Reed says new hostages unlikely to be harmed

By GEORGE ESPER
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Former hostage Frank Reed said Tuesday the 3,000 Americans held in Iraq and Kuwait are in for a long siege but he does not think they will suffer the deprivation of the 14 Western hostages in Lebanon.

"I'm sure they're nervous and tense," Reed said of their families back home. "But if we look at this logically, to me there can be no benefit to Saddam Hussein to harm them. Somehow I think they're in for a long siege and they're going to sit in the desert for a long time."

Reed, a critic of the Bush administration's refusal to negotiate with captors of the hostages in Lebanon, said he supports the president's efforts against Iraq.

"As a protector of oil, he is most likely doing the right thing," Reed said.

He expressed renewed concern for the six Americans and other

Westerners held in Lebanon. He implored they not be forgotten in the Gulf crisis.

"For God's sake we're talking about almost six years that Terry Anderson and Tom Sutherland have been in captivity," he said in an interview. "They should be freed. When I left them they were sick. This is very degrading, this experience."

Anderson, 42, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held hostage with nearly 5 1/2 years in captivity. Sutherland, 59, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut, has been held for a little over five years.

The other American hostages are Joseph Czirpik, 59, acting controller at the American University in Beirut; Edward Tracy, 59, West Beirut resident; Alan Sien, 51, a communications instructor at the American University; and Jesse Turner, 42, professor of mathematics and computer science at Beirut University College.

Reed, who is jobless and lives in an apartment in suburban Malden, was the director of the Lebanese International School when he was kidnapped on Sept. 9, 1986.

He said the showdown between the United States and Iraq and the Bush administration's preoccupation with the 3,000 American hostages in the Gulf further showed the Lebanon hostages into the background. From the beginning, they've been lost, he said.

"I think they've just been again put on the back burner," he said. "I wish there was as much concern for them. I saw some pictures on television this morning of the new hostages lying around swimming pools. For me that's not hostage-taking. Hostages to me is deprivation, cruelty, dehumanization of people."

"But they aren't chained, they aren't blindfolded, they can walk around. There wouldn't be any comparison as far as their treatment. They can see their captives."

New survey says to avoid Waterbury, New Britain

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget the 48 other states. If you're looking for good living, go Pacific Northwest, young man, and bring your friends and family with you.

Four of the nation's top eight places to live are in Washington state, while a fifth is next door to Oregon, according to the fourth annual Money magazine study of "The Best Places to Live."

But the Northeast dominates the bottom of the list. The final five were Waterbury, Conn., Pawtucket, R.I., New Britain, Conn., Fall River, Mass., and — at No. 300 — Allentown-Bethlehem, Pa.

Top of the list, A-No. 1, king of the hill, was Bremerton, Wash., population 180,000.

"This year's poll — done with help from a Portland, Ore., consulting firm — indicates West is best: the farthest east the top 10 goes is Columbia, Mo. It's not until Wheeling, W. Va., at No. 12 that the survey gets anywhere near the Atlantic."

"Is that right? A year ago they didn't know we existed. What a difference a year makes," said Bremerton Mayor Louis Menter, a native of the area across the Puget Sound from Seattle.

Mentor's not quite right, last year, Bremerton was ranked 179th out of the top 300. But the mayor has a ready, tongue-in-cheek explanation for the sudden surge: "They elected me mayor in November. Re-election's looking good."

Why Bremerton, you ask? "A pristine environment, plentiful jobs, low taxes, housing appreciation, arts and leisure activities galore — plus lower house prices and reduced workday stress," answers Money.

Bremerton's Washington neighbors fared pretty well in the poll. At No. 2 was last year's winner, Seattle, while Tacoma pulled in at No. 4 and Olympia hit No. 8. All this was — as you might imagine — quite pleasing to Washington Gov. Booth Gardner.

"It's not surprising that these cities are rated so high considering the degree of care their residents have for their neighborhoods and communities," he said.

Need further proof that things are relaxed in the Northwest? Get put on hold for the governor's office, and soothing music — like James Taylor's "You've Got a Friend" — plays on the other end.

The spacecraft's emergency systems allowed engineers to locate the spacecraft on Friday, more than 14 hours after they lost contact with it the first time. Eight hours later, they restored steady contact by sending Magellan a command to stop spinning and keep one of its antennas pointed at Earth.

Magellan's mission is to map up to 90 percent of Venus' surface using radar to peer through the planet's thick clouds, which prevent the use of optical cameras. The spacecraft went into orbit around Venus on Aug. 10 after a roundabout, 948-million-mile trip. It was launched from the shuttle Atlantis 15 months ago.

When Magellan's first Venus pictures were released Tuesday, Magellan project manager Tony Spear said that as far as engineers could tell, "the spacecraft is healthy," despite last week's malfunction.

He and other engineers said they still hadn't figured out the cause of the problem. But Spear had been optimistic enough to say he still planned to have Magellan start its Venus mapping mission the first week of September.

Jet Propulsion Laboratory is known for its ability to overcome problems with wayward spacecraft. After the twin Voyager probes were launched in 1977, one lost contact with Earth for eight days. The radio link was restored and the probes went on to explore the outer planets.

Spacecraft system engineer John Slonksi said one leading theory to explain last week's loss of contact with Magellan was that a cosmic ray or a high-energy particle from the sun caused a hiccup in its computer memory.

"We're not ruling out a software flaw or some hardware problem" or perhaps some unknown electrical fields surrounding Venus, Spear said.

He also said cosmic ray "hits" on spacecraft electronics can be expected to interfere with Magellan about once each year.

Magellan made its first pictures of Venus during a test conducted just before last week's malfunction.

As promised by NASA, Magellan's first pictures are 10 times more detailed than the best radar images of Venus made by two Soviet probes and a giant radio telescope in Puerto Rico. They show details as small as 400 feet across.

The pictures show "Venus is intensely fractured and faulted," with at least part of its terrain shaped by geological forces "seven times more violent than I imagined before," Magellan project scientist Steve Saunders said Tuesday.

The pictures cover a small portion of the planet near Hawaii-like volcanic highlands.

The pictures show plains covered by six- to 10-mile-wide lava flows that solidified and then were cracked by faults. Saunders said the flows resemble those in Hawaii or along the Columbia and Snake rivers in the Pacific Northwest.

Also visible are a couple of volcanic cinder cones, a 20-mile-wide meteorite crater and long, parallel sets of two- to three-mile-wide valleys and ridges that look like the basins and ranges of Utah and Nevada, Saunders said.

Ultimately, what counts is how he handles (the crisis) and what the results are. This we will all forget," said Teeter.

Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution says the media are giving a false impression of how the presidency works.

"It's a question of image versus reality," said Hess, a White House adviser in past administrations. "The reality is the presidency goes where the president is. ... Logistically, they are perfectly supplied wherever they are. And Kennedunkport is not exactly Nome, Alaska."

Norm Ornstein, a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute, said, "I do not think it's a bad idea to send indirectly to Saddam Hussein the message that if we're in a long war of nerves, Bush is not panicking. He's going about business as usual."

And Bush may be better off facing this crisis in the "psychologically mellow" surroundings of his summer home with wife and family rather than back in the White House "grumbling and puttering around alone," Ornstein said.

Republican pollster and White House adviser Robert Teeter said a poll that he and Democrat Peter Hain conducted for the Wall Street Journal and NBC found the public supporting Bush's decision to stay on vacation by a 53 percent to 39 percent margin. The same survey found overwhelming support for Bush's handling of the Gulf crisis: 72 to 16 percent.

Magellan contact lost again, Venus pictures released

By LEE SIEGEL

PASADENA, Calif. — NASA engineers today struggled to restore radio contact with Magellan after losing touch with the Venus-orbiting spacecraft for the second time in five days.

Space agency engineers' failure this morning to hear from Magellan after the link broke indicated the craft's computerized emergency systems didn't immediately activate to help re-establish communication with Earth, NASA said.

