U.S. arrives in Cambodia to see remains of MIAs

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. military experts arrived in Cambodia today to examine what may be the remains of America's war-time missing, the first such mission since the 1975 Communist takeover.

The six-man team, including two forensic scientists, flew from Bangkok, Thailand, in a U.S. Air Force C-141 jet transport. The U.S. delegation shook hands awkwardly with a group of mid-level Cambodian officials then dove into Phnom Penh, where they spent an hour touring the city before meeting with Cambodian officials.

On Wednesday, they are to examine remains collected by the Cambodians. If it appears the remains may be those of American servicemen, they are to be removed to the United States for further examination and identification.

The United States still does not recognize the Vietnamese-installed Phnom Penh government. On Wednesday, however, it announced it was withdrawing recognition of the guerrilla coalition battling the government in order to open talks with Vietnam on ending the country's civil war.

U.S. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said on July 13 that today's mission would be strictly humanitarian and have no political intent. American officials have complained that the Cambodians

De Klerk says ANC arrests won't threaten discussions

By BARRY RENFREW

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk will continue talks with the African National Congress on ending white rule despite claims that black nationalists are preparing to seize power if negotiations fail.

De Klerk says he will meet Aug. 6 with Nelson Mandela and other top ANC leaders to try and clear the way for negotiations on sharing political power with the black majority.

But he has warned all political groups against trying to seize power. He said after a meeting with senior government officials late Monday that there was no room "for any political organization to stockpile arms in order to force its will at the negotiation table or in any other way to prevent the political process taking its normal course."

The ANC has confirmed that its guerrillas continue to infiltrate South Africa, but denies police and media reports of an ANC plot to seize power if political negotiations fail.

Launch delayed again

By MARGIA DUNN
The Associated Press

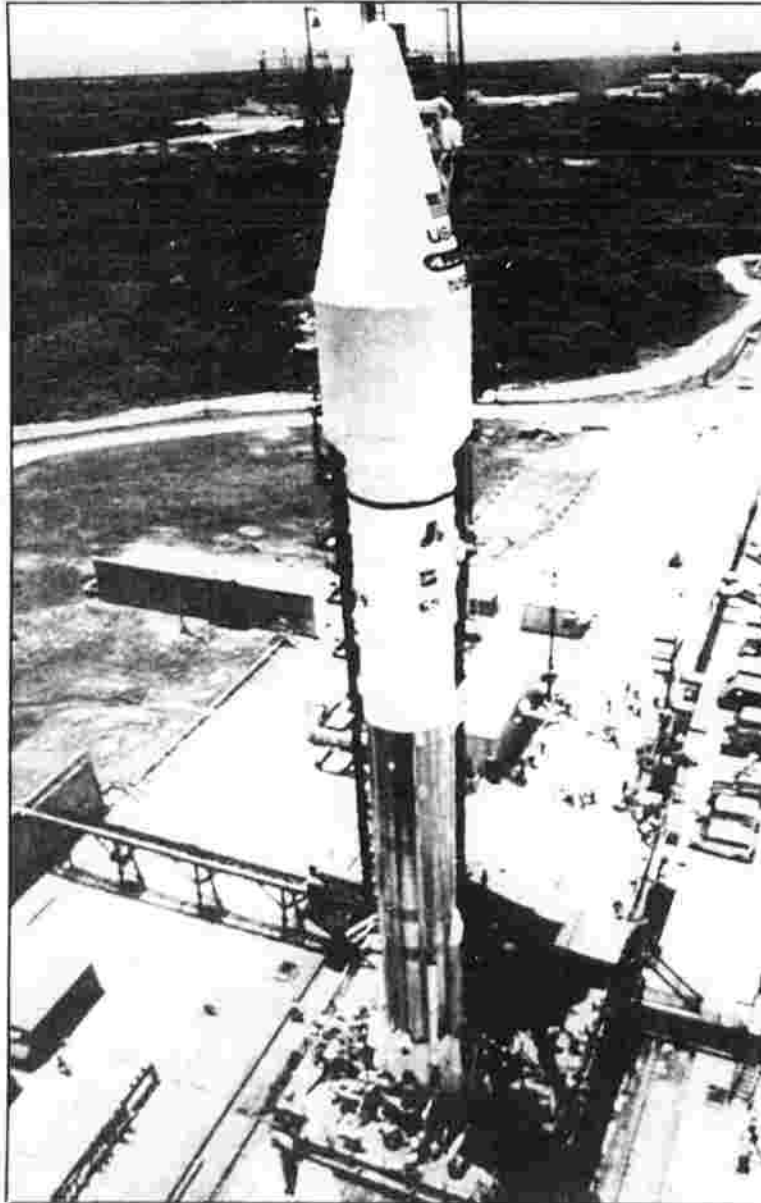

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — An electrical problem forced postponement of the third attempt to launch an unmanned Atlas rocket carrying a government satellite.

The third try came Monday, when launch was called off after the Atlas failed to transfer to interplanetary just before liftoff. The problem lies in a switch to shift electrical power from the ground to batteries on the booster.

"Obviously, it's always disappointing when you can't launch, but one of these days everything will go right and we'll have a success," said Jack Isabel, spokesman for rocket builder General Dynamics.

Isabel said there will be no attempt to launch the rocket today. He said another launch date will not be set until the switch is repaired or replaced.

General Dynamics and NASA's first attempt to launch the rocket on Friday, was halted because of a helium leak caused by a loose vent duct. The entire set of four liquid helium vent ducts was replaced in time for another try on Sunday, but the threat of thunderstorms forced postponement again.

WAITING TO BE LAUNCHED — An Atlas 1 rocket sits on a launch pad Sunday waiting for a signal from the Air Force weather station for a launch. The launch was delayed for a third time yesterday due to electrical problems.

More bodies recovered; death toll surpasses 1,600

By OLIVER TEVES
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Earthquake search teams reported finding more bodies today in remote mountain communities devastated by last week's temblor, and the death toll surpassed 1,600.

A quake measuring 6 on the Richter scale struck the central island of Negros early today but there were no reports of damage or casualties.

On Luzon island, President Corason Aquino inspected damage in her home province, Tarlac, where numerous churches, schools and highways were damaged by the July 16 quake, which measured 7.7.

On Monday, she asked Congress to approve $500 million to rebuild damaged areas. Many congressmen also want to stop paying the $26 billion national debt to fund free reconstruction.

Figures from the Office of Civil Defense and the Red Cross showed at least 1,621 people were killed in the quake. More than 3,000 were seriously injured and about 1,000 were listed as missing.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos, chairman of the National Disaster Coordinating Council, said nearly 90,000 people had been left homeless.

Rescuers continued digging through the rubble of buildings in the quake-ravaged north.

In Baguio, 130 miles north of Manila, three bodies were recovered from the wreckage of the Hyatt Hotel. The luxury hotel collapsed during the quake.

Afterthoughts continued in the quake-ravaged north.

Seismologists said the tremor on Negros was actually an aftershock of a June 14 quake that killed seven people on the central island of Panay.

The Philippines sits astride 10 major faults or tectonic tracks and is among the most earthquake-prone countries on earth.

Bush warned on B-2 bomber

By DONNA GASSATA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A key Democratic backer of the B-2 bomber is warning President Bush that unless the administration steps up the campaign for the stealth aircraft, Congress will kill it.

The dire prediction by Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn came Monday as his House Armed Services counterpart, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., announced he will join an effort to cancel the radar-evading plane.

The deficit is growing and the defense budget is shrinking," Aspin told reporters prior to his speech on the House floor. "Much has happened in the last year, and none of it has been good for the B-2."

Congressional support for the stealth bomber is eroding as the Pentagon's fiscal 1991 budget request for the B-2, cited the cost, the plane's capabilities and its mission as the rationale for his decision. Aspin said he found no "unique and compelling mission for the B-2."

In April, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney revised the Pentagon's B-2 program — trimming the budget request for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 from five planes to two and cutting the overall total from 132 aircraft to 75.

Scaling back the plan, however, increased the cost of a single plane from $530 million to $815 million. The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the cost likely will jump to $865 million each with the total program's price tag at $65 billion.

The weakening support was the subject of a message sent to Bush last week by Nunn, D-Ga., and the panel's ranking Republican, John Warner of Virginia.

Nunn said late Monday that he indicated to the president that unless the administration starts lobbying harder for the bomber, it may fall in the Senate.

"I thought that before Aspin made his statement," Nunn stressed in a telephone interview.

In a statement, Nunn said he did not believe the B-2 "can be preserved unless the president, the secretary of defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and our arms control negotiators all argue forcefully for the program."

"The more American people see and learn about this weapon system and the less support there is," Dellums said. "So I'm going to stick my neck out and say this is the year that we stop the B-2 bomber."

The White House had no reaction to Aspin's announcement, but Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Michael J. Dugan told reporters at the Pentagon that Aspin's "voice carries some extra weight, and we'd hoped that we wouldn't have to fight that extra weight."

Aspin vowed to work for legislation sponsored by his Armed Services colleagues — Reps. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., John Rowland, R-Conn., and John Kasich, R-Ohio — to stop production at the 15 planes currently in development by the Northrop Corp.

Proponents of the bill said they have more than the 218 votes needed to kill the B-2 in the House, and Dellums proclaimed that the full Congress will terminate the program.

Debate to start on Frank penalty

By LARRY MARGASAK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Conservative Republicans are readying moves to stiffen the punishment for Rep. Barney Frank's actions on behalf of a male prostitute.

But House Democratic leaders and ethics committee members have geared up to defend a proposed reprimand for the Massachusetts Democrat.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said disciplinary action would be considered Thursday against Frank, one of two admitted homosexuals in the House.

The 12-member ethics panel voted unanimously last week to reprimand Frank, a punishment that would consist of a finding by the full House that the congressman brought discredit upon the body.

Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., already has said, however, that he would propose to expel Frank. That resolution would need a two-thirds vote and appears headed for certain defeat.

A number of other conservative Republicans said they expect one of their number to propose that Frank be censured, a step higher than a reprimand. A censure, like a reprimand, requires a House vote condemning a member's behavior but also requires his presence while the action is taken.

Frank, an outspoken liberal in his first term, is expected to be on the floor regardless of the punishment, because he has promised to apologize. "I believe the committee position will be sustained on the floor," Foley told reporters Monday.

House Majority Whip William H. Gray III, D-Pa., said, "When the committee comes out with an overwhelmingly bipartisan report, the membership will say '12 folks are all saying the same thing. Can they be wrong?' Attempts at censure or expulsion will fail."

The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the House's formal name, concluded in a report released Friday that Frank brought discredit upon the House in two areas of his conduct with male prostitute Stephen L. Gobie.

