Drive launched to repeal illegal alien job sanctions

WASHINGTON — Senators of both parties on Wednesday launched a drive to repeal federal sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, saying the penalties cause discrimination.

"In my view, employer sanctions simply are not worth the price in increased employment discrimination and increased burdens on business," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told a news conference.

He was joined in unveiling legislation that would repeal the sanctions by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M. "I support reasonable measures to achieve the goal of these sanctions," Kennedy said. "In this case,

Divided city Miami awaits Mandela; Hispanics mad

Boston, Washington, D.C., and Atlanta.

His visit here also was welcomed until last week, when he defended Castro, Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat and Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi for their help in the early years of the African National Congress' struggle against South Africa's racial segregation laws.

Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez and four area Cuban-American mayors denounced Mandela for his insensitivity to human rights in Cuba. Mayor Alex Daoud of largely Jewish Miami Beach also condemned Mandela's defense of Arafat and Gaddafi.

After Miami's city commission refused to declare Thursday "Nelson Mandela Day," black leaders vowed to marshal the black vote against the politicians and take it upon themselves to welcome Mandela.

"He is our brother," said Johnnie McMillan, president of Miami's chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "If they say he's not welcome, they're saying we're not welcome, too."

Barry smoked crack cocaine ex-girlfriend Moore testifies

WASHINGTON — Marion Barry slapped ex-model Raheeda Moore to the floor after they smoked cocaine, and he appeared indifferent when she nearly passed out after a "big hit" of crack, she testified at the mayor's drug and perjury trial.

Moore said Wednesday that she and Barry used cocaine powder, crack and opium more than 100 times in 15 private homes, a restaurant and four hotels from 1986 to 1989. She said they were lovers during most of that time.

Moore depicted Barry as a man whose life was so consumed by drugs that he had her deliver cocaine to him at the mayor's office. They broke off their romance but continued to get together frequently to smoke crack, she said.

Prosecutors were expected to use Moore's testimony to introduce as evidence an FBI videotape made last Jan. 18 when Barry allegedly smoked crack cocaine while visiting Moore at a Washington hotel. She was cooperating in an undercover sting operation that led to his arrest that night.

Moore testified Wednesday that as a home after one crack-smoking session, Barry "said he was addicted ... to cocaine."

"He was tired, he wanted to quit" and had "started going to church," she said. The mayor was "talking about getting his spiritual life together."

Barry, 54, has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor cocaine-possession charges, one misdemeanor cocaine conspiracy charge, and three felony charges of lying to a grand jury about his alleged drug use. One possession charge stems from the night of his arrest.

Focusing flaw cripples $1.5b Space Telescope

WASHINGTON — The Hubble Space Telescope is crippled by a focusing flaw that may have been caused by an undetected "prescription" error during the manufacture of polished mirrors aboard the $1.5 billion craft.

NASA's announcement of the problem Wednesday sent a shudder of disappointment through an astronomy community that has waited years for what were expected to be unprecedented views of the universe from the orbiting telescope.

The space agency said the focusing problem in the Hubble mirrors cannot be fixed from the ground and at least two of the five instruments aboard the spacecraft will be virtually useless until a repair mission is flown by the space shuttle.

Plans call for such a mission in 1993, but the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it hopes to make the repairs sooner.

An official of the Danbury, Conn. company that made the mirrors said the flaw may have been caused by a human error in testing of the primary and secondary Hubble telescope mirrors as they were being ground and polished.

"It appears that one of the elements may have been manufactured in the primary or secondary mirror," he said. "It could have been the desired result," said Jack Rehberg, chief of the space science office at the Hughes Danbury Optical Co. "It could have been a human error."

Rehberg said the problem could be either in the primary or secondary mirror or the manner that the two work together.

A NASA investigation, led by Lew Allen of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., is expected to start this week.

Hubble was placed on a 381-mile orbit on April 25 amid dazzling publicity by NASA that the telescope would revolutionize the human concept of the universe.

The telescope, circling the Earth far above the obscuring effects of the atmosphere, was expected to be able to see objects such stars and galaxies that are 25 times fainter than those seen by telescopes on the ground.

For the first time, Hubble would permit humans to look up to 14 billion light years into space — some 84 billion trillion miles. This could give a glimpse of objects as they were just a few billion years after the "big bang" that is thought to have started the universe.

Instead, said NASA scientist Ed Weiler, images captured by the Hubble now will be little better than what can be done by telescopes on Earth.

"It is very disappointing, extremely disappointing," said Kim Leschly of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"Many people were hoping to see new views of the universe. Now we'll have to wait. That's very, very disappointing," said David Koo, an astronomer at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

"Many people were hoping to see new views of the universe. Now we'll have to wait. That's very, very disappointing," said David Koo, an astronomer at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

Hubble deputy project manager Jean Olivier said the misfocusing mirrors were discovered this week, when engineers attempted to fine-the path of light between the primary and secondary mirrors. He said he discovered "there was no single one point ... with a crisp, clean image."

Additional testing showed that the problem was in the manufacture of the mirrors and that there was something that could be done from the ground to correct the flaw.

Blaming the mirrors came as a surprise because NASA had treated Hubble's 94-inch primary mirror as the smoothest large mirror ever made.

But somehow, a mistake was made, said Rehberg of Hughes Danbury Optical.

"We could have erred in the assembly of some of the test equipment and it didn't get picked up even though we've had lots of reviews, and checks and rechecks," he said.

Former mayor runs again

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Convicted felon, radio personality and former mayor of Providence, R.I., Buddy Cianci Jr., announced Wednesday that he was running for mayor again.

"I've been wrestling with a decision to run for the mayor of Providence for five or six years ... it's been a very trying time for me to make this decision," Cianci said in an emotional speech on his talk show on WHJL-AM.

His administration was marked by the convictions of several city workers on corruption charges. On March 20, 1983, Cianci beat up the lover of his estranged wife while several associates and his chauffeur, a policeman, watched.

Cianci pleaded no contest to two assault charges and resigned from office in 1984. His sentence was suspended and he was put on probation.

Mayor Joseph R. Prohio Jr.'s decision to seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination led a cluster of candidates to announce bids to replace him. City Councilman Andrew Annalio won the city Democratic Committee's endorsement Tuesday night. No Republican is running.

Hitler's art worth $6.8m

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge set at $6.8 million the value of an art cache seized by the U.S. government that includes four watercolor paintings by a young Adolf Hitler and photographic archives of pre-war Europe and Nazi Germany.

U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes also ruled Tuesday that the items could have produced more than $1.1 million in income during the years of legal wrangling over their ownership.

Billy F. Price of Houston, who helped locate the art in the early 1960s, had sought to have them valued at more than $30 million.

The latest findings open the way for Price to seek monetary damages based on the income he has not received since the government seized the paintings, said Larry A. Campagna, one of Price's attorneys.

The U.S. government, which can not appeal any of Hughes' decisions in the suit until a final judgment is issued, has argued that Price is not entitled to any money.

The paintings and photographs were seized by the U.S. Army in 1945 in Germany.

The family of Heinrich Hoffman, who operated a photographic business in Europe before and during World War II and who was given the paintings by Hitler, claimed they owned the items.

Price, a Houston businessman and collector of Hitler's work who helped the Hoffmanns locate the art and bought an interest from the family, has been battling the U.S. government for their possession.

The judge last year ruled that the government had no right to the items, in what may have been the first decision favoring a U.S. citizen claiming art pieces captured in a war by the Army.

In his findings, the judge said the value of the watercolors lay in the fact they were painted by Hitler rather than by "an obscure early twentieth-century German watercolor artist."

Hitler's watercolors portray street scenes and war landscapes.

Latin American debt plan called overdue

WASHINGTON — President Bush's proposal to forgive billions of dollars in debt owed by Latin American countries is being hailed as a long-overdue initiative that will help struggling democracies and boost U.S. standing in the world.

The president laid out a package of proposals Wednesday to forgive part of the $12 billion owed to the U.S. government by Latin American and Caribbean countries. Bush said some of the debt could be swapped to buy environmentally endangered land.

In addition, he called for work to begin on a "hemisphere-wide free trade zone" and said the United States would work with other developed countries to channel up to $300 million annually to Latin America to spur foreign investment.

The proposals represented an about-face for the administration. It had been resisting congressional calls for debt forgiveness on the ground it could open the floodgates for domestic demands from groups ranging from farmers to people with old student loans.

The administration predicted that the Latin American debt concessions would have little trouble winning congressional approval. The initial reaction both at home and abroad was favorable.

Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello told Bush in a phone call that his proposal was "comprehensive, bold and innovative," a Brazilian spokesman said.

Honduran President Rafael Callejas termed Bush's proposals "encouraging news," while a spokesman said Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari viewed Bush's speech as a "very important redefinition of the U.S. position regarding economic development in Latin America."

John Reed, head of Citicorp, a large U.S. bank with about $8 billion in loans in Latin America, said he welcomed the initiative as a way to bring economic growth and prosperity back to Latin America.

"The president acknowledged that in this changed world, the United States cannot forget Latin America," said Reed.

He said the proposal would meet some objections by commercial banks to the administration's Third World debt plan outlined last year by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Brady's plan did not address debt owed to the United States and other governments, but rather offered incentives for commercial banks to write off a portion of their $1.3 trillion in Third World debt. Commercial banks had argued that they were being forced to shoulder the entire burden.

C. Fred Bergsten, head of the Institute for International Economics, a Washington-based research organization, said the administration was recognizing that bolder foreign economic initiatives were needed for America to retain its leadership role in a post-Cold War world.

"The United States really had been a laggard in debt forgiveness to world leadership unless it takes a more forthright stance," Bergsten said.

Brady told reporters that the new initiative for Latin America could set a precedent for countries in other parts of the world, particularly Poland. That nation has been pressuring Western countries to forgive part of its $39 billion foreign debt, but it owed to governments, to bolster Poland's struggling economic

Court setting guidelines to shield abused children

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's decision to let states shield children from trauma when they testify in abuse cases is a "victory for children," according to a youth welfare group.