So the engineers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory repeatedly sent new computer commands toward Magellan's presumed position around Venus in an attempt to tell it to radio Earth, said NASA spokesman Bob MacMillin.

Contact was lost at 7:03 p.m. Tuesday while NASA was tracking Magellan with an antenna dish near Canberra, Australia, said laboratory spokesman Jim Doyle.

The latest blow to Magellan's $744 million mission to map Venus came Tuesday night, less than eight hours after the space agency released the craft's first snapshots of Venus.

The pictures revealed a remarkably violent landscape shaped by impact craters, quake faults, vast lava flows, and ridges and valleys like those in the western United States.

The loss of Magellan would be another major blow to NASA, which grounded the space shuttle fleet temporarily because of fuel leaks and found the Hubble Space Telescope was impaired by a flawed mirror.

The spacecraft's emergency systems allowed engineers to locate the spacecraft on Friday, more than 14 hours after they lost contact with it the first time. Eight hours later, they restored steady contact by sending Magellan a command to stop spinning and keep one of its antennas pointed at Earth.

Private club discrimination

To the Editor:

Discrimination practiced by private clubs is a topic of great interest once again, primarily because of the public outcry about the PGA Championship being held at an all-white golf club with an all-white membership. The issue of discrimination by private clubs here in Connecticut is complex both from a legal and from a societal standpoint.

As acting director of the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities, the agency charged with enforcing the state's anti-discrimination laws, I approach the issue of discrimination by private clubs here in Connecticut from a legal and from a societal standpoint.

State pols jockey hard

By BOB CONRAD

A game of musical chairs for top leadership jobs in the state House of Representatives next year has been under way among Republicans there since well before the boss, Bob Jackie of Stratford, landed on the party state last month as candidate for lieutenant governor in November.

It began last year when Jackie tipped off his interest in running for governor by showing more car with each succeeding haircut, getting away from the shaggy look, and giggling whenever anyone asked him about his political ambitions. Jackie is GOP floor leader in the House and stopper on the ladder of upward mobility as long as he's there.

Republicans didn't have to have a House, so to speak, fall on them to real-estate that if Jackie moved up and out, as he seems ready to do, a whole spring of wonderful things would happen, job-wise, in their chamber. So the conversation and the jockeying started.

Then U.S. Rep. John Rowland of Waterbury stuck himself into the gubernatorial picture and quickly became the consensus choice to head the ticket. Jackie would be his running mate as candidate for lieutenant governor.

But whatever happens to Rowland & Co. in the fall election, Jackie will be gone from the House. The lid will be off. And Republicans, with a "bench" of mostly-young legislators of star quality are all the more psyched because they believe their party can take control. The plan, among jobs, is that of Speaker of the House, probably the most powerful position in the Legislature.

Rep. Richard Bolden of Shelton really has the hot to be Speaker. Rep. William Wollberg of Farmington is mentioned too.

Bolden is so identified with Speaker speculation he's seriously included in state ticket talk this year. Wollberg was the Democratic gain of 13 seats would do it for the Republicans. The party lever is gone from voting machines, making the contest more individual than ever—a circumstance favoring the Republicans because of voter discontent with Democrats.

They see this as a "down" year for Democrats if voters take out their anger over higher taxes on the currently-ruling majority party's legislative candidates. So let the games begin, say Republicans.

Official notes

Former State Rep. Tony Miscocki of Torrington, a leader-longed Democrat for eleven terms until GOP Rep. George Aivon took the seat in 1984, is making a second attempt at a comeback. Gerald Reis has the endorsement of Democratic Gov. William O'Neill, who is retiring, won't be an available target. Around the Capitol, where politics is the official language, it's obvious that they already have.

Senior's request

To the Editor:

I've been a member of our local Senior Citizen Center since 1976, and happily have been able to go to lunch, take some day trips or participate in our "Spring Flower Sale" — always with enjoyment thanks to the assistance and gracious help of our directors. Our current director Jeanette Cave and her personnel.

Then a few years ago, I became a member of the Manchester Community College Older Adult Association. Here again, with Edna Schuetz and her gracious staff, I've enjoyed programs, luncheons, classes and again day trips.

My point is, we older adults — having completed our tasks at home and kids — now need free to have some fun. I believe, and rightly so, we deserve and certainly want, companionship of people, whether our age or younger.

Don't — please, look upon us, as a detriment we're lonely people, who strive to have companionship and love — the latter being of prime importance — just a hug or smile makes a lonely day a better one.

How difficult the embargo and assets problems can get is shown by two papyrus calls received by one international trade lawyer here within minutes of the presidential announcement.

"One came from a small independent oil refiner in Louisiana," the lawyer said. "He was due to take delivery that afternoon of a tanker of Iraqi crude that had been on the high seas for three weeks, and had been paid for the moment the ship embarked. Since the purchase had been made three weeks ago, and the oil was technically his, he wanted to know if he could take delivery. ## The politics of embargoes

WASHINGTON — "The moment I heard (President) Bush use the words 'freeze' and 'embargo,' I knew he had made a lot of lawyers rich — and caused a lot of vacations to be cancelled."

So says top Washington attorney Bruce Selton. Like many in the United States, he has been working around the clock since the Iraq-Kuwait trade embargo and asset-freeze were announced.

The purposes of the dual sanctions are very different: The Iraq embargo is aimed at punishing Saddam Hussein, economically isolating him to force his withdrawal from Kuwait. The freeze of Kuwaiti assets, however, is an attempt to "keep" that money from falling into Saddam's hands.

Implementing such a U.S. freeze is a difficult task that falls to the Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Asset Controls, whose 40-member staff has gotten little sleep since the president's announcement. There are no hard and fast rules, and each crisis is different, so past experience with freezes on Iran, South Africa and Panama are of little help.

How difficult the embargo and assets problems can get is shown by two papyrus calls received by one international trade lawyer here within minutes of the presidential announcement.

"One came from a small independent oil refiner in Louisiana," the lawyer said. "He was due to take delivery that afternoon of a tanker of Iraqi crude that had been on the high seas for three weeks, and had been paid for the moment the ship embarked. Since the purchase had been made three weeks ago, and the oil was technically his, he wanted to know if he could take delivery. presented by Iraq's military seizure of Kuwait. Unlike previous situations, the purpose of the Kuwaiti freeze is to preserve assets.

Also, says the Treasury sources, it is difficult to separate what is owned by the government of Kuwait from what is owned by members of the Kuwaiti royal family as individuals.

For instance, early on Aug. 3, Treasury ordered all assets of the New Kuwait branch of the National Bank of Kuwait frozen and all its interbank activities through the Federal Reserve stopped.

However, it turns out that, despite its name, the bank is not owned by the government of Kuwait, but rather by a number of individual Kuwaitis. Treasury had to reverse itself and order the bank's assets unfrozen.

To further complicate matters, Kuwait has many business ventures in the United States — office buildings, hotels and commercial establishments. Theoretically, all Kuwait's assets are now frozen, which would mean that these businesses could not meet their payrolls or pay regular trade creditors. They would have to simply close up shop.

However, the idea of the freeze is to preserve assets, not liquidate them. So Treasury made another modification. Kuwaiti-owned businesses in the United States can pay local bills and payrolls with funds on deposit here, but they can make no foreign transfers without specific permission.

Many members of the Kuwaiti royal family fled to Saudi Arabia in the early hours of the invasion. They now need money — a great deal of it — to maintain the lifestyles to which they are accustomed and to keep Kuwaiti embassies around the world in operation. So the Emir of Kuwait has asked that certain bank deposits held in Switzerland and London in the name of the government of Kuwait be unfrozen.

FDA lags in war on steroids

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — "Dan" was hooked on a drug that doesn't get much press. He borrowed $1,500 from the bank to support his habit. Deluded by the drug into thinking he was immortal, Dan had a friend videotape him while he drove his car into a tree at 40 miles an hour.

He survived the crash and was lucky enough to kick the drug — steroids. But there are millions more steroid users who ignore the dangers or fool themselves into thinking that muscle-building drugs can't be bad for their health.

