Officials ignoring electorate

Coventry voters yesterday rejected for the second time a proposed municipal budget. That action has infuriated town leaders, who want the electorate to fall in line and just rubber-stamp the spending plan town officials have devised.

Similarly, Bolton residents are now heading toward their third attempt to pass a budget. Elected officials in that community are also expressing frustration at having to pare down spending.

Oh, those pesky residents. Governing would be so much easier if we could just pretend this was an oligarchy, with a handful of wise leaders telling the rest of us what's best.

With the latest defeat in Coventry, for example, Superintendent of Schools Michael Malinowski has chastised voters for not "giving much thought" to the children of town. His meaning is clear: spend more money, or your children will receive an inferior education.

Similarly, municipal leaders in both Coventry and Bolton are issuing dire warnings about what will supposedly happen to town services if more money is cut from the proposed budgets.

The lack of thought, however, seems to be coming on the part of the elected leaders, not the townspeople. Local residents have given much thought to the budget issues before them; certainly more so than in most communities, and decidedly more so than most local residents have in past budget votes.

The message is clear: cut the budgets, substantially. But town leaders — both those in charge of the municipality as a whole and those overseeing the education systems — don't seem to understand that simple directive. They keep cutting by meager amounts, essentially taken actions meant to try to appease the electorate. But the voters aren't settling for such tired tactics.

Budgets, as many private businesses are learning this year, do not have to be increased in times of tight finances. What needs to be done instead is devote increased attention to trimming the fat in spending, to cutting back unnecessary services, and to making the most of available resources without adding to their cost.

Town leaders keep asserting that they can't cut more without hurting services. But town residents can't make it any clearer: their votes say they want a tighter rein on town spending, and if that means scaling back some services, so be it.

In Bolton, selectmen and the Board of Finance say that the three vote margin that defeated the latest tax proposal isn't enough to guide them on what to do about the budget. Would they have said the same if those three votes had swung the other way and allowed the budget to pass? Would they then have discounted the will of the majority? Of course not.

In Coventry, budget opponents are calling for no increase at all. In Bolton, opponents have modified their position somewhat, and agreed to accept a 5 percent hike. In neither town are municipal leaders listening.

In Coventry, for example, Town Council Chairman Joan Lewis said she will "absolutely not" accept a zero mill increase, even after the second budget rejection. In Bolton, finance board member Judy Buoneme said just last week that adhering to a 5 percent increase would "hurt programs."

Twice now in both communities voters have rejected the proposed budget. Town officials should realize that when it is time again to elect local leaders, there are obviously enough voters to reject those officials who have shown they will not listen to their constituency.

Calling the line-item bluff executive could swing the line-item club and threaten to smash the legislator's multi-million dollar pork barrel.

The scheme would also fall to live up to its promise. The campaign for a line-item veto is based upon the assumption that Congress allows in waste and is thus responsible for the deficits that pile up year after year. This is manifest nonsense. On budget matters, Congress follows where presidents lead, and it has been 30 years since any of them oversaw a budget with a bottom line written in black.

The bulk of the budget, moreover, is dedicated to untouchable entitlements — Social Security benefits, food stamps, pensions — and interest interest on the national debt. Only 40 percent of the budget would be vulnerable to the line-item veto, and nearly two-thirds of that goes for defense and foreign aid.

In short, pork-barrel waste is peanuts. When Ronald Reagan dramatically lifted up a 43-pound omnibus spending bill during his 1988 State of the Union speech and complained about the money being spent on cranberry research — money that he could not excise because he didn't have line-item veto power — he was talking about $20,000. That was .00028 percent of the budget.

The exchange was so cold that Waxman had to break the ice. "Mr. Reilly," he said, "I think you're fortunate Mr. Dingell is the lead sponsor of your legislation. Otherwise, I think he would be critical of it."

Reilly will continue to pay the price of victory in the clean air fight. Dingell will find other areas in which the EPA has not done its job and will bound Reilly about them.

He would like to blame Reilly for the EPA's failure to issue new guidelines for industry and the military to clean up hazardous waste dumps. But as we reported earlier, the Office and Management and Budget has detailed those guidelines. OMB mistakenly thinks it can save the government trillions of dollars in cleanup costs by stalling.

Rather than pick on Budget Director Richard Darman, a more formidable foe, Dingell has nagged Reilly about the rules. The congressman enjoys firing off nasty letters to Reilly complaining about the holdup.

An administration source summed up the nagging: "This is just clean air politics."

Thaw will burn conservatives

ponents to the right of him, moderate supporters to the left of him and Boris Yeltsin in front of him.

Yeltsin is a potential reality that cannot be ignored. Ironically, the more successful Yeltsin and Soviet democratic reform are, the more painful it will be for Republican conservatives in the United States.

If you look at the history of American foreign policy since the end of World War II, it has been structured on a deep-seated distrust of Russian foreign adventurism.

John Foster Dulles' "brinkmanship" and Ronald Reagan's "evil empire" capitated the range of Republican attitudes toward the Soviet Union. Democrats were accused of being "soft on communism," and hard-lining, saber-rattling Republicans believed that only they had a pipeline to ultimate truth. Their response to any international event was to build a military machine, so we could be prepared, at a moment's notice, to counteract a Soviet thrust.

But they never did use that might against the Soviet Union. Instead, America's magnificent military juggernaut was used by Reagan to invade a military impostor Grenada and needlessly sacrifice American lives in Beirut. Bush also used troops to invade the tiny nation of Panama.

Dingell keeps after EPA boss

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., is one of the pit bulls of Congress, and he likes nothing better than chewing on the leg of William Reilly. Reilly, the head of the Environmental Protection Agency, is a tailor-made to whet Dingell's appetite — a career environmentalist, driven to clean up the air, Dingell is a career politician, driven to protect his constituents, the auto makers and auto workers in Detroit.

Ever since George Bush declared himself to be the "environmental president," Dingell has had his hands full. It isn't that Bush has turned out to be a defender of the environment. It's simply that Bush stumbled upon an EPA director who is.

For years, Dingell has harped on the EPA for its lax protection of nearly every element of the environment, except the Dingell's favorite target has been EPA's failure to clean up hazardous waste. But when it comes to air pollution, the congressman sings a different tune.