Many states already have adopted measures to protect young witnesses in this growing area of criminal law and now may determine whether their procedures meet the new guidelines set by the court.

Most states permit the use of videotaped testimony of sexually abused children or allow one-way, closed-circuit televised testimony. Some have a two-way system in which the child witness can see the courtroom and the defendant on a monitor while the judge and jury view the child.

The high court said Wednesday such measures may be constitutional, but not simply disregarding the rights of defendants to confront their accusers.

The court in a pair of 5-4 rulings, said people charged with child abuse may ban all soliciting on their property.

The court examined the child abuse issue in cases from Maryland and Idaho and generally heeded advocates of children's rights.

"A state's interest in the physical and psychological well-being of child abuse victims may be sufficiently important to outweigh, at least in some cases, a defendant's right to face his or her accusers in court," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court.

The number of cases is growing. More than 2.2 million child abuse reports were filed in 1988, according to the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse.

"This is a victory for children," said Joyce Strom of the Child Welfare League of America. "This is a step in the right direction of strengthening a judicial system to protect children and acknowledge their special need."

The decisions were not a total victory for the states.

Writing for the court in the Maryland case, O'Connor said states may not simply disregard the rights of defendants to confront their accusers.

States must show the elimination of the face-to-face confrontation is necessary to protect children.

States' bills anticipated to follow abortion ruling

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's latest abortion ruling could trigger enforcement of state restrictions on minors in at least 11 states and is certain to unleash a wave of legislative proposals elsewhere.

At least 23 states already have laws that require a minor to obtain the consent of one or both parents before having an abortion. Eleven states have laws requiring a girl simply to notify one or both parents. A judge's permission can be substituted in some states.

But many of the laws haven't been enforced or have been blocked by the courts, some awaiting high court's ruling.

"These are going to spring to life, and I predict most of the other states will place similar laws on the books," said Dr. John Wilke, president of the National Right to Life Foundation in Washington.

In rulings Monday on Ohio and Minnesota laws, the Supreme Court said a state may require a minor, unmarried girl to notify at least one parent before getting an abortion —

Borrowers will need more $

By Matt Yancy

WASHINGTON — First-time home buyers seeking federally backed mortgages would pay more money and need larger down payments, under legislation approved by the Senate.

The bill also authorizes a $3 billion increase in government spending on housing programs next year. It was approved by a 96-1 vote Wednesday night with only Sen. William Roth, R-Del., objecting.

The measure also would extend for two years the $124,875 ceiling on FHA-insured mortgages that Congress last year raised from $101,250 in most high-cost areas.

Housing Secretary Jack Kemp joined Senate sponsors earlier Wednesday in announcing a bipartisan agreement on key elements of the bill, which represents the biggest revamping of federal housing policies since 1968.

Senate Banking Committee Chairman Don Riegle, D-Mich., said the bill "charts a way out of a decade-long slide that has left 2 million Americans homeless."

"In the 1980s... two-thirds of the families poor enough to get federal help with housing got it," Riegle said. "And, after 35 years of rising steadily, home ownership plummeted in each of the last 10 years."

But private lenders vowed immediately to oppose the Senate changes in the Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance program when the issue reaches the House floor after Congress' July 4 recess.

"The compromise effectively closes the door to home ownership for thousands of American families," said Warren Lasko, head of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

Home buyers with FHA-backed loans would have to have at least a 5 percent down payment and would be required to pay at least two-thirds of closing costs up front, without FHA-insured mortgages that Congress last year raised from $1,500 to $4,400.

Narrower currently can finance all closing costs, sometimes resulting in loans greater than the value of the home, on FHA-backed mortgages.

Lasko estimated that 75,000 to 150,000 first-time home buyers would be closed out of FHA-backed loans. He called the change "the result of an overreaction to the savings and loan scandal."

The FHA insurance program lost $4.2 billion to bad loans in 1988.

Fires destroy hundreds of homes in California

By Jennifer Bowles

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Wind-whipped wildfires, some caused by arson, burned hundreds of homes Wednesday in Southern California.

A 4,000-acre blaze in Santa Barbara County that destroyed or damaged hundreds of homes in Santa Barbara and Goleta also burned a Sheriff's Department honor farm, set a fire station ablaze and forced evacuation of the jail.

The fire is incredible. It came down from the mountains. It spread everywhere. It burned everything in its path," said sheriff's spokesman Tim Crasney.

Fires burned dozens more homes in the hilly Los Angeles suburb of Glendale and in El Cerrito in Riverside County, authorities said.

The Santa Barbara County fire was labeled arson. An unidentified incendiary device was found at the point where the fire started, sheriff's officials said.

The fire closed southbound lanes of Highway 101, a principal north-south California route, and burned a train trestle, forcing a Santa Barbara-San Diego Amtrak train to be held in Oxnard.

The blaze burned in the region where former President Reagan maintains his ranch, but it was not immediately known if the flames threatened the property.

low. Three homes were engulfed and 2,000 residents were evacuated, forestry officials said.

Peter Reyes, 29, was arrested for investigation of arson, said Maria Sabol, a fire department spokeswoman.

The fire hit an area ravaged by a four-year drought, with water reserves at their lowest in memory.

Fire destroyed or damaged 32 homes in Glendale, Fire Battalion Chief Chris Gray said. More than a dozen of the $300,000-$700,000 houses burned to their foundations.

The fire near El Cerrito, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, destroyed 15 homes, said California Department of Forestry spokeswoman Jeanne Gardner. She said no more homes were believed threatened.

Utilities from the coast inland to Las Vegas asked the public to reduce electricity consumption.

The mercury soared to 109 in downtown Los Angeles, seven degrees over the old 1976 mark for June 27. Tuesday's 112-degree mark was an all-time high, topping the old 110-degree record set Sept. 4, 1988.

Temperatures topped 100 in valleys north and east of Los Angeles. Palm Springs hit 116 by early afternoon. San Diego was a record 91. Santa Barbara tied its record of 109.

Farmers oppose plan

By Diane Duston
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soybean farmers say they support the war on drugs, but they don't want the United States to encourage Bolivian coca farmers to grow soybeans instead of the leaf used to make cocaine.

But a House Agriculture subcommittee chairman says the war against cocaine must not take a back seat to the interests of U.S. soybean farmers.

"As long as drugs remain the scourge they are to this country, they must be of highest priority, especially when the threat of competition to U.S. farm interests is minimal, as appears to be the case in this instance," Rep. Dan Claitor, D-Kans., said at a hearing Wednesday of his subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains.

"Soybean farmers want to help in the drug problem. But it's not a good use of taxpayer dollars to subsidize competition if it doesn't reduce drug production," James Lee Adams, chairman of the American Soybean Association, said.

He said his group did not lobby the Agriculture Department to block use of federal funds for U.S. Agency for International Development program in Bolivia that was promoting soybean farming as an alternative to coca.

But Allan Mendelowitz, of the General Accounting Office, told the subcommittee that an investigation of the situation revealed "there is frequent, ongoing contact to Mary Bligh for her tireless work behind the scenes to pull this all together."

Thanks to Tom Colletta, Doti Dienst, Tzou Min Hsiung, Ionis Martin, Adli Laughlin, Keith Merrill, Sophie Mroczki, Walter Miller Sr., and Sandra Wilkes for the on-site demonstrations of their art. Thanks go to all the entrants in the amateur photography competition and art competition.

Budget defended

To the Editor:

It is time for Coventry to wake up! At present our town offers some of the best services in the area. We have hard-working employees and excellent schools. But if certain town members continue to cut the budget to the bone each year, we will lose what our town offers.

We have one of the best town managers in the state in John Elieser. He is hardworking, conscientious, and well-liked, but if he is continually treated as he has been for the last few weeks, Coventry will only be able to say it had one of the best town managers in the state. It is necessary for the people of Coventry to realize that if they are not willing to pay taxes, which are some of the lowest in the state, they will not receive services.

People of Coventry, think do you want to be known as the cheapskates of Connecticut? Do you want your children to go uneducated? Do you want to watch your home burn while the one firetruck is being serviced?

If the answer is yes, vote against the budget, but if you want to make Coventry what it once was, a great town, vote yes (for the budget).

Thanks for arts

Secretary used by Bush staff

To the Editor:

This letter is publicly thank all those who helped to make this year's "Arts in the Garden" such a success. Without the on-going support of the following people and organizations, Arts in the Garden could not take place.

Thanks go to the Manchester Historical Society for providing the historic Homestead for this event. Thanks go to the Manchester Historical Society for making even more beautiful by the efforts of Joyce Trainer and her helpers. The performing groups entertained the crowds throughout the day, and provided patrons with a sampling of the fine talent in our area. Thanks to the Manchester Arts Council for their efforts, and especially to Mary Bligh for her tireless work behind the scenes to pull this all together.

In fairness, it should be said that all administrative expenses went to energy to keep their activities secret. Indeed, the commission was created in 1970 and it issued a similar report in 1975, and nobody has detected any diminishing in government support yet.

Richard Nixon went to court to stop publication of the Pentagon Papers. Jimmy Carter demanded that his Cabinet members sign affidavits swearing they weren't leaking information. Ronald Reagan wired subordinates to his detectors to dissuade them from talking to reporters.

It sounds impossible, but George Bush and the people who serve him appear more restrictive than their predecessors.

NEW YORK — About 55 cubic miles of ice disappeared from a Nevada-size section of the Arctic over 11 years, suggesting scientists should study the Arctic more closely for signs of global warming, a researcher reported today.

The 15 percent decline is large for an area where scientists had thought ice was consistently thick, said researcher Peter Wadhams.

But it is impossible to know whether global warming played any role, he said.

Wadhams, of the University of Cambridge in England, presented his Arctic ice study in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

Scientists predict a gradual warming of the Earth from a buildup of gases such as carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. The gases trap heat energy like a greenhouse around the Earth.

Such a warming could lead to hotter summers, altered rainfall patterns that could disrupt agriculture and flooding in coastal areas, scientists say.

