When a ruff is not enough
By James Jacoby

Many times it is right to kill an established side-suit winner in dummy by letting partner ruff, even though the declarer will overruff. But what if the declarer is wrong when it fails to set the contract?

When South passed North's jump invitation to game, he marked himself with a very minimum opening bid of 1-NT. When North overcalled, South was in a bit of a bind. He could either accept a singleton or a doubleton. If West continues with ace and a club, East will ruff and declare will overruff. Declarer will then proceed to force out ace and king of spades. Eventually South's good diamonds will take care of two of the small tricks in dummy, and the contract will make.

There is a good case for West to switch to the 10 of hearts at trick two. First of all, it may not be necessary for East to ruff even if declarer started with 1-NT of clubs. If East holds A-10-7-x or K-10-7-x in trumps, he will overruff. But if he holds a 9-10-7-x way, but if he holds a 9-10-7-x way, it is likely that the switch to hearts will score two natural trump tricks any way. But if he holds a 9-10-7-x way, it is likely that the switch to hearts will score two natural trump tricks any way. Lesson: Even when your partner scores two natural trump tricks any way, be aware that the best defense may require attacking another side-suit.

School board charged with labor retaliation

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

The school custodians' union is claiming that the Board of Education retaliated against a union official for filing an OSHA complaint.

According to documents filed at the state Labor Dept., Local 991 of Council 4, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, has filed a grievance charging that the union official was given a written warning after contacting OSHA in early March.

The school system was fined $750 in April after John Little, vice-president of Local 991, contacted the state Dept. of Labor about an OSHA violation that occurred during the repair of a drainage pipe at Verplanck School. Little then received a written reprimand for being away from his work on the same day, according to Charles Lombard, staff representative of Council 4.

That is in direct retaliation for his having filed a complaint with OSHA, Lombard said. The union is asking that the warning be removed from Little's file, Lombard said.

Little is on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

Wilson E. Deakin, assistant superintendent of schools for administration, denied today that there was any connection between the reprimand and the complaint to OSHA. He was the school system's liaison to OSHA.

Town hall expansion opposed

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

The latest plan to renovate and expand town hall has lost the support on one of its chief proponents and is likely to be cast into a growing pile of discarded proposals, members of the Board of Directors said Tuesday.

About 14 of 25 citizens who attended a public hearing on the proposal spoke against the plan, and only one non-town employee favored the $12.5 million project.

Town officials have been grappling with a town hall expansion proposal since November, when voters rejected by slim margin a $14 million expansion project. Town officials since have been trying to convince critics that such a project is needed.

"There doesn't seem to be any public support for the issue," said Republican Director Wally Irish after the hearing.

"I'm very reluctant to offer an endorsement of the project."

Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano, who has supported the project in the past, said today that he has changed his mind about it.

Deakin said there is no truth to the claim that the two matters are connected, and if there were, he would have removed the reprimand from Little's file. He said the dispute is now being carried in two areas, one under the grievance procedure, and now under unfair labor practices law.

He said that the work infringement involved is a minor one and the reprimand will be removed from the file in any event within 18 months, providing it does not recur.

Relations between the union and school administration have been strained over the past two years.

Deakin has said he has received more grievances from the custodial union in the past two years than during the more than 20 years combined that he has been with the school system. Little said in April that 56 grievances had been filed in two years.

School officials claim that many of the grievances are frivolous and designed just to harass the administration, while Little has said that the higher number of grievances shows that workers are more confident that the union will take action on their complaints.

Strawberries and sisters, may be big business one day

By Judy Hartling

While many children are spending their summer vacation in swimming pools, on basketball courts, or in front of the television, two enterprising Manchester youths are tending to the business at hand.

Debbie Edwards, 12, and her sister Donna, 13, spend much of their summer vacation picking and selling fresh, native strawberries from their small umbrella-shaded table in their front yard off of Autumn Street.

The two girls and their mother, Homenna, get up at 7 a.m. every morning except Sundays to travel to Pesce's farm in Bolton to pick between 35 to 50 quarts of strawberries. They then return home at about 1 p.m. to begin selling. The strawberries are almost always gone by 6 p.m.

This is the fourth summer Debbie and Donna have operated the business, which has no name. They sell the strawberries for $2.10 per quart, about 90 cents lower than what strawberries sell for in local supermarkets.

"I figured it was a nice way to teach them a few things about money," he said. "They have to treat the customers properly, keep the place tidy, and they've got to be up on time in the morning. It helps keep them responsible. And I get free strawberries."

Minority preferences upheld

By James H. Rubin
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today upheld federal policies that favor women and minorities in awarding broadcast licenses, a major victory for affirmative action.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices said the Federal Communications Commission policies do not discriminate unlawfully against white men.

In a case from Florida, the court allowed the commission's so-called diversity policy, which allows a broadcaster faced with the loss of its license to sell to a minority-owned business at 75 percent of market value.

In a case from Connecticut, the court upheld the commission's so-called diversity policy, which allows a broadcaster faced with the loss of its license to sell to a minority-owned business at 75 percent of market value.

Today's ruling, which came in a consolidation of the two cases, is a surprising victory for affirmative action from a conservative Supreme Court.

In its most important previous ruling on preferential minority treatment by the federal government, a more liberal high court in 1980 upheld a public works program that set aside a percentage of federal funds for minority contractors.

Schiavone drops out

HARTFORD (AP) — Underdog Republican gubernatorial candidate Joe Schiavone dropped his bid for the state's highest office today and said he would run instead for state comptroller.

The 53-year-old businessman endorsed the front-runner and only other candidate for the GOP nomination, U.S. Rep. John G. Rowland, and said he hoped Rowland would endorse him for comptroller.

CNG consumer violations charged

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — The state's Office of Consumer Counsel wants state regulators to penalize Connecticut Natural Gas Corp. for acquiring the utility of violating the rights of its customers.

The OCC filed a class-action petition with the Department of Public Utility Control, after failing to resolve a dispute between an unpaid bill and the utility over an unpaid bill.

The OCC petition accuses CNCG of violating state law in handling disputes over unpaid utility bills.

According to the petition, a customer offered to pay an outstanding bill in installments but CNCG asked for payments higher than the customer offered to pay, to prevent the termination of utility service. Under those circumstances, state law requires CNCG to refer the dispute automatically to a review officer. If it didn't, the OCC alleges.

The OCC also alleges that CNCG incorrectly states, in its general notice, that customers may request a hearing to resolve a disputed payment when, in fact, the law requires CNCG to automatically refer the matter to a review officer.

"Since CNCG is not willing to admit that it violated a customer's rights, the OCC is compelled to seek a remedy to this flagrant violation of state law by filing a petition," said Valerie J. Bryan, a senior staff attorney.

No one was available for comment late Tuesday at Connecticut Natural Gas. It is important to avoid future violations of laws enacted to protect gas and electric utility customers from entering into coercive payment arrangements, and from unnecessary terminations (of service).

The DPUCL has 30 days to decide whether to accept the petition. If the petition is accepted, hearings will be held.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the court, said:

"It is of overriding significance in these cases that the FCC's minority ownership programs have been specifically approved — indeed mandated — by Congress."

Committee would cut debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush would be authorized to cut debts to the U.S. government by Latin American countries under a provision approved Tuesday by the House Banking Committee.

There was no record vote. Two Republicans, Stan Parrs of Virginia and Marge Rouken of New Jersey, said they disapproved.

Another Republican, Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, joined Democrats Joseph Kennedy of Massachusetts and Esteban Torres of California in sponsoring the proposal.

A subcommittee last Wednesday voted to authorize the president to reduce the debts of Africa and East European countries. The United States and other creditor governments have already reduced some African debt.

But another Republican, Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, joined Democrats Joseph Kennedy of Massachusetts and Esteban Torres of California in sponsoring the proposal.

Louisiana passes abortion law

By Kevin McGill
The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — The Louisiana Senate, hoping to overturn the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision, approved an abortion bill Tuesday that prohibits abortion even in cases of rape and incest.

The bill, passed by the House last week, would send doctors who perform abortions to prison for 10 years of hard labor. It would be the toughest state abortion law in the country.

The House will get the bill again, tentatively as early as Wednesday, to vote on amendments the Senate added to clarify that abortion would be allowed to save the life of the mother.

Then it would head to Gov. Buddy Roemer, who has promised to veto the bill in its present form.

Tuesday's Senate vote on final passage was 24-15, two votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

"We know we have the governor's veto and we know we have the voters to sustain it," said Robin Rotrock, leader of a coalition of abortion rights groups.

But supporters of the bill said they can muster the two-thirds vote if needed.

"We know who we have to work on," said Rep. Woody Jenkins, the bill's author, as he studied the Senate roll call vote.

About 200 abortion opponents packed the balcony and chairs on either side of the Senate chambers during 4 1/2 hours of debate. Hundreds of other people crowded around the entrance to the chambers in the Capitol rotunda.

A few abortion-rights activists in the Senate gallery were vastly outnumbered.

The bill's supporters broke into thunderous applause and cheers after the vote was announced.

Jubilant abortion opponents gathered on the Capitol steps to congratulate Jenkins, while about 70 abortion rights advocates held a march from the Capitol to the governor's mansion a short distance away. They chanted "Not the child, not the state, women die!" and "Pro-life, not pro-death."

At the debate began, Sen. Mike Cross, the sponsor of the bill, held a 3-inch-long pink plastic model of a fetus. "This is what this bill is all about today — whether or not these little boys and girls are going to have a chance to live," he said.

Sen. Ron Landry, a Democrat, offered the amendment to allow first-trimester abortions for rape and incest, but lost 12-27 on one try and 13-26 on another.

Cross said any woman who claims she was raped could go to a doctor who performs abortions and have him back up her claim.

"How would you know? How would I know? How would anyone know?" asked Cross.

"You are voting for abortion on demand. You are voting to kill the bill. You are voting to kill this child," Cross said.

Roemer has repeatedly said he will veto the bill if it does not contain the exceptions for rape and incest.

