," whom he did not identify by name, contacted him to build a chemical plant to make "pharmaceuticals and insecticides."

A short time later he was made aware that the $136.4 million project was intended to be set up in Libya, Hippenstiel said. He said he had suspicions that the project "would be in conflict with export laws," but that he had pursued the deal with Libya. Hippenstiel apologized that he had caused West Germany what he called "diplomatic problems," because of the deal with Libya. "The responsibility and overall management was in my hands," Hippenstiel said of the project. The television news said "Hippenstiel's statements also confirmed that poison gas was produced at Rabta."

Hippenstiel said he did not pay taxes on $11.7 million on profits from his transactions. He said, however, that he used the money for the Rabta project to ensure it would be completed. He did not elaborate. Libya says the plant was built to make pharmaceuticals only.

Hull of grounded ship due to be patched, later moved

BOSTON (AP) — Patching should begin today on the torn hull of the cruise liner Bermuda Star, allowing movement of the ship without threat of oil spilling, Coast Guard officials said. A survey of the ship's hull was completed Tuesday night, allowing divers today to begin repairing the hole torn in the ship's bottom when it ran aground Sunday morning, said Petty Officer Daniel Reed, based at the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Providence, R.I. Divers found no new holes in the ship's hull, and there appeared to be no new fuel leakage overnight. The repair work would probably take about 30 hours and be finished by Thursday, Reed said.

High winds and choppy seas kept divers from starting repairs earlier, but forecasters predicted sunny skies and only light breezes today for Buzzards Bay, where the ship is anchored three miles from shore. Tuesday, the Coast Guard said John Neary, the ship's pilot when it ran aground, was also the pilot of the air transport carrier Hual Ingrita when it ran aground in Narragansett Bay. A Coast Guard investigation determined the Hual Ingrita accident was caused by a failed steering mechanism, said Cmdr. Larry Doyle, executive officer of the safety office. Neary, of the Northeast Pilots Association in Newport, R.I., was brought aboard the Bermuda Star to guide it through the waters in the area, the Coast Guard said. Results were still pending from urine and blood tests taken from Neary, the ship's captain and several other officers responsible for the vessel when it ran aground. A container with the Neary's urine sample broke en route to a laboratory in Philadelphia, and another sample had to be taken, Doyle said. The cruise liner carrying more than 1,000 passengers and crew ran aground in dense fog Sunday morning on a rocky ledge of Falmouth. The vessel was freed Sunday night and towed to a spot about three miles away, where it has since been anchored.

The accident ripped a 90-foot by 2-foot hole in the ship's hull, exposing tanks holding about 110,000 gallons of fuel, the Coast Guard said. About 7,500 gallons spilled from the ship, with between 500 and 1,000 gallons washing up on Naushon Island in the Elizabeth chain. Workers from Clean Harbors Inc. began cleaning the oil away Tuesday, and a spokeswoman for the firm said the clean-up would probably take about two weeks. Coast Guard officials decided against unloading the fuel to a barge before towing the ship to drydock, since the process could be hazardous in heavy seas. Coast Guard Rear Adm. Richard Rybacki said Tuesday he was disappointed in the length of time it took crews to respond to the grounding. "I would like to have seen a quicker response on Sunday when we had good weather," he said. "We would like to have more equipment available."

Atlanta (AP) — They've been kicked out of hotels, forced to live on charity and lost their animals. But members of the Great Circus Bim Bom, who say a U.S. business sabotaged their tour, still want to perform for the Americans who have opened their homes, hearts and checkbooks to the stranded Soviet performers. "We want to perform for you, but we cannot get our equipment, our animals," said Emil Kio, a magician known for his act with fire. "That is a pity."

The 115-member circus, named for two famous turn-of-the-century Russian clowns, came to the United States for a two-year tour in March. The group signed a contract with International Showbusiness Inc., a newly formed company in Clearwater, Fla., with financing from Kuwaiti investors. It brought the troupe to the United States and scheduled performances. The venture started losing money because of poor publicity, circus director Yuri Turkun said. The circus came to Atlanta, where its trucking company is based, to regroup and assess its plight, only to be kicked out of a series of hotels for not paying bills. Finally, the tour was canceled May 9 after only 12 performances. "Lies, lies, lies, that's all they told us," a bitter Leonid Gordon, technical director for the magic act, said of International Showbusiness. "We waited two months for them to do something. They didn't tell us anything until we were in trouble. Now we have nothing."

Thirty performers stuck with ISI and got lodging at a West Virginia ski resort but no work. Turkun severed ties with ISI and is frantically trying to arrange performances in Kentucky before Friday morning.

Firehouse

When Democratic Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said Tuesday he understood that Republican Mayor Terry Werkhoven opposed the firehouse because of Lawrence's party affiliation, the mayor said the accusation was not true.

Rather, Werkhoven said, the concern of he and fellow GOP members is with the style of the planned building. "We asked that pre-engineered (pre-fab) be studied, and I don't think it has," he said. Now the Republicans think if Lawrence's plans are used, then the town will be forced to use the more-expensive brick-and-mortar construction. However, Lawrence, who attended the meeting, said pre-fab buildings can be used with the plans he has drawn.

Exchange

during the 1987 crash and again last Oct. 13, when the Dow Jones industrial average fell 190 points. But the panel report, endorsed by NYSE Chairman John J. Phelan Jr., concludes that "there is little evidence that index arbitrage causes an increase in volatility as usually measured."

