

Dickerson changing his tune about playing for Colts

By The Associated Press

Eric Dickerson may soon be listening to his own advice. The Indianapolis Colts running back urged his good friend, cornerback LaRoy Ivins, to sign a one-year contract Thursday with the Detroit Lions.

"I was talking with Eric (Wednesday) before I came in and he said, 'The Lions are gonna win, the Lions are gonna win,'" said Ivins, released by the Los Angeles Rams in April. "He was telling me that a week ago."

Ivins said he desires to be on a winning team played a large role in his decision to sign with the Lions. The former All-Pro was a member of eight playoff teams in his 10 years with the Rams and played in the 1985 and 1989 NFL Championship games.

Ivins said he worked out with San Francisco, Miami, Kansas City and Atlanta in addition to his July 23 workout with the Lions. All but San Francisco offered Ivins a contract, he said.

"I got tired of the traveling," Ivins said. "It was time to do something. When I went to other teams, I kept telling my agent 'I want to come to Detroit. I want to come to Detroit.'"

Apparently, Dickerson just wants to play.

NFL Camps

"I love my Sundays, I just want to play football," Dickerson said during an interview at his home in Malibu Canyon, Calif. "I feel relaxed here, but I'm ready to get back."

Dickerson, to make $1.45 million on his contract, has not reported to the Colts and has demanded a trade. He said the dispute wasn't financial, but motivated by frustration at never having played in a Super Bowl — "not getting that ring."

He said he will remain here until something is worked out by his new agent, Leigh Steinberg. Steinberg made a resolution of his dispute with the Colts.

Dickerson has rushed for 11,226 yards and holds the single-season rushing record of 2,105.

Dickerson has come to a Super Bowl in 1985, when the Los Angeles Rams lost 20-0 to Chicago in the NFL title game.

Now, he said he can't see the Colts getting to the Super Bowl for at least two years, and that's why he's been reluctant to report to training camp.

When the Eagles recently signed Jim McMahon as a backup, Dickerson said he wanted to be traded. Now, he will have a chance to play behind Warren Moon.

Redskins: Offensive lineman Mark May underwent arthroscopic knee surgery, a follow-up to surgery he had after an injury last season.

The Redskins don't expect May, a former Pro Bowler, back until mid-season.

Steelers: Pittsburgh received good news, learning running back Tim Worley's left knee wasn't as seriously injured as earlier feared.

Doctors detected minor ligament damage in Worley's knee during diagnostic surgery at Divinette Providence Hospital in Pittsburgh. No surgical repairs were necessary, no more surgery is expected and Worley should only miss two or three weeks of training camp.

Bush tells Iraq: cease aggression

By TERENCE HUNT The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush warned Iraq on Friday not to tamper with U.S. "vital interests" by trying to add oil-rich Saudi Arabia to its conquest of Kuwait. He said the United States is "inclined" to help in any way we possibly can "to stop Iraqi aggression."

The White House said all options, including military force, were under consideration.

The State Department said Iraqi troops, hampered by eight years of war with Iran, were positioned 5 miles to 10 miles from the Saudi border, and spokesman Richard Boucher said, "Their presence there clearly raises significant concerns."

An Iraqi army camp spokesman was reported by Baghdad Radio as saying his nation's troops of war would begin withdrawing from Kuwait on Sunday. But the broadcast also said the Al-Sabah royal family with the remaining cuts coming at American Engine Business component

While company officials had said most of the cutbacks will be achieved through attrition, they also have said "We need to wait and see. There are many questions associated with it," said presidential spokesman a Marlin Fitzwater. "We asked

Female DWI cases on rise

By SCOTT BREDE Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — The number of women being charged with driving while intoxicated by the Manchester Police Department are on the rise, but overall DWI arrests are down due to a breakdown of the department's incontinence, police said.

Police figures show that in the seven full months since 1990 began, 53 females have been charged with drunk driving, a 12.8 percent increase over the 47 charged during the same period of time in 1989.

On the other hand, the number of men being arrested for the same crime dropped 7.6 percent — from 277 in the first seven months of 1989 to 256 between Jan. 1 and July 31, the figures show.

"Where it used to be mostly guys that were going out on Friday and Saturday nights that were being arrested (for DWI), now we are seeing women more and more," said Manchester police Sgt. Gerald Calve.

According to Calve, the ascent of female offenders began about six years ago

NEA votes down obscenity pledge

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The advisory body of the National Endowment for the Arts voted overwhelmingly Friday to eliminate an anti-obscenity pledge that artists and arts institutions must sign before they can receive federal grants.

After an emotional debate, the National Council on the Arts urged endowment chairman John E. Frohnmayer to stop requiring grant recipients to agree in writing to comply with a congressional ban on using federal funds for works that might be deemed obscene. The 17-2 vote by the presidentially appointed council is not binding on Frohnmayer. "I'm going to consider it and take my action in due course," said Frohnmayer.

The motion to remove the anti-obscenity pledge was sponsored by council member Roy Goodman, a New York state senator and arts patron, who called it "a loyalty oath reminiscent of the McCarthy era" of anti-communist witch hunts led by Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., in the 1950s.

Goodman said the pledge insulted and alienated the arts community and worsened the furor surrounding the endowment. "The artist knows what the law is," he said. "We don't have to rub his nose in it."

Frohnmayer instituted the pledge after conservative lawyers led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., persuaded Congress last October to amend the arts endowment's current $171 million budget to include a prohibition against federal support for obscene art.

The ban, prompted by protests over an NEA-sponsored exhibition of works by the late photographer Robert Mapplethorpe, includes "depictions of sadomasochism, homoeroticism, the sexual exploitation of children or individuals engaged in sex acts."

Frohnmayer placed the text of the anti-obscenity ban in the regulations that govern the award of endowment grants. Of the 2,000 NEA grants approved by early July, a dozen recipients have signed the pledge under protest, a half-dozen have refused to sign and forfeited their grants, and two have challenged the requirement in federal court.

At Frohnmayer's urging, the council amended Goodman's motion to make clear that it did not relieve NEA grant recipients of the need to comply with anti-obscenity law.

Dodd: Hussein a madman

By MELISSA B. ROBINSON
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Connecticut Democratic U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd and at least one of his New England senate colleagues say the United States should not rule out using military force to counter Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Wednesday.

Dodd, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, Friday praised the sanctions against Iraq announced by President Bush after the invasion.

But both lawmakers warned the measures, which included freezing Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets, might not be enough to deter Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein. "You're dealing with a madman here," said Dodd. "I'm not sure this is going to respond to sanctions."

Leahy said the situation should be scrutinized, and other Western and Arab nations should promptly join the U.S. in imposing sanctions.

"You're talking about something that could completely unravel the whole Middle East," Leahy said.

Gas prices start climbing after invasion of Kuwait

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Motorists across the country already are paying more at the gasoline pumps because of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent jump in oil prices. And already, some are howling accusations of price gouging.

The American Automobile Association said Friday its survey of 1,400 retail gasoline stations nationwide showed self-serve unleaded gasoline prices increased 4 cents in two days, to an average of $1.11 a gallon.

The association said spot checks early Friday by AAA clubs in Florida, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina and the Washington area showed retail prices increasing from 4 to 14 cents a gallon.

Increases at the pump followed wholesale price hikes by the major oil companies. Texaco raised its prices as much as 7 cents a gallon; Chevron Corp. hiked its price 5 cents; BP America Inc. had a 4- to 5-cent increase; and Mobil Oil Corp. raised its prices an average of 3.5 cents a gallon. Other firms also had increases.

The oil companies blamed the rising cost of crude oil on energy markets. Prices for crude, gasoline and home heating oil futures surged for a second day Friday in response to the Mideast hostilities.

Service stations across the country passed their higher costs to consumers. "We can't eat these kinds of increases. We'd be in terrible shape," said W. Terry Dennis, general manager at Woodfin Oil Co., which operates 20 service stations in Virginia.

California motorists faced a swift one-two punch at the gas pump this week. Prices jumped a nickel a gallon on Wednesday as a new state transportation tax took effect, and they rose in some places another 5 cents a gallon on Friday because of the Iraqi invasion.

"You gotta drive," said a resigned George Royhal of San Gabriel as he filled up at a South Pasadena station on Friday. "There's nothing you can do about it."

Iraqi oil seized in Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Customs agents seized 479,000 barrels of Iraqi crude oil from one tanker and blocked another offshore, but both cargoes apparently will be released since they were bought before an embargo was announced.

The Treasury Department said Friday that oil loaded before President Bush announced a trade embargo Thursday against Iraq and Kuwait may be delivered. Treasury spokesmen were not available to comment on specifics, but the exception appeared to cover both the cargoes seized in Texas. The Customs Service, along with the U.S. Coast Guard, seized the oil at the Port of Corpus Christi on Thursday afternoon, hours after President Bush's embargo went into effect at 5 a.m. The oil was being unloaded from the Helleosport Dignity, sailing under a Swedish flag, at a Coastal Corp. refinery facility, said Patricia McCauley, district Customs director in Houston. The cargo had been unloaded at sea from a Norwegian mother ship, the Berge Banker.

for immediate and unconditional withdrawal. If there are strings, we need to see what they are."

Iraq said it sent its troops into Kuwait Thursday merely to provide security for a provisional government — a contention dismissed in Washington and other Western capitals.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley said Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said bluntly, "I think it means war" if Iraq expands its invasion. "I say that not as a threat but as a prediction. The world cannot sit back and watch a person like (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein take over half of the oil reserves in the world."

Bush said he viewed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the threat to other Persian Gulf countries "as a matter of grave concern to this country and internationally as well. What Iraq has done violates every norm of international law."

Asked what the United States would do if Iraq invades Saudi Arabia, the president said, "I'm not discussing options but I would simply say the status quo is unacceptable and further expansion would be even more unacceptable."

The Pentagon said a third U.S. aircraft carrier was being recalled to head to the Mideast to bolster U.S. forces already scattered outside the Persian Gulf region. Officials said the USS Saratoga would relieve the USS Eisenhower, which was deployed in the Mideast in March.

The aircraft carrier Independence already is headed from the Indian Ocean toward the Persian Gulf to strengthen the eight-ship U.S. Navy presence already there.

Military sources said the Independence was "several days" from reaching a staging area outside gulf waters. Pentagon sources said it would be difficult for the United States to parry Iraq's drive with a major assault of troops.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney met with Bush at the White House, and the president was given "a spectrum of options" for military action including offering war-fighting hardware to Kuwaiti forces.

With tensions rising, the State Department advised the 3,000 Americans in Kuwait and the 500 in Iraq to leave as quickly as possible. In Kuwait, however, airports and ports were closed.

The administration said 14 Americans were known missing and believed to be in Iraqi hands. The United States demanded that they be accounted for and freed, Fitzwater said.

The Americans are oil workers who were taken from three different oil fields near the Iraq-Kuwait border, Boucher said.

Fitzwater said the United States could not confirm reports that Americans were being rounded up or held in various places.

He said Iraqi troops have been stationed around the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait "but they have not gone inside. There is no indication they intend to do that."

In the early hours of the invasion, which began before dawn Thursday, Iraqi officials promised U.S. Embassy officials in Baghdad that Americans would not be harmed, Boucher said. "We reminded them of their commitment to safeguard the safety of Americans," he said.

In an unprecedented step, the United States and Soviet Union jointly demanded that all countries cut off arms supplies to Iraq. The statement was is-stated in Moscow by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze after a hastily scheduled meeting.

Shevardnadze, whose country has been Iraq's biggest arms supplier, predicted that Baghdad soon would withdraw from Kuwait.

While holding out the threat of a military response, the United States also pressed for a diplomatic solution to the crisis. Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, consulted with all members of the U.N. Security Council about mandatory sanctions, possibly including economic, diplomatic and military measures.

Fitzwater said "the actions of Iraq at this point indicate a ruthlessness and disregard for international law that must make us concerned about all the other countries in the region and their security."

NATO sources in Brussels said the United States alerted Western allies that it was prepared to respond should Iraq troops push beyond Kuwaiti territory.

"We have told them that we don't rule out any military option and that everything is under consideration," Fitzwater said. "We are considering all options."

Bush spent 75 minutes with top advisers reviewing intelligence on the Middle East and the progress in implementing economic sanctions against Iraq, Fitzwater said.

Saudi Arabia's ambassador to the United States, Prince Bandar, met at the White House with Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser.

Bush said he talked by telephone with Turkish President Turgut Ozal, whose country is a conduit for much of the oil flowing out of Iraq.

Bush said that he and Ozal "look at this matter with the same sense of urgency and concern."

Soviets decry Iraqis

By ANDREW KATELL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union and the United States put aside decades of Middle East policy differences Friday and asked jointly that all countries cut off arms shipments to Iraq because of its invasion of Kuwait.

The superpowers also demanded Iraq withdraw its troops from Kuwait, and the Iraqis will pull out their troops," Shevardnadze said at a news conference with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III at his side.

Shevardnadze said the Soviets had been told Iraq would do so quickly. "We have been assured that very soon the Iraqis will pull out their troops," Shevardnadze said at a news conference with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III at his side.

He said the Soviets received the assurances through contacts in Baghdad. Later Friday, an Iraqi government spokesman said Iraqi troops will begin withdrawing from Kuwait on Sunday, Baghdad Radio announced.

Neither Baker nor Shevardnadze said specifically what their nations might do if Iraq continues what their statement called "brutal and illegal invasion" and "blatant transgression of the basic norms of civilized conduct."

Shevardnadze said neither side was considering military intervention. But Baker, when asked about further actions against Iraq, said, "I don't think that prudently you should rule out anything."

first impulse was to get out.

I heard shelling in the distance. I've never heard the sounds of war. I didn't know how close the invading troops were.

It was not the knowing that frayed the nerves. Some said it was over, others said the worst was yet to come. I'd never known this kind of fear.

The whole bizarre drama began for me at 6 a.m. Thursday. An American friend phoned telling me the news. He said there were casualties.

I packed. It's funny what you think of in times of crisis. I'd just bought a new pair of shoes the day before and I wanted to be sure and pack them. I was leaving nearly all of my worldly possessions behind but I had my shoes.

Others fled immediately. Our Iranian friends packed the car and drove their families to the south fast. I didn't even get to say goodbye.

A tiny shop in our apartment complex was filled with nervous customers. A woman waiting in the checkout line said: "I'm staying put. I have my birds upstairs. I can't abandon my birds."

We took a short drive to see if I could get photographs. I saw a communications tower that had been bombed.

There were long, long lines at gas stations, at banks, at the bakeries.

People were wondering what would happen next. I kept asking myself if my husband and I still had jobs. We worked for the Kuwaiti government? But was there a Kuwaiti government?

A friend working at the American Embassy said the shelling and gunfire were close to her home. She had two small children who were my 5-year-old son's playmates. We tried to joke about the situation but it wasn't easy.

People in downtown hotels were injured by flying glass.

Within hours, the rumors really began to fly: The British Embassy was fired on, the American Embassy overrun.

News reports via satellite told us that the Emir fled to Saudi Arabia. Both of the Emir's palaces were under Iraqi control. Iraqi troops occupied ministries as well as the state-run radio and television stations.

For a few hours in the afternoon we set about organizing a trip to Saudi Arabia and safety. But the U.S. Embassy told us to stay put. They said the roads were blocked.

My husband worked in the oil fields. Three of the oil rigs he worked on were under Iraqi control. There was a rumor that Americans on the rigs were captured by Iraqi troops.

Charles Cumming, a drilling foreman on one of the rigs said he saw 10 Soviet MiGs flying low over the rig.

"They were pretty loaded up," he said. "I heard this massive explosion."

There were rumors of casualties but no one knew how many died.

The shelling got louder, or seemed to. The panic grew.

We decided to ignore the American Embassy and try to get out. It seemed worth the risk to get away from the fighting and we made it.

My hands are still shaking. We drove about 60 miles from Ahmedi in southern Kuwait to the Saudi border. For the first 24 miles of our tense trip we saw thousands of confident, smiling Iraqi troops. Many waved as we went by.

At least 100 tanks were parked not far from an Ahmedi administration building. Some young soldiers were making themselves at home by looting a small neighborhood store.

As we ventured further south, we saw armored personnel carriers, howitzers, missile launchers and tanks. They were heading south, the direction of the Kuwait-Saudi border. The gathering arsenal stopped well before the actual frontier.

Anyone with identification documents was waived across the border.

Within minutes after leaving Kuwait we were greeted with hugs and tears by other joyous Americans and Britons. We saw about 100 who had managed to escape.

We traded war stories during the hours it took to get Saudi visas and clear customs.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of James W. Topfitt who passed away August 5, 1987.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance
I think of you often,
In laughter and love,
I hit my eyes upward,
And know you're above,
Your spirit is with me,
In all that I do,
Thinking of you, Dad,
And missing you too.
Your Daughter,

Just a thought of sweet remembrance
Just a memory, good and true
Just a token of affection
And many heartaches still for you.
In our hearts your memory lingers
Sweetly, tenderly, fond and true.
There is not a day
That we do not think of you
With love and special memories.
Loved with an everlasting love,

Gunman robs bank van of $50,000

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — A gunman staged a bold daytime robbery in West Hartford Friday morning, taking nearly $50,000 from a bank security truck.

Capt. Russell Hughes said the robbery occurred as a security guard was transferring money from the New Britain Avenue branch of Connecticut National Bank to drive-up teller windows on the other end of a shopping plaza where the bank is located.

Hughes said a gray station wagon stopped and blocked the path of the security guard as he drove through an alley to get to the teller windows.

"When the guard got out of his van to ask the car to move, a passenger in the car pulled out a handgun. The guard fled, but saw the gunman take a bag of cash out of the van.

Hughes said police estimate the bag contained close to $50,000 in cash.