Cross and Jenkins said they would fight for a veto override if necessary. Legislative historians say no veto has been overridden since 1921. It takes a two-thirds vote in each chamber.

Cross' opening statement drew heavily on testimony from a geneticist, Jerome Lejeune of Paris, who contended that life begins at conception and that the fertilized egg already contains the genes to make a unique human being.

Cross said the bill contains no provision to prosecute a woman who gets an abortion. That would mean a woman could perform a dangerous abortion on herself, said Sen. Cleo Fields.

"We're saying you can go to some dark corner and perform an abortion on yourself and you will not be prosecuted," said Fields.

Although several states have adopted strict anti-abortion laws in the past year since the Supreme Court upheld a restrictive Missouri abortion law, none has attempted to outlaw all abortions.

Idaho's legislature passed a bill outlawing abortion except in some cases of rape, incest, fetal deformity or a threat to the life or health of the woman. But that measure was vetoed by Gov. Cecil Andrus in March.

Also in March, the U.S. territory of Guam approved a law that makes it a felony for a doctor to perform an abortion and a misdemeanor for a woman to have an abortion; it makes an exception in cases in which the woman's life is threatened. That law is on hold until it is challenged in court.

Tuesday's debate in Louisiana came one day after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Minnesota and Ohio laws requiring minors to get permission from their parents or a judge before having an abortion.

Louisiana abortion-rights advocates said the Minnesota decision showed that the high court is unwilling to bar all access to abortions, and is unlikely to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which established women's abortion rights.

Cross said the decision merely boosted his argument that exceptions shouldn't be included in the Louisiana law.

"To find out that the Supreme Court really believes (about abortions), we need a law that flies in the face of Roe vs. Wade," he said.

EC urges South Africans to renounce all violence

By Maureen Johnson
The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland — The 12-nation European Community on Tuesday called on all South Africans to renounce violence in a declaration that Britain said was directed squarely at Nelson Mandela's African National Congress.

But the leaders of the trade bloc, at the end of a two-day summit, refused to ease sanctions against South Africa's white-led government, saying they need "further clear evidence" that changes to end apartheid will continue.

The statement came as Mandela was being honored on a visit to the United States, where he is called for sanctions to be maintained. But Mandela also caused unease in Washington by his continued refusal to renounce violence.

The European Council calls on all parties... to refrain from violence or advocacy of violence," the communiqué said.

The leaders described South African President F.W. de Klerk as a man of "forethought and courage" and said Mandela has "inspired millions of South Africans opposed to apartheid."

But in effect, the community stuck to a position adopted at a summit in Strasbourg, France, six months ago. Since then, de Klerk has begun a reform program, including releasing Mandela after 27 years in jail, legalizing the ANC and scrapping some apartheid laws.

Britain, backed by Portugal, argued that de Klerk deserved a specific reward. But Ireland and Denmark were adamant that sanctions remain.

Britain, Italy, Spain and Portugal have already lifted some relatively minor restrictions.

But unanimous support by the EC nations is needed to end joint embargoes imposed in 1980 that banned imports of South African iron, steel and gold coins.

On Soviet aid, the community ordered its executive commission to study the matter with the World Bank and other international agencies.

Mor of the leaders opposed giving money to the Soviet Union with the clear idea of how it would be used.

"It wouldn't be responsible for the community to fix a budget without knowing the needs," said Spain's prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez.

In a related development, a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman said $3.14 million for a set of 42 colored lithographs by Marc Chagall. The company said the unwanted byproduct that the Environmental Protection Agency considers to be a probable cause of cancer.

The federal Centers for Disease Control, however, says it cannot study the health effects of Agent Orange exposure on veterans because it is impossible to determine reliably who was exposed when jungle were sprayed to deprive enemy troops of cover.

Veterans groups contend that military records can match spraying activities with troop movements.

Zumwalt, who commanded naval forces in Vietnam, reported to Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward J. Derwinski in May that the government and industry "intentionally manipulated or withheld compelling information on the adverse health effects" associated with exposure to the ingredients of Agent Orange.

Key among those ingredients is dioxin, although scientists at Tuesday's hearing said other contaminants may also be blamed for cancers, birth defects and other ailments.

The flawed scientific studies and manipulated conclusions are not only unduly denying justice to Vietnam veterans suffering from exposure to Agent Orange, they are now standing in the way of a full disclosure to the American people of the likely health effects of exposure to toxic dioxin," said Zumwalt.

He reiterated charges by outside scientists that two influential industry-sponsored studies on plant accidents used fraudulent data, and that scientists refuse to use animal data clearly showing a connection between dioxin exposure and disease.

"While dioxin apologists concede dioxin's carcinogenic effects on animals, they insist that humanity has a miraculous dispensation from the harmful effects dioxin wrecks on our species of life in the animal kingdom," he said.

Derwinski retained Zumwalt last fall as an unpaid adviser to help resolve the Agent Orange question, which has been debated for two decades.

Auction pulls painting

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — Sotheby's auction house pulled a painting attributed to Vincent van Gogh out of a sale Tuesday after the Amsterdam museum devoted to the artist warned it could be a fake.

The small picture of a house with a red roof between trees and two figures on a path, titled "The Steps at Auvers" (L'Escalier a Auvers), had been estimated at $3.5 to $5.2 million in the Tuesday night sale of impressionist and modern art.

The unidentified seller bought it in 1984 at Sotheby's for 430,000 pounds, then worth about $602,000. If it is proved to be a fake, its value would be no more than 5,000 pounds, or about $8,500, as a curiosity.

The five-year period needed for a claim has expired, the seller has no right to seek compensation from the auction house but a Sotheby's statement said: "We do consider our moral obligations."

"The charrade is finally over," chortled Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J.

The other shoe raised in the 1988 presidential campaign had dropped," Torricelli said. "George Bush has announced that he's raising taxes."

Michael Dukakis, the Democrat who lost to Bush, lamented, "I told Bush did not and we're all now going to have to pay the price for that."

Republicans, mindful that they will have to answer to voters in November, staged a quick revolt against Bush's tax conversion.

A letter circulated by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., a member of the House GOP leadership, declared, "Mr. President, we were stunned by your announcement... A tax increase is unacceptable."

Ninety Republicans — more than half of the 176 House GOP members — hurried to sign the letter.

The White House quickly began to backpedal to deal with panicky Republicans. Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, assured Republicans that nothing had really changed that the president's statement "doesn't mean anything new."

A cautious leader, Bush changed his mind on taxes not in a sudden swoop but slowly, step by step.

When he first took office, it appeared the deficit problem had peaked, stabilizing at about $150 billion before beginning to nose down.

Bush held the line on taxes his first year, but then submitted a budget to Congress last January that proposed $13 billion in increases. He called them something else — revenue enhancers and higher user fees.

Instead of improving, though, the deficit crisis worsened, largely because of sluggish economic growth and higher-than-expected interest rates.

The latest estimate, both from the White House and Congress, is that unless something is done, the deficit will soar past $200 billion when the year ends.

Since Derwinski took over last year as head of the Veterans Affairs Department, compensation to veterans has begun.

Without stating outright that Agent Orange exposure was the cause, the VA has decided to compensate the few thousand veterans with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and soft-tissue sarcomas, both rare forms of cancer.

Zumwalt said in his report May 5 to Derwinski that based on his review of scientific literature, those two cancers and 25 other afflictions should be considered to be linked to Agent Orange.

The farm-chemical industry believes further research into 2,4-D is needed, but the "weight of the evidence" so far indicates the risk of harm is relatively small if it exists at all, industry spokesman Gerry Hamlin said in a telephone interview from Indianapolis.

Bush spins about-face on taxes: increase required

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George Bush's taming cry of "read-my-lips, no-new-taxes" proved to be a dandy political slogan but a woefully inadequate prescription for the economy. Slammed by huge budget deficits that kept getting worse, the president finally shut his mouth.

To the delight of Democrats and the despair of Republicans, Bush conceded Tuesday that higher taxes would be required — yes, required — if there's to be any hope of getting the deficit under control.

It was a major about-face for Bush, who had steadfastly argued during the presidential campaign and at the White House that higher taxes would rob the country of economic growth.

Putting the bad face on developments, the White House said Bush pounds down worth about $602,000. If it is proved to be a fake, its value would be no more than 5,000 pounds, or about $8,500, as a curiosity.

Zumwalt blasts House on Agent Orange dangers

By Robert Greene
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A former commander who ordered the spraying of Agent Orange in Vietnam says veterans aren't the only ones to suffer from the chemical's effects. He urged Congress to recognize the herbicide's trail of cancer and birth defects.

Testifying Tuesday before a House Government Operations subcommittee, retired Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. said the government's attitude casts doubt on how honestly it is dealing with dioxin exposure in the environment.

Agent Orange, used in highly concentrated form to remove crops and enemy cover, was contaminated during its manufacture with dioxin, an unwanted byproduct that the Environmental Protection Agency considers to be a probable cause of cancer.

The federal Centers for Disease Control, however, says it cannot study the health effects of Agent Orange exposure on veterans because it is impossible to determine reliably who was exposed when jungle were sprayed to deprive enemy troops of cover.

Veterans groups contend that military records can match spraying activities with troop movements.

Flood death toll climbs to 24

By Robert Greene
The Associated Press

SHADYSIDE, Ohio — The death toll from the June 14 flash flood climbed to 24 on Tuesday with the discovery of a body at a dam 25 miles south along the Ohio River.

The victim was identified as Jim West, 55, of Pipe Creek, said Chuck Vogt, an investigator for the Belmont County coroner. West's wife, Naomi West, and her mother, Sophie Glazek, also died in the flooding.

West's identification meant that nine people remained on the list of missing from the flood, caused by a three-hour deluge that sent a wall of water crashing down two creeksides.

Vogt said the search for additional victims is now confined to the Hamilton Locks and Dam.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers recently hired a company to use cranes to remove thousands of pounds of debris clogging the locks.

A tube of tiger teeth

By Becky Gomez
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Scientific efforts to save the world's tigers finally yielded tangible results: a wiggly, yellow and black test-tube cub named Mary Alice.