The circuit-breaker system would place a 400-point cap on the possible daily rise or fall in the Dow and allow for the stock market to close for nearly a full day in case of rapid price movements. The average plummeted 508 points in the record crash of Oct. 19, 1987. General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger Smith, who led the 19-member panel, said the circuit breakers would provide "a breathing spell in the market" in chaotic times. The panel proposed halting trading for one hour if the Dow moves up or down 100 points from the previous day's close; 90 minutes if it moves 200 points, and two hours close for nearly a full day in case of rapid price movements. Opponents have said such a measure, a less restrictive form of which already exists, would limit individual investors' ability to get out of the market during a downturn. There were no circuit breakers in effect at the time of the 1987 crash. The Bush administration already has endorsed legislation that would give the Securities and Exchange Commission control over the nation's stock and stock-index futures markets.

Heartburn

Panama City, Fla.; Springfield, Mo.; and Albany, Ga. "The most startling result in this analysis was that the Northeast region did not have high heartburn on the index," said Levin. New York City ranked 15th. "These results say heartburn occurs wherever there's 'gold rush fever,' where you get large numbers of newcomers, transients, rootless people, who move to an area to make their fortune, for a new beginning or a last resort."

Perhaps to prove a point, Levin and officials of the sponsoring company planned to belch forth their findings at a luncheon of chicken marinated in chili, salad with marinaded in chili, salad with chicken dressing, tacos and refried beans. It wasn't clear whether Eureka citizens were pained by the study results. However, the mayor planned to be at the luncheon. To the 40 million Americans who sometimes suffer from heartburn, Levin offered this advice: "Avoid a lot of important changes in their lifestyles all at the same time. Even the most positive changes, like getting married, moving to a nicer neighborhood, getting a better job, can create heartburn."

But, over the past 18 months, Dasciano has watched the pendulum swing back to an emphasis on remodeling. It seems more homeowners than ever are sprucing up their kitchens with small jobs, such as new counter tops, Dasciano said. "Business has picked up," he said. Meotti is seeking re-election; GOP weighing its own slate

State Sen. Michael P. Meotti, D-Glastonbury, said today that he will seek re-election to the Fourth Senatorial District, which includes Manchester, Glastonbury, Bolton, Columbia and Hebron. Meotti, 36, is serving his second term and is the first candidate to announce a bid for the seat. He said he anticipates no competition from Democrats, but expects a Republican will enter the race before the end of the month. Republican town Director Ronald Oella has said he would consider running for the seat, Republican Town Committee Chairman John Garrido said today. However, Garrido said he thinks Oella does not want to challenge Glastonbury's Town Council Chairman Sonya Goggin, another GOP member who has expressed interest in the position. Meotti, who is chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee, has been in the news recently for securing $250,000 in state funds for the clean-up of Center Springs Pond.

Best known for his work with environmental issues, Meotti said he will pursue measures to better air quality. Because automobile exhaust is the dominant cause of air pollution in Connecticut, he said the best way to decrease the pollution is to decrease traffic by encouraging car-pooling, van-pooling, and by trying to establish light-rail public transportation in Connecticut.

There is not as much physical construction as before. Proposed projects in the north end, Pellegri said, include a 200,000-square-foot, strip-shopping center on the corner of Slater Street and Buckland Hills Drive. Proposed by Willard Enterprises, the project's building permit application to the town is still being studied. Also proposed is a 450,000-square-foot, strip-shopping center on Pleasant Valley Road across from J.C. Penney Distribution Center on Tolland Turnpike. Proposed by Down East Associates of Indianapolis, Ind., the city is waiting for a building permit application to be filed. Also the town is aware of plans by developers to construct a Chili's Restaurant and Burger Chef off Buckland Hills Drive, and a savings Bank of Manchester branch office at the Burr Corners shopping plaza, Pellegri said. In addition, developers plan to build a 325-unit congruence housing project for the elderly off Riverside Drive, upgrade the West Middle Turnpike section of the Manchester Parkade and the town wants to revitalize the downtown area and reconstruct Main Street, Pellegri said.

Reading, rapping and rhyming, DARE graduates 185 pupils

By Nancy Foley Manchester Herald

As he drives down the street in a cruiser, Officer Stephen Novak sometimes hears children yell "Hi" to him as he passes. The young people are friends he has made from serving a semester as a DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer in sixth grade classes in Manchester schools. The difference in attitudes is a result of the program, Novak said. The enthusiasm generated by DARE was also evident Tuesday night at the DARE "graduation" held in the Manchester High School auditorium. About 185 sixth-graders attended, accompanied by their parents and teachers. Peter Wengertman, 11, from Waddell School, wrote his essay in rhyme. Explaining what he saw on television use drugs, Peter said, "I can say it's fake and they're making a mistake, and I won't listen cuz I'm not missing anything cool." Later a group of girls performed the DARE rap. "Don't be a fool, car drugs aren't cool... have a ball without alcohol." Steve Pickett, a member of the University of Connecticut Big East Conference championship basketball squad, told the students that they would never go far in athletics unless they stayed off drugs in the lower grades. The students offered letters of thanks to the DARE officers who told the students to not forget what they had learned in the class. Acting Chief of Police Henry Minor called the program "fantastic" and told the students that maybe someday they could be DARE officers. "Or better yet, there will be no reason to have a DARE officer," he said. "If there's nobody out there to use them, there's no reason to sell them."