Hughes said no shots were fired in the robbery at just after 8:30 a.m.

Hughes said the guard said the man escaped in an older model, gray station wagon with a homemade paper license plate in its window.

SPOUSAL ABUSE
A spouse who seeks to protect children, himself and the home from an abusive spouse, has immediate help available from the local police. A spouse may not "wrongfully" sue his or her spouse or children. Unpermitted teaching such as pushing, hitting, beating, slipping, rough treatment are violations of the state law. Sometimes proof is needed. An attorney can help at this early stage. You are well advised to seek an attorney who can discuss several aspects of the matter, e.g. (1) documenting the improper conduct, (2) police intervention, (3) help from the court, (4) evictions, (5) safeguarding the children, (6) home protection, (7) financial support.

Drunk

The intoximeter, a computer used to measure the alcohol level in a suspect's breath, has been inoperable since the computer went down two to three months ago, police said.

Currently, DWI suspects are being taken to neighboring police stations for the test to be done, giving the suspects' biological systems time to lower the alcohol level in the body, police said. The towns cooperating in the matter include Coventry, Glastonbury, East Hartford, Hartford, South Windsor and Vernon.

Before the state issued Manchester its own intoximeter in 1983, blood samples had to be taken to measure a suspect's blood-alcohol content, a process that took between six and eight weeks, Calve said. But with the advent of the intoximeter, the task could be completed almost instantaneously, he said.

Under normal circumstances, the Manchester police make on the average eight to 12 DWI arrests on the weekends, and it takes an officer between 60 to 90 minutes to process each individual, Calve said. It now takes two to two-and-one-half hours to process a DWI offender, and only 29 drunk driving arrests were made during the month of July. Thirty one such arrests were made in June.

But with the onset of stiffer penalties for those convicted, the number of people driving drunk is less prevalent than it used to be, Calve added.

"The trend, the state feels, is that DWIs are going down," Calve said. "It's not as prevalent, but it is still happening."

Man, 85, returns for Yale degree

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Daniel Wynkoop took some time off after his junior year at Yale before returning to earn his degree. He says it seemed like a lifetime.

Calvin Coolidge was president when Wynkoop was forced at the start of his senior year in 1925 to leave the button-down college, then all-male, because he had gotten married over the summer.

Wynkoop was offered the chance to return to school the following year as a married student, he said, but did not.

Although his three years at Yale were enough to make him an alumnus, enabling him to attend reunions with other Old Blues from the Class of 1926, the former encyclopedia salesman waited more than six decades to resume his pursuit of an Ivy League degree.

Now, at the age of 85, Wynkoop is no longer a college dropout.

"I finally had the time and the money. I asked my brother (a 1928 Yale graduate) what I ought to do with it, and he said, 'Why don't you finish school.' So I did," said Wynkoop, who lives in St. Petersburg, Fla.

After having completed five courses over three summers at Yale, and earning additional credits from a Spanish class he took at St. Petersburg (Fla.) Junior College, Wynkoop has acquired the seven missing credits he needed to earn a Yale diploma.

He plans to participate in graduation ceremonies next May with the Class of 1991. Yale officials said there have been some other students who were in their 80s when they graduated, but didn't know the exact ages.

Wynkoop, who checked out Friday from his dormitory at Calhoun College, one of Yale's residential colleges, said he kept his nose in the books during his second life at Yale.

"I didn't do anything else," said Wynkoop, who was dressed for summer in a white shirt and light tan shorts. "I didn't try to socialize."

"I had a nice couple of guys who said, 'Do you want to go get a couple of beers. I said, 'No, I've been on the wagon since I came here and I'll stay that way.'"

He said the only time he had a drink was when a member of the Yale administration invited him to lunch at Mary's, the storied Yale dining club.

Wynkoop's roommate this summer was a Japanese businessman sent to Yale by his boss to take some management courses.

Most of the more than 1,000 students enrolled in Yale's Summer and Special Programs are in the teens and early 20s, but Wynkoop said he did not believe he was treated differently because of his age.

He was impressed when, after only a short time at school this summer, a group of 12 girls sitting at a table in the dining hall yelled out, "Hi, Dan."

Wynkoop, who majored in English, took courses this summer on detective stories and on radicalism since the 1960s. The course on radicalism posed the most difficulty because "that's a subject with which I have very little sympathy."

"I was brought up not to associate with people like that," he said.

A philosophy course he took a previous year was his favorite class. "I had a peculiar position in the class. Because of my age, I had a different point of view on moral questions," he said.

Wynkoop said he feels sorry for people who ask him, with a look of bewilderment, why he would bother to go back to school.

"If they don't know, you can't tell them. It's because I want to drink deeper of the cup of life," he said.

Wynkoop said he likes to write and may take a course on how to use a word processor.

A widower, Wynkoop was married three times and has nine children and 25 grandchildren.

MANCHESTER — Bobbing in jello for fruit and picking up cotton balls with slinky, vaselined noses are two of the more unique competitions when they graduated, but didn't know the exact ages.

Bolton eyes school expansion

By DONNA O'LEARY
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Board of Education is continuing to work on a plan to update and expand school facilities. On August 9th the school board at its regular meeting will be brought up to date on modified plans. Lawrence Associates (and subcommittee) have been working on over the summer. School board members hope to bring financial plans to the community within the next six months.

According to Barry Stearns, chairman of Building and Grounds Subcommittee, once plans are chosen, board members will be able to sit down with town officials and residents to discuss the project.

The project involves additions to the elementary school, covering costs nationwide, and also minor modifications to the high school.

"The $11 million figure was only used as an estimate that would include all costs, materials, bonding and interest associated with the project over a twenty year period. People are getting confused over $11 million — the number could come down depending on the plan chosen. It was never meant to be a final figure, only an estimate to give an idea of what the cost could be," Stearns said.

Proponents are approximately 60 percent reimbursable, according to state guidelines based on new construction. The rates for renovation are less than on new construction, and those factors must be taken into account when working on a project of this size, according to architect Arwa Hossain.

The project has already been approved by the state in the 60 percent reimbursable for Bolton.

Bolton youth qualifies as rescue diver

By DONNA O'LEARY
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Matt Simmons, son of Mary-Jo Simmons of West St. and David Simmons, recently completed an open water dive course which will make him eligible to join an understaffed town rescue team.

The three week course included class and pool-side lessons. Students also are required to complete fresh and salt water dives. Simmons, a Bolton volunteer firefighter, took the course to be able to qualify for the fire department search-and-rescue team.

The Bolton High School senior has a full schedule working as a summer Parks Department maintainer at Bolton Lake and at a local restaurant — Bolton Pizza. "I have also had my own business for five years. I am in the mowing business and that also keeps me pretty busy," said Simmons.

During the school year, Simmons also plays varsity sports for the high school. "I play on the soccer, basketball, and baseball teams and ski whenever I can," said Simmons.

Simmons has been accepted into the Air Force and plans to enter after his graduation next June.

"I am going into the Air Force to continue in firefighting and search-and-rescue work. Also, I want to attend college courses and earn a degree in the community, where I am being," he said.

Simmons said the fire department is something he has been interested in for a long time. He enjoys meeting with his friends in the department and working with them in the community.

State's auto insurance rates are rising rapidly

HARTFORD (AP) — Auto insurance rates rose faster this year than they have in four years, up an average 9.1 percent in Connecticut, the state Department of Insurance reported.

Many drivers saw rate increases of nearly 20 percent or more during the year that ended June 30.

Insurers, complaining of dwindling profits, say they need to boost rates in many states because of the rising cost and frequency of liability claims for personal injury.

The rate increases, reported Thursday, were immediately condemned by state consumer activists.

"The majority of Connecticut families who live from paycheck to paycheck and are trying to make ends meet, those kinds of increases are not good news," said Robert Korte, legislative and political director for the Connecticut Citizen Action Group.

Regulators said they will soon launch a study to pinpoint the costs that are driving up premiums in Connecticut's $1.5 billion auto insurance market.

Rates have not risen so rapidly in Connecticut since 1983-84, when the average increase was 10 percent.

The 9.1 percent increase is an average for all kinds of auto insurance, covering injuries and damage to vehicles and other property. The overall percentage increase reflects the weighting of rate increases according to how much premium is collected for each type of coverage.

INFANT BURNS

A 4-month-old infant sustained a severe burn when her parents inadvertently fed her scalding formula from a bottle heated in a microwave. The bottle felt merely warm to the touch, but the formula inside was scalding hot. Always test the formula temperature with a few drops on the inside of the parent's arm. With breast-feeding, the temperature is always right.

Manchester

For consumers who buy only the liability insurance required by state law, the average increase was 15.6 percent, the department said. Liability insurance pays claims when the policyholder injures other people or damages their cars or other property.

Rates for insurance for collision damage, theft and vandalism dropped an average 1.7 percent in the past fiscal year.

Many insurers have reduced rates slightly for insurance covering damage to their customers' cars to help offset the large increases for liability insurance and to keep their overall prices competitive.

Allstate dropped rates an average 4.2 percent for the portion of insurance covering damage to its customers' cars because those claims were less frequent, said Xavier M. Dixon, Allstate's regional underwriting manager.

But liability claims have been filed more frequently, and they're costing more, he said. Allstate raised rates for liability insurance for personal injury 9.5 percent on average, Dixon said.

Travelers Corp. and other insurers blame rising rates partly on what they consider antiquated insurance laws. They also cite the high number of uninsured drivers and court rulings concerning them.

Estimates of uninsured cars run from 7.5 percent to 28.2 percent of Connecticut's cars.

Travelers is especially concerned with a practice that allows a consumer hit by an uninsured driver to collect more money than companies ever intended to pay. The practice, called "stacking" of limits, has been sanctioned by Connecticut courts.

"Travelers is actively working with insurance industry and consumer groups to seek practical solutions to the continuing pressure" that increase rates, said company spokeswoman Rosanne Hennessey.

In addition to encouraging auto and highway safety nationally, Travelers and other insurers favor changing Connecticut's "no-fault" laws. The laws were designed to keep accidents out of litigation, but insurers say the laws are failing to do that and need tightening.

Woman not ready to be mother

SOUTHINGTON (AP) — A Bristol woman who abandoned her infant boy shortly after he was born told authorities she never intended to keep the baby because she and her husband were not ready for children, an arrest warrant affidavit says.

Julie MacCormack, 25, was arrested Tuesday and charged with abandonment of a child under the age of 6 years and injury, or risk of injury, to a minor.

According to the affidavit, MacCormack told police that "she did not want anything to happen to the baby, however, she knew she was not ready to handle having a child."

MacCormack told police that she and her husband had decided they didn't want children for a couple of years, according to the affidavit, on file in Bristol Superior Court.

A tire store manager on his way to work on July 14 found the baby boy in a shopping cart in a parking lot. The baby was taken to New Britain General Hospital and then placed in a temporary foster home by the state Department of Children and Youth Services.

The child's father, whom authorities have not identified, was given custody last week.

MacCormack told police her husband never knew she was pregnant. She told him she had a severe uterine infection that caused her abdomen to swell.

MacCormack said she delivered the baby herself in the downstairs bathroom of her home while her husband slept upstairs, the affidavit says.

She discovered she was pregnant at Christmas time when she gave herself a home pregnancy test, the affidavit says. She then bought books on nutrition, pregnancy and home delivery. She hid them from her husband.

At 1 a.m. on July 14 she began having labor pains and went downstairs while her husband slept, the affidavit states.

About 6:30 a.m., she gave birth. She told police she wrapped him in three towels, cut the umbilical cord and tied it with a shoestring. Then, according to the affidavit, she cleaned up and left home with the baby and drove around for a while.

MacCormack said she decided to leave the baby at Edwards Plaza because there were always a lot of people there. About 7:40 a.m., she placed the baby in a shopping cart she spotted near an island at the end of the parking lot. She told police she waited a few minutes, but left before the baby was found.

Students to use amateur radio for astronaut talk

NEWINGTON (AP) — School children across the country may get a chance to talk to an astronaut in space next month, when amateur radio will be used to link classrooms to the space shuttle Columbia.

The American Radio Relay League plans to let students use amateur radio to speak to astronaut Ronald Parise when the Columbia lifts off on Sept. 1 for a 10-day astronomy mission to study deep space.

Based in Newington, the radio relay league is the national headquarters for amateur radio operators.

For 35 classrooms across the country — including students in Columbia, Conn. — there should be a chance to talk directly with Parise in orbit, assuming radio links on Earth work.

"I guess because the name of the town, Columbia, is the same as the shuttle, the astronaut chose us," said Dennis Hoddinott, a parent who asked educators at the Horace W. Puter School to ask the relay league to participate in the program.

Hoddinott plans to take his portable amateur radio set into the fourth-grade classroom of his daughter, Laura, while the shuttle orbits.

Several hundred other school classes across the country will be able to reach a computer aboard the shuttle via amateur radio, using the program organized by the league.

B-2 Bomber survives challenge

Senate rejects requests for additional troop cuts

By DONNA CASSATA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate met the challenge from President Bush to save the B-2 bomber as Republicans argued that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait is a sobering reminder against wholesale cuts in military spending.

The Senate planned to continue working today on the $289 billion defense bill as it and the House rushed to finish legislative business before the August congressional recess.

Among the issues on today's Senate agenda was a measure that would allow military personnel stationed overseas to obtain abortions with their own funds at U.S. military facilities.

In the House, meantime, Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., was trying to force a pre-recess vote today on campaign spending limits, but was meeting stiff opposition from colleagues who object to having only 90 minutes of debate.

The House also faced votes on final passage of a bill to strengthen oil spill liability laws and on a major civil rights bill.

The Senate on Thursday endorsed Bush's B-2 budget request for fiscal 1991, beginning Oct. 1, by a 53-45 margin. But it also voted, 97-2, to restrict use of the $4.6 billion earmarked for the radar-evading plane until critical tests have been met.

Earlier this week, the House Armed Services Committee dealt a serious blow to the embattled plane, as it approved a $283 billion defense bill that would halt production of the bat-winged planes at the 15 in development. The president wants a 75-plane fleet.

Opponents of the aircraft argued that with the demise of the Warsaw Pact as a military alliance and the budget deficit increasing, spending billions on the strategic bomber was questionable.

Republican Sen. William Cohen of Maine proposed stalling the B-2 program at the 15 planes until the Air Force could certify that the aircraft had met certain tests.

"Let's fund what we have on line right now but no more B-2s until you prove them," Cohen argued.

The senator cited the increasing cost of the plane, which could skyrocket to more than $1 billion apiece, and the Justice Department's recommendation that the government prohibit the plane's manufacturer, Northrop Corp., from future defense contracts amid charges of fraud and mismanagement.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, conceded that the aircraft could cause sticker shock but argued that the changes in the Soviet threat is no reason to abandon the B-2.

"These changes do not mean the millennium has arrived," he said.

Republicans used Iraq's invasion and control of Kuwait to drive home their point that the end of the Cold War in Eastern Europe did not justify deep cuts in the nation's defenses.

"We need a wake-up call. We need to be alerted that we're not going to be able to control the events in the world," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Across the Capitol, House Speaker Foley said he wanted to bring a pair of competing Democratic campaign finance proposals along with a Republican substitute to the floor for quick votes today.

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Friday rebuffed an attempt to cut nearly four times as many U.S. troops in Europe as President Bush has proposed in his 1991 military budget.

Despite arguments that the Cold War has ended and the United States faces severe money problems, the Senate rejected an amendment to cut 130,000 troops, including 80,000 in Europe. The vote was 59-40.

In proposing a $307 billion defense bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, Bush called for about 40,000 troops to be cut. The Senate Armed Services Committee adopted a $289 billion military budget last month that would cut troop strength by 100,000, including 50,000 in Europe.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services panel, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., warned that a deeper cut in the nation's 2.1 million military personnel than the total adopted by his committee would force the Pentagon to "send out the pink slips."

In a speech on Thursday, Bush called for a 25 percent reduction in troop strength over five years — about 500,000 troops through 1995 — but cautioned against drastic reductions in the nation's military.

On other issues on the defense agenda, the Senate:

— Rejected an amendment to increase the pay raise for military personnel included in the 1991 defense bill from 3.5 percent to 4.1 percent. The measure failed, 67-32.

— Turned down an attempt to mothball three of the Navy's four battleships, one more than Bush has proposed in his fiscal 1991 budget and the total adopted by the House Armed Services Committee in its $283 billion defense bill. The vote was 55-44.

Lawmakers have questioned the necessity of maintaining the 1940-vintage vessels, especially since the gun turret explosion last year aboard the USS Iowa that killed 47 sailors.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has proposed retiring the USS Iowa and the USS New Jersey. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., proposed adding either the USS Missouri or the USS Wisconsin to the list.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a former Navy pilot, said he doesn't have to "make the case for the battleship. Saddam Hussein has made the case for the battleship," referring to the Iraqi leader who engineered the invasion of Kuwait.

Bumpers responded, "Where are the four battleships we have? Are they steaming to the Persian Gulf?"

Nunn complained that the Navy had promised a "new and innovative" use for the battleships when they were taken out of mothballs several years ago.

Black writers wanted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Newspapers should hire more black and other minority journalists to accurately reflect the country's racial composition, says the vice president of the National Association of Black Journalists.

"America is browner and tanner and is going to continue to be in the future and the industry must reflect that perspective and diverse view of the world through the people it hires," Denise Johnson said Thursday.

Johnson made her comments at the association's annual convention, which some 2,000 people are attending.

Hiring rates for minorities in journalism have increased little in recent years, according to a report by the American Society of Newspaper Editors released at the convention's start on Wednesday.

The report found that 4 percent of newsroom employees, including reporters, editors, artists and photographers, were minorities in 1978, compared to 7.86 percent this year. Blacks now account for a percent of the newsroom population.