But while the soldiers in the drug war focus on cocaine, they are ignoring the growing popularity of steroids among young people. The illegal use of steroids has grown to a $400 million-a-year industry.

A congressional committee, headed by Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., is about to release the findings of an investigation into how the federal government treats the steroid problem. The investigators' report, obtained by our associate Scott Steek, puts the Food and Drug Administration behind the eight where it has been on two major issues in recent years.

The FDA, not police or drug enforcement agencies, has the primary responsibility for regulating the steroids trade. But the agency has no one with the expertise or authority to investigate and crackdown on the increasingly sophisticated steroids business. FDA investigators aren't allowed to carry guns, work undercover or execute search warrants. That's why Biden wants the Drug Enforcement Administration to get involved in the war on steroids.

The FDA has limited powers and isn't doing much with those. The agency doesn't require legitimate steroid manufacturers to submit reports on the volume of business they do. It doesn't collect information on the amount of steroids prescribed by doctors for legitimate use. And it doesn't have anything but a guess about the amount of illegally produced steroids that slip into the black market.

"The old-timers — some of them are having a hard time finding any other work," said Darrell Horn, president of a drivers union local in Portland, Ore. "They're not going to go back to work under these conditions."

The bus line's 6,000 drivers walked out March 2 over a dispute in wages and job security. Drivers contend they only wanted to regain ground they lost after taking pay cuts over the past decade that dropped their salaries from $13,000 to $24,000.

BUSINESS

Firms braced for reserves; small companies hard hit

By MARIANN CAPRINO The Associated Press

Companies are jamming government phone lines to find out what benefits they must provide military reservists on their payrolls who may get the call to help face Iraq in the Persian Gulf.

Hardest hit would be operators of small businesses, who have little room to adjust the workforce if reservist employees are called to fill military support roles.

It can be brutal. It's all I've been thinking about," said Ted Thomas, a reservist who is a dentist in sole practice in Clinton, N.C. "I have no one to cover for me, and my patients would have to go elsewhere for treatment. It would almost be like starting over once I return."

Thomas and others like him may request exemptions if called. But likely to be in highest demand when the reserves are called up.

At the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Northport, N.Y., on Long Island, hospital officials are making plans to replace anyone called to duty. Administrators are making plans to replace anyone called to duty. Administrators are making plans to replace anyone called to duty.

President Bush will activate some reserves Wednesday, aides with the president in Kennebunkport, Maine, told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The reserves are made up of National Guard and Army Reserve units. The difference between them is largely technical, but both come under federal jurisdiction if they are called by the president.

The National Guard has a dual role. Guard troops serve as a state militia under the command of governors unless they are federalized in national emergencies.

In both cases, reservists attend regular meetings in their home communities and spend two weeks on active duty at summer camp. Most guard units are trained for combat. Reserve units general serve in support roles as supply, maintenance, communications and medical.

Two-thirds of the Army's medical capacity and three-fourths its medical evacuation capacity are provided by reservists.

Medical personnel and experts in communications and electronics are likely to be in highest demand when the reserves are called up.

DELI DEAL — Debbie's Deli at Strano's Bakery on 255 Broad Street in Manchester (behind Sherwin Williams) has recently been purchased by Drew Driscoll. The deli is now open for breakfasts seven days a week, and offers both standard deli fare and baked goods. Shown here, from left, are Elaine Alling, Mary Griffith and Betty Perry, all of Manchester, having a snack and coffee at the deli. Driscoll says he is donating his day-old baked goods to Manchester's Samaritan Shelter for the homeless.

In Brief . . .

- Donald Trump escaped financial collapse when casino regulators approved his bailout plan, but he still must convince them his gaming halls are solvent or risk losing his licenses.
- The state Casino Control Commission voted 5-0 on Tuesday to approve Trump's plan to put up his three Atlantic City casinos as collateral for a $65 million loan he received in June to make a $43 million bond payment.
- National Semiconductor will close some facilities in Washington and Arizona and reduce its worldwide work force by about 2,000 over the next few months.
- The company said Tuesday that it will close the fabrication line in its plant in Puyallup, Wash., as well as its military-product assembly and testing facility in Tucson, Ariz. National Semiconductor expects to incur a one-time charge of about $140 million in its first fiscal quarter ending Aug. 26.
- Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela will participate, although the location was not immediately known, the sources said Tuesday. Saudi Arabia and Venezuela had failed Monday to convince a majority of OPEC members to agree to a conference on the Gulf crisis.
- Wang Laboratories Inc.,
- Stock prices fell sharply in heavy trading Tuesday as investors continued to worry about the prospect of war in the Mideast. The Dow Jones average fell 52.48 to close at 2,603.96, as declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by nearly 6-1.
- Bond prices tumbled and then rebounded to finish nearly unchanged Tuesday. The dollar finished mixed after falling overseas Tuesday, while gold prices slipped.
- On other markets, petroleum futures were mostly higher; orange juice was sharply lower; grain and soybeans were mostly lower; and cattle was mostly higher while pork declined.

Striking Greyhound drivers determined to stick it out

By KAREN BALL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As the Greyhound strike grinds well into its sixth month with no resolution in sight, drivers are using odd jobs, their savings or unemployment checks to scrape by.

got to go and they missed school and did not even have to worry about the test."

Canon said Julia is lucky - she has greater freedom of movement. The Red Army still occupies Estonia and the people live from one day to the next never knowing when it will end or who will have the upper hand.

Julia will be attending school in Litchfield, but she will spend most weekends in Bolton with the Cannon family.

"I am a little homesick - I have never been so far from home," said Julia, a little teary-eyed. "The United States is unlike my country. I have only been to grocery-type stores for far - but in Estonia the stores are nearby here," said Julia. "I was surprised to see all the items they have - yesterday I had my very first car of corn and I love it."

According to Julia, teen-agers are pretty much the same everywhere. In Estonia they attend school from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., five days a week, from September to June. "We enjoy sports, music and blue jeans. We even have hamburger - but not McDonald's, that is only in Moscow," said Julia.

week I called a couple for the church and asked them to fund again," she said.

Grady attributed the rise to several factors, primarily the slumping economy, which has increased the jobless rate.

Unemployment was measured in June at 15.1 percent statewide, according to the Connecticut Department of Labor. That is up 1.5 percent from the previous year.

Tree

They said Bates, in fact, did own the large maple on Oak.

The town took an official stance on the matter. It would not and does not intervene in matters of a boundary dispute, according to Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Mara. If the neighbors disagreed, they would have to settle it in court.

Health inspector Ferris, meanwhile, decided the best thing to do was to issue a similar tree order to Robert Walsh, the landlord who owns the property next to Bates.

And then the weekend came. And with it came the rain and the wind and the creaking of the large maple on Oak.

On Monday, Bill Cole, who lives at 68 Oak, reported that the tree was still standing, but probably not for long.

"It's getting windy today buddy," Cole said. "Have you been outside?"

Cole was the first to complain about the large maple on Oak. He called a host of town officials last month after a limb from another tree caused extensive body damage to his 1989 Chevrolet Spectrum.

His new concern was the safety of his daughter, who slept each night in a bedroom in the shadow of the large maple on Oak.

Cole told the Herald Monday also that the tree was supposed to come down that afternoon. His landlord, Walsh, who may or may not own the tree had promised to have it removed.

It didn't happen Monday, but on Tuesday, down came the large maple on Oak.

Census

Management figure from last year that estimated the town's population at 9,200.

In Andover, census officials put the population at 2,463, a 9.9 percent increase over the 1980 mark of 2,144. Figures for Bolton show a 15.2 percent increase in population over the 1980 count. The new tally says the town now has 4,553 residents, up from 3,951 in 1980.

Julia has learned to speak English, German, Russian and Estonian in school. She attends the High School of Humanities and is one of the top students in her class.

When school lets out for the summer, Julia spends her time on Saaremaa - the biggest island off the west coast in the Baltic Sea. "I love the beach and water to swim, but...the Russians do not allow us to own boats," she said regretfully.