The 20-pound Bengal tiger, one of three cubs produced by in vitro fertilization, was introduced at the National Zoo on Tuesday. Mary Alice, the only cub that survived, was born on April 27 by cesarean section from a surrogate Siberian tiger.

Her birth marks a milestone in efforts by zoos to save rare tigers from extinction using in vitro fertilization. Today, there are fewer tigers in the wild than in the world's zoos — including only 31 black-footed cats, 21 sand cats and 12 pallas cats in zoos.

This is a celebration of what we think is a great scientific achievement," said David Wildt, chief reproductive physiologist at the National Zoo.

Of the 37 species of felines, all are threatened or endangered with extinction except the domestic cat.

Natural feline reproduction in zoos hasn't been successful because most cats are picky about mates and sometimes refuse to breed naturally. Genetically desirable males often are some distance away and transporting them is risky, said officials at the zoo's Center for New Opportunities in Animal Health Sciences.

Artificial breeding techniques have been successful in farm livestock.

IN VITRO TIGER CUB — Michael Robinson, director of the National Zoological Park, holds the first endangered tiger ever produced through in vitro fertilization.

Since 1969, three subspecies of tigers have become extinct, center officials said.

Animals are considered endangered if they are not reproducing quickly enough and if their numbers are declining rapidly.

Scientists have been trying to adapt human artificial reproduction techniques to wild animals for nearly 10 years, said Robert Hoage, the National Zoo's public affairs director.

Artificial breeding techniques have been successful in farm livestock.

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS TO ASK

Retirement living communities vary greatly. As a community offering a full life care program to those age 62 and older, The Arbors believes you should compare retirement communities carefully before committing to one. The first step is to ask the right questions.

1. Is the monthly fee all-inclusive — providing for all housekeeping, meals, transportation, utilities and health-related benefits including guaranteed access to a skilled nursing facility?
2. Can the monthly fee be increased? Is there a limit?
3. Is there an entrance fee? How much will be refunded... 90%... 50%... 0%?
4. Is the dining service backed by an experienced food service company or managed by the community?
5. In case of a power outage, does the community provide light and heat to your private living area as well as common areas?
6. Is immediate occupancy available or is there a waiting list? How long?

Subcommittee gives nod to gun bill

By Matt Yancy
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bill to require a seven-day waiting period for the purchase of a handgun from a gun dealer was approved Tuesday by a House subcommittee.

On a 6-4 vote, the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on crime approved the "Brady bill" — named after James S. Brady, former President Reagan's press secretary who was shot in a March 1981 assassination attempt on Reagan.

Brady watched the proceeding from a wheelchair as the panel defeated on a 5-5 tie vote an amendment by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., to instead require states to toughen so-called "point-of-purchase" identification procedures for handgun purchases.

McCollum's measure, which was supported by the National Rifle Association, would still have allowed a handgun buyer to take immediate possession of the weapon. After five years, the amendment would have required states to include fingerprints on drivers' licenses as an identification system for handgun purchases.

The subcommittee's chairman, Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., called the amendment "just another attempt to dismember the Brady bill."

I agree it's inconvenient to wait, ... but we're attempting to do something about the carnage that takes place every day," Hughes said, citing the 30,000 victims of handgun violence since the House struck the tougher measure from a draft bill in 1988.

Army private guilty of murder

By Robert Greene
The Associated Press

FORT ORD, Calif. (AP) — An Army private was convicted of unprompted murder of a civilian during the invasion of Panama. Investigators said she was shot during a firefight staged to conceal the loss of a military pistol.

Pfc. Mark McMonagle, 20, of Atlanta, Ga., also was charged with murder in the Jan. 25 shooting. His court-martial begins Friday.

McMonagle, of the 7th Light Infantry Division from Fort Ord, admitted to an investigator that he went to a Panama City bar and met a woman named Finsel, who lost his handgun when the two went into a back room to evade military police.

Sirhan Sirhan Denied Parole

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan B. Sirhan, who shot Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to death 22 years ago, was denied parole Tuesday for the 13th time.

After a hearing of more than five hours in Soledad Prison, Sirhan was told his next parole hearing would be in 1992.

Commissioner David Brown, one of the three Board of Prison Terms members, said parole was denied "because the prisoner committed a political assassination, which is unique in American history."

Brown said another reason for the denial was that the "underlying cause of the offense and the prisoner's role in the offense remain unresolved and a longer period of time is needed to resolve this issue."

Brown did not elaborate on that comment and was not available for questions after the hearing.

Sirhan, now 46, was convicted of gunning down Kennedy on June 5, 1968, in the pantry of Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel. Kennedy, who had just won California's Democratic primary, died early the next day.

Sirhan is serving a life term in prison. He was sentenced to death in 1969, but the sentence was reduced to life imprisonment in 1972 after the state Supreme Court struck down the death penalty.

The parole board had been petitioned by about 40 prominent Middle East officials and citizens. They included two Arab members of Israel's Knesset, the mayor of Bethlehem, members of the Arab Women's Union and officials of Bir Zeit University.

Sirhan's lawyer, Luke McKissack, said Monday the petition suggested that Sirhan's release could speed peace in the Middle East.

Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Larry Trapp said he was surprised at McKissack's move.

"It would suggest that Sirhan should have some place in making political decisions or influencing political decisions," Trapp said.

Armored car robbed of $10.8m

By Hilary Waldman
The Associated Press
ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Investigators questioned two armored-car guards and were expected to give them lie-detector tests after gunmen knocked off their truck for $10.8 million, the biggest such heist in U.S. history, officials said.

The armored car was robbed by at least two men with a shotgun Tuesday after its crew stopped at a convenience store for a coffee break, investigators said.

The guards were forced to drive to a wooded area a half-mile away, where they were tied up, blindfolded and gagged, officials said. The robbers put the cash, in bags weighing at least 1,500 pounds, into another vehicle and drove off.

Neither guard was injured. No suspects have been identified, said sheriff's Capt. Neil Flood.

"There are a lot of questions, obviously, about the manner of the heist," Sheriff Andrew P. Meloni said. "It appeared to be well-planned."

The sheriff would not say whether the robbery of the Armored Motor Service of America truck could have been an inside job.

The two guards, who worked for the company a total of 18 months, were questioned all day and into the evening by FBI and sheriff's officials, said AMSA controller George Clark.

The guards, whose names were not released, are "not really" suspects, the sheriff said. "They obviously need to be talked to," he said.

Clark said the sheriff's office probably would give polygraphs to the guards, who agree to submit lie-detector tests as a condition of employment.

To prevent inside jobs, work crews are rotated, Clark said. It was unclear how long Tuesday's crew had worked together.

East Germans chafe at goods shortages

By Mark Fritz
The Associated Press
EAST BERLIN — Sticking to the fast track toward unification, West Germany has drawn up a plan to complete its merger with the East in December. But East Germans are already feeling the pinch of economic union.

Five days before the two countries create one economy, East Germans are being forced to search for food and other necessities.

"There's no soap here, no meat," said Ines Kroll, a 25-year-old mother of two as she rushed her shopping cart past depleted shelves in the only store in Blankenburg, a small town north of Berlin.

Merchants are shutting stores and clearing shelves to make room for the expected deluge of Western goods. Grocers have been canceling their orders with East German suppliers and letting their stocks run out.

Experts say many East German companies are keeping their products off the market until next week, when they can sell them for West German marks.

Some merchants say they also want to avoid taking in large amounts of East German marks in the days before the nearly worthless currency is replaced by the valuable West German mark.

The East German government on Tuesday announced temporary import tariffs to protect industries threatened by the switch to capitalism after 40 years of socialist central planning.

Amid criticism that the rapid merger was hurting many East Germans, West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel said that quick unification was important because of the unstable situation in the Soviet Union.

"We need to go through the door to unification because it can close shut again," he told reporters.

Germans fear instability in Eastern Europe if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev should be removed from power in the squeeze between hard-liners upset with his reforms and progressives who think he is moving too slowly.

About 380,000 Soviet troops are still on East German soil and Moscow has balked at withdrawing them over objections to NATO's desire that a united Germany be part of the Western military alliance.

Trump saved from insolvency

By Marybeth Nibley
The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Bankers rescued Donald Trump with a $65 million bailout, but the master of the Art of the Deal paid a humbling price, giving up some control over his empire and putting himself on a $450,000 monthly allowance.

The deal reached Tuesday is designed to help the once scorching-hot Trump out of a cash crunch that could have brought down his empire.

A clearly relieved Trump said in an interview Tuesday that he's happy with the outcome and confirmed that the agreement limits his household and personal spending to $450,000 a month for the rest of this year.

"There are certain restrictions," he said. "I can live with them."

Negotiations with his bankers yielded a new five-year commitment that will spread out payments on more than $2 billion in loans over the term of the pact.

The breakthrough in the long talks over the loan and restructuring plan came when lawyers decided they didn't need the approval of a loan bank that dealt with some 65 to 70 others decided to go along.

Attorneys decided that the endorsement of Drexler Bank AG of West Germany, the holdout, wasn't essential, a banking source said.

Because paperwork on the complex deal was not complete, Trump's major lenders decided to forward him a $20 million, 30-day loan so he could make overdue payments on bonds sold to finance his Trump's Castle hotel and casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

The restructuring package contains numerous requirements, including one that Trump sell assets to raise cash, according to the source.

It was not believed that the agreement specifies which properties Trump must sell, but his holdings include Trump Tower, three hotel-casinos in Atlantic City, the Trump Shuttle, the Trump Princess yacht and the Plaza Hotel.

In addition, Trump's rescuers gained some control over his holdings and will closely monitor his personal and business dealings for years to come.

Published reports also said that Trump must stick to a business plan, adopt a system of accounting controls and change accounting firms.

A spokeswoman for Trump, Norma Forderer, said she could not confirm the reports.

The financial foundation of Trump's casino and real estate portfolio, much of it financed with borrowed money, has looked increasingly vulnerable in recent weeks.

A slump in New York real estate and disappointing results from his Atlantic City casino had put a cash squeeze on him.

N.O.W. wants more clout

By Jill Lawrence
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The National Organization for Women said Tuesday that it would support a third party presidential candidate.