Housing bill is hammered out

By MELISSA B. ROBINSON
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A central provision in the comprehensive affordable housing legislation that has now passed both the House and Senate — if it survives continued opposition — could help thousands of Connecticut residents buy homes, housing experts agree.

The House this week passed a $28 billion National Affordable Housing Act, which for the first time in a decade would expand the federal government's role in providing housing.

The bill would provide about $11 billion more than what was spent on federal housing programs this year. It includes measures to boost homeownership, spur rental housing production, help people on public assistance buy homes, house AIDS victims and improve public housing.

"It's an excellent thing," said Orest T. Dubno, president of the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority, a quasi-public agency that finances housing purchases, rehabilitation and new construction. The authority has made 53,000 home purchase loans over the past 20 years.

"We were set back so far between 1980 and 1990, this is a beginning," Dubno said. "At least the federal government... is listening and at least trying to understand what's going on out here and find some solutions."

But the bill's final outcome is far from certain. Last month, the Senate passed its version, which is less costly and differs dramatically from the House version in several areas, including the provision to extend a major federally insured mortgage program.

Negotiators from both chambers will work out the differences and hammer out a final version during a conference. But if the House language prevails in certain areas, particularly the mortgage program, the bill faces an almost certain presidential veto.

A main sticking point with the Bush administration is the section of the House bill that revamps the Federal Housing Administration's (FHA) mortgage insurance fund, making it easier for families to buy homes with federally-backed mortgages by phasing out some of the upfront purchase costs.

According to Norman D. Flynn, president of the National Association of Realtors (NAR), "the inability to come up with the cash needed to cover downpayment and closing costs on a home is the single greatest barrier keeping tens of thousands of Americans from purchasing a home."

About 80 percent of the loans made by the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority are insured by the FHA.

The House bill includes an amendment that would phase out, over five years, the current up-front insurance premium of 3.8 percent of the loan amount. Instead, it would require that 1.35 percent be paid at settlement and 0.6 percent be paid annually over the life of the loan.

The amendment would prohibit the issuance of FHA mortgages that exceed the market value of a property and would eliminate the rebate of unearned insurance premiums when mortgages are prepaid.

The amendment, which had the support of labor unions, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and the major housing organizations, was designed to ensure the FHA insurance fund remained sound while not severely impacting potential homebuyers.

Price Waterhouse, a major accounting firm, has reported that the insurance fund has far too little capital to protect it against normal business risks.

The administration, however, backed by the Senate version, called for restoring funds to the FHA by requiring homebuyers to pay two-thirds of the closing costs in cash. The costs may now be rolled into a mortgage.

The Senate version also would authorize the federal government to impose an additional annual 0.5 percent mortgage insurance premium for "high risk" loans made with smaller downpayments.

The House balked at that solution. Supporters argued its heavy emphasis on upfront payments would close it off to the people it was designed to reach.

"Like everywhere else in the country, and probably more so in Connecticut, downpayments are a major obstacle for homebuyers, especially first-time homebuyers," said Tim Calnen, director of government affairs for the Connecticut Association of Realtors.

"The Bush administration's proposal would have aggravated the downpayment program rather than ameliorate it," he said, "which is something we're trying to do."

Supporters of the House version estimate the Bush plan would shut out a potential 100,000 homebuyers and cost the average homebuyer an additional $1,400 in closing costs.

The administration argues, however, that increasing upfront costs would preclude only 15,000 to 35,000 potential homebuyers. Moreover, the higher equity requirement would ensure that nearly 60,000 homebuyers wouldn't default and would, instead, keep their homes.

The administration also maintains its plan would more quickly restore soundness to the FHA fund — a point of considerable concern in light of the dangers of allowing an underfunded federal insurance program to continue running as brought to light by the savings and loan crisis.

The House version may be helped in conference by the fact that it passed overwhelmingly, 418-2. There is also growing concern about the sluggish real estate market and 10 years of declining homeownership.

Last year, in Greater Hartford, the median retail price of a house was $165,900. It was about $163,900 in Greater New Haven, and about $183,200 in the Fairfield County region, which includes parts of New York and New Jersey.

Nationwide, in the first quarter of 1989, the median sale price was $85,400.

If the House version — complete with its phased in downpayment plan — becomes law, the program may still pose an obstacle to homeownership in the form of its mortgage limit level of $124,875.

However, this too could change.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., arguing that the limit is too low for high-cost areas like Connecticut, is pushing to raise the loan ceiling to $149,960.

Millie recovers from poisoning

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's dog Millie has recovered from the ill effects of ingesting paint solvent and is "back performing her functions as First Dog," a White House official said Friday.

The president had said Thursday that Millie was suffering from lead poisoning.

In a medical update, White House press secretary Martin Fitzwater downgraded the problem to "acute lead exposure" and said the English springer spaniel is back to her old self.

"Millie is in good shape and back performing her functions as First Dog," said Fitzwater. The dog is in Maine with Barbara Bush at the family's summer home in Kennebunkport.

Millie had been lethargic, but "she apparently has overcome that," the spokesman said.

Bush's earlier announcement that Millie's malady prompted "a lot of phone calls" to the White House, Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said Millie's veterinarian believes she somehow walked into the solvent being used to remove the old paint from the south side of the White House.

"She then ingested the solvent which caused this condition," he said, adding the solvent has been removed.

Millie's "autobiography" is scheduled to come off the presses next month in a book actually written by Barbara Bush to raise funds for her literacy campaign. It tells of life around the White House from the dog's point of view.

Past dissident chosen president of Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Arpad Goez, once condemned to life imprisonment for his role in the 1956 anti-Communist uprising, on Friday was chosen president of a newly democratic Hungary.

Parliament's election of the prominent writer and translator — the third intellectual to become head of state in the rapidly changing nations of Eastern Europe — symbolized Hungary's break with its Communist past.

"I have never hidden and will not hide my opinion," Goez told legislators after the vote. "I trust the power of truth. I believe that the Hungarian people has grown up to democracy, it can recognize and defend its interests, its truth."

Goez, 68, pledged to uphold liberty in all spheres of Hungarian life during his term.

"All my life... I have served and will serve the nation's independence, free thought, free speech, free ideas and social justice," Goez said.

"I have been lucky to live as a worker, as a peasant and as a free intellectual. Thus I am not suitable to serve class interests. If I want to serve anyone, I want to serve those without servants, the unprotected."

His selection by parliamentary acclamation came less than a week after a referendum on a popular vote for the presidency failed.

Goez follows Czechoslovakia's Vaclav Havel and Bulgaria's Zhelyu Zhelev in eastern Europe's newly restored tradition of intellectuals doubling as political leaders. Zhelev was chosen this week as his nation's first non-Communist president in 40 years.

Goez is the first formal president of the Republic of Hungary, declared last year after the Communists agreed to relinquish power and compete in free elections.

He was chosen as interim president May 2 under a surprise agreement between the center-right Hungarian Democratic Forum and the main opposition party, the League of Free Democrats, which Goez helped to found.

Goez's election was expected after a referendum on directly electing the president failed. Less than 14 percent of eligible voters went to the polls Sunday, but participation by more than 50 percent of the electorate was required for the plebiscite to be valid.

In apparent reference to the vote, Goez welcomed the support he received from all six parliamentary parties, saying they represented the majority of the Hungarian people.

"Thus I can consider myself someone chosen not only by Parliament, but the whole of the people," he said in his acceptance speech.

Goez, who headed the Hungarian Writers' Union before becoming interim president in May, spent six years in jail after Soviet troops crushed the 1956 anti-Soviet revolt.

He won a reprieve on his life sentence under a 1963 amnesty.

He became a translator of British and American novels into Hungarian, and eventually published several novels and short stories.

As president, he can serve a maximum of two terms. In common with most heads of state in Western Europe, Hungary's president is a largely ceremonial figure. He commands the armed forces is empowered to initiate a plebiscite, negotiate international agreements and exercise clemency for prisoners.

Deal ensures student loans

By ROBERT GREENE
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A deal will be ready within a few weeks to pay off the defaulted loans backed by one of the nation's insurers of student loans, Secretary of Education Lamar F. Cavazos told a Senate panel Friday.

The timetable for covering the bad loans insured by Higher Education Assistance Foundation of Overland Park, Kan., comes as jittery bankers must decide whether thousands of students will get loans for the upcoming academic year.

Bankers have warned that commercial lenders would flee the student loan market if the non-profit insurer defaulted and they have to absorb losses.

In a further effort to boost lender confidence in the program, the Education Department said regulations will be published next week aimed at barring false information from privately owned trade and technical schools whose students receive the guaranteed loans.

"We are intensely involved in sensitive discussions with other organizations that have an interest in and capacity for assuming all of HEAF's guarantee functions," Cavazos told the Labor and Human Resources education subcommittee.

"We are committed to putting in place a situation that will ensure that new loans are made and insured without interruption, and that the existing HEAF portfolio is properly serviced, collected, insured and reinsured," he said.

He told the panel the arrangement would be in place "within a few weeks."

Department spokeswoman Eta Fielek said it is unlikely HEAF will survive the restructuring.

The financially threatened foundation guarantees student loans in Minnesota, West Virginia, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and the District of Columbia, and insures loans in other states as well.

The foundation, one of 47 guarantors across the country, told the Education Department four weeks ago that it was having serious financial problems because of a high rate of defaults.

The foundation blamed the problem on overloading its students who attend private trade and technical schools. These are largely students from low-income backgrounds and who either drop out or earn too little after graduation to repay the loans.

Cavazos, who has already tightened regulations on lending for students at trade schools, said he will seek further restrictions on their accreditation and licensing next year.

Under the student loan program, banks make the student loans and groups such as the HEAF guarantee that they will be repaid and take over collection. The federal Student Loan Marketing Association, known as Sallie Mae, provides money to lenders by selling packages of loans to investors.

The Education Department is the backup insurer to the guarantors. The taxpayer must make up the difference between the default liability and what the department takes in through loan fees and collections.

Dow Jones slides 54

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices sold off sharply in a convulsive session Friday as the market reacted to Middle East oil worries and mounting recession fears.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 120 points at its mid-session low, closed with a 54.95-point loss at 2,809.65.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 264 up, 1,457 down and 305 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board reached a 1990 high of 592.36 million shares, against 253.09 million in the previous session.

Selling also pounded the over-the-counter market, where technology stocks showed steep losses.

The Labor Department reported Friday morning that nonfarm payroll employment fell by 219,000 in July, surprising analysts who had been looking for a modest increase.

The civilian unemployment rate jumped three-tenths of a percentage point, to 5.5 percent.

These figures reinforced concern in the financial world that economic activity was weakening more than had been thought just a few weeks ago.

Many observers fear the economy's problems could be compounded by a jump in oil prices arising from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait this week.

Selling intensified as reports reached Wall Street that Iraqi forces were near the border of Saudi Arabia. It subsequently let up a bit when a Soviet official said Iraq was expected to withdraw from Kuwait in the near future.

After the close in New York, Iraq confirmed that it planned to begin pulling back forces from Kuwait on Sunday.

The session marked the second time in the last two weeks that the Dow fell more than 100 points intraday before recovering some of its loss. On July 23 the average plummeted in the first hour, then finished with a net deficit of 56.44 points.

Among the blue chips, International Business Machines dropped 1 7/8 to 108 1/2; Procter & Gamble 2 1/4 to 80; General Motors 1/2 to 43 1/2; General Electric 7/8 to 69 1/4, and American Express 1/4 to 27 1/4.

In the energy sector, by contrast, prominent oil issues climbed in early trading and then turned back. Exxon dropped 1/4 to 53 1/2; Texaco 1/4 to 64 1/2, and Mobil 3/4 to 66 1/2 even as oil prices kept climbing.

In the over-the-counter market, Apple Computer fell 2 1/4 to 41 1/4; MCI Communications 1 to 35 1/4, and Intel 1 to 39 1/4.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 345.20 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $66.55 billion, or 1.99 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 3.54 to 188.82.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 8.23 to 407.06, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 6.62 to 334.86.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market tumbled 11.43 to 417.46. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 346.63, down 5.52.

TRADING HALTED — A trader in the Standard & Poor's 500 stock-index futures pit sells Friday at the Mercantile Exchange in Chicago. Trading was halted for two minutes Friday morning after the futures contracts fell to their limit within the first 10 minutes of trading. The drop in the futures market coincided with a plunge in the stock market in response to recent economic news and fears of rising conflict in the Middle East.

BNE posts $33.3 million loss

By JONATHAN YENKIN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Bank of New England Corp., which has shrunk under the weight of troubled real estate loans, announced Friday it lost more than $30 million in its second quarter.

The quarterly financial report for the parent company of the Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. follows a string of gloomy financial news for the bank, continuing the institution's tumble that began late last year. The bank lost more than $1 billion in 1989, and $46.5 million in the first quarter that ended March 31.

In the second quarter, which ended June 30, the bank lost $33.3 million, or 49 cents per share, compared with earnings of $36.5 million, or 52 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Bank Chairman Lawrence Fish said in a statement that the company has made "slow but steady progress" in trying to recover.

But he said the loss was not unexpected "because of the continued sluggishness in the region's economy, the softness in the real estate market, and lower net income."

The losses, in part, reflected how the bank has had to divert money into reserves to cover bad loans.

The bank's total non-performing assets, which include troubled loans, totaled $2.78 billion, compared with $2.67 billion in the first quarter.

Gerard Cassidy, a bank analyst with Tucker Anthony Inc., said the bank's assets were not deteriorating at the same rate as in the past.

AT&T price cut not big enough

By JAY ARNOLD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer and business groups want to know why American Telephone & Telegraph Co. apparently pocketed as much as $200 million of a government-ordered $500 million price reduction last month, but a regulator says the utility acted properly.

The groups on Thursday petitioned the Federal Communications Commission to consider rule changes that would require AT&T to reveal how it figured that, in response to an FCC order, it had to cut prices only about $300 million rather than about $500 million.

FCC Chairman Alfred Sikes told a House subcommittee that AT&T "has fully flowed through its share of access price decreases to its price caps."

He said AT&T had dropped prices so much voluntarily before July 1 that it needed only to reduce prices an additional $300 million.

AT&T corporate vice president, Tom Norris, labeled any allegations of impropriety as "preposterous" and said the company would fight any move to force it to disclose more information about its rate filings.

The petition was filed on the same day that Democratic members of the House telecommunications subcommittee urged the FCC not to make "a multibillion-dollar mistake" by too aggressively deregulating the long-distance marketplace.

New federal building put on hold

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Federal officials have put the brakes on a major boondoggle — a federal office building in downtown Washington, D.C., that would cost more to private businesses than to government and could cost as much as $1.1 billion.

In June, we exposed the flaws in a plan to build the lavish edifice, an International Cultural and Trade Center second only in size to the Pentagon. The project is tainted by cost overruns and possible contract steering.

Now, the General Services Administration has wisely decided to put the venture on hold because of its concerns about the financial commitment.

The project was a bad idea in the first place — the brainchild of the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp., a presidential commission that has been overseeing the redevelopment of Washington's premier thoroughfare between the White House and the Capitol. The building is to house several federal offices and private businesses.

We have since learned that it also is to include a private club for international business people where the initiation fee would be $1,500 and the monthly dues would be $100.

Congressional sources told our associate Scott Steck that the project was shaping up into a major disaster. Construction has not yet begun and already the cost estimate has risen from $460 million to well over $800 million. Sources close to the project told us they feared the price could easily go to $1 billion.

Congressional investigators were looking into the way the PADC awarded the development contract. The panel gave the job to Delta Partnership, one of the high bidders, even though many federal and District of Columbia officials said Delta's proposal wasn't up to par because it didn't meet requirements for minority participation, a charge that Delta has denied.

Investigators were also looking into the role played by Washington Mayor Marion Barry, who, as a member of the PADC, voted to give the contract to Delta. Federal procurement laws in many cases prohibit non-federal officials from committing federal funds.

The PADC is not giving up. A spokesman told us the group would answer the financial questions, but had no plans to scale back the project. But knowledgeable sources told us the PADC will have no choice but to make the project more modest if it expects the federal government to lease the building.

Richard Austin, head of the General Services Administration, decided not to sign the lease until the financial questions are answered. GSA estimates show that the project could face mounting debts and that federal agencies may not be able to afford the rent.

Despite those concerns, Congress had allowed the project to proceed until Austin refused to sign the lease. One of the few voices in Congress against the project came from Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis., who said that on a government-wide scale of one to 10, the building ranked at least an eight.

Mini-editorial
Congressional investigators have found that the Internal Revenue Service wrongly assessed penalties against more than 1 million taxpayers in 1988. When the news spreads, it will be difficult for the IRS to continue using its high-handed and sometimes careless methods to collect taxes. Americans who once felt powerless in the face of the huge IRS machine are now gathering evidence to fight back. In isolated cases, judges are punishing IRS agents for abuse of their power.

Nevada has winning hand

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Q. Which of the 50 states does the U.S. Labor Department report rank first in job growth during the late 1980s?

A. Sparsely populated Nevada, where non-farm payroll employment increased at a phenomenal rate of 17.1 percent from 1987 to 1989. (The national average was only about one-third of that figure.)

Q. When Inc. magazine earlier this year published its annual ranking of "the most entrepreneurial cities in America," what municipality headed the list?

A. Las Vegas, a city the magazine says is "exploding" as 3,000 to 5,000 new residents arrive every month, adding to the approximately 800,000 already in the metropolitan area.

Q. When the results of the 1990 census are tabulated, which of the country's urban counties is likely to top the list of those growing fastest on a percentage basis during the past decade?

A. Clark County, long Nevada's most populous. (It's the home of not only Las Vegas but also of even faster growing Laughlin.)