Using data from submarine-based studies in 1976 and 1987, Wadhams calculated changes within a 112,000-square-mile triangle north of Greenland. That is slightly larger than Nevada.

Wadhams studied the thickness of the submerged portions of huge floating chunks of sea ice. That is a good indicator of total ice thickness. He found that average thickness dropped from 17.5 feet in 1976 to 14.9 feet in 1987, about a 15 percent decrease. Over the study area, that corresponds to a loss of nearly 55 cubic miles of ice, he said.

The missing ice did not necessarily melt away. The main reason for the decrease, Wadhams suggested, was that the thick ice broke apart in the months before the 1987 reading. That would have open water that would freeze into relatively thin ice. This would reduce the overall average thickness for the region he researched, Peter Wadhams.

Such a mechanism would have nothing to do with global warming, John Walsh, a University of Illinois meteorology professor, said in an interview. But other factors may have been at work too, he said.

"The jury's still out on this," Wadhams said.

Thinning of Arctic ice could be an early sign of global warming, Wadhams wrote. But it is impossible to tell whether global warming played any role in his findings, he said. He lacks data from between the two readings he sampled or from years since 1987, he said.

The findings show that scientists must do more extensive monitoring to determine if Arctic ice is getting thinner or whether changes like the one he found are simply natural variations, he said.

REALLY THAT HOT — A heat wave that pushed the mercury to an all-time record 122 degrees this week in Phoenix made it literally hot enough to fry an egg in the streets. Even four eggs.

Van Gogh art stolen

By DEN BOSCH, Netherlands (AP)

— Three early oil paintings by 19th century Dutch master Vincent van Gogh have been stolen from a provincial museum in this southern town, the third theft in two years of Van Gogh works.

The paintings taken Wednesday night from the Noordbrabant Museum were identified by the museum as "The Sittling Farmer's Wife," "The Digging Farmer's Wife" and "Wheels of the Water Mill." "The Sittling Farmer's Wife" is a non-traditional expressionist painting by Van Gogh, and that those in the inner cities used to have such mixed leagues.

The number of U.S. buyers rose from 68 million in 1977 to 74 million last year, according to the ABC.

Peter Veendland, a member of the museum's board of directors, confirmed the theft of the paintings, the museum's only three works by the painter.

Dutch radio quoted police as saying the paintings were stolen from the museum 55 miles south of Amsterdam after entry was apparently gained through a broken window.

The museum system at the museum was not functioning and police were called by a neighbor who heard the sound of breaking glass, the radio said.

It did not say whether the alarm was disabled during the theft or was out of order before the break-in.

A police spokesman reached by phone would only confirm that the paintings were missing.

Bowling: sport for all

CHICAGO (AP) — Bowling long ago shed its Fred Flintstone image and its wide appeal is no more apparent than at Marigold Bowl.

"When the guys first started bowling here, it was hard for some people to get used to — like anything new. Now, they are used to it," said Fagenholz's son, Fred, who is Marigold's manager.

Mark Miller of the American Bowling Congress in Milwaukee said, "We'd like to believe that bowling centers are melting away and that those in the inner cities used to have such mixed leagues."

The number of U.S. bowlers rose from 68 million in 1977 to 74 million last year, according to the ABC.

"We had a gay league called in front of us and another after us."

MATING PLACES
Where Americans are most likely to meet their spouses

1. In a social setting (party, bar, restaurant, etc.)
2. In school
3. Through work
4. Through friends
5. Through church or synagogue
6. On a blind date
7. While shopping
8. On a vacation
9. Riding public transportation
10. Doing chores or errands

Parties, bars and restaurants are often the settings where people meet their future spouses. Less likely than for locating Mr. or Mrs. Right are while using public transportation or while doing chores and errands.

Greedy corporate farmers

By Jack Anderson and Dale van Atta

WASHINGTON — A handful of thirsty corporate farmers are robbing the taxpayers and the U.S. Treasury of millions of dollars in cheap irrigation water, because federal regulators refuse to do their job.

Big Western land owners have managed to sop up most of the benefits of a public water program that was designed to help the little guy.

At the turn of the century, Congress decided to encourage family farmers to make the Western deserts bloom. The Bureau of Reclamation was established and water projects cropped up all over the West to irrigate family farms. The promise was that the taxpayers would pay part of the water bill. In its naivete, Congress thought that if it set a 160-acre limit on the farms that got subsidized water, only small farmers would benefit.

But Congress didn't reckon with the ingenuity of the corporate farmers. No did Congress imagine that the Bureau of Reclamation, which was supposed to regulate the program, would crawl in bed with the big farmers.

Earlier this month, an older and wiser House of Representatives voted to change the rules to prevent the big corporations from scamming the government. A similar bill is pending in the Senate. But judging by the record of the corporate farmers, they will soon find a way to get around the new restrictions, and the Bureau of Reclamation will look the other way.

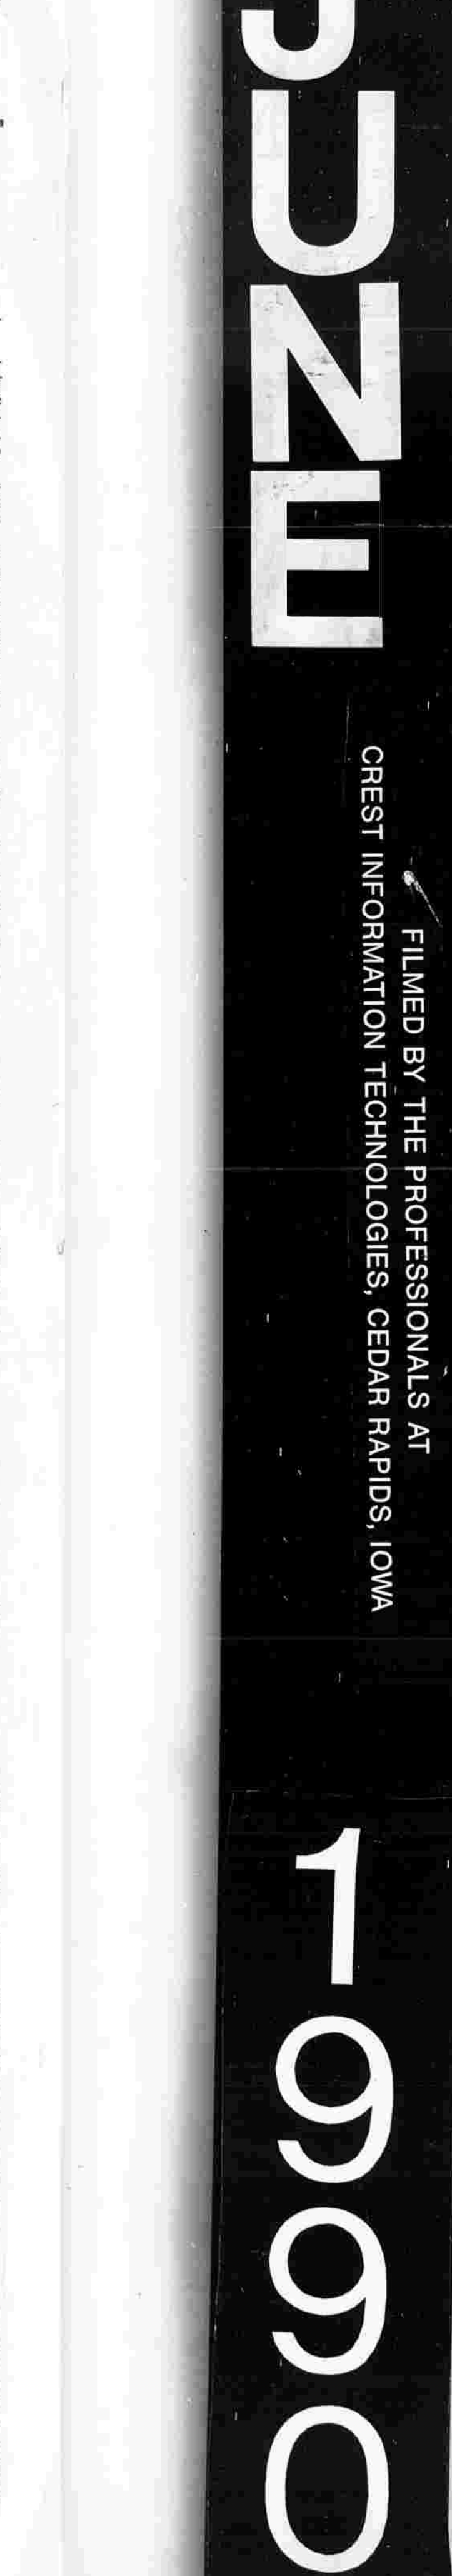

Large landowners used to skirt the 160-acre limit by leasing their big farms in pieces to smaller operators. Congress caught on in 1982 and tightened the rules. At the same time, Congress acknowledged that the 160-acre limit may be too strict, and raised the maximum to 960 acres.

The big farmers simply changed their tactics. They now organize their land in a patchwork of trusts, partnerships and corporations, each owning 960-acre farms.

In one case, eight "farmers" signed up for subsidized water from a water district in pieces to skirt the 160-acre limit. The big farmers simply changed their tactics. They now organize their land in a patchwork of trusts, partnerships and corporations, each owning 960-acre farms.

Bosox playing it cool

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — With a six-game winning streak and a 2 1/2-game lead in the A.L. East, the Boston Red Sox are trying to play cool.

On the threshold of a four-game sweep of Toronto in Fenway Park for the first time since June 1985, the Red Sox aren't ready to claim anything. And the Blue Jays aren't ready to concede anything.

"We try to win every game we can and tomorrow (Friday) is just another one along the road," Wade Boggs said Wednesday night after the Red Sox rode a six-run fifth inning to a 9-5 victory over the Blue Jays.

"First place doesn't mean anything right now," said Toronto lester Timmy Key (4-3). "There is nothing. If we come in here in September and lose three games, it's a big deal. But right now it doesn't mean anything."

"We've got a half year left," Mike Boddicker (10-3) said after extending his career-high winning streak to nine games. "We've got a long way to go."