While the Reilly's schedule lagged a bit, pushing the McCormick Mile back, Evans wasn't worried about the heat. Instead, he was concerned he'd miss the start of the England-Netherlands match which began at 3 p.m.

Evans' sentiments concerning the World Cup echoed those felt by 80 percent of our planet.

The majority of the dissenting opinions concerning, first, the sport of soccer and, second, the honoring of the World Cup, originate from the United States.

In most of these cases, it seems illogical for numerous sports enthusiasts in this country to be indifferent, or even actively, dislike the sport of soccer.

At the local, high school and collegiate levels, for both male and female, soccer is incredibly popular in the U.S. Obviously, the U.S. lags way behind European countries as far as professional soccer leagues are concerned.

Dingell met halfway with the leading pollution fighter in the House, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who introduced a compromise and passed the tough revisions to the clean air laws last month.

Dingell's fellow Democrats were breathing hot on his neck. They remembered how Bush stole the "environmentalist" label from Michael Dukakis in the 1988 election by focusing on Dukakis' failure to clean up Boston Harbor. The last thing the Democrats needed was one of their own standing in the way of cleaner air.

It was Dingell who caviled, but now Reilly is watching his ankles. The chilly relationship between the two men turned to ice in the clean air debate, sources told our associates Scott Sleek and Tim Warner. Dingell even confronted Reilly at a Washington press conference. Reilly, who didn't care if workers in Detroit lost their jobs.

During the clean air hearings, Dingell and Waxman, who ever every congressman got the congressman drilled Reilly like a prosecutor badgering the star witness for the defense. After Dingell had already agreed to sponsor the bill, he demanded minute details about how new emissions standards would affect car makers, the environmentalists about the cost of cleaner fuels, and he carped about the increased power Reilly would have under the new laws.

Reilly will continue to pay the price of victory in the clean air fight. Dingell will find other areas in which the EPA has not done its job and will bound Reilly about them.

He would like to blame Reilly for the EPA's failure to issue new guidelines for industry and the military to clean up hazardous waste dumps. But as we reported earlier, the Office and Management and Budget has detailed those guidelines. OMB mistakenly thinks it can save the government trillions of dollars in cleanup costs by stalling.

World views U.S. ignorance toward Cup

Following the running of the Christie McCormick Mile, the featured event at the 15th annual Manchester Community College New England Relay, last Saturday at Manchester High School, winner John Evans stood on the infield of Pete Wigren Track talking to reporters about the race.

Once the topic turned from running to the World Cup, a tired Evans, a native of Liverpool, England, was invigorated.

"If (the World Cup) is more important than the running, I think," Evans said.

While the Relays' schedule lagged a bit, pushing the McCormick Mile back, Evans wasn't worried about the heat. Instead, he was concerned he'd miss the start of the England-Netherlands match which began at 3 p.m.

Evans' sentiments concerning the World Cup echoed those felt by 80 percent of our planet.

The majority of the dissenting opinions concerning, first, the sport of soccer and, second, the honoring of the World Cup, originate from the United States.

In most of these cases, it seems illogical for numerous sports enthusiasts in this country to be indifferent, or even actively, dislike the sport of soccer.

At the local, high school and collegiate levels, for both male and female, soccer is incredibly popular in the U.S. Obviously, the U.S. lags way behind European countries as far as professional soccer leagues are concerned.

In Connecticut alone, soccer has taken off at the local level, especially in Manchester. Soccer, it has always been, one of the strongest sports in Connecticut at the high school level. On the collegiate level, look no further than the University of Connecticut men's and women's teams who are annually ranked among the nation's top twenty.

The UConn men won the NCAA Division I National Championship in 1981.

So, with all of this successful soccer present, locally and nationally, why do so many from upon the World Cup as an overrated and overplayed event held in a different venue every four years?

In a word, ignorance.

The mindset prevalent among sports enthusiasts in this country is geared toward offensive spectacles, which is all well and good, exciting and pleasurable to the viewer.

For many, any sporting event is branded "boring" if a certain amount of offense doesn't occur.

For many sports fans, soccer is an afterthought due to the lack of offense. The thing is, soccer was never meant to be an explosive game in which goals were as common as baskets in an NBA game.

Soccer fans, around the world and those in this country, appreciate soccer for the: 1) overall tremendous fitness level a soccer player possesses 2) clever and skillful subtleties necessary to outmaneuver the adversary 3) speed involved of each and every player 4) loyalty of each country's supporters.

A true sports fan appreciates soccer for those same reasons.

Certainly, having one of the weakest teams in this year's World Cup in Rome hasn't encouraged those "ignorant" American sports fans to remove their NFL, NBA and major league baseball blinders.

But, that fact hasn't stopped American soccer fans from viewing the World Cup and relating the phenomenal enthusiasm generated by the players and fans of each country involved.

Since the start of the World Cup, one local sportscenter actually expressed resentment toward the fact that the Americans aren't, and can't in this case, dominating an international sporting event.

That statement alone, from a sportscenter no less, fleshes out the incredible ignorance shown by many sports fans in this country toward the World Cup.

It's a sad commentary on the almost selfish sports mindset in the U.S., predicated on offense, fast and furious, with no time to sit and view a 90-minute soccer game. They'd rather watch a 60-minute hockey game which takes twice as long to play.

It is these fans who would walk out of a 1-0 baseball game complaining they were ripped off because of the lack of offense, instead of applauding the excellent pitcher's duel and defense.

The best baseball game I ever witnessed was the first game of a Red Sox-Yankee doubleheader at Shea Stadium (when Yankee Stadium was being renovated) in July, 1975. It was a classic pitcher's duel between Boston's Bill Lee and New York's Catfish Hunter. The Sox won, 1-0, with Fred Lynn making a game-saving catch in centerfield.

Applying the "ignorant" theory, I should write the Yankees and request my money back from that 15-year-old game due to the lack of offense. These fans probably want this clause written on the back of their tickets.

The thought of soccer being as popular here as it is elsewhere in the world is inconceivable.

But, a concerted effort would be nice.

The World Cup is coming to America in 1994. It would be thoughtful of the U.S. fans to mark it down on their calendars.

The majority of the dissenting opinions concerning, first, the sport of soccer and, second, the honoring of the World Cup, originate from the United States.

