

Want an NFL franchise? how about $100 million

By HAL BOCK
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Interested in buying an expansion football franchise? If you've got a spare $100 million or so and can wait a couple of years, why the NFL may be able to accommodate you.

Whether you get the team, however, will depend more on your city and its ability to support pro football than it will on you and how deep your pockets are.

Tying to real between the lines of Thursday's NFL expansion status report, officials of cities bidding for teams saw plenty of positives.

Charlotte thinks two straight NFL seasons sellouts gives it the edge. Jacksonville figures an 82,000-seat stadium, already in place, just talking for a team, is its advantage. Baltimore, St. Louis and maybe even Oakland are probably counting on an attack of conscience.

For its part, the NFL was playing it coy.

would say only that two-team expansion by 1993 was "a realistic objective," and that the location of new teams would depend "solely on the potential for communities to support an NFL team and not on the identity of potential ownership of teams. In- dividual ownership of new teams will not be determined until after the expansion communities have been selected."

Still, that was good enough to stoke the fires of hopeful cities.

"We are encouraged that there has been formal movement toward a timetable for expansion," said Mark Richardson, the son of ex-NFL wide receiver Jerry Richardson and general manager of Richardson Sports, which is spearheading Charlotte's effort. The city unveiled plans for a 70,000-seat stadium this week.

"Our investment in having complete site specific drawings prepared and the cooperation which the city, county and state governments are providing will give us that much of a head start," Richardson said. "We would have no trouble whatsoever being ready with our state-of-the-art stadium for the 1993 season."

The Richardson sold out an NFL exhibition game between Philadelphia and the New York Jets in Raleigh last year and have sold out another exhibition Aug. 11 in Chapel Hill between Washington and Atlanta.

"Our 9.9 million market of new NFL fans within a reasonable drive and our overflow crowd in Raleigh last year and this year's sellout in Chapel Hill will be strong evidence in favor of our area," Richardson said.

Officials at Touchdown Jacksonville also are optimistic.

"It will be a dogfight, but we like our chances and I would count us out," Arthur "Chick" Sherrill told the Florida Times-Union. "Remember, Jacksonville and Baltimore haven't laid a brick yet on their stadiums."

"We feel very good about our prospects," said P. Wayne, chairman of Touchdown Jacksonville.

Colts wouldn't mind one bit if Eric stays away forever

By HANK LOWENKRON
The Associated Press

ANDERSON, Ind. — Indianapolis Colts tackle Kevin Call finds teammate Eric Dickerson's talk of leaving and wouldn't mind a bit if the All-Pro running back stays away forever.

Dickerson fulfilled his threat to boycott the opening of training camp for veterans Thursday. The team is considering a five-day notice that could lead to Dickerson's suspension.

"From the things that he's said, my personal opinion is we don't need him," Call said. "After you had enough somebody like that, what are you going to do when this guy shows up? How's that going to react with other players?"

Dickerson has frequently criticized the offensive line, which includes Call, saying running behind it is an invitation to injury.

"After talking to other people around the league, he's done it to other people," Call said. "He's told Chris Hinton things about me last season that I found out through a roundabout way and that's wrong. He's a man. I'm a man. Tell me to my face if you've got a problem with what I'm doing."

Unsigned veterans concern Call more than Dickerson, who will be ordered to report within five days or risk suspension without pay for the season.

"We will send the five-day letter," General Manager Jim Irsay said of the notice the club will send Dickerson. "There's not much to say at this point. It's either come in and play or don't. We're not engaging in any extension talks or any contract talks."

He said Dickerson will be fined $1,500 for each day he remains absent.

"To fulfill the contract is the only option that we see is available. If he doesn't then we'll have to look at other alternatives that we will do," Irsay said.

Dickerson has said at various times that he wants a raise over the $1.45 million he's scheduled to receive in 1990.

Call, meanwhile, said he takes Dickerson's criticism of the offensive line as a personal attack.

"That's what hurts the most," Call said. "He's told Chris Hinton things about me last season that I found out through a roundabout way and that's wrong. He's a man. I'm a man. Tell me to my face if you've got a problem with what I'm doing."

Trinidad Parliament taken over

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Muslim militants on Friday claimed to have taken over the Parliament building in this Caribbean capital and to be holding hostage the prime minister and his Cabinet, according to the rebel leader.

Abu Baker, head of the black rebel group Muslim Meen, had one of the station announcers read a statement on national television about 6 p.m. EDT in which he announced the uprising and claimed to be holding captive in Parliament the prime minister, Arthur Robinson.

There also were unconfirmed reports of casualties in this city of 300,000 residents.

No reason was immediately known for Friday's uprising, and there has been no official reaction from the government. Attempts to reach the island by telephone Friday night have been unavailing, with repeated recordings that all international circuits were busy.

The rebel statement said the Cabinet was being held hostage with Robinson, a veteran political leader, but it could not be ascertained how many were inside the Parliament building.

Trinidad's ambassador to the United States told CBS Radio in Washington that Robinson and the entire Cabinet, which had been meeting at the time, were believed to be in the custody of the rebels.

A radio station in Trinidad, government-owned National Broadcasting Service, said police headquarters in downtown Port-of-Spain had been blown up Friday by the rebels. The rebels are based in St. James, outside the capital, and near police headquarters.

Trinidadian James Fadelie of Miami said he had spoken with a friend in Port-of-Spain by telephone earlier Friday evening.

"They're all locked up in their houses. They cannot go outside," Fadelie said. He added that his friend, Peter Lambie, had told him some civilians had been killed in the downtown area and two police stations had been blown up.

House and Senate back Iraq economic sanctions

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate voted Friday to impose economic sanctions on Iraq, and government sources said the Bush administration is considering its own, milder moves against the Baghdad government.

The Senate, which took the strongest action, voted 80 to 16 to cut off $1.2 billion in U.S. loan guarantees that Iraq now uses to buy American wheat, rice, lumber, cattle and commercial goods such as tires and machinery.

Acting on an amendment by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., senators also moved to bar sales to Iraq of weapons, sensitive technology and items which can be used for military purposes. The amendment was made part of the 1990 farm bill.

The move, and a watered-down sanctions package approved by the House, were signs of growing congressional concern about Iraq's human rights abuses, intimidation of its neighbors, harboring of terrorists and developing chemical and nuclear weapons programs.

There comes a time when we have to stand up and be counted," said Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who conceded that the sanctions could hurt Kansas wheat farmers. But she said human rights considerations, including reports of government torture of children, outweigh economics.

"I can't believe any farmer in this nation would want to send his products, under subsidized sales, to a country that has used chemical weapons and a country that has tortured and executed its children," she said.

He said that if the OPEC agreement pushes crude up $3.50 to $4 a barrel, as some expect will happen by December, consumers could see an increase of between 15 cents and 20 cents in early 1991, with the current glut accounting for the lag time.

In the United States, supplies of unleaded gasoline are up 10 percent from a year ago to 167.2 million barrels from 156.2 million. Crude stocks are up 50 million from 1989, to 338.7 million barrels from 330.6 million.

"Western Europe and Japan face similar situations," Steel said.

In subordinated trading Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the September contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, settled down 26 cents to $20.04 a 42-gallon barrel. The contract had lost 8 cents on Thursday.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, unleaded gasoline for August delivery finished down 0.38 cents to

FAA rule will ground pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration adopted a rule Thursday designed to ground pilots who violate drunken driving laws or are convicted of traffic offenses involving drugs.

"This kind of behavior indicates an attitude that we believe is not compatible with safe flying," said FAA Administrator James B. Busey. Individuals applying for an FAA-required medical certificate must consent to the release of information from the National Driver Register to enable the FAA to obtain and review motor vehicle offense information.

Pilots also would be required to provide written notification to the FAA on each alcohol or drug-related driving conviction or administrative action within 60 days after it occurred.

The FAA could deny an application for a pilot certificate or take action to suspend or revoke an existing certificate if the pilot received two or more alcohol or drug-related convictions or administrative actions within three years after the effective date of the rule.

The Air Line Pilots Association called the rule a "witch hunt" and said: "The existence of alcohol-related driving convictions does not correlate to flying a commercial airplane while intoxicated."

Budget cuts approved for the Pentagon

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House Armed Services subcommittee parcel more than $5 billion from the Pentagon's budget on Friday by continuing a hiring freeze for civilians and slashing maintenance funds for overseas bases, congressional sources said Friday.

The panel on readiness cut force structure support costs by $5.9 billion from President Bush's original proposal of $79.3 billion to meet levels set under a House budget resolution approved on May 1.

The action came in advance of Tuesday's session of the full House Armed Services Committee, which is expected to craft a 1991 military budget of $283 billion — $24 billion less than President Bush sought in January.

The lawmakers approved a $1.09 billion reduction in pay for the Pentagon's civilian work force, which currently numbers around 1 million people.

They also approved continuing the hiring freeze that was introduced earlier this year by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney "as a means of reducing the civilian work force," said the congressional source, who spoke on condition of not being identified by name.

This would mean 60,000 to 65,000 fewer jobs for the civilians who work for the military during the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, the source said.

The panel also slashed $914 million in funding from accounts for maintaining property overseas, a move made in line with anticipated base closures abroad due to the lessening Soviet threat, the source said.

override. Because the session is over, however, lawmakers would have to call themselves back for a special session by mail.

The bill would have prohibited abortions except to save the life of the mother and in cases of aggravated rape and incest reported to police and a physician no more than a week after they occurred.

Had the bill become law, doctors who perform abortions could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and $100,000 fines. The bill was designed to challenge the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

"I consider myself pro-life ... abortion on demand and as a substitute for birth control must be, in the name of the unborn, sharply controlled," Roemer told reporters.

But "rape is treated unevenly and unfairly" in the bill, and its seven-day reporting period "is totally unworkable and uncaring and unrealistic," he said.

The bill allowed abortions in cases of aggravated rape, in which the victim had been threatened with death or injury from a weapon. It did not protect victims of simple rape, defined as sexual intercourse when a woman is incapable of resisting, such as when she is drunk, unconscious, or afraid of the rapist.

"One of the things that I've tried to become sensitive to is the voice of women on this issue," Roemer said. "It might serve us well, legislators and governors, who tend to be predominantly male, to take time to listen to the viewpoint of women."

the confusion surrounding the accident.

The stuffed toys are donated by Grange members and collected for the paramedics by King.

When the children themselves are hurt in the accident, the cuddly new friend can be even more important. Cusson gave a choking episode as an example. Often when the medics arrive, the child has coughed up or swallowed whatever was lodged, but the paramedics still need to check the victim.

"When you approach a child with a stethoscope or a blood pressure cup, you're violating his territory," said Cusson, and a cuddly new companion diverts the child's attention.

The toys donated by the Grange are kept handy in the two vehicles used by the paramedics. But some of the larger ones are kept aside, Cusson admits, for children who have had to put up with the trauma of a hospital stay. Paramedics tend to get involved with those children and like to please them.

King started the project here after learning that Grange chapters elsewhere in the state were doing it.

She leaves her husband, Stuart Cowels, to whom she would have been married 63 years in September; a daughter and her husband, Gail C. and Charles E. Woodard of South Windsor; a brother, Robert FitzGibbon of Enfield; two sisters, Ruth Ferland of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Gladys Hocun of Holywood, Fla.; six grandchildren, Tracy and Ruth Towells, James Woodard, Geoffrey and Mark Cowels, and Dianna Coitelli; and three great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by her son, Harold S. Cowels Jr.

Family and friends are invited to gather Sunday at 2 p.m. for a service at the Samuel And Carmon Funeral Home, 419 Buckland Road, South Windsor. Burial will be at the convenience of the family at Wapping Cemetery. Contributions may be made to either Manchester VNA, 545 North Main St., Manchester, or the Wapping Community Church Building Fund.

The funeral will be at 9:15 a.m. Monday at the John F. Tierney Funeral Home, 219 W. Center St. It will be followed by mass of Christian Burial at 10 a.m. at St. James Church. Burial will be at 1 p.m. at St. Francis Cemetery in Pawtucket, R.I. Calling hours are from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Sumner Redstone Burn Center, care of Dr. Ronald Tompkins, Mass General Hospital, Fruit Street, Boston, Mass. 02114.

James L. Beattie Sr.

James L. Beattie Sr. of Manchester, died Thursday (July 26) at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the widower of Nina G. Beattie. He was born in Medford, Mass. on July 12, 1912. He was a 40-year resident of Everett, Mass., before moving to Manchester in 1979. During his almost 50-year career in the oil heat industry, he served in positions from oil burner for Generak Automatic Heat, a division of Texaco.

He is survived by his son and daughter-in-law, James L. Jr. and Eleanor Beattie of Manchester; one sister, Geraldine MacLeod of Melrose, Mass.; two grandchildren, James III and Jennifer Rose; and one great granddaughter, Emily.

Funeral services will be held Monday (July 30) at 2 p.m. at Watkins Funeral Home, 142 East Center St., Manchester. Burial will be at the convenience of the family. Friends may call at the funeral home, Monday from 1 p.m. to the hour of service. #### Suspect arrested

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Authorities have arrested a suspect in the 1986 bombing of a West Berlin discotheque frequented by U.S. soldiers that led to an American air raid on Libya, officials said Friday.

A man, described only as being of an Arab nationality, was arrested Wednesday, said Werner Thronicker, a spokesman for the West Berlin Interior Ministry.

Authorities searched six apartments and a jail cell and also seized written materials they said could help the investigation, Thronicker said.

He refused to identify the man or release any other details.

NASA conducts interviews, may return

By JANET L. CAPPIELLO
The Associated Press

DANBURY — NASA investigators have determined that test equipment used in the manufacture of mirrors for the Hubble Space Telescope is the probable source of the telescope's fuzzy vision.

The NASA board investigating the telescope's focusing problems appeared to have reached this conclusion Thursday at the end of a two-day hearing at Hughes Danbury Optical Systems Inc., the plant where the telescope's mirrors were made.

Robert R. Shannon, a University of Arizona professor who served on the Hubble Space Telescope Optical Systems Board of Investigation, said the board carefully examined the two machines used to test the telescope's principal mirror. Reports have indicated that a 1981 test result from one of the machines might have indicated a flaw in the mirror.

The Hartford Courant reported Wednesday that scientists discounted the 1981 test that indicated a flaw because they considered the test inaccurate. Shannon confirmed the report Thursday.

Hughes staff will now carefully test the equipment, known as null correctors, that controlled the shaping of the mirrors and were used to measure its smoothness and shape. The testing will be done under NASA supervision, according to board member J. Roger P. Angel, a professor at the University of Arizona.