In ending a Toronto hegemony of 15 consecutive victories in Fenway Park, the Red Sox won two games started by their No. 4 and 5 pitchers in the rotation.

Then they backed Boddicker, their No. 2 starter, with a 13-hit attack before rookie Jeff Gray checked out Toronto in the final two innings for his second save.

Now the Red Sox face ace Roger Clemens (11-3) ready for the series finale tonight. Clemens is scheduled to be opposed by Todd Stottlemyre (7-6).

"With Roger going, yes, a sweep is a possibility," Boddicker said. "I hope so, but nothing is easy against that club."

Boddicker left after seven innings, admittedly concerned about an approaching thunderstorm.

"I don't like lightning at all," said Boddicker. "When you hear the thunder pretty close, it gets you kind of nervous."

After a rain delay of one hour and 40 minutes at the start, Boddicker allowed five runs, two unearned, on nine hits. He was replaced by Rob Murphy at the start of the eighth.

Murphy allowed a hit and a walk, then gave way to Gray, who allowed a hit and a walk to the Blue Jays to ground into two double plays.

"When you give up five runs and win a ballgame, you feel lucky," said Boddicker. "I made some bad pitches but I was fortunate because we got a lot of runs."

Celebrities lacking in Pro-Am

By Len Auster

CROMWELL — They held the Celebrity Pro-Am of the Canon Greater Hartford Open Wednesday afternoon at the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut in Cromwell.

There are plenty of amateurs, and professional golfers to lead off all of the foursomes, but celebrities were few and far between. Of the 52 foursomes that teed off at the 1st and 10th holes, only a dozen included a "celebrity."

"You're not getting the celebrities you used to see," said Sammy (Davis Jr.) stopped his sponsorship. "Jim McKoon of Middletown, who took a vacation day to attend Wednesday's festivities, said, 'I've had a bad patch, but I was fortunate because we got a lot of runs.'"

Wayne Levi

CROMWELL — Wayne Levi said he isn't haunted by the 40-foot chip shot on the final hole last year to beat him by a stroke at the Greater Hartford Open.

"It's a new year. I've won two tournaments this year. You can't worry about what happened last year," he said.

Levi won the Atlanta Golf Classic and the Western Open recently. But he failed to make the cut two weeks ago at the U.S. Open and withdrew two weeks from the Buick Classic after shooting a third-round 81.

Levi, who also finished second to three players in the final round of the 1989 U.S. Open, said he always seems to play well at the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course.

"On a course like this it comes down to putting, and I always seem to putt well here."

Azinger, a Dallas Cowboys fan, was paired in Wednesday's Pro-Am with former Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann.

Azinger said he wasn't a Theismann fan. "If you didn't like the Redskins, then you didn't like Joe Theismann," he said. "But he's a nice guy. He was a lot of fun to play with."

Ken Green, a native of Danbury, said he finally has his mind back on golf after hiding pickup a club for eight weeks.

"I just had to relax and get the demons out," said Green, who finished fourth last week at the Buick Classic after a five-week layoff. "Going into last week I had no idea how I was going to go. I feel a lot better."

His goal this week is to play well before family and friends, Green said. "It'd just like to contend."

Green's best finish at the GHO is 32nd.

Mike Donald said he still hasn't fully recovered from his 19th hole playoff loss to Hale Irwin two weeks ago at the U.S. Open.

"It's taken a lot of me emotionally and physically," he said. "David Finkle, Bert McCoe and Matt Leitch hit well and Brad Linn and Kevin O'Reilly played well defensively for Wawa. Eric Gavvin, Justin Mackinnon, Shawn Lennon and Brendan Paul were the offensive and defensive standouts for Pagani."

The TPC of Connecticut, a frequent target of players' criticism, is drawing rave reviews this week.

"This course is in a good shape as any we've played this year," Levi said.

That raises the question of whether Boston's old and slow front line of Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish can keep up with him. Brown thinks he can provide more scoring opportunities for them by driving to the basket and drawing defensive attention.

"Putting pressure on the defense will set Bird up to a lot more because they have to worry if I'm going to go for the layup," Brown said.

He said he could "add a little more speed to the team. They're known as a slowdown team, but with me in the backcourt and Reggie Lewis' this should change.

The Celtics see him as a multi-dimensional talent who can lead the fast break, penetrate down the lane, dish the ball off, grab rebounds and play tight defense.

"He's going to get up there and get in your face and not back down," Ruff said.

"He's got some feistiness to him and I think we need some feistiness," Givvitt said.

Even with Shaw, Boston needed a guard. The uncertainty about his future made the selection of point guard more critical. Dennis Johnson, John Bagley and Charles Smith shared that spot last season. Johnson may not be offered a contract and the other two were ineffective.

Celtics president Red Auerbach said the Shaw situation had no effect on the choice of Brown. Givvitt said it made it more important to get a point guard.

"It was a consensus of the Celtics' draft team that if we had a shot at him, we must take Brown, Auerbach said. "Everybody saw me play out of position" during the regular season. "Going to Orlando, I got a chance to show I was a point guard ... That's my natural post."

The Celtics thought Houston might take Brown with the 12th choice.

Little League

AMERICAN FARM — Army and Navy downed American Legion, 21-5, Wednesday night. Ricky Smith swung a two-run homer, Chris Champery pitched well for A&N. Jeff Simmons and Chris Mirack played well for Legion.

NATIONAL FARM — Boland Brothers nipped Ansall's, 8-7, at Verplanck Field, Jesse Odell, Joe Cowill, Mike Debi and Noah Volland hit well for Boland's, 9-5-1. Mark Hatfield, Sam Torres and Karen Andrews played well for Boland's. Tom Berube hit well, Danny Lalancetta pitched three strong innings and Alan Ackerman played well for Ansall's, which winds up 7-9.

ROOKIES — Wawa downed Pagani Caterers, 15-12. David Funke, Bert McCoe and Matt Leitch hit well and Tom Cadden and Kevin O'Reilly played well defensively for Wawa. Eric Gavvin, Justin Mackinnon, Shawn Lennon and Brendan Paul were the offensive and defensive standouts for Pagani's.

The second 10 selections in the first round were 6-10 forward Tyrone Hill of Xavier, Ohio, by Golden State; 6-11 forward Alec Kessler of Georgia by Houston; Loy Vaught of Michigan by the Clippers; Mayby by Sacramento; 6-5 guard Dave Jamerson of Ohio University by Miami; Terry Mills of Michigan by Milwaukee; 6-10 Jerrod Mustard of Maryland by New York; Causwell by Sacramento; 6-9 point guard Dee Brown of Jacksonville by Boston; and Minnesota took Gerald Glous of Mississippi.

The final seven first-round picks were 6-10 forward Jayson Williams of St. John's by Phoenix; 6-5 point guard Tate George of Connecticut by the Nets; Bonner by the Kings; 7-0 center Dwayne Schintzius of Florida by San Antonio; 6-10 forward Alaa Adenwalby of Duke by Portland; 6-4 guard Lance Blanks of Texas by Detroit; and the Los Angeles Lakers completed the round by picking 6-11 Eiden Campbell of Clemson.

Houston and Miami made a trade after the first round for The Rockets sent the rights to Kessler to the Heat for the rights to Jamerson and second-round pick Carl Harris of the University of Houston.

Schintzius has the size and ability to rate consideration as the No. 1 pick, but his attitude cut him dearly in the first round.

After slipping to the 24th spot, Schintzius, who left the Gators this season after 11 games, said, "If I had completed my senior year I would have been there. People were sent to take a chance. I have no doubts about my attitude or ability."

With the Spurs, Schintzius will be the backup to NBA rookie of the Year David Robinson.

Cup teams take a break

ROME (AP) — After two rounds of the World Cup, the field has been cut to eight teams. The reward for the quarterfinalists is three days off to plot strategy, heal the wounded and, in one case, see the Pope.

The Irish team had an audience with Pope John Paul II and presented him with a ball autographed by the players and a team pennant. On Saturday, Ireland faces Italy in Rome and Argentina plays Yugoslavia in Florence.

On Sunday, West Germany faces Czechoslovakia in Milan and England meets Cameroon in Naples.

Guards at a premium in the draft

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NBA obsession with size seems to be at an end. Not since the Detroit Pistons took Isaiah Thomas in 1981 had a guard been selected as high as second in the draft.

On Wednesday night, seven of the first 13 picks, including the second through fifth selections, were guards or perimeter shooters.

Even the No. 1 pick, 6-foot-10 forward Derrick Coleman, is far from a plodder. His ball-handling and passing skills, combined with rebounding and scoring prowess, were factors in his becoming the New Jersey Nets' first selection.

The only questions about Coleman concerned his attitude and his personal finances.

"I'm a warm, loving kind of guy," Coleman said. "I think most guys from the inner city get a bad rep. At Syracuse he was a lot better off than me."

The Nets, whose 17-43 record was the worst in the NBA last season, haven't had a first-rate first-round selection since Stephy Floyd in 1982.

"They need a couple of players to help them out," Coleman said. "Hopefully, I'm one of those."

Following Coleman came the run of seven perimeter players in the next nine picks.

Seattle took 6-3 Oregon State point guard Gary Payton and Denver followed with Louisiana State's 6-1 Chris Jackson, a 29-point scorer in his two years in college.

"I'll have to get used to the altitude," Jackson said. "I think it'll be fun playing with Adams. We'll be very quick."

The run of shooters was interrupted briefly when Minnesota selected 7-0 Felton Spencer of Louisville and the Sacramento Kings grabbed 6-7 Player of the Year Lionel Simmons of La Salle with one of their record four first-round picks.

Sacramento, which acquired a starting lineup Wednesday night, also grabbed 6-2 guard Travis Mays of Texas, center Duane Caswell of Temple and power forward Anthony Bonner of St. Louis in the first round. In the second round, they selected point guard Binbo Coles of Virginia Tech, then traded his draft rights to Miami for veteran Rory Sparrow.