In most of these cases, it seems illogical for numerous sports enthusiasts in this country to be indifferent, or even actively, dislike the sport of soccer.

At the local, high school and collegiate levels, for both male and female, soccer is incredibly popular in the U.S. Obviously, the U.S. lags way behind European countries as far as professional soccer leagues are concerned.

In Connecticut alone, soccer has taken off at the local level, especially in Manchester. Soccer, it has always been, one of the strongest sports in Connecticut at the high school level. On the collegiate level, look no further than the University of Connecticut men's and women's teams who are annually ranked among the nation's top twenty.

The UConn men won the NCAA Division I National Championship in 1981.

So, with all of this successful soccer present, locally and nationally, why do so many from upon the World Cup as an overrated and overplayed event held in a different venue every four years?

In a word, ignorance.

The mindset prevalent among sports enthusiasts in this country is geared toward offensive spectacles, which is all well and good, exciting and pleasurable to the viewer.

For many, any sporting event is branded "boring" if a certain amount of offense doesn't occur.

For many sports fans, soccer is an afterthought due to the lack of offense. The thing is, soccer was never meant to be an explosive game in which goals were as common as baskets in an NBA game.

Soccer fans, around the world and those in this country, appreciate soccer for the: 1) overall tremendous fitness level a soccer player possesses 2) clever and skillful subtleties necessary to outmaneuver the adversary 3) speed involved of each and every player 4) loyalty of each country's supporters.

A true sports fan appreciates soccer for those same reasons.

Certainly, having one of the weakest teams in this year's World Cup in Rome hasn't encouraged those "ignorant" American sports fans to remove their NFL, NBA and major league baseball blinders.

But, that fact hasn't stopped American soccer fans from viewing the World Cup and relating the phenomenal enthusiasm generated by the players and fans of each country involved.

Since the start of the World Cup, one local sportscenter actually expressed resentment toward the fact that the Americans aren't, and can't in this case, dominating an international sporting event.

That statement alone, from a sportscenter no less, fleshes out the incredible ignorance shown by many sports fans in this country toward the World Cup.

It's a sad commentary on the almost selfish sports mindset in the U.S., predicated on offense, fast and furious, with no time to sit and view a 90-minute soccer game. They'd rather watch a 60-minute hockey game which takes twice as long to play.

It is these fans who would walk out of a 1-0 baseball game complaining they were ripped off because of the lack of offense, instead of applauding the excellent pitcher's duel and defense.

The best baseball game I ever witnessed was the first game of a Red Sox-Yankee doubleheader at Shea Stadium (when Yankee Stadium was being renovated) in July, 1975. It was a classic pitcher's duel between Boston's Bill Lee and New York's Catfish Hunter. The Sox won, 1-0, with Fred Lynn making a game-saving catch in centerfield.

Applying the "ignorant" theory, I should write the Yankees and request my money back from that 15-year-old game due to the lack of offense. These fans probably want this clause written on the back of their tickets.

The thought of soccer being as popular here as it is elsewhere in the world is inconceivable.

But, a concerted effort would be nice.

The World Cup is coming to America in 1994. It would be thoughtful of the U.S. fans to mark it down on their calendars.

World views U.S. ignorance toward Cup

Following the running of the Christie McCormick Mile, the featured event at the 15th annual Manchester Community College New England Relay, last Saturday at Manchester High School, winner John Evans stood on the infield of Pete Wigren Track talking to reporters about the race.

Once the topic turned from running to the World Cup, a tired Evans, a native of Liverpool, England, was invigorated.

"If (the World Cup) is more important than the running, I think," Evans said.

While the Relays' schedule lagged a bit, pushing the McCormick Mile back, Evans wasn't worried about the heat. Instead, he was concerned he'd miss the start of the England-Netherlands match which began at 3 p.m.

Evans' sentiments concerning the World Cup echoed those felt by 80 percent of our planet.

As host nation, the United States will be in World Cup '94. Organizers for that tournament said they hope to use dome stadiums, with natural grass placed over the artificial surfaces. FIFA, the international governing body for soccer, does not allow artificial turf for World Cup games.

Scott LeTetter, president of the organizing committee, also said FIFA had indicated it would allow games in the early evening and at night. That means starting times from 11 p.m. on in much of Europe, and possibly games beginning early in the European morning.

"FIFA will never go so far as the Olympics and make the starting times solely for television," FIFA spokesman Guido Tognoni said. "We do not ask for so much money from the international television consortiums for them to be able to dictate kickoff times. The players must play in the times they are used to playing."

Defending champion Argentina won't play again until the weekend, but there is serious concern about the condition of star Diego Maradona. The man who led his country to the 1986 championship is hobbled with a bad right ankle and knee and has been ordered to take complete rest for two days.

"He has to keep still while putting a lot of ice on the inflamed area. We'll have to wait to see how the injury responds," Argentina coach Carlos Bilardo said. "But knowing his love of the game, he'll be playing soon."

But how soon and how well?

Mandela looking for support

By Rick Hampson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nelson Mandela, a freedom fighter who became one of the world's most celebrated political prisoners, headed for the United States today looking for money and moral support for his battle against apartheid.

Mandela, 71, is in the midst of a six-week tour of 14 nations in Africa, Europe and North America that began June 6 — one day after he was discharged from a Johannesburg hospital after surgery to remove a tumor from his bladder.

Because of concern about his health, ambulances were to be stationed at cross streets along today's parade route, and the city's Emergency Medical Service was given a detailed medical history.

In Canada on Tuesday, Mandela appealed to students at a Toronto high school to raise funds to help black youth in his South African homeland. He said they get an education "far inferior to whites," and that those who have spoken out "have been crushed with force" by the white-minority government.

Among the activities on today's agenda were a speech at a Brooklyn high school and a ticker-tape parade through New York's concrete canyons to City Hall, where Mayor David Dinkins was to present Mandela with a key to the city.

Speaking Tuesday at a national mayors' meeting in Chicago, New York's first black mayor said Mandela comes to America "as a transcendent symbol of freedom, and as a solitary person who is altering world history."

Mandela's release from prison Feb. 11 was part of a program of social reforms by the government of President F.W. de Klerk that included legalizing the ANC and other anti-apartheid groups.