Bad tests blamed for Hubble flaw

DANBURY (AP) — Workers bypassed a number of checks on the mirrors of the Hubble Space Telescope because they were confident their other tests were good enough, according to employees involved with the flawed scope's optics.

"The testing was woefully inadequate. The focus test is a very simple test, but the instrument was inadequate," one engineer who has worked for Perkin-Elmer for more than 10 years told The News-Times of Danbury.

A number of investigations have centered on the tests performed on the 94-inch mirror, which has a spherical aberration.

The flaw in preventing the $1.5 billion telescope from taking clear pictures, and the problem can't be corrected until 1993 during a shuttle mission.

A NASA review panel took a long look at testing procedures during a two-day visit that ended Thursday at Hughes Danbury Optical Systems.

The News-Times interviewed more than a dozen scientists, engineers, physicists and optical grinders and polishers recently. They agreed to discuss their work on the mirrors from 1979 to 1982 on the condition that their names not be used, the newspaper reported in today's editions. Some feared they could lose their jobs because the company has released several memorandums warning people not to talk to the media.

Two mirror polishers asserted that testing on the telescope's primary mirror was severely inadequate.

But they also added that the test that was done was rechecked hundreds of times. The results conclusively showed the mirror was perfect, they said. That fact led an investigative team to surmise that the measuring device was built incorrectly.

Perkin-Elmer had long used a mirror-testing procedure called null optics or null correctors. The null optics guide a manufacturer in reaching the final optical precision.

Most employees agreed that a test of a backup 94-inch mirror made by Eastman Kodak wouldn't have caught the optical flaw since that mirror was not finished.

But Robert Shannon, a member of the review panel, said Thursday that the mirror could have been tested but the procedure would have been costly.

"By careful study of them, they should tell us in detail what the form of ... the error is," he said. "We're trying to scrub this data more thoroughly than anybody has ever scrubbed it before."

The $1.5 billion Hubble, which was released from the space shuttle Discovery on April 25, has two mirrors, a main mirror and a secondary mirror. The telescope was supposed to send back sparkling images from far reaches of space, but NASA disclosed last month it suffered from a focusing flaw.

Parents ask about drowning

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Parents of a Waterbury high school student who drowned at the University of Bridgeport this week want to know how the incident happened if lifeguards were on duty, as a university spokeswoman said they were scheduled to be that afternoon.

"We've heard no answers, nothing from them," said Miriam Mars, the mother of John Mars.

Mars, 16, attending a university summer camp for promising engineering students, was found near the bottom of an indoor swimming pool at the Wheeler Recreation Center about 3:55 p.m. Tuesday, Bridgeport police said.

School system readying for fight with measles

By NANCY FOLEY
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — The school system is taking steps to ensure that no outbreaks of measles occur in Manchester as they have elsewhere in the nation.

The schools are recommending that students receive a booster measles vaccine when they have their required physical taken in the sixth grade, according to Lynne Gustafson, head nurse for the schools.

In the 1989-1990 school year, two students came down with measles, while there was one case the year before, she said. Though not high numbers, they are nonetheless the cause of concern because for many years previously, the schools had no cases of measles.

Health officials are discovering that the vaccine for measles, rubella and mumps (given in one shot) does not last for a lifetime, as they had thought, Gustafson said. Last year, 41 cases of measles were reported in the United States, she said, many of them in people who had been vaccinated.

"I think they thought it would give lifetime immunity, and what we're beginning to find is that is not the case," Gustafson said. Students are required to have a measles vaccine before they enter kindergarten, she said, and the shot in sixth grade will be a booster.

Some doctors are recommending the second shot be given before kindergarten age, she said, but other professionals believe waiting until the sixth grade will provide longer lasting protection against the disease. "It's still up in the air," she said.

It will be offered on a voluntary basis to graduating seniors because many colleges require a second vaccination.

Risks are involved in taking the vaccine, Gustafson said, but they are outweighed by the danger of contracting measles, which can cause death, deafness, encephalitis and meningitis. Students are required to have a physical examination by the end of the sixth and tenth grades. The school will provide the physicals to students who qualify for free or reduced lunches. Also, free exams will be given to children of families facing temporary financial difficulty.

Experts now believe that the rubella and mumps vaccine also wears off, Gustafson said, though more cases of measles have been reported than measles. The measles vaccine was first given in 1963 and was modified in 1975.

Gustafson said that because the incidence of formerly widespread childhood diseases have been wiped out, some parents don't realize how important the vaccine is. "The virus is still here. We haven't killed the virus," she said.

The World Health Organization had set 1990 as a goal for wiping out measles, but have now changed the target year to 2000, she said.

Hospital not planning to fill new vacancies

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Despite a critical shortage of allied health care professionals in the state's acute-care hospitals, Manchester Memorial Hospital is not recruiting applicants for a variety of positions which many hospitals have reported as vacant.

However, hospital spokesman Andrew Beck said Friday that the hospital's personnel director believes if a vacancy were to occur in certain areas, there would be difficulty in filling it.

According to survey conducted by the Connecticut Hospital Association, the fields in need of workers around the state are nuclear medicine technologists, radiation therapy technologists, ultrasound technologists, physical therapists, occupational therapists, and occupational therapy assistants.

The survey reported vacancies also for nursing positions.

Beck said the positions in question are specialized jobs that cannot be filled by entry-level employees under a program of on-the-job training. The educational process for the various positions ranges from two to five years.

Manchester does have some part-time nursing positions available, Beck said, but the hospital is not actively recruiting for people to fill those positions.

The survey by the hospital association listed the following information.

Vacancy rates for nuclear medicine technologists is at 10.19 percent; radiation therapy technologists, 22.86 percent; ultrasound technologists 9.74 percent; physical therapists, 9.5 percent; occupational therapists, 21.80; occupational therapy assistants, 43.18 percent.

The vacancy rate for licensed practical nurses is 10.6 percent and is 5.8 percent for registered nurses.

The survey calculated the rates based on budgeted full-time equivalent positions. Two half-time employees were considered as one full-time position.

Police encouraging anti-crime support

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — The Police Department is encouraging town residents to lock their doors, turn on their outside lights, and spend a night outside, all as part of annual national event to promote awareness and support for anti-crime programs.

National Night Out is to be held Tuesday, August 7. The event is designed to accomplish four goals, according to a news release issued by police.

First, it is to heighten crime prevention awareness. Second, it is to generate support for, and participation in, local anti-crime programs. Third, it is to strengthen neighborhood spirit in the crime prevention campaign.

and fourth, to send a message to criminals, letting them know that neighborhoods across the nation are organized and fighting back.

According to the release, 7,500 communities from every state joined together to participate last year. They did so by locking their doors, turning on all outside lights until midnight, and spending time outside with neighbors.

This year in Manchester, the event is to include old-fashioned community picnics and other outdoor activities for citizens to show their solidarity.

"National Night Out is an opportunity for neighborhoods nationwide to join forces to make a united and powerful statement against crime," Matt Peakin, national project coordinator, is quoted as saying in the release.

AMI cited for OSHA violations

MILFORD (AP) — The employer of the three construction workers killed on Interstate 95 has been cited by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration for at least four safety violations in the last two years, OSHA said.

But Rick Kaletsky, an OSHA supervisor, could not comment on whether any safety regulations had been violated by the AMI Industries crew that was run down by a flatbed truck that veered onto the highway's shoulder Monday.

State police charged the driver, Frank Delcorpo, 35, with three counts of misconduct with a motor vehicle, saying they found evidence of negligence by the trucker. Police had initially identified Delcorpo as a resident of Newcomertown, Ohio, but now report his residence as Livingston, N.J.

A state police spokeswoman, Marcy Stamm, said she knew of no evidence having been uncovered that would indicate the construction crew bore any responsibility for the accident.

The most serious charge brought against AMI Industries was in December 1988, when employees were on the highway without wearing visible warning vests. The Meriden company paid $440 under a settlement with OSHA.

AMI's most recent violations were in January, when an OSHA inspector found employees in an aerial lift basket without belts, Kaletsky said. The firm paid an $880 fine for the violations, he said.

AMI's vice president of operations, Michael Coppola, said Thursday it would be inappropriate to comment on OSHA's records or safety conditions at the work site.

Caldwell won't run for comptroller

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — State Comptroller J. Edward Caldwell, a four-term incumbent who was denied his party's endorsement at the state Democratic convention, said Friday he will not wage a September primary to hold the job.

Caldwell's decision, announced in a short news release, means that former state senator William E. Curry Jr. of Farmington, who won the convention endorsement, will be the Democratic candidate for comptroller. The Republican candidate is New Haven developer Joel Schiavone.

Caldwell, 63, a Bridgeport resident who has maintained a low profile during four terms in office, is Connecticut's longest-serving elected state official. When he steps down in January, he will be the longest-serving comptroller in state history.

As comptroller, he oversees the handling of all state bills and accounts. In budget discussions, however, he was frequently overshadowed by aides to Gov. William A. O'Neill and leaders in the General Assembly.

Caldwell cited the importance of party unity and the high cost of a primary battle in explaining his decision not to force a primary. He did not mention Curry, a liberal lawyer who once said Caldwell has been "an invisible man" during 16 years as comptroller.

"I want to unite our Democratic Party in this difficult time so that we can concentrate on the job which lies ahead in November," Caldwell said in the news release.

Curry, 38, thanked Caldwell for dropping out and issued a short statement praising him.

"Ed has shown a sense of stewardship and loyalty to his party which is all too rare today," Curry said. "No one in our party enjoys more universal good will than Ed, and no one has done more to deserve it."

Caldwell was elected comptroller in 1974 after winning eight consecutive terms in the state senate, where he served as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and Minority and Majority leader in different terms.

State Democratic Chairman John F. Doney said Caldwell is best known after 32 years in office as a man who "never broke his word and never told a lie."

"He's been a major figure in Connecticut politics for four decades and two generations," Doney said. "When he was younger, he walked with the giants of Connecticut politics — Ribicoff, Bailey and Dempsey."

Iraq, Kuwait relations get worse

By PAUL SHIN
The Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — One day after halting its verbal attacks on Kuwait over oil production and disputed border lines, the Iraqi government renewed its demands today, calling on Kuwait to recognize Baghdad's "legitimate rights."

The official Iraqi News Agency carried a statement from an unidentified spokesman saying Kuwait must send representatives to Baghdad to resolve the issues that divide them. There was no immediate response from Kuwait.

INA said a meeting scheduled in Saudi Arabia in the next few days between Izat Ibrahim, vice chairman of the Iraqi Revolutionary Command Council, and Sheikh Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah of Kuwait is only a preliminary step.

The news agency said it will be a "protocol meeting and will be followed by a meeting between them in Baghdad to resume the negotiations."

It is necessary that the prime minister of Kuwait know that whoever comes to the meeting with us should be prepared to remove the harm and aggression suffered by Iraq and respond to Iraq's legitimate rights," the spokesman said.

In Washington today, the Senate voted today to impose harsh economic sanctions on Iraq, including an end to the $1.2 billion in loan guarantees Baghdad now receives to buy U.S. farm and commercial products.

The vote, on an amendment to the 1990 farm bill, was the latest sign of congressional worry over Iraq's increasingly threatening stance in the volatile Middle East.

Korean border crossing scrapped for second time

By PAUL SHIN
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — North and South Korea failed to agree today on conditions to permit five North Koreans to cross the border, and the event was canceled for the second time in two days.

South Korean authorities said the five had left the border village of Panmunjom and they did not expect them to return. The dispute increased the hostility between the nations, just as they were planning an unprecedented meeting of prime ministers to ease tensions.

Today was the 37th anniversary of the truce that ended fighting in the 1950-53 Korean War, which started when Communist North Korea invaded the South.

U.S. troops have been stationed in South Korea to deter further Communist aggression, and many radicals consider their presence an obstacle to reunifying the peninsula.

It was divided in 1945. Outside the main U.S. military installation near central Seoul, 13 radical students yelling "Withdraw U.S. troops!" were arrested today after they staged a protest.

In another rally at a city park, 200 radical students and dissidents chanted "Nankai go home!" They demanded the withdrawal of the 43,000 American soldiers in South Korea and nuclear weapons they claim are kept in Korea.

South Korea officials said it was probably a coincidence the five North Koreans tried to cross the border again on the armistice anniversary. The five were invited to Seoul to participate in a two-day meeting aimed at planning a joint North-South unification rally.

It would have been the first civilian crossing approved by both nations since 1985. Both governments must approve such crossings because the border is heavily guarded and inaccessible to average citizens.

The dispute involved the northerners' accommodations during their planned visit. South Korea's government demanded they stay in a Seoul hotel, citing security. The civilians wanted to stay with South Korean dissidents.

North Korea charged the South with trying to block plans for the joint rally. The South charged the North with purposely creating a controversy over the arrangements.

The crossing originally was planned Thursday and was expected to coincide with the signing of a historic agreement to have the prime ministers of North and South Korea meet for the first time in an effort to improve relations.

Canada makes land offer

OKA, Quebec (AP) — Canada said Friday that its Indian Affairs Department bought a parcel of land from a French businessman in the hopes of ending a 17-day-old armed confrontation between Quebec police and Mohawks.

The standoff in Oka, 18 miles west of Montreal, began after police rushed a barricade set up by the Mohawks to stop the expansion of the local golf course on land they claim is ancestral. An officer was killed in the gun battle that followed. No announcement has been made fixing responsibility in the death.

Indian Affairs Minister Tom Siddon said in a statement that the Ottawa government will buy 60 residential lots — about 30 acres — just outside Oka for nearly $1.2 million (U.S.) from Maxime Rousseau of Pointers, France.

He said the government also hopes to buy the rest of the disputed parcel of land, a total of 34 acres.

"We're negotiating to complete the purchase of the balance from the village of Oka," Siddon said.

Jonice Beliveau, a spokeswoman for Oka, said the town could still be left with enough land to expand the golf course.

Mohawk negotiator Mavis Esieme shrugged off the purchase announced Friday as "a drop in the bucket," adding: "No one has any business negotiating for our land, acting like they are buying it when they don't even own it."

CARBOHYDRATES — ENERGY
The average American gets more than enough protein. Excess protein won't build muscles — only exercise does. Extra protein is stored as fat. Carbohydrates are the most efficient fuel for the body. For athletes and exercisers, eating more complex carbohydrates (vegetables, fruits, and whole grains) will increase energy reserves (glycogen) in muscles and liver, thus prolonging exertion time before living or exhaustion occurs.