Frank told a news conference Friday he had "red in apparently not withholding Social Security taxes for Gobie. Apparently when you have casual labor like this you're supposed to withhold Social Security tax. I've since made those payments. There is no other tax liability."

Walker said the Social Security tax payments represent "a serious question that merits a penalty greater than the ethics committee's recommendation." He added that the misleading statements by Frank during Gobie's probation was "a fairly serious offense" because he's chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on administrative law.

The rich getting richer

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The gap between the rich and poor widened during the 1980s, while middle-income Americans' share of all income was the lowest in more than 40 years, a liberal research group says.

The changes were spurred in part by the tax law changes of the Reagan years, according to a report by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a non-profit research group specializing in policy issues affecting the poor.

The report released Monday was based on an analysis of recently released Congressional Budget Office tax and income statistics.

As a result of shifts in tax burdens and capital gains income, the center said, the richest 1 percent receive nearly as much of Americans' total income after taxes as the bottom 40 percent.

The bottom 40 percent will receive 14.2 percent of total after-tax income going to all groups in 1990, while the top 1 percent will receive 12.6 percent.

The center also said Census Bureau statistics show that the share of family income going to the middle 20 percent of Americans reached a low of 16.7 percent in 1988, the last year for which figures were available. The figure was 17 percent in 1947, reached a high of 18.1 percent in 1957 and remained between 17 and 18 percent through 1984.

Robert Greenstein, executive director of the center, said the changes were due in part to increased income from capital gains received by the wealthy.

The findings, he said, were an argument against President Bush's call for a cut in the tax on capital gains.

"Since the vast bulk of capital gains income goes to the very wealthy, they would receive most of the benefits from a reduction in taxes on capital gains," Greenstein said.

Bush and other advocates of cutting the capital gains tax say it would provide an added incentive for people to invest capital in job-creating new and expanded businesses.

The report said the most affluent Americans received large income gains during the 1980s, while middle income people gained little and the poor fell behind.

The top 1 percent of the population will receive an expected average of more than $175,000 in capital gains income in 1990, up $92,000 from what they received in 1980 after adjusting for inflation, the report said.

By contrast, those in the bottom 90 percent are projected to receive an average capital gains income of $299 in 1990, up just $12 over the period, it said.

As a result of tax law changes, the report said, wealthy households pay a smaller percentage of their income in taxes in 1990 than they did in 1980, and lower income households pay a larger proportion.

NASA had early Hubble concerns

By PAUL REGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The flawed mirrors that have crippled the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope were a worry for NASA officials even as the agency was selecting a contractor for the telescope optics, according to a 1977 report.

The report, released by NASA on Monday after a request by The Associated Press, said officials selected Perkin-Elmer Corp. of Danbury, Conn., to make the Hubble optical assembly, even though the company planned to use an unproven computer-aided polishing technique.

Engineers for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration now believe that a flaw manufactured into one of the mirrors by Perkin-Elmer blurred the vision of the Hubble telescope, reducing its effectiveness by at least 50 percent. The error is now under investigation.

The report, signed on Aug. 26, 1977 by then-NASA Administrator Robert A. Frosch, said the bid by Perkin-Elmer, now Hughes Danbury Optical Systems Inc., was preferred over a bid by Eastman Kodak Co. for several reasons, including cost. Officials evaluating the two contracts bids rated Perkin-Elmer as "very good" and Kodak as "good."

Our only concern about the Perkin-Elmer approach centers around their plan to utilize an as-yet unverified computer-controlled mirror polishing technique," the report said.

Looking Back The origins of Oakland

By G.S. ADAMS

The village of Oakland began in 1832 when Henry Hudson, son of Barzilla Hudson and his second wife Hannah (Bunce) Watson, widow of Ebenezer Watson who built the first paper mill in Manchester in 1775-6, bought water rights on the Hockanum River just south of Tolland Turnpike in what was then Windsor.

The company thrived and a second mill was built. Henry Hudson bought a Foundryman paper making machine built by George Spafford of South Windham. Previously paper had been made one sheet at a time, the new machine increased production.

In 1842, the paper mill was decided to Menachon Hudson, son of Henry and Maria (Holley) Hudson. That same year a bill passed the Legislature annexing a portion of Windsor to Manchester. In 1843, a section of land containing two square miles was set off to Manchester from the southern part of Windsor. With the land came Hudson's mill and all the houses within the designated area including the school house.

The old school house was auctioned off for fifty dollars, drawn away by a team of twenty oxen and built onto the Weldon house on Tolland Turnpike just west of Boggy Stow. In 1853, Collingwood Alexander, who lived just south of the school site, sold to the Third District of Wapping Forty rods of land and the new school house was located farther back from the road than the original school house. Emily Alexander taught at this school for six terms during the 1860s.

Ed Meese, call your office. It turns out that you were right, after all. Remember back in the Dark Ages (which is how the liberals are trying to make us think of the Reagan era these days) when Ed Meese, in his capacity as consulor to the president, was hauced before some suitably outraged committee of Congress to explain the growing number of "homeless"?

Meese correctly noted that some of them are simply the bums and hobos of yore, still carrying on their losing battle with the Demon Ruin. Another large batch are the ex-inhabitants of the nation's mental hospitals whom the American Civil Liberties Union managed to spring in the 1960s and thereafter in a misguided burst of kindness - enthusiastically endorsed, incidentally, by the nation's governors, who saw the cost of maintaining mental hospitals drop dramatically.

The third and latest-arriving component of the "homeless" are the victims, innocent and not so innocent, of the explosion in drug use during those much-admired 1960s. Most of these, including many of the women, are drug-addicts themselves; the children, save for those unlucky enough to have been born addicted, are not.

Meese explained all this, and then added, under questioning, that many of these "homeless" actually don't want housing.

Homeless don't want homes

Ed Meese, call your office. It turns out that you were right, after all. Remember back in the Dark Ages (which is how the liberals are trying to make us think of the Reagan era these days) when Ed Meese, in his capacity as consulor to the president, was hauced before some suitably outraged committee of Congress to explain the growing number of "homeless"?

Meese correctly noted that some of them are simply the bums and hobos of yore, still carrying on their losing battle with the Demon Ruin. Another large batch are the ex-inhabitants of the nation's mental hospitals whom the American Civil Liberties Union managed to spring in the 1960s and thereafter in a misguided burst of kindness - enthusiastically endorsed, incidentally, by the nation's governors, who saw the cost of maintaining mental hospitals drop dramatically.

The third and latest-arriving component of the "homeless" are the victims, innocent and not so innocent, of the explosion in drug use during those much-admired 1960s. Most of these, including many of the women, are drug-addicts themselves; the children, save for those unlucky enough to have been born addicted, are not.

Meese explained all this, and then added, under questioning, that many of these "homeless" actually don't want housing.

Indonesia: the final frontier

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — In the world war of economics, the sprawling Southeast Asian nation of Indonesia is shaping up as a key battlefield for the 1990s. The Japanese know it, as do the Germans, the English, the South Koreans and the Taiwanese. But American business people have yet to set up camp. The generals of U.S. industry may be hard pressed to find Indonesia on the map.

The fifth most populous nation on the planet, with more than 180 million people living on a necklace of 13,677 islands, has the largest and cheapest work force in the Pacific. It is teeming with untapped natural resources. And best of all, it is begging for business.

Three years ago, the government of Indonesia went on a deregulation binge, cutting away the red tape and tariffs that had discouraged foreign investors. Since then, South Korea has launched 126 business ventures in Indonesia, Japan has begun 116, Taiwan 109, and Hong Kong 53. The United States has weighed in with only one business venture. In fact, 10 years ago, the U.S. business presence in Indonesia was far greater than it is today.

In Asia, Indonesia is viewed as the sleeping giant that is finally beginning to stretch.

Even without an enthusiastic response from the United States, Indonesian President Suharto is patting himself on the back for the "miracle" deregulation that fostered — an up-and-coming stock market and a growth rate of 6 percent.

So there these "homeless" have squatted for 30 months — not the prettiest sight imaginable, but testimony to San Francisco's big heart. Now however, after the usual bureaucratic delays, the shelters are ready and waiting — and what do you suppose? You (and Ed Meese) guessed it. The majority had to be forced to move.

To quote reporter Larry Maatz, in the San Francisco Examiner, "I'm not going to take a bath."

So somebody who's been waiting in a small cluster of tents near Larkin and Polk streets.

"I'm for damn sure not going to any four walls and locked in at night and they tell you when to go to bed and when to get up and when to eat and when to take a bath."

So somebody who's been waiting in a small cluster of tents near Larkin and Polk streets.

Regulators' stock studies faulted

By JOHN M. DOYLE The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A congressional study released Monday faulted the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission for their conflicting analyses of last October's stock market slide.

The two rival agencies, which prompted a Senate panel to request a study of the issue by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

The GAO report came out on a day when the Dow average fell more than 107 points from the day's trading but recovered to close down 56.44 points.

"SEC and CFTC emphasize different factors and take different points of view to reach their conclusions. This sometimes results in different conclusions, each of which is supported by basically the same trading data," said the GAO report, which was released by the securities subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee.

"The GAO report finds the SEC-CFTC jurisdictional dispute continues to detract from their working relationship," said Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., chairman of the subcommittee.

"The agencies' major differences threaten their ability to work together to minimize risks to the capital markets. This untenable situation must be resolved," he added.

Spokesmen for the SEC and CFTC denied that their feud was hurting their ability to work together on other issues.

"We don't feel that the ongoing debate has compromised the commission's ability to work with its sister agency, the SEC," said CFTC spokesman David Gray. "That fact has most recently been shown by today's market activity," he said referring to a more than 100-point drop in the Dow during the early hours of trading Monday.

"Our staff people have spoken to the exchanges (CFTC Chairman Wendy Gramm) has talked with SEC Chairman Richard Breiden, and when appropriate we have passed along information that was necessary for the SEC to do its job," said Gray.

SEC officials declined to comment because they had not seen the final report but they noted that except for the dispute over stock index futures the agencies cooperate.

The Bush administration wants to strip the CFTC of its authority over stock index futures and give it to the SEC.

The employees of Union Bank of Switzerland were the latest to be mentioned in the SEC's investigation of alleged insider trading that preceded disclosure of a $5 billion merger of Comel and Stamford-GTE.

SEC attorney James A. Kidney also said Monday the commission is investigating trading activity surrounding the July 2 offer by Raner Group PLC, Britain's largest jewelry chain, to buy Kay Jewelers Inc., a retailer based in Alexandria, Va., for $328 million.

Some of the foreign accounts that are the subject of the Comel-GTE probe also "seem to have been doing a lot of trading in Kay Jewelers," Kidney said.

