Iraqi troops seal embassies

By SYDNEY RUBIN
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraqi soldiers scaled off the U.S. and at least eight other embassies in Kuwait on Friday, and Baghdad threatened to forcibly remove any diplomats whose governments defied orders to close their missions.

U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Howell and a skeleton staff of about 10 remained at the path-ringed U.S. compound near the Persian Gulf coast.

Richard Boucher, a State Department spokesman, said Howell and his staff would stay, keeping in touch with the 2,500 Americans trapped in Kuwait "as much as circumstances allow." They were keeping telephone conversations short because Iraqis were listening in, Boucher said in Washington.

In Amman, Jordan, a Spanish diplomat said Baghdad had threatened to use force to remove diplomats remaining at their posts in Kuwait city on Saturday.

Electricity and water were cut to the British and Greek embassies, officials in those countries said. West Germany's foreign ministry said the Iraqis had warned embassies they would take such action if they do not close.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said later that Iraqi tanks had moved into position to back up troops outside the British Embassy in Kuwait, where Ambassador Michael Weston and three staff members remained.

"The ambassador and his staff are in good heart and, the last time we heard from them, they were drinking champagne by candlelight," said the spokesman, who cannot be identified under briefing rules.

The spokesman said the embassy staff had stocked up food supplies in case the Iraqis tried to starve them out.

Brian's foreign secretary, Douglas Hurd, said his embassy's staff would decide for themselves how to oppose any Iraqi move on the mission.

"I don't expect, no one expects, unarmed diplomats to give physical resistance to physical force," he said.

About a dozen Iraqi soldiers surrounded the Canadian Embassy in Kuwait, preventing individuals from entering or leaving the mission.

In Gaspé, Quebec, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said Iraq "is well on the way to becoming... a parish nation."

More than 100 U.S. embassy personnel and dependents, including the Marine guards, left the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait on Thursday and were staying in the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater.

Weicker criticism continues

By JUDG EVERHART
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bruce A. Morrison sought Friday to keep alive the issue of independent gubernatorial candidate Lowell P. Weicker Jr.'s finances, criticizing the former senator for pocketing $11,634 in leftover funds from his failed 1988 re-election bid.

"Shame on you, Lowell Weicker," Morrison said at a news conference at the Capitol, his fifth in as many days.

With more than a half-million dollars in other income last year, Morrison said Weicker should have given the surplus campaign funds to charity, since the money had been given to Weicker by those who believed in his bid for a fourth Senate term.

He specifically suggested Research America, the foundation Weicker heads that promotes medical research. "But, no," Morrison said. "As so many times we find out about Lowell Weicker, his favorite charity is Lowell Weicker."

Morrison, a four-term congressman from Hamden, has been pounding away at Weicker's finances for the past week and succeeded Thursday in getting Weicker, a former three-term Republican U.S. senator, to release parts of his 1989 tax returns.

Weicker also released volumes of financial information on Thursday and used the occasion to accuse Morrison of "gutter" politics and criticize the press for stories about questions Morrison had raised. His comments were laced with expletives, directed at Morrison and reporters.

"Lowell Weicker can bluster, he can swear, he can threaten," Morrison said. But "none of that behavior is going to stop me from raising the issues that the voters deserve answers to."

"I'm not afraid to go toe to toe with Lowell Weicker even though he's tall and loud," Morrison said of the 6-foot-6-inch Weicker.

The $11,634 from the Weicker '88 Committee surplus had been listed as income on Weicker's 1989 tax return.

MOVING INDOORS — Rain didn't stop the Eighth Utilities Fire District's annual peach shortcake feast Friday night. Here, fireman Dave Boutin, left, and Deputy Fire Chief Jim Sarfets help set up tables and chairs inside the firehouse so that people have a place to sit. Fireman Bruce Krawer stands at the far right.

Festival goes brave rain

By SCOTT BREDE
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Friday night's rain may have dampened people's clothes, but not their spirits or their taste buds.

Evening showers forced the Peach Festival inside the Eighth District Firehouse, but failed to stop droves of peach lovers who braved the weather to get a bite of the event's traditional peach shortcake.

"It's a very, very good turnout considering the weather," said Judy Eschmann, who along with other members of the fire department's Women's Auxiliary served dessert after dessert to a peach-hungry crowd.

"I expect about 2,800 people to show up," said Deputy Fire Chief Bob Eschmann, the festival's chairman. In the past, about 3,000 people have been on-hand for the annual celebration, he said. This year's turnout seemed exceptionally good for the weather.

"Everyone is being really patient. They understand that we had to move it indoors," said Eschmann. The decision to move the event into the fire station was made when it was apparent that the rain wouldn't let up. On clear days, the event is held in a nearby parking lot.

"We rushed around to get things ready and put the canvas up," he said.

Inside the station, the firemen's boots were pushed inside and tables set up to accommodate people who swayed to the sounds of Johnny Pryske's "Good Time Band."

Outside, umbrellas of nearly every color and size huddled together as their owners waited in line to get a taste of the peach shortcake and tried to stay dry.

Under the canvas that was set up to extend the eating area, June McEvier, of 89 Lockwood St., sat with her husband, Gordon, and ate shortcake, her white parka still dripping wet.

"It was worth waiting in the rain," she said, raising her spoon to her mouth.

McEvier said she began attending the four-decade-old festival 25 years ago, but had missed the event for the last 10 years. Her reappearance was prompted by her husband obtaining tickets.

The weather did not discourage them, she said.

Nor did it for many others. The rain kept coming, and so did those in line.

Senator's son arrested on calling card fraud

HARTFORD (AP) — An investigation into thousands of dollars of telephone calls charged to a state calling card has led to the arrest of Hartford state Sen. Frank Barrows' son.

Frank Barrows Jr., 21, was arrested Thursday following a five-month investigation by the state Department of Public Works. Barrows works as a mail handler in the secretary of the state's office.

"I'm going to stand by him and see what's going on," said the elder Barrows, a Hartford Democrat.

The department launched the investigation when it noticed thousands of dollars charged to a state calling card number that belonged to an employee of the Public Works Department.

The employee has been cleared of any wrongdoing, Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey said Friday. He didn't identify the employee.

Investigators said the calls went to cities all over the world, including Colombia.

"That number was gotten illegally and used for illegal calls up to $6,100," Bailey said.

Investigators said most of the calls were made from dorm rooms at Wesleyan University. Barrows allegedly obtained the number and passed it on to others, some of whom were students at Wesleyan, investigators said.

Six other people, including five who live out of state, have been sent registered letters giving them until Tuesday to surrender, Bailey said. All seven face two counts of larceny.

Barrows was released Thursday on a writer's promise to appear in court Wednesday.

He remains on the job, said Don Meikle, an assistant to Secretary of the State Julia Tashjian.

Bush calls Saddam "sick"

By RITA BEAMISH
The Associated Press

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — The White House on Friday condemned Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's TV appearance with Britons: he won't allow to leave Iraq as "sick beyond expression."

Meanwhile, President Bush prepared to interrupt his vacation and personally brief members of Congress on the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Kuwait, Iraqi troops blocked off the U.S. Embassy Thursday in which Saddam told a group of British citizens that their presence helped to prevent a U.S. military attack.

Fitzwater said Bush had watched a TV broadcast Thursday in which Saddam told a group of British citizens that their presence helped to prevent a U.S. military attack.

The spokesman said Saddam's broadcast "shows the cynical and inhumane view that he holds for human life. To hold men, women and children up for viewing as targets for destruction is sick beyond expression."

Bush will fly to Washington on Tuesday afternoon to meet with congressional leaders and members of key foreign policy committees.

Although Congress is still in recess, "several Congress members indicated they would like to come back to Washington for a face-to-face briefing," Fitzwater said.

As for the embassy standoff, Fitzwater was asked what would be the appropriate response by Ambassador Nahaniel Howell and his staff if the Iraqis forced their way in.

"I can't get into specific instructions, but he is staying there to help out as he can," Fitzwater said.

"Force has not been applied. Should he be subject to that, he will have to act accordingly. But those are judgments that he is authorized to make in many cases, and beyond that, I couldn't go into specific discussions we have had with him."

"Tensions also were high in Persian Gulf waters where U.S. vessels trailed a number of Iraqi and other ships.

The United States so far has declined to forcibly interdict any ships for violation of the United Nations-endorsed trade embargo against Iraq. But Fitzwater said "we are monitoring all of them" navigating in the region.

Bush has said he was willing to give the United Nations a little time to work out agreement on a resolution backing military enforcement of the sanctions. But he also was prepared to go ahead with military interdiction without that approval, officials have indicated.

Fitzwater expressed confidence the U.N. concurrence would come.

He said Iraq continues to try to circumvent the U.N. sanctions. Among its efforts, he said, are "aviation shipments into Baghdad of one kind or another, material that appears to be coming in through some routes and also the procurement of chemical warfare products, which we have great concern about."

The spokesman declined to give further details "because we are still working to resolve the matter and put an end to this." However, in answer to a question, he indicated the source of the material was not the Soviet Union, long a major supplier of armaments to Iraq.

NEWS FROM HOME — American soldiers with the 101st Airborne cluster around an American news magazine Friday while on duty with Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia. Eager to read about the Mideast Crisis, the men said the magazine was the first news to reach them at their isolated desert post.