"We intend to be open-minded," she said. "Our conclusions will depend upon what we hear. The whole history of third parties has clearly been important in the development of American political life."

She said the Republican Party descended from a third party; George Wallace's third-party presidential bid forced both major parties to the right and the National Woman's Party at the beginning of the century is cited by some as the reason women won the right to vote. Asked about the reaction of the Democratic and Republican parties to the commission, Ward said she hoped they would testify and welcome whatever recommendations the panel develops.

"Surely no political leader in this country believes we have a perfect system," she said. "If they do, they're like Rip Van Winkle and haven't waked up from their sleep yet."

Ward said the difficulty of raising money and defeating incumbents as two major problems for women and minorities. She said low voter turnout was a sign that people are unhappy with political leadership on issues ranging from defense and the environment to social welfare programs and the savings and loan bailout.

Asked about the reaction of the Democratic and Republican parties to the commission, Ward said she hoped they would testify and welcome whatever recommendations the panel develops.

Judge rules out testimony

By Samuel Maulit
The Associated Press
NEW YORK — A judge won't let defense lawyers in the Central Park jogger case introduce IQ tests and psychological evidence suggesting that their low-age clients confessed to crimes they didn't commit.

"I felt it was important for the jury to know how my client scored on his intelligence tests, his IQ," Joseph said. "On the one end you have an Alan Derzhovitz, and on the other end you have my client. He's no Derzhovitz."

Derzhovitz is a Harvard law professor and eminent defense attorney.

The teen-agers allegedly were part of a larger gang of youths who rampaged through Central Park, randomly assaulting or trying to assault at least eight people they encountered.

A witness testified Tuesday that he and his fiancée narrowly escaped that night from a mob of 30 or 40 teen-agers — the same group prosecutors say attacked the jogger about 30 minutes later.

The jogger, an investment banker who was then 28, was gang-raped, beaten, and left for dead in a puddle of mud and blood.

She suffered brain damage and cannot recall what happened to her that night, Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer told the jury.

Gerald Maloney, 35, an advertising executive, testified that he and his fiancée, Patricia Dean, were riding a tandem bicycle in the park that night when they spotted the mob.

They were spread out over the road, and they were making noise.

Asked about the reaction of the Democratic and Republican parties to the commission, Ward said she hoped they would testify and welcome whatever recommendations the panel develops.

DiRosa's civic lesson in action

So, Manchester Democratic Town Director Peter DiRosa Jr. wants to be a social studies teacher at Manchester High School. He doesn't start getting paid for his duties until this September, but let's look at what he is already teaching our children about civic leadership.

The Board of Education in a 5-2 vote hired DiRosa Monday night as a part-time social studies teacher. The former MHS instructor was chosen over 27 other applicants for the job, even though he has not taught in a high school for 16 years. Board members voting for the appointment said his experience as a businessman and town politician made him an admirable choice for a social studies teacher.

His involvement as a Manchester politico is exactly why he shouldn't be teaching this class. A teacher guides pupils not just by what he says, but by what he does. And DiRosa's actions in this case suggest a serious lack of prudence. Certainly these aren't the actions a social studies teacher should be personally demonstrating to students.

Although town directors pass judgment over a variety of issues throughout the year, the most weightiest matter and the one with the most far-reaching municipal impact is the town budget. More than half of that budget is educational spending. DiRosa asserts that he won't vote on the Board of Education budget. Of course, if he votes on the final municipal budget, he will be giving his approval to the education budget as well.

Either DiRosa will, eventually, vote on the education budget — and thus spur a conflict of interest charge — or he won't vote on the town budget at all, thus abdicating his most important duty as a director.

DiRosa says he is concerned about avoiding a conflict of interest, but his concern doesn't seem to extend to avoiding the appearance of impropriety. An article in yesterday's Herald revealed that the department head who selected DiRosa from the 27 candidates is also an influential member of the town Democratic Committee, the organization which is DiRosa's political homeland.

It is a revelation that reveals of political cronyism despite denials by all that any special favors were granted. DiRosa has been around long enough and has enough political savvy to know that his relationship with the department head would be questioned, especially since the propriety of his being considered for the job was already at issue.

Certainly, in the context of a social studies class today's youths shouldn't be shielded from the way a political system actually works. But they should also be extorted to seek the high road should they ever enter politics, and to expect those they elect to do so as well.

DiRosa is teaching them otherwise. His actions demonstrate that, although his character is often vouchsafed for, his judgment is suspect. If he's going to be a teacher, he should resign as a town director. And either he should never have interviewed for the job at all, because of his political ties to the department head, or the department head should have excused himself from the process.

Berry's World

It would be nice, he said, to be home for a change, free of the constant air commute to Washington, living out of a suitcase and eating on the run. Besides, said Dodd, the old notion that it's a step down for a senator to run for governor isn't held there anymore. Sen. Pete Wilson of California and Sen. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire are doing it this year, for example.

This is brand new for Dodd, the state's senior senator and a Democrat. He has been elected to the U.S. House in 1974 and to the Senate seat vacated by Ab Rieboff in 1980. That gave him upper echelon status in the party, but a run for governor? Never a word until now.

"We may be witnessing a change," said Dodd, speaking of attitudes in Washington and citing the Wilson and Humphrey moves this year.

Meanwhile, Dodd seemed to make it clear that 1990 would not be the time for him to try it. The senator understood all along why friends of long standing had launched the draft effort and why it touched off a wave of excitement in the party while he was in Europe on a trade mission.

Let's view COEP differently

Monday evening, the Manchester Board of Education was presented with a report on the co-operative education program (COEP) at Manchester High School. The report was made by the program's director, Mr. J. J. Doherty. It was a well-written, well-organized report that dealt with the program's history, its current status, and its future prospects.

The program is a joint effort between the school and the community. It allows students to earn credit for their work in the community while still attending school. This is a valuable opportunity for students to gain practical experience and learn about the real world.

The report also highlighted the program's success in providing students with a variety of job opportunities. Many students have found meaningful work in a wide range of fields, from retail to professional services. This has helped them to develop important skills and gain a better understanding of their own interests and abilities.

Overall, the COEP program is a valuable asset to the Manchester community. It provides students with a unique and enriching educational experience. We encourage the Board of Education to continue to support and expand the program in the future.

'Dodd for Gov.' has nice ring

reported that Dodd, aware of what was going on, did give the idea serious thought while he was in Europe. It was his decision, finally, to say thanks but no thanks.

The tipoff on what he would say came last week when he scheduled a press conference on his return for his Washington office. If the answer was to be given to him in the state capital in Connecticut. And if he was to endorse Morrison, as an incredible rumor had it, as soon as he got back from Europe, the eager congressman would have been at his side.

While Dodd's statement seemed to be firm enough, some of the language was intriguing to some of us who listen closely to politics-speaks: "Nothing in the realm of politics can be forever... the question of how one can best make contribution is one I periodically entertain... I have no PLANS (capitals mine) to run... my best contribution comes... AT THIS TIME (caps mine) in the Senate... some day I might like to go back and run for governor... I won't rule it out."

I'd say you could throw a cat through the crack he left in the door, although the time for a Dodd move is fuzzy. Some Democrats, not really part of the draft movement, hoped it would be this year.

Clearing 45 years of shame

When some 80 aging Navy vets met in Indianapolis on Aug. 10, the Navy's hatchet job on the USS Iowa investigation will have over them like a dark shadow. These men from another generation know what it is like to be vilified by Navy investigators.

The Navy has admitted that it probably goofed in assuming that a love-sick sailor blew himself and 46 shipmates by exploding the Iowa gun turret on April 19, 1989. Yet for 45 years, the Navy has refused to be candid with the men of the USS Indianapolis.

In 1945, the Indianapolis, at sea after unloading the main part of the Hiroshima atomic bomb on a Pacific island, was torpedoed by a Japanese submarine. In all, 880 men died, making it the Navy's worst ocean disaster.

The survivors felt their skipper, Capt. Charles McVay III, was used as a scapegoat for the tragedy, just as the crew was. The Navy's investigation was called Distributive Education. I was raised in a wonderful family with loving parents, but they couldn't afford to give me the things I needed socially to fulfill my high school years.

Distributive Education helped me through that period of my life, and I am grateful. By the way, do you remember S&H Green Stamp redemption centers? My job was to stamp holes being redemmed and used again. I was also the official floor wiper.

It wasn't a career job — I neither expected nor wanted it to be. But it was a job I will remember with love and pride with great fondness. It allowed me to lead a more normal high school life.

I give thanks for having a distributive education program in my high school when I was a teenager. We should be doing more with the one we have here.

The submarine data was suppressed by an officer who worked for Vice Adm. George Murray, and incredibly, Murray was allowed to sit on the board that recommended McVay be tried. Murray should have been on the witness stand, not in the judgment seat.

McVay's crew clung to lifeboats and debris in the shark-infested waters for five days, and by the time the Navy thought to rescue them, there were only 316 left alive. Yet the high-level officer was ever disciplined for failure to respond immediately when the Indianapolis disappeared.

Adm. Chester Nimitz, chief of the Pacific fleet, decided not to court-martial McVay. But he was overruled by Navy Operations Chief Fleet Adm. Ernest King, who rushed McVay to trial. King should have bowed out of the decision because, when King was a young officer, McVay's father had reprimanded him.

Information that would have cleared McVay was found, but it was secretly edited out of public documents. In today, the Navy has refused to give Kurzman information that might clear McVay.

It makes no difference to McVay anymore. He shot himself through the head with his old Navy pistol on the lawn of his house in Litchfield, Conn., in 1968. Fallen from his lifeless fingers into the snow was a tiny toy soldier he had carried as a good-luck charm.

But justice still matters to the Indianapolis survivors. They had hoped that before their reunion in August, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., would appeal the case to the White House. Lugar had agreed to look into it for them. But Lugar's office told us that a great deal of study needs to be made of the case. A spokesman pointed out that the records are old and the entire matter highly complicated.