Traders ID'ed in Contel-GTE probe

By VERA HALLER The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nine Swiss bank employees bought Contel Corp. securities in the days before GTE Corp. announced a deal to make profits of at least $1 million.

On Friday, the SEC named four West Germans and three European entities that allegedly traded Contel securities based on inside information about the yet-unannounced buyout.

Study: S&L losses not caused by fraud

By DAVE SKIDMORE The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Just as the Bush administration and Congress are gearing up to fight savings and loan crooks, a new study indicates that fraud caused only a small percentage of thrift losses.

Bert Ely, a financial institutions analyst in Alexandria, Va., maintains that fraud cost $5 billion, or only 3 percent of what he figures is the bailout's $147 billion total cost.

Most of the losses come from falling real estate values and from excessive interest rates paid by ailing institutions to attract deposits, he figures. Bad bailout deals made in 1988 and losses on junk bonds also contributed.

Fraud, nevertheless, has become the focus of political debate on S&Ls. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, making his first congressional appearance on the subject, and top banking regulators were scheduled to testify before the Senate today before the Senate

Home values down

By JOHN CUNIFF The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A sure way to draw attention to yourself is to forecast a collapse in the value of housing, so it is no mystery why such forecasts erupt from time to time from analysts and writers.

Regrettably, some of analysts, many of them on Wall Street, often attract attention and even build reputations on publicity, and few things are better at garnering that publicity than the aforementioned forecast.

The national home ownership rate is about 64 percent, which means the great majority of the population has some sort of home equity to worry about. It is their biggest single investment. It is their bank, their hope, their future.

Toss a bomb at it and you'll get attention.

You can, as some have done, declare that the sale of foreclosed housing properties owned by the Resnick Trust Company will undermine the market, even though such properties amount to only a tiny fraction of the whole.

Or you can warn that changing demographics — a slowdown in household formations of younger, first-time buyers — will destroy the base that supports prices in the higher tiers.

That argument has been used. If there are no bids for the least expensive existing homes, the type purchased by first-time buyers, then how can the people who reside in them move up to more expensive properties?

While the argument has been unfilled for a decade, it persists, even as young Americans complain that they can't find beginner homes — the kind the erstwhile demographers say there'll be less and less demand for.

These are some of the other housing-collapse contentions: Recession will bring down prices. Tight money will bring down prices. Poor affordability will bring down prices. A lowering of tax benefits will bring down prices.

The forecasts persist, but prices hold, in spite of occasional horror stories. There has been much clamor about a price collapse, but the clamor just doesn't reverberate in the national housing statistics.

In contrast, there are some sound reasons why housing prices could go higher rather than lower.

1. Gains in income and wealth.

2. Trading up by baby boomers with rising incomes, and trading down by older ones.

3. Higher land costs. Finished lots today account for 27 percent of the price of a house, compared with 21 percent in 1969 and 11 percent in 1949. Many factors, including greater environmental demands, suggest a continuation.

4. Higher construction costs.

5. Shortages. It might sound far-fetched to talk about a lack of homes to buy, but shortages may be recurring event in housing markets. Oversupply leads to crackdowns on lending and building, and that leads to under supply.

6. Investment. Homeowners have lost money during deep recessions in Houston and Detroit. But generally speaking, housing values rise in time. Moreover, that rise is enhanced by leverage; many people bought homes for just 10 percent down.

7. A house is a basic need, like food and clothing. There is always a need and therefore always some level of demand. In that respect it is unlike some corporate shares, whose value can disappear with the company.

Finally, a house is a roof over your head. Try protecting yourself from the rain with a stock, bond, mutual fund or certificate of deposit.

Burning mad over flag issue

One week before the Supreme Court reaffirmed its 1989 opinion that you can burn your flag if you want to, The Curmudgeon came up with a few precautions.

First, that the justices would soon come down in favor of protecting flag-burners. In this regard, we have the right to make any political statement we want, however disgusting it may seem to others.

Second, that politicians of all stripes would bow and screech and proclaim their outrage to those licentious, not to Mrs. Thomas D. Smith, chairman, Mrs. LeVerne Holmes, Mrs. Jessie Sweet, Mrs. Annie McLagen, Mrs. John D. Flavell and Mrs. C. G. Taylor who later became manager. In 1942 the country was at war, travel was limited and food supplies were rationed. Simple Simon Sandwich Shop was forced out of business. The old school building became a residence in the area.

Manchester Herald April 27, 1984: "Whoever built and remodeled the old Oakland District School never set the landmark preserved. The one room school turned into a home, stood in the path of a highway about where interstate eighty six ramp off exit ninety four intersects Tolland Turnpike now."

Dow plunge an indicator no 'Blue Monday' cure yet

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Wall Street may have mended many of its ways since the excessive 1980s, but it still hasn't found an antidote for the "Blue Monday" syndrome.

The tendency for volatile selloffs to occur right after weekends repeated itself Monday when the Dow Jones industrial average, fresh from a series of runs at record highs above 3,000 points, took its worst plunge in six months.

The average, an index of stocks in 30 of the country's best-known industrial corporations, dropped more than 100 points in the first 90 minutes of trading, then fluctuated through much of the day in heavy trading. At the close, it was down 56.44 points, or 1.9 percent, at 2,904.70.

Catalysts for the fall ranged from revived fears of higher interest rates to continued anxiety over the federal deficit.

The drop did not seem to presage a crisis on the magnitude of the crash of October 1987 or mini-crash of October 1989.

Companies as diverse as American Telephone & Telegraph, Dow Chemical and U.S. Shoe posted earnings below expectations for the quarter ended June 30.

Investors initially treated the profit reports as individual cases, dumping shares of the companies involved while leaving other stocks unscathed.

VERNON — A three-week lockdown at Somers State Correctional Institution has been lifted as officials bring more control to the troubled maximum-security facility.

MANCHESTER — Brian Silva, the golf course architect engaged by the town to study expansion of the town-owned golf course, will report to a committee of town directors at a meeting set for Aug. 6 at 5 p.m. in the golf room at Lincoln Center.

Director Ronald Ouellet, chairman of the committee, said the directors expect to learn in some detail about various alternatives explored by Silva for location of new holes and entrances to a proposed new portion of the course, and location of a building on the course for public use.

MANCHESTER — After years of severely restricting nurses from giving students over-the-counter pain relievers, school officials are easing up a bit.

This fall, school nurses will be able to give students Tylenol, an aspirin substitute, and ibuprofen, an anti-inflammatory agent, with their parents permission to relieve pain from braces, menstrual cramps and headaches that are not caused by injury or illness, according to Lynne Gustafson, head nurse for the schools.

Prison lockdown lifted

VERNON — A three-week lockdown at Somers State Correctional Institution has been lifted as officials bring more control to the troubled maximum-security facility.

The new rules include fewer recreational privileges for all inmates and closer monitoring of inmate movement, said state Correction Department spokesman William Wheeler.

The lockdown, lifted Monday, was implemented on July 1 after about 70 inmates squared off in the prison yard amidst rumors of a riot. Three inmates were injured, some seriously.

MANCHESTER — An application for a special exception to operate an automotive repair and maintenance facility on New State Road was denied without prejudice by the Zoning Board of Appeals Monday night.

The ZBA has received a letter from Richard Stays, the town's Water Division engineer, saying the division does not favor an automotive repair facility on land over the underground water supply that feeds town wells on New State Road.

FBI manhunt is launched for boy

VERNON — Police say they believed a 7-year-old boy who was allegedly kidnapped by his father over the weekend has been spirited away to Puerto Rico, where the father's parents have legal custody.

Local police have issued a warrant for Orlando Perez Jr., 30, charging him with first-degree custodial interference and third-degree assault.

Lt. Michael E. Greenier, who heads Vernon's detective division, said Monday he believed Orlando Perez Jr. has fled to Puerto Rico with his son.

Complaint filed on sex verdict

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A judicial watchdog group has filed a complaint against a Bridgeport judge who threw out a jury verdict convicting a man of sexually assaulting a 4-year-old girl.

Women for Judicial Justice filed the complaint with the state Judicial Review Council against Superior Court Judge Leander C. Gray.

Gray overturned a jury verdict June 14 against Kounghong Simmanachab, 21, of his apartment, who was charged with fourth-degree sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor.

The complaint, filed recently, charged that Gray was "neglectful and incompetent in the performance of his duties," and urged an investigation into his conduct regarding the case.

The council investigates complaints against state judges and can recommend they not be reappointed.

A telephone call to Gray was not immediately returned Monday.

Women for Judicial Justice monitors court proceedings concerning the sexual assault and battering of women and children.

Yale taps Princeton cop for chief

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale University has named a public safety official from Princeton University as its new police chief.

Allan R. Gayet, managing director of public safety at Princeton's Forrestal campus, was chosen Monday to succeed Louis Cappelletti. Cappelletti stepped down in January on the advice of his doctor after nearly 20 years as Yale police chief.

Gayet, former deputy chief of the Essex County Sheriff's Department in Newark, N.J., will begin leading Yale's 56-member police force in late August, the university announced.

He has been director since 1986 of 45 safety staff members at Princeton's Forrestal campus, a research complex about two miles from the main Princeton campus.

Abortion clinic owner arrested

GREENWICH (AP) — The owner of a New York abortion clinic was charged with breach of peace after he allegedly threw horse manure at anti-abortion protesters demonstrating near his Greenwich home, police said.

Dr. Steven G. Kaali, 47, who owns Women's Medical Pavilion in Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., was released on his own recognizance after his arrest Saturday. He is scheduled to appear July 30 in Stamford Superior Court.

Police said a group of six protesters had completed a brief march near Kaali's secluded estate when a man identified as Kaali threw a bucket of horse manure at them.

The protesters had earlier participated with about 70 others in a march through downtown Greenwich. The march was the third in a series of weekly protests.

One protester said she was struck by the manure.

"I was so humiliated. I was in shock," said Carol Centonze, 50, of Yonkers, N.Y.

Women's Medical Pavilion has been a regular target for protests during the past two years.

$88m cable sale wins preliminary approval

SEYMOUR (AP) — The Department of Public Utility Control has given preliminary approval to the $88 million sale of Valley Cable Vision to the Tele-Media Co. of Western Connecticut.

The DPUC's draft decision, released Friday, said the proposed sale should "continue the current level of cable services provided subscribers without any unreasonable rate increases."

Westinghouse Credit Corp. and Valley Cable Vision shareholders will provide financing for the sale, with Westinghouse providing debt and equity funding.

Tele-Media is a cable television company based in State College, Pa., with operations in 19 states and 500,000 subscribers.

Probation officer in heated dispute

TORRINGTON (AP) — Attorney Victor Muschelli has been a bit hot under the collar lately and decided to share the experience.