Soviets drop objections to embargo against Iraq

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — In a dramatic reversal Friday, the Soviets said they would back a U.S. resolution in the Security Council calling for "minimum force" to halt all shipping to and from Iraq.

They also said they would consider joining an international police force to enforce a U.N.-ordered trade embargo.

The full, 15-member council was expected to convene quickly and overwhelmingly approve the resolution, representing a major diplomatic victory for the United States.

Approval would give Security Council blessing to a loosely organized international force using its own rules of engagement to enforce the U.N. embargo against Iraq.

The confirmation of support by Soviet Ambassador Valentin V. Lozinsky appeared to remove the final hurdle to Security Council approval of the U.S. initiative. For about 10 days, the Soviets had balked.

On Friday night, Lozinsky, the deputy permanent representative, announced, "Our intention is to vote 'yes.'"

His comments followed informal meetings by the five permanent members of the Security Council that went on for more than four hours.

Embassies

Fitzwater said the Iraqis had promised earlier to allow the group to leave Iraq, then reneged. He said Iraqi forces "of one kind or another" were surrounding the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait but "have not made any moves against the embassy or intruded in any fashion."

"It would appear that people are not being allowed to enter or leave the embassy," Fitzwater said in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Iraqi troops were also surrounding or patrolling near the French, Japanese, Norwegian, Swedish, Romanian and Hungarian embassies.

The official Iraqi News Agency said Iraq would only detain the male embassy employees — including diplomatic — of those countries that refused to close their embassies in Kuwait. But there was no indication that dependents, including the U.S. women and children who had traveled to Baghdad, were being allowed to leave.

INA quoted an unidentified official spokesman in Baghdad as saying Iraq "is determined" to implement its decision to shut down the embassies in Kuwait.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, who seized Kuwait in a lightning assault on Aug. 2 and later annexed it, had given foreign governments until 9 p.m. Friday to vacate their embassies in Kuwait.

Spain's ambassador to Jordan, Ramon Arnegod, told a news conference in Jordan on Friday that Iraqi authorities later told the embassies in Kuwait that they had until 8:30 a.m. Saturday to close.

Judge bashes abortion law

By BILL STIEG
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A federal judge on Friday struck down provisions of Pennsylvania's restrictive abortion law, saying much of it was just a repeat of provisions previously ruled unconstitutional.

The state immediately said it would appeal the decision by Senior U.S. District Judge Daniel H. Huettt III to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and, if necessary, to the Supreme Court.

Both sides had viewed the case, reviewing the most restrictive abortion law among the states, as a chance for the high court to reconsider the abortion issue and its 1973 decision in Roe v. Wade that legalized abortion. The U.S. territory of Guam had banned all abortions except where the mother's life is threatened. A federal judge Thursday ruled that law unconstitutional.

Huettt ruled against Pennsylvania's requirements that a woman notify her husband before getting an abortion; wait 24 hours before getting an abortion; and that minors obtain the consent of at least one parent, or a court order, before an abortion.

Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania and five abortion providers had challenged the 1982 law, which was made stricter by amendments in 1988 and 1989.

"Safe, legal abortion continues to be accessible to women in Pennsylvania because of the court's decision today," said Elizabeth Hrenka-Roberts, executive director of Planned Parenthood Pennsylvania Affiliates.

Program offers low interest student loans

By SCOTT BREDE
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — This semester, there is new hope in sight for high school graduates who want to go on to college, but don't think they can swing it financially.

All they may have to do is ask for FELP, the Family Education Loan Program.

The Connecticut Higher Educational Supplemental Loan Authority is offering the new loan program with a 9.7 percent fixed interest rate, one of the lowest rates in the country.

With most current student loans having interest rates at 11 percent and up, the CHESLA loan program could alleviate some of the tug on students' wallets, according to State Rep. Paul Munns (R-Manchester), who is publicizing the program.

"Students should know that there is money out there that they can get at a lower rate," Munns said.

Students who are enrolled at least half time in an in-state college or university are eligible for the program. State residents attending out-of-state schools also are eligible for the loan.

Applicants must have good credit and monthly bills amounting to 40 percent or less of their income.

Interest is due only at those times when a student is in school and for a six-month grace period after the student leaves school. Repayment of the principle and the interest begins at the end of that six-month period.

Anyone interested in applying for a loan or seeking additional information can contact Munns' office at 1-800-842-1423 or CHESLA at 1-800-252-FELP.

DMH asks suit dismissal

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The state says it can't be held responsible for the slaying of Jessica Short by an escaped mental patient because there had been no indications she was in serious risk of harm.

The 9-year-old Wallingford girl was fatally stabbed last summer by David R. Peterson, a patient who had wandered off the grounds of the Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown.

Peterson picked his victim at random.

The Short family filed a $7 million lawsuit against the Department of Mental Health in June, claiming it was responsible for their daughter's death by failing to confine Peterson. The girl was stabbed 34 times during a sidewalk sale in Middletown on July 28, 1989. Her mother and sister witnessed the slaying.

"Jessica Short was not by any criteria an identifiable victim," Assistant Attorney General Richard R. Hine wrote in a document filed in New Haven Superior Court on Wednesday. "Consequently, there were no threats made by David Peterson in regard to her nor any indications that there was a serious risk of danger to her."

"Since there was no foreseeable danger to the decedent as an identifiable victim, the state of Connecticut had no duty to her as an individual to take any precautions to protect or warn her."

The law makes the state responsible for the protection of the general public but not for specific individuals, according to the state's response.

Hine also asked that the court dismiss a lawsuit filed by Short's mother, Catherine, and sister, Tanya, seeking damages for emotional distress caused by witnessing the slaying.

Peterson, 38, was charged with murder, felony murder and escape in the girl's death. A panel of three judges found him innocent by reason of insanity this spring and he has been committed to the maximum-security Whiting Forensic Institute.

Douglas Hammond, an attorney for the Shorts, said Friday he could not comment on the state's line of defense because he had not yet seen a copy of their pleading.

Private contractor for Hamden lunches

HAMDEN (AP) — A private contractor has been hired to run a hot-lunch program at Hamden schools, a move that will keep students from brown-bagging it this fall.

The Board of Education had voted Aug. 6 to end its cafeteria program because of skyrocketing costs and a projected deficit of more than $150,000 this coming school year.

The board will vote Tuesday on an agreement approved Thursday by the school cafeteria workers' union that calls for hiring Marriott Corp., said Superintendent David W. Shaw.

The company would hire 25 full-time union cafeteria workers and 35 part-time non-union workers who would have lost their jobs if the lunch program had ended.

"We anticipate having a hot-lunch program by the start of school," Shaw said.

Marriott would raise lunch prices 5 cents, to $1.30 in elementary schools and $1.65 in high schools, but would keep middle school lunches at $1.50.

The company would be responsible for any operating deficits.

"The two common goals are that the kids get to eat and the cafeteria workers get taken care of," said John Ludwick, the regional sales director for Marriott in Hingham, Mass.

Officials would not comment on the terms of the agreement, but sources involved with negotiations said salaries for all but about five of the cafeteria workers would stay the same. The five employees were managers when the school board ran the program.

The benefits for all the cafeteria workers, however, will be substantially less, the sources told the New Haven Register.

School is a cabaret, old chum

By NITA LELYVELD
The Associated Press

WATERFORD — The room is small and crowded, and a cloud of smoke hangs in the air. A young woman, blonde, wide-eyed and innocent-looking, makes her way through the tangle of tables and chairs to the stage. She picks up the microphone and begins to sing.

"Absent-minded me.
I'm losing a key or missing a glove.
Just like me to lose my love."
As her voice builds and she gains confidence, looking out boldly at her audience, she sees people mouthing to her in the back row, waving their arms to get her to stop. A singer's nightmare? Not at all. To Elizabeth Aiello and the 32 other people enrolled this week at the Eugene O'Neill Theater Center's Cabaret Symposium, moments like these are well worth paying for.

Participants in the week-long workshop, who range in age from 21 to 55, have come from across the country and Canada to have their work critiqued — some to get help in creating their first cabaret acts, others to fine tune acts they are already performing.

They have auditioned for the right to attend workshops where they perform repeatedly and get advice on a wide variety of subjects, from how best to present themselves to how to choose the order of their songs in a way that will help them draw in their audiences.

The program, now in its second year, is the only one of its kind in the country, and it is becoming increasingly competitive. This year 75 people auditioned for the chance to be taught by such notables as Margaret Whiting, considered by some to be the grand dame of nightclub singing, and renowned songwriter, actor and director Max Showalter. The week costs $775.

Definitions of what cabaret is vary greatly, but the feeling here is that it is a distinct art form, deserving of study and respect.

"We're trying to revive the idea that this is a unique entity that people can write for specifically. We're trying to stir that pot," said Ellie Ellsworth, artistic director and coordinator of the symposium. "When people ask me what cabaret is, I say it's a small room where they serve food and drink. Intimacy is the name of the game in cabaret."

To be a good cabaret performer requires more than just talent, Ellsworth said. It takes guts.

"You could find all sorts of tremendously talented performers who seem capable of anything, but if you sat them down right next to you and asked them to sing eyeball to eyeball, they would flinch," she said. "You have to be able to do that in cabaret."

Traditionally, cabaret settings have been tiny hole in the walls, with small audiences barely separated from the performers.