Nigerian plotters executed

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Forty-two men convicted in a bloody coup attempt were executed by firing squad Friday night immediately after appeals of their death sentences were rejected, Nigeria radio said.

Many prominent Nigerians and international organizations, including Amnesty International, had urged President Gen. Ibrahim Babangida to spare the lives of the men.

They were charged with attacking Dodon Barracks, the military headquarters and residence of Babangida, on April 22 in an attempt to overthrow him. Babangida barely escaped with his life, and his house was badly damaged.

The coup leaders, who took over national radio headquarters for several hours, said they wanted to end the domination of the country by Moslem northerners.

The men were convicted following a military tribunal this month that was closed to the public, and they were sentenced to death. The Armed Forces Ruling Council rejected appeals of the death sentences, and the executions were carried out, the radio reported.

The council ordered retrials for 31 other people convicted by a military tribunal.

The council met Thursday and Friday, making its ruling late Friday afternoon. There was little doubt the coup ring leaders, including Maj. Gideon Orkar, would be shot. Wooden stakes had been set up at the prison where the men were held.

More than 300 people, including some civilians, were arrested after the coup attempt. The government said the civilian financier of the coup, millionaire businessman Chief Great Ovedje Ogburn, and some officers believed involved in it, had escaped.

No casualty figures were ever released, but army spokesman Col. Fred Chijuka said it was "the bloodiest" attempt ever against the government.

Dozens of people died in coups in 1966, which triggered ethnic violence that ultimately sparked the Biafran War. The 1967-1970 war was an effort by easterners to secede from the federation.

Israel has chemical arms

JERUSALEM (AP) — Science Minister Yuval Neeman said today that Israel has chemical weapons and would use them if attacked by Iraq.

The remarks were the most far-reaching by an Israeli leader on the issue. In the past, Israeli officials have always refused comment on whether Israel has chemical weapons, though the country was widely believed to have the arms.

Neeman's statement intensified the war of words that was started when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said he would destroy half of Israel with chemical weapons if attacked.

"In my opinion, we have an excellent response, and that is to threaten Hussein with the same merchandise," said Neeman, who also is head of Israel's space program.

Neeman, a member of the ultra-rightist Tehiya Party, said any advanced nation has the capability to prepare chemical weapons.

"And if there is an enemy like this, it is possible to prepare a suitable response," he said on Israel radio. "I have no doubt that also today we can respond to a threat like this."

Defense Ministry spokesman Dan Weinreich refused comment.

The 65-year-old Neeman has a long involvement with Israel's military and scientific establishments. He has served both as deputy director of army intelligence and scientific director of Israel's atomic energy program.

U.S. ready to initiate contact with Cambodia

By KENNETH L. WHITING
The Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The United States is considering direct contacts with Cambodia's communist government in addition to Vietnam to try to end the war in Cambodia, Secretary of State James A. Baker said today.

Baker said the withdrawal last year of Vietnamese troops backing the Cambodian government "gives us cause to see whether Hanoi is now prepared to support a process of political reconciliation" that would lead to free elections.

"We are also considering contacts with the Phnom Penh regime," he added.

The moves would fit in both with efforts to reduce East-West tensions and with continuing U.S. support for the non-Communist Cambodian rebels, Baker said in a speech to the Association of Southeast Asian nations, or ASEAN.

He spoke on the first day of a three-day meeting of the group, which comprises Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, the Philippines, Brunei and Indonesia. The foreign ministers of Australia, Canada, the European Community, Japan, New Zealand are also attending the session.

ASEAN foreign ministers criticized Baker's announcement last week that the United States would not recognize the United Nations delegate from the three-part Cambodian resistance because it includes the Communist Khmer Rouge.

During Khmer Rouge rule of Cambodia from 1975-78, hundreds of thousands of Cambodians died from starvation or executions while the government enforced a radical program to collectivize agriculture.

Vietnam invaded in 1978 and toppled the Khmer Rouge led by Pol Pot, but the rebels have staged a string of recent battlefield victories and are the strongest anti-government force.

Baker arrived in Jakarta Thursday on the first leg of a four-nation Asian tour. He assured ASEAN that their goals and those of the United States were not contradictory.

The guerrilla resistance was formed under ASEAN sponsorship in 1982 with U.S. support. The Khmer Rouge is by far its most powerful component.

NATION

Bush predicts David Souter confirmation

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush gave David Souter a ride back to New England on Air Force One Friday, saying he was pleased with the nation's reaction to the little-known Supreme Court nominee and predicting Senate confirmation "with flying colors."

Addressing the closest thing to a controversy so far, Bush denied that he had agreed before meeting Souter last Monday not to ask him delicate questions about his views on controversial issues such as abortion.

Two senators have quoted Souter as saying he had requested that such questions not be asked, and Bush has said he didn't ask them.

But Bush, when asked whether he had made such a deal in advance of interviewing his prospective high court choice, said, "No, nothing on my side on that."

Meanwhile, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, announced the panel will open hearings on Souter's nomination on Sept. 13.

Souter, after a hectic week in Washington readying for the confirmation hearings, flew with Bush aboard the presidential aircraft to Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire, then went his own way while Bush and his wife Barbara flew to Kennebunkport by helicopter to their oceanside summer home.

The laconic Souter briefly appeared in the press cabin aboard Air Force One, but quickly retreated after quipping, "I don't want to ruin my reputation. I have two words to say, 'Hi' and 'Goodbye.'"

On the ground, when reporters asked the 50-year-old federal appeals judge how it felt to be back in New Hampshire, he replied, "It feels damn good." He then drove off with a friend, Tom Rath, and Rath's twin children, to visit his mother at a retirement community in Concord.

Rath said Souter hopes to visit friends, do his laundry, get some rest and "try to disappear" while digging into a pile of reading in preparation for his confirmation hearings.

Earlier Friday in Washington, Souter continued his get-acquainted meetings with senators, fending off reporters' questions on specific issues — primarily abortion rights.

"I think, with respect, that that is certainly a question that I'm going to be asked when the time for the confirmation hearing comes, and I think that would be the appropriate place for me to respond," he said.

Souter also met with Vice President Dan Quayle, who later said the Senate should "avoid rancorous partisanship" and resist arguments of special interest groups that might oppose the nominee.

Quayle said some groups have taken the position that "if we don't know in advance that Judge Souter is for us on our single issue, we oppose him." He named no groups.

Bush, answering questions during the flight north, declined to retort to sharp criticisms leveled at him and Souter by Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall in a television interview on ABC-TV Thursday.

Marshall said he had never heard of Souter and said White House Chief of Staff John Sununu appeared to be "calling the shots" on the selection. Of Bush, Marshall said, "It's said that if you can't say something good about a dead person, don't say it. Well, I consider him dead."

Barry defense rests case

By RICHARD KEIL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The defense rested in Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial Friday, keeping Barry off the stand rather than give prosecutors a chance to question him before the jury.

Prosecutors immediately began their rebuttal case, attacking the accuracy of the testimony of four witnesses who had appeared at the trial on Barry's behalf.

"I have advised Mr. Barry that no matter how we restrict his testimony... he would still be subject to cross-examination," R. Kenneth Mundy, one of Barry's attorneys, told the judge.

Mundy said he had told Barry he could have expected to face "all the questions" prosecutors wanted to ask about the numerous allegations of drug use.

Prosecutors said they expected to complete their rebuttal case on Monday. Mundy said he wants to recall two witnesses following the government's rebuttal. U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said closing arguments would be next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Barry told reporters later he wanted to avoid the theatrics his testimony would have produced. "It would have been good Perry Mason drama, L.A. Law drama, but I'm not about Perry Mason drama," he said.

"My spirits are high; my defense is on course."

The prosecution tried to strike back quickly Friday, introducing a city form indicating a defense witness had been absent from work at a time he has testified he had accepted a document figuring prominently in one of the charges against Barry.

Definite AIDS link unlikely

By ROBERT BYRD
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Federal AIDS experts said Friday they likely will never know for sure whether a dentist transmitted AIDS to a patient, but were obligated to warn the public about the possibility.

A report Thursday from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control that a young woman apparently was infected by her dentist while having two molars pulled made headlines across the country and drew criticism from the American Dental Association. Dental association officials said the agency may have jumped to conclusions.

Dr. Harold Jaffe, deputy director for science at the CDC's HIV-AIDS program, said Friday there's no way researchers will ever prove that the woman was infected during the dental procedure, although all available evidence points to that conclusion.

"We don't really expect we will get more information," Jaffe said.

The CDC's weekly report, which carried details of the case, routinely informs physicians and public health officials about noteworthy developments in infectious disease. It is not unusual for the report to note — as this week's report did — that the source of a specific illness cannot be proven with 100 percent certainty.

But Dr. Enid Neidle, director of scientific affairs for the Chicago-based ADA, said the association thought it was not a conclusive case of transmission.

"We are not happy at any report that could raise fears on the part of the public that the dental office is a place of danger and infection," Neidle said.

Responding to the ADA's criticism, Jaffe said, "I don't think we'd be serving the public interest to not publish this case."

The agency said a lengthy investigation of the woman's case found no other risk factors for AIDS, such as intravenous drug abuse or numerous sexual encounters. Two men she had dated each tested negative for HIV, the AIDS virus, and DNA-virus testing showed a likely match between her strain of HIV and the dentist's.

But researchers are not exactly sure how the woman actually became infected.

Jaffe said not much more will ever be known about the case. The woman's trip to the dentist occurred more than two years ago, records in the case are somewhat sketchy and there's a limited amount to be gleaned from questioning the doctor, he said.

"Everyone's frustration here revolves around the lack of information about the specific exposure," he said.

The dentist was wearing a mask and gloves while pulling the woman's teeth, as recommended. The case has prompted the CDC to review its guidelines for transmission of AIDS in medical settings.

The guidelines say that to prevent the spread of diseases such as AIDS and hepatitis, bodily fluids from any patient must be considered potentially infectious. Health care workers are urged to wear appropriate protection whenever skin or mucous-membrane exposure to bodily fluids is likely, including gloves, face masks, protective goggles and surgical gowns.

Federal experts will meet Aug. 13 with representatives from the dental association, other medical societies, workers groups and other interested parties to discuss the case.

Third child in week dies by stray gunfire in NYC

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ed McKay scammed the bullet-riddled room in the Brooklyn apartment where his 3-year-old nephew was killed while sleeping on a pullout couch.

"Maybe where you live, children are not being shot, but this violence is a cancer and creeping, and it won't be long before it is in your neighborhood, too," he warned.

The boy, Ben Williams, was hit by one of 18 bullets sprayed through the metal front door of his grandmother's four-bedroom apartment in the Walt Whitman housing project about 4 a.m. Thursday.

He was the city's third child in a week to die from stray gunfire.

"When a child can't sleep in his own bed comfortably, the city's got to wake up," McKay said Thursday.

The shooting in the Fort Greene section devastated the boy's grandmother, Susie O'Garro, who often cared for others' children, said McKay.

Family members said they did not know why anyone would fire on the apartment. Police investigators working on the case Friday had no immediate explanation.

Earlier this week, 1-year-old Yairimi Fruto and 9-year-old Veronica Corales were killed by stray gunfire in the East New York section of Brooklyn. Fruto was shot in the head by a gunman who killed her father. Corales was struck in the head as she slept in her family's car after returning from a New Jersey amusement park.

Housing Police Chief Vincent Pizzo said three weapons were used to fire 18 shots through the first floor apartment where young Ben Williams was killed and his 15-year-old sister was grazed. Thirteen other shots were fired through a second-floor apartment door where no one was hurt.

"I think there's too many illegal guns in this city and too many people not afraid to use them," Pizzo said. There have been several drug-related shootings at the complex, he said.

Timothy O'Garro, 26, another uncle of the dead boy, said an older brother of the victim was recently released from prison. "My mother told him, 'Don't come here at all,'" Pizzo recalled.

These are the rumors that are flying around. We're not satisfied that that's the reason," said Borrelli.

In the apartment, a tiny white teddy bear rested upside down against a wall. Several strollers were neatly stacked nearby. Bullets also

Postal service cuts will start today

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Some mail that now gets delivered the next day will take a day longer starting this weekend.

Postmaster General Anthony Frank announced Thursday he will go ahead with selective cutbacks in overnight delivery service, originally announced last January, despite opposition from the independent Postal Rate Commission.

The commission, in an opinion issued Thursday, said it opposed the reductions nationally, although cutbacks in delivery goals might be justified locally in some areas.

The commission criticized the postal service for failing to estimate how it might save or customers might lose with the change. It also said the market research on which the service based its decision accurately measured what customers want.

A national list of the changes was not issued by the postal service. Officials said information on cutbacks was being made public locally in the areas to be affected.

"We have concluded that (commission opposition) does not warrant delaying our scheduled Saturday implementation of changes in overnight delivery areas," Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank said.

While the Postal Service is required to seek the opinion of the rate commission when it wants to make such delivery changes, it is not legally bound to abide by that opinion.

Frank announced last January that the post office planned to tighten up the areas scheduled for regular overnight delivery to provide what it hopes will be more consistent service nationwide.

The program called for concentrating resources in the busier regions.

Local mail is not affected by the changes, which officials said will affect areas where there is only a small volume of mail moving between communities but where current standards call for overnight service.

Currently 55.5 percent of all first class mail is designated for overnight delivery.

BUSINESS

EB might have to cut work force in half

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp. would have to severely cut its work force, and possibly close some facilities, if Congress approves construction of only one Seawolf attack submarine a year, company officials said.

Electric Boat officials said Thursday the company would be forced to reduce its work force by 50 percent by the end of the decade, even if Electric Boat is the sole builder of the $1 billion warship.

Officials said if the Seawolf program contracts were divided between Electric Boat and Newport News Shipbuilding of Virginia, the job cuts could be even more dramatic.

Electric Boat employs 23,000 workers in Connecticut and Rhode Island, 17,200 of them in Groton.

Electric Boat outlined the jobs projections in a position paper being circulated selectively among policymakers in Washington, where Congress is working on the budget.

"We are trying to give our best information to those people who are making the decisions and feeding the decision-making process," said Donna Simpson, an Electric Boat spokeswoman. "The only thing that makes it less horrible is that you're talking two to three years before you start seeing the effects, as we see them to be happening today."

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., chairman of the Armed Services Seapower Subcommittee, said Tuesday that the House Armed Services Committee is likely to approve a second Seawolf.