De Klerk also has opened talks with black groups on giving a political voice to the country's 28 million blacks. South Africa's 5 million whites control the government and economy.

PUT IT THERE — Nelson Mandela shakes hands with a younger person receiving a book as a gift during a tour of a Toronto high school Tuesday.

Another controversy surrounded the concert and rally Thursday at city-owned Yankee Stadium. Tickets to the fund-raiser Friday night, catered by actor Robert De Niro's restaurant, were $50.

Rock promoter Bill Graham pulled out as organizer, citing disagreements with city officials. City organizers, in turn, blamed Graham for poor ticket sales. About 20,000 of 45,000 tickets had been sold by late Tuesday.

Also planned were a street rally in Harlem on Thursday, breakfast with business leaders Friday at the World Trade Center and a $2,000-a-person fund-raiser Friday night, catered by actor Robert De Niro's restaurant.

Mandela leaves Saturday for Boston. The trip continues with stops in Washington, Atlanta, Miami, Detroit, Los Angeles and Oakland, Calif. He leaves the United States on July 1.

The newspaper also failed to get the approval of the state treasurer before purchasing $100,000 in certificates of deposit, the auditors said.

In one other letter to the governor, Becker and Donohue said the state treasurer's office had reported that $3,027 check issued by an insurance company on March 21 wasn't deposited until June 15.

Ed board turns down plan to hike tuitions

HARTFORD (AP) — The Board of Governors for Higher Education has rejected a plan to make students at Connecticut's public universities pay more of the cost of their education.

The proposal to increase the proportion of annual operating costs at public universities that must be covered by tuition failed on a 5-5 vote Tuesday after complaints that it could cause double-digit tuition increases.

This fall, state residents will pay $1,890 for undergraduate tuition. The recommended figure for 1991-92 is $2,030.

Undergraduate tuition at the four state universities this fall will be $1,060 for state residents, a 15 percent increase over 1989-90 tuition.

In a letter to the Department of Higher Education, Dallas K. Beal, president of the state university system, wrote "At a time when wealth seems to be concentrating more and more among a small percentage of upper-income people, preservation of low prices to students in public higher education is an effective means of maintaining opportunity for the majority."

The complaint suggests the closed session be declared illegal.

"My hopes are that the board will start to recognize the laws and rules of the State of Connecticut and start to abide by them," Cassano said.

At a news conference held two days after the meeting in question, Cassano and Democratic Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said they were considering filing a complaint with the state commission, but were waiting for advice as to whether they "had a legitimate case."

Before the beginning of the closed session, Town Attorney Maureen Chmielecki said the "Republican directors, Mayor Terry Werhoven and Wally Irish, would be permitted to stay because, as directors, they are ex-officio members of the Pension Board and other appointed boards and commissions."

However, Cassano said the Town Charter states nothing about directors being ex-officio members of appointed boards.

Patient involved in attack walks away from hospital

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A 33-year-old mental patient who was acquitted on attempted murder charges by reason of insanity walked off the grounds of Connecticut Valley Hospital before returning five hours later, officials said.

The patient, Susan Bergeron, was committed to state custody for 35 years in January. A judge found her innocent by reason insanity on charges she shot a Hartford Courant circulation manager three times while he and a carrier were walking a route in East Hartford.

Bergeron left the grounds of the hospital between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesday and walked back into her hospital ward at about 8 p.m., said Martha Lewis, the executive director of the state Psychiatric Security Review Board.

Cassano used the words "shaming" and "humiliating," but both said that because they were not at the meeting, they do not know whether the Republicans' presence affected the actions of the Pension Board.

They said they were angry also because they had been told by Town Manager Richard Sarfo that the meeting would be closed, but Republicans still attended.

No discussion of the issue was held before the vote, in which Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano abstained. Cassano said he didn't vote to reject the proposal because he supports the plan.

"We could be in a situation in a couple of months where there will be no one in the personnel office," he said.

The proposal was discussed last week and then set aside after Republican members voiced opposition to the plan.

Leading the attack then was Director Geoffrey Naab, who said he thinks positions should not be added unless necessary, and he was not convinced of that.

He made the comments after hearing a detailed report on the plan from Assistant Town Manager Steven Werber, who oversees personnel.

The proposal calls for creating a full-time director of personnel services position, plus adding a 20-hour per week personnel officer, bringing the total staff to 3.5 from 2.5.

The director would have more high-level responsibilities, such as labor relations, than the two present half-time co-directors. The officer would have such tasks as analysis of job training and recruitment.

Werber said since the mid 1970s, the personnel staff has not increased in proportion with the increases in the number of town employees and the work staff must handle.

Since the mid '70s, there has been an increase of 31 percent in the number of town employees, but the only staff addition has been a 15-hour per week clerk, Werber said.

Not only has the number of employees increased, but the laws pertaining to employment practices have become much more complicated, thereby adding to the burden of the staff.

Cassano charges FOI violation

Following up on an announcement he made last month, Democratic town Director Stephen T. Cassano has filed a complaint with the state Freedom of Information Commission against two of his Republican counterparts on the Board of Directors.

The complaint filed Monday accuses Republican Mayor Terry Werhoven and Director Wally Irish of illegally attending a closed session of the Pension Board last month.

The complaint suggests the closed session be declared illegal.

Bolton man wins $25k in Dick Tracy game

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — A 24-year-old Bolton resident has won $25,000 in a game related to the new Dick Tracy movie.

"It still hasn't sunk in. This is the first time I've won anything this large," James M. Hare, a 24-year-old pressman with Sweet Printing in Glastonbury, said today.

Hare was scheduled to receive a check for the $25,000 today during a presentation at the Rockville McDonald's restaurant at 50 Lafayette Square, where Hare received the winning game card.

Hare said he went to the McDonald's with his girlfriend, Heidi Baril of Brooklyn, and ordered a Big Mac and a Coke. While they were eating in the parking lot, he rubbed off the game card and it said, "You win $25,000."

Hare said he started reading the game rules to make sure he really had won. "You never really believe these things," he said. Hare said he would not truly believe he'd won until he received the check.

He and his girlfriend went back into the McDonald's, but the employees did not know what to do. They had to come back in the morning.

The McDonald's promotional game is based on mobster characters from the newly released motion picture "Dick Tracy."