Minut-editorial

It is your civic duty to vote in the November congressional election, but the outcome is already rigged. Congress itself rig the election to make it impossible for newcomers to win. The incumbents vote themselves enough money for oversized staffs and limitless mailing privileges. They court voters at public expense. They corner the campaign money from special interest groups. They steer government contracts to their districts to stroke the business people back home. Any newcomer who runs in spite of those odds deserves a medal for courage. It will be some consolation when they lose as they inevitably will.

Thoughts Aplenty

Soccer in U.S. is in need of a pro league

Every four years, the World Cup is played. The top soccer playing nations get together — this year in Italy — and go all in to see who is the best.

United States? Surely, you can't be serious.

The U.S. this year, for the first time in 40 years, qualified for the World Cup. Its stay was a short one. Th Americans, after an embarrassing 5-1 loss to Czechoslovakia — equivalent to a 107-7 loss in football — and a 2-1 loss to Italy, were out of the tournament.

But then the U.S., despite a one-man advantage for over half the game, again was embarrassed as it lost for the third time, 2-1, to Austria.

So much for the U.S. presence in Italy.

"If we lived in another country, we would ask for political asylum," U.S. midfielder Tab Ramos said after the loss to the Czechs. "But since we're Americans, we'll stay in New York, and nobody will recognize us."

Pretty sad state of affairs, to say the least.

What must the U.S., who will host the World Cup in 1994, do so it won't embarrass itself four years hence?

"I think the most important thing is to start a bonafide professional outdoor league (in the U.S.) that plays on grass or turf," University of Connecticut soccer coach Joe Morrone said.

Morrone, whose philosophy always has been to go with American players, says going the way of the old with North American Soccer League, now defunct, just won't cut it.

"When the NASL was in existence, it was a pro league as far as salaries, but the teams relied on foreign players," Morrone said. "There were only 1-2-3 mandatory American starters. We needed a pro league."

College soccer is the pinnacle of soccer in the U.S. today, and it shouldn't be, "the Husky coach said.

Morrone says there should be a steady progression. "You should have youth amateur leagues, youth senior leagues for those over 19," he began. "Then you should have high school soccer and prep school (teams) and then college. And all four programs should lead up to a professional league. You take the best players (from here) and they represent the country."

He sees the process similar to the U.S. picks a team to represent it in international basketball competition.

Only here the U.S. fares a lot better.

Morrone says there are two pro soccer leagues in the U.S. But he qualifies that. "There are two pro leagues, quote unquote," he says, referring to the American Soccer League and the Western Alliance. "But I put quotes around them because they don't pay enough for the players to make a living."

"American players can't afford to train and play on a full-time basis," he adds.

What happened to the U.S. in Italy in World Cup play Morrone compares to like pitting the Christians against the lions in the Coliseum.

"We're playing against professional players like Maradona, who makes millions of dollars, and all we have are college kids," Morrone said. "We're playing against seasoned players and that's the problem."

Morrone says he was disappointed with the U.S. performance in Italy. "I didn't feel the defense was good, and to me you should be able to play defense because you really don't need to have soccer skills to play defense."

"It was the one area we had to play well in and we made too many mistakes. Even if we couldn't score because we can't handle the ball as well as they do, but we should have made them get better goals."

In four years, it'll be the United States who'll host the World Cup. That prospect doesn't necessarily bode well, if you ask Morrone. For one, the United States Soccer Federation is basically a volunteer group. He's not sure if it'll have the expertise to run the World Cup.

"We can't afford to get a black eye because we didn't manage the tournament well," he said.

And most importantly, Morrone sees the U.S. possibly being embarrassed again. "I don't think in four years we'll be in a position to challenge for the World Cup," he said. "But as the host team, we should be able to get into the second or third round. It would be embarrassing getting shut out."

Bosox putting hex behind them

By Dave O'Hara
 The Associated Press

BOSTON — For 34 months the Boston Red Sox' embarrassment grew as the Toronto Blue Jays built a 15-game winning streak in Fenway Park.

But, with a flock of new players, the 1990 Red Sox needed just 24 hours to make ancient history of the Toronto hex.

"We don't have to hear how they beat us 15 in a row relief ace Jeff Reardon said Tuesday night after the Red Sox beat the Blue Jays 3-0 for their first shutout at home against Toronto since April 10, 1987.

The Red Sox ended the Toronto streak and regained the AL East lead from the Blue Jays with a 10-8 victory in the opener of a four-game series. That was with their No. 4 starter, rookie Dana Kieckhefer, who lasted only one inning.

Manager Joe Morgan appeared like a gambler drawing to an inside straight in the second game, sending new No. 5 starter, Wes Gardner, to the mound.

Gardner (2-4) responded with his best effort of the season. In his fourth start since being moved from the bullpen, Gardner flirted with a no-hitter for 4 1/3 innings before allowing two soft singles.

He struck out eight and walked two before being replaced by Rob Murphy with no outs in the seventh. Murphy gave up just an infield single in two innings before Reardon pitched the ninth for his second save in two nights and his 12th of the season.

"I'm trying to plug a hole," Gardner said. "Everybody thinks we need another pitcher. Maybe I'll be the pitcher. I was getting three runs in the first pitch of an inning. It gave me something to work on."

The Blue Jays outscored the Red Sox 126-52 in their winning streak, so David Wells (5-2) wasn't too concerned when Boston scored on consecutive doubles by Wade Boggs and Tom Brunansky in the first inning and Carlos Quintana hit a two-run homer, his third of the year, in the fifth.

But that was all the Red Sox needed for a fifth consecutive victory and a 1-2 game lead over the Blue Jays, who were shut out for just the second time this year.

CAN'T GET HIM — Boston's Wade Boggs slides into second base with a double as Tuesday night Toronto second baseman Manny Lee comes up short in the second inning of Fenway Park. The Red Sox won, 3-0.

"I kept waiting for our hitters to score some runs because we always score a lot in this ballpark, even when we lost 10-8 last (Monday) night," Wells said.

"I had a little trouble sleeping last night because this was a big game," said Gardner. "I just wanted to get through the first inning. Then I wanted to throw a shutout for five, six or seven innings. I made a couple of bad pitches, but the ball was hit at someone."

Wells allowed just two singles after the home run before being replaced by Jim Acker at the start of the eighth. However, the Boston pitcher was too tough for Toronto's heavy hitters.

The Red Sox try to make it three in a row against Toronto tonight, sending their No. 2 starter, Mike Boddicker (9-3), to the mound. The Blue Jays plan to counter with Jimmy Key (4-2).

Balboni learns new tricks as he leads the Yankees

By Ben Walker
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Who says old hitters can't learn new habits? A more patient, and maybe more productive, Steve Balboni singled home the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning and added an RBI single in the eighth Tuesday night, leading the New York Yankees over the Milwaukee Brewers 8-2.

The Yankees, with the power-hitting Balboni supplying singles instead of home runs, sent Milwaukee to its third straight loss in an evening when a power failure delayed the game for 16 minutes.

Nokes connected off Chuck Crim for a 6-2 lead. Later, Balboni singled home a run and Jesse Barfield hit a sacrifice fly.

"Nokes never hit Crim. This was the first hit he's gotten off Crim," White Sox II, Angelo P. The rest of the American League is having trouble trying to keep up with Barry Jones and the Chicago White Sox.

The streaking White Sox led by 9-1 lead built on home runs by Ron Karkovics, Ivan Calderon and Ron Kintz Tuesday night, then beat the California Angels 11-9 on two RBI singles in the ninth inning by Steve Sax, fielded out and Powell, pitching cautiously to Don Mattingly, walked him on five pitches. That brought up Balboni.

"I thought of bringing Crim in to face Balboni, but it was a .198 hitter who he'd punched out before, and I

AL Roundup

Powell preferred to face Balboni instead of Mattingly, who went 0-for-2 and had his average drop to a season-low .256.

"I just wanted to pitch him carefully because I thought I had a better shot at Balboni," Powell said.

Andy Hawkins, like Powell, began the game with a career-low average near 7.00. Except for Dave Parker's solo home run in the second inning and Jim Gantner's RBI single in the fifth, Hawkins was sharp.

Hawkins, however, was relieved in the seventh with two outs, a runner on second and the score 2-2. Len Gutterman (5-2) struck out Bill Spivey and finished for the victory.

Boland's lands in the finals

Boland Brothers, defending Town Little League Tournament champs, moved into Thursday's championship game with a scintillating 7-5 victory over American Legion Tuesday night at Labor Field.

Legion meets Sunnyside Up tonight at 5:45 at Labor with the winner advancing to Thursday's title game. The loser is eliminated in the double elimination play.

John Heits went the distance, striking out 13 for Boland, 16-1. John Solomonson and Kevin Coughlin each tripled and singled to lead Boland's attack while Dan Krajewski, Andy Morgan, Chris Duffy and Nick Odell also hit well. Krajewski, Solomonson and Seth Rattet were defensive standouts.

Rich Griffith pitched well in defeat for Legion while Bob Zimmerman had the big blow for the losers, now 18-1, with his second grand slam homer in the tournament. Griffith, Scott Cochran and Matt Jaworski also hit well while Mike Spencer and Jamie Water played well defensively.

OUT AT HOME — Boland Brothers' Mike Prindiville slides into home, but is tagged out by American Legion catcher Jamie Water in their Town Little League Tournament game Tuesday night. Boland's won, 7-5.

Azinger likes his chances at the GHO

By Tom Coyne
 The Associated Press

CROMWELL — Paul Azinger, his swing adjusted and his confidence restored, likes his chances of becoming the first player to successfully defend a Greater Hartford Open title.

"I'm hitting the ball as good as I have all year, maybe the best of my life," Azinger said Tuesday.

Batting, winner of the tournament two of the past three years, isn't making bold predictions. "A golfer can't say things like that because it will burn him," he said. "I'd hate to say it and miss the cut, because that could happen easily."

Azinger has one victory, three second-place finishes this year and is third on the PGA money list. But until last week he was in a slump.

"I've just been very inconsistent," he said. "I just had a period where I had no clue how to hit the ball solid two times in a row. My chipping and putting were killing me."