"It's an entertainment that is close to people, and it's a much more personal way of performing than at the theater. People can identify so much more easily with a song when they're in a cozy setting and it's being sung right to them," said Showalter, who is co-producing the symposium with Betsy White of the Eugene O'Neill.

Professional cabaret singers agree that learning how to read the audience and hold its attention is the key.

It is this subject that Whiting, a crusty, experienced and highly acclaimed cabaret singer who recently finished a five-week stint at the Algonquin in New York, repeatedly stresses to a small group of would-be performers gathered for a workshop in the O'Neill Center's Rufus and Margo Rose Theater Barn.

Gesturing with her long pink nails, the doyenne of cabaret performance, who is serving as a master teacher in the symposium, imparts her wisdom to the next generation of cabaret performers.

EXCESSIVE EXERCISE
Can excessive exercise reduce immunity to illness? A study of the 2300 runners who registered for the 1987 L.A. Marathon found that 13% of those who actually ran the marathon came down with colds, flu, or sore throat within a week, compared to 2% of those who trained but didn't compete. Those who trained strenuously, running 60 miles per week, were twice as likely to become sick as those who ran less than 20 miles per week. Moderation in exercise seems more healthful.

High risk defense

HARTFORD (AP) — A defendant awaiting trial in the kidnapping and slaying of a bank vice president plans to deny any role in the crime at his upcoming trial, a defense that could lead to the death penalty if he is found guilty.

Prosecutors appear to have strong evidence that Daniel J. Webb abducted Diane Gellenbeck from a downtown parking garage one year ago Friday, then killed her in Keney Park.

They found Webb's fingerprint on a parking stub from the garage, and Gellenbeck's fingerprints on the car Webb drove. Witnesses saw a man of his description shoot a woman as she lay on the ground near the Keney Park golf course on Aug. 24, 1989. Webb also had a history of arrests and convictions for violence against women.

But Webb, 28, who faces the death penalty if convicted, strenuously denies he had anything to do with the death of Gellenbeck, a 37-year-old vice president at Connecticut National Bank.

His decision to deny involvement sets the stage for a different type of death penalty trial than has been typical at the Hartford courthouse in recent years — one that may increase the chances Webb will be executed if the jury finds him guilty.

M. Fred DeCaprio and Ronald Gold, Webb's lawyers, said they have been told jury selection in the trial will begin in October before Judge Joseph J. Purilli in Superior Court in Hartford.

Many people charged with capital felony — a crime punishable by death — have admitted involvement in the crime, but argued that they were suffering from what is known in legal terms as "mental disease or defect."

Mark J. Chicano, for example, did not make a serious attempt to convince the three-judge panel in his 1988 trial that he did not kill his former girlfriend, her stepson and her boyfriend in East Windsor. But he convinced the judges he was suffering from extreme emotional disturbance and did not possess the intent necessary to be sentenced of a capital felony.

Though convicted of charges that ensure he will never be released from prison, Chicano escaped the electric chair.

Webb simply says that police arrested the wrong man.

Webb has clashed with his attorneys, but Judge Raymond R. Norko refused to appoint new lawyers.

DeCaprio acknowledged that Webb's legal strategy may make it more difficult for him to avoid a death sentence if the jury concludes he kidnapped and killed Gellenbeck.

Wooden bridge burns

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A smoldering fire of wooden railroad ties on a bridge that spans the Connecticut River between Middletown and Portland took four hours to put out early today.

Fire officials received a call shortly after 2 a.m. today that the railroad swing-bridge, which was open in the middle of the river, was on fire, according to Deputy Fire Chief Paul Rasch.

"It was a rotten, miserable four-hour kind of job," Rasch said.

Rasch said railroad officials told him that there had been some welding work done on the bridge Thursday afternoon that might have ignited one of the rail ties.

The fire had been smoldering for hours, but the damage to the bridge and the tracks was minimal, Rasch said.

Build Your Future at Manchester Community College

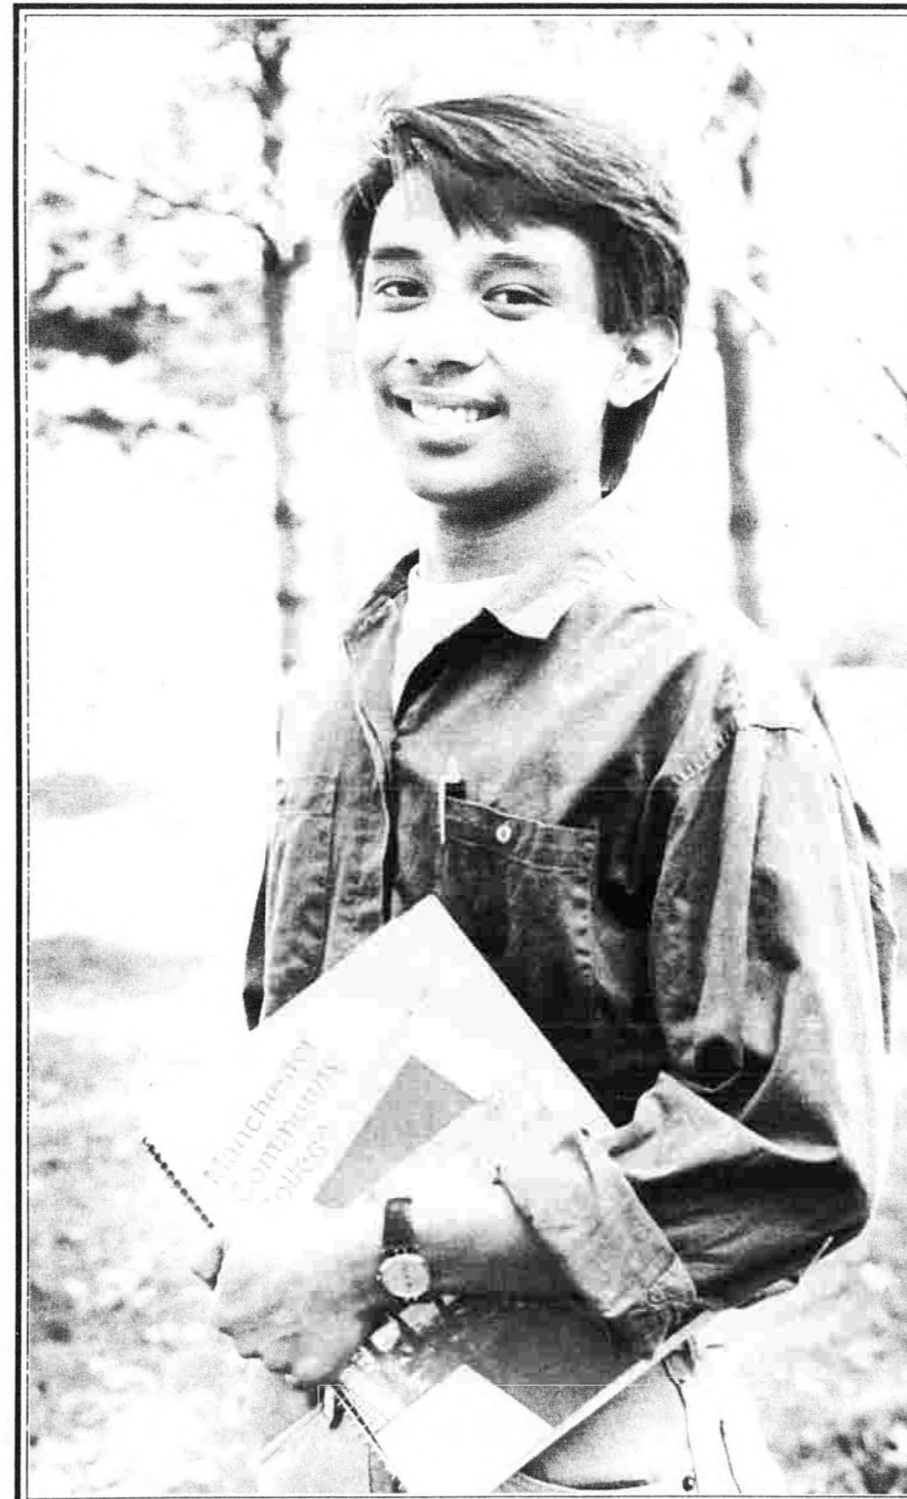

Duane Orozco of the Philippines is building his future in the United States by starting his study of graphic arts at MCC. Eventually he hopes to transfer to the University of Connecticut to earn his bachelor's degree. Duane chose MCC mainly because "it has a strong fine arts program" and because the tuition is affordable.

Duane said that registering for classes was confusing at first, but he found unexpected special help at MCC's Admissions Office from Raphael Papa, also a native of the Philippines. Mr. Papa speaks Spanish as a third language and has helped many international students with the admissions process.

For an affordable alternative, consider starting your college path at MCC, then transferring to the university or college of your choice. For a degree in a special career field (over 40 to choose from!), consider credit or non-credit courses at MCC. Names in the news

Actress Dana Delany is tired of showing how virtuous she can be. The Emmy-winning "China Beach" star says she wants to be a "bad girl."

"I want to play different characters. I want to do comedy, somebody who's not so heroic. Somebody who's bad," Delany says in the September issue of GQ magazine.