Bennett believes the House would approve funding for a second Seawolf in next year's budget, but he didn't think it would support start-up money for a third.

Electric Boat's position paper predicts that a procurement cycle of two ships per year, with Electric Boat as the only builder, would reduce employment by 25 percent. The figures assume the curtailment of the Trident submarine program at the 18th vessel, as proposed in this year's federal budget.

Electric Boat has built all the Tritons.

Simpson also said plants in North Kingstown, R.I., or Charleston, S.C., could be shut down.

"We will have to look at what kind of work is done there," Simpson said, "and we'll have to look at that issue (closure) or consolidation."

Aetna profits up

HARTFORD (AP) — Aetna Life & Casualty Friday reported second-quarter profits were up $34 million over last year, primarily because of significant improvements in group insurance.

The insurance company reported second-quarter net income of $204 million, or $1.82 per share, compared to $170 million, or $1.52 per share, in 1989.

The results include net realized capital gains of $31 million, of which $30 million resulted from the sale of a portion of the company's equity interest in MBIA Inc.

Aetna Chairman James T. Lynn said the improvement was mainly attributable to better group insurance results. Group insurance earnings of $79 million were $24 million higher than last year, and included net realized capital gains of $7 million, compared with no net realized capital gains a year ago.

Lynn said the company's personal auto insurance business is still suffering from high loss costs and inadequate rates.

For the first six months of 1990, net income was $384 million, or $3.43 per share, compared with $343 million, or $3.04 per share, for the same period last year.

Bank losses reported

BOSTON (AP) — Bad real estate loans and the region's slumping economy sent earnings for Bank of Boston Corp. plunging 97 percent in the second quarter, bank officials announced, and BayBanks reported a second consecutive quarterly loss.

Moody's Investors Services Inc. reacted to Bank of Boston's report by downgrading the bank's senior and subordinated debt Thursday.

"We are obviously disappointed with the Moody's downgrade," the bank's chief financial officer, Peter J. Manning, said in a statement.

"We are continuing to aggressively attack our credit issues. Our total non-performing assets declined in the second quarter, and the corporation remained profitable."

Cigna won't sell services division

HARTFORD (AP) — Cigna Corp. said it has decided against selling its Bloomfield-based individual Financial Services Division after reviewing several offers for the company.

The division was put on the market 18 months ago as part of a strategic shift toward selling insurance to corporations instead of individuals. But Cigna, based in Philadelphia, said it has decided to keep its individual-lines division, once a mainstay of the old Connecticut General Life Co. Connecticut General merged with Philadelphia-based INA Corp. in 1982 to form Cigna.

"The outlook for the life and disability business has improved as a result of both changes in the external environment, which favor well-capitalized companies, and a series of steps taken within the company," Wilson H. Taylor, Cigna's chairman and chief executive officer, said in a prepared statement Thursday.

OPINION

Communism dies; liberals jarred

Liberals are fond of saying that the conservative movement is bound to break up now, because "the glue that held it together - anti-communism" is no longer serviceable, thanks to the end of the Cold War.

The proposition is fallacious because its major premise is false. It isn't anti-communism that holds the conservative movement together. It's anti-liberalism. Traditionalists and libertarians, who agree on almost nothing else, concur in detesting modern American liberalism, and they will keep right on detesting it whether Moscow is ruled by communists or not. As for communism, it is well on its way to irrelevance, but it will shortly be replaced by various lesser threats to common sense, such as anti-growth environmentalism, that all conservatives will be moved to oppose vigorously.

What has been overlooked in the collapse of communism, however, is the potentially mortal blow it has dealt to modern American liberalism.

People too young to remember liberalism's heyday in the administration of Franklin Roosevelt may be forgiven for not knowing that in those days every good liberal was all for a "planned economy." If the market was mentioned at all, it was only to be dismissed contemptuously as a discredited economic device favored only by rascals of the Union League. Henceforth, government would decide what Americans needed, and gently but firmly require private enterprise to provide it.

In this conviction, liberalism revealed its debt to Marx, who fathered the whole socialist concept of state ownership, or at least state control, of the means of production and distribution. As late as World War II, it was assumed by just about everybody (even, gloomily, by most conservatives) that the post-war world would be organized almost entirely along socialist lines - dictatorially in the communist nations and more democratically in the West, but socially in all cases. The United States would lag along behind, but even here the liberals who ruled the Democratic Party expected to control (or "plan") most important aspects of the economy.

This whole belief in the desirability of economic planning grew out of the 18th century Enlightenment's confidence in the ability of pure Reason to direct the affairs of mankind. Marx simply applied his brand of reason to a study of the laws of history, and concluded that some economic warfare between classes was the natural condition of mankind - up till now, when the "workers" would take over, impose the "dictatorship of the proletariat," and conduct mankind's affairs peacefully hereafter, under the rule of Reason. Economic activities, in particular, would be state-controlled.

This fetching idea has been a long time dying. American liberals long ago realized that the Soviet Union wasn't exactly a good advertisement for it, and discreetly distanced themselves from communism. But both American liberals and European democratic socialists had trouble disentangling themselves from the charms of communism "in principle," and right through the Cold War many of them kept hoping, audibly, that the United States and the Soviet Union would inch slowly toward each other - the Soviets becoming "more democratic politically," and the country becoming "more democratic economically."

It has taken the utter collapse of Soviet communism, amid a plethora of bare grocery shelves, to kill the idea of a planned economy for good. The liberals have quickly become authorities on the intricacies of market economics.

Lemonade nostalgia

I can't speak for the rest of the country, but, in Irving Berlin's words, we've been having "a heat wave, a tropical heat wave."

My local temperature hasn't soared yet to the scorching 100 degrees that has been frying folks in Phoenix, Las Vegas, El Paso and Albuquerque. But 94 degrees with 80 percent humidity comes swelteringly close to Memphis'peles' residence.

When you're drenched with sweat, "it ain't the heat, but the humidity." Merely walking from the parking lot to my office building can wilt you. Don't misunderstand me. I love hot weather (especially in December, January and February). But not this hot! Even God turns on her air-conditioning unit.

My Louisiana-born mother loved hot weather so much that she sometimes walked the mile to her office at the board of education, neatly avoiding the heat-prostrated bodies along the way.

When she got home, my sisters and I would surprise her with our lemonade stand. We always managed to scrounge up enough pennies to buy some lemons. Typical selfish kids, we made this wonderful lady pay for her glass of lemonade.

But she humored us, because when it came to lemonade, we took no prisoners. Our lemonade was North Pole cold, cotton candy sweet and so tart your cheeks would suck in after you drank it!

Our lemonade stands were also part of a great fun-filled American tradition - like hot dogs and beer at a baseball game or fried chicken and potato salad at a church picnic.

But, with apologies to Duke Ellington, "things ain't what they used to be." Today's kids aren't having

CHUCK STONE

A brief rainstorm may cool us off, but more heat waves are on the way. When they return, you can try quenching your thirst - as I did the other day - with some store-bought lemonade.

It won't work. I couldn't even get through half of the carton. Read my lips: No store-bought lemonade compares to the best homemade lemonade.

That's why I miss street lemonade stands. If you know of anyplace where kids have set up good neighborhood lemonade stands, let me know.

I'd like to find out where the best homemade lemonade in the country is - but only if it's sold from a homemade street stand.

Hoosier philosopher Thomas Riley Marshall once quipped that, "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar." What this country really needs are good neighborhood homemade lemonade stands.

Imagine your relief after getting off the bus in 95-degree heat and down the block "on the street where you live," like an oasis in the Sahara, you see a homemade lemonade stand!

Ah, but the rapture of thirst quenching is only half of the stand's contribution to America's global pre-eminence. Homemade lemonade stands symbolize the real spirit of American democracy - self-initiative, youthful entrepreneurship, free-market capitalism.

That ain't too cool with today's inflated prices. When we were kids, we could buy three lemons for a dime. Today, lemons are four for a dollar - or 10 for a dollar at a farmers' market.

But lemonade stands are like anything else - a high volume plus a low overhead equals a nice profit. And hot weather means a high volume of cold lemonade.

Fun Facts

1. One of the first hot air balloons was made by brothers Joseph and Etienne Montgolfiere in France in the early 1780s. The brothers were also the first to send up airborne passengers - a rooster, a duck and a sheep.
2. A Montgolfiere balloon is a hot air balloon; a Charliere is a gas balloon. Each is named after its inventor.
3. The best times to fly hot-air balloons are in the early morning (up to three hours after sunrise) and late afternoon (up to three hours before sunset). The winds are still then, the air is cool and the hot air gets better lift.
4. Pilots of balloons compete not in the speed of their flying, but in the precision of their navigation.
5. The envelope is the professional term for the fabric part, which most people call the balloon. It is an envelope that encloses and holds air.

Bonnie Bedelia: A lifer playing the percentages

By HILLEL ITALIE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bonnie Bedelia has been around long enough to know the percentages: There are more good actors than good parts, and a lot more good parts for men than for women.

There's usually one decent female part per film, she says, and the numbers have often worked against her. "Lovers and Other Strangers" was a bad role in a good film. "Prince of Pennsylvania" was a good part in a bad film. "Fat Man and Little Boy" struck out on both counts. "Die Hard" and "Die Hard 2" were fun, but those movies belong to Bruce Willis.

Even a big part in a good film can come up short, such as her acclaimed role as auto racer Shirley Muldowney in the 1983 film "Heart Like a Wheel." Compliment her on it and the response is terse: "Yeah, it would have been nice if someone saw it."

But for "Presumed Innocent," there are no frowns or wisecracks. Finally, it's all there: the cast (Harrison Ford, Raul Julia), the director (Alan Pakula — "Kluge," "All the President's Men"), the script (based on Scott Turow's best-selling thriller) and yes, the part she wanted.

"How often does anyone get a chance to be in film like that?" says Bedelia, who plays Fred's wife. "I would have to be put in Bellevue if I didn't want that part. What's not to want to do it? I want to work. I want a career. Everyone wanted to do it."

"It was the top of the line, all along the way. You don't get better than that."

That's the talk of a self-described "lifer" convinced she can play anything, an actress who's been at it for 30 years, first appearing on Broadway in "Isle of Children" at age 10. She wishes more people knew who she was — "I hear someone say, 'She looks familiar, did I go to school with her?'" — but accepts it all because acting's all she ever wanted to do.

"I did have a natural gift for suspending reality," she said, pausing and then smiling at that piece of actor's talk.

"My big brother used to make up these elaborate fantasy games where we'd be on adventures. He'd make up these stories about us being orphans or we'd move our bunk beds and make them into tents and pretend we were in the woods. It's one of those fantastic free association games that kids can do."

She remembers being homesick during "Lovers and Other Strangers," carrying her first two sons and wishing she were shopping for baby clothes. And "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" She remembers how much fun it was making the whole film on that single dance floor.

On one end of her career is "Heart Like a Wheel," her most challenging, rewarding part, wasted on a box-office flop. It was low budget — "Most of the money spent on cars," she cracks — and covered four decades, often in one day of filming.

"I'd get up in the morning and be 40, with the little wrinkles in my eyes and the gray in my hair," she said.

"The very next scene, I'd run to makeup and I had to erase all that mileage in my life and suddenly I was 16 years old and had to go greet my dad. Then I was 30 and had this short hairdo and false eyelashes."

On the other end, are the "Die Hard" movies — the latest one reportedly costing more than $60 million. Everyone's seen at least one of those films, but who remembers that it was Bonnie Bedelia playing Willis' wife?

"I just said my words and went home," Bedelia said. "They were fun, though. I really liked the director, John McTiernan from the first one and Renny Harlin for this one. And I really liked Bruce Willis. I only worked for a couple of weeks on the first one and a few days on the second."

So will "Presumed Innocent" end the days of Bonnie Watchamacallit? She's not saying — a lifer's superstition. Again, it's playing the percentages, the invariable rule of mathematics. How often does a film turn out the way it's supposed to?

"I made a movie in Mexico called 'Fat Man and Little Boy,'" she said of last year's critical and commercial failure.
"Roland Joffe was directing and he made one of my favorite movies of all time, 'The Killing Fields.' Paul Newman was starring, and me and Natasha Richardson and Laura Dern and John Cusack were in the cast, all of us good actors. I felt pretty good about that, too, and look how that turned out. It wasn't that good."

Local man is new Life Star pilot

By DIANNA M. TALBOT
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — When the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care in June approved $3 million for a second Life Star helicopter, communities applauded. With the money, more than one request for emergency airlift of trauma victims could be responded to at a time.

To Cooper Hastings of Strickland Street, the commission's decision meant a job.

The 35-year-old, 12-year Army man recently became one of eight full-time helicopter pilots hired to help staff the second Life Star helicopter. Both choppers are based on the rooftop of Hartford Hospital.

Traveling at 150 mph, Life Star rushes trauma victims to the hospital within the life-saving "golden hour," the crucial period needed to keep a victim from bleeding to death or suffering irreparable brain damage that comes from respiratory failure.

Hastings, who was required to have more than 5,000 hours of logged flying time, began flying for the Life Star program two weeks ago.

"It's exciting," he said. "I never know what is going to happen or where I'll be going."

The pilot also finds self-fulfillment by helping to save the lives of others.

"It's a chance to get something back from society," he said.

The nature of the job, however, has its drawbacks. With seriously injured, sometimes dying or dead people, comes the sounds and sights of pain, blood and gore. It is not a job for the faint-of-heart.

Asked if dealing with death and seriously injured people affects him, Hastings replied, "Yes. I just work through it and focus on the fact that I'm helping people."

The trickiest duty of a Life Star pilot is to land the helicopter at the scene of an accident, Hastings said. Sometimes, power lines and geographical barriers, such as hills, ledges and rocks, must be grappled with.

Hastings must land in an area large enough to accommodate Life Star's propeller, which has a 40-foot circumference.

Since he started the job, Hastings said, he has had to land Life Star on I-91 in Weathersfield, where someone involved in a six-car pileup was seriously injured. He also flew to the scene of an automobile accident in Stafford Springs and had to land on Route 32.

Responding to a typical call involves getting Life Star in the air within four minutes after the call is received, the pilot said.

Riding in the aircraft with Hastings are a flight nurse and a respiratory therapist. The nurse typically acts as a map reader and guides the pilot to the scene of the emergency. At all times, the aircraft is in contact with a dispatcher who provides directions and accident information.

At the scene, the pilot lands and the nurse and therapist attempt to stabilize the victim, or victims, who is quickly loaded onto the helicopter and rushed to the appropriate hospital.