Housing in Estonia is also government-controlled and people are not allowed to be land owners. Julia describes her section of the city as a Soviet style "Stone City" - tall grey apartment buildings that are not very roomy.

"Next door to me there is a father, mother, and three children in a one-room apartment. My neighbors are also mostly Russians," she said. People have to wait years for housing sometimes because living space is extremely difficult to obtain, she explained.

Julia is not sure if she will become a doctor like her father, or continue studying drama, so she can become an actress. "In Estonia, girls can pretty much become what they want. We do not have problems with obtaining goals like some of the other countries; in Estonia most of the doctors are women," she said.

"I am not here just to learn English and about American life - we need people (in Estonia) who are educated, know the world and can go back to teach the others," said Julia.

Ivi Cannon is vice chairman of the Estonian-Latvian-Lithuanian Alliance of Connecticut, the only Baltic organization in Connecticut.

"Our chief aim is to let people know about Estonia and enlighten them on the issues," said Cannon.

Ivi and Julia will attend a function in Andover August 23 put on by the alliance to observe the date Stalin and Hitler made a pact that gave the Baltic nation to the Soviets.

Iraq

At the United Nations, the five permanent members of the Security Council were to discuss a proposal to enforce its embargo on Iraq by military means. U.S. and other warships already have been shadowing Iraqi vessels.

One of those vessels, an Iraqi tanker that defied warning shots from an American warship, reached Yemen's port of Aden today and dropped anchor near two other Iraqi ships already docked there.

Baghdad has expressed willingness to negotiate with the United States, but White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater dismissed the offer Tuesday as the "same old liamny from Iraq." He said no talks are possible until Iraq withdraws its tens of thousands of troops from Kuwait.

Another newspaper, the Baghdad Observer, warned that Iraq would take war "into the cities of attacking nations."

"One should not expect the Iraqis to sit idle when their towns and population centers are being bombed by the U.S. planes and shells," it said.

U.S. forces in the gulf, meanwhile, continued to grow.

The U.S. Navy's carrier Saratoga and the guided missile cruisers Biddle and Philippine Sea sailed through Egypt's Suez Canal today en route from the Mediterranean to the gulf region, said canal officials.

The British Foreign Office said that 21 Britons are known to be held at Iraqi military installations.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd denounced Saddam today as a "destructive loser" whose hostage-taking reflects his isolation in the region and the world.

U.S. officials said the Bush administration is making contingency plans to cut back the U.S. Embassy staff in Kuwait, but said the embassy will not shut its doors despite Iraqi demands that foreign missions in Kuwait City be transferred to Baghdad by Friday.

Iraq's reported willingness to release European Community citizens from Kuwait could be an attempt to split the Western countries, Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen cautioned today.

That was underscored by an Iraqi newspaper's warning today to Europe and Japan, telling them their own interests would be harmed if they "walk in the steps of Washington."

The state-run Al-Gomhuriya warned France, Italy, West Germany and Japan not to participate in what it termed "American occupation of the gulf oilfields."

The state-run Al-Gomhuriya warned France, Italy, West Germany and Japan not to participate in what it termed "American occupation of the gulf oilfields."

Also today, defense ministers from the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council met in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, to discuss a unified defense strategy to complement the U.S.-led military buildup in Saudi Arabia.

Abdullah Bishara, the general secretary of the gulf alliance, told Kuwaiti television before the meeting that the GCC has decided to muster the troops of the Peninsula Shield rapid deployment force. The force of up to 10,000 troops from six gulf nations has been based for the last two years at the northeastern Saudi base of Hafir Al-Baten.

Arab League foreign ministers were to meet in emergency session on Monday, but an Egyptian Foreign Ministry official said the gathering had been rescheduled for Aug. 30.

He did not say how many nations had agreed to attend.

With the sign of truce in the news, the Tokyo stock market tumbled today, following a rout on Wall Street Tuesday. But prices were up at midday in London.

In the latest diplomatic initiatives, Saudi Prince Bandar bin Sultan arrived in the Soviet Union, the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Also, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak conferred today with Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama on the gulf crisis, Egyptian's Middle East News Agency said.

The British Foreign Office said that 21 Britons are known to be held at Iraqi military installations.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd denounced Saddam today as a "destructive loser" whose hostage-taking reflects his isolation in the region and the world.

U.S. officials said the Bush administration is making contingency plans to cut back the U.S. Embassy staff in Kuwait, but said the embassy will not shut its doors despite Iraqi demands that foreign missions in Kuwait City be transferred to Baghdad by Friday.

Iraq's reported willingness to release European Community citizens from Kuwait could be an attempt to split the Western countries, Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen cautioned today.

That was underscored by an Iraqi newspaper's warning today to Europe and Japan, telling them their own interests would be harmed if they "walk in the steps of Washington."

The state-run Al-Gomhuriya warned France, Italy, West Germany and Japan not to participate in what it termed "American occupation of the gulf oilfields."

Another newspaper, the Baghdad Observer, warned that Iraq would take war "into the cities of attacking nations."

"One should not expect the Iraqis to sit idle when their towns and population centers are being bombed by the U.S. planes and shells," it said.

U.S. forces in the gulf, meanwhile, continued to grow.

The U.S. Navy's carrier Saratoga and the guided missile cruisers Biddle and Philippine Sea sailed through Egypt's Suez Canal today en route from the Mediterranean to the gulf region, said canal officials.

Manchester schools ready for opening day next week

By BRIAN M. TROTTER
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER - On Tuesday morning, August 28, school doors will once again swing open for the start of the school year. More than 6,800 students are expected to hit the books in Manchester's 13 schools, but not all of them will be in the same place they were last year.

Nathan Hale School will have an influx of 70 new students from all around the town as the new Special Focus program gets underway. The program, which will include students in grades K-6, involves extensive use of computers for all students and includes instruction in a foreign language.

With the Special Focus program moving in to Nathan Hale, special education classes and the Head Start program had to be moved out because of a lack of classroom space. Head Start has been moved to Wadell School and special education programs have been shifted to Buckley School.

Enrollments at the elementary level are on their way up due to a phenomenon called the "echo of the baby boom." With baby boomers starting to have children of their own, there is an increased demand for classroom space. That demand has led to the hiring of two teachers at both Robertson and Highland Park schools.

Conversely, seven teaching positions have been cut from the secondary schools due to declining enrollments and budgetary constraints. The cuts include four positions at the high school, two positions at Lincoln Junior High and one job at Bennett Junior High.

There will be some new additions to the curriculum at both the primary and secondary school levels. Elementary school students will be using a new comprehensive health curriculum. Students in grades K-6 will receive about 35 lectures a year on topics including nutrition, drugs, sex and first aid.

For the first time, all sixth graders in the school system will be participating in the D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program. Last year only half of the students were involved in the course, which brings local police officers to the schools to talk about drugs. The program also utilizes a multi-media course called "Here's Looking at You Kid 2000" to teach its lessons.

This year, the town provided enough funding for two officers so that all of the sixth graders could be reached by the program. All other students will receive at least 20 hours of drug education, primarily from their teachers.

At the high school level, a new drug education course is being implemented this year. The new, one-quarter-long course will eventually be required of all students in the school.

Children get fingerprinted to help ease parents' minds

By BRIAN M. TROTTER
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER - More than 275 children got to try a different kind of finger painting yesterday at the Buckland Mall.

The children were taking part in Child Identification Day sponsored by the Manchester police department, Sears Roebuck and Allstate Insurance. During the day, children were fingerprinted by an officer from the Manchester Police Department and the parents were given the prints to keep.

Anne Tedford, an agent with Allstate and the organizer of the program, said there was a constant stream of children throughout the day. "This is the first program we've had like this," she

Last curbside newsstand threatened by parking lot

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — In the shadow of the city's train station, another urban tradition is facing extinction — Hartford's last curbside newsstand. For nearly five decades, the little newsstand now called Metro News has flourished in a cramped storefront on Union Place. But the owner of the one-story building that houses the stand plans to demolish the building to make room for a parking lot.