Town hall expansion issue to be brought before residents

By Rick Santos Manchester Herald

The proposed expansion and renovation of town hall will be the subject of a public hearing which members of the Board of Directors agreed to plan for later this month, saying that will provide ample time for responses to concerns of citizens. After hearing a presentation on the subject of a public hearing, Charles Boos, board members agreed Tuesday to schedule the meeting for one of the remaining Tuesdays this month. However, next Tuesday the directors should be occupied with trying to complete the rest of the business they planned to conduct on this month's agenda. That would leave June 25 as the only Tuesday left for the hearing. The directors — both Democrat and Republican — agreed the hearing should be set up exclusively for the presentation of the town hall plan and the public's comments on that plan. Republican Wally Irish spoke initially to the need of a separate meeting to allow the public to have full opportunity to comment. The project has been called a reason for the voters rejection of a plan last November. When Deputy Mayor Ronald Oella suggested the board could decide — after the same hearing — if the plan would be offered to voters at a November referendum, Democrat Peter P. DiRosa Jr. objected. If the directors' vote on whether there will be a referendum came the same night as the public hearing, then the board members would give the impression that the issue had been decided before the public had a chance to comment. Irish, saying that the public had not been given the proper forum in past hearings on the matter, agreed with DiRosa. Having both the vote immediately after the hearing, Irish said, "is really like telling the public they can talk, but we're not listening."

For some, economic changes are no economic hardship

A Herald Special Report Second of two parts

By Dianna M. Talbot Manchester Herald

Allan Dasciano, owner of Manchester Kitchen Co., watched his kitchen design and construction business boom during the mid-to-late 1980s along with the wildfire growth in residential construction. More jobs than ever came in for kitchen construction in new homes instead of remodeling in older homes, he said. But, over the past 18 months, Dasciano has watched the pendulum swing back to an emphasis on remodeling. It seems more homeowners than ever are sprucing up their kitchens with small jobs, such as new counter tops, Dasciano said. "Business has picked up," he said. "We are pretty much back to the way we used to be."

The residential remodeling industry is one of few business sectors that appears to be benefiting from the same depressed real estate market and economic slowdown that has sapped the life out of other industries. "Whereas real estate, financial services, insurance, defense and some retail and manufacturing sectors have experienced an overall decline, other industries, such as home remodeling, legal services, exporting and various types of manufacturing sectors, are profiting from or appear to be immune to the local and state economy. Growth in the remodeling business has been spawned primarily by a soft real estate market that has made people skittish about buying new homes, Dasciano said. Inexpensive homeowners are investing in their current homes, with the expectation that the market will recover in the near future. Manchester, where the economic slowdown is faring better than other towns in terms of economic development, according to Town Planner Mark Pellegri. Growth in the town's north end by the Pavilions at Buckland Hills Mall is propelling development during a time when there might not be much otherwise, Pellegri said. In addition, developers are acting cautiously because the economy is in a period of adjustment following an overzealous real estate boom in the mid-1980s, Pellegri said. An oversupply of houses needs to be absorbed, he said. "We are doing a little bit better than what's expected," the town planner said. "We still have projects that are being approved even though there is not as much physical construction as before."

Proposed projects in the north end, Pellegri said, include a 200,000-square-foot, strip-shopping center on the corner of Slater Street and Buckland Hills Drive. Proposed by Willard Enterprises, the project's building permit application to the town is still being studied. Also proposed is a 450,000-square-foot, strip-shopping center on Pleasant Valley Road across from J.C. Penney Distribution Center on Tolland Turnpike. Sidewalk repair deadline set; directors berate DPW chief

By Rick Santos Manchester Herald

A prioritized list of town sidewalks in need of repair is to be completed by the Public Works Department by Sept. 1, the deadline set Tuesday night by the Board of Directors. The mandate was issued after Republican members of the board exchanged verbal blows with Public Works Director Peter Lozis while he issued a report on the sidewalk and pavement maintenance program for the coming year. Before the unanimous vote was taken, GOP members, including Deputy Mayor Ronald Oella, Wally Irish, and Geoffrey Naab, expressed frustration because the sidewalk plan had been requested and issued a report on the sidewalk and pavement maintenance program for the coming year. Lozis said the priority system would identify problem sidewalks block-by-block, but rather would be likely to refer to longer sections of sidewalk. "If other projects get put on the back burner, I'm going to get equalized," said Democratic Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. Democrat Joyce Epstein suggested the directors ask Lozis if he can meet the September deadline. Lozis said he could do that, but could not guarantee the system would identify problem sidewalks block-by-block, but rather would be likely to refer to longer sections of sidewalk. After that, Democrat Stephen T. Cassano said maybe the deadline should be extended to Oct. 1 because construction would not begin after Sept. 1 anyway. Cassano's suggestion infuriated Republicans. Oella said, "If he said he can do it, let's do it." Earlier, Oella had said: "I'm a little concerned with you folks over the (table) who are concerned with finding ways to not get things done."