While Life Star can take injured people to any hospital in Connecticut and some in Massachusetts, most victims of severe trauma are taken to either Hartford or Saint Francis hospitals in Hartford, where extensive medical services are available.

Hastings, a native of Mansfield and former mechanic, said he has found his niche in life.

"I like flying," he said. "It's a hands-on action."

Before taking the job, Hastings was an Army helicopter instructor pilot, based in Germany.

He and his wife, Jude, have a 9-month-old son, Spencer.

Home furnishings: decorating trends

By BARBARA MAYER
The Associated Press

A frustrated shopper who can't find just the right fabric may not agree, but the most important decorating trend today is freedom of choice, say a number of home furnishings experts.

Decorators, manufacturers and magazine editors are less likely to dictate specific styles and more likely to ask people how they live and what type of furnishings would be appealing and practical, says Mary Gilliat. "There is more concern for how things work," adds the designer and author of books about decorating.

"Decorating styles are much more eclectic, more sophisticated, and people seem bolder about mixing things. Not everything matches. They are beginning to use more crafts. There are so many little shops opening up that sell local things and seem to be doing quite well," continues Gilliat.

The swing away from the decorator as dictator — a star turn in some arenas during the 1980s — is powered by home furnishings customers who are older, better educated and know what they want, says John Young, president of Design America, a furniture manufacturer in Coral Gables, Fla.

Interest in interior design has been stimulated by a wider acquaintance with art, according to Young, who points out that "museum attendance has doubled seven times in the last decade."

This new savvy public is supporting a growing network of stores in which handcrafted and well-designed factory-made objects are shown together, says Bill Kraus, author of "Contemporary Crafts for the Home" (Kraus Sikes, Inc., New York).

Products once sold only through architects and designers are available in these stores. "The good things are more widely available, though too much is still sold only through designers," says Gilliat.

She predicts that video will help to narrow the knowledge gap. "We are a really visual society, and videos are the ideal method of keeping consumers informed," she says.

Video is an important potential medium of information and learning about art, says Brownwyn Dunn, who has compiled a mail order catalog of art appreciation videos.

Prices for art videos are coming down. "Once it cost up to $500 for a 16 mm print of an art appreciation program. Today videos of the same material cost about $40," says Dunn. Her Greenwich, Conn.-based company, Arts America, catalogs and distributes more than 200 art videos. Recently, she says, a mail order customer in Scottsdale, Ariz., spent $900 on cassettes, and another from California sent in a $700 order.

According to Bette Rosenberg, home fashions director for the Spiegel catalog, people aren't just learning about art, they're putting it in their homes. One of the most important decorating trends is to use original art to give rooms a lift without having to change furniture.

Last year, Spiegel introduced its first specialty catalog featuring original artworks and decorative art objects. The product mix includes limited edition graphics, handcrafts, name brand collectibles from makers such as Daum, Lladro, Waterford and Royal Doulton, and signed oil paintings. Prices range from $80 to $2,500, and the average amount spent is $200.

Caring for classic Oriental rugs

CHICAGO (AP) — Among floor coverings, the Oriental rug is the classic, and it can last indefinitely if properly cared for.

Tom Jorjorian, manager of the Nahigian Brothers cleaning plant, says an Oriental rug can last "forever." He offers these tips to owners.

— Turn your rugs every year to equalize traffic wear and light exposure.

— Be sure the rug has padding to reduce wear and inhibit slippage. Pads also add "sumptuousness," he says.

— Vacuum the rugs in the direction of the nap, which you can determine by running your hand over the surface.

— Sweep fringes with a broom instead of vacuuming, which can break them.

— Do not beat your rug. That can break the foundation.

— Inspect your rug every few months, looking for wear at the edges and ends. Check the back for moth damage, which will appear as areas of missing knots, even though the cotton foundation remains.

— Store Oriental rugs not in use where they will be safe from excess humidity, heat and moths. Have them mothproof-sprayed by a professional or pack them with moth crystals if they are to be stored for any length of time.

— Roll, do not fold, for storage.

— Be wary of over-the-counter stain removers. They may not be right for your kind of rug and may cause permanent damage.

Nahigian Brothers maintains a hotline 1 (800) 543-7888, to answer consumer information about Oriental rug care. The company is part of the Torcom Group, a conglomerate of Oriental rug retail, manufacturing and service establishments.

"We stress two points: art doesn't have to be expensive, and collectibles don't have to be a name brand," she says.

Still, those well-known designer names do appeal. Designer collections with the taste and talents of a well-known master aimed at the mass market can be looked at as a sign of the greater power of the public, says designer Mario Buatta.

Besides bringing the prices down, the designer collection makes it easier to get a particular look exactly the way you want it and so extends decorating choices. Recently, Buatta, whose name already is on sheets, fabric, furniture and wallpaper, added needlepoint, pottery, table linens, decorative accessories, lamps and rugs to his product line.

Although the essence of the new decorating attitudes is that you can have exactly what you want, even if it's vulgar excess, Buatta does see a general trend toward restraint.

"People are using more classical decoration and adopting a less-is-more attitude, after a period of ostentation, but still in 18th and 19th century terms," he says.

Although some of his wealthy private clients are paying down, the ornate look continues to appeal to the public, especially in the bedroom, where Victorian-pattern sheets and lots of fabric embellishments are more popular than ever.

"The quieter Victorian furniture pieces, such as Gothic revival bed, have become popular with young people, partly because they are affordable."

If, however, you find Victorian a gothic horror, skip it. The decorating lesson of the day is this: If you don't like it, you still can have what you like.

Providing for your greenery

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Your houseplants, garden and lawn don't take a vacation when you do, so make arrangements for their care while you are away.

If you are gone only a few days, houseplants will get along fine if they are watered well, then covered with a sheet of polyethylene. The plastic will hold in moisture so the plants won't dry out. It will also hold in heat, so don't leave the covered plants where they'll get direct sunlight.

A self-waterer for your indoor plants is easy to make — you'll need a tub or pail, some cotton clothline and, of course, water.

Place the tub or pail in the center of a bathtub or on a tile or concrete floor. Line up plants nearby. Cut clothline in pieces long enough to reach from the bottom of the tub to the potted plants. Fill the tub with lukewarm water and soak the clothline pieces thoroughly. Place one end of each piece of line in the water and insert the other end into the plant soil. Firm the soil around the line and water the plant well.

The clothline will act as a wick and draw water from the tub or pail into the plant pots. About 3 gallons of water will supply the moisture needed by four to six plants in 6-inch pots for seven to 10 days.

If used for an extended period, the wick system might overwater plants, so keep in mind how long you will be gone.

Outdoors, potted plants will do better if you sink the pots into the ground in a shady garden spot. This will keep the soil in the pots from drying out rapidly and prevent pots from blowing over in a strong wind.

For hanging pots, ask a good neighbor to water them while you're away.

Water your lawn just before you leave and arrange for someone to mow it in your absence. Regular mowing keeps grass healthier and prevents that shaggy, overgrown look that indicates the house may be unoccupied.

Trim up your vegetable garden. Remember, the weeds will be working while you're gone. Eliminating as many as possible before you depart will reduce the size of the problem you'll encounter on your return. Mulching helps control weeds and conserves soil moisture.

Harvest whatever is ripe and arrange for harvest of crops that will ripen while you're away. This will keep crops producing and keep the garden clear of rotting organic matter that might attract insects and other pests.

Old blooms and seed heads should be removed from flowering annuals so plants will continue to produce flowers.

The lawn, vegetables, flower beds and ornamentals may need watering in your absence. In particular, newly planted shrubs and trees will not tolerate a long drought. Ask a friend or neighbor to water; they often offer to return the favor.

Whoever takes care of your plants and garden also might raise and lower window shades, open and close curtains and windows, park a car in your driveway and otherwise make the house look lived-in to discourage burglars.

Garden Books

For those who live in the country, the editors of Mother Earth News offer two valuable books: "The Backcountry Handbook" and "The Rural Living Handbook" (Fireside-Simon & Schuster, $11.95 each, paperback). These fully illustrated guides are for the novice as well as for experienced outdoor folks.

"The Backcountry Handbook" offers wilderness first aid, a naturalists' guide, how to build a boat and how to avoid getting lost. "The Rural Living Handbook" is a guide to practical country skills.

Helpfulness for self or others

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
The Associated Press

Beggars in Spain sometimes plead, "A penny for your soul." This implies that the giving is for the giver's sake. It sometimes may work that way, but it also can be genuine concern for another.

Studies have found that kind, helpful deeds may be strictly self-serving to gain status, reassurance or influence, but also can be utterly altruistic.

These variations also show up among religious believers, whose faith teaches compassion and helpfulness, new behavioral experiments find.

The studies are "the first using empirical methods to measure whether real altruism is specifically there," says psychologist C. Daniel Batson of the University of Kansas, one of the researchers.

Results from reactions to varied situations found that a certain "quest orientation" in faith — a searching kind of faith that surmounts doubts — seemed genuinely altruistic, impelled to serve others.

But that selfless motivation didn't show up in two other faith orientations. They are "extrinsic" religion that is strictly utilitarian to improve standing or reinforce one's chosen way, and "intrinsic" religion that seeks unity of being and survives to transcend self-centeredness.

From those perspectives, it was found that in offering help "the motivation was not directed to increasing the welfare of the person in need, but was directed to getting a reward," Batson said.

That is, the help offered had "egoistic" motives, the studies conclude, while the "quest orientation" seemed moved by real altruism.

Batson compared the three ways of being religious with the width, height and depth dimensions of an object, and added in a telephone interview, "Some of all three are in everybody."

Spike Lee hits the right note

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

"Mo' Better Blues" — R

The astonishing Spike Lee, surely the most original of new filmmakers, succeeds where others have stumbled. He has made a jazz movie that is both authoritative and entertaining.

Bertrand Tavernier's "Round Midnight" and Clint Eastwood's "Bird" captured the essence of jazz, but were so doggedly downbeat that they turned off average audiences.

Lee's "Mo' Better Blues" has something for everyone: comedy, sex, violence, drama, as well as some of the most sublime jazz to be captured on film.

The rendition of the title tune will haunt us for years to come.

Gone is the angry attitude of Lee's last film — not that he has mellowed out. His situations and his dialogue retain plenty of bite (come may consider his portrayal of the two money-squeezing club-owner brothers as anti-Semitic).

The prologue is a brief vignette of a New York boy whose mother won't let him go out to play until he finishes his trumpet lessons. The boy grows up to be Black Giliatt (Denzel Washington), a rising jazz star whose quieter packs the Underdog club every night.

Black tries to balance his career — with to help from his boyhood friend and manager, Giant (Spike Lee) — and romances with a would-be singer (Cynda Williams) and a school teacher (Joie Lee). Black's juggling act fails, with tragic results.

"Mo' Better Blues" marks Denzel Washington's continued emergence as a first-rank film actor. He is a commanding figure, on the bandstand and off. Winner of last year's supporting actor Academy Award for "Gloria," and twice nominated prior to that, he's likely to be in the running for lead actor this time.

Shocker: Brando can be funny

By LINDA DEUTSCH
The Associated Press

"The Freshman" — PG

Marlon Brando is a brilliant actor but, let's face it, he's not known for making audiences laugh. Heavy dramatic roles are his forte. "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now" weren't exactly big on chuckles.

That's what makes it such a delightful shock to discover in "The Freshman" that Brando can be funny.

In fact, he is the comic heart of "The Freshman," a film so hilariously crazy that it's plot defies extensive description.

Matthew Broderick plays a New York University freshman film student from Vermont whose misadventures in New York lead to a job with Carmine Sabatini. The portly Sabatini is a Little Italy businessman with an uncanny resemblance to Vito Corleone of "The Godfather."

This is Brando doing a parody of Brando, and it is so finely crafted that it might discourage impersonators from attempting any future "Godfather" imitations. Brando does it better than any of his imitators could, and he never cracks a smile.

Sabatini has the same husky voice, the gravel-in-the-mouth delivery that makes some of his words incompressible and the trademark slicked-down hair style and mustache that made Corleone a part of American film history.

FOCUS/Advice

Woman's introduction fans feminist's fire

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to the woman who asked how to introduce her ex-daughter-in-law, Annie, really angered me.
 You said, "Just introduce her as 'Annie my son's former wife.'" Why should poor Annie continually be explained as someone's "whatever?" Annie is a person in her own right. She is not an appendage. "My friend, Annie" would have been sufficient.
 Your answer puts you in the category of people who think a woman has to belong to some man or she's a nobody.
 I work in an airline reservations office. And nothing infuriates me more than when I ask a lady her name and she says, "Mrs. John Smith." I always say, politely, "The airline prefers that you use your own name when traveling."
 I have been happily married for many years and am "Mrs. John Smith" only on social occasions that include

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

both of us. If I am alone, I am "Irene Smith."
 Please rethink your answer.
ILENE IN DESOTO, MO
DEAR ILENE: Lay that pistol down, please. Never have I believed that a woman had to "belong" to some man — or she's a "nobody."
 I suggested introducing Annie as "my former daughter-in-law" only as a means of imparting that bit of information to someone who obviously was not aware of it. In introducing strangers to each other, it's sometimes helpful to know more than just the name.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it refreshing that the top Oscar-winning film "Driving Miss Daisy," was a movie containing not one dirty word, not one steamy sex scene, or one hint of violence or crime?
 I have enjoyed the film twice and would go again. It handled the issues of human relationships and prejudice beautifully.
 I wish the film industry would wake up and realize that a large segment of our society would flock to see a good movie without a lot of trash. I've gone to three films in two years, and walked out on one. I'd go more often if I knew it was something worth seeing, and I'm no prude. I'm sure there are many others who feel the same.