When the wrecking ball comes, it will destroy a gritty landmark that still opens every day at 4 a.m. to a steady stream of customers, including regulars who have been stopping by for Boston and New York newspapers for decades.

"I don't think it's fair," said Emil Levy, who hawks newspapers to passing motorists six mornings a week from the sidewalk in front of the newsstand.

"The place has been here for 49 years," he said. "How many cars can you fit here? Two. They're going to tear this place down for two cars. And this is a landmark. That's why this city is going to the dogs."

Reading disabilities found equally in boys and girls

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Boys and girls suffer reading disabilities in roughly equal numbers, but more boys than girls typically end up in special education classes because teachers are "putting the wrong labels on the wrong individuals," according to a new study.

The study found the identification of reading disability is apparently being skewed by the long-held and mistaken belief that overactivity and behavioral difficulties go hand in hand with the learning problem.

The result has been that some boys — who typically are more rambunctious than girls — are wrongly being labeled reading disabled and getting special instruction they don't need, according to Dr. Sally E. Shaywitz, an associate professor of pediatrics at the Yale School of Medicine.

At the same time, some girls — and some boys — are not receiving the help they need because they show no behavioral problems, Shaywitz said.

Somers violence curb plan may be thwarted by lawsuit

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — A plan to increase the number of inmates living two to a cell at the state's maximum-security prison was defended by the warden as a way to decrease violence at the prison.

But an attorney for inmates challenging the plan said Tuesday it would only lead to more tensions. The inmates are seeking a temporary restraining order that would stop the warden of the Connecticut Correctional Institution from adding beds and increasing the use of double celling.

A hearing on the request began Tuesday in U.S. District Court and was to continue today.

To stem violence at the prison, which now houses 1,399 inmates, the state Correction Department is proposing to eliminate three dormitories and expand the number of beds for inmates who get into trouble and need to be segregated from the rest of the population.

Warden Lawrence Tiglihan said 187 beds would be added as part of the reorganization, but he testified there is no plan to expand the prison population beyond the current maximum of 1,436.

"Every time they've had empty space they've filled it," said New Haven attorney Michael Sheehan, who scoffed at the warden's claim. Sheehan recently volunteered to take over the inmates' case after three other attorneys involved in a nearly decade-old lawsuit over prison overcrowding withdrew.

Only inmates who are in protective custody or undergoing orientation are now doubled up in cells. Sheehan said they number about 300.

The state is proposing to expand the use of double celling to inmates placed in segregation for punishment and members of the general prison population.

Tiglihan said he warned inmates twice since assuming his post last October that he would change their accommodations if the amount of violence did not decrease. The second warning came after a riot in the recreation yard July 3.

Since the beginning of the year, several guards have been injured by inmates with knives, and more than six inmates have stabbed one another. Much of the violence has taken place in the dormitory.

Tiglihan, the only witness to take the stand Tuesday, warned that if he were prevented from carrying out his plans, inmates would get the message "they are at liberty to do as they please."

Correction Commissioner Larry R. Meachum declined to say after the court hearing how many inmates the department intended to double cell at Somers.

open 24 hours a day. Newspapers arrived by train from New York and Boston, and newsmen staked out street corners to hawk The Hartford Times, the city's now defunct afternoon newspaper. The stand's customers included Alton Smith, then a young postal worker up the street.

"Everybody in the post office bought their paper here," Smith recalled this week. Now 73, he still stops by on most days to buy The Hartford Courant and The New York Daily News. "This place is a landmark," he said.

Another regular is Elgiso Velez, a customer for 25 years. He comes by every day from East Hartford to buy The Hartford Courant. The New York Daily News, and a Spanish-language paper, Vocero.

"I don't even have to get out of my car," he said.

Kevin Sullivan, who has owned the newsstand for the last year-and-a-half, said he is searching for another storefront in the city, but isn't sure he can afford the move.

"I can't go for the big rents. A lot of these guys want $2,000, $2,500 a month. Sullivan said. "I'll come up with something. I just don't know if I'll get a good location. And it has to be curbside."

GOING SOON — Emil Levy works in front of Metro News where he works. Hartford's last curbside newsstand is soon to be demolished to make way for a parking lot. The newsstand has been in business 49 years.

Woman killed by 11-year-old

STAMFORD (AP) — A 58-year-old Stamford woman was killed after being struck and pinned under a car by an 11-year-old girl, police said.

Janet L. Frederick died at St. Joseph's Hospital on Monday, three hours after she was hit in the driveway of her home, said Deputy Police Chief Walter Young.

Young said the 11-year-old girl was a relative of Frederick's, but would not identify the child because of her age. He said another 11-year-old girl was also in the car at the time.

"Our concern at this point is the emotional well-being of both girls," Young said.

No details will be released until an investigation is complete, but the car was running, he said.

Young said a preliminary investigation found there were no mechanical flaws in the car. Neither girl was held by police, he said.

Chamber discourages office complex

STAMFORD (AP) — Lack of support by the business community for a proposed downtown office and housing complex may be the first sign that enthusiasm is waning for more construction in this developing city.

Earlier this month, the board of the Stamford Chamber of Commerce voted to discourage a plan for a million-square-foot office and housing complex just south of downtown.

"We all want improvement down there," said John P. Condon, vice president of the chamber, referring to Stamford's blighted South End. "But you'd end up with a density bigger than the downtown core itself... It would really hurt Stamford."

Warwick Malkin Inc. has proposed building the huge office complex on seven acres near the Stamford railroad station. The Zoning Board is considering a proposal to rezone 27 acres in the area for commercial development.

The complex would include a 250-foot office tower — the second tallest building in Stamford — a 175-foot office tower, 400 townhouse units, retail shops, 96 commuter parking spaces and a pedestrian plaza.

Warwick Malkin's proposal is supported by the Stamford-based Southwestern Area Commerce and Industry Association and Metro-North Commuter Railroad. South End residents have also backed the plan, saying it would bring renewed life to an area where a lack of investment has left homes dilapidated and industrial buildings empty.

Probaton given for animal cruelty

ENFIELD (AP) — A woman accused of animal cruelty after one of her horses starved to death has been placed on probation for two years.

Sheena Neumann, 38, was granted accelerated rehabilitation, a special probation program that would lead to the erasure of the charge from court records if successfully completed, according to a Superior Court clerk.

Under conditions of the probation, Neumann can own only one dog and must keep the Connecticut Humane Society informed of its location, the clerk said.

Neumann was also ordered to pay the Humane Society $250 at the court proceeding last week.

In Marcus, Neumann was charged with cruelty to animals after one of her horses, left without food and water, was found dead in a tobacco barn. Four other horses were apparently starving and emaciated, and two others were found to be suffering from neglect, officials said.

Special session on energy

HARTFORD (AP) — State Sen. Gary A. Hale, co-chairman of the General Assembly's Energy Committee, has called for a special legislative session to respond to recent oil price increases and make sure funding is available for the state's winter heating assistance program for the needy.

The committee held a second hearing Tuesday to hear from oil companies on recent price increases attributed to facilities in the Middle East.

"The oil companies have skillfully avoided giving the answers we need," Hale said after the hearing.

Thoughts

Wednesday's child
"Wednesday's Child is full of cheer" — Well, we're halfway through the week, over the hump, counting down to the weekend (already). We have started out badly, but that report's been revised, the children are behaving better, and the folks in the restaurant today seemed especially generous with their tips, and so on!

God is good. He gives us a second (and sometimes third and fourth) chance to make amends, begin again and take a deep breath as we go through our daily routine.

Don't forget. Whatever happens to us has a great affect on those around us — our family, our friends, even strangers who we meet and perceive our attitudes as normal. Sometimes they aren't, and I am sure I wouldn't want anyone to think that I'm a grocer on that one (I) occasion when I am!