Hare said he has not decided what to do with the money yet. "We'll probably bank it and save for a house," he said. He plans to share the money with his girlfriend.

Rep. Munns seeks return to House

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

State Rep. Paul Munns of Manchester announced today that he would seek re-election to another term in the House of Representatives. Munns, a Republican, serves the 9th District, which includes Manchester, East Hartford and Glastonbury.

Munns said his accomplishments answer to any transportation need is to build more highways, Munns said.

Munns said that the solution to the fiscal problems that state has experienced are controlling spending and tax reform.

He would only support an income tax if other taxes, especially corporate and sales taxes, are lowered, Munns said. Corporate taxes are driving businesses out of Connecticut. A lower tax would actually increase the state's revenue because it would encourage more businesses to come to the state.

Similarly, it is easy for people to go out of the state where sales taxes are lower when they need to make any large purchase. A lower sales tax would draw people into Connecticut from other states, he said.

Munns said that during his term he supported higher education, working to make sure that funding levels at colleges were kept at a reasonable level.

Munns said that his support for education funding does not contradict his support of holding the line on spending.

"We just have to change our priorities," he said. Money can be saved by consolidating state departments and having fewer commissioners and high management people, he said. "We have too many chiefs and not enough Indians," he said.

Munns, a graduate of the Central Connecticut State University, serves on the Legislature's

Running mate search focuses on 1st District

HARTFORD (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has focused on the 1st Congressional District in his search for a running mate.

"We consider the first district an important place, and it's a place where we're concentrating our efforts," said Thayer Baldwin Jr., Morrison's campaign manager. "It has the largest number of Democrats, and we want to work it hard."

There are more registered Democrats in the 18-town 1st District — which includes Hartford and runs from East Windsor to East Hampton and from Berlin to Manchester — than in any of the state's other five congressional districts.

The campaign has asked West Hartford Democratic Town Chairwoman Marilyn Cohen and Frank Aletta, her counterpart in Newington, to draft a list of potential lieutenant governor candidates.

The list includes some names that have not been mentioned before, including State Police Commissioner Bernard R. Sullivan. Baldwin said that Sullivan's name had come to the fore only recently and he could be a "compelling candidate."

Sullivan, the former chief of police in Hartford who was chosen by Gov. William A. O'Neill to reorganize the state police, could not be reached for comment. Baldwin said Morrison had not talked to Sullivan about the job.

Cohen said Tuesday that the list would be compiled by the end of the week, after discussions with all town chairmen in the district. She said those on the list had not necessarily expressed interest or been contacted, but had been suggested by the chairmen as worthy of consideration.

Baldwin said that although others, including Democratic National Committeewoman Ellen Camhi of Stamford, had been asked to submit names of potential candidates, the 1st District is the only one in which a concerted effort has been launched.

The focus on the 1st District is consistent with past Democratic practice. Democrats have often sought candidates for the statewide ticket — which also includes treasurer, attorney general, comptroller and secretary of the state — from the district.

Four current incumbents — O'Neill, who is from East Hampton; Lt. Gov. Joseph J. Fasullo of Hartford; Borges, the treasurer who is from Hartford; and Secretary of the State Julia H. Tashjian of Windsor — are all in the 1st District.

Turnpike proposal weakened by board

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

A proposal by Democratic town Director Stephen T. Cassano to hold a referendum for the reconstruction of a section of East Middle Turnpike was weakened by Republicans and then adopted unanimously by the Board of Directors at Tuesday's meeting.

When last week's meeting was adjourned, members of the board had not yet discussed whether they would approve the plan to hold a referendum for the reconstruction of the road from Brookfield to Woodridge streets.

The three-quarter stretch of East Middle Turnpike is considered by Public Works officials as one of the worst sections of road in town.

Although Cassano and his Democratic colleagues had requested bonding of the project, Republicans Tuesday said they would not support placing such a question on the November ballot without a detailed cost estimate for the work.

"I don't think anyone on either side disputes the need to repair that road," said Republican Director Wally Irish, "Our concern is that we find out from the administration what the cost is before doubling up on the bond referendum."

Public Works Director Peter P. Lozis Jr. said the estimated cost of the project including curbing and sidewalks is now between $2.5-3 million; it will take about 5 years to complete.

In a rage, Irish said Lozis, himself, told directors three months ago that the cost of the project was estimated at $1.5 million. Why were the estimates so far off, he asked?

"Mr. Irish, how much money do you want to spend on the estimates," Lozis responded, indicating the lower estimates had been preliminary and very rough.

Irish said, "That's my point. We don't know what we're getting into. We're elected officials. We got to be accountable to the taxpayers. We don't know what we're getting into."

"You don't," Lozis said, and then added, "unless we have the opportunity to spend an extended amount of time (on estimates) and I'm not talking about a few days."

Republican Deputy Mayor Ronald Ouellet said he did not think specific projects should be attempted without a structured, prioritized plan with several project proposals considered.

Cassano responded, "anybody in Manchester that travels on East Middle Turnpike doesn't need a priority system to see that something needs to be done. It's probably the most highly traveled road in town."

As time passes, the road will get worse, Cassano said. And if people think more money for such projects will be available soon from the state or federal government, they are wrong.

Town Manager Richard Sarlor said he agreed that outside funding is not a likely possibility, but said also, "there is a major need for prioritization and consideration of a number of projects."

and hanging, said Dr. Ira Kanfer of the chief state medical examiner's office in Farmington. The child had been smothered, Kanfer said Tuesday.

Police were unaware of any reports of child abuse or other domestic problems at the Wilson home, although they learned after the bodies were discovered that Wilson had been depressed recently, apparently by employment problems.

ENFIELD (AP) — Police say they are treating the deaths of a 12-year-old Enfield man and his 11-year-old son as a murder-suicide. The bodies of Joel M. Wilson and his son, Todd, were discovered Monday evening by Wilson's wife, Donna, said Deputy Chief Herbert Roy.

Joel Wilson was found partially suspended from an electrical cord in the cellar and died of stab wounds

Directors pledge Cheney interest aid

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Members of the town Board of Directors voted 7-2 Tuesday to guarantee payment of first-year interest of up to $50,000 on a $1.2 million loan being secured by the Cheney Hall Foundation.