Removing hemorrhoid in surgery usually is safe

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have external hemorrhoids that require surgical repair, yet I am extremely concerned that the sphincter muscle around the anus might be damaged or affected during the operation. Am I worrying unnecessarily?
DEAR READER: In all likelihood, yes. When properly performed, hemorrhoid surgery should not affect the anal sphincter because the hemorrhoids extend out from the skin, well away from the deeper structures.
 If you are worried, however, I suggest you try non-surgical methods of controlling pain and itching: warm baths, suppositories (such as Anusol) to facilitate evacuation, and meticulous attention to good hygiene. Also, laser surgery might be an option to consider. With this technique, the hemorrhoids are burned off without the need for the traditional operation. Ask your doctor about this.
 To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

days a week. I'm puzzled because I have a very noticeable wheeze in a blood vessel in my head or neck when the body is compressed as I bend over to pet my cat or pick up something from the floor. Could the wheeze be caused by arteriosclerosis? I don't have high blood pressure.
DEAR READER: An audible swooshing sound in the blood vessel is called a bruit. This often results when an artery is partially blocked or kinked, and the blood flow undergoes turbulence.
 Bruits in the neck may indicate the presence of an arteriosclerotic plaque in the wall of the carotid artery. This is not related to high blood pressure but, some experts believe, it can provide a source of blood clots that may be carried to the brain, causing stroke.
 Although most bruits do not cause symptoms and don't need treatment, I think you should bring your observations to your doctor's attention. If you do have plaque in your carotid artery, as determined by special X-rays, the doctor might advise you to take one baby aspirin a day, to retard blood clotting and act as a preventative.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I like good foods including desserts, however, many people think you are doing something wrong if you eat sweets. What is the sensible approach to sugar in the diet for people who do not have a known health problem?
DEAR READER: Moderation.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 58-year-old woman in fairly good health. I don't drink coffee or consume alcohol, and I eat healthy foods and walk briskly for one hour five

Your Birthday
July 29, 1990
Conditions both financially and career-wise look more encouraging for you in the year ahead than they have for quite awhile. There will be numerous opportunities on which you can capitalize, so always fire your best shot.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) That which you hope to accomplish today might not be achieved if you lack cooperation and support from others. Don't do anything that could alienate key players. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23) There is a big difference today between having fully of purpose or merely having a closed mind. Don't turn a deaf ear to the suggestions of people who want to help you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When assessing financial matters today your judgment might be more optimistic than rational. Don't kid yourself about things that should be realistically evaluated.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) An objective view would be rather easy to achieve today, but more difficult than anticipated. However, it can still be done if you're resourceful and determined.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be very careful today not to let your ego get in the way and cause you to pretend about which you know little.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A well-intentioned friend may not be the right person with whom to discuss business matters today, because this person will tell you what you want to hear instead of giving you straight answers.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Something of significance can be achieved today, but not owing to the assistance of strong allies, but rather in spite of them. Try to work without partners.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is one of those days when you might make undesirable tasks even more unpleasant by doing them the hard way. Try to plan what you intend to do in advance.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Demands on your purse could be a bit more cumbersome than you anticipated today. Don't worsen matters by being extravagant where nonessentials are concerned.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to avoid close contact with people who are difficult and disagreeable. You are not apt to have the tolerance required to deal with them.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to be productive today you must also be methodical and organized. If you tackle assignments in a slipshod fashion, it may only create extra work.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Help, and enjoy yourself today instead of focusing on your material affairs. You're not apt to be too lucky in this area and it might be wise to wait until your rabbit's foot is working better.

Wong inference

By James Jacoby
What conclusion does a defender draw when the opponents quickly bid three no-trump without even a whisper of a search for a possible major suit? The answer is that their weakness will likely be in a major suit. So West attacked spades in today's deal. West reasoned that his side was dealt two top tricks in diamonds and that the best chance for success would be to find East with length and strength in spades.
There was a flaw in this reasoning. If South's jump to three no-trump showed 15 or more high-card points, East's strength would be very limited. In that case West's best chance would be to hope that the opponents had erred by settling in no-trump and that East held five or more diamonds. The king of diamonds lead would be a winner, provided West continued with the ace and the 10. But a low diamond away from the A-10 after that opening lead would block the suit.

There is a happy ending to this story. Although West's spade opening lead against the no-trump game let declarer make 12 tricks, the game was team-of-four, and defender West's teammates were still to be heard from. In the other room, in a more scientific bidding sequence, North reached six clubs, a makeable contract as long as the defenders' trumps divided 3-2. Voilà! A big pickup for the team even after West's inept choice of opening lead against three no-trump.

Patriots and Redskins open hitting for real in the NFL

By The Associated Press

If it's July, it must be time to scrimmage.

New England and Washington will get to it Saturday, as will Dallas and Houston.

It'll be the first time these teams have hit anybody other than themselves.

The Patriots and Redskins match up at Carlisle, Pa., and the Texas rivals square off at San Antonio.

"We've told the players that it's a test," Patriots coach Rod Rust said, "but we've also reminded them that it's July. The first thing we want them to aspire to is to let it loose."

The controlled format won't ever be confused with real football. New England and Washington will run seven-on-seven passing drills, then five full-squad offensive possessions per team consisting of 10 plays per possession.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson hopes to gain some game-style knowledge of his team, 1-15 last season.

"The main thing we want to do is evaluate players, what they're going to do in game-like situations," Johnson said. "We're going to have some kicking situations full speed and we're going to have about 150 plays for the total offense and defense."

New England brings its entire roster to Carlisle, while Washington will play only rookies, free agents and select veterans. The remainder of the Redskins veterans are not scheduled to report until Sunday, while New England's have been at Bryant College since July 17.

Giants' New York center Bart

Oates ended a four-day excused absence so he could take the New Jersey bar exam. He showed up late for Friday morning's workout, a fact not missed by Giants coach Bill Parcells.

"If he's that late for his clients they'll be incarcerated for a long while," Parcells said from New York's training site at Fairleigh Dickinson University. "They'll be residing in Rahway (state prison) on the second floor."

Oates is competing for the starting job with second-year man Brian Williams, who missed three days of practice when he stayed in Pittsburgh for his father's funeral.

Dolphins: Miami reached agreement with offensive tackle Richmond Webb, the ninth player drafted overall.

Webb's eight-day holdout reversed a trend of lengthy contract talks with first rounders. Last year, running back Sammie Smith held out 53 days and missed Miami's opener, and fellow first-round pick Louis Oliver was out of camp 21 days.

In 1987, defensive lineman John Ross took 41 days to report. Terms of Webb's deal were not disclosed.

Bills: Buffalo signed its first-round draft choice, defensive back James Williams of Fresno State, but three starters, running back Thurman Thomas, Pro Bowl linebacker Shane Conlan and offensive lineman Will Wolford, continued to hold out.

Coach Marv Levy was upset with the veterans not reporting. Thomas, Conlan, Wolford and tight end Keith McKeliter and Bush Rolie, cornerback Kirby Jackson and safety John Hagg. "It's unsettling," he said. "There's a varying degree of how much you can afford to miss (but) no one can afford to miss any. And anybody who thinks, 'I know the system' or that is kidding themselves."

Other signees, along with Williams, were fullback Jamie Mueller and tight end Pete Metzelaars.

Browns: After coming to Cleveland's camp, tight tackle Cody Risien again announced his retirement. Risien, 33, had originally retired in March, but decided to return in June.

"Looking at some of the younger guys and how hungry they are and reflecting on how hungry I had been early in my career, I just realized it's not my focus anymore," said Risien, a 10-year veteran from Texas A&M. "I just don't have a burning desire to play football anymore."

Cardinals: Phoenix has 13 players, 11 veterans and two rookies, out of camp and that's way too many for new coach Joe Bugel.

"We're constantly calling people, trying to get them in camp. Our club has made tremendous offers to each and every one of them. I know that for a fact," Bugel said, pounding a table with his fist during a news conference after practice. "What's the sense of holding out? What does that prove?"

"I'm getting fed up with it. People have to get off their butts and play football. If you want to play, get up here and play. Stop all this nonsense."

Soviet cagers upset victims

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — U.S. basketball moved to center stage again Friday. That's where the Soviets thought they were taking their slapstick act, too, but once again, they're second banana.

A day ago, the Soviet baseball team made its exit, stage left, a victim of the nine-man hook, beaten by the United States 17-0 in a game called after 6 1/2 innings by the 10-run rule. Gong!

Then, Friday, the Soviets' defending Olympic champion basketball team lost in the semifinals to Yugoslavia, 84-78, and will have to settle for a no better than a bronze medal. Gong again!

In the other semifinal, the United States, beaten earlier in the tournament by the Soviets, met Brazil and its potent forward, Oscar Schmidt, perhaps the best scorer in the international game.

The winners meet Sunday night for the gold medal. And then, the United States took an impressive, although precarious, lead over the Soviets, again defending Olympic champions, in the team portion of the women's gymnastics combination. Double Gong!

The U.S. team took advantage of a rare mistake by Soviet world champion Svetlana Boginskaya, who fell from the uneven parallel bars, to lead 59.186-59.161 with two events left.

Friday's action also included the beginning of hockey and wrestling.

Basketball: Schmidt and Marcel Sousa still are mainstays of the Brazilian team that beat a David Robinson-led U.S. team at the 1987 Pan American Games.

"This is my 18th year on the national team and Oscar's 17th," Sousa said. "The U.S. basketball team is too young to play at that level, but to U.S. players this is just a stop on the way to the NBA. For us, this is the big game."

The U.S. team is comprised mostly of freshmen and sophomores, including team leaders Billy Owens and Kenny Anderson.

"We tried to tell the kids to imagine how their college teams would do after the second game of the season against a team which was in the February part of its schedule," U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Gymnastics: The Soviets chose to bring a young team to Seattle. Boginskaya, although a veteran, is just 17, and the team also includes 15-year-old Oksana Chusovitina and 16-year-old Natalia Kalinina, a 68-pounder.

"I'm sure they are anxious to show off their young ones to the world and to start preparing them for the world championships next year," U.S. gymnastics coach Bela Karolyi said.

But it turned into a U.S. show early on. Kim Zmeskal, 14, was fighting her way through an injured heel and tendinitis in her left hand that forced her to wear a bulky bandage. The judges didn't seem to care, and neither did Zmeskal.

Zmeskal and Betty Okino, 15, had near-perfect 9.90s on the balance beam.

Zmeskal brought down the house in the soldout Tacoma Dome when she potted a 9.937 out of a possible 10 in the floor exercise, and Okino had 9.887.

Ice Hockey: The hockey tournament began Friday, but neither the Soviets nor the Americans open until Saturday. The U.S. team plays Switzerland, and the Soviets open against West Germany.

The Soviets still are fuming over what they consider the theft of one of their star players, Sergei Fedorov, by the Detroit Red Wings of the NHL. Fedorov left the Soviet team Sunday and flew to Detroit.

"The future is not so good," Soviet coach Igor Dmitriev said. "We have no protection against the dishonest activity of the NHL."

The Soviet team includes 15 players who have been drafted by the NHL at one time or another.

Sweden edged Czechoslovakia 5-4 in the tournament opener.

Ad revenue plummeting at the PGA

By HOYT HARWELL
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Another company has withdrawn its television commercials for the PGA Championship because the host club has no black members and ABC said its lost ad revenue is nearing $2 million.

It also appeared Friday that the tournament will be picked despite a request by Birmingham's black mayor not to stage protests.

Leaders of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference said that promises by Shoal Creek's governors that the private club will consider blacks as members were too late to head off demonstrations during the Aug. 9-12 tournament.

For ABC, the losses have become costly. "Our advertiser pullout is approaching $2 million," said Steve Solomon, senior vice president of ABC Sports, "and we've had indications from other advertisers that they may be pulling out as well."

A spokesman for American Honda Motor Co., Bob Butora, said in Los Angeles Friday that the firm "has decided to remove its advertising on the 1990 PGA Championship telecast due to questions arising from the membership policies of the host club."

"American Honda believes this is a sound business decision and is consistent with the company's philosophy as an equal opportunity employer."

Butora declined to say how much money the commercials would have cost, but said, "It wasn't a major advertising thing for us. We were in for two or three Acura ads on the ESPN broadcast only."

ESPN is to televise the first two days and ABC the final two days of the meet, one of the four major events on the professional tour.

Earlier, Toyota, IBM, Anheuser-Busch and Lincoln-Mercury said they were dropping plans to run commercials either on ABC or ESPN.

Delta Airlines said it would reduce its commercial involvement with the PGA.

The issue became public when the club's founder, Hall Thompson, told a reporter six weeks ago that Shoal Creek would not be pressured into accepting blacks as members. Thompson later apologized and said his remarks had been taken out of context, but has said nothing publicly since then.

The Rev. Abraham Woods, Birmingham SCLC president, said that Shoal Creek must get a black member before the tournament to avoid protests.

Steve Bradley, chairman of publicity for the tournament, said he believes it is a moot question whether Shoal Creek could get a black member by then.

Bradley referred to efforts by Richard Arrington, the city's first black mayor, and others to reach some type of compromise and thus avert protests.

"Some individuals who have worked very hard behind the scenes now tell me they don't believe anything will satisfy Dr. Woods and his people," said Bradley, who is not a member of the club but is helping as a volunteer.

"We're wondering if perhaps the objective of some leaders on the other side of the issue has been all along to picket, regardless," he said.

The mayor on Thursday displayed a copy of revised Shoal Creek by-laws and a letter from Thompson saying the club's membership policy would not discriminate.

Arrington said he was convinced the club meant it. He said he believed Shoal Creek will have black members within a year and that a black might be proposed as soon as next month.

Woods countered that this was too indefinite for him, and that he needed "to see something more than on paper, more than something they say they'll do."

Chris Boehm, co-chairman of a city community affairs committee that works for racial harmony, said Woods is not giving Shoal Creek a fair chance.

Ertl takes two-stroke lead at the LPGA Championship

By DAVID GINSBURG
The Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — Sue Ertl shot a 4-under-par 67 and took advantage of a quadruple bogey by Rosie Jones to grab a two-stroke lead Friday after two rounds of the LPGA Championship.

Jones led by five strokes until her 7 on the 195-yard, par-3, 16th hole. That helped give the lead to Ertl, who had six birdies and two bogeys for a 5-under 137 total.

For the 32-year-old Ertl, it was the first time she led after a round since the du Marier Ltd. Classic four years ago.

"Everyone has their moments, and this happens to be mine," she said.

Jones was at 139 and Cindy Figg-Currier and Cathy Johnson were tied for third at 140. Marna Figueroa-Dotti shot a 69 for a 141.

They were the only players under par after two trips over the unforgiving 6,246-yard Bethesda Country Club course. The cut, at a lofty 8-under 150, left 77 players to vie for a share of the record $1 million purse.

First-round leader Chris Johnson, beginning the day at 4-under, had a double bogey on No. 6 and bogeys on Nos. 7 and 9 en route to a 77 and a 144.

Pat Bradley shot a 71 for a 144; Betsy King a 73 for a 145; Patsy Sheehan a 71 for a 146; and defending champion Nancy Lopez rebounded from her opening 78 with a 70 that included an eagle.

Jones cruised along with five birdies, until she encountered the 16th.

Golf Roundup

Teeing off with a four-wood, she put her shot into the right bunker.