Muschelli, who has been trying to negotiate a new lease with the state for two years, Monday turned off the air conditioning in the office space that the state rents from the Torrington Department of Correction.

"I'm certainly not a computer expert, but I don't think this heat is doing any good for the machines," John Lodsini, acting chief of the Torrington probation office, said Monday.

Lodsini said the day without air conditioning in the second-story office sent temperatures up into the 80s.

Muschelli, who began eviction proceedings without success three months ago, said that in addition to cutting off the air conditioning, he will no longer clean and supply the offices or remove trash.

"I'm at my wits' end," Muschelli said. "I'm not going to do any more for them than I have to. They're basically squatters now."

The dispute dates to June 1988 when the state's second five-year lease ended with Muschelli. He agreed to a six-month extension but has been trying to get rid of the state ever since.

After being told a move out of the space was imminent, Muschelli went to court in April where attorneys for the state argued that under grounds of sovereign immunity that it can't be evicted and can stay in the office space as long as necessary.

Court upholds conviction

HARTFORD (AP) — Thomas E. Marra Jr., a convicted murderer who has been sentenced to 125 years in prison for various charges stemming from his involvement in a Bridgeport stolen car ring, has lost a round of appeals before the state Supreme Court.

The high court Monday unanimously upheld Marra's August 1988 convictions on kidnapping, arson and larceny charges stemming from the 1984 disappearance of Richard A. Noel, Marra's alleged partner in crime.

Prosecutors alleged Marra arranged to have Noel kidnapped after he told police of Marra's involvement in the stolen car ring.

On appeal, the court rejected several arguments made by Marra, including his claim there was insufficient evidence against him to support a conviction on the charge of accessory to kidnapping.

The court also rejected Marra's claim that he was deprived of a fair trial because of media coverage during his trial that speculated about his possible connection to three murders.

The court wrote that coverage of the trial "could not be characterized as inflammatory, sensational or unfair and was not so inherently prejudicial as to deprive him of a fair trial."

Marra has been well known to Bridgeport police for years. In 1981, the FBI attempted to use him in a sting operation to set up Bridgeport Police Superintendent Joseph Walsh on bribery charges. But Walsh turned the tables on Marra and embarrassed the FBI by arresting Marra for attempted bribery.

Marra was convicted in February 1989 in the murder of Alex Palmieri, who was believed to be another of Marra's crime partners. Palmieri disappeared in 1984. About two years later, Bridgeport authorities found what they believed to be his foot, still inside a sneaker, in a park near the edge of Bridgeport Harbor.

Three injured on I-84

WATERBURY (AP) — An 80-year-old Waterbury woman driving east in the westbound lanes of Interstate 84 was seriously injured when her car crashed into an oncoming vehicle, police said.

Nessie Elliott was in serious condition this morning at St. Mary's Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said. Mrs. Elliott's husband, Clarence, 78, who was a passenger in the car, was in stable condition.

The driver of the westbound car, Michael Marcianno, 83, of Waterbury was treated and released.

State police Trooper Debbie Roy said Mrs. Elliott drove up a westbound off ramp shortly after 3:30 p.m. Monday and entered the highway. After traveling about 100 yards, the Elliotts' car collided with Marcianno's car.

Waterbury firefighters used the jaws of life to pry Mrs. Elliott from her crumpled car.

Richard Dunn of Windsor Locks, who was driving a semitrailer westbound, said that he and another driver swerved to avoid Mrs. Elliott's car.

Roy said that in an initial interview after the accident, Mrs. Elliott appeared convinced she had been driving properly and that someone had pulled out in front of her.

State deficit now at $252m

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The General Assembly's nonpartisan budget office has delivered another jolt of bad fiscal news, estimating the 1989-90 state deficit at $252 million and questioning the Assembly's plan to wipe it out.

The estimate by the Assembly's Office of Fiscal Analysis, made in a budget report issued Friday, indicates the Assembly's plan to erase the deficit has fallen behind by about $80 million, and may fall further behind, said OPA Director Ralph J. Caruso.

The 1989-90 fiscal year ended June 30, but taxes have not been fully collected, so state officials are still using estimates to predict the state's fiscal condition.

The Assembly, which scrambled to erase the deficit this spring, planned on using three sources: $102 million from the budget; $85 million by changing some tax laws and juggling the schedule of tax payments; and $70 million by carrying a deficit over to next year and repaying it out of the following year's surplus.

The OPA report, however, shows state revenues have slipped by $86 million since April, wiping out any gains expected from the changes in tax law. Further, Caruso warned, the state corporation tax is dropping so swiftly that it imperils the Assembly's plan to build up a $70 million surplus next year to erase the deficit.

The OPA estimates the corporation tax — a rough measure of the health of the state's companies — will produce just $790 million this year. That figure is considerably less than the $967 million the Assembly expected, and less than the 1988-89 total of $970 million. The OPA also predicted nearly zero growth in the collection of state sales taxes, another indicator of the weakness of the state's economy.

"With the corporation tax falling off as steeply as it has, we've got some real concerns for fiscal year 1990-91," Caruso said. "We won't be projecting again until September, but it looks to me like there's going to be a problem."

The O'Neil administration's Office of Policy and Management reviews its fiscal predictions once a month. On July 1, OPM estimated the current-year deficit at $231 million. The next OPM budget report is due Aug. 1.

Pols angered by GOP plank

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — An 11-word section of the Republican Party's convention platform has drawn criticism from three of the four candidates for governor, who say the GOP is wrong to blame Democratic policies for the stepping death of a 9-year-old Wallingford girl.

The first to criticize the GOP was U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-3rd District, who called on Republican gubernatorial candidate John G. Rowland to distance himself from the section of the GOP platform.

Morrison was quickly joined in his criticism by state Rep. William Cibus, D-New London, and independent candidate Lowell Weicker, who said through spokesmen that they also disagreed with the GOP's claim.

The preamble to the GOP platform, adopted without controversy at the party's convention last week, sharply criticized Democratic policies that have shaped state government for three decades.

The preamble read in part: "Their party's policies brought us the hideous violence of David Peterson."

Peterson is the mental patient who wandered away from a state mental hospital and stabbed Jessica Short to death at a street fair in Middletown in July 1989.

The murder raised questions about the security of state mental hospitals and led to legislation authorizing construction of a more secure mental health facility for violent offenders.

Morrison, who raised the issue at a state Capitol news conference, said the GOP's reference to the stabbing was "one of the low points in Connecticut politics."

"Apparently the Republican Party seems to think that it's appropriate to make partisan politics out of the death of a poor little girl at the hands of a deranged man who was not the responsibility of any political party, but was a man who was bent on the worst kind of mayhem," Morrison said.

"There's nothing to retract," said Jack Goldberg, a spokesman for Rowland. "The platform was approved by the entire convention. This sounds more like the desperate statement of a desperate candidate who's trying to resuscitate a dying campaign."

State Republican Chairman Richard Foley said the reference to Short's death was an appropriate way for the GOP to highlight what he considers failings in Democratic policies.

"It is a true statement that policies of state government allowed things like this to occur," he said.

Cibus and Weicker, however, agreed with Morrison that the reference to Short's death was inappropriate.

"The Republican position was absurd," said Jonathan Peltz, campaign manager for Cibus, the Democrat running against Morrison. "A terrible tragedy in Middletown should not be seen as a political event, and the Republican Party debates itself when it engages in that kind of pandering."

Avice Moehan, a spokeswoman for Weicker, said Weicker was furious about the reference to Short's death.

"I cannot convey the depth of Lowell Weicker's feeling about the political use of the tragedy of that little girl's death," she said. "It goes beyond anger."

Murder conviction upheld

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD (AP) — A sharply divided state Supreme Court has upheld the murder conviction of a New Haven man who claimed he was improperly pressured into giving a confession when he was 17 years old.

In a 3-2 ruling made public Monday, the court held there was no impropriety when Bernard Whitaker's confession was read to the jury last year.

Chief Justice Ellen A. Peters and Justice Robert D. Glass, however, said in their dissent they questioned the credibility of the police officer who said Whitaker willingly confessed to the drug-related drive-by shooting of a bystander.

The dissenting justices noted that Whitaker refused to sign a document saying he was waiving his rights to remain silent and to consult an attorney. They said Whitaker correctly believed only written or taped confessions could be used in court.

According to an account in the justices' decision, Whitaker had been involved in drug dealing in New Haven when he and two companions opened fire on a stranger with handguns, believing him to be a Jamian and a rival in the drug trade. They killed Marlon Wayne Williams, 21, of Queens, as he was standing on a street corner.

Police caught Whitaker and brought him in for questioning. He was interrogated for about three hours by police Officer Joseph Poliphant in 55. Comedian Ruth Buzzi is 54. Actor Chris Sarandon is 48. Actress Lynda Carter is 39.

Thirtysomething population is shunning blue jeans

NEW YORK — Blue jeans, for decades the uniform of rebels and conformists alike, are fading from the fashion forefront as aging baby boomers opt for new — and more flattering — looks. To put it bluntly, "as their pocketbooks have gotten thicker, so have their waists," said Alan Millstein, publisher of the New York-based newsletter Fashion Network Report. Jeans don't fit the lives of the thirtysomething generation, which is starting to confront the flab of middle age and facing the fact that "gravity is the reality," Millstein says. The biggest fans of jeans, traditionally tight-fitting, youth-oriented fare, are those between the ages of 14 and 24, a segment of the population that has been shrinking for the past decade, said Dan Chew, marketing manager for Levi Strauss & Co., headquartered in San Francisco. Jeanswear Communications, a New York-based fashion industry group, said in a study released in June that total domestic jeans sales dropped from a 1981 peak of 502 million pairs to 387 million pairs in 1989. Deborah Bronston, an analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., estimates the number of jeans sold declined by 6 percent during the first three months of this year alone.