"I knew there was something drastically wrong with the way I was hitting the ball," said Azinger, who was considering a swing change. "Doubts started creeping in."

But a friend last week noticed that Azinger's shoulders were too open when he swung, so Azinger moved his left shoulder forward about five inches.

"It took about 25 minutes of hitting it worse before I really started hitting it good," Azinger said. "I started getting the sound that I get when I hit the ball solid. It was tremendous for me."

Azinger said he proved to himself with his second-place finish last week at the Buick Classic that he was back in the groove.

"I have nothing to prove to myself this week," he said. "I'm going to hit the ball decent, but you never know what your chipper and your putter are going to do for you."

Azinger's chipper worked for him last year at Hartford as he sank a 40-foot chip shot for birdie on the final hole to take a one-stroke victory over Wayne Levi.

Azinger and Levi, winner of two recent tournaments, lead a field of 156 into the $1 million GHO at the Tournament Players Club in Connecticut. Many of the tour's top names again stayed away, but Azinger said the field is a good one.

"I hate it when the field is criticized as being weak because there's never a weak field," he said. "If you have the top money winners here, I don't know what else you can ask for. I'm sorry that Jack Nicklaus didn't come or Greg Norman didn't come, but I don't know what more you can expect."

The field includes six of the top 10 money winners, including Azinger, Levi, British Open champion Mark Calavecchia and Gil Morgan, and 57 of the top 100 on the money list.

Hale Irwin, who won the U.S. Open and Buick Classic the past two weeks, is taking the week off.

"I wish he would come," said Azinger, who was unable to catch Irwin in the final round last week. "I'd like to see him go three in a row."

Golfers said some players stay away because of the pace of the course and others because the tournament is between the U.S. Open and the British Open. "They mainly skip the tournaments because they don't like the golf course," Calavecchia said. "Guys on the tour only like golf courses they play well on, and a bunch of them never played well here and decided not to come back."

The course has undergone minor renovations. It plays 255 yards shorter, and the 10th hole has been changed from a par-5 to a par-4.

The course will undergo a $5 million improvement project this summer that includes 11 new holes with the remaining seven.

Court rules Shaw must play for Celts

By Howard Uman
The Associated Press

BOSTON — A court decision that may return a reluctant Brian Shaw to the Boston Celtics hasn't changed their major need in tonight's NBA draft — a guard to revitalize a weak backcourt.

Barring a trade, the Celtics have the 19th choice. By then, the top guards like Gary Payton, Dennis Scott and Chris Jackson will be gone. Those who might be available are point guards Bibbo Coles of Virginia Tech and Dee Brown of Jacksonville and shooting guard Brian Oliver of Georgia Tech.

The decision that Shaw must play for the Celtics next season doesn't guarantee that he will. So the Celtics still may need a point guard in case he spends a second season in Italy.

U.S. District Judge A. David Mazzone ruled Tuesday after a 75-minute hearing that Shaw must honor a five-year, $6.2 million contract he signed Jan. 26 with Boston and terminate a two-year, $1.7 million deal with Italian club Lazio in Italy that he signed last August.

"I can't say that" Shaw definitely will play for Boston next season, Celtics general manager Pat Riley said, "but it's certainly a major step toward us working from in preparing for the draft."

Shaw, the Celtics' first-round pick in 1989 from California-Santa Barbara, had a successful rookie season and was considered a cornerstone of Boston's future.

The Celtics needed a guard before last year's draft, but those who might be available are point guards Bibbo Coles of Virginia Tech and Dee Brown of Jacksonville and shooting guard Brian Oliver of Georgia Tech.

McEnroe looks to get act together

By Rob Glosier
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — His confidence shaken and his on-court game in tatters, John McEnroe realizes he must start all over.

"I'll try to get my act together," a somber McEnroe said after his earliest Wimbledon exit since 1978.

"You know, this is a long-term project. There's a lot of act to get together."

The fourth seed was crushed 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 by Derrick Rostagno, ranked 129th. McEnroe was one of a record six men's seeds who didn't make it past the first round.

"I feel pretty strongly that this is just the beginning" of a comeback. "But if I take a couple of steps in the wrong direction, in my opinion I'll be out of the game in six months."

He argued a few fine line calls. McEnroe's problem Tuesday was not his infamous temper. It was an absence of the famous talent that led him to three Wimbledon titles in the early 1980s.

The loss to Rostagno marked only the eighth time in McEnroe's 14-year career that he has bowed out of a Grand Slam tournament before the fourth round. Six of his early exits have come since 1986, and McEnroe has now played 14 consecutive Grand Slams without a title, his longest such drought.

"I don't think I'm real old," he said. "It's not too late for me, as far as I'm concerned, and I'm a matter of doing it — it's that simple."

McEnroe was joined on the sidelines by four other men's seeds, including No. 5 Andrei Gornec and No. 6 Tim Mayotte.

Gornec, a clay-court specialist from Ecuador who won the French Open earlier this month, was sluggish in a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 loss to American Jim Grabb. Mayotte, who usually is at his best on grass, lost 4-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-3 to South African Gary Muller.

Other seeds eliminated Tuesday were No. 12 Pete Sampras and No. 14 Petr Koranda. Third seed Stefan Edberg and No. 13 Michael Chang each needed four sets before advancing into the second round.

While American veterans McEnroe and Mayotte are out, the future looks bright for young Floridians Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati. Capriati, 14, became the youngest winner in Wimbledon history by blasting Canada's Helen Kolesi 6-3, 6-1 on Centre Court, "a moment I'll never forget."

Seles, 16, the third-seeded Yugoslav who now lives in Florida, won the last 10 games of her match against Maria Strandlund to win 6-2, 6-0 in 51 minutes, overpowering the Swede with her two-fisted shots.

"We hold that benign race-conscious measures mandated by Congress — even if those measures are not remedial in the sense of being designed to compensate victims of past governmental or societal discrimination — are constitutionally permissible to the extent that they serve important governmental objectives within the power of Congress and are substantially related to achievement of those objectives."

Schiavone

Schiavone also said that the office of comptroller is more suited to his skills, background and aptitude. He said he had spent $1.3 million of his own money on his bid for governor. He said he would spend more if he had to in his next bid, estimating a successful bid would cost $350,000 to $500,000.

Schiavone had formally entered the race in January, although he had been raising money and organizing since the spring of last year.

"The odds of my being governor are less than my being comptroller," Schiavone said. "You don't have to be governor to do something" for the state.

His business background, he said, gives him the expertise to "straighten out the financial mess in this state."

He said he hopes Rowland will "use me as a financial expert" in his administration.

During his campaign, he consistently slammed the Republican organization in the state for allegedly trying to keep the nominating process closed. For that he blamed state GOP Chairman Richard Foley, whom Schiavone said was privately backing Rowland.

Schiavone renewed that criticism today, although he said he hopes Foley will back his bid for comptroller.

Foley, who stood at the back of the room during Schiavone's news conference, said afterward that Schiavone's move "certainly has the potential of a healing action."

He strongly hinted that he would back Schiavone for comptroller, but said others had privately expressed an interest in the nomination.

China releases prisoner

HONG KONG (AP) — China has released from prison a key adviser to Zhao Ziyang, who was ousted as Communist Party chief for supporting some goals of last year's crushed pro-democracy movement, a newspaper reported today.

Bao Tong had been private secretary to the former party chief as well as heading a party think tank on reform.

Town hall

aid Raymond Roy, of 30 Eva Drive. "Our public officials are spending beyond the means the taxpayers can afford to pay," he said. "It's getting to the point where you're just picking our pockets clean."

"Where should people meet? Should they open up an office, clear someone's desk, drag a desk into a hall?" he asked.

Adding to Boos' arguments about the need for space, Town Finance Director Boyce Spinelli assured the crowd that the project cost will not drive up the amount of tax dollars which are used annually to pay off the town's debt.

Instead, bonding of the work would delay for about five years the severe reductions projected in the debt service. Assuming there are no new debts and money is not borrowed for town hall, the debt will be balanced at zero in 20 years, according to a report issued by Spinelli.

Not surprisingly, even with the presentations from Boos and Spinelli, the local critics remained unconvinced.

"This proposed complex is too big, much too big, and too big means too expensive," said Al Lutz, a constant critic of the plan.

Another opponent, Robert Samuelson, said, "The project overwhelms the site. What started out to be an actual need for town clerk space has grown to be a monster."

After the hearing Town Manager Richard Sartor said he had to support the project because of the critical need for space and upgraded facilities.

Sartor was joined by Planning Director Mark Pellegrini and Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Mara.

"This is the time when the Board of Directors will have to make a decision," Sartor said.

Osella proposes special rec fund

when and if the town decides to build a municipal golf rink or a second golf course in the southern part of town.

A second part of the Osella proposal is to implement a so-called round-up program for town billings.

The voluntary program encourages residents to round up to the next dollar the amount they owe on municipal water bills. The additional money goes to a special fund.

Osella noted that a program started in 1981 in the city of Irving, Texas, has generated $90,000.

Another component of the Osella plan is to establish a park and recreation non-recurring expense fund.

The pool of money would be similar to the capital improvement reserve fund of the general fund, but because it would be separate, its balance could be used only for parks and recreation projects.

Osella suggested that initial deposits to the fund would be the amount proposed for park and recreation capital projects, some state contributions for local capital projects, as much as one-quarter mill of tax revenue, and private contributions, such as those from a round-up program.

The quarter-mill tax effort makes up the last part of Osella's plan.

When he presented the plan to the Advisory Park and Recreation

Commission last week, he noted that his proposal for the capital expense fund had been endorsed by the commission as well as the director of the Parks and Recreation Department.

However, it was voted down by the Board of Directors. Members were concerned that the fund would be abused by neighborhood groups that want to make contributions earmarked for a specific project to benefit them.

Osella said while he does not want to discourage any donations, he also does not want to set up a fund open to such abuses.

He asked the advisory commission to respond to his proposal, so the directors can have some grounds for any action they may want to take on it.

Catholic and private schools unite

BRIDGEPORT — Connecticut's Catholic bishops have formed two groups to help foster the relationship between Catholic and private schools in the state, it was announced Tuesday.