The town's guarantee is a prerequisite demanded by the seven area banks that are granting the loan, which is needed to pay contractors to renovate the interior of the historic Cheney Hall building.

Before Tuesday's vote, a passionate plea for the guarantee was made by William FitzGerald, an ex-officio member of the foundation.

"The Cheney Hall won't be finished in the foreseeable future if this vote doesn't pass," said FitzGerald, who is also the town's probate judge. "A great many people have devoted a great deal of time to this, and to have this fail would be a tragedy for the town of Manchester," he said.

FitzGerald's speech did not persuade all directors to support the interest guarantee.

Republican directors Geoffrey Naab, Wally Irish, and Ellen Burns Landers questioned the terms of the loan, and Naab and Irish eventually voted against the measure.

"It certainly is a gallant project," Irish said, "but I struggle with this under dire economic times."

Naab said if the foundation plans to pay off a $1.2 million loan in five years, the interest would not be $50,000, but more like $300,000.

Also, he said the loan document demands a legal commitment by the town for the first year, and a moral commitment for future years.

FitzGerald said, "There is no way the town could make a commitment beyond one year. Whether there is a moral commitment, I'd like to wait to see the economic conditions."

The foundation has about $600,000 in pledges and state grants, according to foundation President Donald Kuehl.

After Landers said she would approve the guarantee with the understanding that it was for only this year, Democrat Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said, "If you have no intention of guaranteeing this project through completion, I don't see why you'd want to mislead the people tonight," he said.

"They're going to walk out tonight saying to the banks that they have $50,000 per year," DiRosa said.

Elsesser puts convictions in writing

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

Strong convictions appear to be the hallmark of Sarah Elsesser's philosophy, but only recently has she felt the freedom to express them in writing.

"As the wife of a minister who has to be diplomatic, and out working — now I feel liberated," Elsesser, 67, said recently in an interview at her home on Baldwin Street in Manchester.

Elsesser's husband, Alex, is a retired local Baptist minister. She retired from her position as coordinator of elementary media services for Manchester schools in 1985. Sarah is also the mother of Coventry Town Manager John Elsesser.

Sarah has authored a series of library skills periodicals and a media resource manual. She also wrote "1985 Sarah is also the mother of Coventry Town Manager John Elsesser."

Subdivision given OK

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

The Planning and Zoning Commission Monday night approved a 5-lot subdivision of land that was effectively subdivided during the 1950s.

Back then it was not uncommon for residents in a rural section of town to be involved in an illegal subdivision and not realize it, according to Dominic Squatrito, an attorney for John N. and Mary A. Lombardo, of 199 Deming Street.

The previous owners of the land created a four-lot subdivision on 11.5 acres of land, part of which is in South Windsor. The Lombardos discovered the oversight when they tried to sell some of the property, Squatrito said.

"We're asking that you approve this subdivision to allow us to conform with the law," he said. The town of South Windsor has already approved the subdivision, he said. Currently, there are three homes on the lots.

Stuart Popper, senior planner, noted that the town's 1986 Plan of Development calls for sidewalks on that part of Deming Street, and commission member Marion Taggart said she would prefer to have sidewalks there rather than deferring as the applicant was requesting.

But William A. Bayer, chairman of the PZC, said that it would be unfair to the applicants, who had come in to make a subdivision legal, for the commission to turn around and require them to put in a sidewalk where there were none now.

The commission granted the sidewalk deferment in a 5-0 vote.

Republican directors Geoffrey Naab, Wally Irish, and Ellen Burns Landers questioned the terms of the loan, and Naab and Irish eventually voted against the measure.

"It certainly is a gallant project," Irish said, "but I struggle with this under dire economic times."

Naab said if the foundation plans to pay off a $1.2 million loan in five years, the interest would not be $50,000, but more like $300,000.

Also, he said the loan document demands a legal commitment by the town for the first year, and a moral commitment for future years.

FitzGerald said, "There is no way the town could make a commitment beyond one year. Whether there is a moral commitment, I'd like to wait to see the economic conditions."

The foundation has about $600,000 in pledges and state grants, according to foundation President Donald Kuehl.

After Landers said she would approve the guarantee with the understanding that it was for only this year, Democrat Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said, "If you have no intention of guaranteeing this project through completion, I don't see why you'd want to mislead the people tonight," he said.

"They're going to walk out tonight saying to the banks that they have $50,000 per year," DiRosa said.

Directors pledge Cheney interest aid

Members of the town Board of Directors voted 7-2 Tuesday to guarantee payment of first-year interest of up to $50,000 on a $1.2 million loan being secured by the Cheney Hall Foundation.

The town's guarantee is a prerequisite demanded by the seven area banks that are granting the loan, which is needed to pay contractors to renovate the interior of the historic Cheney Hall building.

Before Tuesday's vote, a passionate plea for the guarantee was made by William FitzGerald, an ex-officio member of the foundation.

"The Cheney Hall won't be finished in the foreseeable future if this vote doesn't pass," said FitzGerald, who is also the town's probate judge. "A great many people have devoted a great deal of time to this, and to have this fail would be a tragedy for the town of Manchester," he said.

Police Roundup

Man charged with threatening

A Manchester man was charged with threatening and allegedly using a razor knife Tuesday to threaten another man, police said.

Joseph Lheureux, 40, of 213 Center St. also was charged with breach of peace. He was released on $500 non-surety bond and scheduled to appear in court, police said.

According to a police report, two men told police that they were sitting in a truck near Lheureux's residence when Lheureux came by and threatened the door to their truck they were in.

A verbal argument ensued, during which Lheureux allegedly pulled a razor knife and started swinging it at one of the men, police said.

AP chief dies

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Erik Wald, chief of Associated Press operations in Norway for nearly 19 years, died Tuesday of a stroke at age 63.

Wald joined the AP in Oslo in 1953 after working as a free-lance correspondent for Norwegian newspapers. He became news editor of the Oslo bureau in 1964 and was the first Norwegian to work for the AP in 1971.

He was a veteran correspondent for AP at Olympic Games and world events, including the 1980 Olympics. Wald is survived by his wife, Randi; a brother, four children and seven grandchildren.