"I'm very happy about the situation in Sacramento," Simmons said. "It's beneficial to me because they don't have a small forward."

The Kings traded forward Rodney McCray to Dallas for two of their first three picks.

After Simmons made three more players who will play guard in the NBA.

Bo Kimble, the nation's leading scorer at Loyola Marymount with a 35.3 average, was selected by the Los Angeles Clippers, who can use him as insurance while Ron Harper recovers from an injured knee. Willie Burton, a 6-7 forward in college, then was grabbed by Miami, which acquired the pick from Michigan pick Denver in exchange for Denver's No. 3.

Atlanta, which switched first-round picks with Golden State earlier in the draft, took Michigan point guard Rumeal Robinson with the 10th pick.

Robinson was the first of three Michigan players taken in the first round, matching the most ever from one college team in the same year.

Indiana had three after its undefeated national championship season in 1976 — Scott May, Bobby Wilkinson and Quinn Buckner. Dave Greenwood, Roy Hamilton and Brad Holland, all of UCLA, were taken in the first round in 1979.

The second 10 selections in the first round were 6-10 forward Tyrone Hill of Xavier, Ohio, by Golden State; 6-11 forward Alec Kessler of Georgia by Houston; Loy Vaught of Michigan by the Clippers; Mayby by Sacramento; 6-5 guard Dave Jamerson of Ohio University by Miami; Terry Mills of Michigan by Milwaukee; 6-10 Jerrod Mustard of Maryland by New York; Causwell by Sacramento; 6-9 point guard Dee Brown of Jacksonville by Boston; and Minnesota took Gerald Glous of Mississippi.

The final seven first-round picks were 6-10 forward Jayson Williams of St. John's by Phoenix; 6-5 point guard Tate George of Connecticut by the Nets; Bonner by the Kings; 7-0 center Dwayne Schintzius of Florida by San Antonio; 6-10 forward Alaa Adenwalby of Duke by Portland; 6-4 guard Lance Blanks of Texas by Detroit; and the Los Angeles Lakers completed the round by picking 6-11 Eiden Campbell of Clemson.

Houston and Miami made a trade after the first round for The Rockets sent the rights to Kessler to the Heat for the rights to Jamerson and second-round pick Carl Harris of the University of Houston.

Schintzius has the size and ability to rate consideration as the No. 1 pick, but his attitude cut him dearly in the first round.

After slipping to the 24th spot, Schintzius, who left the Gators this season after 11 games, said, "If I had completed my senior year I would have been there. People were sent to take a chance. I have no doubts about my attitude or ability."

With the Spurs, Schintzius will be the backup to NBA rookie of the Year David Robinson.

CBS adds PGA Championship

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS added another major event to its sports collection Wednesday, taking the PGA Championship away from ABC.

Parker derails

NEW YORK (AP) — One away from his 2,500th hit of his career, Dave Parker told his wife, Kellye, to get to the ballpark early.

"Because I'm getting a hit my first at bat," he said. And he kept his promise, singling to center in the second inning.

In addition to reaching the milestone, Parker went 3-for-4 with an RBI and two runs scored Wednesday night and Rob Deer homered this season, collected three RBIs, as the Milwaukee Brewers snapped a three-game losing streak with a 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

Parker, who had three singles to raise his batting average from .324 to .331, said he "is not done yet."

"Now that I've gotten this far it would make no sense to stop," the 39-year-old designated hitter said. "I'm going to keep this body taped and peddle toward for another three years and work my way to 3,000."

Parker drove in the first run in a three-run sixth that gave the Brewers a 5-1 lead. Deer capped the inning with a two-run shot, his 13th homer of the season, and his fourth in the last five games.

Parker, entering the game as the league's fourth best hitter, hit 17-for-39 (.436) in 11 games.

"I'm still a pretty good offensive machine," he said. "As long as I stay healthy, I'll be fine for awhile. I think I can get to 3,000."

Starter Bill Kreuger (4-3), making his fourth start and 17th appearance this season, pitched 5 1/2 innings and walked one and struck out three. Reliever Chuck Crim, the fifth Brewer pitcher, came in for Don Plesac with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth and picked up his sixth save despite allowing Don Mattingly's two-run single that put the Yankees within a run.

On the previous batters, Crim booted a potential game-ending double play comebacker, first looking to first base before getting his only out at the plate.

"That's nothing new for us," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We like to make it interesting toward the end. We take being in the entertainment business very seriously. We're exciting team to watch."

With the tying run on second base, Crim finished by retiring pinch-hitter Mike Nokes on a weak groundout.

"At least we're hitting now and making a battle of it," Mattingly said. "We're feeling now that we'll eventually start winning the close ones."

Kreuger's turning point came in the with his team leading by only a run, when he escaped from a bases-loaded jam by getting Mattingly to line out to short.

The Brewers, with Greg Brock's RBI double and Deer's RBI single, took a 2-0 lead in the fourth off starter Jimmy Jones (1-1).

Jones lasted 2 1/2 innings, allowing five runs on seven hits. He walked one and struck out two.

Ripken streak is still intact

BALTIMORE (AP) — Upon further review, the play does not stand as called.

After carefully studying the replay and conducting interviews with players and coaches who had a better view than he did, official scorer Billy Steika on Wednesday changed his decision to give Cal Ripken an error on a play that occurred nearly 24 hours earlier.

As a result, Ripken's errorless streak has been resurrected. He played in his 69th consecutive game without an error Wednesday to edge closer to Eddie Brinkman's 18-year-old American League record of 72 straight errorless games at shortstop.

The major league record for consecutive errorless games by a shortstop is 88, set by the New York Mets' Kevin Elster.

Ripken's streak seemingly came to an end Tuesday night when he apparently muffed a cutoff throw from center fielder Mike Devereaux in the first of the Baltimore Orioles' 5-3 loss to the Cleveland Indians.

But after the game, several players and coaches — including Ripken — complained about the call. Steika looked at the replay from several different angles and decided he would rule that Ripken Devereaux and Indiana third base coach Rich Dauer.

"I talked to everyone involved," Steika said. "I'm going to rule that the throw was well off line. Cal had to use a reasonable effort to make the play."

So Steika ended up giving Devereaux a throwing error.

What you have to recognize is that

Thoughts

Comfort
Think back to your earliest experience of a loss. How did you feel — numb? angry? fearful? guilty? Was the loss replaced? Do you receive any comfort from parents, friends, others?

Can we imagine how it feels to lose everything? People who are moved into nursing homes often do. Only a few things can be brought with them. The rest often goes to strangers in garage sales or are discarded. With them go memories and the roots of one's life.

Friends may not visit as often. Sixty percent (60%) of nursing home residents receive no visitors. One resident did not have a visitor in fifteen years. How can people work through losses alone? God has created us to live in community so that we can rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep.

Can we take a few moments out of busy lives each week to visit with a lonely nursing home resident? A few minutes of our time and support can make a big difference. We can be comforters to those whose society overlooks.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Last wishes go unrespected

DEAR ABBY: Our father died in a nursing home last winter. He was 87 and had practiced medicine for more than 40 years.

Because of Dad's failing health and multiple complications, specific instructions had been given to the nursing home medical staff by our family and Dad's longtime physician that no extraordinary measures be taken to prolong Dad's life. Dad wanted to die with dignity. Our problem arose because the attending physician failed to put Dad's wishes in writing on his chart.

"When Dad went into congestive heart failure in the nursing home, the head nurse was heard to say, 'We rescue squad was called, and upon their arrival at the nursing home, they found Dad unresponsive, with no pulse. In spite of this, they started CPR and transported him to a local hospital where extraordinary means were employed to revive him!'"

One week later, we received an exorbitant hospital emergency room bill, plus bills from the emergency room's physician and the rescue squad! We contacted the nursing home medical staff, the emergency room physician and the hospital's president to establish that a mistake had been made and Dad's last wishes were not respected. The confrontation involved great grief for us, but afterward, our portion of the hospital bill was rescinded, along with the attending physician's bill for emergency treatment. The other portion of the bills were paid by Medicare by the hospital.

I am writing this to let others know that families do have rights in this painful situation. It is difficult to lose a loved one, but there's peace in knowing that the wishes of the patient and family have been respected.

Abby, please stress that the attending physician must indicate in writing on the patient's chart: No extraordinary measures. I'm constantly mistaken for a man on a telephone and I have never smoked a cigarette in my life! ## Elderly woman devotes years to promotion of Elvis stamp

NORTH SPRINGFIELD, Vt. (AP) — Pat Geiger, known around town as "the Elvis Lady," has spent the past seven years keeping Elvis Presley alive.

Elvis the postage stamp, that is. From the kitchen table of her tidy, comfortable home on Route 10, Geiger runs the "Elvis Postage Stamp Campaign." Her goal is to convince the U.S. Postal Service to give "The King" its stamp of approval.

"Without question, Elvis Presley is the perfect subject for a U.S. commemorative postage stamp," Geiger said. "He was and, even though he left us 13 years ago, continues to be one of this country's greatest goodwill ambassadors."

Her devotion may pay off. A Postal Service official says Elvis is, indeed, still alive — in a postal sense.

"There's a very good chance that sometime in the future there will be an Elvis stamp," said Frank Thomas, a Postal Service marketing specialist in Washington, D.C. "Personally, I think there will be."

The major obstacle for a Presley postage stamp is "concern over the lifestyle issue," Thomas said. The Postal Service has received mail complaining that honoring a known drug abuser "sends a bad message" to America's youth, he said.

But Geiger scoffs at that notion, pointing to other stamp subjects with controversial private lives. Presley stamps already have been issued in at least seven countries, including West Germany, she said.

Since beginning her campaign in 1983, Geiger said she has gone through five postmasters general and is now on her sixth, Anthony Frank.

Frank reportedly said soon after taking office that he supports an Elvis stamp. But after the ensuing outcry over Presley's well-documented drug abuse — the King died of an overdose in 1977 — Frank retracted and said the issue requires further review.

Supreme court will hear 'fat student' case appeal

By Richard Carroll
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today agreed to study the appeal of a Rhode Island college ordered to pay nearly $44,000 to a former nursing student kicked out because she was too fat.