The Connecticut Federation of Catholic School Parents and a lobbying group, Parent Advocates of Choice in Education (PACE), will bring a "united voice" to parents of children in Catholic and other private schools, according to a news release.

Matthew Boyle of Monroe, who was named executive director of the federation, said in the release the group would provide new opportunities for Catholic school parents.

"I sincerely hope... that we can bring greater recognition to the outstanding achievements and immeasurable value of Catholic schools," Boyle said.

Chapters of the federation will be set up in the Archdiocese of Hartford and the Dioceses of Bridgeport and Norwich. The Ukrainian Catholic Diocese of Stamford will be part of the chapter in the Bridgeport Diocese, the release said.

PACE, a not-for-profit corporation, will lobby for the interests of "non-public schools" in Connecticut, according to the release. PACE will also "advance the cause of parental freedom of choice in education," it said.

Brother John McGovern, superintendent of the schools for the Archdiocese of Hartford, said today that in Manchester and throughout the state, parents and grandparents of students in private schools will be invited to join PACE as well as graduates of those schools.

He said PACE will be incorporated under state law governing political action committees and is expected to have some impact in state elections.

State Sen. Michael P. Meotti was presented with the Government Seal Against Drunk Driving (GLADD) Award earlier this month in recognition of his commitment and contributions to preventing DWI in Connecticut.

In particular, the Democratic chairman of the General Assembly's Transportation Committee was honored for his efforts to establish a law requiring 16- and 18-year-old driver's license applicants to complete a safe driving and alcohol education program and introducing the concept of "zero tolerance," a measure designed to suspend the licenses persons under age 21 for up to 90 days, if arrested for driving with a blood alcohol content greater than .02 percent.

Ed board lacks book expertise

Asking Board of Education members to approve textbooks is a waste of time, according to Democrat board member Malcolm Barlow. Most members don't have the time to read all of the books and don't have the expertise to judge them if they did, Barlow charged.

"Give me break. I'm a lawyer, not an educator," Barlow said. "What a waste of time to read all of those books."

Barlow complained that much of what the Board of Education does seems to be "rubberstamping."

Democrat Francis Maffe said that he does not read the books that he is asked to approve. "I'm not a qualified educator, so what would I be looking for?" he asked.

"I don't know why we have to approve them," he said. "Think it's a formality more than anything else."

Barlow said he would assume that if the curriculum committee that selects the textbooks are satisfied with them, that they are acceptable and he will approve them.

I leave it up to the teachers because they're the ones that are going to use them," Maffe said.

"We don't have the capability or the time to review every textbook," said Richard W. Dyer, chairman of the school board.

Dyer said he did not like to use the word "rubberstamping" to describe the work of the school board. Instead, he said, "By state statute we have to approve certain things that we don't always have knowledge of."

The term rubberstamp has been used over the years by critics of the school board who said it never opposes what the administration wanted. Dyer said the school board has opposed the superintendent on many issues.

School board members become much more involved in the selection of textbooks when parents object to the content, Dyer said.

decisions are required."

A former teacher, she said one of her objectives will be to seek a change in the law on binding arbitration in teacher contracts to permit towns to override a decision by arbitrators by a two-thirds vote of the town government.

As other priorities, she listed general aid to municipalities, affordable housing and the homeless, assistance on funding state mandates, law enforcement and combating substance abuse.

Googins said that support of those objectives doesn't mean throwing money at them. "The taxpayers' revolt is no myth and we'd better get the message."

Since she has retired as an officer of the Connecticut National Bank, she said she would be free to devote full time to the senate post.

Police Roundup

Man forces check from woman

A 27-year-old Manchester man was arrested Tuesday morning for allegedly forcing a local woman to sign her workers' compensation check over to him, police said. Angel L. Rodriguez, of 374 Hartford Road, was arrested at the Spencer Street branch of the Savings Bank of Manchester after he tried to withdraw most of the money he had deposited in an account last Tuesday. The account had more than $4,500, police said.

Rodriguez was charged with third-degree robbery because he allegedly forced a woman to sign over her workers' compensation check, which was deposited into the account, police said. He also was charged with third-degree assault because he allegedly punched the woman, police said.

Rodriguez was held on a $10,000 bond and is scheduled to appear Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Thoughts

I commissioned a picture to be made for my work on the Friendly Yarn program. The artist depicted a very old man, shoveling in hand, who has just placed an apple tree. The picture is done in black and white, except for the green leaves on the tree.

The viewer is led to wonder if the old man will live long enough to enjoy the fruit of the tree. The caption above the picture states: "I did not find the work empty in my lifetime. My forebears planted trees, and I ate of the fruit. Now I plant, so that future generations will be able to eat."

The picture expresses hope coupled with a sense of purpose in life. Some older people feel their lives had no meaning, and therefore they have no hope and slide into depression. Depression is the greatest killer of the elderly. Hope, together with faith and love, is a precious gift of God. We can be sources and bearers of this gift to others, especially as we give witness to the hope that is within us. When we offer a smile to our friends, we also offer them hope.

New potatoes have sulfates

By Bonnie Tandy Lablang and Carolyn Wymen

Simply Fresh Potatoes. Mashed potatoes and hash browns. $1.89 per 20-ounce package of refrigerated potatoes.

Bonnie: The idea behind these new products was good: refrigerated, prepared mashed or hash brown potatoes that were not dried or reformulated. Unfortunately, the execution isn't as good as the idea. The biggest problem is that sulfates were added to keep them from turning brown.

Sulfates are the only food additives still in use that are known to cause death. Asthmatics are one group of folks who are particularly sensitive to these compounds (sulfur dioxide, sodium bisulfite). But others can have a sensitivity they're not yet aware of.

One-Ida, McCain and Micro Magic all make potato products without sulfates, which I would recommend over these.

Carolyn: I also like the idea of being able to use prepared foods like Mom used to make ready-to-eat from the supermarket refrigerator case. The idea of being able to eat real mashed potatoes without having to peel, chop and cook the spuds seems particularly great. The problem is that Simply Fresh Potatoes' taste is more like instant mashed than fresh real. And instant mashed are almost as easy to prepare and cost less than Simply Fresh Potatoes.

The hash browns don't taste any better than the frozen ones that can be made in the toaster and microwave, and they cost more and have to be cooked on the stove top with messy oil. I, too, prefer Ore-Ida.

Gold Medal Out Flour Blend, $1.99 per 5-pound bag.

Bonnie: Gold Medal's new flour is a blend of oat and wheat flours that can be substituted cup-for-cup in most recipes for all-purpose flour. I say "most" only because this flour has less gluten than all-purpose flour. Gluten is the protein component of wheat flours such as all-purpose that allows pastries and baked goods to rise. While you can make popovers and layer cakes with this flour, they won't be as high or light as when you use all-purpose flour.

Out flour has 3 grams fat and 4 grams fiber to all-purpose flour's 1 gram fat and no fiber. The extra grams of fat that come with whole-grain products such as this are an acceptable tradeoff for the extra nutrients and fiber they provide. This is one product I plan to keep on hand and use for most everything except delicate cakes and breads.

Carolyn: You're right that baked goods don't turn out as high or as light when made with this new oat flour blend. At least, the Toll House cookies I made with this flour didn't really taste excessively oat-branny or wheaty either.

Moreover, since flour comes in such a raw form, it allows you to choose what to put your fiber into. And I'd rather eat flat Toll House cookies than oat bran muffins or pancakes any day.

Louis Rich 90 Percent Fat-Free Turkey Sausage, Turkey smoked, turkey and cheddar smoked, and turkey polska kielbasa, $2.69 per 1-pound package.

Bonnie: If all low-fat products had this much fat you might hear some complaining from me. For while these new turkey sausages do have significantly less fat and fewer calories than traditional sausages, they are higher in fat than you might think. One ounce has 40 calories and 2.4 grams fat. Using the fact that each gram of fat provides 9 calories, 2.4 grams in each 40-calorie ounce means almost 21.6 calories (9 x 2.4 = 21.6). That means a hefty 54 percent of the 40 calories come from fat.

Some readers have asked, "How do you know that's about 10 grams of fat?" The answer is that the percentage of fat refers to the percentage of fat in terms of weight. About 10 grams of each 100-gram piece of sausage is fat, hence 90 percent of the weight is not fat. But, the more fat a percentage of calories. In the case of this sausage, that percentage is similar to a cheeseburger from Burger King.

My advice? Eat this and any other high fat foods in moderation. Carolyn: Turkey quiche and turkey gumbo may not sound too appetizing. But if the turkey you make them from is one of these new turkey sausages from Louis Rich, then these dishes should come out surprisingly good.

Somehow Rich was able to make these new products out of the traditionally dry, dull white remaining turkey's good fatty taste and consistency. If turkey was always this moist and fatty, it'd be an endangered species. And if all lower fat products tasted this good, you'd hear no more complaining from me.

New charcoal out

Old Time Charcoal, a new product from Connecticut Charcoal Co. of Westport, is a hardwood charcoal advertised as producing better-tasting barbecue food than ordinary grilling briquettes.

Made from hickory, beech, maple, oak and cherry, the charcoal contains no sand, petroleum, oil residue, starch, lime and other items which can be found in ordinary charcoal.

It is lighter, hotter-burning and longer-lasting than ordinary charcoal briquettes. A 20-pound plastic bag of Old Time Charcoal sells for about $6.50 in most stores that sell charcoal.

For more information on Old Time Charcoal, write the Connecticut Charcoal Company, 8 Wright St., Westport, CT, 06880, or call 227-2101.

A social worker will be sent out to appraise your neighbors' needs. Most communities have a visiting nurse service for elderly or physically challenged people who require daily care.

Bless you for caring enough about your neighbors to have written to me.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married to "Mr. Right" very soon. We've been very serious for two years. Mr. Right was formerly married to "Mrs. Wrong." They have two children. The problem is his mother. She insists on keeping several pictures of Mr. Right with Mrs. Wrong conspicuously displayed in her home.