Thoughts

In the book "All Grown Up and No Place to Go," its author, David Elkind, states that our society is forcing children to grow up much too quickly. Many children today are experiencing physiological and psychological problems that were unheard of among their age group less than ten years ago. Are we, as adults and parents, partly responsible for this problem? Joan Beck of the Chicago Tribune writes, "The truth is that in the adult world, we redefined children and childhood to fit our needs and convenience and to take a minimum of adult time and attention."

To help each one of us re-establish a proper perspective on children, let us look at what the Bible has to say. Both Genesis 33:4-5 and Psalm 127:3 teach that children are a gift from the Lord. Children are a heritage, an estate to be passed on graciously given by God to man. In the New Testament, we see that Christ clearly taught the same (Mark 10:13-16).

Dear Dr. Gott: Bronchitis is a form of localized, chronic lung infection, often associated with emphysema and chronic bronchitis, that causes increased cough, wheezing and — and sometimes — hemoptysis (blood in the sputum).

Specialists are not sure why bronchitis develops in some patients and not in others. It is more common after severe pneumonia, inhalation of injurious material (such as silica) and bronchial obstruction. It is frequently a complication of cystic fibrosis (a chronic, inherited lung condition marked by thick mucus and a susceptibility to lung infection).

Bronchitis causes portions of the bronchial passages to stretch and dilate. The bronchial tubes are normally shaped like straight pipes, much like a car's exhaust system; bronchitis alters this shape: The muffer (bronchitis) bulges between two pipes of uniform diameter (bronchial tubes).

Early bronchitis causes no symptoms. More advanced forms produce the symptoms I mentioned above. Severe degrees are associated with respiratory insufficiency, heart failure and significant scarring of pulmonary tissue. The diagnosis is usually made by a bronchogram, a type of special lung X-ray.

Doctors seek to improve breathing and eradicate underlying infection. For example, most patients are aided by breathing exercises, antibiotics, avoidance of air pollution and discontinuation of smoking. Postural drainage, during which a patient leans head down over the side of the bed several times a day, improves breathing by riding the lungs of mucus.

In cases of repeated bleeding or resistant infection, the segment of bronchitis may have to be surgically removed.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would iron supplements or a multi-vitamin cause dirt stool?

DEAR READER: Oral iron supplements turn the stool black. This can be quite a shock to someone who is unprepared for the change, but it is a harmless consequence of iron therapy.

On the other hand, intestinal bleeding can cause darkening of the stool. This can be differentiated from the effects of iron by a stool analysis that checks for blood.

Nominations for awards sought

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for telling your 90 million readers last September about the annual Midland Community Spirit Award, created to honor a community that best represents the American ideal of a community pulling together and helping one another. Also, thank you for the citizens of Sioux City, Iowa, who won the award for compassionate assistance to the passengers and crew of United Flight 232 after it crashed into an Iowa cornfield.

Among the 88 communities nominated last year were many inspiring stories of community spirit. As one of the judges said, "It was difficult to select a winner, since through their efforts, all were winners." For example: "When a building collapsed in Brownsville, Texas, English has become a shoulder to shoulder for more than 60 hours, relentlessly clearing rubble to find those who died and rescuing trapped survivors."

"When a train derailed near Saco and Glasgow, Montana, the citizens of these two small towns graciously fed, clothed and cared for the waylaid passengers.

"When a blizzard halted traffic late one afternoon, members of the Valley View Methodist Church in South Texas walked from car to car inviting hundreds of stranded motorists to spend the night in their church. And townspeople brought whatever they had in their freezers to feed all of them."

"When Colonial Beach, Va. (population 2,500) needed to replace the old school built in 1912, the community raised half a million dollars to build a new school through bingo, bake sales and penny campaigns.

We are now seeking nominations for the Midland Community Spirit Award to be presented in October 1990. We have asked President Bush to make the presentation again at a White House ceremony.

Abby, won't you please ask proud citizens to nominate their communities now? Thank you for your help.

Lung ailment is actually infection

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you provide information on bronchitis? I've been bothered for years with coughing and phlegm, and I probably have been given every antibiotic imaginable. What would you recommend?

Fund fees off after surgery

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford, an avid golfer whose game is best known for his benignity of spectators, practiced his swing Tuesday for the first time since a knee operation, but only for a moment.

"My surgeon I'm not sure would appreciate this," Ford said as he hit six balls at a driving range. The swings were largely for the benefit of local news photographers.

Ford stopped in Juneau during a sightseeing tour of Alaska with his wife, Betty, and former British Prime Minister Leonard James Callaghan.

Callaghan watched from behind as Ford prepared to take his first swing.

"Stand back, everybody," Callaghan joked.

Ford looked out at the driving range. "You're safer behind than out there," he said.

Film director pursues contact

DIMITROV (AP) — "Roger & Me" filmmaker Michael Moore once again stalked the elusive quarry of his movie, this time to give General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger Smith a copy of the video.

"He said he hasn't seen the movie yet and so I figured ... the video comes out tomorrow, I'll give him a very first copy of the videotape and he'll get a chance to see it," Moore said Tuesday, after GM security guards refused to let him take an elevator to Smith's office.

GM issued a statement saying Smith was out of town and criticizing Moore's visit as a publicity stunt.

The film is a tongue-in-cheek documentary about Moore's attempts to interview Smith about GM plant closings and layoffs in Flint, Moore's hometown.

PENSACOLA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Seattle Seahawks linemaker Brian "The Box" Bosworth is the cross between James Dean and Arnold Schwarzenegger, says the director of his first film.

Bosworth stars in "The Brotherhood," a $10-million movie being shot here in which he continues to play defense — in this case, as an FBI agent seeking to stop a political assassination by a motorcycle gang.

Bosworth is trying to recover from injuries that have restricted his football career.

Director Bruce Malmuth called Bosworth the star of the 90s.

"Box is great," Malmuth said Monday. "He's just picked up right where he left off in the sports world and he's zoomed to the foreground."

"I see in him Marlon Brando, James Dean and Gary Cooper, all in one package. He's got the same appeal of a Stallone or an Arnold Schwarzenegger."

Product claims can be false

Advertising is a major factor in the success of our economic system, helping manufacturers move their products into market. It's vital to consumers, too, enabling them to know what's in the market and to compare products.

In the process, there's a mental tug of war. The advertising copywriter pulls the psychological strings that reach your emotions and appeal to your social values. Most consumers find it pleasant, this game of reading and reacting to advertising.