Designer promotes 1930's furniture

By BARBARA MAYER The Associated Press. If there had been a way to transport a skyscraper to Paris, Americans would have been able to shine at the 1925 Paris design exposition, where it is said art deco was born. But American designers of the era were concentrating on architecture, so there was nothing to show, says John Young, the embarrassment led to public school searching in the United States as deep as the one that followed the Russian launch of Sputnik in 1957. "Commissions were established to find out why we were lagging behind Europe in the field of design," says Young of Coral Gables, Fla. The questioning produced a brief period in the 1930s when streamlined modern furniture was king. A life-long devotee to furniture, Young now has a mission to revive the '30s designs and to extol their creators. With the backing of Knoll Industries, he set up Design America in Coral Gables and introduced 23 sleek models, mostly leather seating, at the NEOCON trade show in Chicago in June. The pieces will be sold at retail as well as to the trade. Although high-style leather seating is thought of as a big-city look, the Midwest was where streamlined modern furniture was most popular in the 1930s, says Young. In addition to setting up Design America, Young, 61, is president of Spinneybeck Enterprises, Spinneybeck, which markets leather to the furniture industry, was recently acquired by Knoll. Young recalls the family living-room furniture of his youth in Piedmont, Mo., population 800. He says it was made by an American company and designed by Wolfgang Hoffmann, a son of Josef Hoffmann, the Vienna Secessionist architect. "So far, I've uncovered about 17 names of individuals I think were very important in making this era the greatest in American furniture design," he says. Some names, such as Raymond Loewy, Henry Dreyfus, Walter Dorwin Teague, Norman Bel Geddes, Gilbert Rohde and Russel Wright are as well-known today as they were in their own time. Others, however, such as Ken Weber, are obscure. Among reproductions Design America has introduced are seating by Paul Frankl and a steel and lacquer table by Alphonse Bach. He expects to introduce more Frankl pieces and furniture by Weber and Rohde. "These guys were heroes to me," he recalls, "and I began to buy their pieces when I saw them in antique stores." Besides the furniture, he opened his home to such icons as an amusement-park bumper car, the red Mobil horse pulsating in neon and a toaster that browns bread on a conveyor belt. "I saw them and I couldn't resist," says Young, who in similar helpless enthusiasm collects design books and catalogs from the period.

Don Juan skills help others relate

By ELLIOTT MINOR The Associated Press. SAVANNAH, Ga. — The skills that made Don Juan the world's most successful lover are helping people gain the trust of others and communicate more effectively, whether in the courtroom, the office or the bedroom. Neurolinguistic Programming (NLP), says Janice Gantt, a licensed instructor, is a set of skills that helps people establish rapport and influence others by unlocking the door to unconscious information that influences human behavior. Developed in the late 1970s by computer programmer Richard Bandler and linguist John Grinder, NLP can help lawyers interview witnesses and pick friendly jurors, sales people to market more merchandise and married people to communicate with inattentive spouses. "NLP will teach you how to establish rapport," says Gantt, who teaches NLP at the Coastal Georgia Center. "By watching eye movements, by watching body posture, by listening to the predicates people use, you will understand how they experience the world and then you can match their world. You also want to listen to their voice qualities. Are they speaking fast or slow, high pitched or low?" The founders based the NLP system on extensive studies of people who were good at helping others make changes in their lives. The people they studied had one thing in common: all were good at establishing rapport with others. "Once you gain rapport at the conscious and unconscious level, people begin to believe you understand their problem," says Gantt, a Savannah businesswoman. She says Don Juan became an unwitting practitioner of NLP when he asked his lady friends to tell him about their first love experiences. "As they did that he would look into their eyes, mirror their body posture and gently touch them, thereby establishing an anchor," she says. "He established deep rapport with the conscious and unconscious."

Sizing up large men

By the year 2000, 25 percent of all American men will fit a category known as "big and tall" — standing at least 6 feet 2 inches in height, weighing at least 225 pounds or both, retailers estimate. Here are a few tips for today's fashion-conscious big and tall man: •Seek looks that are neat, tailored and well fitted. Shirt tails should be long enough to stay tucked in and tie lengths must be in proportion with jackets. The correct pant length, rise and waist as well as shirt sleeve length and even pocket sizes are critical details. •The latest fashion trends and colors can be worn as accents that are flattering. Try this season's hot neon colors as trim on sweat suits or sportswear. •For the tall man, there are brand name walking shoes and dress styles that minimize a large foot size. For the big man, accurate shoe width is important to supporting body weight.

Outer-underwear has stretch

What's "in" can also be "out" — at least when it comes to the latest trend towards innerwear as outerwear. Some of the newest lingerie styles are made to be seen with streetwear — a camisole peeking out from under a suit jacket, or a pair of leggings from beneath a sheer, full skirt. What makes it work for some fashion designers, is using the luxurious lingerie fabrics and adding a touch of stretch. One example is a whole new category of lingerie called "intimates with Lycra." The brand is made of whisper-weight blends of nylon or cotton with a touch of "Lycra" spandex for fit, comfort and shape that holds up without shrinking or bagging after laundering. Fabrics range from smooth knits to pointelle, ribbon effects, fancy stretch laces or a combination of these materials tender "lingerie" shades or sophisticated deep tones that invite mixing and matching.

SPORTY LINGERIE — "Intimates with Lycra," by Henson Kickerick, is made of soft, stretchable, anti-cling nylon and cotton material.

Outcast finds happiness

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "It's My Turn in L.A.," the girl who was snubbed by the "in group" in high school and had no desire to go back for her class reunion, inspired me to write. I was just another girl who was not part of the "in group." I wore glasses, had "zits" and never had a date.

At the time of my 10th reunion (in 1983), I was a successful pharmacist and faculty member at a state university. I knew that I was going to be there and I decided to attend the reunion alone. Well, it just so happened that another classmate decided to do the same thing — so he went, too.

An hour before the evening ended, we "discovered" each other. We walked to my car, holding hands, and I felt like I was back in high school again — with the same excitement and "zits." One thing led to another, and we married a year later.

Now I have a wonderful husband and three lovely children.

WENDY WEINGART BENNETT, MILWAUKEE

DEAR WENDY: Congratulations. Your letter was a welcome "upper." This office loves happy endings.

DEAR ABBY: I know it's a little late, but I wanted to report on another miserable Mother's Day. It started out OK, but when my husband and I stopped off at a local ice cream parlor, the clerk asked, "Are you a mother?" When I responded "No," I was told that if I had been one, I would have gotten a free ice cream cone. How wonderful!

I can understand stores wanting to share in the Mother's Day celebration, but I resent it. I cannot have children, and I don't need it rubbed in by some clerk reminding me on Mother's Day that I am not a mother and therefore not entitled to an ice cream cone. I didn't want in the first place.

My heart goes out to those other childless women who may have miscarried or lost their only child to death. It's thoughtful to bring to mind a subject that is never far from the surface, especially on Mother's Day.

If shops want to celebrate the occasion, why don't they just give their small gift to any woman of childbearing age (and up), and let it go at that? The pain that is caused to those of us who are not mothers is unbearable.

DEAR BARBARA: You make a point that I had never considered, and I thank you for it. Moral: Just because you're celebrating, don't assume that everybody else is.

PEOPLE

Spike Lee has been celebrated as a trailblazing filmmaker, the talk of the Cannes Film Festival and a Hollywood maverick.

But residents of the Fort Greene section of Brooklyn, where he has opened a store that sells memorabilia from his movies, insist he's still one of their own.

"You have to respect Spike," said Marc Sweeting, 20, a student who looked over T-shirts after Spike's joint opened Monday. Lee's latest movie, "Mo'N BETTER Blues," had its premiere in Manhattan the same day.

He came from Brooklyn. He makes his movies in Brooklyn. And he put his store right in the middle of it. "You have to respect Spike," Sweeting said.

Spike's joint offers T-shirts, posters, books, cigs, postcards and other items celebrating such movies as "Do the Right Thing," "She's Gotta Have It" and "School Daze."

Lee, 33, lives in Fort Greene, where several scenes from his movies have been filmed.

He said he opened the store because he was besieged by fan mail and phone calls requesting buttons, T-shirts and other movie memorabilia.

Lee said he hopes to use profits from the store to finance movie projects.

A watch given to Redd Foxx by Elvis Presley fetched $17,500 at an Intertel Revenue Service auction to help pay the comedian's back taxes.

The sale Monday of about 70 items belonging to Foxx raised $34,000. In May, eight of his vehicles were sold by the IRS for about $48,000.

Foxx did not attend the auction, but his attorney, Marc Risman, said he would be disappointed the items would be brought in so little. Foxx had been offered $50,000 for it, Risman said.

The IRS claims Foxx owes $2.9 million in back taxes and penalties.

Deborah Norville got a New York taxi driver friend for cursing at her during a ride in December.

The co-host of NBC's "Today" show told New York magazine she nailed a cab driver by lisdro Ortiz.

When she arrived at her destination, Norville said, she tapped out the partition window to tell Ortiz where to drop her. She said Ortiz cursed her and became more abusive when she began to write down his license number.

Norville said she refused to give him a tip and Ortiz slammed shut the money vent and sent the fare flying. A coin struck her in the eye, she said.

"I was absolutely shaking when I got out of the car," she was quoted as saying in the magazine's July 30 issue.

Ortiz, 31, was fined $100 at a hearing April 2, said comment on the issue of registering motorcyclists to wear helmets. (In Stereo)

Doctor should diagnose tremor

DEAR DR. GOTT: I need information on a nervous condition. I'm calm when sitting in a chair but begin shaking up a storm when I pick up anything or attempt to write. I find myself being able to do less and less as time goes on.

DEAR READER: You seem to be describing an intention tremor, uncontrollable shaking that appears during movement.

This could be due to a number of conditions, the most common of which are:

• Enhanced physiologic tremor: This is shakiness produced by stress, anxiety, fatigue, certain substances (such as alcohol and caffeine) and metabolic disturbances, such as hypothyroidism.

• Benign hereditary chorea: The cause of this common but harmless disturbance is unknown, but the tremor is worsened by performing skilled acts (such as handwriting) as well as by anxiety and stress.

• Serious neurological diseases: In multiple sclerosis (progressive loss of nerve-tissue insulation) and amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (progressive nerve degeneration), also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, tremors can appear before other, more disabling neurological symptoms develop.

Presley tremors should be examined by a neurologist who should, after testing you, be able to diagnose the cause of your shaking and suggest treatment. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Multiple Sclerosis."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been advised that I have a 3-1/2-inch cyst on my liver. I'm on no medication and not taking any kind of treatment. Will I experience any serious effects in the future? How serious is it to extract the fluid from the cyst, and what will keep it from refilling?

DEAR READER: Most liver cysts are harmless; they're often discovered by accident during examinations, such as ultrasounds, for other purposes. Unless you are having symptoms (such as pain or liver enlargement) or your doctor suspects a more serious ailment (such as a tumor), I think you're better off disregarding this benign cyst. A tumor would require surgical removal.

To extract the fluid from the cyst, your doctor will either have to operate or introduce a hollow needle through the abdominal wall into the cyst. These unpleasant procedures should be avoided if possible. Follow your doctor's advice with respect to monitoring the cyst.

Police tapes of Brando unusable

By LINDA DEUTSCH The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A police tape made after a fatal shooting at the mansion of actor Marlon Brando cannot be used in court against his son, Christian, who faces a murder charge in the death of his pregnant wife.