The justices said they will review one aspect of the case in which Salve Regina College in Newport, R.I., was ordered to pay the award to Sharon L. Russell.

The justices are going to use the case to decide a narrow, procedural point of law. But their decision, expected sometime next year, could determine whether the award must be repaid.

Ms. Russell, from Hartford, Conn., entered the co-ed Catholic school in 1982 and received good grades through her freshman and sophomore years.

But after she began her nursing studies as a sophomore, Ms. Russell was told by faculty members her weight concerned them.

There is some dispute over just how much Ms. Russell weighed. In her application for admission to Salve Regina, she listed it as 280 pounds. But the college's appeal acted on today said she was "approximately 200 pounds overweight."

By the start of her junior year, in which the nursing department's curriculum included several clinical-training courses, Ms. Russell was under considerable pressure from faculty members to lose weight.

In late 1984, Ms. Russell was allowed to remain a student only after agreeing to enter a weight-loss program and lose two pounds a week.

Ms. Russell failed to lose weight steadily but was allowed to complete her junior year. In the summer before what was to be her senior year, Ms. Russell was asked to withdraw from the nursing program.

She transferred to St. Joseph's College in Connecticut, where she had to repeat her junior year because of a two-year residency requirement.

Ms. Russell completed her education in 1987 and now is a registered nurse.

Ms. Russell sued Salve Regina and five faculty members in 1985, alleging, among other things, handicap discrimination, intentional in-friction of emotional distress, invasion of privacy and breach of contract.

All claims against the faculty members and all claims against the college except the breach-of-contract allegation were dismissed before trial.

The federal trial jury found that the college had broken its contract with Ms. Russell. The jury awarded her $43,903.45 in damages and interest.

The 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the award last Nov. 20, saying, "The college does not dispute that the student-college relationship is essentially a contractual one."

The college, the jury found, forced Russell into voluntary withdrawal because she was obese, and for other reasons.

The case is Salve Regina College vs. Russell, 89-1629.

Court overturns death sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after it upheld Arizona's death penalty law, the Supreme Court today let stand a ruling that had the effect of overturning most existing death sentences in Arizona, Idaho and Montana.

By a 4-3 vote, the justices refused to reinstate the death sentence of John Harvey Adamson, convicted of murdering newspaper reporter Don Bolles in 1976.

The 1989-90 court term ended Wednesday as the justices issued their last opinions for the session. Today the court announced orders on some cases they will hear in the upcoming term, which begins the first Monday in October. They also rejected appeals in some cases.

The justices did not take the bench. The orders were released by the court clerk.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals previously had struck down Adamson's death sentence. But the Supreme Court's ruling in Adamson's case directly conflicting with the 9th Circuit court's ruling in Adamson's case.

Coventry cuts debate heated

By Jacqueline Bennett

COVENTRY — Tension and angry exchanges marked the Board of Education meeting Wednesday night as members cut almost $55,000 from a $9.8 million education budget, the amount cut by the board added a half-time Spanish teacher at the high school, $12,000.

Republican Constance Lathrop won a long battle she has waged since being elected to the board in November to either eliminate or reduce the Challenge and Enrichment Program, which Lathrop says serves only a select group.

The board agreed to cut the CEP by one day, a $6,500 savings — currently the program is four days a week, and full time at the middle school.

Lathrop however, was reprimanded by Halvorson for distributing confidential information — a maximum 60-year prison term, while the conspiracy charge has a maximum 20-year term.

Aparo appeared visibly nervous as he walked into the courtroom with her attorneys to hear the jury's question. As the judge instructed the jury, she bit her lower lip and glanced alternately at the judge and jury.

One juror nodded his head and glanced toward the jury foreman as Corriegan explained the conspiracy charge.

Malinowski said there are 100 fewer students at Robertson than in

Directors get revision guide

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Town Attorney Maureen Chmielecki has provided members of the Board of Directors with a step-by-step list of the procedures necessary for charter revision, bringing closer that quest of the Republican majority.

The surge for charter revision first became apparent during last year's campaign when changes in the foundation document were advocated by Republican candidate Wally Irish, who was elected to the board in November.

After the election, Irish followed up his campaign plank by requesting Chmielecki research steps directors must take to effect changes in the Town Charter.

More so than ever, Manchester needs accountability in its government, Irish said Wednesday. "The way to make government accountable is to have it run by elected officials."

If an official does not serve the people well, they will not re-elect him, Irish reasons. "I think we should have a mayor who is the chief executive officer of the community and a manager who is the chief operating officer," he said.

Irish said also that the mayor should be directly elected in a one-on-one election. He said the present system of appointing as mayor the director who is not fully informed.

A third example was a request for quarterly updates on the laying of sanitary sewer lines, another project about which Irish thinks the board is not fully informed.

New Britain Judicial area which includes Manchester. Towns in the Tolland Judicial District are Bolton, Andover, Coventry, Hebron, Columbia, Ellington, Mansfield, Somers, Stafford, Tolland, Union, Vernon and Willington.

Jury summonses are now being mailed to prospective jurors in those towns.

Under the new system, a prospective juror will be called to court on an assigned day. If the juror is selected for a trial, that juror will serve for the duration of the trial. Normally, if the juror is not selected for a trial, he will be dismissed at the end of the day.

Larry Moore, director of public relations for the Connecticut Judicial District, said that it will be at least two years before the system is extended to include the Hartford-

During the budget struggle, Tolland was the target of vandalism. The subject of politically-motivated vandalism, including the defacing of their "vote no signs and graffiti at the high school."

"I had hoped that this lunatic element that has been doing the dirty tricks would accept the fact that they won Monday. We did," he said.

"But apparently winning wasn't enough for them," he said. "We haven't done anything except exercise our Democratic right to oppose high taxes," Holland said.

"This whole thing just smacks of Gestapo tactics," he said, adding that the vandals may not be members of Citizens Alliance for Schools Excellence, a lobbying group for education and rival of the taxpayers' group.

Holland, who is a retired police officer, issued a warning to the vandals. "I don't know what they're next move is going to be. If they go beyond blowing up mailboxes, they better be prepared because I certainly will. I'll do whatever I have within the law, to protect my family."

Questions raised over prison riot

HARTFORD (AP) — Guards at the state's minimum security prison in Enfield, where 400 inmates rioted Monday, knew that trouble was brewing. But that information apparently wasn't passed along to the warden.

Warden George Bronson said some guards at the Carl Robinson Correctional Institute saw flyers, posted by inmates during the weekend, announcing a protest over food. But he said he was unaware of the impending protest when he arrived at work Monday morning.

Leonard Tanner, a representative of the guards' union, said guards learned of the planned food strike Friday from inmates' files.

Union officials said guards warned supervisors about the food protest, and were upset when the protest was not passed on to Bronson.

Deputy Correctional Commissioner Leonard G. Barbieri said officials still don't know why Bronson was not told about the protest.

However, Bronson said he did not know whether anything would have been done differently had top administration known in advance of the protest.

Correction Commissioner Larry R. Meschum supported Bronson's handling of the situation saying, "We've had protests before."

Meschum said, "They usually make their statements, and it's over. We had no reason to believe that this would be any more than that."

Bronson said deadly force would have been used against rebellious inmates had they tried to break out of the facility during the riot.

"Under riotous conditions, deadly force could have been authorized," Bronson said. "We would have if we had to."

DPUC OKs caller I.D. use

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Despite the objection of a state consumer advocate, state regulators have approved a power company's plan to use a new telephone system that will give the utility automatic access to the name, address and billing history of customers who call the company.

The state Department of Public Utility Control gave final approval Wednesday to an application made jointly by Southern New England Telephone Co. and Connecticut Light & Power Co. to conduct a six-month trial of the automatic caller identification system in the Waterbury area.

The trial, to begin in late August, will affect about 60,000 CL&P customers. Customers who have not given the utility their telephone number and those who do not wish to be included in the identification system will not be affected.

Acting Consumer Counsel Eugene M. Koss opposed the application, arguing that it leaves unresolved questions about the privacy of the utility customers. He said some customers may not have intended for their telephone numbers to be used in such a manner.

"I don't think the decision does well for any of us, whether we live in Waterbury or not," Koss said. Under the system, when a CL&P customer telephones the utility's service department, a computer system will automatically figure out what telephone the call is being made from. If that number is listed with the utility, the customer's name, address and billing history will automatically appear before the CL&P worker who answers the call. The telephone number itself will not appear.

The utility estimates that such a system will save 30 to 45 seconds of every time a customer calls, said John Gustavsen, a spokesman for Northeast Utilities, the parent company of CL&P.

"I really don't think the privacy concern is relevant here," Gustavsen said. "Also, I don't really anticipate a lot of people calling up and saying they don't want to participate."

However, similar systems, generally referred to as Caller ID, have generated controversy because of fears they could invade the privacy of people who call into them. In several states, residential customers and businesses can purchase a Caller ID system that allows them to see the telephone number of the person calling them before they answer the phone. Thus, people can screen their calls or trace them automatically.

A similar technology is the basis for Enhanced 911 service, in which the location of a caller is automati-

State incentive program falling short of goals

HARTFORD (AP) — The state's early retirement incentive program, touted as a way to cut employe costs by at least $25 million a year, may not be saving any money at all, according to state Rep. Shaun McNally, D-Newrich. "It appears that it may have actually cost us money and not saved us a dime," McNally said. "That's very disturbing."

In a letter to McNally, Judith S. Lohman, an analyst with the Office of Legislative Research, said the information available was too sketchy to do a complete analysis, but suggested that the program was not as successful as the governor's budget officials had projected.

Another legislative researcher, who asked not to be identified, told The Day newspaper of New London that it is doubtful that any savings were realized, and estimated that the program may have cost the state $10 million this year.

The program, promoted by Gov. William O'Neill and approved by the legislature in 1989, offered bonuses of up to $21,600 to eligible state workers who agreed to retire by Oct. 1, 1989.