But how can you tell if advertising is truthful or misleading? Experts say you often can tell just by paying attention and by applying the same common sense you would if you were listening to a friend in a personal conversation. These are some obvious clues:

- Watch out for a product labeled "new"; it may be new only in name of label.
- The fact that something is new doesn't mean it's necessarily better.
- Some examples will illustrate

New pancakes high in sodium

By Bonnie Tandy Leblang and Carolyn Wyman

Aunt Jemima Pancake Express Mix. Original, buttermilk, lite buttermilk and blueberry. 99 cents per 3- or 4.5-ounce canister yielding six pancakes.

Bonnie: Pancakes are simple to make from scratch. Those who are too lazy can always buy the frozen microwaveable pancakes that are now available. Pillsbury's are especially good, since they're low in fat and made without added chemicals. So why do we need a product like Aunt Jemima Express? Sure it's quick! All you do is add water to the marked line, shake well and then fry the pancake batter in a hot skillet. But three of the four varieties are overloaded with unnecessary sodium — three 4-inch pancakes contain a whopping 1,010 milligrams. A comparable serving of Aunt Jemima Original Pancake Mix or Pillsbury Microwaveable Pancakes has less than 500 milligrams.

The lite has fewer calories, more fiber and the least amount of sodium (570 milligrams per serving); that's because many of the ingredients have been replaced by powders, because a filler. But it costs the same as the other varieties and you're getting a third less product. The "blueberries" in the blueberry variety are artificially colored and flavored bits of sugar, oil and gums. Yum!

And this new plastic container adds to your nation's ecological problems. Do you get the idea I don't like this? Carolyn: I know it's easier to make microwave pancakes, but every once in a while I get the urge to be creative in the kitchen. Pancake Express makes making pancakes a lot easier than messing with eggs, oil and those big boxes of pancake mix.

All you do is add water to the fill line on these plastic bottles (there's no need to even measure!) and shake hard enough to feel like you're getting exercise (it's easy to leave some stuck on the bottom if you don't). Then pour in a skillet, wait for the first edge to appear and flip.

The original and buttermilk are as good-tasting as all but the best homemade. I'd pass on both the blueberry and the lite; the blueberries in the former taste too fake; the latter tastes too much like the plant fiber from which it was made.

Low-cal dressings offered

Here are some wonderful and tasty toppings to put on your salad greens and other edibles during those hot, hazy and humid days.

GINGER DRESSING
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1/2 teaspoon sesame oil
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon fresh ginger, grated
1/4 tablespoon soy sauce
1/2 cup pineapple juice
Combine all ingredients in a jar. Cover and shake vigorously. Or combine using food processor. Chill or serve over green salad, chicken salad or pasta salad. Makes 4 servings.

BELL PEPPER DRESSING
1 green or red bell pepper
1/2 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon fresh parsley (optional)
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
1/4 teaspoon paprika
Cook bell pepper in microwave on high (100 percent power) for 5 minutes or until tender. Cooking time may vary depending on microwave. Or roast pepper in a 375-degree F oven for 20 to 25 minutes until tender. Cut pepper in half and remove seeds. Put dry with paper towel. In a blender or food processor blend all ingredients thoroughly. Chill and serve over green salad. Makes 6 servings.

BLUE CHEESE DRESSING
1/4 cup low-fat cottage cheese
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons blue cheese, crumbled
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon celery seed
4 drops hot sauce
In a blender or food processor blend all ingredients. Chill and serve over green salad. Makes 6 servings.

GRILLED SALMON FILLETS WITH MUSTARD DILL SAUCE
Preparation time: 20 minutes
4 pounds salmon
For the sauce:
1/2 cup plain yogurt
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1/4 cup Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon minced fresh dill
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dill sprigs for garnish
Rinse the salmon in cold water and remove any visible bones. Place the salmon in a low-sided baking dish, skin side down.
Combine the remaining ingredients, except dill sprigs, in a small bowl. Whisk until well blended. Brush the salmon lightly with the sauce and let it reach room temperature while preparing the grill.

Preheat a gas grill at high heat and then turn down to low, or build a medium charcoal fire. Grill the salmon for 7 to 10 minutes on a side, or until the flesh is flaky. Arrange the salmon on a serving plate and spoon the remaining sauce over the pieces. Garnish with dill sprigs. Makes 8 servings.

STROLL AT THE RACES — The Princess of Wales and the Duchess of York walk together at Ascot racecourse near London Tuesday during the first day of the annual Royal Ascot horse-racing. A feature of the meeting each year is the attendance of many members of Britain's royal family.

Picnic advice given in book

NEW YORK (AP) — "Picnic" by Edith Stovel offers more than 25 picnic menus, from potluck picnics, store-bought picnics, romantic picnics and picnics in a park.

Each menu contains an entree, side dishes and dessert. Each recipe generally serves eight and includes preparation and cooking times.

Stovel's menu for a "Family Celebration Picnic in the Backyard" includes recipes for Taco Salad, Barbecued Chicken, Eight Bean Salad, Corn on the Cob and Gramma Bea's Strawberry Shortcake.

Special storage and packing, tips, and rainy day alternatives, are included.

In a "note for the environment," Stovel says: "Care for the land on which you have your picnic and abide by the back country rule that you leave nothing but your footprints."

Stovel says picnickers should avoid excessive use of disposable plastics and plastic foam, and bring their own garbage bag for trash collection.

low heart, ruffed. The king coming up was good news. He cashed the club ace and ruffed a club, then took the diamond king. When the heart queen came next, East had unpleasant choices. He could ruff and see his natural diamond trick disappear, or discard and have declarer get rid of his losing club. Either way the slam came down. West had a grand slam. The reason had to do with bidding logic. If South held good intermediate cards in diamonds and clubs, along with his known 5-4 distribution, he would have first bid two clubs. But when he bid his diamonds and later bid three clubs, he showed a minimum hand with 4-4 shape.

This deal comes from the Canadian Invitational Pairs held last spring in Toronto. Although most North-South pairs reached six diamonds, no many succeeded. One of the winning declarers was Ralph Cohen. Here is his line of play.

When dummy's heart ace and cashed A-K of spades, pitching a heart. Next came the club king, followed by a