Tech school gets clean report

Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School is in good shape, according to a report from the state Auditors of Public Accounts. The report had no recommendations for improving the school, and said that the financial records of the school were satisfactorily maintained and that improvements had been made since the last review in 1989. Last year's report contained one recommendation — a review of cafeteria operations and better control over cafeteria receipts. According to the report, that recommendation has been implemented and is no longer required. In response to last year's recommendation, the school has improved the way it collects cash receipts in the cafeteria and has included the business office in verifying those receipts, the report said. The directors' vote is scheduled tentatively for August, which the directors agreed would give all interested parties enough time to ponder the presentation of the proposed project. During the architect's presentation to board members Tuesday, Boos noted that the estimated cost of $12.5 million is likely to be higher than the accepted bid because the construction market is slow. Boos, of Kastle Book Associates Inc. of New Britain, noted some of the major changes in the new plan, which will expand the centrally located town offices to about 50,000 square feet. A ground-level connector between the existing Municipal Building and the annex has been eliminated so circulation between the buildings has been improved. Rather there will be a "sky link" to connect the buildings at the upper floor. Each level of the parking garage will have exits. A driveway will run along the north side of the town hall property, connecting the intersection of Valley and Trotter streets with parking areas. An available option — not included in the cost — is to extend the driveway to Main Street. Boos said the project will not include the tearing down of the stairs in the Municipal Building nor the razing of the Lincoln Center. Republican Director Ellen Burns Landers questioned the need for seven conference rooms included in the plan, but Boos said the rooms are in great demand and assured her that if they were not used as conference rooms, then town employees would find some other use.

Group home license is reaffirmed

By Donna O'Leary
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Bolton selectmen Tuesday received a letter from Toni Richardson, commissioner of the state Department of Mental Retardation (DMR), saying the license for a group home on South Road will not be revoked.

South Road residents and neighbors of the home petitioned in November 1989 for the revocation of the home's license. The areas of concern were the unkempt grounds, an unapproved septic system, loud noise coming from the home and the need for the home to install boundary markers for the residents.

In March, selectmen were notified that the commissioner would request the home operators to correct the problems with 60 days, and that inspections of the home would be made to decide if the commissioner would act on the petition. Richardson also told on or about June 1 of the decision.

The South Road group home is a leased, state-licensed facility which houses three men.

DMR, in the letter to the selectmen, said they had been monitoring the home, that work had been done, and that the agency is still in progress correcting the problems. DMR also said that on May 11 town sanitarian Steve Lowrey issued a certificate stating the septic problems had been corrected.

The home will be installing a fence as a boundary marker and landscaping the grounds but work had been held up due to wet weather and should be completed sometime the end of June. DMR also said a resident responsible for some night disturbances has been moved from the home.

Personnel Dept. reorganization put on hold

Approval of a plan to reorganize and increase the staff of the town personnel department has been delayed by the Board of Directors after Republican members voiced opposition to the plan.

Spearheading the attack at Tuesday night's board meeting was newly appointed Director Geoffrey Naab.

"My view is we shouldn't add positions unless necessary," Naab said. "And I'm not convinced it's necessary."

He made the comments after hearing a detailed report on the plan from Assistant Town Manager Steven Werber, who oversees personnel.

The proposal calls for creating a full-time director of personnel services position, plus adding a 20-hour per week personnel officer, bringing the total staff to 3.5 from 2.5.

The director would have more high-level responsibilities, such as labor relations, than the two present half-time co-directors.

Werber said since the mid 1970s, the personnel staff has not increased in proportion with the increase in the number of town employees.

Since the mid 70s, there has been an increase of 31 percent in the number of town employees, but the only staff addition has been a 15-hour per week clerk, Werber said.

Not only has the number of employees increased, but the laws pertaining to employment practices have become much more complicated, thereby adding to the burden of the staff.

"He feels that, when it's all said, he's going to be totally vindicated."

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS TO ASK

As a retirement community offering a full lifetime program to those age 62 and older, The Arbors believes you should compare communities carefully before committing to one. The first step is to ask the right questions, such as...

1. Does the monthly fee cover all housekeeping, meals, transportation, utilities—and guaranteed access to a skilled nursing facility?
2. Can the monthly fee be increased? Is there a limit?
3. Is there an entrance fee? How much will be refunded? 90%...50%...0%?

Defense rests its case in Aparo murder trial

HARTFORD (AP) — The defense has rested in Karin Aparo's murder-conspiracy trial and now the prosecution has a chance to call two last witnesses before one of the most celebrated cases in recent Connecticut history goes to the jury.

The defense ended its case Tuesday with testimony from Walter Borden, a forensic psychiatrist who testified that Aparo suffered prolonged abuse at the hands of her mother.

The home will be installing a fence as a boundary marker and landscaping the grounds but work had been held up due to wet weather and should be completed sometime the end of June. DMR also said a resident responsible for some night disturbances has been moved from the home.

Borden said Aparo's ambivalent feelings toward her mother fit the psychological profile of a battered child.

Borden said although Aparo fantasized about killing her mother, she never acted on the fantasies, and he did not believe she was capable of killing her mother.

After the murder, Aparo even wore her mother's clothes to feel closer to her, Borden testified.

Borden, who has testified as an expert witness in numerous criminal cases, said he interviewed Aparo 11 times after the murder.

Aparo's former boyfriend, Dennis Coleman, confessed to the murder and is now serving a 34-year prison sentence. During four days on the witness stand, he testified that Aparo begged him to kill her mother and planned the crime with him.

During cross-examination Tuesday, Thomas attempted to discredit the testimony of a psychologist who testified for the defense Monday.

John Capalis, a psychologist who examined Aparo eight months after her mother's murder, said Aparo fantasized about killing her mother as a way of coping with years of abuse. He said her fantasies didn't necessarily mean she plotted her mother's death.

Thomas asked Capalis why, after describing Aparo as manipulative and capable of lying, he is now convinced that Aparo is telling the truth about her role in her mother's death.

Capalis said Aparo told him she did not have any involvement in her mother's death when he asked her directly.

Her response was consistently, "I did not conspire to kill my mother and I did not assist Dennis Coleman in the murder of my mother," said Capalis.

Aparo faces up to 80 years in prison if she is convicted.