Q. What's going on here?

A. Nobody is quite certain, but it's happening very quickly — and by far the country's largest issuer of bank credit cards, has set up one of its three national processing centers here.

And, of course, there's gambling, which accounts for one-fourth of this city's job. Gross winnings recorded by Clark County casinos were slightly more than $1.6 billion in 1989 and more than doubled to almost $3.3 billion in 1989.

During the same period, the number of people visiting Las Vegas annually increased by more than 50 percent, from just under 12 million in 1980 to more than 18 million in 1989. This year, the figure is expected to approach 19 million.

Although many communities promote themselves as destinations for family vacations, this city is among the relative few to achieve that status. "Middle America is coming to Las Vegas," says Rossi Rabinovitch, marketing director of the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority.

Not satisfied with its scorching growth rate, Las Vegas and Nevada are searching for new sources of tourists — and are now focusing on Eastern Europe as a potential market.

Star watch: A day with the artist

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — He stands in a verdant patio, touched by the dappled sunshine, and glances without a hint of indecision at an empty canvas.

"I never have any trouble with painting; it just seems to burst out of me," says Tony Curtis. "There is such a joy and an exuberance in it that I don't even think about what it should be or what it will be, until I start it. Once in a while, some object, some arrangement of flowers, some shapes, some colors will intrigue me, so I will copy them."

"I do a lot of sketches and a lot of drawing. But I do that to kind of inspire me. The ultimate experience is the painting."

Curtis is no Sunday painter. More than a hundred of his brightly colored canvases, reminiscent of the French impressionist Henri Matisse, have sold at prices ranging from $9,000 to $20,000. He has had six one-man shows.

The success comes at an opportune time in his life. After an acting career that has known immense fame as well as depths of alcoholic and drug despair, he seems to have found at age 65 an ideal existence. He is often hired for character roles in features and TV miniseries. Between jobs he paints, both here and in Hawaii or on film locations.

While building a new house and studio, Curtis makes the Bel-Air Hotel his base in Los Angeles. He has a studio there, but on a warm summer day, he decided to paint in a patio with lush greenery and a bubbling fountain. He paints swiftly, talking all the while.

"Since we're outside with a lot of green, I like the idea of doing flowers," he explains. "I like the combination of colors and shapes. So I think maybe I'm going to do a still life of some kind."

He begins with a piece of charcoal, swiftly outlining a vase overflowing with flowers.

"I like this time of a painting, right now," he muses. "It almost has a way of expressing itself. It sounds a little hokey, I know, but it's almost as though the painting has a life of its own."

"No two paintings are alike. There are similarities, because I'm the guy who's doing it. ... I like flowers. The most appealing thing is the shapes and the combinations of the way they're put together."

"Matisse? I'm influenced by all the artists; they are all my brothers or sisters. When you stand before a painting by Matisse or Picasso or Braque or Monet, you get to realize that you stand in exactly the same space that they stood once. You know? If not magical, but there's a mystery about that space. These artists are telling you in silent language how to express your feelings."

Curtis stands back from the canvas and nods his approval of the pattern. He immediately begins painting, squeezing gobs of bright paint directly onto his brush. No palette for him.

"There was a time when I used a palette," he says. "But I find this way of expressing myself with bursts of color is the most appealing for me. I like the way the strokes of the brush are coming out. The nice thing about working with acrylics is that it gives you the same feeling that oil does but you have to work much quicker. You know? It's the quickness that gives it action for me."

"I always do go back to paintings and finish off little areas that need more work. But these strokes now are setting the style and the pace of the painting. This is a brand new experience for me. So I'm paying a great deal of attention to it now. Except for the bug that gets in the way."

He waves aside the insect and continues splashing the background with layers of deep blue. To relieve the plainness of the background, he etches a series of single lines, using a special tool — a beer-can opener.

"Wherever I am, I always use the objects that are available," he says with a smile.

As he begins creating the flowers with brilliant hues, his deeply lined face becomes more intense. He retains the handsomeness that helped make him a top star in the PAINTER BETWEEN ROLES — During a break between acting roles, Tony Curtis adds to one of his canvas creations in Los Angeles. At age 65, having known immense fame, alcoholism and drug despair, Curtis has sold more than 100 paintings ranging in price from $9,000 to $20,000.

1950s and '60s, first in potboilers ("The Prince Who Was a Thief," "No Room for the Groom"), then in first-rate films ("The Defiant Ones," "Some Like It Hot").

Born Bernard Schwartz, Curtis received most of his education as a gang member in the Bronx streets. An acting class in a settlement house turned his life around, and after Navy service in World War II, he returned to New York to work in summer stock and off-Broadway.

A talent scout brought him to Universal Studios where his looks made him a teen-age idol. With "Sweet Smell of Success" in 1957 he proved his worth as an actor.

His three marriages ended in divorce and produced six children, including actress Jamie Lee Curtis.

Marital and career problems were partly responsible for his dependence on drugs and alcohol, which he kicked in 1983. He has since kept busy in television ("Fall Guy") and European-made films.

He has the same thick hair, now a distinguished white, that he had in his younger days. And the voice still reveals his Bronx upbringing as son of an immigrant tailor. As he continues painting, he talks openly of his personal battle.

"In a way, painting helps you silence yourself," he says. "Everything is so verbal. For a few minutes you can be quiet, and nothing is interrupting your feeling of living and the joy of it. You know, I'm a recovering alcoholic. I'm seven years into my recovery. This is a great help to me, a great gift that has been given to me. I don't know how else to say it."

New surgical procedure is better, cheaper

By DIANNA M. TALBOT
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Let's say you have a pain in your abdomen.

Imagine the pain gets bad enough that you go to the hospital to find out what's wrong. A surgeon makes a small incision above your bellybutton and inserts a tiny video camera, enabling him to see on a video monitor exactly what is causing the pain.

From here, the surgeon would know how to remedy the problem. If, in the case of a woman, the ailment was found to be an ectopic (tubal) pregnancy, the surgeon could make two smaller incisions on the sides of the abdomen. In one, he could insert a long, thin instrument and watch the monitor as he resets the Fallopian tube. In the other incision, he could insert a second miniature instrument to remove the pregnancy.

This "non-invasive" surgical procedure, called laparoscopy, recently began being offered in the case of tubal pregnancies at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Laparoscopy enables a surgeon to peek inside the body through a small hole. In the case of a tubal pregnancy, or other ailments in the abdomen, a small incision less than a 1/2-inch long is made at the navel and a thin instrument called a laparoscope is inserted. A miniature television camera with lights at the end of the scope sends live pictures to a full-size video monitor in the operating room, allowing surgeons to view inside the body.

Next, two smaller, 1/4-inch incisions are made into either side of the abdomen, through which surgeons can insert miniature instruments with "long arms" to perform the surgery while watching the video monitor.

"The development of laparoscope surgery is one of the major breakthroughs in gynecology," said Dr. Ilisuk Oh, a 12-year member of the hospital's Obstetrics and Gynecology Department who has performed several laparoscopic surgical procedures.

For the past three years, the hospital has used laparoscopy to remove potentially-dangerous gall bladders, ovarian cysts and pelvic adhesions. Before laparoscopy, these procedures had required extensive "invasive" surgery, which involved making larger incisions in skin to get inside the body.

In laparoscopy, miniature instruments allow patients to suffer less trauma. Ultimate benefits include shorter hospital stays, quicker recoveries and lower medical costs, Oh said.

Tubal pregnancies, a life-threatening disorder that afflicts about 1 percent of all women, occur when a fertilized egg leaves the ovary and is prevented from moving down the Fallopian tube into the uterus. The fertilized egg becomes caught in the tube, but the pregnancy continues.

Under conventional surgical procedures, a surgeon would have treated such a patient by making a four-inch incision in the abdomen and then removing the pregnancy. The typical woman who underwent this operation would need to spend three or four days in the hospital, Oh said.

Laparoscopy, however, could send the patient home the next day, he said.

Keep knives and scissors sharp

By READERS DIGEST

Because most basic cooking involves a good deal of cutting and chopping, good knives are a must in the kitchen. Sharp scissors — in the kitchen and around the house — are another necessity.

To get the best service from knives and scissors, treat them with care and keep them sharp. Here's how:

Knives:
— Use a knife only on a cutting board.
— Don't stir hot food with knives since heat can damage and loosen wooden handles.

Store knives in a wooden knife block or with blades up on a wall-mounted magnetic rack. If you must store them in a drawer, use a divider or a knife rack to keep the blades from bumping against and nicking one another.

Knives with serrated edges depend on notches for their cutting ability. They should be sharpened by professionals or not at all.

Before each use, sharpen knives with a chef's steel.
1. Grasp the steel in your left hand (if you're right-handed) and the knife in your right.

2. Place the heel of the blade against the steel's tip, with the sharp edge of the blade meeting the steel at a 15- to 20-degree angle.
3. Applying light pressure, quickly draw the knife toward you and to the right so that the entire blade passes over the steel.
4. Repeat the action with the blade beneath and at the same angle to the steel. Alternate strokes until each side has passed over the steel 10 to 20 times.

— To restore a badly dulled blade use a whetstone (available at hardware stores) with coarse and fine sides. Before using it, saturate the stone with light mineral or vegetable oil. (Some stones must soak overnight; check package directions.)

1. With the stone coarse side up and placed lengthwise in front of you, place the heel of the blade on the stone so that its sharp edge is at a 15- to 20-degree angle to the stone. Maintain this angle throughout the procedure. Applying pressure, draw the blade in an arc toward you and across the stone so that the entire length of the blade is sharpened.

2. Flip the blade and reverse the stroke. Repeat 10 times on each side.
3. Continue with a few light strokes over the fine side of the stone. Finish with a few strokes on the chef's steel. Wipe the whetstone clean and wrap it in a soft cloth for storage.

Scissors:
Sharpen scissors only if they are very dull. Frequent sharpening whittles away too much metal, causing the blade to cut poorly. Leave removal of deep nicks to a professional knife grinder. Before sharpening, tighten the pivot screw holding the blades together. If the pivot is a rivet, place the rivet head on a solid metal surface and firmly hit the other end with the ball end of a ball peen hammer. If tightening the pivot improves cutting, there is no need to sharpen.

1. Oil the coarse side of a whetstone as the manufacturer suggests.
2. Open the scissors wide and, firmly holding one blade and handle, place the other blade on the fine side of the stone with the inner face vertical. Tilt the blade slightly, about 10 degrees, so the cutting bevel is flat against the stone. Repeatedly move the blade diagonally across the stone toward you until you have the desired edge. Repeat on the other blade. It's not necessary to hone scissors blades totally smooth. Scissors cut by breaking — rather than slicing — fibers.

3. Wipe both blades clean with a soft cloth. Open and close the scissors several times to remove the accumulated metal that results from sharpening.

Homes: questions and answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS

Q: I am looking at an older house and I'd like to get some tips on what to check for when inspecting the domestic water-plumbing system.

A: Most likely you'll be looking at iron pipes which were commonly used in older homes. They have a projected life of about 45 years and are generally replaced on an as-needed basis using copper pipes. Unless a special electrolytic coupling is used at the joint between the iron and copper sections, galvanic action can cause deterioration of the iron pipe. This is indicated by a buildup of rust and mineral deposits at the joints.

A problem to look for with brass pipes is that the zinc in the brass gradually dissolves into the water, leaving holes in the pipe. Water oozing out at these pinholes evaporates. The minerals contained in the water are then deposited on the surface of the pipe and eventually seal the leak. A pipe in this condition should be replaced.

Another common plumbing problem concerns sink drains that have S-type drain traps. These traps are no longer allowed in many communities because they don't always vent properly. If the trap loses its water seal, you have an open pipe between the sewer and the sink. Noxious sewer gases can then seep into the room. S-traps are found in older homes and in some newer renovations that were not approved by the municipal building inspector.

Q: The concrete steps leading to our front door have settled and the threshold is now dangerously high. What are the alternatives for resolving this problem?

A: You have two. You can resurface the existing steps or you can jack them up. If you resurface, the overlay on each tread must be at least 1 inch thick. Build a form so that riser heights will all be equal and so there's a slight but uniform tilt toward the front to provide proper drainage. Sand the bonding surfaces with coarse emery cloth to create a "tooth" for the new material. Use sand-cement mix with a liquid bonding agent or an epoxy patching mix.

To raise the present stair system back to its original position, dig down underneath it and use hydraulic jacks to lift the steps. Once the steps have been raised, pour a new footing in the cavity below using a concrete mix with coarse aggregate. The base of the footing must extend at least 6 inches below the frost line.

Q: I'd like to paint over simulated wood-grain hardwood paneling that has V-grooves in the surface. How can I best prepare the panels for painting and ensure that the grooves won't show?

A: The surest way to create a smooth, paint-receptive surface would be to apply dry wall over the paneling, but this may involve other alterations you're not prepared for.

A second alternative would be to sand the paneling lightly to remove any gloss, then tape and compound over the grooves and seams. Lay a bed of wallboard compound over each groove with a 3-inch putty knife, apply tape while the compound is still wet, and smooth the tape with a 4-inch taping knife. When the first application is dry, apply a thin second coat of compound with a 6-inch taping knife. A third coat applied with an 8- or 10-inch knife may be required. Sand lightly between coats with medium (120-grit) paper.

Favorite plants of professionals

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

American Nursery magazine recently polled nearly 200 landscape industry professionals to determine their favorite plants in a number of categories. Here are the results:

Bedding plants: impatiens, marigolds, begonias.
Coniferous shrubs: mountain pine (Pinus mugo), Norway spruce (Picea abies "Nidiformis"), Alberta spruce (Picea glauca var. albertiana).

Coniferous trees: white pine (Pinus strobus), blue spruce (Picea pungens "Glauca"), hemlocks (Tsuga species).

Deciduous flowering shrubs: arrowwoods (Viburnum species), Forsythias (Forsythia species), spirea (Spiraea species).

Deciduous shade trees, large: sugar maple (Acer saccharum), red oak (Quercus rubra), red maple (Acer rubrum).

Deciduous shade trees, small: amur maple (Acer ginnala), Bradford pear (Pyrus calleryana "Bradford"), Japanese maple (Acer palmatum).

Evergreen shrubs: rhododendrons (Rhododendron species), yew (Taxus species), boxwoods (Buxus species).

Ground covers: spurge (Pachyandra species), periwinkles (Viola species), buglewoods (Ajuga species).

Ornamental trees: Callery pear (Pyrus calleryana), maples (Acer species), dogwoods (Cornus species).

Variegated plants: dogwoods (Cornus species), spindle trees (Euonymus species), plain lilies (Lilium species).

Vines: virgin's-bowers (Clematis species), wisteria (Wisteria species), evening trumpet flower (Gel-semium sempervirens).

Woody plants, in general: pin oak (Quercus palustris), white pine (Pinus strobus), red oak (Quercus rubra).

Garlic Caused a Strike
The Brooklyn Botanic Garden's Plant and Garden News reports that garlic, which has proven to be an excellent companion planting to apple trees and other members of the rose family for warding off borers, may have caused the first strike in history.

Garlic was a food staple of Egyptian slaves building the pyramids. Denied garlic, they refused to work. The reason for the garlic shortage isn't clear, but "perhaps it was due to its use on mummies." On March 30, 1989, the New York Times reported that a recently unearthed mummy sported a ring of garlic about the neck — the assumption being that, as with apple trees, the garlic helped to ward off insects and so aided preservation.

What's New?
— A new river birch (Betula nigra) named Heritage has been introduced by Earl Cully (R.R. 5, Jacksonville, IL 62250), who began to develop it 20 years ago. Cully, a nurseryman, says it has "a very light, creamy white bark, beautiful dark-green disease-resistant foliage, good growth habits, and it is immune to the bronze birch borer." He claims that "the hardy Heritage will withstand temperatures from minus 40 to over 100 degrees F and is tolerant of a wide variety of soil types."

— New corn hybrids with better-quality protein, and with the potential to improve the nutritional benefits derived from breakfast cereals, corn meal, grits, tortillas and other corn-based foods and feeds, are reported by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Corn breeder Anton J. Bockholt says they should be available for the 1992 planting season. Quality Protein Maize — QPM — reportedly contains nearly twice as much lysine, tryptophan and albumin-globulins as do present food and feed corn.

"Flatliners" is a heart-grabber

By BOB THOMAS The Associated Press

"Flatliners" — rated R No, "Flatliners" is not a movie about pioneer farmers scrambling for a living on the limitless Midwest plains. The flat line referred to in the title is that oscillograph, much used in hospital scenes, that indicates vital signs. When the line goes flat, the lights are out. Kiefer Sutherland is an ambitious medical student obsessed with learning what lies beyond the flat line. "Philosophy failed, religion failed, now it's up to physical science," he proclaims. Sutherland's messianic zeal wins over three fellow students: Julia Roberts, William Baldwin and Oliver Platt. A more reluctant Kevin Bacon agrees to go along. In an abandoned part of a university hospital, they rig up a lab Dr. Frankenstein wished he'd had. Starting with Sutherland they wander into the twilight zone. What they discover is not the stairway to paradise, but scary reminders of their past transgressions. The demons pursue them after their return to life. In less able hands, "Flatliners" might be an overwrought exercise in science fiction. Thanks to Joel Schumacher's astute direction and ingenious production design, the film is a heart-grabber. Schumacher ("Cousins") has an expert feel for the macabre, and he makes good use of the vitality of his young cast. Rarely has the look of a film proved so important. Eugenio Zanetti has created a world where sunlight rarely enters. The gothic murals and sculpture of the crumbling hospital, full of skulls and death masks, provide the perfect backdrop for the bizarre goings-on. Peter Filardi's script is brilliantly inventive, even if logic flies out with ghosts of things past. James Newton Brown's music contributes instinctively to the somber mood. The Columbia picture was produced by Michael Douglas and Rick Bieber. Rated R for language and scariness. Running time: 111 minutes.