—even though she claims not to care for her. I know it's her home, but this has bothered me for two years now. Since I am engaged to her son, I feel very offended and have told my fiancée that I will not visit his mother after we are married if she doesn't remove those pictures.

WHAT SHOULD I DO? NOT WANTING TO STIR UP TROUBLE. BE true to your signature and let it pass until after the wedding. Then present your mother-in-law with current wedding pictures suitably framed and "help" her select the places to display them.

Then the pictures of Mr. Right and Mrs. Wrong can be retired with other memories of ancient history—possibly a dusty and seldom-opened family album.

Worthless, but pricey gifts

Want a knick-knack, doctor?

I am sitting here at my desk wondering what to do with the latest supply of gifts from a drug company. My take for today is: one plastic ziggie that combines a letter opener with a ruler and a magnifying lens; a retractable ball point pen; a large ball point pen with a felt tip; and the other end; a push-spray cleaner for eye glasses; individually wrapped, strawberry-flavored tongue depressors; and a pocket flashlight.

Each gift is embossed with the name of a drug and the manufacturer's logo. There are also some pretty cute messages of the double-meaning kind. For example, the plastic magnifying glass says, "Take a close look... at the drug; the eyeglasses squarer says, "One little squint is all it takes..." for a vaccine.

I did nothing to receive these gifts — except to have an M.D. after my name. Nevertheless, company representatives called "detail" men and women regularly break down my doors merely to spend a few moments with me.

The hitch, of course, is the pitch: Each rep wishes to push the O.N. button and deliver a memorized, earnest, pseudo-scientific appeal for me to prescribe the company's latest product, samples of which are mine for the asking — and, sometimes, even when I don't ask. Furthermore, doctor, as an expression of our appreciation, please accept this pen.

If I were a high-priced specialist, the pharmaceutical industry would really reward me: free dinners, expense-paid "seminars" in big-name hotels, and actual hard currency for listening to a lengthy, taped telephone message touting the company's newest miracle cure.

I don't blame the detail men and women for this sad state of affairs. They have a job to do — and it's a hard one.

Next Wednesday, though, he'll be part of a big July 4 deal on PBS — a 90-minute musical celebration, "A Capitol Fourth 1990." Hosted by Beverly Sills and broadcast live from Washington, D.C., it'll start at 8 p.m. EDT.

Remove roast. Place on a grill heated to medium-hot. Grill each side for 10 minutes. Check for doneness. Remove roast to serving platter. Carve around the country. The cost adds up, day after day, year after year.

Isn't there, I ask the rep (who shrugs his shoulder), a more suitable way to spend this money? How about discontinuing the Mardi Gras giveaway mentality and using the savings to reduce the exorbitant cost of prescription drugs? Feed the homeless? Contribute to AIDS research? I guess I don't understand modern medical marketing and, the way things are going, I'm not sure I want to either.

Elderly friends worry students

DEAR ABBY: I just came back from helping an elderly neighbor lift her invalid husband off the couch and onto the bed to be "changed." (This is the third time this morning.)

My husband and I are graduate students who work night and day, and he's home at night, grabbing a quick bite or typing a last-minute paper.

When we rented this apartment, we gave our telephone number to this elderly neighbor and told her to call us when her husband had fallen. He has gotten himself into some strange positions; once his head was wedged between the sofa and the coffee table. He's a very large man, and she can't handle him alone. No other neighbors seem willing to help, and there's no family nearby.

We now are called several times during the day and at night, too. Also, their apartment is becoming a health hazard with piles of soiled diapers all over the place. (The odor and flies are terrible!)

We will be moving after we graduate, and we're concerned about what will happen to this couple after we move. Please help.

DEAR FEELING HELPLESS: Don't wait another day. Call your county social services department (some times listed under "family services") and explain the situation.

The "Spreadery" book includes step-by-step instructions for creating and serving appetizers, soups, breads, sandwiches and salads.

The "glitch" Each recipe uses a new Kraft product line called "Spreadery Cheese Snack," a plastic dish of soft cheese which sells for about $2.20 in most grocery stores. It comes in seven flavors: medium Cheddar, mild Mexican, port wine, classic ranch, mild cheddar, garden vegetables and garlic & herb.

To order the booklet, send your name, address, zip code and $1.00 for postage and handling to: Easy Recipe Ideas, P.O. Box 8450, Clinton, Iowa, 52736-8450.

Springsteen lends hit song to 2 Live Crew for parody

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The rap group 2 Live Crew, whose "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" album was declared obscene in South Florida, will parody the Bruce Springsteen hit "Born in the U.S.A." as "Banned in the U.S.A."

Springsteen was comfortable with the lyrics and agreed to use of the parody, spokeswoman Marilyn Laverty said Tuesday.

Jack Thompson, the lawyer who led the campaign that got the 2 Live Crew album declared obscene, objected to the parody. "Mr. Springsteen, you're now harmful to the women and children who have bought your albums," he said in a letter.

Dolan said Nike's relationship with Lewis began in 1981 when he approached the company.

Segregation issue new movie CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Sidney Poitier will play Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall in a $10 million ABC miniseries, "Separate But Equal."

The four-hour production to be filmed in South Carolina beginning in August will center on a landmark school desegregation case of the 1950s, director George Stevens Jr. said Tuesday.

Marshall, then an attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, argued the case for better schools brought by black residents of Sumnerston, S.C.

The case eventually was consolidated with four other cases to become the 1954 Supreme Court decision Brown vs. Board of Education. In that decision, the high court found school segregation unconstitutional.

The movie will air in April.

Explaining the new tax rules

This is part one of a two-part series on taxes.

Check carefully to qualify for home office deductions. If you are a taxpayer claiming a home office deduction on the basis of a Tax Court decision that came out in January, beware. Your deduction may not be protected.

The court's decision in the Soliman case drastically changed the criteria for the home office deduction and even loosened up some of the tough rules of the past. Yet the Internal Revenue Service has rejected the decision and follows the old, stringent standards," says tax attorney Robert E. Reetz of Austin, Tex., and a contributor to Bender's Federal Tax Service.

"If you want to play it safe, follow the old test for home office deductions and you'll be protected under the new rules," Reetz advises.

When an individual works at home, the IRS wants to know why. If it is for convenience of the taxpayer ("I don't want to commute every day" or "I can watch my kids more easily"), the IRS will disallow the deductions.

Before the Soliman decision, the Tax Court used the Focal Point Test as the standard for determining if a taxpayer's home office is deductible as a principal place of the taxpayer's business. The Focal Point Test primarily looks to the place where services are performed and income is generated.

Two recent cases demonstrated how subjective each court's decision can be, and how the various courts render unpredictable decisions. One case involved a violinist whose income was generated at the concert hall, yet most of the time he devoted to work was spent practicing at home. The Tax Court ruled the violinist a home office deduction because, under the Focal Point Test, his home was not where his income was generated.

The second circuit court reversed the Tax Court and allowed the deduction.

The Soliman case involved an anesthesiologist who worked in a hospital part of the time, but who also performed part work and administrative duties at home. The doctor would have failed the Focal Point Test since his activities in the hospital generated income. However, the Tax Court abandoned the Focal Point Test and instead established the Facts and Circumstances Test, a set of new, more liberal laws, in determining whether a taxpayer's principal place of business is his home office.

What are some of the criteria needed to pass the Facts and Circumstances Test?

• How much time the taxpayer spends in the home office.

• Business reasons for having the home office. (Convenience is not an acceptable reason.)

• Whether the functions performed in the home office are essential to the business. (The violinist must practice.)

• If the taxpayer has no other facility in which to accomplish administrative chores. (If there is an official office elsewhere else, the test is harder to pass.)

• Whether the office is suitable for business functions performed there. There must be a room singularly dedicated to the business.

• The appropriateness of the furnishings in the home office (A kitchen table would be frowned upon when used in a kitchen, but in an office, it would suffice as a desk.)

Now that more and more Americans are working from home and becoming entrepreneurs, Reetz suggests you should research your home office deduction status and weigh the pros and cons of paying for outside space.

Today In History

Today is Wednesday, June 27, the 178th day of 1990. There are 187 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Forty years ago on June 27, 1950, President Harry S. Truman ordered the Air Force and Navy into the Korean conflict following a call from the U.N. Security Council for member nations to help South Korea repel an invasion from the north.

On this date: In 1844, Mormon leader Joseph Smith was killed by a mob in Carthage, Illinois. In 1880, author-lecturer Helen Keller, who lived most of her life without sight or hearing, was born in Tuscomb, Ala.

Cosby's new "Ghost Dad," generally seem to use the whole range of instruments and have a rich, natural, non-synthesized sound.

It may therefore sadden feds of computer music to learn that Mancini, the graduate of big bands, uses synthesizers. "I've been using them since the first time they came out, in one way or another," he says. "They get interesting sounds, and they get better and better. I use them in conjunction with an acoustic orchestra."

Here's? No, says the composer: "I just think they give you a much bigger palette to work from."

Elsewhere in television... YOU VIEWER, ME: JANE: NBC News, after thinking things over, has decided to call Jane Pauley's five summer specials "Real Life. With Jane Pauley," and then appear July 24, Aug. 7, Aug. 21 and Sept. 4. The shows are be about American lives in the '90s.

SAWYER RETURNS FROM IRAQ: Diane Sawyer returned Monday from Iraq, where she interviewed the country's president, Saddam Hussein. Thursday's edition of "PrimeTime Live" on ABC

Musician's childhood: July 4th not a big deal

By Jay Sharbutl The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When Henry Mancini was a kid in the steel town of Alliquipp, Pa., the Fourth of July wasn't that big a deal. He recalls no big parades, no fireworks, no Sousa marches.

However, he notes, "I grew up in an almost 100 percent Italian neighborhood" where patriotism was alive and well. "I was at the big events were the August 'festas,' parties celebrating the Feast of St. Anthony and the like."

Next Wednesday, though, he'll be part of a big July 4 deal on PBS — a 90-minute musical celebration, "A Capitol Fourth 1990." Hosted by Beverly Sills and broadcast live from Washington, D.C., it'll start at 8 p.m. EDT.