By only refilling one of every four positions vacated, officials from the Office of Policy and Management — estimated the program would save $25 million in fiscal 1989-90 and $40 million in fiscal 1990-91, which begins July 1.

By the end of April, however, the state had filled 43 percent of the approximately 2,500 positions vacated by the general fund and transportation department retirees, according to a report from the OP&M.

City bond rating lowered

By Larry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Financial instability in New Haven and the sluggishness of the overall New England economy are two reasons cited by the second national bond rating service that has lowered the city's rating.

Moody's Investors Service made the announcement Wednesday, following the lead of Standard & Poor's. It said its decision was based on "the rapid weakening of the city's financial position."

A lower bond rating means the city must pay higher interest rates on the bonds it sells to investors to finance building and other capital projects.

Moody's said the 6-month-old administration of Mayor John Daniels had moved quickly to address the city's financial difficulties but that the problems run so deep it will take an "extended commitment" for New Haven to regain economic stability.

The investor's service said the city's problems were compounded by the slowing regional economy, large capital needs and a "below average socioeconomic base."

Douglas Rae, the city's chief administrative officer, said the decision by Moody's was "not unexpected and not a reflection on the Daniels' administration."

In announcing its decision, Moody's noted that a "rapid weakening of the city's financial position since fiscal year 1988" would result in a significant deficit for the budget year ending this Saturday.

The projected size of the city's deficit has fluctuated greatly over the past six months, with recent estimates placing it at more than $10 million.

Rae declined to provide an estimate Wednesday, saying only that "the 1990 deficit is going to be an ugly story."

"Fiscal 1991 is the budget we're going to bet the future of the city on," he said.

The action by Moody's came four months after the other major New York bond rating service, Standard & Poor's Corp., announced it was downgrading its assessment of New Haven's financial standing.

Moody's revised its rating on $76.9 million in general obligation bonds from "A" to "Ba1."

Woman burns husband

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — A pregnant woman, who police said poured a ring of gasoline around her husband's bed while he slept and then ignited it, has been charged with attempted murder.

Theresa Jones, 26, was arrested outside the couple's burning two-story house at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday and charged with first-degree arson, criminal attempt to commit murder and first-degree reckless endangerment.

Her husband, Johnny Jones, 39, was able to escape the fire unharmed despite being in bed just before it was ignited, police said.

Jones said he awoke just before 1 a.m. because he smelled gasoline. Wrapped in a towel, he ran out of the house just before the gasoline caught fire.

"...one couple's two children, a 4-year-old girl and a 6-year-old boy, were waiting in their mother's car while she poured the gasoline, police said.

Detective William Kiduff, a police spokesman, said Mrs. Jones admitted to police that she had poured the gasoline around her husband's bed and then poured a trail of the flammable liquid down the stairs to the home's kitchen.

The house apparently went up in flames when gasoline fumes reached a hot water heater and ignited. The fire destroyed the home.

Mrs. Jones was to have been arraigned Wednesday, but the hearing was postponed until today after she began having what were thought to be labor pains. She was taken to a hospital, but was released without having given birth. She was being held on a $25,000 bond.

The couple's 10-year marriage had been marked by minor domestic-violence arrests and restraining orders. They were arguing in front of the house when firefighters arrived, authorities said.

Johnny Jones said things had not been going well for his family for months. Last December, the couple lost a four-month-old daughter who was born prematurely and was kept on life support for a few weeks before her death.

Because the family had no health insurance, the illness and death sunk them $700,000 further into debt, he said.

A tax increase by Bush? Read those lips again

By John Cuniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When communicating about taxes, elected officials are at their subtle best. Some speak from both corners of the mouth, and many find refuge in semantics.

In the past, presidents have raised taxes without ever using the word "tax," choosing instead both terms as user fees and surcharges, or by closing loopholes, by stricter enforcement or expanded collection efforts.

In his statement on reducing the budget deficit, President Bush did not mention tax increases. He chose instead to say that he would seek "tax revenue increases," a term that could have considerable significance.

It is the contention of some tax policy analysts, for example, that it is possible to raise tax revenues while reducing taxes, as on capital gains. That argument is, in fact, a particular favorite of White House advisers.

Their thesis is this: When taxes are high on capital gains — which are long-term profits from such matters as real estate and stock market transactions — the producing activity is restrained. Rather than sell and pay taxes, investors simply employ youngsters in the way to get these people to sell is to make it less onerous for them to do so. Lower the tax, these advisers say, and you will almost automatically release a rash of activity. Revenue would pour into Uncle Sam's pockets.

True, the revenue per transaction would be lower than before, but everyone from the newspaper vendor to Donald Trump knows that you might make it up, and more, in volume. Harvard professors say so; so does Bush.

In fact, Bush has been consistent in pushing for a capital gains tax reduction as he has been in saying no more taxes. He made it a plank in his election platform and has reiterated it since.

In order to obtain it from Congress, however, he might have to submit to pressures for higher taxes on such items as gasoline and cigarettes. This, of course, would be interpreted as weak-kneed reneging on his no-tax pledge.

No good politician would submit to that humiliation without a comeback, and Bush has one. To his critics he might point out that the tax decrease he obtained more than offset the increased taxes in other areas.

In that sense, he might say that while the revenue mix did indeed change, the net effect was that one more nullified the other or even resulted in lower taxes. Thus, a NET tax increase, although perhaps a revenue increase.

Nevertheless, any change in the tax situation is bound to bring out the critics, and some of them are likely to be formerly strong supporters. Analysts at the Heritage Foundation, a think tank highly influential in both the Reagan and Bush administrations, already have released blasts.

The general feeling among conservative analysts, such as those at Heritage, is that by various measures taxes are near their all-time high, and that wasteful spending is too. Don't raise taxes, they say, cut spending instead.

They've identified what they say are $130 billion in spending cuts and budget savings that could be made without damaging the social benefits safety net.

In no way, they say, would those savings come at the expense of the poor, no matter what members of Congress might say. Those savings, they say, would come at the expense of the members' pet projects.

Analyst Scott Hodge indicates that hardly a spending bill is passed that doesn't contain a tail of pork, an additional sum to satisfy their special interest or that of a constituent.

Unusually, he directly blames Congress for squandering billions and states that "taxpayers should no longer have to pinch pennies so that Congress can spend them with abandon."

That suggests to the president a final fallback position: If he has to accept the damage to his reputation, if he has to accept a tax increase, he can at least say he did his best but that Congress forced him into it.

Bailout issue erupts into S&L fairness debate

By John Diamond
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The issue of who pays for the savings and loan bailout is dividing Congress along regional lines.

"The high price tag his home, Northeastern lawmakers who have already agreed to the bailout are voicing resentment that so much of their constituents' money is flowing to the Sun Belt. That resentment is threatening to spill over into other spending issues from housing to water projects to farm programs.

The first winds of this regional storm swept over the Senate Wednesday as legislators from the Northeast and Midwest angrily challenged a move by Texas Republican Sen. Phil Gramm to shift federal housing grants to the populous Sun Belt states.

Gramm's bid fizzled, but not before senators exchanged heated words for more than two hours on the Senate floor.

"This amendment has the possibilities of creating enormous regional animosities, of tearing us apart at a time when we need to be coming together," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass.

By turning the S&L issue into a regional fight, Wednesday's debate was significant in that it cut across party lines. Pundits and politicians have been predicting that the thrift crisis would become a major campaign issue. Yet the floor debate had members of both parties lined up on opposite sides.

Kerry said Gramm's proposal amounted to an insatiable appetite for federal tax dollars. The bailout was a disaster with many victims, Kerry said, and it was a necessary solution. "I'm willing to do that. It's been done. We accept it," he said of the bailout. "But apparently it isn't enough."

Kerry spoke ominously of a farm bill about to come to the Senate floor. The bill "with goodies galore" for western and southern farm states, may have trouble getting through the Senate, he warned.

If Gramm and others move to tilt other federal programs in favor of the Sun Belt, Kerry said, "the repercussions would be played out as we debate the farm bill."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., got into the fray by threatening to block a water resource development bill which contains a substantial amount of money for Texas. Moynihan chairs a Senate subcommittee that is handling the bill.

And Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., challenged his fellow Republicans by offering his own amendment to the housing legislation. D'Amato's proposal would have penalized Texas and other states with high S&L failure rates. Those states would have to give up housing money in proportion to the bailout dollars they receive.

D'Amato argued that lax state regulations in Texas led to the S&L slide. New York taxpayers, meanwhile, were being asked to pay for a sizable portion of the bailout.

The state of New York is on the hook for $17.3 billion to clean up a problem that its citizens did not cause and who will receive no benefit from its solution," D'Amato said.

Gramm shot back that the S&L bailout money wasn't being poured into the coffers of the state of Texas or the bank accounts of its citizens. It was paying back insured depositors, many of them high-roller investors from the Northeast.

"Our dear colleague in New York acts as if the S&L crisis were a gift covered up 13 (Sun Belt) states in money," Gramm said. "It's not as if this great dump truck has pulled up in Texas or Nebraska or Oklahoma and is dumping all the cash."

He called the idea of using "trumped-up amendments based on the S&L bailout" a "cute and clever" tactic.

To in any way equate the S&L bailout with a formula for allocating community development block grant funds, a formula that in its current incarnation is absolutely unfair, is just outrageous," Gramm said. "I'm not trying to beat a regional horse here."

D'Amato admitted that his amendment was more of a symbolic gesture than a serious effort at legislation. But he said it reflected genuine anger.

"It is a remarkable thing about the U.S. Senate that in the entire process of identifying and fashioning a solution to the savings and loan debacle, there was barely a murmur of regionalism — blaming one part of the country — though it was clearly a temptation for many of us," D'Amato said.

"I do not relish this debate," D'Amato said. Gramm's amendment and others like it, he said, would "further exacerbate a growing resentment that has now surfaced."

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., embodied that resentment during the Senate debate as he ran through statistics showing the extent to which Northeastern and Midwestern taxpayers will be financing money to the Southwest.