She's wanted to play those types of roles since she was a kid, says Delany, who portrays nurse Colleen McMurphy on the television show.

"My favorite actress growing up was Gloria Grahame. That's who I want to be. A bad girl," she said. "You get lots of Irish-Catholic girls wanting to be bad girls."

Although she'd like to move on, Delany acknowledges her "China Beach" role was a perfect fit: "It was like somebody had read my diaries; the way she felt was so honest. I felt like the character was me."

Singer Curtis Mayfield, paralyzed by an accident at a Brooklyn concert 11 days ago, was transferred Friday to a spinal care treatment center near his Atlanta home.

Mayfield, accompanied by his wife and son, left Kings County Hospital Friday for the Shepherd Spinal Center in Atlanta, said a spokesman at the Brooklyn hospital.

The singer-songwriter was about to take the stage at an outdoor concert on Aug. 13 when a sudden gust of wind toppled a light tower, critically injuring Mayfield. The paralysis might be permanent.

Mayfield, 48, was one of the founders of seminal rhythm and blues band the Impressions and he composed the best-selling "Superfly" soundtrack.

Ex-Led Zeppelin vocalist Robert Plant says his heavy metal band was wrongly accused of slipping Satanic messages in its albums long before the current "I mean, who on Earth would have ever thought of doing that in the first place? You've got to have a lot of time on your hands to even consider that people would do that," Plant said in an interview with Rolling Stone magazine.

Plant said if his band had used the backward masking, where the lyrics can only be heard by playing an album backwards, it might have included a message more money-driven than malicious.

"I figure if backward masking really worked, every record in the store would have 'buy this album' hidden in it," said Plant.

The three-bedroom home where Bob Dylan grew up in northeastern Minnesota has been sold, said a real estate broker.

The two-story, stucco house was sold Tuesday to a couple with two children, broker Curt Curtis said Thursday. The sale price was not disclosed.

"They did not buy it because of the Dylan affiliation," Curtis said.

But the connection could be a good thing if they ever decide to sell, said the new owner, Gregg French, 35, a Frito-Lay route salesman.

While French and his wife, Donna, 32, don't intend to sell the home they just bought, he said, "I feel this house would have a little more protection against a downturn in the market."

The house was put up for sale in October 1988 with an asking price of $84,000. The list price was later reduced to $56,900, he said.

The house was owned for 22 years by Terry and Angel Maroli, who raised a son and a daughter there after buying it from Dylan's mother.

Dylan, 49, was born Robert Allen Zimmerman in Duluth and grew up in Hibbing. He moved to New York and became known for his 1960s protest songs, including "Blowin' in the Wind" and "Masters of War."

Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, who performed the world's first successful liver transplant, underwent heart surgery Friday.

Surgeons began the coronary artery bypass operation on Starzl at 7:30 a.m. and finished nearly five hours later at Presbyterian University Hospital, where he has performed hundreds of transplants.

Starzl was in stable condition in the hospital's intensive care unit.

The surgery was uncomplicated and Dr. Starzl is doing well, said Gary Marrone, who led the surgical team.

Rouse killed in plane crash

BOSTON — A developer whose firm rejuvenated urban centers around the country was killed along with his wife and daughter when their private plane crashed between two houses Friday.

The two houses went up in flames, but their occupants escaped injury.

Killed were pilot Michael Spear, 49, president of The Rouse Co., his wife, Judy, 47, and their 19-year-old daughter, Jodi, police said.

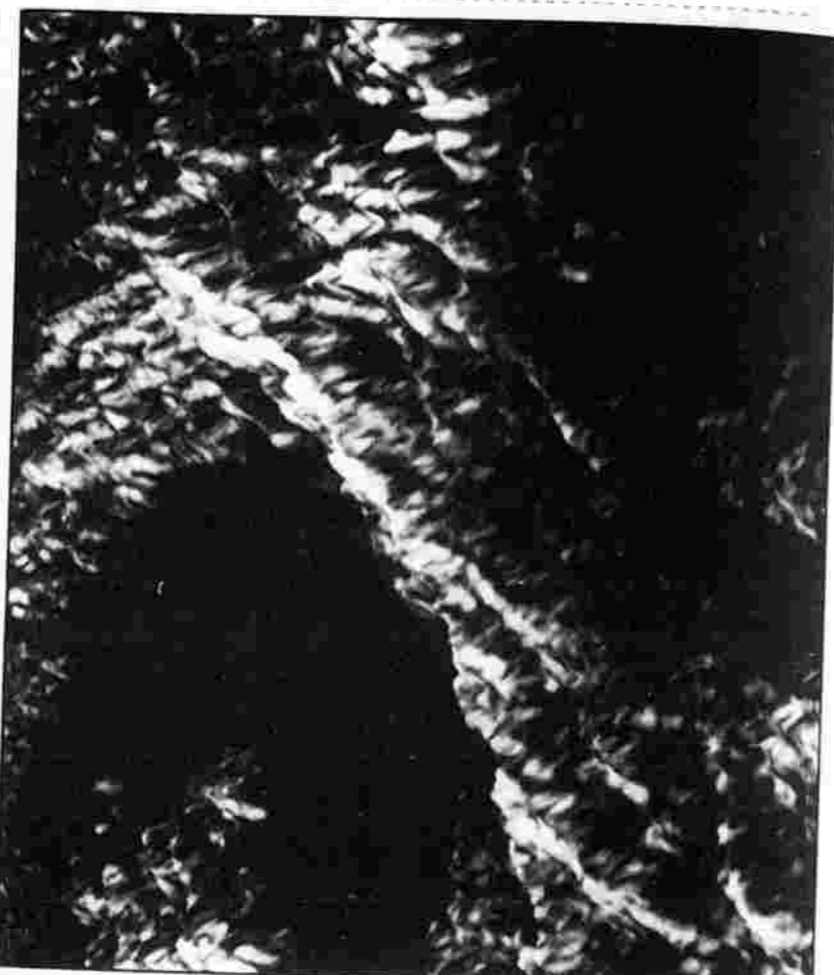

The company's projects include Boston's Faneuil Hall shopping area, Harbor Place on the Baltimore waterfront, South Street Seaport in New York and Underground Atlanta.

"This is a terrible loss to the Rouse Co. and to the country," said James W. Rouse, retired founder of the Columbia, Md.-based company. "Mike Spear was a brilliant, compassionate, wise man. His leadership was tremendous. In many respects, he is irreplaceable. Judy was a wonderful woman who made a great contribution in her own right, as well as to Mike's work."

The Spears lived in Columbia, Md., but had a summer home in Chatham on Cape Cod.

Spear joined Rouse in 1967 as director of market research and project evaluation. From 1971 to 1978, he was general manager of the Columbia project that established the planned city between Baltimore and Washington.

Spear was named executive vice president for development in 1978.

Rock group is cleared

By SANDRA CHEREB
The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — A subliminal message of "do it" exists on an album by the British rock band Judas Priest but it did not cause two young fans to kill themselves, a judge ruled Friday.

Washoe District Judge Jerry Carr Whitehead said that while messages can be found on the band's 1978 "Stained Class" album, they were not intentional and did not cause the fans to form a suicide pact.

Whitehead said the words "do it" on the song "Better By You, Better Than Me," were the result of a "chance combination of sounds," but constituted a subliminal message nonetheless.

"Our immediate reaction is obviously one of great relief," said Rob Halford, the band's lead singer. "It's a great day for Judas Priest."

Speaking with The Associated Press from an undisclosed location in Mexico, Halford said, "We simply just want to get on with what we do, playing rock 'n' roll and heavy metal music."

"I am pleased with the result on the basic issues of the defense maintained that the 'do it' sounds were a half of breath by Halford, combined with the sounds of guitars.

But in clearing the band of any liability in the case, Whitehead said that co-defendant CBS Records refused to properly comply with his order to find the original multi-track recordings of other songs on the "Stained Class" album. He ordered the company to pay $40,000 to the plaintiff's attorneys to reimburse them for the cost of bringing the lawsuit.

He said the defaults were not caused by the courtroom lawyers, but by in-house counsel of CBS.

Whitehead added that even if the master tapes had been found, "the court does not believe that the ultimate outcome of the trial would have been any different."

The families of the two suicide victims sued the band and CBS records, claiming messages hidden in the crashing music lured satanism and promoted suicide.

Raymond Belknap, 18, died from a single blast from a shotgun held in his mouth Dec. 23, 1985. James Vance, then 20, blew away the lower portion of his face but survived three more years before his death on Thanksgiving Day 1988 of complications from his injuries and a reaction to medications.

Attorneys for the families sought $6.2 million in damages at the conclusion of a four-week trial.

They said the subliminal message "do it" and purported backward phrases glorifying death spurred the shootings.

The defense maintained said the alleged blasphemous phrases were "phonetic flukes," given credibility only by the power of suggestion.

The judge reluctantly agreed, saying, "The power of suggestion may serve to make the listener think he hears a certain phrase when the singing is played backwards, even though he probably would not have perceived the phrase without the power of suggestion."

While attorneys for the families raised "grave suspicions in the mind of the court," Whitehead said there was no credible evidence that the messages were intentionally placed or that they could be perceived even if they were.

"I'm a little bit disappointed about that," Halford said. "There's never been a song written by Judas Priest that could be conceived to condone suicide in any nature."