Dodd won't run for governor; admits he considered idea

By Judd Evertart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd today reiterated that he has no plans to run for governor, but acknowledged he briefly considered a last-minute run for the post, simply as a courtesy to supporters who were urging him to run.

Dodd, speaking at a news conference in Washington this morning, withheld any endorsement of either Democrat seeking the nomination. "I don't think it's all that bad to have a bit of a contest," he said, referring to the battle for the Democratic nomination between U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-Conn., and state Rep. William Ciba, D-New London.

Dodd, D-Conn., said he believes both Democrats are capable of winning the governorship in November. On the issue of naming himself, he acknowledged: "The idea of coming home and running for governor and being a governor of the state has some appeal to me. I won't deny it."

He said he was aware that talk of a draft movement gained momentum during his recent trip to Eastern Europe, but said he never intended to encourage such talk.

"I was aware before leaving that several longtime allies were contemplating the political feasibility of creating a Dodd candidacy," he said. "They did so without my encouragement or support. I said at the time — and say again — that I have no plans to run and that my only current plans are focused on the fact that my Senate term is up in 1992."

Meanwhile, Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said he can't "bury the hatchet" with Morrison because "there is no hatchet to bury."

Morrison, who had been challenging O'Neill for the party nomination before the governor dropped plans for re-election in March, had asked O'Neill to put aside any lingering animosity over that challenge. He also had asked O'Neill to move to unify the party by asking Ciba to quit the race.

O'Neill fired off a letter to Morrison Tuesday responding to a letter the congressman wrote him. O'Neill said a request for such "extraordinary action" would be "unprecedented and premature." He also reminded Morrison that he had remained neutral when Morrison was in a primary for the congressional nomination in 1982.

Morrison, who is leading Ciba in the race for the nomination, wanted to meet every Thursday from 7:15 to 9 p.m. at the Women's Center of Manchester Community College, 60 Bissell St. New members are welcome. For more information, call Carol Jodanis at MCC, 647-6662.

The regular meeting of Order of DeMolay, John Mathew Chapter, will be Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Masonic Temple, 25 E. Center St. Games will be held from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Rita C. O'Brien, 68, of Riverview Beach, Fla., formerly of Manchester, died Monday (June 11, 1990) after a brief illness. She was the wife of the late William F. O'Brien.

She was born Nov. 3, 1921 in Manchester, the daughter of Edward Custer of Duxford, Fla., and the late Louise (Steppe) Custer. She was a former employee of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft and Fairfield-based General Electric Co., archivist in the jet engine business, both posted robust sales increases last year.

Pratt & Whitney, a division of United Technologies Corp. of Hartford, received orders and options for jet engines worth a record $12 billion, more than double the $5 billion in orders the previous year. General Electric won orders and options worth a potential $10 billion.

drive the extra 10 miles to save money," she said.

Other local businesses, such as law and medical firms, claim to feel no ill effects of the economic slowdown. But they also point out, noting the irony, that times generally usually make for good times in their professions.

Legal services related to bankruptcy, crime and drugs are on the rise, said Robert H. Brien, who owns his own general law practice in Manchester.

Many businesses are facing hard times and seeking protection from creditors under bankruptcy law, he said.

"I see more people filing at bankruptcy courts," Brien said. "Also, the attorney said he is providing more legal services to people who are charged with crime and drug violations, because, 'When times go down, crime and drugs go up,' he said."

One of the provisions for going to heaven is found in Hebrews 12:14: "Make every effort... to be holy, without holiness no one will see the Lord."

Holiness is a process which we never completely attain in this life. As we begin to conform to the will of God in one area of life, He reveals to us our need in another area. God commands us to be holy because He is holy (1 Peter 1:16). We must be holy to have a relationship with Him. Holiness comes from obedience which can result in involvement in a church and reading God's Word, which He uses to mold us into the character of Christ.

We just die to sin (Rom. 6:11) and become alive in Christ, and only then will we experience the true freedom and joy that God originally intended for us.

Dear Abby

Woman urged to attend reunion

DEAR ABBY: In response to Leonard Portzline's letter urging people to respond to invitations to class reunions, did it ever occur to him that perhaps those who did not respond do not wish to be included?

Now that I am a successful businesswoman, married to a wealthy professional, I am bombarded with invitations from former classmates. When we were in high school, I would have given anything to be included in the "in" group, but I was snubbed. Believe me, it hurt.

The shoe is on the other foot now, and I cheerfully toss all their correspondence into the trash. Sign me...

IT'S MY TURN IN L.A.
— of which I am a member. I, too, was snubbed by the "in" group in high school—and you're right, it did hurt. But I put my hurt aside and went back for my 50th reunion, and a lot of bitter memories were put to rest. Try it, you'll like it.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the letter from "Mrs. W.W. in New York" who wanted to be buried in a beautiful nightgown, but her children had misgivings about carrying out her wishes. (They feared it would be too revealing.)

Thank you for reassuring her, Abby. Let me tell you about my wonderful mother: She took me into her bedroom several years before she died, and showed me a beautiful soft pink negligee. She told me that she wanted to be buried in it. (One of my brothers had given it to her as a Mother's Day gift.)

Abby, she died at 89, and was buried in her soft pink negligee with her eyes closed and an open Bible in her hands, as if she had fallen asleep reading it. She looked so radiant and peaceful. I am proud to say that we carried out her wishes.