That's where the trouble began. Jones proceeded to chip into the opposite bunker, then hit into the rough before she "flubbed" a shot that left her ball on the fringe of the rough. She finally reached the green with her next shot and tipped a seven-foot putt before knocking the ball into the hole.

"It was hell," she said. Jones finished with pars on Nos. 17 and 18 for a 1-under-70. Until the disastrous 16th, she hadn't made more than par in the tournament.

"I still haven't had a bogey," she joked. "I was playing an absolute great round of golf and was feeling lucky, leading the pack by five, and then I hit the rough on 16."

Ertl, winless in nine years in the LPGA, incorporated a cautious approach to take the lead.

"I really played this golf course carefully," she said. "I played with patience and precision. I don't believe I was out of the fairway today, and I made the putts I needed."

Irwin, Pooley lead

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Hate Irwin played flawless while Don Pooley fought off disaster at every turn Friday.

But when the second round of the Buck Open was over, Irwin, who last month became the oldest player to win a U.S. Open, and Pooley were tied for the lead at 132, 12-under par and two strokes ahead of everybody else.

Irwin and Ken Green both fired 9-under 63's over the 7,014-yard Warwick Hills course.

The 63's tied the record for a round during the Buick Open. The competitive course record for Warwick Hills is 62, by Jim Colbert during a pro-am event prior to the 1979 tournament.

"Hate Irwin is 45," said Pooley, tongue firmly in cheek. "He's washed up."

Pooley, who shot 65, missed half the greens but scrambled around and made seven birdies. He needed only 20 putts.

"I missed the first three greens but was 1-under," he said. "That was a great way to start. That kind of set the tone."

Green was tied at 134 with U.S. Open runnerup Mike Donald, Billy Andrade and Mike Sullivan. Puzzy Zsiller and Dave Barr were at 135.

Wayne Levi, winner of three tournaments this year, was in a group at 136. Morris Hatakey was at 139 and Payne Stewart at 142. Seventy-two players made the cut at 142.

Irwin, who took the Open from Donald in a memorable playoff at Medinah, birdied six of the final seven holes Friday.

"I'm swinging well," Irwin said. "I'm not putting superbly, but I don't have to put too well because I'm hitting it so close."

Green birdied seven successive holes, the fourth through 10th, one shy of a PGA Tour record shared by many.

Sanders reportedly set to get $2.5 million pact from Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — One thing is certain: Deion Sanders will be playing in Detroit on Sept. 16.

What's not certain is what sport the outfielder-corerback will be playing.

On that day, his Atlanta Falcons will play the Detroit Lions at the Pontiac Silverdome in a 1 p.m. game. Thirty-five minutes later, his New York Yankees will meet Detroit at Tiger Stadium.

While it is doubtful that Sanders will go the baseball route just to get an extra half-hour sleep, a $2.5-million contract might just convince him.

That's the amount the Yankees are offering Sanders to stay with the team past his July 31 football reporting date, the Atlanta Journal said Friday. The amount includes a $1 million base salary for the 1991 season, plus up to $1 million more in performance incentives.

It could go up to $2.5 million if, as expected, the Yankees pick up all or part of the penalties the Falcons might levy against him, the report said.

Eugene Parker, Sanders' personal attorney, said the Yankees contract is "inevitable at this point," but declined to comment on the details.

"I will say that we're talking about an absolutely awesome contract. It's too much for Deion not to consider," Parker told the Journal.

Yankees vice president George Bradley, who is handling the Sanders negotiations, could not be reached for comment.

Falcons officials conceded Friday that Sanders, their first-round draft pick in 1989, would almost certainly miss training camp and part of the regular season in order to extend his baseball season.

"It sure looks like he's going to sign (with the Yankees)," said Falcons president Taylor Smith. "We'll be extremely disappointed if it happens."

The 6-1, 195-pound Sanders signed a four-year, $4.4 million contract with the Falcons last September. His base salary for this season is $550,000.

Falcons spokesman Charlie Taylor said that Sanders would be fined $1,500 for each day past July 31 that he is not in training camp.

But Taylor also said the fines could escalate if the days turn into months. If he misses the entire season, Sanders might have to repay up to 75 percent of his $2 million signing bonus.

A new baseball contract would mean that the earliest the .156 hitter could be available for a regular-season football game is the Falcons' Oct. 7 meeting with New Orleans, their fourth game of the season.

BIG OFFER? — Deion Sanders, who doubles in football and baseball with the Yankees, reportedly has been offered a $2.5 million deal by the New York club. Will that entice him enough to give up football?

Bunting becoming a lost art in major leagues

By ALLAN KREDA
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Have today's major-leaguers sacrificed the bunt?

The players, the managers and the numbers say yes.

Even speedsters like Rickey Henderson and Vince Coleman seem to be giving up on shortening up.

"Agents want their clients to show stats. You can't show any stats with bunts," said Detroit Tigers manager Sparky Anderson. "It's a skill that's not worked on at the lower levels. Not only is it diminished, but I'm amazed how poorly it is done in today's game."

While not all agree with the philosophy of the little-used manuever, they concur it's disappearing.

"It used to be a big part of the offense but, something, perhaps artificial turf, has made the difference," said Lou Piniella, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who spent his 18-year playing career in the American League. "You have to have team speed to think of using the bunt but it has to be part of your game plan too."

In 1960, the American League had an average of more than one sacrifice per game (661 in 617 games).

But with artificial turf and the designated hitter, that figure fell to .81 per game by 1980 and was .54 per game through the first half of 1990, according to the Elias Sports Bureau.

National League sacrifices — where the pitchers still bat — have remained relatively constant through the '70s and '80s, staying just under one per game. But the vast majority of National League bunt attempts are for sacrifices, not hits.

Henderson, regarded as the premier leadoff man in baseball, is blunt in his disdain for the bunt. He tried it less than 10 times in 1989.

"I gave it up in the minor leagues because I didn't bunt well, so I threw it out of my hitting strategy," said Henderson, a key member of the Oakland Athletics' World Series win in 1989. "Most guys who can't hit or who aren't hitting well will look to bunt for a hit but I

"There just aren't many good bunters anymore. The pitchers bunt in our league because they have to. I'd say that some of the art of bunting has been lost."

— Roger Craig

"Agents want their clients to show stats. You can't show any stats with bunts. It's a skill that's not worked on at the lower levels. Not only is it diminished, but I'm amazed how poorly it is done in today's game."

— Sparky Anderson

just go up there to hit."

Coleman managed only 19 hits in 114 bunt attempts during 1989.

Most bunt attempts are either fouled off or missed.

"There just aren't many good bunters anymore," said Giants manager Roger Craig. "The pitchers bunt in our league because they have to. I'd say that some of the art of bunting has been lost."

Why?

"Livlier balls, stronger guys. Managers don't go to the bunt until late in the ballgame," said Anderson, who spent nine years managing the Cincinnati Reds but has been with the Detroit Tigers since 1979. "Plus, you're looking at guys who hit 40-45 home runs a year. You're not going to have a designated hitter in a game so he can bunt and on the artificial turf, you can make runs awfully quick, so why bunt?"

In the past, acknowledged power-hitters like Mickey Mantle, Steve Garvey or Mike Schmidt would not hesitate to bunt if the need or opportunity arose.

But in 1990, the game's best bunters are those who rely on speed instead of the element of surprise.

"I've got to use what skills I have to be effective in the game," said outfielder Brett Butler of the San Francisco Giants, who led the majors with 22 bunt hits in 1989. "A lot of it is an ego thing. I've heard a lot of people say that if you bunt, you are giving in to the pitcher — that it's a sign of weakness. I don't buy that."

Butler, who has also played for the Atlanta Braves and Cleveland Indians, credits the bunt with saving his career.

"I've got the speed and I'm not going to hit many home runs so teams know I'm prone to bunt," Butler said. "I've averaged more than 20 bunt hits a year during the past six seasons. If I didn't bunt, I'd probably be out of the game by now."

Butler tried to bunt 115 times in 1989, the most of any player, but he was far from the most effective.

"You see fewer and fewer players doing it but it's in keeping with the game as a whole," said Yada Pinson, the Detroit Tigers' hitting coach, who spent 18 years in the majors with five teams. "Players don't work at skills the way they used to. Power hitters won't bunt. And so many guys come up earlier than they used to and they haven't been trained enough on the fundamentals."

Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres bunted with a 75 percent success rating — figured by dividing bunt hits and sacrifices by total attempts. Jody Reed of the Boston Red Sox (65 percent) and teammate Marty Barrett (59 percent) were second and third on the list.

The worst percentage bunters in 1989 were Kevin Seitzer (17 percent) of the Kansas City Royals, Ouis Nixon (15 percent) of the Montreal Expos and Luis Polonia (13 percent), who split the year between Oakland and the New York Yankees.

"You don't hear about it any more," said Russ Nixon, former manager of the Atlanta Braves. "The ability to bunt used to be an item in a player's scouting report but today it's not even mentioned anymore."

Carlton Fisk, who has caught for the Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox during his 20-year career, believes there is a difference in how bunting is approached in today's game.

"I wouldn't call it a lost art, maybe a misplaced art," Fisk said. "The American League has emerged into a pounder's league instead of a scratch for a run league. Players still bunt but only when they are asked to. Plus, there are many American League parks where it doesn't make sense to waste an out."

Anderson agrees.

"I don't like the idea of giving you an out. I want you to earn an out from me," he said. "If it gets down to the late innings and I'm down, then I'll use it but with the turf fields and the short fences in places like Detroit, Boston and New York, why should I give away an out?"

Who's the best bunter of the last decade or two?

"Rod Carew is the best I've ever seen," Anderson said. "His bat control was incredible. He could bunt the ball and actually deaden it."

Besides Butler, the accolades these days go to players like Steve Lyons of the Chicago White Sox, a lifetime .259 hitter with 15 career home runs.

Lyons had 13 bunt hits in 1989.

"I think the bunt is an exciting play," Lyons said. "The home run is what's overrated."

Imagineers end Newman's 9-game win skein

By HERALD STAFF

BLOOMFIELD — Squeezing home a run in the second inning and adding three more in the fourth, the ninth-place Imagineers upset Newman Lincoln-Mercury, 4-2, Friday night at Bloomfield High School, ending Newman's nine-game winning streak.

Newman's, 14-9, resumes action tonight at 7 against Society for Savings at Mortuary Field. The Imagineers improve to 7-14-3 with the victory.

Joe Blessis' suicide squeeze produced the Imagineers' first run in the second inning. Brian Marshall had an RBI double and Kevin Burke an RBI single in the winner's third frame.

Newman plated both of its runs in the fourth inning. Bill Chapulis belted his league-leading 11th homer of the season, a solo shot, and Chris Petersen singled home Greg Centracchio, who doubled.

Newman collected eight hits off winning pitcher Bob Drake. He walked one and struck out four.

"We left a few people on base," Newman manager Gene Johnson said.

Newman's had runners at the corners in the fourth after plating its two runs, but Keith DeVos struck out and Ray Gilha skied out to end the inning.

Newman had the tying runs on base in the seventh but a drive by Chapulis up the gap in left centerfield was flagged down by Jim Schiavone, who made a sliding, diving grab of the ball.

"He made a fantastic catch, but when he hit the ground he lost the ball," Johnson said. He added the base umpire asked for assistance from the home plate umpire, and the final out was reaffirmed. "It was ruled an out," Johnson said simply.

bulpen less than two weeks ago, scattering eight hits in seven innings.

Robinson (3-6) has yielded five runs in 21 innings as a starter and is 2-1 with a 2.14 ERA after going 1-5 with a 4.54 ERA in 32 relief appearances.

Wayne Tolleson, who had five hits in 36 at-bats this season, had his first three-hit game since Oct. 2, 1988, including a double and his second RBI of the season.

In the first game, Steve Balboni hit a solo homer and Roberto Kelly added a two-run shot off Greg Swindell (6-6) as the Yankees ended a three-game losing streak.

Robinson and Hawkins (2-8) entered the doubleheader with a combined record of 3-14 but extended Cleveland's slump to 10 losses in 13 games. Hawkins, who faced only two batters over the minimum, struck out five and did not walk anyone, ending a hard-luck string that included a 4-0 loss on four unearned runs in his no-hitter against the Chicago White Sox on July 1.

He yielded singles by Jerry Browne in the first inning and Dion James in the fourth, but Browne was erased on a double play. Hawkins retired 14 in a row until Ken Phelps singled in the ninth.

It was the Yankees' third shutout of the season and the Indians did not advance a runner beyond first base. Hawkins is 3-0 and has not allowed an earned run in 25 2-3 career innings in Cleveland.

Swindell matched Hawkins until the seventh inning when Balboni hit his 11th home run with one. The Yankees chased Swindell in the eighth on a leadoff single by Jim Leyritz and Kelly's two-out homer, his sixth.

In the second game, the Yankees scored twice in the second inning against Mike Walker (0-2) on two walks and RBI singles by Tolleson and Kelly. They made it 4-1 in the third when two runs scored as Oscar Azoza's one-out, bases-loaded grounder got through shortstop Felix Fermin's legs for an error.

Blue Jays 1, Rangers 0: At Toronto, Dave Stieb held Texas to five hits in seven innings and Glennell Hill homered in the third as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Rangers 1-0 Friday night.

Stieb (13-3) struck out three and walked four, including Geno Petralli three times. Duane Ward pitched the eighth and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 23 opportunities.

Hill's one-out homer was his ninth of the season and second in the last three games. Loser Charlie Hough (7-7) gave up seven hits in pitching his fourth complete game.

Twins 9, Athletics: At Minneapolis, Brian Harper extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a two-run double that highlighted a six-run fifth inning and carried the Minnesota Twins to a 9-4 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Friday night.

White Sox 7, Brewers 4: At Chicago, Carlton Fisk hit his 345th career homer in Chicago's three-run first inning and Dan Pasqua also homered as the Chicago White Sox beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-4 Friday night.

The victory lifted the White Sox within 2½ games of first-place Oakland in the American League West.

Jack McDowell (6-5) won for the first time in five starts, yielding three runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. Since last winning on June 27, McDowell had three no-decisions and a loss.

NEW 'DO — Darryl Strawberry of the Mets shows off his new haircut during stretching exercises before Friday's game with the St. Louis Cardinals at Shea Stadium.

Mets' Viola gets 14th victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Viola won his National League-leading 14th game and the New York Mets scored early and often Friday night, crushing the St. Louis Cardinals 10-1.