Weather

Cloudy, cool

The weather tonight in the greater Manchester area: partly cloudy, low 55 to 60. Northeast wind less than 10 mph. Thursday, considerable cloudiness and continuing cool. High in the middle 70s. Outlook for Friday, Cloudy, High 75 to 80. High pressure has a hold over northern New England and will move little over the next two days. A frontal system over the mid-Atlantic states extends into a weak low over Kentucky early this morning. This system will remain nearly stationary today and tonight but should begin to drift slowly northeast on Thursday.

Today's weather picture was drawn by Ben Pinkin, a fifth-grader at Keeney Street School.

Police Roundup

Man arrested for setting fire

MANCHESTER — A man was arrested Monday in connection with a fire that was lit in the basement of an apartment complex on Eldridge Street last month.

John Belch, 29, of 27 Main St., Vernon, formerly of 103 Eldridge St., was held on a $15,000 bond before his scheduled appearance in Manchester Superior Court on Tuesday, police said.

Belch voluntarily came to the Manchester Police Department Monday when he found out there was a warrant out for his arrest. He was charged with reckless burning, making a false statement and reckless endangerment, the first-degree police said.

Belch's trial is set to be continued to Aug. 29. He was released yesterday on a $500 bond, court officials said.

On July 21, police and fire officials were called to the multi-family dwelling at Eldridge St. in response to a fire that had been started in the cellar of the building, police records said. The fire, which was ruled by Deputy Fire Marshal Rudy Kissman to have been started by an unnatural origin, was quickly doused, and no damage to the building occurred, reports said.

Belch, who was living two floors up from the basement at the time, said he had discovered the fire and then called the police. Belch said he was sitting on his porch with his niece when he smelled smoke and went to the basement, police said.

But after investigation, police reached the conclusion that it was Belch who started the fire after all, police said.

According to police, Belch had just had an argument with the building landlord over the use of his security deposit to pay the rent, and then had told a neighbor, "If I have any problems with this place, I'll just blow it up."

PIZZA the thick and thin of it

Clockwise from top: Country Deep-Dish Pizza, Four Seasons Pizza, Eggplant and Cheese Calzone.

Americans love pizza! We have adopted this Italian dish with passion and gusto, eating it at all hours in roadside pizzerias and uptown cafes, and by carrying it home piping hot in the beloved flat cardboard box.

As easy as it is to buy pizza, the truth is, it's just as easy and definitely more fun to make your own pizza at home. A pizza freshly baked and hot from the oven has no equal. All you need are three basics: a crisp crust, flavorful spaghetti sauce and premium-quality cheese. Add some traditional toppings such as mushrooms, ripe olives and pepperoni slices, or be innovative with artichoke hearts and prosciutto. Whatever the topping, you will end up with a delicious and satisfying meal the whole family can enjoy.

Making pizza at home is a snap when you start your dough with Fleischmann's Yeast. Using an easy one-rise method, the dough can be prepared and shaped in close to 30 minutes. No need to fuss over a sauce either when you prepare your pizza with flavorful and convenient Prego spaghetti sauce. Its zesty, homemade taste will enhance every ingredient. And choosing one or more of the Italian cheeses—Parmesan, Asiago, Romano, Provolone, or Mozzarella—produced by expert cheesemakers in Wisconsin, America's Dairyland, will produce a pizza guaranteed to be a winner.

Follow the Master Pizza Dough recipe outlined here and choose a pizza to suit your mood or appetite. You'll find recipes for the familiar round pie as well as variations for a calzone and country-style deep-dish pizza. Perfect for a party, the Four Seasons Pizza features an elegant combination of artichoke hearts, ripe olives, prosciutto, crunchy walnuts, thick spaghetti sauce, mushrooms and Mozzarella cheese. There's a taste for every season. For a heartier meal, try Country Deep-Dish Pizza. Its home-style filling combines crumbled bacon, sweet onions, flavorful spaghetti sauce and two cheeses. An easy no-knead batter dough flavored with rosemary provides the delectable crust.

Here's a new twist on the classic pizza: a calzone. This pizza-style turnover features a hearty filling of tangy feta cheese, eggplant and spaghetti sauce enclosed in a crisp pocket of dough. Serve hot from the oven or make ahead, freeze and reheat for a fast week-night supper.

Cheese lovers will adore a Four-Cheese Pizza. The sharp, bold flavor of aged Wisconsin Cheddar and Parmesan cheeses, two of over 200 varieties made in America's leading cheese-producing state, contrasts happily with mild Mozzarella and tangy Fontinella. A hint of garlic and zesty red pepper flakes rounds out the flavor sensation.

Just try any of these pizzas at home, and you'll think twice about ordering the take-out variety. Buono Appetito!

Master Pizza Dough

Makes dough for 2 pizzas

- 5 3/4 to 6 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 package Fleischmann's RapidRise or Active Dry Yeast
- 2 cups water
- 1/4 cup olive oil or vegetable oil

In large bowl combine 2 cups flour, salt and yeast. In small saucepan heat water and olive oil to 125 to 130°F. Add to dry ingredients; beat 2 minutes with electric mixer at medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Beat 2 minutes at high speed, scraping bowl occasionally. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, 4 to 6 minutes. Cover; let rest 10 minutes (20 minutes for Active Dry Yeast). Divide in half; shape and bake half according to selected recipe. Freeze remaining half.

*To freeze pizza dough: Wrap airtight in double thickness of plastic wrap or aluminum foil. Freeze up to 2 months. Thaw at room temperature or in refrigerator. Use as directed in selected recipe.

Pizza Perfect Tips

- When making a large pizza, put less topping in the center so that the pizza cooks evenly and the crust becomes crisp.
- Sprinkle baking pan with cornmeal to give crust added texture and crispness. After baking, transfer pizza to a wire rack to retain a crisp crust.
- One easy way to cut thin-crust pizza is to use kitchen scissors. You get neat slices and pans aren't scratched by a pizza cutter or knife. Allow pizza to cool briefly before cutting.
- For more tips on making pizza, call Fleischmann's Yeast Toll-free Bakers' Hotline (1-800-227-6202), Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Eastern Time.
- For a free pizza leaflet, contact Prego, Consumer Relations, Campbell Soup Company. Call toll free (1-800-257-8443), Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Eastern Time. Or write to: Prego Pizza Leaflet, P.O. Box 964, Bensalem, PA 19020.
- For additional pizza recipes using Wisconsin cheese, write to: Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board, 4337 West Beltline Hwy., Madison, WI 53711

Four Seasons Pizza

Makes one 14-inch pizza

- Half of prepared Master Pizza Dough
- 1 1/2 cups shredded Wisconsin Fontinella cheese (6 ounces)
  - 1 1/2 cups Prego Regular or Extra Chunky spaghetti sauce
  - 2 ounces thinly sliced prosciutto or ham, cut into thin strips
  - 1 jar (6 ounces) marinated artichoke hearts, drained, cut into thin wedges
  - 1 cup sliced mushrooms
  - 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
  - 2 tablespoons olive oil
  - Grated Wisconsin Parmesan cheese, optional

Prepare pizza dough (see Master Pizza Dough recipe). Spread dough evenly in greased 14-inch pizza pan. Sprinkle 1 cup Fontinella cheese evenly over dough. Cover with spaghetti sauce. Place remaining Fontinella cheese in center to form a 2- to 3-inch circle. Arrange prosciutto in a ring around cheese. Arrange artichokes and olives in another ring. Arrange mushrooms in a ring around edge of crust. Top with walnuts. Lightly brush top with olive oil. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, if desired. Bake at 425°F for 20 to 25 minutes or until crust is crisp and lightly browned. Cut into 8 wedges.

Eggplant And Cheese Calzone

Makes 8 calzones

- Half of prepared Master Pizza Dough
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
  - 1/4 cup olive oil
  - 1 medium eggplant, cut into 1/2-inch cubes (about 1 pound)
  - 1 jar (15 1/4 ounces) Prego Regular or Extra Chunky spaghetti sauce
  - 2 cups shredded Wisconsin Mozzarella cheese (8 ounces)
  - 1 cup crumbled Wisconsin Feta cheese (4 ounces)
  - 1 cup sliced pitted ripe olives

Prepare pizza dough (see Master Pizza Dough recipe). In large skillet cook onion in hot oil over low heat until soft but not brown. Add eggplant; continue to cook, stirring occasionally, for 15 minutes or until eggplant is soft. Stir in spaghetti sauce. Cook about 5 minutes to blend flavors; cool. Add Mozzarella and Feta cheeses and olives to sauce; set aside.