"Unbelievable" too detached By Hilol Italo The Associated Press "The Unbelievable Truth" — rated R "The Unbelievable Truth," made for a whopping $200,000, is a relative bargain in this summer of million-dollar adventures. It's a debut film, irreverent and unpredictable, but less self-assured when it tries to get serious. The movie was written and directed by Hal Hartley, who graduated from the film school of the State University of New York at Purchase in 1984, and is a pretty irreverent sort himself. He raised some of the money by selling the bank he was buying a word processor. The actors are all virtually new to film, and shooting — on location at Lindenhurst, Long Island — took just 11-1/2 days. Josh Hutton (Robert Burke) is released from prison after serving time — we're told — for raping and killing a girl and then killing her father. Dressed in black, the soft-spoken Josh is continuously mistaken for a priest and must admit, instead, that he's merely a mechanic, and a psychic mechanic at that. When Josh isn't working on cars, he's discussing life with Mike, a fellow mechanic, heavy metal guitarist and self-styled philosopher. "You start cleaning yourself a lot better," Mike says about what happens to a man when he has a girlfriend. "Suddenly, you're buying underwear up the wazoo."

Hiroshima is commemorated

By JERRY BUCK The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The 45th anniversary of Hiroshima is commemorated Monday with an NBC drama that tells of personal tragedies suffered in the first city destroyed by a nuclear bomb.

"Hiroshima: Out of the Ashes" tells the stories of a postman, his pregnant American daughter-in-law, a doctor and his new bride, a young mother and her son, as well as that of a German missionary and two American fliers held prisoner in the doomed city.

Max Von Sydow stars as Father Simoes, a German Jesuit priest, and Judd Nelson is Lt. Pete Dunham, an American POW. The movie also features Kim Miyoi as the mother, Pat Morita as the postman, Tamlyn Tomita as his daughter-in-law and Stan Egi as the doctor.

"It's the drama of the bomb," said Von Sydow. "It's an ensemble film. It deals with a number of people. We follow what happens to them before, during and after the bomb. I have first billing, but my part is no bigger than the others."

The screenplay for "Hiroshima: Out of the Ashes" was written by John McGreevey. Peter Werner directed.

The B-29 Superfortress Enola Gay dropped an atomic bomb nicknamed "Little Boy" on Hiroshima on Monday, Aug. 6, 1945. The bomb devastated 4.1 square miles of Hiroshima, a city of 343,000 people, and killed thousands — the estimates range from 80,000 to 200,000. The victims continued to die for years afterward of radiation sickness.

"There was a German Jesuit missionary school at Hiroshima, and I play one of the priests," said Von Sydow. "He was in the city when the bomb exploded, but not in the center. I've been reading about the priests and what happened to them. The one my character is based on lived until 1977. He suffered from radiation sickness."

"Father Simoes starts out as a very strict man who goes by the book. After the disaster he opens his heart."

Von Sydow has been an incredibly busy actor. He had just arrived from Australia, where he had completed a feature film called "Father," in which he plays a post-World War II German immigrant who buys a pub in Australia. Years later, his wife dies and his daughter and her husband take over the pub. "Suddenly, out of the blue, the father is accused of being a war criminal," he said. "It deals with loyalty, loyalties within a family and wider loyalties."

Earlier this year, Von Sydow was seen in "Red King, White Knight," a spy thriller for Home Box Office. He played an East European agent who comes out of retirement to help an American agent prevent an assassination.

Last summer, he co-starred with Keith Carradine in "Dr. Grastler," which was filmed in Budapest, Hungary. He describes that role as a "kind of crazy retired opera singer" whose daughter is hurt in a love affair with Carradine. "That was fun because the character was lighter than I'm used to doing in films."

He was nominated for an Academy Award as best actor in 1989 for his role as the aging Swedish laborer in "Felle the Conqueror," which won an Oscar as best foreign-language film.

"After 'Hiroshima,' he went to London to star with Matt Dillon and Sean Young in 'A Kiss Before Dying.' He is now in Australia working on 'Until the End of the World,' which also stars William Hurt, Jeanne Moreau and Sam Neill. After that, he returns to Sweden for an as-yet-untitled play about American playwright Eugene O'Neill.

Von Sydow's home is in Stockholm in his native island of Gotland and an apartment in Paris. "I try to spend as much time as my summer home as possible," he said.

"Blue Steel" is incredulous

By PATRICIA BIBBY The Associated Press

"Blue Steel" (MGM/UA Home Video, VHS-Beta, $89.98, Rated R) "Blue Steel," the story of a rookie cop in New York City who unwittingly falls in love with a crazed killer, might better be titled "Aw! Come On!" after the chorus of incredulous groans it provokes.

Viewing this movie is an exercise in good faith gone bad, with scene after unbelievable scene that would force even the most gullible to get annoyed.

"Blue Steel" revolves around Megan Turner, played by an ever locked-jawed Jamie Lee Curtis, in her quest to become a top cop and maybe even get a date once in awhile.

But in one of her first nights on the beat she blows away a grocery store robber in vicious fashion — emptying a whole round into the guy. Since the robber's gun can't be found, Megan is suspended and told to give her trigger-happy fingers a rest.

Enter the embodiment of seductive evil, Eugene Hunt (Tom Silver), who witnessed the shooting and suddenly realizes Megan is a kindred killer spirit.

Hunt, a wealthy commodities broker, is the kind of smooth operator who takes his dates out to ritzy restaurants and then up for helicopter rides around Manhattan's glittering night sky.

He wins over the lonely Megan without telling her he saw the robbery and when he's not seducing the lady cop, he's out randomly killing people on the streets of New York. To declare his love for Megan, he scratches her name in the bullets.

This brings Megan back on duty, working with a team of homicide detectives who are trying to figure out why the killer is so obsessed with her.

What follows is a series of implausible plot developments — the crack homicide team essentially lets the rookie Megan run the investigation; Hunt, a prime suspect, is never given so much as a powder-burn test to determine if he's involved in the spate of murders; and at one point Megan, severely dazed and in shock, is back on the streets to hunt down the killer.

"Aw! Come on!" To its credit, "Blue Steel" does have a number of "boogie-man-in-the-closet" type thrills — short bursts of cheaply orchestrated terror. And Silver does a fine job playing the psychotic devil in an Italian suit. His blood lust is so well done he somehow seems to revert to a primal, evil animal state.

But in addition to the plot problems, the dialogue is often slow and insipid. Here's an exchange after Megan handcuffs her partner to a car's steering wheel so she can run after the killer by herself: "I almost got you killed," Megan says. "Yeah, that you did," her partner responds, adding, "You get some rest."

"Aw! Come on!"

Family reunion ORLEANS, Neb. (AP) — Two prairie pioneer clans are inviting one and all to their first joint reunion, where activities include a watermelon-seed spitting contest, men's hammer throw and women's skilltoss.

More than 600 descendants of frontier homesteaders William O. Coe and John Henry Russell are expected to gather from Aug. 10-12 for the reunion celebrating family bonds that began before the turn of the century.

Offspring of the two men who established farms in Nebraska and Kansas chose to celebrate in Orleans, a town of 1,109 about 10 miles from the state line.

In 1872, Coe and his wife, Emily, were the first homesteaders in Harlan County's Washington Township. They lived in a sod house not far from Orleans.

FOCUS/Religion

In Brief . . .

Women's club meets Wednesday

The Manchester Area Christian Women's Club will hold its "Keepin' Kool" breakfast Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. at the Colony in Vernon.

There will be guest speakers, teacher recognition and a guest soloist. For reservations call 649-3423 or 872-4876. Baby sitting will be provided.

UNSE to celebrate muses

Poetry and music will be the means of celebrating the muses Sunday at Unitarian Universalist Society: East, 153 Vernon St. at 10:30 a.m.

Clem Young, a member of the society and of the faculty at Manchester Community College, will provide the poetry from her own works as well as from other selected writers.

Music will be provided by Bob Richardson, Joe Kowicz, Jean Dunn, Carol Lezkowski and Penny Johnson, all members of the society.

All services of UNSE are open to anyone interested. Nursery care and youth religious education are provided during the service. Refreshments and conversation follow the service.

Program at St. George's

A generic 12-step program for Christians is conducted Saturdays at 11 a.m. at St. George's Church, Route 44 in Bolton.

This confidential spiritual program is for those who have experienced defeat, confusion or disappointment in their life and they seek a safe place to talk, grow and make progress in their spiritual journey.

For more information call 643-9203 or 647-1621.

Registrations set for Kerygma

Registration for Kerygma, a 33-week thematic study of the whole Bible takes place through Aug. 31 at St. George's Episcopal Church, Route 44 in Bolton.

This in depth course will study the context and meaning of the scriptures from the perspective of those who wrote the Bible. Participants will apply the spiritual themes to today's life in the discussion portion of the course.

The cost is $40. For more information and to register, call the Rev. John Holliger, 643-9203.

Christians, Moslem want peace

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Christian and Moslem leaders have made a joint appeal that the war be ended between rebels and government troops in Ethiopia, that they allow movement of emergency aid to famine victims and that negotiations begin toward a settlement.

New laity organization

CHICAGO (AP) — Voicing satisfaction at outcome of the recent Greek Orthodox Clergy-Laity Congress in Washington, the president of a new laity organization said, "Our presence was felt and our voices were heard."

George D. Karcazes of Orthodox Christian Laity commented the meeting for urging acceptance of married priests as bishops and referring other proposals to a task force.

Billy Graham recovering

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Delayed in arriving for a crusade until midway through it because of recuperation from a rib operation, evangelist Billy Graham commented, "I am recovering from 50 years of preaching, I suppose."

A spokesman says Graham, who underwent surgery in April to remove a portion of a rib, took the pulpit six weeks ahead of his doctor's recommendation for the final three days of the crusade.

It had been led earlier by an associate.

Number of Catholics up

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Roman Catholics in the world total 906 million, up 13 million from the year before, reports the Vatican Statistical Yearbook. Their proportion of world population held steady at 18 percent.

Farmer's Market boasts food, herbs

By 10:30 a.m. Saturday, several of the farmers at our Downtown Farmer's Market were beginning to close up after a successful morning.

Stanley Zalegowski had a few squash and cucumbers left, but said all his beets, carrots and tomatoes were sold out by 10 a.m.

Emil Cote and Allen Ward (back lot farmers like Stan) had sold all their peppers, green beans and tomatoes by 10, but still had zucchini and summer squash. Al has been a regular since the second year of the Market. Not only does he sell great vegetables, but I have a chance to find out what's going on in town.

Ed Tomaszewski's beets and rhubarb were gone, but still had a few carrots, green beans, peppers and squash. Fortunately, I was able to snap up his last lettuce.

Moral of my visit was: The early shoppers were wiser than slug-a-beds such as I.

Still, even at 10:30, there was much to delight the eye as well as the palate. Luscious garnet beauty peaches, nectarines, blueberries, apples, cukes, squash and corn were on display at the Donder's Orchard stand.

Next to Donder's was Wright's Orchard with cartons of bright green Lodi apples, the first of the year. Lodi's are great for making pies and for salads. Todd also had string beans, squash and all shades of snugs and statts.

Both Howard Jacobs of Unity Farms and Harry Lata of Lata Farms have been bringing their produce to the Downtown Farmer's Market for the past four years. The eggplants, hot cherry peppers and tomatoes were long gone, said Howard, but he still had a few ears of corn, green and wax beans and cukes. Harry Lata was still offering both sweet and hot peppers (I bought some to fry together on his advice) but he too had sold all his tomatoes and green beans.

I was in time to buy blueberries at the Szemeylo Farm stand. Henry was being assisted by a pussel of delightful young grandsons ages 10 to 13, one blonde, one brunette and one redhead — almost as colorful as his produce. They were willing to fill your order for new potatoes, red and regular hot peppers and earlier had offered lettuce, carrots, sugar snap peas and raspberries. Shoppers be advised the raspberries were gone by 8:30 and the peas by 9:30.

Morro Farms, just as you come in from the north side of the Market, had fresh green and butter beans as well as pickling cukes, peppers and zucchini and summer squash, and I had learned from Mike Haugh how to tell when a squash was still young and tasty regardless of size.

One of the many pleasures of shopping at the Market is the recipes and tips on shopping as well as planning that the farmers are so willing to share with you.

Fox Run Nursery was featuring potted herbs (fresh thyme, chives, basil and oregano) as well as begonias and perennials (columbine, candy tuft, galardia, primroses, chrysopsis and painted daisies). I couldn't resist the daisies nor a beautiful bouquet of snapdragons, gloriosa daisies, dahlias, all in bright yellow golds and orange for our kitchen table purchased from Halstead Farms. Janet Hall, who uses no pesticides in her gardens, was also offering yarrow, delphinium, phlox, larkspur and bee balm.

David Murphy of Murphy Farms has been bringing their produce to the Downtown Farmer's Market for the past four years. The eggplants, hot cherry peppers and tomatoes were long gone, said Howard, but he still had a few ears of corn, green and wax beans and cukes. Harry Lata was still offering both sweet and hot peppers (I bought some to fry together on his advice) but he too had sold all his tomatoes and green beans.

I was in time to buy blueberries at the Szemeylo Farm stand. Henry was being assisted by a pussel of delightful young grandsons ages 10 to 13, one blonde, one brunette and one redhead — almost as colorful as his produce. They were willing to was even a Mickey Mouse sweater with HI knit in. Faemeh says that all her creations are machine washable.

And of course there had to be a final stop to chat with Manchester's Farmers of the Sea, John and Stella McDonald, to see what new and clever ideas they've developed this year — good luck lady bug, an idea they picked up in Germany where when you buy flowers, you also buy a small lady bug for good fortune.

The McDonalds are offering their lady bugs on stones from France and Austria with a magnet to hold it on the refrigerator. A tiny pink-eared mouse for our little Rose and a shell crucifix for a friend. Hard to choose from the many enchanting little animals they have crafted from shells they pick up from all around the world.

Well, my friends, the harvest is just the beginning. There will be more tomatoes, corn, beets, carrots and all the fruits plus dahlias, gladioli, chrysanthemums piling up on the tables as we continue into harvest season.

Mildred Kinney, MACC volunteer for the day, tells me that there were 16 seller at the market today and by 11:30 much of the produce was pretty well sold out. So plan to shop early — we open at 8 a.m. for a wonderful start to your weekend shopping Downtown Manchester at the Farmer's Market.

Establishing another's guilt or innocence is at best imprecise. One's knowledge of the facts is limited. Even more certain is his understanding of the motives that lay behind the action. I suppose these vagaries were at the root of Jesus' admonition: "Do not judge, or you too will be judged." Matt. 7:1. Of course, Jesus was not dealing with judicial procedures, but with handling personal relationships. This tells me to be slow and deliberate in convicting another in my own mind. Basic to this is loving that person. Love seeks to find others innocent — yet not at the expense of truth. However, in the same context Jesus went on to say, "Thus by their fruit you will recognize them," referring specifically to false prophets. Therefore, I am expected to be discriminate, allowing one's fruits to identify his source and nature.

Today In History

Today is Saturday, Aug. 4, the 216th day of 1990. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's Birthdays:
Britain's Queen Mother Elizabeth is 90. The dean of the White House press corps, Helen Thomas of United Press International, is 70. Track star Mary Decker Slaney is 32. Baseball pitcher Roger Clemens is 28.

Today's Highlight in History:
Two hundred years ago, on Aug. 4, 1790, the Coast Guard had its beginnings as a U.S. naval task force known as the Revenue Cutter Service was formed. On this date:

In 1735, a jury acquitted John Peter Zenger of the New York Weekly Journal of a charge of seditious libel brought by the royal governor of New York.

In 1830, plans for the city of Chicago were laid out. In 1892, Sunday school teacher Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., charged with the hatchet murders of her father and stepmother. (Borden was later acquitted.)

In 1914, Britain declared war on Germany and the United States proclaimed its neutrality in World War I. In 1916, the United States purchased the Danish Virgin Islands for $25 million.

In 1944, Nazi police raided the secret annex of a house in Amsterdam and arrested eight people — including 14-year-old Anne Frank, whose diary, published after her death, became a classic depiction of the Holocaust.

In 1964, the bodies of missing civil rights workers Michael H. Schwerner, Andrew Goodman and James E. Chaney were found buried inside an earthen dam in Mississippi.

In 1977, President Carter signed a measure establishing the Department of Energy, the first cabinet-level department created since the Department of Transportation in 1966.

In 1987, the Federal Communications Commission voted 4-0 to rescind the Fairness Doctrine, which required radio and television stations to present balanced coverage of controversial issues.

10 years ago:
The speaker of Iran's parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, announced that debate on the American hostages would be postponed, in retaliation for what Tehran charged was mistreatment of Iranian prisoners in the U.S.

Five years ago:
A pair of milestones were achieved in major league baseball as Tom Seaver of the Chicago White Sox gained his 300th victory and Red Carew of the California Angels got his 3,000th hit.

Social Security

QUESTION: Can I designate my cousin to receive my Social Security checks when I die? He's my only surviving relative.

ANSWER: Unlike many private insurance policies, Social Security does not allow you to name beneficiaries. Only your dependents will be able to receive benefits based on your earnings record... and these dependents are spelled out in the law. They include your spouse, your unmarried children under 18, 19 if still in high school, and your disabled children if they were disabled before age 22.

QUESTION: My new doctor said I should look into Social Security disability benefits. But I'm not sure I would be eligible. I haven't had a regular job for years. Should I apply anyway?

ANSWER: You may qualify for Social Security disability payments. It depends on how long you've worked under Social Security and how recently. Also your disability must be so severe that you are unable to do any substantial work for a year or more. Or your disability must be expected to result in death. You won't really know if you qualify until you apply.