HER DAUGHTER, MARGARET
DEAR MARGARET: Many others wrote to say that sleeping attire seemed to be the most appropriate kind of dress for burial. (When in doubt, dress the mortician.) Thank you for the Bible idea, Margaret. Some readers may want to borrow that suggestion.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the woman whose daughter is going to wear her wedding gown and now wonders how gown it will be after the wedding.

My wedding gown has been worn 15 times. I wore it first when I was married in Seattle.

After that, it's been in California twice, South Africa once, and in Seattle 11 times. Never has there been any question about who it belongs to. It's mine, and will be mine until the day I die.

MRS. E. NIKSICH JR., SEATTLE
DEAR MRS. NIKSICH: A wedding gown that has been worn the size 15 times must have some kind of record. (Readers?)

Man wonders about impotence

DEAR DR. GOTT: Since finding out two years ago I was HIV positive, I have been unable to achieve an erection. I'm taking Retrovir. My doctor thinks it's psychological. What do you think?

DEAR READER: Your impotence is probably psychological and, perhaps, could be helped by counseling.

The knowledge that one is infected with HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) — the presumed cause of AIDS can be a shattering emotional catastrophe that often affects sexual interest and performance. Psychological intervention and counseling may improve your symptoms.

Retrovir (zidovudine) is marketed as a potent inhibitor of HIV. Although there is considerable controversy about its use, a recent article in the New England Journal of Medicine (April 5, 1990) reported that HIV-infected patients without symptoms of AIDS were helped by this therapy. The drug's primary side effects were nausea, anemia, headache, insomnia and rash; impotence was not reported.

Therefore, I suggest you follow your doctor's advice about therapy and follow-up — and consider obtaining counseling.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Blood — AIDS." Other readers who would like a copy should send $125 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've heard of a new medicine that takes the place of castration in patients with prostate cancer. What is it?

Sheen urges food chain to boycott Follers coffee

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Martin Sheen urged a supermarket chain to boycott Follers coffee to persuade Procter & Gamble to stop buying beans from war-torn El Salvador.

Sheen joined a demonstration Tuesday by about three dozen people outside a shareholders meeting of the Arden supermarket chain.

The boycott was started in November by peace organizations to protest the slayings in El Salvador of Jesuit priests. Salvadoran military officers have been implicated in the killings.

"My country should not be funding the killers of the Jesuit priests with our tax dollars or our consumer dollars," Sheen said.

An Arden spokesman, Ernest Klinger, said the company would continue to stock Follers to give consumers a full selection.

Don Tassone of P&G, which makes Follers, called the boycott "preposterous." He said P&G buys coffee from at least 30 countries, and the Salvadoran product amounts to less than 2 percent of the coffee in Follers.

Fidler put in jail
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cajun fiddler-singer Doug Kershaw spent a few hours in jail before posting $152,000 bail to cover alimony he allegedly owes his ex-wife.

Kershaw, the 53-year-old "ragin' Cajun" best known for his 1961 song "Louisiana Man," was jailed Friday after performing at the Tennessee State Fairgrounds. A contempt hearing was set for July 18.

Kershaw's former wife, Elsie Griffin Kershaw, 72, is deaf and in ill health, said her attorney, Jack Norman Jr.

According to a petition filed by Norman, Kershaw had avoided payment of $750 a month in alimony when the couple divorced in 1975 after seven years of marriage.

Kershaw was the featured entertainer at halftime during this year's Super Bowl in New Orleans.

Mosbacher's wife robbed
NEW YORK (AP) — George Mosbacher, wife of U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, was robbed at gunpoint at a hotel but was not hurt, police said.

The socialite was getting off an elevator on the 20th floor of the Marlborough Hotel on Tuesday when a man with a gun confronted her, and took her wedding ring, watch, earrings, two other rings and $400 in cash, police said.

Mrs. Mosbacher, a guest at the hotel, is president of her own cosmetics business, La Prairie, and is well-known in New York and Washington social circles.

Packwood files for divorce
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Packwood is filing for a divorce from his wife of 25 years, Georgia.

A statement from the Oregon Republican said a separation began in January but did not help the couple resolve their problems. A spokeswoman, Julia Brim-Edwards, said the divorce papers were filed Tuesday in Oregon.

Since the separation, the 57-year-old senator has kept an apartment in Washington, Mrs. Packwood lives in a Maryland suburb of the capital.

Lovesick moose is back
SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A lovesick moose whose welcome appeared to be just about worn out may be making a comeback after T-shirts and sweatshirts bearing his lugubrious image netted $1,600 for a civic-minded fund-raiser.

The financial success of Bullwinkle comes months after he began courting cows and the wrath of western Massachusetts farmers, a fund-raising organizer said Tuesday.

"It seems like a lot of people are buying them as gifts, a lot of out-of-town people. One woman wrote and her son is a Marine in Georgia and he had seen it on the news and she got him one," said Martha Leves.

Money raised will go to the parent-teacher organization in Westhampton, the tiny farming community that the moose has made his home base since last fall.

Therefore, I suggest you follow your doctor's advice about therapy and follow-up — and consider obtaining counseling.

Counterfeiting is on the rise

Counterfeiting isn't just for career criminals these days.

"It's becoming a crime of opportunity — something that happens when the stock boy has only $20 but has a $40 date and access to a printing machine," says Robert Snow, assistant director of the office of Government Liaison of the U.S. Secret Service.

"Counterfeiting has become easier, and it is expected to get easier still," he explains. "In the past 20 years, the automation of offset printing, the use of high-quality color copiers, and the use of high-quality color copiers copying machines have been used to produce 'funny money.' But copiers are not as big a problem as you might imagine. At least not yet."