Municipal Court Judge Larry Felder ruled Monday that detectives called to properly advise the younger Brando of his rights following the May 16 shooting of Dag Dollitt, 26.

Prosecutors wanted to play a lengthy recording of Brando's statements to detectives, but his lawyers objected.

Detective Steve Ott said he informed Brando of his right to remain silent, but neglected to say that if he could not afford a lawyer, one would be appointed.

Felder ruled the omission was serious enough to invalidate the tape as evidence.

The dispute came a pretrial hearing that will determine whether there is sufficient evidence for Brando to stand trial for murder and a weapons violation charge.

The elder Brando, star of such films as "On the Waterfront" and "The Godfather," sat solemnly in the courtroom's front row, occasionally taking notes.

His 32-year-old son appeared nervous at his was led into the jammed courtroom. Outside, reporters, camera crews and movie fans crowded hallways.

Officer Steve Cunningham, the first witness to testify, said Brando told him he killed the boyfriend of his pregnant wife, Cheyenne, during a scuffle.

"I didn't mean to shoot him," Christian Brando was quoted as telling Cunningham, the first police officer on the scene.

Ms. Brando was then seven months pregnant with Dollitt's child. She recently gave birth to a boy in Tahiti, where the Brandos maintain a home.

She is said to be suffering from nervous exhaustion and a doctor told authorities she could not return to California to testify.

French fry lovers get an oil change

By PAUL A. DRISCOLL The Associated Press

CHICAGO — After a little prodding from a well-heeled health crusader, the nation's top four hamburger chains agree: french fry lovers need an oil change.

McDonald's Corp. and Wendy's International announced Monday they are switching to cholesterol-free, all-vegetable oil to cook their fries.

Hardie's made the change two years ago and Burger King said last week it will no longer use beef tallow, the industry's previous standard oil for french fry vases.

"Everything that's deep fried is now done in 100 percent cholesterol-free oil," said McDonald's spokesman Chuck Rubner. The company started cooking its chicken items, pies and fish in vegetable oil four years ago, he said.

McDonald's has been a target of newspaper and TV ads peddling anti-cholesterol crusader Phil Sokolof, who accused the world's largest restaurant chain of poisoning Americans with fatty foods.

Sokolof said a recent Advertising Age-Gallup Organization poll indicated a significant number of people responded to his ads by shying away from fast-food outlets.

I believe you should be examined by a neurologist who should, after testing you, be able to diagnose the cause of your shaking and suggest treatment. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Multiple Sclerosis."

"That's really ridiculous," countered McDonald's spokeswoman Teri Capastano. "We've been in the nutrition business a lot longer than Mr. Sokolof has been in the ad business."

Rubner said McDonald's has been experimenting with using vegetable oil for eight years and that test marketing in 500 restaurants began in October.

"Clearly, the challenge that we were looking at was to maintain the same taste — the worldwide favorite French Fry Chicken, but to do it while at the same time improving the nutritional value," said Rubner.

SOLVES CHESS RIDDLE — This is a recent photo from files of Raymond Keene, chess columnist of The Times of London, who believes he has solved the riddle of a woman missing in Ireland. Police called in Keene, after a suspect told them that Theresa Terry, 43, who returned to Britain from her home in Australia, was dead and buried in the south of Ireland. The suspect refused to give the location of the body, but instead provided a rough map, and a series of chess-like problems, to police, who when they came to a dead end, called on Keene's chess knowledge to solve the problem.

Horseshoe contest gets under way

By SONYA ROSS The Associated Press

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — He may not be the first president who bankers for a ring, but organizers of the 1990 World Horseshoe Tournament credit George Bush with boosting the popularity of the ancient pastime.

"His playing has boosted us tremendously," said Bob Champion, a spokesman for the National Horseshoe Pitchers Association. "It's similar to golf, when (Dwight) Eisenhower was into it. And what Kennedy? Wasn't he into football?"

Doctors advocate food cooked in polyunsaturated fat or monounsaturated fat, found in corn, soybean and other oils. Vegetable oils to avoid are palm and coconut.

Rubner said McDonald's has a market share that exceeds that of Hardie's, Burger King and Wendy's combined. Sales by McDonald's franchises and company-owned stores totaled $4.6 billion for the second quarter of this year.

Two other fast-food rivals, Arby's and Kentucky Fried Chicken, also are ready for their food in vegetable oils.

Residents support millionaire's ire

GREENWICH — Residents fed up with "For Sale" signs in their well-to-do neighborhoods have made a folk hero out of a millionaire charged with spray-painting the signs in protest, officials said.

"Hully for you! I have wanted to do that for years," said one letter writer in support of 64-year-old Rene Anselmo, who was arrested July 3 for spray-painting a real estate sign he said was offensive and illegal.

Anselmo has pleaded innocent to a charge of third-degree mischief. Town Planner Jim Sandy said he's received at least 35 letters supporting Anselmo, a 23-year Greenwich resident who donated $40,000 to the town last year to plant trees and pay annually for the planting of flowers on town property.

"The town should recognize your efforts to beautify and improve the quality of life, instead of charging you of all people, with mischief," another resident wrote.

"I'm getting letter after letter telling me I should be laughed instead of cried," Sandy said last week. "They love him."

After Anselmo's arrest, the president of Pan American Satellite Corp. said real estate signs were "turning off these streets with a dead end. Anselmo said he spray-painted the sign because it had been illegally placed on town property and admitted he had painted others.

Jeannie Shaffer, the town's zoning enforcement officer, said the received four telephone calls last week from residents complaining about allegedly illegal signs, double the number she usually receives in a month.

The town's zoning regulations say homeowners can place signs on their land, but they cannot place them on town-owned property, which is the land adjacent to the road.

One week after his arrest, Anselmo submitted to Shaffer a list of 127 signs he deemed offensive, including lawn signs used by home improvement contractors and burglar alarm companies.

Real estate agents, who are trying to sell houses in a slow market, aren't happy. Stanley Klein, president of Empire Realty Corp., called Anselmo's actions "mindless vandalism."

"I was almost tempted to spray-paint Mr. Anselmo's gate," Klein said.

There's a lot of people in this town who feel like I do," he said. Anselmo faces a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and six months in prison if convicted. He is due back in Stamford Superior Court Aug. 24.

'Ghost' spooks 'Die Hard 2' out

By JOHN HORN The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — The ethereal romance of "Four Weddings and a Funeral" took its first place at the box office, collecting a lively $15.1 million in its second weekend out.

Figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. showed "Ghost" with a robust per-screen average of $8,945, more than double the average for "Die Hard 2."

"Ghost," which could become the summer's surprise hit, stars Patrick Swayze and Demi Moore in the story of how Swayze's ghost tries to save his lover, Moore, and solve his own murder.

"Die Hard 2" fell to No. 2 after two weeks in the lead, collecting $10 million. In third with a modest opening of $8 million was the spier drama "Arachnophobia," the first release of the Walt Disney Co.'s Hollywood Pictures.

"Navy Seals," the latest war-themed, action-adventure, premiered in fourth with ordinary grosses of $6.5 million. In fifth was the re-released cartoon "Judge Book, taking in another $6.1 million for a two-week capture of $18.1 million.

"Days of Thunder," with Tom Cruise in a stock car and carrying an attractive doctor, finished in sixth with ticket sales of $5.5 million. Bill Murray's "Quick Change" stayed in seventh on receipts of $3.3 million.

"Dick Tracy" reported ticket sales of $3.1 million for eighth, and should pass the $100 million mark by next week.

Audiences quickly grew tired of "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane," plummeted 53 percent from fifth in fifth with a gross of $3 million.

In 10th was "Total Recall," starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, netting $2.2 million.

Harrison Ford in "Presumed Innocent" arrives in theaters Friday, and it is expected to generate big box office business.

Below are the figures compiled by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theaters screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. "Ghost." Paramount, $12.5 million, 1,400 screens, $8,945 per screen, $32.3 million, two weeks.

Family struggles with AIDS, suicide

By SUSAN ALLEN
The Associated Press

DUXBURY, Vt. — Doug Folsom bought a gun, left a recorded message telling his wife to "hang tough," climbed into the hammock outside his family's Duxbury home and pulled the trigger.

That was more than a month ago, on June 6.

The suicide followed two years of watching his young wife and 3-year-old daughter Angela wither from acquired immune deficiency syndrome. He lived with the fear that 4-year-old Nicolette, who so far has managed to escape the disease, would test positive.

"That poor man, watching his little girl and his wife just go through this deterioration. This forced him to kill himself, something he said he'd never do. So he was forced to leave me," said Jennifer Folsom, her body frail from fighting the disease and struggling to keep her family together.

She studied a framed photograph of the couple taken years earlier. Both are smiling. Doug's arm is tossed over her shoulders. The picture rests on a table within easy reach of Jennifer's chair, surrounded by tissues and bottles of medication.

"I have a very strong attitude of 'Try me.' His whole attitude was 'Why me?' He danced as long as he could. The wind was just taken out of his sails. I feel bad for him. He didn't deserve that."

AIDS has been a relentless enemy since Jennifer was diagnosed in February 1988. The doctor gave her the test results in his empty office after closing; he was concerned, she said, about how his staff would react to an AIDS patient.

"I drove home. It was a long ride," Jennifer recalled. "All I could see was gloom and doom and death. I thought of suicide. I went into my room and I didn't ever want to come out."

It seemed incredible that a blood transfusion during an emergency appendectomy in a Massachusetts hospital in 1979 — before blood supplies were tested and purged of the virus — probably carried the AIDS virus into her body.

Angie, she said, contracted the virus during the pregnancy or later from breast-feeding. Nicolette is tested every six months, and Jennifer prays her healthy, older daughter will remain free from AIDS.

"Here I am, this white, middle-class housewife living in Vermont, trying to make a living. How dare this disease eat into my home? It's AIDS. I eat and drink and sleep AIDS. But I'm not afraid of it anymore," Jennifer said.

Jennifer told her parents she was suffering from AIDS, but told others that she had cancer. "We weren't sure how people were going to react," she said.

She and Doug worried that business would fall off, that people would be afraid to come to their auto-body shop. The health insurance bill, which runs about $560 monthly, continues to be the first bill paid each month, and she is left with about $10,000 in other unpaid bills.

Her nightmare had been that Nicolette would be harassed when she starts school next year — a fear the school nurse put to rest by telling Jennifer, "There will be no discrimination here."

Jennifer lives day to day, and the past week had been a bad one. She was wrapped in a blue-and-white afghan and tired. She had lost 10 pounds last month, and was worried about Angie's lesions and weight loss.

Angie, damp from a bath and refusing to be moved off her mother's lap, was struggling to breathe with a feeding tube up one nostril and a pacifier wedged stubbornly in her mouth.