QUESTION: If a person gets SSI in one state but later moves to another, do they have to file a new application in their new state of residence in order for their payments to continue?

ANSWER: A person receiving SSI who moves to another state must report the change of residence to Social Security within 10 days after the end of the month in which the move occurred. Social Security will also ask you about your new living arrangements. A change of circumstances may change your SSI payment. If you received a state supplement where you lived previously, your new state may not. Ask Social Security about it when you report your move.

FOCUS/Advice

Police just a banner away for stranded motorists

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, Greg, now 21 years old, developed fluid on the brain at the age of 14. Since that time, he's had several operations. Last April, while Greg was at the hospital recovering from the last operation, he took a turn for the worse during the night. I was called and told that his condition was critical. My friend Barbara offered to drive me to the hospital. En route, her car broke down on the highway. Fortunately, she had a "Call Police" banner in the glove compartment of her car. No more than five minutes passed from the time we displayed the banner until a state trooper arrived!

What a happy coincidence: Last October, I read about those "Call Police" banners in your column and sent for 50 of them to give to friends and relatives as Christmas gifts. Barbara's "Call Police" banner had been a gift from me! Little did I know that I'd be the one to benefit from it. The trooper told us that numerous cars have telephones these days, which explains why the response to the banner was so immediate. Greg's operation was successful, thank God, and he graduated from Boston College on May 21, 1990. Thanks again, Abby.

DEBORAH J. TOCCO, READING, MASS.

DEAR DEBORAH: Thank you for sharing your experience with me so that I can remind others to order "Call Police" banners. To order, write to: W.C.I.L. Banners, P.O. Box 66955, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost, which includes postage and handling, is $4 for one banner or $7 for two (for windshield and rear window). Make your check or money order (U.S. funds only, please) payable to: W.C.I.L. BANNERS, The Westside Center for Independent Living exists to help physically disabled people live independently.

DEAR J.: Since this is a medical term, it will not be found in all dictionaries.

Denial is a typical response of alcohol abusers

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 32-year-old girlfriend has a problem, but she refuses to discuss it. Each evening, she has three beers with her dinner, and afterward she has two 3-ounce drinks of vodka mixed with diet pop. Her hair breaks off at about six inches, she wakes up with splashes on her face and alcohol on her breath. I say she is consuming too much alcohol, and it will affect her health. She disagrees.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Of course she disagrees. She may not relish giving up her best friend: booze. It's not my place (or yours) to decide if your girlfriend is an alcoholic; only she can decide that when she's ready. However, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck... At the very least, she has a problem with alcohol. Six ounces of vodka plus three beers a day is, by any criterion, excessive drinking. I suspect she knows she has a problem, even though she won't discuss it. One of the alcoholic's most treasured character faults is denial. It sounds to me as though your girlfriend is heavily involved in denial. Of course, this attitude makes it impossible for you to help her. Rather than changing her behavior, your observations about her drinking will more likely lead to arguments and acrimony.

Get some help for yourself. Join Al-Anon, a support group for people whose loved ones are heavy drinkers.

You'll find a lot of sympathy, support and wisdom in Al-Anon meetings. With time and knowledge, you may be better able to approach your girlfriend's alcohol problem. And once she sees that you are no longer interested in playing the role of rescuer and enabler, she, too, may decide to get help from a counselor or Alcoholics

Anonymous.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help II — Mental/Substance Abuse." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Why don't dental offices afford more privacy? It's embarrassing to sit in public with your mouth open and full of cotton. I find I am going to my dentist less and less because of this.

DEAR READER: Your question confuses me because, in my experience, privacy is paramount in dental offices. I do not believe that most dentists require their patients to sit in open rooms, in full public view, while in the midst of procedures. Ask your dentist about this; perhaps he or she is short on space and would be willing to modify the practice to accommodate your discomfort. If not, find another dentist who will.

NEW GENERAL MANAGER? — Hank Steinbrenner has been nominated as the new general managing partner of the New York Yankees. The vote, according to one report, is to take place on Wednesday.

Steinbrenner says he's not trying to defy Vincent edict

By JIM GOLEN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner's lawyers said Friday that a letter sent to 18 limited partners wasn't an attempt by the New York Yankees owner to defy commissioner Fay Vincent and maintain control of the team.

"That's totally false and unfounded, and heaps unwarranted and unfair criticism on Mr. Steinbrenner," attorney Stephen Kaufman said.

Kaufman and Steinbrenner's tax lawyer, Daniel McCarthy, responded to a New York Daily News report of a letter McCarthy sent to the Yankees' limited partners this week after Vincent barred Steinbrenner from running the club.

The letter asked the limited partners to allow Steinbrenner to remain involved in "all financial, tax and other business purposes" of the Yankees even after he gives up majority interest in the team later this month. Under his agreement with Vincent, Steinbrenner can only participate in "extraordinary financial or business affairs" of the Yankees.

Kaufman and McCarthy said the letter was designed to smooth the transition when Steinbrenner moves from general to limited partner. They said the letter was not an attempt to circumvent Vincent's order, which bars Steinbrenner from controlling the day-to-day operation of the Yankees.

"There was no effort to change the commissioner's understanding with Mr. Steinbrenner, but rather a need for continued compliance with the tax regulations," McCarthy said.

Kaufman has asked the commissioner's office to include the provision on financial and tax matters in the final agreement. But Vincent said Friday that he was leaning against approval.

"Our tax lawyers have not understood the basis for the request, and for the moment, since we don't understand it, we have no intention of accepting the request," Vincent said.

As general partner, Steinbrenner carries a greater legal risk than his limited partners, McCarthy said that for continuity's sake it would be better if Steinbrenner maintained his legal role with the team even after he steps down as general partner.

"He's out as general partner; somebody's got to fill the void," McCarthy said. "What we're trying to do is not change anything. From a tax standpoint, we want to continue as we have in the past."

According to the Daily News, some of the limited partners were upset by the letter they received from McCarthy.

"The thing is very troubling to us," an unidentified partner was quoted as saying. "But it will be resolved. The commissioner is aware of this."

However, Charlotte Wikind, a limited partner from Cleveland, saw no conflict between the letter and Steinbrenner's agreement with Vincent.

"What the commissioner was saying was that he was to be out of the day-to-day operations," she said. "That's not what the letter deals with."

Vincent penalized Steinbrenner for associating with gambler Howard Spira and paying him $40,000 for information on former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield. Steinbrenner, who must resign as general partner by Aug. 20, wants his son Hank to succeed him as general partner.

Little League gets black eye as coach is attacked, beaten

By SARAH NORDGREN
The Associated Press

WILLOW SPRINGS Ill. — John Hills was hoping to coach his teen-age baseball team to a victory in a tournament game. What he got was a beating that left him hospitalized Friday, days after the attack.

"I just can't believe something like this would happen," Hills, 46, said as he struggled to sit up in his hospital bed. "My team was in total shock. My son was going crazy."

Hills, of Lockport, was coaching first base for the 13-, 14- and 15-year-old Senior League All-Stars from the Lemont area Monday night when he was attacked by a rival coach and others.

By the time it was over, Hills had several fractured ribs, a broken nose and a grapefruit-sized bruise behind a knee, where he was struck by a bat. He was taken by ambulance to LaGrange Memorial Hospital, about 25 miles southwest of Chicago, where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

The rival coach from the Bridgeview district, George Loy, was handcuffed and taken from the field by Willow Springs police, who charged him with two counts of battery.

A juvenile, also of Bridgeview, was charged in a juvenile petition with one count of battery for allegedly striking Hills with a bat, police said, adding that charges might be filed against another juvenile later.

Loy's telephone number was unlisted and he was unavailable for comment Friday.

But spectators at the game said it was a sorry show. "I was very upset by it," said Denise Brown, whose son played first base for the Lemont team.

"It's not a good message to these kids. You want them to have good sportsmanship. It always seems the parents cause the problem."

Hills said the trouble began early in the game, when he complained to the umpire that a 16-year-old Bridgeview team coach was calling plays at first base, usurping the authority of the adult umpire.

Later in the game, when Lemont took the lead, Loy threatened to beat Hills.

"He said, 'I'm going to take those glasses off and bash your face in,'" Hills said. "I said, 'It's only a ball game, come on...'"

"I leaned down to pick the scorebook up. The next thing I know, he was on top of me."

As umpires struggled to keep the players on their benches, one Bridgeview youth picked up a bat and struck Hills across the back of the legs, Mrs. Brown said.

"It was very much intentional," she said. "I could see nothing that provoked it."

Hills' 15-year-old son, also named John, the team's catcher, said he was horrified.

"I was like, could somebody help my dad out?" he said. "I couldn't believe he was doing it. It was hard for us just to sit there and watch some guys beat up on my dad."

Officials of the Bridgeview team were not available for comment Friday. District administrator Bill Dunnett was not at home, someone answering the phone there said. Messages left with another Bridgeview Little League official, Ron Mizwicki, also were not returned.

A spokesman for Senior League, a division of Little League, based in Williamsport, Pa., said the league would have no comment until it received reports from the district administrators.

UNLV appeals ban by NCAA

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV took a first step Friday in an attempt to overturn an NCAA edict preventing the Rebels from defending their national basketball championship.

The university filed a formal appeal to the NCAA, asking that it reconsider a ruling handed down July 20 banning UNLV from postseason play next season. The NCAA ruling ended a 13-year battle involving the NCAA, UNLV and basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian.

In 1977, the NCAA placed UNLV on probation for two years and ordered Tarkanian suspended for two years for a series of violations. The university served the probation from 1977 to 1979, but Tarkanian obtained a court injunction preventing his suspension.

UNLV contends it took its punishment since it served the probation, and tried to suspend Tarkanian but could not do so because of the court order, which remains in effect today.

The NCAA said this ban on postseason play was an alternate penalty for the 1977 offenses, since the court order prevented the agency and the school from making him serve the suspension.

The UNLV appeal contains 14 pages of written documentation and several pages of exhibits, according to university legal counsel Brad Booke.

The university sent 65 sets of the appeal to the NCAA on Thursday and also sent one to each of 22 members of the NCAA Council, which is expected to hear the appeal in October.

Booke said the university would continue researching the case in an attempt to develop additional information that could help UNLV's case.

In a related matter, Big West Conference athletic directors, meeting at Los Angeles on football matters, said they would await the outcome of UNLV's appeal before deciding whether to ban the Rebels from the conference's postseason basketball tournament.

Hendricks wants Davis in Canton

By RUSTY MILLER
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Al Davis will step to the podium at the Hall of Fame ceremonies for the eighth time on Saturday.

For the eighth time, the president of the Los Angeles Raiders will be introducing someone else as an inductee, rather than accepting his own enshrinement.

"That's a development that calls one of this year's Hall of Famers, Ted Hendricks.

"I guess like the rest of the old Raiders, I wanted to see Al in there before us so he wouldn't have to make all these presentations without already being in the club himself," said Hendricks, who played on three Super Bowl winners as a member of the Raiders and played in eight Pro Bowls.

Davis, also the general partner of the Raiders, will present Hendricks. It will be a record eighth time that Davis — also a former Raiders head coach and a commissioner of the American Football League — has presented a player for induction.

"Basically, we've always respected each other," Hendricks said. "He was always very fair to me in contractual obligations and I performed out on the field. That was all he required. He was fair, but he was also a part of the team. He was there for the practices and he was there for all the games. He runs (the Raiders) like a business."

Hendricks will be inducted along with Kansas City Chiefs defensive tackle Buck Buchanan, Pittsburgh Steelers running back Franco Harris and linebacker Jack Lambert, Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese, San Francisco 49ers offensive tackle Bob St. Clair and Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry.

Davis previously introduced Lance Alworth, Jim Otto, George Blanda, Willie Brown, Gene Upshaw, Fred Biletnikoff and Art Shell.

Browns' Bud Carson for one happy with an extra game

By The Associated Press

The NFL's exhibition season starts this weekend in Tokyo, London and Canton — that's Ohio, not China.

The Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns open the schedule at Canton Saturday following the enshrining of seven men into the Hall of Fame. Japan gets its turn Sunday — Saturday night in the United States — with Denver and Seattle, followed by the Los Angeles Raiders and New Orleans at London on Sunday.

The weekend's abbreviated schedule of special games gives the six teams involved a fifth preseason game, one more than the other NFL teams.

"You never know when you might find a productive or even a great player, because coaches got more time to look at him," Browns coach Bud Carson said. "I think that's the biggest advantage of playing the extra preseason game. You can't simulate the true action of a game or the emotions you will get by playing in front of Hall of Fame players on national television."

But Carson's defense is a shadow of its normal self, with starting linebackers Clay Matthews, Mike Johnson and Dave Grayson and starting defensive backs Frank Minnifield and Felix Wright all holdouts.

"With our holdout situation, we're going to give some veterans and a couple of rookies a chance to show us what they can do," Carson said. "We'll know a lot more about a lot of these guys by the end of the Bears game."

The Browns, however, have Bernie Kosar, the sixth-rated quarterback in NFL history, and wide receivers Webster Slaughter and Reggie Langhorne, the team's first pair of 60-reception receivers in one season.

The Bears have an unsettled quarterback situation with Mike Tomczak and Jim Harbaugh. Coach Mike Ditka, from the Hall of Fame class of 1988, is back for his ninth season with an 84-45 career mark, but only 6-10 last year.

The Seahawks and Broncos, meanwhile, are dealing with the usual time problems associated with Far East travel.

"Jet lag is messing with a lot of people," rookie Seattle cornerback Daryl Reed said.

Asked how he would perform, Broncos quarterback John Elway said, "You always like to say 100 percent, but I have a feeling it won't be like that."

Elway has led Denver to three AFC titles in four years and Coach Dan Reeves had the highest winning percentage (.629) of any AFC coach during the 1980s.

But the Broncos have to contend with the psychological blow of yet another blowout loss in the Super Bowl.

Seattle, which has never made the Super Bowl, starts its first season since 1976 without Steve Largent, who retired as the NFL's most prolific receiver.

Tommy Kane, Louis Clark and Paul Skansi are fighting for Largent's spot, while the other wide receiver is Brian Blades, who finished second in the AFC with 77 receptions last year.

In London, Hall of Famers George Blanda, Jim Otto, Fred Biletnikoff and Art Shell joined other former Raiders Daryle Lamonica, Ben Davidson, Jim Plunkett, Raymond Chester and Clem Daniels in the team's touring party.

"Once you wear the silver and black, it's in our blood," Lamonica said. "We bleed silver and black. It means a lot to us as Raider players. It goes deep."

The Saints, a younger franchise than the Raiders by seven seasons, have only one former star with them — ex-quarterback Archie Manning is one of the radio announcers with the team.

Shell, in his first full season as head coach of the Raiders, encourages the emphasis on the tradition of excellence.

"Silver and black, that's important to us," Shell said. "We put that uniform on, we walk on a field and people respect us."

Newman in action tonight

MANCHESTER — Newman Lincoln-Mercury, 16-10 and in a battle for second place, winds up the Twilight League regular season tonight at 7 at Moriarty Field when it hosts the Inaugurators.

League playoffs begin Friday, Aug. 10, with Newman's to serve as host of a doubleheader at Moriarty Field with games at 5:45 and 7:45 p.m. Newman will play in the nightcap.

The rest of the Jack Rose Memorial Playoffs will be held at Palmer Stadium in Middletown.

Manchester Legion plays Sunday

The Manchester Legion baseball team will play Ellington Sunday at 4 p.m. at Brookside Park in the single elimination John Gibbs Memorial Tournament. The tournament consists of all Zone Eight clubs that did not qualify for the State Legion Tournament.

East Hartford will represent Zone Eight as Zone champ at the state tournament.

UMass recruits Prop 48 victims

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The University of Massachusetts has lost three of its four freshman basketball recruits because of their low college entrance test scores, Coach John Calipari said.

Point guard Mike Williams of Hartford, Conn.; 6-9 forward Ted Cottrell of Annapolis, Md.; and 6-4 Jerome Johnson of Bridgeport, Conn., failed to get the minimum combined score of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, required to play in Division I, Calipari said.

"To be honest, I thought Mike Williams would make it," Calipari said. "But I didn't really expect the other two to be here this year."

Miami fires hoop coach

CINCINNATI (AP) — Basketball coach Jerry Peiron was fired by Miami University Friday for giving one of his players a false grade in a class.

Peiron gave the player, who is no longer at the school, an "A" in his Basketball Theory course even though the player never attended class nor did any coursework.

Paul Pearson, president of the school in nearby Oxford, said athletic director R.C. Johnson had recommended that Peiron be suspended without pay for four months, removed from further teaching duties and placed on permanent probation.

But, Pearson said he decided to terminate the coach because the reputations of the university's athletic and academic programs require him to "maintain a broader view and to consider coach Peiron's action . . . as it reflects upon the university as a whole."

Nemeczek knocks off Gomez

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Unseeded Czechoslovakian Libor Nemeczek's relentless fullcourt play and charges to the net knocked off defending champion and top-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador 6-7 (9-7), 7-6 (7-4), 7-5 in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships Friday.

In Saturday's semifinals, Nemeczek will face another surprise winner, Unseeded Australian Darren Cahill scored a 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 upset of fifth-seeded Richard Fromberg, also of Australia.

Becker an upset victim

KITZBUHEHL, Austria (AP) — Top-seeded Boris Becker was upset by Czechoslovakia's Karel Novacek 6-3, 6-3 today in the quarterfinals of the Austrian Open.

Novacek, ranked 37th in the world, nudged just over an hour to oust Becker, who often has problems on clay courts and was well below his usual form.

Becker was whistled and jeered as he left the court by many in the crowd of 6,500, including his fellow West German.

Novacek's opponent in the semifinals will be Austrian Horst Skoff, who defeated compatriot Thomas Muster 6-4, 6-2.