The defense blamed the youths' alcohol and substance abuse, family violence and anti-social personalities for their suicides.

The youths allegedly shot themselves after spending several hours drinking beer, smoking marijuana and listening to the Judas Priest album.

South Africa clamps down amid factional bloodshed

By TOM COHEN
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government imposed emergency measures Friday on black townships hit by savage fighting and ordered in more police and soldiers to try to end battles that have killed more than 500 people.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela later met with President F.W. de Klerk. Mandela said negotiations with the government would continue despite what he called an unnecessary move declaring the townships "unrest areas."

"We are the architects and we are determined they (the talks) will succeed," he said.

In an earlier speech, de Klerk said the government would not permit the country to deteriorate into anarchy.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok announced the emergency measures in Pretoria on a day of little serious fighting in the townships.

Police reported finding six bodies in various townships from previous fighting. In Kagiso township, police used razor wire, shotguns and tear gas to prevent rival war bands from clashing. Most other areas were reported calm.

The announcement came almost two weeks after political and tribal clashes between Zulus loyal to the conservative Inkatha political movement and Xhosas, most of them ANC supporters, flared.

"It is in the interest of South Africa and all its inhabitants that further bloodshed, disorder and chaos be prevented at all costs," Vlok said.

He noted that black leaders had called for police to stop the township violence, but said the government had not consulted the ANC about the steps.

OPINION

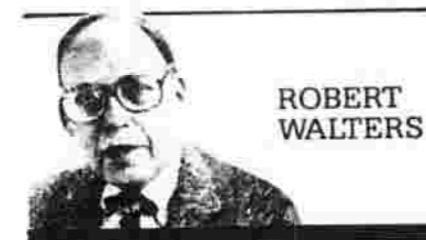

Businesses tearing out union label

HENDERSON, Nev. — After rejecting — by a resounding 3 1/2-to-1 margin — new contract terms proposed by the Nevada Power Co. in its "last, best and final" offer, more than half of the electric utility's employees recently went on strike.

As the 825 strikers picketed under the desert sun for two weeks, union and company negotiators made no progress in resolving their differences over wages, benefits and working conditions.

At the same time, Nevada Power officials began warning that they soon would replace the striking workers, at least temporarily, to handle a growing backlog of work.

On the 15th day of the strike, the workers grudgingly ratified a new contract virtually identical to the one they earlier had spurned. "It stinks," meter reader Brenda Ver-million said of the agreement. The pact called for modest annual wage increases but also linked the employees' contribution for medical insurance.

"The workers were just scared," added Vermillion. "They were told everybody's going to lose their jobs."

That recent episode in southern Nevada is both thoroughly unremarkable and terribly significant. The causes of the dispute and the events leading to the settlement are duplicated hundreds of times every year throughout the nation and are emblematic of the state of contemporary labor-management relations.

Especially noteworthy was the company threat to replace the strikers. In recent years, Greyhound Lines, Phelps Dodge, International Paper, Boise Cascade and numerous other companies have gone beyond issuing such warnings. They have hired and trained new workers in the midst of bitter labor disputes.

Frank Lorenzo placed Continental Airlines in bankruptcy to break its union contracts, then hired substitute employees at drastically lower wage levels. He also led Eastern Airlines into bankruptcy and recruited replacements for its striking workers.

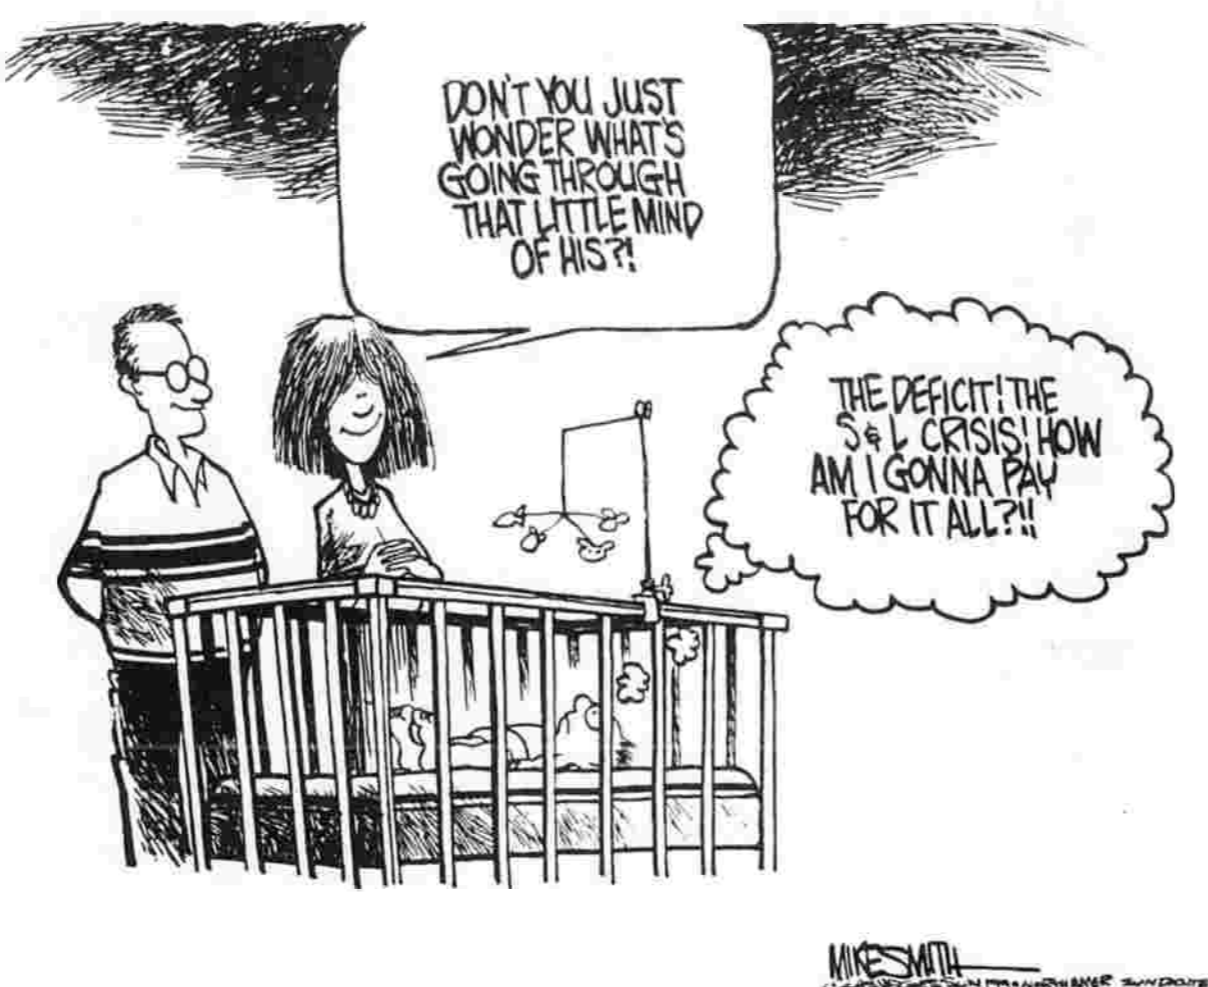

Employers gained the right to hire permanent replacements for strikers in the 1930s, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the practice was lawful in economic disputes over wages or benefits although not in conflicts over allegedly unfair labor practices.

For four decades, that option was seldom exercised. Companies feared they would incur the wrath of powerful unions and antagonize the public if they took such drastic action. At the same time, crossing a picket line to take a striker's job was simply unthinkable for most workers.

But the influence of trade unions, as measured by the proportion of nation's non-farm work force they represent, has severely deteriorated during the past half century. It has steadily dropped from 35 percent immediately after World War II to 16 percent last year.

Against that background, President Reagan enhanced management's power with a single dramatic action in 1981: He declared 11,500 striking air traffic controllers to be engaged in an illegal action when they defied a back-to-work order, then ordered them all fired and replaced by substitutes.

"Reagan made it respectable to bust unions," says Robert M. Baptiste, a Washington, D.C., attorney who does considerable work for unions.

Miss America's swimsuit

Miss America pageant director Leonard Horn has banned the traditional swimsuit cheesecake-on-the-beach photos from this year's preliminaries. He says he'd jettison the entire swimsuit competition if he had his druthers.

SARAH OVERSTREET

"I would eliminate it tomorrow if it wouldn't jeopardize the television audience," Horn is reported to have said. "But I've been warned not to get rid of it by the so-called experts."

Leonard, you're a man after my own heart. I'm not a great fan of heavy pageants. They're fertile ground for the sprouting of jealousies, backbiting and heartbreak. I did a two-month stint on the Miss America trail a few years back as a reporter and watched a "promoter" train a young woman much like a race horse.

I talked to contestants who said they were ostracized and ganged up on by other contestants, and programmed so completely by "power-of-positive-thinking" promoters that they were bound to eventually be slammed back to earth. I talked to one contestant in a preliminary who watched other contestants pour makeup on another's evening gown.

But as pageants go, the Miss America pageant does promote the development of a lot of positive qualities in young women, and players on hitting, fielding and how they handle pressure. Take one of those elements away, and it's harder to mark your All-Star ballot. Take away the swimsuit contest, and viewers have one less of the traditional boxes to check on their imaginary ballots.