Jennifer glanced distractedly out the living-room windows, overlooking a faded yellow motorboat parked in the side yard and a small, neat vegetable garden. Wind chimes blew in a breeze along a second-floor balcony.

"I lie in bed and there are days I don't even want to get up. It's hard dealing with family life and self-worth, knowing that I can't care for my own kids and my husband," she said, breaking down. Then quickly regaining control, she said, "I have such a strong gene in me that wants to go on. I hope I can hang on."

"I went to a party this weekend at my sister's. And I was sitting there exhausted and I thought ... 'I'm 29 years old. I just can't be doing what a normal kid would be doing."

She wants to tell her story, she said, so people will realize the AIDS epidemic exists in rural areas of Vermont.

"Vermont does have AIDS," she said. "The children of this generation need to be taught now because we don't know if there is going to be a cure."

She wants to "live with dignity and not have people whispering behind my back. I'm not ashamed of who I am. (AIDS) invaded my home without permission. I'm just hoping that by me going public, somebody else can be helped."

For her own help, Jennifer relies on her family. Her parents visit daily to help care for the children, her is struggling to keep her family together. Angela also has AIDS, and a month ago, Jennifer's husband shot himself, unable to deal with the AIDS.

brother has taken a leave of absence from his Washington job that supplements Jennifer and Angie's weekly trips to the University Health Center in Burlington, and two community fund-raisers are planned to help raise money to cover the mortgage and medical bills.

Jennifer also attends a support group — one woman, 10 homosexual men.

Although a recent entry in her diary reads, "Survival will come from humor, optimism, laughter and hope," Jennifer knows death is inevitable.

"I think about it more lately, that death is reality. This is reality. You can't wish it off in the shower. It's here and it's real and there's no light at the end of this tunnel. It keeps closing in. I feel myself constantly. 'You've come too far to give in now.' I just wish it would go away, and I know it's not going to go away," she said.

Doug Folsom knew all of this, and he could not bear it. Nicolette, who says her mother and sister have AIDS, "understands as well; she once drew a picture of the blue sky with a rope hanging down to the house, telling Jennifer it was God sending a rope for Angie.

But Nicolette recently annulled the caption.

"It was for Daddy," she said.

Family struggles with AIDS, suicide

By SUSAN ALLEN
The Associated Press

DUXBURY, Vt. — Doug Folsom bought a gun, left a recorded message telling his wife to "hang tough," climbed into the hammock outside his family's Duxbury home and pulled the trigger.

That was more than a month ago, on June 6.

The suicide followed two years of watching his young wife and 3-year-old daughter Angela wither from acquired immune deficiency syndrome. He lived with the fear that 4-year-old Nicolette, who so far has managed to escape the disease, would test positive.

"That poor man, watching his little girl and his wife just go through this deterioration. This forced him to kill himself, something he said he'd never do. So he was forced to leave me," said Jennifer Folsom, her body frail from fighting the disease and struggling to keep her family together.

She studied a framed photograph of the couple taken years earlier. Doug is smiling, Doug's arm is tossed over her shoulders. The picture rests on a table within easy reach of Jennifer's chair, surrounded by tissues and bottles of medication.

"I have a very strong attitude of 'Try me.' His whole attitude was 'Why me?' He danced as long as he could. The wind was just taken out of his sails. I feel bad for him. He didn't deserve that."

AIDS has been a relentless enemy since Jennifer was diagnosed in February 1988. The doctor gave her the test results in his empty office after closing; he was concerned, she said, about how his staff would react to an AIDS patient.

"I drove home. It was a long ride," Jennifer recalled. "All I could see was gloom and doom and death. I thought of suicide. I went into my room and I didn't ever want to come out."

It seemed incredible that a blood transfusion during an emergency appendectomy in a Massachusetts hospital in 1979 — before blood supplies were tested and purged of the virus — probably carried the AIDS virus into her body.

Angie, she said, contracted the virus during the pregnancy or later from breast-feeding. Nicolette was tested every six months, and Jennifer prays her healthy, older daughter will remain free from AIDS.

"Here I am, this white, middle-class housewife living in Vermont, trying to make a living. How dare this disease come into my home? It's AIDS. I eat and drink and sleep AIDS. But I'm not afraid of it anyone," Jennifer said. Jennifer told her parents she was suffering from AIDS, but told others that she had cancer. "We weren't sure how people were going to react," she said.

JENNIFER FOLSOM, 29, is pictured here with her 3-year-old daughter, Angela, in their Vermont home. Jennifer is struggling to keep her family together. Angela also has AIDS, and a month ago, Jennifer's husband shot himself, unable to deal with the stress.

She and Doug worried that business would fall off, that people would be afraid to come to their auto-body shop. The health insurance bill, which runs about $560 monthly, continues to be the first bill paid each month, and she is left with about $10,000 in other unpaid bills.

Her nightmare had been that Nicolette would be harassed when she starts school next year — a fear the school nurse put to rest by telling Jennifer, "There will be no discrimination here."

Jennifer lives day to day, and the past week had been a bad one. She was wrapped in a blue-and-white afghan and tired. She had lost 10 pounds last month, and was worried about Angie's lesions and weight loss.

Angie, damp from a bath and refusing to be moved off her mother's lap, was struggling to breathe with a feeding tube up one nostril and a pacifier wedged stubbornly in her mouth.

Jennifer glanced distractedly out the living-room windows, overlooking a faded yellow motorboat parked in the side yard and a small, neat vegetable garden. Wind chimes blew in a breeze along a second-floor balcony.

"I lie in bed and there are days I don't even want to get up. It's hard dealing with family life and self-worth, knowing that I can't care for my own kids and my husband," she said, breaking down. Then quickly regaining control, she said, "I have such a strong gene in me that wants to go on. I hope I can hang on."

"I went to a party this weekend at my sister's. And I was sitting there exhausted and I thought ... 'I'm 29 years old. I just can't be doing what a normal kid would be doing.'"

She wanted to tell her story, she said, so people will realize the AIDS epidemic exists in rural areas of Vermont.

"Nobody does have AIDS," she said. "The children of this generation need to be taught now because we don't know if there is going to be a cure."

She wants to "live with dignity and not have people whispering behind my back. I'm not ashamed of who I am. (AIDS) invaded my home without permission. I'm just hoping that by me going public, somebody else can be helped."

For her own help, Jennifer relies on her family. Her parents visit daily to help care for the children, her

In May the South African Bridge Federation (SABF) held its national congress in Marburg, Lesotho. This was the equivalent of our American Contract Bridge League's North American Championship. In an SABF past championship, there are three quality sessions, after which the field is divided into four separate quarters. The quarter of diamonds was the highest competition and awards. Obviously victory in the lower quarters has less prestige than victory in the higher ranks.

I played in the event with American bridge professional Gaylor Kastle, and in a qualifying round we discovered that there's no way to run over the South's two-heart opening was

Key meets with NFL boss
NEW YORK (AP) — Tight end Clarence Kay of the Denver Broncos met with NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to discuss an alcohol-related driving conviction that could lead to a lifetime suspension as a third-time substance abuser. League spokesman Greg Aiello said Tagliabue and Kay met for 45 minutes but that the commissioner made no decision on the case.

Saberhagen undergoes surgery
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two-time Cy Young winner Bert Saberhagen underwent surgery on his right elbow. Dr. Steven Joyce removed two loose fragments and said no ligament, tendon or nerve tissue was discovered.

Saberhagen is 5-7 with a 3.10 earned run average in 18 starts this year. He left his last start, on July 15 against Boston, after only four innings.

Daniel wins title in playoff
VIENNA, Ohio (AP) — Beth Daniel, who overcame a two-stroke deficit on the final three holes, made a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a playoff to beat Patty Sheehan in the rain-delayed $400,000 LPGA Phur-Mor Youngstown Classic.

Sheehan shot 3-under-par 69 and Daniel had a 1-over-par 73 for the two-day final round for 9-under 207 total on the 6,297-yard Square Creek Country Club course. Danielle Ammannacker was third at 208 and Debbie Massey and Ayako Okamoto tied for fourth at 209.

The No. 1 picks in both drafts are non-graduates. The NBA's Derrick Coleman, picked first by the New Jersey Nets, played four years at Syracuse and left a semester short of a degree in sociology. The NFL's Jeff George, selected by the Indianapolis Colts, came out of Illinois as a redshirt junior one semester short of a degree in speech communications.

Some football players were as close as one course to graduating. In almost all of those cases, the players withdrew to attend pre-draft scouting combines and rookie mini-camps. That tendency is a constant irritant for academic administrators and has prompted NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to promise new guidelines next month.

Typical is the case of Ohio State guard Tim Mosley, a ninth round pick by the Washington Redskins. He left school one quarter short of his degree in natural resources and forestry.

"It's a bother to me that people look at graduation rates and he's a negative even though he went through five years here with a double major," said Larry Rumanoff, athletics academic coordinator at Ohio State.

"The pros say 'Now' and he drops out. He was one-third of the way through chemistry when he had to drop it in the spring. He would have graduated. He's a great kid who worked hard and did better here than he did in high school. But he's always a negative in graduation studies."

That does not mean, however, that Mosley won't eventually get his degree. Rumanoff expects him back after football season. Many student-athletes find their way back to campus to finish what they started.

"In some places," Rumanoff said, "you leave and

ARLINGTON (AP) — While the Texas Rangers were reaching the elusive .500 mark Monday, the New York Yankees' power outage continued.

Rangers ace Kevin Brown (12-7) pitched a four-hitter for his American League-leading sixth complete game as Texas won 3-2. Not even solo homers by Steve Sax and Kevin Maas could turn the fortunes of the Yanks, who are hitting .247 and have scored only 343 runs — both league lows.

When the Yankees had Brown on the ropes in the first, with a run in and two runners on, Maas struck out and Roberto Kelly hit a shallow ground ball. New York had only four baserunners the rest of the game.

Once again, Manager Stump Merrill confronted the question of whether his first game start, Andy Hawkins, threw a no-hitter, will hit this season.

"You don't like to think that way," Merrill said. "We're not getting any production out of the bottom of the lineup. (Gerrit) Barfield (12 home runs, 40 RBIs) is hurt, and that takes a nice bat out of our lineup. It's not like we've got five Red Cards on the bench."

"We had Brown on the verge of coming out in the first. A couple of knocks here, and one of their best pitchers is hurt. The game is in a hurry. You're not gonna beat anybody with four hits."

Yankee starter Chuck Cary (4-6) conceded that he feels the pressure. He hasn't had a victory in his last six starts. Monday, Cary got out of jams in the second and third and was tied with Brown, 1-1, until Ruben Sierra hit a two-run single in the fifth.