Molson withdraws advertising

TORONTO (AP) — Molson Breweries has withdrawn its advertising from CBC television's planned coverage of the PGA Championship next week, the company said.

"We weren't aware of the policy of the host club when Freda Colbourne said.

"We made the decision a little more than a week ago, after we saw what was going on in the U.S."

Shoal Creek Country Club in Birmingham, Ala., the site of the golf championship, announced this week it would for the first time admit a black as a member.

Louis Willie, who will be extended an honorary membership. The club's previously whites-only membership and the resultant publicity resulted in the withdrawal of major sponsors such as Toyota, IBM, Amheuser-Busch and Lincoln-Mercury from the broadcasts of ESPN, a cable network that is to carry the first two rounds, and ABC-TV.

Gibson leads Boston 5 Classic

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Rookie tourist Ellie Gibson, who earned only $1,264 in her first ten months as a pro, shot a four-under 68 Friday to take the halfway lead in the $350,000 Boston Five Classic.

Gibson edged one stroke ahead of 1980 Boston Five champion Dale Eggeking and was two strokes up on 1982 winner Sandra Palmer, as the 36-year-old Eggeking and the 49-year-old Palmer made late runs at the first two rounds.

Gibson, who had missed the cut in six of seven tournaments this year, shot a six-under 70-68-138 to three strokes ahead of first round leader Ok-He Ku of Korea, whose record opening score of 64 rose 13 strokes in the second round at the hot and humid conditions at Tara Ferncroft County Club.

Charles leads Paine Webber

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bob Charles shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to claim a one-shot lead over Dewitt Weaver and Harold Hamming after the opening round of the Paine Webber Invitational at the Tournament Players Club at Piper Glen.

Charles, winner of two Senior PGA Tour events this season, had four birdies on the front nine and added a fifth with a 50-foot putt on the 45-yard 13th hole.

"I was only trying to get it close but it fell in the hole," said Charles, who putted for birdies on all but one hole.

Arnold Palmer, designer of the Pipers Glen course, and tour money leader Lee Trevino were in a group at 70 that also included Dave Hill, the winner the last time this event was staged, in 1988. Last year's tournament was cancelled because of Hurricane Hugo.

Graf in overpowering form

MONTREAL (AP) — Steffi Graf was overpowering in both word and deed Friday, routing Soviet Natalia Zvereva 6-0, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Player's Challenge Canadian championships.

Graf, ranked No. 1 in the world, took the first set in just 21 minutes. The confident West German said the second set was prolonged only because she was attempting new shots.

"She never had much of a chance," the top seed said. "I never felt I could lose."

In the semifinals, Graf will face No. 7 Nathalie Tauziat, a surprise winner over fourth seed Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, 6-3, 6-2.

Maleeva's sister Katerina, seeded third, lost the first set to Naoko Sawamura of Japan before winning 6-7 (5-7), 6-2, 6-4, and will face the winner of the Gabriela Sabatini-Jennifer Capriati match later Friday.

Silveira keeps St. Jude lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Lary Silveira overcame two shots into water hazards to shoot an even-par 71 on Friday and hold a one-shot lead midway through the St. Jude Classic golf tournament.

Silveira, who set a course record with a 9-under-par 62 for a three-shot lead on Thursday, completed two rounds over the 7,066-yard TPC Southwind course at 133, one shot ahead of Buddy Gardner and Loren Roberts. Gardner shot 69 and Roberts 68.

Dineen has minor surgery

HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford Whalers right wing Kevin Dineen has been cleared to begin rehabilitative exercises on his right knee on Monday, the team announced Friday.

Dineen, the subject of trade rumors during the off-season, underwent surgery Tuesday to repair a slight cartilage tear. The surgery was performed by Dr. John Fulkerson at the University of Connecticut Health Center Hospital.

Dineen began experiencing pain in the knee during the Whalers playoff series against Boston in April. When the pain did not go away, Dineen consulted Fulkerson.

Whalers officials said Dineen is expected to be ready to play when the Whalers open training camp Sept. 7.

Criminal Type now the favorite

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — With Sunday Silence and Easy Goer having retired, Criminal Type tries to take another step toward Horse of the Year honors in Saturday's Whitney Handicap at Saratoga.

Criminal Type, conqueror of Sunday Silence and Easy Goer in his last two races, will carry top weight of 126 pounds, his highest impost of the year, and Gary Stevens against six rivals in the 1 1/2-mile race.

The 5-year-old son of Alydar has won six of nine starts this year, including his last three.

Criminal Type, who is pointing toward the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic at Belmont Oct. 27, can expect tough opposition from Ogden Phipps' Dancing Spree, trained by Shug McGaughey.

Dancing Spree, last year's Eclipse Award-winning sprinter, will carry 121 and a rider yet to be named.

Fittipaldi sits on the pole

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi won his fourth straight pole position for a 500-mile race, barely beating Bobby Rahal on Friday in qualifying for the Marlboro 500.

Fittipaldi, the defending CART-PPG Indy-car series champion, made a lap on the two-mile Michigan International Speedway oval at 222.593 mph in a Chevrolet-powered Penske racer.

Rahal's Lola-Chevrolet was next at 221.859, breaking up a possible all-Penske Racing front row.

Danny Sullivan wound up alongside Rahal at 221.764, with pre-qualifying favorite Rick Mears relegated to the inside of the second row at 220.534.

Pazienza, Haugen meet again

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — After two hard-fought bouts and 90 rounds, there aren't a lot of secrets between former lightweight champions Viny Pazienza and Greg Haugen.

Pazienza said the third fight between the two on Sunday at Trump Plaza will determine whether he can vault back into title contention.

"If I lose, I might quit," Pazienza said Friday at a news conference. "I have to capitalize on my body while I still have the talent."

Haugen doesn't even consider losing the 10-round non-title fight.

"There's no way this guy is going to beat me," Haugen said. "It's like two dogs in there and neither is willing to back up."

Pazienza, 28-4 with 23 knockouts, lost his most recent bout, a 12-round decision to Hector "Macho" Camacho in February. Haugen, 25-2-1 with 13 knockouts, has fought twice since losing his International Boxing Federation lightweight title to Pernell Whitaker, stopping both his opponents this year.

Douglas leads British golf

WOBURN, England (AP) — Even with bogey and a double bogey in the home stretch Friday, former British Amateur champion Kirstina Douglas held her lead after two rounds of the British Women's Open golf tournament.

The U.S. 119-pound champion had to beat the world champion from Cuba to even advance past the first round of the competition.

Saturday, Reyes meets Bulgaria's Serafim Todarov, the silver medalist in the 1989 World Championships, for the gold in the 119-pound division.

"The competition here is something," Reyes said. "Everyone is world class."

While some sports at these games had trouble attracting the top competitors, the main problem in boxing was deciding which entries to pore to fit the 96-man field.

Goodwill Games nearing end with gold medals still at stake

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

SEATTLE (AP) — The Goodwill Games reach their final weekend with three American world champions within reach of gold.

Figure skater Jill Trenary, boxer Eric Griffin and the women's basketball team have looked just short of unbeatable in early action.

Trenary led a 1-2-3 American sweep of the original program Thursday night. That's worth one-third of the total score and the other two-thirds shouldn't be much of a problem for the three-time U.S. champion.

"I was very nervous," Trenary said of her first competitive appearance as world champion. She won the title in March at Halifax, Nova Scotia. "Once I'm out there, I don't think about it. I'd just freak out if I did, if I thought about being world champion as I went into a triple jump."

Trenary is debating whether to remain an amateur or go into a professional show. That decision is close at hand.

"I'm going home to Minnesota after these competitions to take it easy and decide. I can't just sit around for a couple of months deciding. I can't just float through life. It's difficult for athletes to think this is their last amateur competition."

If it is her last, Trenary would like to make it one of her best, even though this is too early in the season — it's actually before the figure skating season — to expect very much.

"It's difficult to skate competition in July or August," she said. "The pressure is less because it's our off-season. My skating has really come together the last two weeks."

Griffin's boxing came together in 1989, when he was unbeaten and took the 106-pound world crown with a decision over Rogelio Marcelo of Cuba. He has kept winning this year and a 5-0 decision over Nshan Munchyan of the Soviet Union on Thursday put him in the finals against another Soviet, Ananoli Filipov.

The boxers were off Friday. "I don't think about winning streaks, just winning each fight," said Griffin, of Houston. "I came here to win the gold medal and I won't be happy with anything less."

Nor will the American women's basketball squad, which has won the last two world championships, the 1986 Goodwill Games and, the crowning achievement, the 1988 Olympics. They have not lost in 39 games since beating the Soviets for the '86 Goodwill title.

On Saturday, they play Bulgaria, a late entry into the field when China withdrew. The Bulgarian coach isn't expecting to stop the U.S. express.

"We can't at this moment beat them because of the way they play and the strength of their team," Bulgarian coach Ivan Lepichev said. "We have to be realistic. We have only this opportunity that we will play with a world-class team in their own country, and we'll have a chance to learn something."

The two American men's teams still playing are in the medal round. On Friday, the United States played Italy in the volleyball semifinals, while Cuba took on the Soviets. On Saturday, at Tacoma, the U.S. hockey team takes on Canada, while the heavily favored Soviets play Sweden.

The men's 1-meter springboard diving was won by Soviet Sergei Lomonovski, the first non-Chinese gold medalist in diving. His consistent performance enabled Lomonovski to move away from the field and finish with 597.00 points.

Tan Liangde of China, who won the 3-meter springboard, took the silver.

Competition stiff in boxing ring

SEATTLE (AP) — Sergio Reyes can testify to the quality of the Goodwill Games boxing field.

The U.S. 119-pound champion had to beat the world champion from Cuba to even advance past the first round of the competition.

Saturday, Reyes meets Bulgaria's Serafim Todarov, the silver medalist in the 1989 World Championships, for the gold in the 119-pound division.

Many think the presence of two complete U.S. and Soviet teams made the Goodwill field stronger than that at either the world championships or the 1988 Olympics.

PGA getting publicity it doesn't want

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — It has been a long time since there has been this much focus on the PGA national championship.

And never for this reason. Nick Faldo has a chance to become the first man in 37 years to win three grand slam events in the same year.

But this tournament will more be remembered as the event that integrated all-white Shoal Creek country club. Faldo comes to the 72nd PGA as the best golfer in the world. Greg Norman enters looking to re-establish his claim to that title. And Payne Stewart, the defending champion, suddenly is mentioned with the best.

And perhaps during next Sunday's final round that's all anyone will care about.

But for now, the issue is racism, not by the PGA or the USGA or the PGA Tour, but by the private clubs where they hold their tournaments.

"I never knew," sighed Grant Spaeth, president of the United States Golf Association, "that leasing a piece of real estate for a couple of weeks could cause so much trouble."

The problems of this tournament are not Spaeth's. They belong to the PGA. But the issue raised will effect every tournament down the road.

It started when a black politician in Birmingham criticized the PGA for holding its national championship at a course that has no black members.

It heated up when the founder of Shoal Creek, Hall Thompson, said the club would not be pressured into admitting blacks.

It raged when civil rights groups said they would picket the event.

And it boiled over when several major advertisers pulled out of the television coverage of the event because of the turmoil.

Calm was restored and the threats of protest withdrawn after Shoal Creek agreed to integrate.

But there is still the question of all those other tournaments played on restricted clubs. And there are those not happy with the way the Shoal Creek controversy was settled.

The Augusta National Golf Club, host of the Masters and a recognized symbol of the all-white private club, has announced it will invite black members this fall.

The PGA Tour, the PGA and the USGA all have announced that policies have been or will be established to require non-discriminatory practices by the clubs that host their championships.

And Shoal Creek announced that a prominent black Birmingham businessman, Louis Willie, will be accorded honorary membership and steps will be taken to offer regular membership to other blacks.

The NAACP abandoned plans to picket and protest the tournament. Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said his group also would scrap planned demonstrations and urged all other groups to do the same.

A day later, however, two black players on the Senior PGA Tour, Lee Elder and Charles Owens, accused the NAACP and the SCLC of a sell-out in negotiations with Shoal Creek and the PGA.

"I feel we should go to the very end with this thing," said Elder, the first black to play in the Masters. "An honorary membership doesn't mean anything."

"You need a tub of water and you get a teardrop and you're satisfied. No, it didn't go far enough," Owens said.

The impact and possible consequences of those remarks are not clear.

But the PGA, seeking to avoid the recurrence of a racially motivated disruption of its championship 21 years ago, very quietly has taken security out of the hands of local Birmingham volunteers and established its own security standards and procedures.

The Associated Press

BLACK ALLOWED — Shoal Creek president John Pitman talks with SCLC official Abraham Woods on Tuesday during a news conference announcing membership policy changes at the club. Shoal Creek took measures to allow blacks as members. The PGA Tour on Friday stiffened its anti-discrimination rules as a further measure.

PGA Tour stiffens its rules against bias at golf clubs

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) —

The PGA Tour, prompted by the Shoal Creek controversy, said Friday it will deny tournament rights to golf clubs that have all-white memberships or show any other signs of discrimination.

The tour's 10-member Tournament Policy Board voted for tougher anti-discrimination rules following threats of protest and sponsor pullouts at next week's PGA Championship.

"In the event a golf club indicates its membership practices and policies are non-discriminatory, but there is information that raises a question as to such practices and policies (e.g. all-white membership), the staff is authorized to require on a case by case basis that as a condition of hosting an event, the applicable golf club take appropriate action to encourage minority membership," the PGA statement said.

The policy would affect tournaments on the PGA Tour, the Senior PGA Tour and Ben Hogan tour events.

The Charlotte Observer found that 17 clubs where PGA Tour events were held have all-white memberships.

The statement from the tour's headquarters came after more than a week of controversy concerning the championship, which starts Thursday, and its site, the previously all-white Shoal Creek country club in Birmingham, Ala. Bowling to pressure from civil rights groups, Shoal Creek awarded honorary membership to a black businessman this week and said it was considering another black for admission.

The tour said all agreements between itself and local tournament co-sponsors "shall specifically require that the practices and policies of any and all clubs proposed as tournament sites do not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, sex or national origin."

It also said tournament contracts would not be extended "unless the PGA Tour is satisfied that its non-discriminatory policies are being enforced."

All PGA Tour contracts are awarded on a year-by-year basis, tour spokesman Sid Wilson said.

Although the Shoal Creek racial controversy has centered on the PGA Championship, the Tour does not have jurisdiction over that tournament or any of the other three major championships.

The Masters is a private tournament run by the Augusta National Golf Club, the U.S. Open is run by the U.S. Golf Association, the British Open by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, and the PGA by the PGA of America.

In addition to the tour, the Shoal Creek controversy forced the USGA and the Masters to reconsider their policies.

The Tournament Policy Board determines the rules of the organization. The board is chaired by E.M. deWindt, and among its 10 members are four tour players — John Mahaffey, Larry Mize, Pat McCowan and Mike Donald.

TAKE THAT — New York Yankees third baseman Jim Leyritz tags out Cleveland's Jerry Browne who tried to extend a double into a triple in the first inning Friday night at Yankee Stadium. The Yankees came from behind for a 6-4 victory.

Red Sox romp; Yankees win

BOSTON (AP) — Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer in Boston's seven-run first inning and Tim Lincecum and Tony Pena also homered as the Boston Red Sox routed the Detroit Tigers 14-5 Friday night for their fifth consecutive victory.

Every Boston starter had at least one hit and everyone scored at least one run in an 18-hit attack by the American League East leaders, who began play one-half game ahead of Toronto.

Nachring, a shortstop who made his major-league debut on July 15, also had a single. Pena had three RBIs with a single, a solo homer and a grand slam.

Skilled to a whopping lead, Greg Harris (9-4) got the victory with relief help from Jerry Reed in the sixth. Harris allowed four runs and 11 hits.

Jeff Robinson (8-9), who was shelved 13-3 by the Red Sox in Detroit last Sunday, failed to retire a batter as Boston sent 11 men to the plate in the first.

Jody Reed led off with a walk and came around on a single by Carlos Quintana and a double by Wade Boggs. Burks followed with his 12th homer, a shot into the screen in left-center.

Mike Greenwell singled, Dwight Evans was hit by a pitch and Tom Brunansky had an RBI double before Paul Gibson replaced Robinson.

Pena singled, scoring Evans, and Brunansky came across with the seventh run on Nachring's grounder. Pena hit his fifth homer in the third inning. Boston added three runs in the fifth on a grounder by Pena, an RBI double by Nachring and a run-scoring single by Reed. Evans doubled a run home in the sixth.

Detroit's Cecil hit his 34th homer in the second inning, tying him with Oakland's Jose Canseco for the major-league lead. The Athletics played later Friday night.

Alan Trammell had an RBI double for Detroit in the fifth and the Tigers added two runs in the sixth on RBI singles by Gary Ward and Lou Whitaker. Mark Salas had an RBI double in the eighth.

Yankees 6, Indians 4: At New York, Cleveland's Tom Candiotti was within four outs of a no-hitter when the New York Yankees rallied for four unearned runs in the eighth inning, three on Mel Hall's homer off relief ace Doug Jones, to beat the Indians 6-4 Friday night.

For 7 2-3 innings the Yankees couldn't touch Candiotti's nasty knuckleball. He retired the first two batters in the eighth but walked Steve Sax and Jim Leyritz reached when shortstop Felix Fermin failed to handle his grounder in the hole.

It was scored an error — Cleveland's third of the game — and rookie Oscar Azocar followed to make it 4-3 and break up Candiotti's bid for what would have been a record eighth no-hitter of the season.

Jones, who has 28 saves, relieved Candiotti (11-7) and Hall hit his first pitch into the upper deck in right field. It was only the third homer allowed by Jones, who has five blown saves. Candiotti had beaten the Yankees six straight times since April 26, 1987.