Even more personally, I've stopped caring much whether they have a swimsuit competition or not. Twenty years ago when women's life options were so much more limited and we were more likely to be judged solely on physical appearance, the swimsuit competition can take the ups. It takes discipline and patience. Master those, he suggested, and you can keep cycling the opportunity.

The Wright company foresaw the sharp decline and presented clients with extensive written analyses long before it occurred. As he views the sell-off, the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait was merely the trigger.

"I have thought this one would go down at least to 2,700" points on the Dow Jones industrial average, he said. "Then, after a rally, I thought it would decline to 2,100 points."

"We haven't had the rally because of the invasion," Wright said. While he sees a chance that the Dow's low will be between 2,400 and 2,500 points, his stronger expectation is that it will reach 2,100 or 2,200 some time in 1991.

Long-term investors unfazed

By JOHN CUNIFF
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices may be collapsing on fears of war and energy shortages, but the focus in some quarters remains on the long run.

In interviews, three big investors with very different approaches and clientele shared a belief that investing must center on fundamentals. All saw opportunities developing.

Thomas O'Hara, chairman of the National Association of Investors Corp., said he and his staff were reviewing a list of buying opportunities. Even if prices continue to fall, some stocks already are buys, he said.

The NAIC, which runs a mutual fund and provides advice to the nation's largest aggregation of investment clubs, tends to invest no matter what short-term conditions might be.

The credo of its clubs, for example, is to invest small amounts on a regular monthly basis in basically sound, well-managed companies. Down markets are viewed as opportunities to obtain more shares for the money.

Using that philosophy, the NAIC's oldest member, the Mutual Investment Club of Detroit, has averaged better than 12 percent a year for 50 years, which means it has doubled its portfolio value on average every six years.

"The difficult task in a market like this is to convince people there are opportunities, but the opportunities are great," O'Hara said.

Andrew Lanyi, managing director of the Lanyi Division of Ladenburg, Thielman & Co., is also a fundamental investor, but the stocks he chooses may not make the NAIC lists. Lanyi seeks small, highly profitable, undiscovered companies. His better selections often appreciate three or four times — even much more.

To find such companies requires an enormous amount of effort, such as screening 30,000 companies to uncover eight possibilities. All will have the potential to grow into blue chips and be "discovered" by Wall Street.

Shortly after the recent decline began, several of Lanyi's selections were off sharply. Asked what effect the declines were having on him, Lanyi said, "I have become more aggressive."

Lanyi said those who know company fundamentals — products, sales, earnings potential, management — can take the ups. It takes discipline and patience. Master those, he suggested, and you can keep cycling the opportunity.

John Wright, chairman of Wright Investors Service in Bridgport, Conn., manages billions of dollars of blue-chip investment portfolios for institutions and clients, and advises many other clients around the world.

The Wright company foresaw the sharp decline and presented clients with extensive written analyses long before it occurred. As he views the sell-off, the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait was merely the trigger.

"I have thought this one would go down at least to 2,700" points on the Dow Jones industrial average, he said. "Then, after a rally, I thought it would decline to 2,100 points."

"We haven't had the rally because of the invasion," Wright said. While he sees a chance that the Dow's low will be between 2,400 and 2,500 points, his stronger expectation is that it will reach 2,100 or 2,200 some time in 1991.

Economy grew at 12 percent

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a lackluster annual rate of 1.2 percent in the April-June quarter, the government said today in a report showing widespread weakness even before Midwest turmoil boosted recession fears.

The small advance in the gross national product — the country's total output of goods and services — served to emphasize just how close to a recession the economy is skirting.

Many economists are now forecasting an imminent economic downturn. The forecasts are based on a belief that higher oil prices in the aftermath of the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait will rekindle inflation and end the peacetime record of nearly eight years of economic growth.

Those fears have roiled financial markets in recent weeks. The Dow Jones industrial average has lost 17 percent of its value since it peaked in mid-July and oil prices have shot up 50 percent to nearly $32 a barrel.

The 1.2 percent GNP growth in the second quarter was especially disappointing because it represented no change from an initial GNP report one month ago.

In advance of today's report, many analysts had been forecasting that the GNP would be revised upward based on higher U.S. export sales than originally believed.

Exports were revised upward as was consumer spending. However, both of those areas of upward revisions were offset by a downward revision in production being held as inventories.

The inflation picture was unchanged in today's report, with a price index tied to the GNP rising at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the second quarter.

Economists believe inflation will worsen significantly in the third quarter, reflecting the higher prices Americans are now paying for gasoline and other forms of energy.

The Bush administration has insisted the country will be able to avoid a recession, even with the uncertainty in the Mideast, if the Federal Reserve begins to lower interest rates to boost lagging growth.

However, the central bank, concerned about rising inflationary pressures, has given no signal that it plans to push interest rates lower to keep the country out of a recession.

The Commerce Department also reported today that after-tax profits earned by American corporations slipped 0.2 percent in the second quarter, their poorest showing since a 5.9 percent decline in the third quarter of 1989.

Corporate profits had been up a tiny 0.5 percent in the first quarter and 1.7 percent in the fourth quarter. Business profits have been hardhit in the past year, reflecting the overall weakness in the economy.

The 1.2 percent GNP growth in the second quarter represented the fifth consecutive quarter in which the economy expanded at an annual rate below 2 percent, a pace far below the level economists believe is necessary to keep the unemployment rate from rising.

The second quarter growth was the weakest since a 0.3 percent advance in the fourth quarter of 1989. The GNP had advanced at an annual rate of 1.7 percent in the first quarter, giving the country a 1.5 percent growth rate for the first half of the year.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said recently that the already weak growth in the first half of the year could be slashed in half to around 0.75 percent in the final six months of 1990 if the ramp up in oil prices caused by the Iraqi invasion is not reversed.

Private economists are even more pessimistic. The latest survey of 49 top economists conducted after the Aug. 2 invasion provided a consensus forecast of growth this year of just 1.3 percent, down from a 1.9 percent estimate the month before.

Mel Gibson enjoys exotic film location

Actor especially enjoyed food on location

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Many film stars return from far-off locations with tales of peril and privation. Now listen to Mel Gibson, who spent three months in the mountainous jungles near the poppy fields of the Golden Triangle of Southeast Asia.

"It's a neat place, you know. It's not so unpleasant. The food is great; it's hard to get a bad feed there. The dogs are a little mangy; you gotta watch out for rabies and stuff—don't walk around at night. The people are absolutely charming. The culture is old and rich and amazingly simple."

Gibson went to Thailand for the filming of "Air America," a Tri-Star Pictures action-adventure about CIA operations in Laos during the Vietnam War. It looks like a physically strenuous shoot, but you won't hear any complaint on that score, either.

"It wasn't too bad," says Gibson. "I think the most strenuous thing I did was cut out of the picture. So it isn't worth talking about."

The star's good feelings may partly be due to his reported salary of $8 million, plus a cut of the profits. Beyond that, Mel maintains a cheerful attitude about the good fortune that has befallen him during his unexpected movie career. That makes him unique amid a new generation of actors who seem to suffer under the pressures of stardom.

"Air America" was the name of the CIA's secret airline that operated in Southeast Asia from the late 1960s to the mid-1970s. The film is partly based on the book by Christopher Robbins, who wrote that the CIA "maintained a secret mercenary army in Laos." The cargo included refugees, ammunition, counterfeit money as well as bushels of opium transported for local war lords, said Robbins.

Gibson and Robert Downey Jr. are among the ragtag group of pilots flying the rugged terrain. To ease into the role, Gibson took lessons in helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft "so I could at least know what to do, what it felt like. I enjoyed it. There's a safer feeling when you can understand it more."

Until he read the script, Gibson was unaware of the secret operations in Laos. "The picture tells about it in a primer fashion, and it's informative. But I don't think most Americans did know about it." He observed, incidentally, that the head of the CIA at that time was — George Bush. "Anyway," he added quickly, "I'm not on a witch hunt."

After appearing in high-energy films like the "Mad Max" cycle and the two "Lethal Weapons," Mel Gibson surprised everyone by taking on the title role in Franco Zeffirelli's "Hamlet." Mel Gibson as the gloomy Dane? Is something off-kilter in Denmark?

"I liked the story, it's a great story," he explained. "It's a very tragic story. It's all about bad timing. Why do it? Why not do it, because it was sitting there for the taking and it was offered to me on nothing less than a silver platter? I couldn't see any reason not to."

NO COMPLAINTS — Mel Gibson had few complaints about three months of shooting on location in the mountainous jungles of Thailand for the making of his latest film, "Air America." Gibson plays a pilot in the Tri-Star Pictures action-adventure about CIA operations in Laos during the Vietnam War.

"I liked the story," said Gibson. "It's a great story...a very tragic story: it's all about bad timing."

"Why do it? Why not do it, because it was sitting there for the taking and it was offered to me on nothing less than a silver platter? I couldn't see any reason not to."

Mel Gibson's dual nationality, along with his good looks, contribute to the immense popularity he now enjoys after a dozen films. He spent his first 12 years in upstate New York, then moved with his large family — he was sixth among 11 children — to Sydney. After his graduation from the National Institute of Dramatic Arts, he was picked by director George Miller to play "Mad Max."