"The really good color laser copiers cost $40,000, so there is a limited number of them," says Snow. "We try to keep track of them, and right now that's a simple task because they're expensive and cumbersome."

"But they'll get cheaper over the next few years. This is why we have new features in the currency beginning this year."

Large bills — $50 and $100 denominations — will begin this summer to have security features in the form of intricate threads that are imprinted with tiny, almost microscopically small numbers signifying the denomination, the numbers will appear around the portrait as well, again so small as to defy a copier's resolution.

"That is only one part of the government's attack on high-technology counterfeiters."

"We point out to the owners of color copiers, as we do to those who have offset printing shops, that their equipment may be seized by the government if it is used for counterfeiting," says Snow. "It doesn't matter if it's one employee who returns after hours to do it."

"This fact should get some people's attention."

The Secret Service urges companies that have high-quality printing or copying equipment to keep it under lock and key.

"A good deal of counterfeit currency is made overseas, never intended for U.S. consumption," says Snow. The dollar is highly desired in many countries, though the residents of those countries are less familiar with U.S. currency than are Americans. In fact, some places it could even remain in circulation for some time.

"This might be of concern to travelers, who might find themselves in the uncomfortable position of holding counterfeit currency. It is important always to be watchful."

Still other overseas counterfeiting is done with the idea of importing the fake bills into the United States.

"Last year, one-fourth of the counterfeit currency passed through the United States was printed in Colombia," he says. "It followed the drug trade into the country, which is how we were able to trace it back."

In a typical year, about $100 million in counterfeit currency will be seized by the Secret Service. Most of it will be found in raids on counterfeiting operations, before it has made its way to the streets.

Counterfeit money can remain in circulation almost forever, so long as it doesn't find its way to a bank.

"It frequently turns up in the night deposits of a store," declares Snow. "Thanks go over those deposits first thing in the morning, both to make sure the amounts of the deposits are correct and to make sure there are no counterfeiters. That's because the last legitimate holder of counterfeit currency is the loser, the one who is out of the face value of the currency."

Group's records published
SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Record store managers surprised an album by the rap group 2 Live Crew when their shelves after police warned they risked arrest for obscenity.

Detectives set out Tuesday to notify 84 stores that the lyrics of the 1.7 million-selling album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" are obscene, said vice squad commander Lt. Jerry Pittman.

The action extends what had been a Florida-based campaign by anti-pornography crusaders upset by the album's references to sex acts and genitalia. A federal judge in Florida last week declared the record obscene.

Texas law requires that a defendant be aware material is obscene to be convicted of selling it, Pittman said. The maximum penalty is a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

"In the past 20 years, the automation of offset printing, the use of high-quality color copiers, and the use of high-quality color copiers copying machines have been used to produce 'funny money.' But copiers are not as big a problem as you might imagine. At least not yet."

"The really good color laser copiers cost $40,000, so there is a limited number of them," says Snow. "We try to keep track of them, and right now that's a simple task because they're expensive and cumbersome."

"But they'll get cheaper over the next few years. This is why we have new features in the currency beginning this year."

Large bills — $50 and $100 denominations — will begin this summer to have security features in the form of intricate threads that are imprinted with tiny, almost microscopically small numbers signifying the denomination, the numbers will appear around the portrait as well, again so small as to defy a copier's resolution.

"That is only one part of the government's attack on high-technology counterfeiters."

"We point out to the owners of color copiers, as we do to those who have offset printing shops, that their equipment may be seized by the government if it is used for counterfeiting," says Snow. "It doesn't matter if it's one employee who returns after hours to do it."

"This fact should get some people's attention."

The Secret Service urges companies that have high-quality printing or copying equipment to keep it under lock and key.

"A good deal of counterfeit currency is made overseas, never intended for U.S. consumption," says Snow. The dollar is highly desired in many countries, though the residents of those countries are less familiar with U.S. currency than are Americans. In fact, some places it could even remain in circulation for some time.

"This might be of concern to travelers, who might find themselves in the uncomfortable position of holding counterfeit currency. It is important always to be watchful."

Still other overseas counterfeiting is done with the idea of importing the fake bills into the United States.

"Last year, one-fourth of the counterfeit currency passed through the United States was printed in Colombia," he says. "It followed the drug trade into the country, which is how we were able to trace it back."

In a typical year, about $100 million in counterfeit currency will be seized by the Secret Service. Most of it will be found in raids on counterfeiting operations, before it has made its way to the streets.

Counterfeit money can remain in circulation almost forever, so long as it doesn't find its way to a bank.

"It frequently turns up in the night deposits of a store," declares Snow. "Thanks go over those deposits first thing in the morning, both to make sure the amounts of the deposits are correct and to make sure there are no counterfeiters. That's because the last legitimate holder of counterfeit currency is the loser, the one who is out of the face value of the currency."

Today in History
Today is Wednesday, June 13, the 164th day of 1990. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 13, 1866, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its landmark "Miranda versus Arizona" decision, ruling that criminal suspects had to be informed of their constitutional rights prior to questioning by police.

In 1886, King Ludwig II of Bavaria drowned in Lake Starnberg.
In 1900, Congress created the Department of Labor.

In 1927, a ticker-tape parade welcomed aviation hero Charles Lindbergh to New York City.

Strawberries taste great in microwaved desserts

The season for fresh strawberries has now arrived bringing with it an abundance of lovely, juicy, fresh strawberries. The strawberry season is not very long, so take advantage of this springtime bounty now, by preparing some of the delicious recipes we are suggesting.