Dave Magadan got three hits and drove in four runs in the first three innings as the Mets took a 10-1 lead. Cardinals center fielder Mill Thompson contributed, misplaying Darryl Boston's fly ball into a two-run triple that capped a five-run first and misplaying Magadan's line drive into a bases-loaded triple in the third.

New York won for the seventh time in 10 games. The Mets have won seven of eight against St. Louis this year.

The Mets, the highest-scoring team in the majors, got 13 of their 14 hits in 3 1-3 innings. By then, every starter had either scored a run or driven one in except Darryl Strawberry, who finished 0-for-5.

Phillies 5, Pirates 3: At Pittsburgh, Dennis Cook pitched five shutout relief innings and Charlie Hayes homered and drove in two runs as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh 5-3 Friday night, knock-

Kevin Brown made his major league debut and got the final three outs, finishing the three-hitter.

Viola worked on three days' rest for the first time this season. He pitched in place of Dwight Gooden, who was given two extra days to rest his sore shoulder.

Bryn Smith (7-8) ran into immediate trouble when Howard Johnson led off the first with an infield hit, Magadan bunted for a single and Gregg Jefferies was hit by a pitch, loading the bases with no outs.

Strawberry struck out, Kevin McReynolds hit a sacrifice fly and Mackey Sasser had a two-run single. After O'Malley singled, Boston hit a line drive to center and Thompson broke in, then could not recover as the ball sailed over his head for a triple that made it 5-0.

Maddux (7-9) won his third straight start after going winless in his previous 13, and helped the Cubs snap a three-game losing streak. Bill Long pitched the 10th for his third save.

Cubs 2, Expos 0: At Montreal, pinch-hitter Gary Varsho's run-scoring single broke a scoreless tie with two outs in the 10th inning and Greg Maddux allowed two hits in nine innings as the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 2-0 Friday night.

Bosox win; Yanks sweep pair

DETROIT (AP) — Boston's Tom Bolton held Detroit to four hits in 7 2/3 innings for his first career road victory after seven losses and the Red Sox scored an unearned run off Jack Morris to beat the Tigers 1-0 Friday night.

Morris (8-13) yielded just four hits but was victimized when Mike Greenwell opened the Boston fourth with a single, stole second and continued to third on catcher Mike Heath's throwing error. After Ellis Burks struck out, Carlos Quintana hit a sacrifice fly. The unearned run was the 19th off Morris, most in the American League.

The Tigers put runners on first and second with one out but Bolton struck out Gary Ward on a 3-2 pitch and Cecil Fielder was out trying to steal second. Fielder opened the second with a walk and the seventh with a single but was erased both times when Ward hit into double plays.

Bolton (4-1) walked six and struck out three. He was relieved by Dana Kiecker after walking Tony Phillips and yielding an infield hit to Travis Fryman with two out.

Dana Kiecker relieved and hit Alan Trammell with a pitch, loading the bases. But shortstop Tim Lincecum made a leaping grab of Fielder's line drive. Rob Murphy pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

The victory kept the Red Sox one game behind Toronto in the American League East. The Blue Jays beat Texas 1-0.

Yankees 3-4, Indians 0-1: At Cleveland, Andy Hawkins, winless in 12 starts, including a lost no-hitter, held Cleveland to three singles for his first victory since May 6 as the New York Yankees beat the Indians 3-0 and went on to sweep Friday's two-night doubleheader.

The Yankees won the second game 4-1 as Jeff Robinson pitched his third strong game since leaving the

Marshall sent to the Bosox

NEW YORK (AP) — The Mets will trade disgraced first baseman Mike Marshall to the Boston Red Sox for three minor leaguers effective Saturday, New York announced Friday night.

Marshall will be removed from the 15-day disabled list Saturday and sent to the Red Sox for pitcher Greg Hansell, outfielder Ender Perrozo and a minor league player to be named later.

Before going on the disabled list with a stomach problem, Marshall had a heated disagreement with Mets manager Bud Harrelson over a lack of playing time.

Marshall, 30, is batting .239 with six homers and 27 RBIs in 53 games.

Explosion kills Tory lawmaker

HANKHAM, England (AP) — A Conservative Party lawmaker and outspoken critic of the Irish Republican Army was killed today by a bomb planted outside his car, police said.

Ian Gow died shortly after emergency services reached his home, said Inspector Mike Alderson of Sussex police.

S. Korea urges talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea today urged Communist North Korea for talks on a proposed opening of the heavily armed border between the two nations in August.

Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon said in a message to his North Korean colleague that a meeting must be held before Aug. 7 in order to allow the five-day frontier opening, which would start Aug. 13.

Early this morning, automatic weapons fire rang out near Parliament, about a mile away, where rebels seized Prime Minister Arthur N.R. Robinson on Friday.

The rebels claimed to have wired him explosives and threatened to blow him up if a rescue attempt was mounted.

Personal income up 0.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending jumped 1.0 percent in June, the largest gain in five months, while personal incomes rose 0.4 percent, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said consumer spending totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.64 trillion after being unchanged in May. It was the biggest advance since a similar 1.0 percent increase in January.

Ms. Magazine back on stands

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight months after suspending publication, Ms. magazine is headed back to the newsstand without advertising.

The magazine also has a slightly new name, Ms. The World of Women, which its backers say better reflects its worldwide scope.

Shattered town collects itself

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Losses were estimated at up to $1 million after a weekend explosion and fire left little but cooling rubble where part of downtown Monroe had stood.

The explosion late Saturday night in this town of 13,000 demolished at least eight businesses, shattered storefront windows nearly the length of Main Street and sent six people to the hospital with cuts from flying glass, officials said.

Rubbing alcohol was a mistake

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis says in her upcoming autobiography that the night she drank rubbing alcohol, she didn't realize it was poisonous and wasn't attempting suicide, a newspaper reported.

Mrs. Dukakis, the wife of former Democratic presidential nominee and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, chronicles her bouts with alcohol and diet pill addiction in "Now You Know," to be released in August.

Trinidad gunfire reported

By DAN SEWELL
The Associated Press

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad — Gunfire broke out today near a government television station and Parliament where Moslem extremists held the prime minister and 30 other people hostage for a fourth day.

The heaviest shooting was centered on the television station, whose employees were taken hostage Friday. Automatic rifle and machine-gun fire was punctuated by what sounded like artillery booms.

"A major firefight is going on," said a diplomatic source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The shooting at the TV station appeared to be coming from two directions, but it was not clear whether there was any attempt by the security forces to storm the building. Heavy black smoke wafted from Television House at 10:20 a.m.

Early this morning, automatic weapons fire rang out near Parliament, about a mile away, where rebels seized Prime Minister Arthur N.R. Robinson on Friday.

The rebels claimed to have wired him explosives and threatened to blow him up if a rescue attempt was mounted.

Kwasi Aniba, one of the rebels inside Parliament, said by telephone today the gunfire came from police "who have been attempting to thwart" the negotiations to end the siege.

He said the group was holding eight government ministers along with the prime minister. The rebels accuse Robinson of corruption and demand he resign.

A government official said the two sides were far from a settlement, apparently hanging on the rebels' demand that they be granted immunity from prosecution. But Aniba said, "We are very hopeful of an amicable solution."

Elsewhere in Port-of-Spain, security forces patrolled with orders to shoot looters on sight.

On Sunday, a television executive who was also being held by rebels said Robinson had offered to resign.

Compulsive collectors let go with rat pack sale

NORTH HAVEN (AP) — Inelda Marcos, with her thousands of pairs of shoes, might have felt very much at home at the Obsessive Compulsive Foundation's first Hoarders and Pack Rats Tag Sale, held over the weekend.

Among those at the Saturday event was Kathleen Page who was trying to let go of the 80 pairs of shoes, more than 200 dresses and suits, boxes and boxes of costume jewelry, piles of sweaters and blouses, stacks of scarves, and an odd collection of accessories that she had kept in her closet for decades.

Page had by far the most merchandise of all the vendors at the tag sale. Some of Connecticut's 1,000-plus Obsessive Compulsive Foundation members held the tag sale to raise money for research and to take a step toward getting over one of their compulsions.

"I never thought I was a hoarder. I thought I was just a cleaner," Page said.

The foundation has about 150 support groups around the country for people with obsessive compulsive disorder, who uncontrollably act out behaviors and rituals, such as repeatedly cleaning rooms, or checking locks, and appliances, and hoarding huge numbers of belongings for inordinate periods of time.

Members raised $500 selling clothes, accessories, books, appliances and a mixture of other items — some of which were donated by the public, according to Executive Director Jim Broach.

Foundation members, donning T-shirts emblazoned with the words "Pack 'em in — move 'em out," were glad to be able to joke about their disorder. Without each other's support, they couldn't.

Page, a New York resident who helped establish the foundation in 1987 by appearing on the ABC's "20/20" news program, said she's been suffering from her disorder since age 11, when she was unable to stop getting out of bed at night to touch a prayer book.

Page said she never wore any of the new clothes or shoes she bought, and or never used any of her wedding gifts, for fear of soiling, tearing or breaking them. Not once did she sit on any of her own furniture, and her ex-husband, Jack, had to eat out every night because she refused to use the dishes.

Members say their disorder is a chemical imbalance that can sometimes be helped with medication. After years of shock treatments and psychiatric care, Page finally has begun to feel better with the help of the anti-depressant Fluvoxamine.

Page tried not to pay attention as customers rummaged through her belongings during the tag sale.

"I'm out of it," she said, smiling. "I never thought this isn't really happening."

Conversion ideas rise as defense budget falls

By JOHN DIAMOND
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A sweeping Senate plan to help victims of military budget cuts represents a growing acceptance that defense spending is declining rapidly and that states like Connecticut need help.

The key question raised by the latest proposal by Sens. Joseph Lieberman and Christopher Dodd, both Connecticut Democrats, is how much help can the government afford.

Lieberman and Dodd are pursuing a proposal to spend up to $1 billion per year to help workers, communities and companies left high and dry by the declining pool of defense procurement dollars. On the House side, proposals backed by lawmakers from Connecticut, Massachusetts and other defense-intense regions call for spending about $200 million per year.

In any case, the numbers at play in the defense spending debate are staggering.

—From 1977 to this year defense spending tripled from $97 billion to $296 billion. Now, according to House Armed Services Committee member Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., spending may drop by 50 percent in real terms by the end of

Union chief: no give-backs

By NANCY FOLEY
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Pearl Caouette doesn't like to hear the word "unionism" used to describe the Manchester Education Association.

The newly-elected president said she prefers the word "association" because she associates unions with blue collar workers.

"We're professionals," she said. Caouette, a math teacher at Bennett Junior High School, became president of the MEA at the beginning of July after an uncontested election. From the union's new office in the Hilliard Building on West Middle Turnpike, she discussed her views of the union and its relationship with the Board of Education.

Like her predecessor, Valerie Saly Caouette, a 20-year veteran of the Manchester school system, does not come across as a firebrand labor leader. In addition to an aversion to the word union, she also has an aversion to the more confrontational tactics that are associated with them.

"I don't believe in strikes. I don't believe in work stoppages," she said. Such behavior is not befitting "professionals," she describes.

Part of the reason that she seeks to avoid confrontation is that there may be no need for it. The state's binding arbitration law, which she strongly supports, has made strikes obsolete, she said. The process doesn't always favor teachers, either, according to

PEARL CAOQUETTE

Caouette. In addition, for many years, the union has enjoyed what she calls "excellent" relations with the school administration and the school. "That's not to say we always agree," she said.

General Assembly picture unclear

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A year ago, the 1990 General Assembly elections were shaping up as a referendum on the O'Neill administration and the Democratic-backed tax increases that costed nearly $1 billion.

But that was before Lowell Weicker returned, before Gov. William A. O'Neill dropped his bid for re-election and before countless other developments that seem to have blurred party lines.

"Neither party has a lock this time," said state Rep. Doreen Del Bianco, D-Waterbury. "It's up for grabs for anybody. Weicker being in the race (for governor) just skew it so much that you really can't call it."

Republican leaders are still hopeful that they can tap into voters' anger over the tax increases to win back control of the Assembly, which they have ruled for only two of the last 16 years. Those two years were 1985 and 1986, after the GOP was swept to power in the 1984 Reagan landslide.

Election strategists for both parties doubt that this year's three-way gubernatorial race will produce the kind of coalition that will help the Republicans win control or otherwise dramatically alter the makeup of the Assembly.

"I don't believe that anybody's going to run away with the gubernatorial race," said Debby Wilhite, who is coordinating election strategy for House Democrats. "As long as it's close and competitive, it will have a minimal effect on our ability to hold the House."

Democrats control the House by a 88-63 majority and the Senate by 23-13. To win control of either chamber, the GOP needs to gain six seats in the Senate or 13 seats in the House.

Control of the Assembly brings numerous advantages besides the obvious leverage in floor votes. Members of the majority party serve as chairmen of the Assembly's many committees, where decisions are made that determine whether bills ever make it to the House or Senate floor.

State Republican Party Chairman Richard Foley said the GOP's chances of winning control of the House are "an even money bet." He acknowledged that winning the Senate senators are not seeking re-election — will be more difficult.

— where four of the GOP's 13

"Based on the fact we have a slug of Democrats who have voted for a billion-dollar tax increase, and they still couldn't balance the budget,

Meotti, others are targeted

By ALEX GIRELLI
Manchester Herald
and The Associated Press

If hindsight is any guide, more than a dozen General Assembly races could shape up as close calls for incumbents who won narrowly the last time they faced the voters.

And among the incumbents that political observers say may be most vulnerable is state Sen. Michael P. Meotti, whose district includes Manchester, Bolton and Hebron, as well as Glastonbury and Columbia.

Meotti, a Democrat, told The Herald this morning that he suspects he is being considered vulnerable to defeat because his seat has been targeted by the Republican state leadership. And he admitted that he believes the GOP has a viable candidate in his opponent, Sonya Grogins, who like Meotti is from Glastonbury.

But Meotti said he firmly believes that this early in the race, his chances are still good going forward to November. "I think I can win," Meotti said.

He pointed out that he was not expected to win in his first run for the senate post in 1986, or in his second campaign in 1988, when he defeated Carl Zinzer of Manchester by a vote of 12,847 to 10,560.

Meanwhile, in the Senate, at least four other incumbents, three who won narrowly in 1988, face potentially close races. They are: —Sen. Lee Scarpini, R-Trumbull, who is fighting to hold the traditionally Democratic 22nd District in Bridgeport and Trumbull. She won in 1988 by 1,149 votes.