His first international films — "The Bounty," "The River," "Mrs. Soffel" — were unsuccessful, but Gibson made his box-office mark with "Lethal Weapon." Now his choice of projects is unlimited.

A devout Catholic, Gibson, 34, strives to maintain a balance between career and family; he and his wife now have six children, including 7-year-old twins. He tries to take them all along wherever he works.

"We had to suspend that because of the 'Air America' location," he said.

"I didn't want to risk going through all that business of inoculations and kids in the jungle and talk about the snakes."

"Geography and time permitting, they go to school wherever we are. There's a sense of semi-permanence from above the 45th parallel, because of the disease problem below the 45th," he said. "Then there's the genetic part at the end: what you end up with walking around on the ground. A cow with a sheep's head. No, not really. It's not genetic engineering."

"They're really nice animals. You can practically map out what you want and be sure of hitting fairly near the mark. You can do in three years what took your grandfather all his life."

Director celebrates dawn of the debts

By JOHN HORN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The debts and their dates in the movie "Metropolitan" mock teen-agers from New York's lesser neighborhoods, and muse about the Urban Haute Bourgeoise, calling themselves UHBs for short.

These are the kind of insufferable kids you'd be tempted to push into a puddle. Yet writer-director Whit Stillman's camera passes through their luxurious New York lives with affection. His fictional creation is as much a comic homage as ironic critique.

"I want to avoid holding them up to ridicule," said Stillman.

The independently produced "Metropolitan," in which the 38-year-old Stillman makes his filmmaking debut, has been praised for its insight, detail and deft humor. It premiered in January at the Sundance United States Film Festival in Utah, and was included in the Directors' Fortnight section of the Cannes Film Festival in May.

There was a documentary done a year or so ago where they just took a camera and went to some silly deb party, and it's so easy to do," Stillman said. "You can point a documentary camera at anyone in any line of work and make them look like idiots. And making the debts look like idiots was not my intention."

Modestly budgeted at less than $1 million, "Metropolitan" was filmed in and around New York City. It follows a group of debts and their escorts over a Christmas vacation, wandering through a world of dances, late-night philosophical discussions and parlor games.

The characters, played by a talented cast of young actors making their film debuts, speak with the forced sophistication of upper-crust cocktail party hosts.

The Sally Fowler Rat Pack, as this clique calls itself, is led by Nick, a quick-tongued cynic who knows the Brooks Brothers floor plan by heart. Charlie is an intellectual moralist who is convinced his generation is doomed to failure; Audrey is a quiet, fragile beauty who wants to be loved; and Jane is a wealthy snob. They converge at Fowler's well-appointed home.

Into this group strolls Tom Townsend. He's an intellectual poseur ("a committed Socialist but not a Marxist," he calls himself) who professes an interest in Jane Austen, but not her books. "I don't read novels," he says. "I prefer good literary criticism."

While the film is not intensely autobiographical, its story is derived in part from Stillman's own martini hoisting in the New York deb scene around 1969.

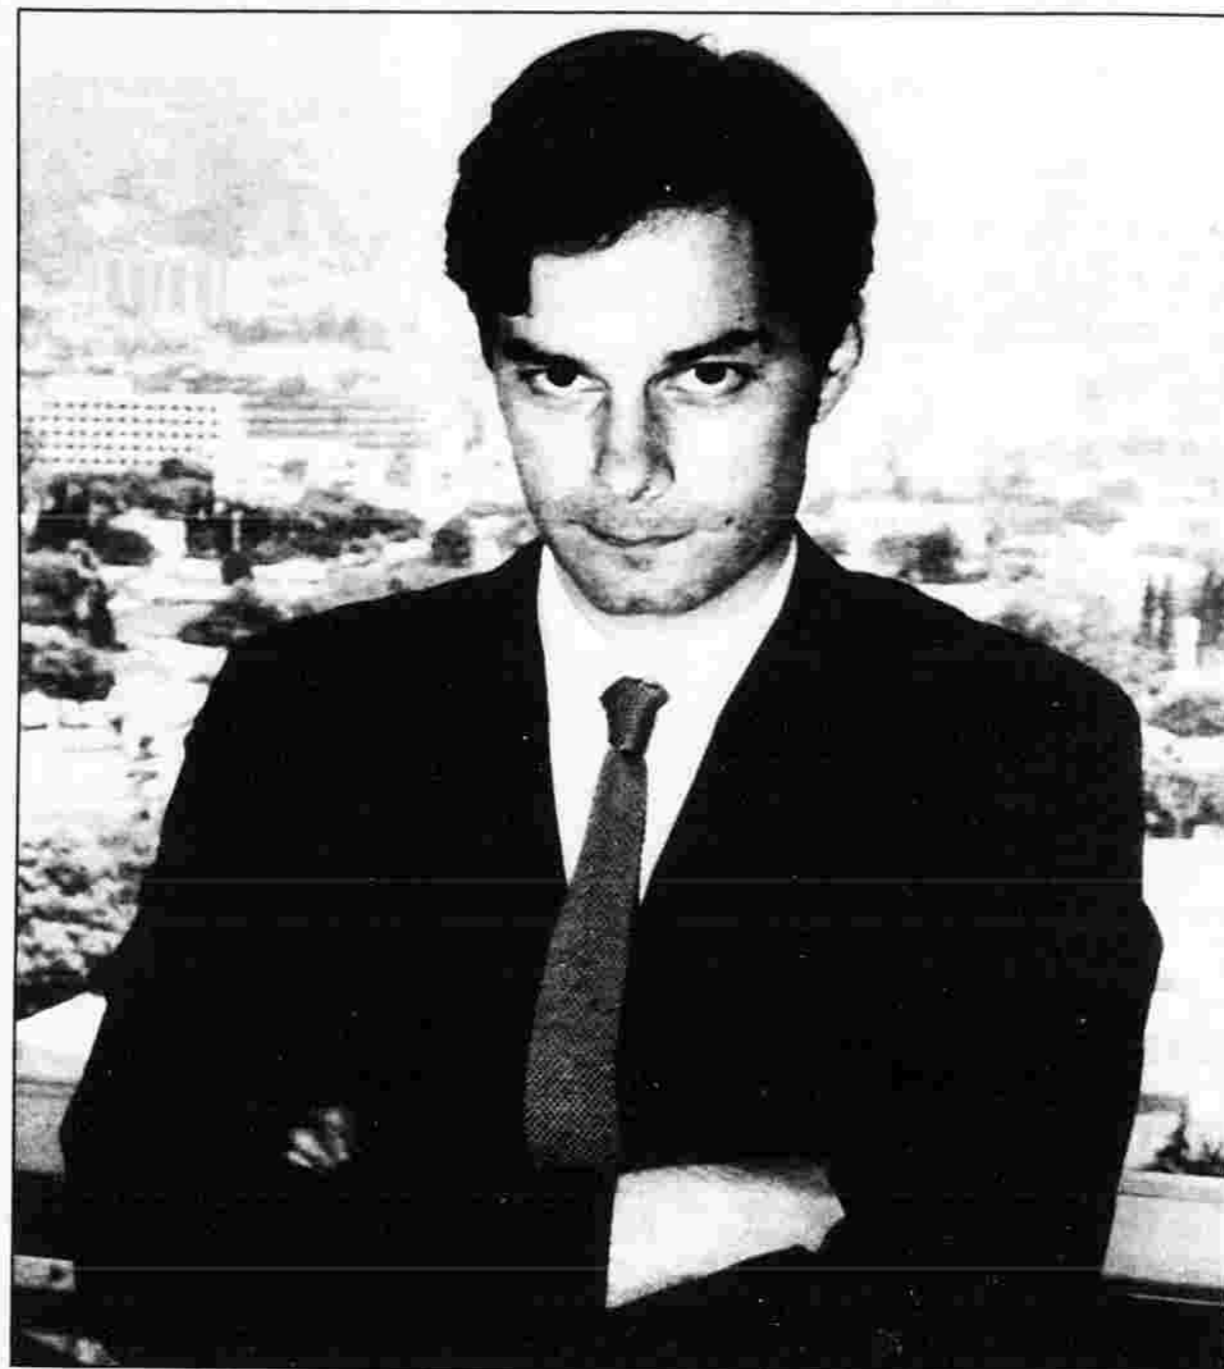

His Social Register leanings weren't overly apparent in high school. A fan of agrarianism and a self-described left-winger, Stillman's commencement speech was titled "Social Reform and the American Dream."

"And then I went to a lot of deb parties after giving this harangue," he said, smiling. "The film is very substantially based on memories of that period, when I was going to those parties."

He began writing the screenplay in a cheap restaurant on the French Riviera in 1985. Before and during the four years it took to finish the script, he worked in book and magazine publishing, and represented Spanish filmmakers. He also worked at a family business representing cartoonists, including Sempe, famous for his New Yorker covers.

Stillman, who's listed in the Social Register with his wife, Irene Perez-Porro, is purebred Blue Blood.

He was born John Whitney Stillman, the great-grandson of James Stillman, former president and chairman of National City Bank of New York (now Citicorp).

FILMMAKER DEBUTES — Whit Stillman, shown during a recent interview in Los Angeles, makes his filmmaking debut with the movie "Metropolitan." The debts and their dates in the movie mock teen-agers from New York's lesser neighborhoods, and muse about the Urban Haute Bourgeoise, calling themselves UHBs for short.