This week's column features fresh strawberry soup which is light and refreshing. Or, perhaps you would like to make several loaves of Strawberry Banana Quick Bread which can be sliced and served with cream cheese for a slightly tart strawberry rhubarb crisp is another family favorite.

Fresh strawberries contain a generous amount of both vitamin A and vitamin C. One cup of fresh strawberries is only 55 calories; so eaten plain, they are a dieter's delight.

If you go to a local farm and pick your own strawberries, you need to store them carefully before use. Storage of fresh strawberries in the refrigerator is essential to preserve their freshness and texture. Strawberries should be washed soon after picking; the excess water removed by patting them dry with paper towels.

Leave room left in place until ready to prepare. Leave room left in place until ready to prepare. Leave room left in place until ready to prepare.

Line bottom of a 9 x 5 inch loaf dish with waxed paper. Set aside.

In a large mixing bowl, combine all ingredients. Beat at low speed of electric beater until moistened. Beat at medium speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Spread batter evenly into prepared dish. Shield ends with 2-inch strips of foil, covering 1-inch of batter and molding remainder around handles of dish.

Strawberry soup
1 quart ripe strawberries, washed and hulled
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 1/2 cups hot water
1/2 cup sugar

1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
1/2 cup sweet white wine
2 cups sour cream or yogurt (optional)

In a food processor or blender bowl, combine strawberries and lemon juice. Process until smooth. Pour into 2-quart casserole. Stir in hot water, sugar and tapioca. Cover and microwave at 70 percent (medium-high) power for 12 to 17 minutes, or until tapioca is translucent, stirring 2 or 3 times. Stir in wine. Chill for at least 4 hours. Garnish with a dollop of sour cream or yogurt, if desired. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Strawberry-Rhubarb Crisp
Topping:
1 cup quick cooking rolled oats
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
6 tablespoons butter or margarine, cut into 1/2 inch cubes

Fruit base:
4 cups cut-up fresh rhubarb, 3/4 inch pieces
3 cups strawberries
1 quart fresh strawberries, washed and hulled, sliced
1/4 cup granulated sugar

In a medium mixing bowl, combine rolled oats and other topping ingredients, mix well. Cut in butter to form fine crumbs. Set aside.

Place rhubarb in a 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle with 3 tablespoons flour. Stir to coat. Cover. Microwave at high power for 7 to 10 minutes, or until rhubarb is tender, stirring once. In the meantime, place sliced strawberries in a bowl, coat with sugar and mash lightly. Stir strawberry mixture over rhubarb-strawberry mixture. Reduce power to 70 percent (medium-low). Microwave, uncovered, for 10 to 13 minutes, or until bubbly in center, rotating casserole once. Serve warm with ice cream, if desired.

Strawberries savannah flambe
1/4 cup amaretto liqueur
3 cups fresh strawberries
6 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
1/4 cup apricot liqueur
1/4 cup of 151 proof rum for flaming plus 1 metal tablespoon of rum to ignite

Rinse and remove stems from strawberries. Place whole berries in a flame-proof 1 1/2 quart serving dish. (Dish could be placed in a chaffing dish stand with burner for table-side flambe.)
Place honey and butter in a 2-cup measure. Microwave on high power for 1 minute 30 seconds. Add amaretto

Carolyne: Bonnie says the difference between oatmeal and oat bran cereal like this is in the amount of oat bran they have. But the only difference worth talking about is that oatmeal is like soupy flakes while oat bran is more the consistency of Cream of Wheat. It's no big fan of oatmeal, but it's certainly better than this mush.

If I had to pick, I'd say the raisin and cinnamon is the best of the three flavors. The regular is too unrelentingly light, and the apple and spice is screaming need of more sugar.

Kool-Aid SharkBite Fin is a soft drink, 22 cents per 18-ounce packet of unweetened powder yielding 2 quarts. Also available in sugar-sweetened and sugar-free versions.

Bonnie: This new flavor Kool-Aid beverage is made mainly from sugar, vitamin C, artificial flavor, artificial color and the preservative BHA. In other words, colored and flavored sugar water with vitamins and preservatives added. The sugarfree version contains NutraSweet, a sweeter that's too abundant in our food supply and has safety questions about it.

If you want colored and flavored sugar water high in vitamin C, try making a pitcher of real lemonade or limeade. Just mix the citrus juice with sugar and dilute it with water. If you want a nutritious pink drink, try a store-bought pink grapefruit juice or a guava fruit drink.

Carolyne: If the sole goal of the Kool-Aid food scientists was to create a neon pink drink, this is a big improvement over other Nabisco Cracker products, particularly its high-fat Ritz and high-fat, high-sodium Cheese Tid Bits.

But there are lower sodium, lower fat, higher fiber crackers available. In fact, all of the following have no more than 100 milligrams sodium and 1 gram fat and contain 2 or more grams of fiber: Wasa Sesame Crispbread, Ryvita Sesame-Rye Crispbread, Venus Salt-Free Corn and Norland Original Rye Fin Crisp.

Carolyne: Thanks for that listing of crackers-most-likely-misleading-for-cardboard. But most people prefer foods that have a little taste. Harvest Crisps seem to get a lot of their taste from the salt they use. Although not quite as addicting as Keebler's Sun Toasted Wheat, these are nevertheless tasty, especially when topped with cheese.

I have one gripe about the looks of the Harvest Crisp oat variety: If I'm going to eat healthy grains, I'd just as soon not be able to see them as clearly as you can on these.