"I love the lineup we put out there," Cary said later. "These guys can get hits and score runs. They're just not hitting right now, but that happens in baseball." "It's happening too often to the Yankees this season."

Tom Fischer started for New Britain and worked the first five innings to gain the win and raise his record to 10-8.

The Detroit Red Wings' NHL, sports officials say.

Sergei Fedorov, a 20-year-old center on the Soviet national team, disappeared after a preliminary game Sunday after the U.S. team in Portland, Ore., said an official of USA Hockey, the governing body for amateur hockey in this country.

The Red Wings picked Fedorov in Round 4 of the 1989 National Hockey League entry draft.

Florida admits its guilt
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida says it's guilty of major rule violations for the second time in six years but insists a compliance program designed to prevent problems with the NCAA is working.

The school on Monday released copies of its response to allegations stemming from a 15-month investigation of the Gators' football and basketball programs.

The document said significant steps have been taken to eliminate infractions since Florida was placed on probation for football irregularities in 1984 but that "human frailty" undermined efforts to avoid more problems with the NCAA.

At repeat violations, Florida is a candidate for the NCAA's so-called death penalty — the temporary suspension of either or both sports — but University president John V. Lombardi admitted such severe punishment.

"One can never prejudge what a committee of its peers will do," Lombardi said.

"But we don't think, if you review the evidence, that you will find any justification for the death penalty," he said. "We would hope the NCAA will recognize there is very little point in penalizing existing coaches and players who have not participated in any of the activities that are at issue."

U.S. track talent shows off at Goodwill Games

By PETE HERRERA The Associated Press

SEATTLE — On a day marked by slow times and close finishes, America's deepening pool of track talent upheld its tradition and fortified for the future.

The second day of track and field competition at the Goodwill Games belonged to American stars like sprinter Leroy Burrell, hurdler Roger Kingdon and heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersee.

The U.S. won a total of 14 medals Monday — five gold, five silver and four bronze — including a sweep in the 100, where the 21-year-old Burrell handed two-time Olympic champion and world record holder Carl Lewis his first defeat this season.

Kingdom, the Olympic gold medalist at Los Angeles and Seoul, led another U.S. sweep in the 110-meter hurdles, and edged closer to the form that made him the top track and field athlete in the world last year by edging fellow American Kingdom, undated by four false starts that led to American Tonic Campbell's disqualification, caught Does at the finish. Americans took the top four places and Olympian Arthur Blake was third and Cletea Clark finished fourth.

"I thought so at first, but then I saw the video ...," he said of the race replay and whether he believed he had won. "It's tough to lose that way."

Cuba's Ana Quirot completed a sweep of the women's 400 and 800 meters, taking the 800 Monday in 1:57.42. Quirot, track and field's woman athlete of the year in 1989, also won the 400 and 800 at last year's World Cup in Barcelona.

Yelena Yelamina, 20, won the women's high jump at 6-7 1/2, the best in the world this year.

U.S. champion Joe Falcon won a slow men's 1,500 meters in 3:39.77 for his first victory in a major international championship. Falcon bolted into the lead with 600 meters left and held off a late challenge by William Tanui of Kenya.

Puerto Rico's Plumer, Jose American 5,000-meter champion, won a tactical women's 3,000-meter race in 1:57.59, more than 10 seconds faster than her best this year. Plumer said she had dedicated the win to her late grandfather, whose funeral was held in the city.

Soviet hockey player Sergei Fedorov apparently defected to join the Detroit Red Wings. A Detroit television station reported he had defected to the Goodwill Games, the Red Wings confirmed the defection.

UNLV players will seek relief from NCAA ban

By TIM DAHLBERG
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — If UNLV won't take legal action to block an NCAA ban on post-season basketball play, Ramin Rebel players might.

An attorney representing several players said late Monday that he has been asked to try to overturn the NCAA decision.

"The ones I've spoken to are quite hurt and they want action," Stephen Stein said. "They feel they should not be penalized for something that occurred when they were six or seven years old."

The NCAA announced Friday that the Rebels could not defend the national title they won in April because the university had not suspended coach Jerry Turkman, as ordered, in 1977. Turkman sued the NCAA over his suspension and won a court order preventing it.

UNLV officials said earlier that they would not go to court to battle the NCAA and would work within the organization's guidelines in appealing the ban on the defending national champions.

But Stein, who has represented UNLV players in interviews with NCAA investigators probing recruiting violations at the university, said the "probability is quite high" that he will sue the NCAA on behalf of the players.

Any suit, he said, would be separate from any university action in appealing the ban on post-season play for the upcoming season. Stein is paid by UNLV to represent players during questioning by the NCAA, but said the university has no part in a possible players' suit.

Stein declined to discuss any grounds for the suit, which he said would be the first of its kind by players against the NCAA. He said he was contacted by several players, but declined to identify them.

"It's still in the embryonic stages," Stein told The Associated Press. "We still have a lot of research to do."

UNLV officials were not immediately available for comment on the possibility of a player suit.

UNLV President Robert Maxson said for 1 1/2 hours with Turkman and athletic director Brad Rookman on Monday to plan an appeal of the NCAA's decision to ban the Rebels from defending their national championship.

Maxson said the appeal will rest on a fairness issue, the fact that UNLV was already penalized once for the infractions dating back to the mid-1970s.

Stein said that if he and the players decide to go ahead with a suit, it would be filed "very soon, probably within the next 30 days."

OPEC nations discuss ways to raise oil prices

By SALLY JACOBSEN
The Associated Press

GENEVA — OPEC ministers today sought a way to boost oil prices and defuse tensions in the Persian Gulf, where Iraq has threatened military action against Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates for exceeding production quotas.

Members declined to discuss Iraq's threats in advance of a meeting of the cartel's eight-member governing committee later today.

The 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries formally raised its mid-year conference Thursday.

Kuwait's new oil minister, Raed Salom al-Amir, declined to comment on reports that Iraq has massed tens of thousands of troops on its border with Kuwait's 2nd garrison area.

Iraqi Oil Minister Ghulamreza Agachah expressed confidence the cartel would agree to increase its target price, now at $18 a barrel, to $20 or more.

Merchants like new cop patrol

By NANCY FOLEY

MANCHESTER — Having a police officer patrol Main Street on foot has made a difference, according to several downtown merchants interviewed.

"It's been doing a very good job of keeping people out of the parking lot," said the manager of Grammy's Corner Store, 706 Main St. The manager, who did not want to give his name, said that panhandling was the major problem before the foot patrol was instituted by the Board of Directors two weeks ago.

Bernard Apter, of Regal's Men's Shop, 903 Main St., said the foot patrol had made a dent in illegal parking. Apter, who is also the chairman of the town Parking Authority, said he had gotten calls from people upset that they had been issued tickets. Many of them believed they had a right to park downtown because that's where they work, Apter said. "Maybe it was a rude awakening," he said.

The Parking Authority had pushed for a long time for a foot patrol officer to enforce the two-hour parking limit. Some of the worst offenders, according to the authority, are people who work in the businesses and offices downtown and park their cars in public parking places.

Apter said that it is too soon to tell whether the foot patrol solved the other problem for which it was designed — ending harassment and assaults that businesspeople had complained about.

Mayor Terry Workman called for the patrol after receiving a petition from more than 900 Main Street merchants and their customers who complained of obnoxious, drunken behavior — even assaults — by street people and others on Main Street. "A cop is not the whole answer, but it helps," Apter said.

After said he was afraid to comment on the safety issue on Main Street, because those who called for the patrol are being perceived as being against the homeless. "The downtown merchant has become the bad guy," he said. "You have to be careful now what you say because it's misinterpreted."

Following newspaper reports of the Board of Directors' meeting, those involved with the Samaritan Shelter downtown criticized some members for allegedly blaming all of the area's problems on the homeless.

Adelino Coelho, of Personal-Tec, 825 Main St., said that he does not know yet how much of a difference the patrol has made. But parking is certainly being more strictly enforced and his customers say they feel more comfortable, he asserted. Coelho is secretary of the Parking Authority.

Pello leaving party post

HARTFORD (AP) — A disagreement over State Rep. Jonathan Pello's Party endorsement in the upcoming Democratic gubernatorial primary has prompted him to give up his post as the party's poll director.

Pello, a state representative from Storrs, is managing the gubernatorial campaign of state Rep. William Cikes, D-New London.

His boss, State Democratic Chairman John Dwyer, supports U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison, the candidate endorsed at the party's convention. Dwyer also expects all the party's paid employees to do the same.

Torrington sued over fireworks

TORRINGTON (AP) — A local woman and her 7-year-old son have notified the city they'll seek damages for injuries suffered when an errant rocket exploded in a Torrington park during a July Fourth fireworks display.

Christa Chausse and her son Steven, formally, notified the city of the intent to sue and the mother said she had filed a lawsuit. She anticipated insurance settlement to meet living expenses, her attorney Steven Levy said Tuesday.

Home sales post increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes in June, bolstered by falling mortgage rates, posted their second increase since last September, a real estate trade group reported today.

The National Association of Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes rose a modest 1.2 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.34 million units.

Benjamin Maldonado, 19, Juan Ocasio, 16, and a 15-year-old child were arrested on robbery and assault warrants Tuesday, Hartford police Sgt. Gerald Kunnick said.

Highway workers seek safety

HARTFORD (AP) — Highway construction workers, reacting to a state government newspaper article, this week want more state police protection to slow down speeding drivers.

Baghdad renewed its verbal assault on Kuwait on Tuesday. The Iraqi government newspaper Al-Jumhuriya accused Kuwait of coordinating its moves with the United States to "clear the way for foreign powers to intervene in the area."

Meanwhile, Navy Secretary H. Lawrence III said in congressional testimony that American ships were put on alert in the Gulf on July 24.

Three arrested in pizza attack

HARTFORD (AP) — Police have arrested three people in a pizza deliveryman who defended himself with a pocketknife, killing one of his attackers.

Benjamin Maldonado, 19, Juan Ocasio, 16, and a 15-year-old child were arrested on robbery and assault warrants Tuesday, Hartford police Sgt. Gerald Kunnick said.

Archbishop named

LONDON (AP) — George Carey, the Bishop of Bath and Wells, has been named Archbishop of Canterbury today, succeeding Robert Runcie as spiritual leader of the state Church of England and 70 million Anglicans worldwide.

At Lotto Express, on the corner of Center and Adams Street, gamblers can purchase lottery tickets from Massachusetts, New York, California, Illinois, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Florida, and West Virginia. They can also play the 10-state joint lottery called Lotto America.

The owner of the interstate lottery store, Thomas Wilkinson, said Wednesday.