"Texas, Texas, Texas," Dixon belted. "The big winner."

raised repeatedly during Wednesday's subcommittee session, with several lawmakers promising to seek further amendments to spur more competition to cable, particularly from telephone companies.

"This is a very significant consumer victory," Kimmelmann said of the House bill. If enacted, it will finally bring cable rates down to reasonable levels and promote competition — most usefully in rural America.

Kimmelmann has maintained that cable subscribers are paying twice what they should in the absence of effective competition.

The House bill, he said, "could actually lead to rate rollbacks for the communities that have experienced extreme (rate) increases."

The issue of competition was raised repeatedly during Wednesday's subcommittee session, with several lawmakers promising to seek further amendments to spur more competition to cable, particularly from telephone companies.

Constituent complaints of poor cable TV service and soaring rates have fallen on fertile ground in this session of Congress, where a host of cable re-regulation bills were introduced.

As Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., noted, it's a consumer issue affecting 52 million television viewers. He made clear that the word "viewer" in the bill's title was not to be taken literally.

The cable TV industry said it could not support the bill.

Arthur Young sued over Lincoln junk bond claims

By E. Scott Reckard
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The state sued Arthur Young & Co. on Wednesday in an effort to recover $250 million lost on junk bonds sold through Keating's Lincoln Savings & Loan.

The bonds became worthless when American Continental filed for bankruptcy protection in April 1989.

Federal regulators seized Lincoln the next day. They say it may cost taxpayers $2 billion to cover the thrift's losses.

Yan de Kamp's unfair business practices suit contends Arthur Young and its former partner who audited American Continental, Jack Atchison, should have known the company was losing huge sums of money.

Instead, Yan de Kamp said, the accountants vouched for a "glowing prospectus" that said American Continental was profitable and a good risk.

The state's lawsuit follows the lead of class-action suits already filed on behalf of the more than 20,000 bondholders, which name as defendants accountants and lawyers for American Continental and Keating.

"You got paid by the people who were paid by Keating," said John D.K. Brunner, the chairman of a committee of the bondholders.

Worst possible choice

By James Jacoby

Today's deal is an illustration of defense as the hardest part of the game. Even though East held three prime cards (A-A-K), he passed in first position because of his flat distribution and poor intermediate spot cards. South pre-empted in hearts, and North raised to game. West led the king of spades, and declarer ducked in dummy — a good play. What next?

Eventually West led a trump. He reasoned that declarer held a solid trump suit. If East held A-J-K in diamonds, the suit would not set up for enough tricks for East to make through for East to smile through gasping teeth.

James Jacoby's books "Strategy on Bridge" and "Analyse on Card Games" written with his father, are available at the following bookstores. Both are published by Phoenix Books.

Cease-fire may be possible, anti-apartheid leader says

By Greg Myra
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The white-minority government and the African National Congress could soon negotiate a cease-fire after almost 30 years of hostilities, a leading ANC official predicts.

Joe Slovo, an ANC leader and the head of the South African Communist Party, said Thursday the government and the ANC would seek to work out a cease-fire once they resolve several preliminary issues.

In another development, President F.W. de Klerk declared six neighborhoods open to all races as part of the government's plan to ease four decades of strict residential segregation.

On Thursday, the president approved the integration of six relatively small neighborhoods that include one suburb each in Johannesburg and Cape Town, a rural area outside Durban, and parts of three small towns, Koyza, Masina, and Zurebkom. The government opened four neighborhoods to all races in November.

Neighborhoods, along with public schools and the political system, are the main institutions still segregated in South Africa.

The government and the ANC held their first talks in May and have since worked together on a document to remove the obstacles to full-scale constitutional negotiations.

Slovo, in an interview, expressed optimism about negotiating with the government on a new constitution and an end to apartheid.

"There is a good chance that if the obstacles are removed we will at a very early stage move toward... the negotiation of a suspension of hostilities," he said.

The obstacles, he said, include the return of 20,000 ANC exiles and the release of about 3,000 activists convicted on conspiracy charges.

Innocent Aparo is acquitted

By Denise LaVoie
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — After a stunning setback, Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey said his office will regroup before deciding whether to try Karin Aparo for a second time on a conspiracy charge in her mother's 1987 murder.

Bailey was grim-faced as he answered questions from reporters after a jury Thursday acquitted Aparo of the more serious charge of accessory to murder and declared itself deadlocked on the murder-conspiracy charge.

PITTSBURGH — More than 100 people saw five men jump a ten-year, but only James Schmitt jumped in to help.

"Everybody else was standing around watching. I figured the kid needed help," said Schmitt, 20, of Philadelphia. He was among 17 Americans honored Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Commission.

More than $18.6 million has been awarded in one-time payments or pensions to 7,460 heroes or their survivors since the commission was founded by Pittsburgh industrialist Andrew Carnegie in 1904.

One of those honored Thursday died in a rescue attempt in Louisiana.

Schmitt, a sophomore at La Salle University, said he was waiting for his friend Bryan Moshinski, 15, outside a high school following a dance on Dec. 1, 1989. About eight young men COVENTRY — By the end of this decade the school population in town will likely increase by 23.8 percent according to a study done by the state Department of Education.

"There is likely to be slow moderate steady growth in the community linked to the economic climate," said Fred Brockman of the state Department of Education during a meeting of the Board of Education Thursday night at Coventry High School.

Brockman and Pat Starbuck were the consultants on a demographic study done on the town by the state in relation to the schools, as requested by Superintendent of Schools Michael Malinowski.

According to the study, which relied in part on data from the town enumerator, current total enrollment of 1,570 will increase in 1993-94 to 1,738, a 10.7 percent change, and

Communist Party prepares for next week's congress

By Bryan Brumley
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The policy-making Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party met today to approve final plans for a congress that promises trouble for Mikhail S. Gorbachev next week.

The 249-member Central Committee was debating a report that President and party leader Gorbachev will deliver at the opening of the 28th party congress on Monday, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

A day earlier, Communist reformers straggled to find common ground to unite them against a resurgent traditionalist wing that is sharply critical of Gorbachev's economic and political changes.

Radicals of the Democratic Platform faction said Thursday they expected to walk away from the party's congress of 4,700.

"In reality, despite the many statements of leaders, the Communist Party has shown it is simply incapable of reforming itself," said

Vladimir Lyzenko, a leader of the Democratic Platform.

Lyzenko told reporters Democratic Platform's 100 delegates will fight for his program, but "if it proves impossible, there will be a statement that either the Communist Party has split or a new party is starting."

Leaders say a poll of party members indicates about 40 percent identify themselves as supporters of Democratic Platform. But they acknowledge that the party is split.

Far-right leader charged

PARIS (AP) — Jean-Marie Le Pen, president of the far-right National Front, was charged with racial defamation Thursday for a remark about "international Jewry" in a newspaper interview.

No date was set for further proceedings in the case.

Le Pen, whose party advocates deportation of immigrants, is a member of the European Parliament. The current case marks the second time his parliamentary immunity has been lifted to allow defamation proceedings.

Le Pen said he was being prosecuted for one sentence in an interview published by the daily newspaper Presen in August 1989. He said that "international Jewry plays a non-negligible role in creating an anti-national spirit."

Le Pen denied the statement was defamatory and said it should be taken in the context of the full interview.

$33b needed for media

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The cost of upgrading the East German telecommunication system to Western standards will be as high as $33 billion, West Germany's telecommunication minister said Thursday.

Christian Schwarz-Schilling, who was taking part in a meeting of European Community ministers in charge of telecommunications, told his colleagues the task would take at least six years.

He said most of the necessary upgrading could be done in four or five years but reaching top EC standards would take at least another year.

The minister said the cost of buying high technology equipment was estimated at $21 billion, part of which could be supplied by other East European countries.

Another $12 billion would be spent on less sophisticated equipment, cable-laying and construction, contracted with East German companies.

Japan emperor's son weds

TOKYO (AP) — Slipping sacred rice wine in a shrine to the sun goddess, Emperor Akihito's youngest son and his bride were wed today as millions of Japanese watched on television.

Flanked by imperial relatives, Prince Aya, 24, and Kiko Kawashima, 23, knelt together in the Imperial Palace shrine to the goddess Amaterasu, from whom legend says the royal family is descended.

Miss Kawashima, a graduate student, is the second commoner to marry into the royal family, and the marriage was seen as another step in bringing the imperial palace and Japan's people closer together.

The ceremony also was being hailed as the emperor's first taste of the new imperial era, called Heisei or "achieving peace," which began with the death of Emperor Hirohito on Jan. 7, 1989.

Shoes sold at auction

NEW YORK (AP) — One pair of shoes more or less may not mean much to Imelda Marcos, but they were worth $10,000 to a bidder at a charity auction.

A pair of black suede pumps from the Marcos collection — which once numbered more than 1,000 pairs — was sold at an auction for children's medical research, the attorney for Mrs. Marcos' co-defendant said Thursday.

The idea originated with James Lim, chief attorney for co-defendant, Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi. Lim is founder and chairman of the annual campaign to raise money for research at Children's Medical Research of Oklahoma City.

"Everybody has heard about Mrs. Marcos' shoes," said Lim, who lives in Oklahoma City. "She was gracious enough to include a letter attesting to their authenticity."

Mrs. Marcos' footwear made world headlines when she fled the Philippines with her husband, the late President Ferdinand Marcos, in February 1986, leaving behind more than 1,000 pairs of shoes.

Lim said he did not know who had bought the shoes at the June 3-4 auction in Oklahoma.

Trucker protest fizzles

WINDSOR, Ontario (AP) — A planned nationwide protest by Canadian truckers fizzled today when just six dozen trucks quietly lined roads at three border crossings into the United States.

The planned blockade was to be the second demonstration in five weeks over high taxes and government policies the truckers say threaten their livelihood.

About 45 trucks brought their rigs to a halt at the Ambassador Bridge between Detroit and Windsor, but police said the trucks were off to the side and were not blocking regular traffic.

A brief scuffle broke out at 1:30 a.m. between protesters and two American truck drivers who tried to cross the border, but police stepped in and restored order.