Punch dough down. Divide into 8 equal pieces. Roll each piece into 7-inch circle. Place about 1/2 cup filling on 1/2 of each circle. Fold dough over filling; pinch seam or press with tines of fork to seal. Place calzones on oiled baking sheets. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 30 minutes. Bake at 400°F for 25 minutes or until crust is lightly browned. Serve warm.

Four-Cheese Pizza

Makes one 14-inch pizza

- Half of prepared Master Pizza Dough
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
  - 3 cloves garlic, thinly sliced
  - 1 cup shredded aged Wisconsin Cheddar cheese (4 ounces)
  - 1/2 cup each shredded Wisconsin Mozzarella and Fontinella cheeses (4 ounces total)
  - 1/4 cup grated Wisconsin Parmesan or Asiago cheese (3/4 ounce)
  - 1/2 teaspoon Italian herbs
  - 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes

Prepare pizza dough (see Master Pizza Dough recipe). Spread dough evenly in greased 14-inch pizza pan. Brush with oil and sprinkle with garlic. Distribute cheeses, herbs and pepper flakes evenly over crust. Bake at 425°F for 20 minutes or until crust is crisp and lightly browned. Cut into 8 wedges.

Country Deep-Dish Pizza

Makes one 9-inch deep-dish pizza

- Filling:
- 1 pound onions, sliced
  - 2 tablespoons olive oil
  - 3/4 cup crumbled crisp bacon (about 1/2 pound uncooked)*
  - 1 egg
  - Black pepper, to taste
  - 2 cups shredded Wisconsin Mozzarella and/or Provolone cheese (8 ounces)
  - 1 cup Prego Regular or Extra Chunky spaghetti sauce
  - 1/4 cup grated Wisconsin Parmesan or Asiago cheese (3/4 ounce)
- Dough:
- 2 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
  - 1 package Fleischmann's Rapid-Rise or Active Dry Yeast
  - 1 teaspoon rosemary leaves
  - 1 cup very warm water (125 to 130°F)
  - 2 tablespoons olive oil
  - 1 egg, at room temperature
- For filling, cook onions in oil in large skillet over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until golden, 10 to 15 minutes; cool. Stir in bacon, egg and pepper; reserve.
- *NOTE: To cook bacon in microwave, arrange bacon slices on 3 layers of paper towels and cover with another towel. Cook bacon on HIGH for 5 to 6 minutes, or until crisp.
- Prepare dough while onions cool: Combine 1 cup flour, salt, yeast and rosemary in large bowl. Add very warm water and oil. Beat 2 minutes at low speed with electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add egg and 1/2 cup flour; beat 2 minutes at high speed. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make stiff batter. Cover; let rest 10 minutes (20 minutes for Active Dry Yeast); stir batter down. With back of large spoon or greased hands, spread batter in bottom and up sides of greased 9-inch springform pan. Sprinkle Mozzarella cheese over dough. Top with onion mixture. Spread spaghetti sauce over top. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm, draft-free place 20 minutes.
- Bake at 400°F for 40 minutes. Remove sides of pan. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and return to oven 10 more minutes, or until golden. Cool on base of pan on wire rack 15 minutes. Cut into 6 wedges.

CAMPFIRE BEANS
Campfire beans

2 slices bacon, cut up
1 onion, chopped
1/2 lb. cooked sausage, cut into pieces
1 can (14 1/2 oz.) kidney beans, drained
1 Tbsp. brown sugar
2-3 tsp. Dijon mustard

In large skillet, cook bacon with onion until browned. Add sausage, steamed tomatoes, beans, brown sugar and mustard. Cook over medium heat 25 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sausage skewers are summer fun

NEW YORK (AP) — Shrimp and sausage skewers are a natural for a summertime barbecue or a do-it-yourself dinner party. Let your guests put together their own combinations.

For the white sausage, try precooked backwash breakfast or other mild veal sausages. For the red sausage, try precooked Kielbasa, Louisiana hot links, smoked bratwurst or andouille.

You can make the Red Pepper Coulis up to 24 hours in advance. Store in the refrigerator and serve warm. There will be enough left over for another meal.

Red and white sausage and shrimp skewers with red pepper coulis:

For the skewers:
2 green bell peppers, cut into 1-inch chunks
2 medium red onions, cut into 1-inch chunks
1 pound precooked red sausage, cut into 1 1/2-inch rounds
1 pound precooked white sausage, cut into 1 1/2-inch rounds
1 pound raw large shrimp (16-20) Skewer ingredients in following order: bell pepper, onion, red sausage (push skewer through casing side of the sausage so the edges are parallel with the skewer), onion, bell pepper, shrimp, bell pepper, onion, white sausage, onion and bell pepper. Grill over medium hot coals for 3 to 4 minutes per side. Serve with grilled squash and dollops of Red Pepper Coulis. Makes 8 servings.

For the Red Pepper Coulis:
4 tablespoons olive oil
4 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
1 onion, chopped
2 red bell peppers, chopped
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 teaspoon dried basil or 1/4 cup chopped fresh basil
1-3/4 cup chopped sun-dried tomatoes packed in oil, drained
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar or red-wine vinegar
In heavy skillet, heat olive oil. Add garlic, onion, peppers, wine, basil and sautéed tomatoes. Cover and cook over medium heat, stirring from time to time, for about 10 minutes, or until peppers are soft. Add vinegar and coarsely puree in food processor or blender. Makes 2 cups.

Frozen yogurt can't replace ice cream

By BONNIE TANDY LEBLANG and CAROLYN WYMAN

Bonnie Tandy Leblang is a registered dietitian. Carolyn Wyman is a junk food fanatic. Each week, they critique new food items.

Breyer's Lowfat Frozen Yogurt. Vanilla, chocolate, black cherry, strawberry, strawberry-banana, red raspberry and peach. $3.69 to $4.29 per half-gallon container.

BONNIE: Breyer's frozen yogurt is a premium product, made without vegetable gums or stabilizers. Instead, Breyer's adds pectin and egg yolks to keep the yogurt smooth and free from ice crystals.

Pectin is a thickener, naturally found in fruits. Since Breyer's adds just a tad of egg yolks, each half-cup serving contains only 10 milligrams of cholesterol (15 in the vanilla).

Since the National Cholesterol Education Program recommends no more than 300 milligrams per day, a serving of this yogurt could fit into almost any cholesterol-restricted diet. Moreover, each serving contains only 20 calories and 1 gram of fat. By comparison, a similar size serving of premium ice cream could contain as much as 265 calories and 17 grams of fat.

Most other frozen yogurts in the supermarket contain gums and thickeners and have more fat. For instance, Yoplait has 4 grams of fat and the same calories for a half-cup serving. That's why I can give this product my highest recommendation.

CAROLYN: I have mixed feelings about frozen yogurt. On the one hand, I hate to see it replacing ice cream for dessert. On the other hand, it's a big improvement over regular yogurt. (It has none of the sourness of regular yogurt and yet tastes richer than ice milk.) The solution, obviously, is to eat ice cream for dessert the way we always have and eat this in place of regular yogurt.

As with competitors Damon and Yoplait, the fruit flavors of Breyer's new frozen yogurt taste best. Raspberry and strawberry are my particular favorites. In terms of consistency, Breyer's brand is creamier than Damon on a Stick but icier than Yoplait (which Bonnie says has more fat). Is it any surprise that Yoplait is the brand I prefer?

Bull's Eye Bold 'N' Chunky Barbecue Sauce, $1.45 to $1.85 per 16-oz. bottle.