At Yankee Stadium on July 12, Melido Perez of Chicago pitched a rain-shortened six-inning no-hitter to tie the record for a season.

Twins 6, Mariners 2: At Seattle, Minnesota's Brian Harper extended his hitting streak to 24 games, longest in the major leagues this season, with a two-run homer and Randy Bush hit a three-run shot in the 13th inning as the Twins beat the Seattle Mariners 6-2 Friday.

Kent Hrbek broke a 2-2 tie with a sacrifice fly off Seattle relief ace Mike Schooler (1-3) before Bush hit his fourth home run of the season.

Orioles 14, Royals 1: At Baltimore, Cal Ripken hit two homers and drove in four runs as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Kansas City Royals 14-1 Friday night in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing scuffle.

With the Orioles leading 11-1, Kansas City reliever Steve Crawford hit Brady Anderson in the back with a pitch. Anderson charged the mound and was tackled from behind by catcher Mike MacFarlane.

Players from both dugouts and bullpens converged near the mound. No punches were thrown but several players were thrown to the ground and Anderson was ejected.

In the next inning, Baltimore's John Mitchell was ejected when he threw a pitch behind the back of Kevin Seitzer. Several players again emerged from the dugouts but that was all.

Bucs' Drabek just misses a no-hitter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Doug Drabek's bid for a no-hitter was broken up by Sid Campussano with two outs in the ninth inning Friday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-0.

Drabek, a 28-year-old right-hander in his fifth major league season, had allowed just one runner — a two-out walk to John Kruk in the fourth — before Campussano lined a 3-2 pitch to right-center field for a single.

Campussano, who entered the game in the sixth inning as a replacement for center fielder Len Dykstra, was just 9-for-48 this season before the single.

Darren Daulton, the next batter, fled to right to end the game.

At almost the same moment, the New York Yankees broke up a no-hit bid by Cleveland's Tom Candiotti with two out in the bottom of the eighth. Had either no-hitter been completed, it would have been the eighth of the season, a modern record.

Second baseman Jose Lind had preserved the no-hitter with one out in the eighth when he dove to his left to snag Kruk's hard-hitter grounder, then threw from his knees to first for the out. The 36,057 fans in Veterans Stadium gave Lind a rousing ovation.

Drabek (14-4) got 14 ground ball outs, struck out five and walked one as he won his sixth straight start.

Drabek, whose last loss was against St. Louis on June 28, pitched a two-hitter against the Phillies last Sunday in Pittsburgh. He had thrown 13 consecutive no-hit innings before Campussano's single.

It was his first shutout and fourth complete game of the season and his eighth career shutout.

Scott Garrels of San Francisco had a no-hitter broken up last Sunday by Cincinnati's Paul O'Neill with two outs in the ninth inning.

Pittsburgh had 18 hits, including four by Sid Bream. Andy Van Slyke drove in four runs and Bream three. Bruce Ruffin (5-11) was the loser.

Cubs 10, Expos 4: At Chicago, Mark Grace and pitcher Mike Harkey doubled home two runs apiece during a six-run first inning on Friday, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 10-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The loss was the third straight for the Expos and went to starter Mark Gardner (6-6), who retired only three batters. Harkey (11-3) lasted only until the sixth in the 85-degree heat, but Chicago's 17-hit attack was more than enough for the victory.

Jerome Walton opened the Cubs first with a single and Ryno Sandberg walked before Grace doubled them home, extending his hitting streak to 13 games.

Two outs later, Luis Salazar singled to drive in Grace, and Shawn Dunston doubled home Salazar. Joe Girardi was walked intentionally before Harkey doubled in both runners.

Harkey did not allow a hit until Jerry Goff homered in the third. Singles by Dave Martinez and Mike Aldrete led to a run in the Montreal sixth before Larry Walker hit his 12th homer to finish Harkey.

Padres 3, Reds 2: At Cincinnati, the Cincinnati Reds' skid continued Friday night as Jack Clark doubled home the winning run in the ninth inning to give the San Diego Padres a 3-2 victory over the National League West leaders.

Cincinnati has lost 10 of its last 12 games to let San Francisco slice away most of an 11-game lead. The Giants entered the night's play 4½ games behind the Reds.

The Reds rallied for a 2-2 tie in the eighth on Chris Sabo's solo homer off Bruce Hurst, but Rob Dibble (4-3) failed to hold it.

Tony Gwynn singled with one out in the ninth and Clark doubled past Sabo at third. Left fielder Billy Hatcher fell down while chasing the ball, letting Gwynn score easily.

At almost the same moment, the New York Yankees broke up a no-hit bid by Cleveland's Tom Candiotti with two out in the bottom of the eighth. Had either no-hitter been completed, it would have been the eighth of the season, a modern record.

Second baseman Jose Lind had preserved the no-hitter with one out in the eighth when he dove to his left to snag Kruk's hard-hitter grounder, then threw from his knees to first for the out. The 36,057 fans in Veterans Stadium gave Lind a rousing ovation.

SOME ADVICE — Red Sox pitcher Tom Bolton offers advice to several pitching prospects during Friday's baseball clinic at Moriarty Field. Over 100 local and area youngsters attended.

pitchers with Tom Bolton, the catchers with Bill Fisher and the infielders with Rac Slider. They went through some instruction and they all got a chance to make some throws. After that, they went into hitting instruction. A couple of youngsters got a chance to swing the bat. And then we gave each one of the kids a ball and had them autographed by each of the coaches."

The clinic ended with a steady stream of youngsters from Manchester, Glastonbury, South Windsor, Newington, Rocky Hill and Westfield, Cox Cable's service area, filing in and out of the first base dugout for autographs.

Every kid went away with a big smile on his or her face.

"I really enjoyed it," Bolton said. "I think it's good for us to come out and show that big league ballplayers are real people. They probably come to Fenway and yell and scream for hours and hours for autographs and there's just really no time to do it there. So, it's good to come out and let them see us."

For Bolton, it was his second clinic of the summer.

"Tom's our designated long traveler," Levine said. "We went to Stamford, Maine and he went. That's the farthest north we'll go and this is the farthest west. And then we'll go to the Cape and Providence. The rest are in and around Boston. They're going really well."

Levine, who was extremely pleased with the turnout, noted that Manchester was the 10th of 14 summer clinics.

"It's one of the best we've had," he said. "Everything was done for us when we got here. The kids were great. They all paid attention. We do them obviously when they (Red Sox) are home. One stretch we did five in five days."

This is the fourth year NESN, which delivers live and exclusive coverage of over 90 Red Sox games each year, has been doing the clinics. A taping of the clinic will be aired on Cox Cable Public Access Channel 33 on Aug. 31 at 7 p.m. and Sept. 12 at 5 p.m.

Ruptured disc puts Reardon on the shelf

BOSTON (AP) — Jeff Reardon, the ace of the Boston Red Sox' bullpen, is suffering from a ruptured disc and faces season-ending surgery, the club reported Friday.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Boston team physician, said that a myelogram confirmed that the ruptured disc is the cause of pressure on a nerve in Reardon's lower back.

Pappas, a noted orthopedic surgeon, said Reardon would undergo surgery within the next week at University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

Reardon's return to action will be determined by his rehabilitation progress. However, Pappas said that if everything goes as hoped Reardon is expected to be ready next spring.

Reardon, a right-hander who will be 35 on Oct. 1, signed a three-year contract worth a reported $6.8 million as a free agent last Dec. 6.

The Red Sox pursued the former University of Massachusetts star although they had veteran Lee Smith at their closer. Smith was traded to St. Louis for Tom Brunansky on May 4.

In 11 major league seasons with the New York Mets, Montreal Expos, Minnesota Twins and Boston, Reardon has 284 saves, fourth among all-time relievers.

Although bothered by back trouble off and on this year, Reardon has appeared in 39 games, finishing 30. He has a 3-3 record and a 3.30 earned run average with 18 saves in 25 opportunities. He last pitched on July 21 in Kansas City.

Boston manager Joe Morgan said that left-hander Rob Murphy, mainly a setup reliever for Smith and then Reardon, would take over as the team's closer.

Acquired from Cincinnati after the 1988 season, Murphy was outstanding in 1989, compiling a 5-7 record and 9 saves with a 2.74 ERA in 74 games.

Murphy has been inconsistent this year. He has an 0-6 record with 5 saves and a 6.35 ERA in 51 appearances. He has surrendered 9 homers in 45 1/3 innings.

Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman, who has been unsuccessful in dealing for an established starter, said he would begin looking immediately for short relief help.

STOLEN BASE — Dave Gilbert (9) of General Oil steals second base during the second inning of Friday's JC-Courant League Junior Division semifinal at Moriarty Field. Plainville second baseman Anthony Cavallo takes the throw. Plainville won, 4-2.

Gov't dissolved, army takes over

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The president today dissolved Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's 20-month-old government, and the army took over the national television station and telephone exchanges. There were reports that some members of the administration faced arrest. Army chief of staff Gen. Mirza Aslam Beg said the military moves were taken to assure an orderly transition to other civilian authorities, and were not an attempt by the military to seize power.

U.S. productivity makes rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — American workers' productivity rebounded in the second quarter of 1990, rising at an annual rate of 1.6 percent for the first increase in 18 months, the government said today. The rise in non-farm productivity — defined as output per hour of work — was the first increase since productivity climbed 0.5 percent in the final three months of 1988, the Labor Department said. Though the report offered good news on American workers' performance in the April-June period, the agency said revised figures for last year showed productivity fell 0.3 percent rather than increasing 0.9 percent as first reported.

Japan, China protest Iraq

TOKYO (AP) — Oil prices rose more than $3 a barrel today after Japan and the European Community joined other nations in halting imports of Iraqi oil to protest the invasion of Kuwait. China halted weapons sales to Iraq. Australia's government today banned oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait and defense sales to Iraq, revoking an export license for the sale of $680,000 worth of engine components to the Iraqi air force.

Congress heads for recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is on summer recess after a weekend session that produced a Pentagon spending blueprint in the Senate, campaign finance overhaul in the House and final passage of emergency relief to cities hard hit by AIDS.

Left hanging after the burst of legislative activity were the delicate — and politically testy — negotiations between Congress and the White House on a deficit-reduction plan to avert mandatory, across-the-board budget cuts, and uncertainty over the savings and loan mess.

Police prevent Korea meeting

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Hundreds of riot police blocked dozens of dissidents from traveling to North Korea for a meeting, and the government banned 42 other activists from leaving the country. The dissidents called off their efforts to cross the heavily fortified border to North Korea after their bus was stopped by almost 500 riot police on a road mid-way between Seoul and the border.

General Oil eliminated

Finishes with fine 12-4 mark

By JIM TIERNEY
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Pitching was the name of the game for Plainville during Friday night's JC-Courant League Junior Division semifinal playoff game against homecoming General Oil. Southpaw Jason Plourde and righthander Dean Jakobowski combined on a two-hitter as Plainville eliminated General Oil, 4-2, at Moriarty Field. General Oil finishes its season with a 12-4 record. Plainville, 13-3, will meet the winner of the Berlin-South Meriden game in Monday night's final. Plourde and Jakobowski, who were effectively relayed back and forth between the pitcher's mound and shortstop three times, combined for nine strikeouts. General Oil's first hit of the game was a two-out triple by losing pitcher O.J. Cromwell in the fifth inning. Cromwell allowed six hits, walked two and struck out two. "Their pitching was very good," General Oil manager Dave Rohrbach said. "The pitching was great. We're not a good hitting team. We hit well against mediocre pitching. Their coach made some good (pitching) decisions. All in all, I'm happy with the season." Plainville carried a 1-0 lead, acquired during a third inning in which General Oil committed two errors, into the sixth before scoring three runs with two outs. Anthony Cavallo led off the Plainville sixth with a single. Jakobowski hit one back to Cromwell, whose throw apparently pulled shortstop Eddy Pinkin off second base for the attempted force out. After two outs were made with the runners moving up to second and third on a Plourde groundout, Brian Scubiak (two hits) lashed a two-run single to left for a 3-0 lead. Scubiak came home with the final run of the frame when Jim Pugliese's double sailed over center-fielder Dave Gilbert's head. General Oil stranded eight men largely due to the combined eight walks issued by Plainville. General Oil sliced the deficit to 4-2 with a pair of runs in the sixth. A two-out double by Jason Marston scored Gilbert and Jamie Lockwood, who both walked. Andy Bartley ended the inning by being ruled out on an obstruction call down the first base line, nullifying a third run. "If you had said 12-4 at the beginning of the season, I would've grabbed it," Rohrbach said. "It says something for the Manchester program being up there with the good teams in the league. I'm disappointed (with the loss), but I'm pleased overall."

IRAQ LIED — President Bush talks to reporters Sunday on his arrival to the White House from Camp David. Bush said Iraq "lied once again" and reneged on its pledge to pull its invading forces out of Kuwait. Angry and forceful, the president again condemned Iraq's aggression and said "This will not stand."

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Oil industry sources said today that Saudi Arabia was reinforcing its troops near the Kuwaiti border, and witnesses reported intense air activity near the airport in the Saudi capital. Local residents reached by telephone said Saudi military aircraft were sighted during the night landing and taking off at airfields on the fringes of the capital. U.S. Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney arrived in Jeddah today for talks with Saudi officials. Cheney was accompanied by Lt. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the U.S. Middle East Force known as the Central Command. Richard Gates, deputy national security adviser, Please see IRAQ, page 6.

Cheney sent to Mideast

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived in the vulnerable oil-rich kingdom of Saudi Arabia today as the Bush administration intensified efforts to secure Arab support for getting Iraq's Saddam Hussein and his "puppet regime" out of Kuwait. President Bush, clearly irate, vowed that Iraq would be forced to reverse course and abandon its invasion, declaring that Iraq's "brutal, naked aggression... will not stand." Local gas prices on rise

By SCOTT BREDE
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Last week, Iraq forces invaded Kuwait. This week, higher gasoline and home-heating oil prices will invade the pocketbooks of Connecticut residents. But locally, the invasion has already started as Manchester gas stations and oil companies all reported rises in their retail prices — a rise that is expected to continue throughout the week, they said. "Gas prices went up about three times last week," said Rich Baraciff, the owner of Baraciff's Gulf, on West Middle Turnpike. Baraciff, who has owned the station for 26 years, reported the price of full-service, cash-only regular gasoline has risen from $1.15 to $1.23 per gallon in less than a week's span. "The price (of gas) is probably going to go up much more with all the publicity it's getting," he said. Please see GAS, page 6.

PRICE INCREASE — Robert Jenkins posts a 10 cent per gallon increase Friday at Marathon gas station on 67th and Halsted in Chicago. The increase in consumer prices is tied to concern over the Middle Eastern oil supply in the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

More homeless facilities needed

By BRIAN M. TROTTE

MANCHESTER — A report by the Mayor's Committee on the Needs of Street People says more facilities are needed for the town's homeless population. Republican Mayor Terry Werkhoven, who led the six-person committee, was expected to release the results of the six-month study at a news conference this afternoon. The report, which specifically focused on the problems of the homeless on Main Street, recommends that a new day-care center be built in the downtown area. The center would supplement the facilities and programs available at the Samaritan Shelter on Main Street. According to the report, the number of "individuals who have been identified in the Main Street area appear to be relatively small in number. The estimates range between 12 and 16 people who chronically have displayed disruptive behavior, and have created frustration and anxiety for others who may work, live or patronize Main Street offices and stores." The panel suggested that substance abuse and individual counseling be available at the site, because there is a lack of such services in town. The shelter would also be equipped with telephones and lockers. The latter item, the report stressed, "is of serious concern to this committee."

McNamara to run in 12th District

By ALEX GIRELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Peter J. McNamara, a member of the Libertarian Party, will be a candidate for election as state representative from the 12th Assembly district in Manchester. A candidacy petition for McNamara was submitted to the registrars of voters and the registrar's staff confirmed this morning that it contains 76 valid signatures. He needed 74 signatures, 1 per cent of the number who voted in the 12th district in the last election. McNamara ran unsuccessfully for the town Board of Directors in 1985. He entered the race for the state seat in the 4th Senatorial District in 1988, but dropped out of the race before the election, saying that a fund-raiser for him had attracted only 250 people, about 150 fewer than he expected. With McNamara's entry, the race in the 12th District will apparently be a three-way contest. Incumbent Democrat James McCavanagh has been endorsed by his party. This morning the staff of the registrar's office was validating signatures on a petition from Republican Kevin McKenzie. He needs at least 158 signatures of Republican voters within the district. Signatures were also being checked this morning on a petition by Reginald K. Preble, who needs 181 signatures of Republican voters to become the Republican candidate to oppose incumbent Democrat John W. Thompson in the 13th Assembly District. Late this morning, the registrar's office reported both GOP candidates had enough signatures to qualify for the November ballot.

Man arrested in drug death

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Police are investigating the death of a town resident who they believe died from an overdose of heroin which they suspect he purchased from another local man, police spokesman Gary Wood said today. According to police reports, Frederic Schwartz, 30, of 17 Cole St., died Sunday at Manchester Memorial Hospital after rescue workers were called to his home by a family member who found him unconscious. While police, fire, and ambulance personnel were at the Schwartz home, police found drug paraphernalia and a white powder, which they suspect is heroin, the reports state. Police are not saying why they have connected the suspected overdose with another man, Glenn R. Sasse, 31, of 205 Porter St., who they have arrested and charged with operating a drug factory. "You can tie the two together," said Wood, who would say no more other than the investigation is ongoing and a further report is forthcoming. Sasse was charged also with possession of narcotics and drug paraphernalia, according to the reports. Police obtained a warrant to enter and search the Porter Street residence on Sunday. The search Please see DEATH, page 6.