BONNIE: Most barbecue sauces are very high in sodium. While Bull's Eye is better than many other sauces in that it doesn't contain gums and artificial flavor, it shares their problem with excessive sodium. One tablespoon of this sauce contains 203 milligrams. Since most people use much more than a tablespoon, consider this a high-sodium food and use it sparingly.

Alternatively, you could make your own barbecue sauce without added salt by sauteing onions, then adding tomatoes (canned, fresh and/or puréed), vinegar and brown sugar. Season to taste with mustard, chili powder, freshly ground black pepper and, if desired, liquid smoke.

CAROLYN: Barbecue sauce should not be just sweet and syrupy; it should have some bite to it, too. This is also true of people's personalities. But most supermarket barbecue sauces don't live up to this criterion.

Bull's Eye is a bracing exception.

Freedom and shopping

By MARY MacVEAN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Anna Del Conte never shops with a list.

And if you got hooked on her style in her new book, "The Italian Pantry," that's a freedom you, too, may enjoy.

"The Italian Pantry" (Harper & Row, $24.95) is organized not by course but by ingredient. Del Conte speaks to cooks who start with ingredients and then go recipe shopping.

"You see something which is nice in the market and you haven't got your mind set on making a dish," she said in a recent interview in New York. "My idea is first to go to the market and see. Buy the best vegetables, the best fish or the best piece of duck."

It's a method that encourages use of the freshest seasonal ingredients, and these, she said in her book, "are the secret of an Italian kitchen."

Dishes are in chapters based either on the ingredient that is central to it or that gives it its character. So steamed fish with herb sauce, for example, is listed under herbs. The bread chapter includes bread soup, bread gnocchi and a dessert called bread cake.

There is, however, a traditional index. The book often recalls Emilia, Italy, where Del Conte was raised. Each ingredient gets a lively introduction that includes history and anecdotes, and each recipe includes suggestions for dishes to accompany it.

About truffles, for example, she wrote that after the fall of the Roman empire, truffles were ignored even by the monks, who preserved as much of the Roman civilization. It is said that they did so deliberately because they considered truffles to have apocalyptic properties — hardly an encouragement to chase living.

Among the 160 recipes are monkfish and mussels in saffron sauce, mashed potatoes baked with salami and mozzarella, roast turkey with pomegranate sauce and broiled radicchio with Parmesan cheese. From the 451 Italian cheeses, there are recipes for mascarpone with balsamic vinegar, piedmontese fondue, and ricotta, basil and olive oil tart.

Del Conte's favorites include lemon risotto, rabbit with porcini and herbs, and spaghetti with stewed squid.

While many of the recipes come from friends and relatives rather than professional sources, Del Conte's education and background as a university Italian teacher show through in the history and context she provides for each ingredient.

Olson helps Orioles beat Red Sox

By DAVE O'HARA
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Baltimore bullpen ace Greg Olson figured to get a night off after the Orioles shocked Boston with nine runs in three innings.

It's a good thing Olson hung around, though, as he was needed Tuesday night to nail down a 9-5 victory over the Red Sox for his 29th save in 32 opportunities.

After taking a 9-1 lead at the end of the third, Baltimore manager Frank Robinson used 19 players, including four pitchers, in the Orioles' first victory in Fenway Park this year and just their fourth in the last 25 games.

"Old Frank kind of used a lead of players tonight," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after the 3-hour and 28-minute marathon.

"This was a must win for us," said Robinson, whose Orioles were beaten 2-1 Monday night. "It's very important for us to win two out of three in this series."

Despite their fourth loss in six games, Boston retained its one-game lead over Toronto in the AL East as the Blue Jays were edged 3-2 by the New York Yankees. Baltimore moved back to within seven games of the Red Sox.

With a rested bullpen, Morgan was prepared to go quickly to his relief corps. The Orioles didn't give him a chance, however. Baltimore shelled starter Dana Kruk (4-6) in a four-run first inning. The Orioles added two more runs off Dennis Lamp in the second, then kayaked the veteran reliever in a three-run third.

"I didn't want to wait to get them out of there until the score was 6 or 7 to nothing," Morgan said. "It turned out to be like that anyway."

Jockey McCarron begins road back to the track

By DENNIS GEORAGATOS
The Associated Press

DEL MAR, Calif. — Jockey Chris McCarron says his comeback from broken legs and a broken arm is motivated by "the charge I get out of riding good horses."

"I haven't lost that desire that I've had throughout my career to go out there and ride good horses in good races," McCarron said Tuesday after working out a horse for trainer Charlie Whittingham at the Del Mar race track.

"I could've just sat back and collected my (disability) insurance money, but that's not me. I enjoy the sport."

McCarron never doubted he would return from the June 3 accident at Hollywood Park, which broke both his legs and his right arm. He had surprised himself, but not others, by the speed of his recovery.

"Actually, I'm the one who thought it would take five to six months," McCarron said. "The doctors told me it would be possible for me to be back in three months, but I thought they were over-optimistic."

His Los Angeles doctors, Doug Garland and Dan Capen, turned out to be right with their prognosis of a quick recovery. But McCarron, 35, also had something to do with that.

"He's a very determined young man," Whittingham said. "He's very disciplined and he feels good, and that makes all the difference in the world."

Manager Jeff Torborg has insisted all season that he wants the Chicago White Sox to take one game at a time.

of there until the score was 6 or 7 to nothing," Morgan said. "It turned out to be like that anyway."

BOSTON — Baltimore bullpen ace Greg Olson figured to get a night off after the Orioles shocked Boston with nine runs in three innings.

It's a good thing Olson hung around, though, as he was needed Tuesday night to nail down a 9-5 victory over the Red Sox for his 29th save in 32 opportunities.

After taking a 9-1 lead at the end of the third, Baltimore manager Frank Robinson used 19 players, including four pitchers, in the Orioles' first victory in Fenway Park this year and just their fourth in the last 25 games.

"Old Frank kind of used a lead of players tonight," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after the 3-hour and 28-minute marathon.

"This was a must win for us," said Robinson, whose Orioles were beaten 2-1 Monday night. "It's very important for us to win two out of three in this series."

Despite their fourth loss in six games, Boston retained its one-game lead over Toronto in the AL East as the Blue Jays were edged 3-2 by the New York Yankees. Baltimore moved back to within seven games of the Red Sox.

With a rested bullpen, Morgan was prepared to go quickly to his relief corps. The Orioles didn't give him a chance, however. Baltimore shelled starter Dana Kruk (4-6) in a four-run first inning. The Orioles added two more runs off Dennis Lamp in the second, then kayaked the veteran reliever in a three-run third.

"I didn't want to wait to get them out of there until the score was 6 or 7 to nothing," Morgan said. "It turned out to be like that anyway."

Embassy order: 'collision course'

By SIDNEY S. FEINGOLD
The Associated Press

Three weeks after Iraq's lightning takeover of Kuwait, tensions were running high throughout the Middle East.

An Israeli civil defense official today urged citizens to stock up on food, tie their windows shut and mix a homemade antidote to defend against a possible Iraqi chemical attack.

Washington, which has deployed thousands of troops to the region, called reserves to duty and sent military equipment to the Persian Gulf.

Iraq's President Saddam Hussein was to address what Iraqi media called an open letter to President Bush.

Egyptian troops have joined U.S. and other forces in the defense of Saudi Arabia.

The five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council met again today. The United States has been pushing Moscow to endorse the use of force to back up the embargo against Iraq.

A pair of United Nations envoys were wrapping up talks in Iraq today, but reportedly received a cold reception, Iraq Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz told the two that the U.N. Security Council had become "an irrelevant force in the Persian Gulf region."

Iraq also has given stronger indications it would use the trapped foreigners to try to chip away at international support for sanctions against Iraq.

Meanwhile, more foreigners — Japanese, this time — were reported today to have been moved from the emirate to the Iraqi capital.

Thousands of foreigners, including about 3,000 Americans, are trapped in Iraq and Kuwait, and Iraq's Saddam Hussein has said they will serve as human shields against attack.