And there are ties to the great American money dynasties: Two sons of William Rockefeller, brother of John D. of Standard Oil of New York (now Mobil), married two of Stillman's daughters. One of their sons married into the Andrew Carnegie family. James Stillman was a Rockefeller cousin.

The filmmaker said his parents were liberals and not very interested in New York society. His father, John S., was a lawyer in the Kennedy Administration and former chairman of the New York State Bridge Authority.

He was born John Whitney Stillman, the great-grandson of James Stillman, former president and chairman of National City Bank of New York (now Citicorp).

Washington.

But the family's riches (James Stillman left a $70 million trust to his three sons, their children and grandchildren) were mostly dissipated by the time Whit became an adult.

He financed the film by selling a cooperative apartment and through investments from friends. He often shot the movie from 5 p.m. to 6 a.m., the only times he had access to prime locations. A family friend let the production film inside the old Alan J. Lerner mansion on East 71st Street. Stillman vacated the rooms after wrapping each morning.

The facts about exterior caulk

By READER'S DIGEST

Most homeowners know that caulking cracks in the exterior of their house helps reduce heat loss in winter and makes it easier to cool in summer.

Caulk also keeps out moisture and pests. But with so many kinds of caulk available, deciding which to buy can be daunting.

Here are the facts so you can fill those cracks:

Choosing the Caulk: Caulking compounds are sold in bulk cans, in cartridges for use with a gun, in squeeze tubes and in rope-like strips good for temporary seals around storm windows and air conditioners. For a homeowner, it's usually most convenient to use cartridges in guns.

There are six basic types of caulk: — Oil-base caulk is inexpensive and will bond to most surfaces including wood, masonry and metal. But it dries out relatively fast and is recommended only for temporary fixes.

— Latex-base, water-thinned caulk is fast-drying and will take paint very well. It's a good all-around caulk that is easy to use and relatively long-lasting.

— Butyl rubber caulk is long-lasting and best suited for making metal-to-masonry joints.

— Polyvinyl acetate caulk is a durable material that adheres to all surfaces, including paint.

— Silicone caulk is long lasting and takes well to all surfaces except paint.

Because paint won't adhere to pure silicone caulk, it's usually best to choose clear caulk or a color that goes with the color of your house. Or use a silicone acrylic caulk, which is paintable and fairly durable.

— One-part polyurethane caulk is the longest lasting of all the compounds. Applied to a properly prepared surface, it will last for up to 40 years. But it won't take paint and it comes in a very limited number of colors.

Where to Apply: Caulking is needed wherever two materials or parts of a house are joined.

— Where windows and doors meet siding, including under sills and above drip caps.

— At all corners formed by siding.

— Where the foundation meets siding.

— Where the chimney meets siding.

— Between the underside of eaves and gable molding.

— Between masonry steps, porches, patios, decks and the main body of the house.

— Around pipes, exhaust-fan outlets and clothes-dryer vents.

— Between siding and any part protruding from the main body of the house.

— Sizable cracks in wood siding, concrete, roofing and masonry surfaces may require a permanent repair job, instead of caulk. But you can fill many cracks wider than a half inch with caulk (loosely twisted hemp or jute fiber impregnated with tar).

How to Apply:

1. Before you begin, be sure to prepare the surfaces to be caulked. Scrape away any dirt, grease and old compound with a putty knife; finish cleaning with a wire brush. To ensure adhesion, most caulks require wiping the surface with a solvent such as mineral spirits — check the label directions. When dealing with a lacquered aluminum surface, first remove the lacquer with xylol, then wire brush the surface and finally apply a metal primer with a rust-inhibiting agent.

2. For an average-size job, use a cartridge inserted in a caulking gun. Cut the end of the nozzle diagonally at a width equal to that of most cracks, and push a long nail down the joint instead of pulling it.

3. Weather affects how caulk goes on. Caulk on a mild, dry day when it's over 50 degrees. On a hot day, refrigerate caulk for an hour or two to keep it from running. To keep unfinished tubes of caulking fresh, plug the hole in the tip with a 1/4" common nail.

Garlic earns a strong place

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Garlic is earning a stronger place in the garden. There is a national Fresh Garlic Association, and a number of states have promotional organizations. Garlic is one of the oldest crops grown worldwide and long was considered a giver of health, protector from evil, and even an aphrodisiac. It is used to flavor and season many food products. In some countries, the green tops are used as well as the bulb cloves.

In mild regions, garlic is a perennial plant. It is frost-hardy, and a period of cold improves growth and clove formation.

In 1609, the following appeared in a publication called "The Englishman's Doctor":

"Garlic then have power to save from death; Bear with it though it make unsavory breath; And scorn not garlic like some that think; It only maketh man wick and drink and stink."

Part-time organic farmer Bob Yerina of Garlic Delite Farms, Little Falls, N.Y., who got his first seed from his father 15 years ago, harvested an initial crop of 4,000 heads. Last year, the yield was 30,000 heads and he expects 72,000 this year from his 1989 planting. His growing season is April to November.

Most cultivated garlics — there are 300 known varieties — were brought to this continent by Europeans and Asians. Many have been grown for generations in small family gardens. Other strains were found growing in abandoned fields.

The New York Garlic Seed Foundation is involved in propagation, production, storage, marketing and analysis of the food value and medicinal properties of garlic (Allium sativum), which is closely allied to onions.

Yerina plants the Hard Neck variety, which takes two years from seed planting to form a head. The first year, a single bulb forms, sending up a green shoot that Yerina says is delicious chopped and eaten raw. The single bulb, replanted the following year, develops into a head of garlic. He saves only the largest heads for seed stock.

The mature bulb is composed of several separable parts or bulbils, called cloves, planted usually early in spring or fall. Bulbs are white-skinned, some rose-tinted, maturing in summer or early fall.

Cornell University's Roger A. Kline reports that the pungent, piquant vegetable can be grown successfully in northern climates. The northern yield is about 5 tons of bulbs per acre. In California, where Gilroy is the garlic capital, growers may get 8 tons.

Yerina plants cloves 3 to 4 inches deep in loose, fertile soil, worked over five times with a Rototiller, 6 inches apart, in triple rows with a 9- to 12-inch aisle between groups of triple rows.

Yerina has discovered a homemade insect repellent. While working in his garlic beds, he has cracked open a head of garlic and wiped some behind his ears to keep insects from bothering him.

"Garlic," he relates, "has no smell until the head is cracked open." But he said it was possible to get "garlic breath" without eating it, since the odor is so strong it can be absorbed through the skin.

Yerina says there are three "W's" to growing a good garlic crop: "water, plenty of it; weed the crop — daily, if possible; and work — growing takes time and labor."

David Stern, director of the New York Foundation, says: "For hundreds of years, garlic has been used in folk medicines, and modern doctors never knew why. But today's experiments show that garlic contains allicin, which can help cure such diseases as polio and herpes."

Program for older students

(AP) — While most college students spend their time at school waiting for summer breaks, some of their parents and grandparents are spending vacations back in class.

Elderhostel programs are patterned after European youth hostels, in which travelers can live in groups, and are offered at more than 1,500 schools worldwide to people aged 60 and over.

"What elderhostel shows is that learning really doesn't ever end," said William Washington, special programs director at Cranbrook-Kingswood School in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. Cranbrook-Kingswood is one of 30 programs in Michigan.

While some Michigan schools offer courses year-round, about 75 percent of the older students attend classes from June to August.

"People are living healthier, more active lives, and this is a program that helps them do that," said Lynn Kindel, state director at elderhostel's Central Michigan University headquarters.

Cady Goldberg, public relations director for the elderhostel national headquarters in Boston, said the program "transcends the stereotypical activities that have previously been assigned to the retirement years, like bingo and bowling."

Kindel said there are no educational prerequisites. "All you need to be is interested and active."

The program started in 1975 under Marty Knowlton, a social activist who once drove an ambulance in the French Foreign Legion, and David Bianco, director of residential life at the University of New Hampshire.

Homes: Questions and answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS

QUESTION: I've been told new concrete should be kept moist for at least three days while curing. I'm wondering just how much stronger can it get, and how long should it cure for maximum strength?

ANSWER: Keeping concrete moist helps the curing process. Concrete hardens as a result of a chemical reaction, called hydration, between cement and water, not because it dries. The hardening, or curing, continues as long as moisture remains in the concrete. If too much water is lost from the concrete through evaporation, hydration — and the hardening process — slows down or ceases.

Concrete continues to gain strength after pouring for as long as it retains moisture, but the longer it retains moisture, the slower the rate of strength gain. Moist-curing concrete for 20 days more than doubles its strength compared with four days of moist-curing, which is considered a minimum. Although the greatest gain is in the first week or two after pouring, the curing process continues for several months. Concrete that is not moist-cured at all dries too rapidly, and reaches less than half its potential design strength. It will also have a greater number of shrinkage cracks.

The most frequent moist-curing method is to spread moisture-retaining fabric, such as burlap, over the concrete after it has hardened enough to prevent surface damage. The fabric should be kept thoroughly soaked with a garden hose so a film of water remains on the entire surface of the concrete throughout the curing period.

QUESTION: I am interested in making a below-grade finished basement into a comfortable office. There is no water seepage, but even so, the basement is cold and clammy in the summer. I'm using a dehumidifier and a portable heater, but cannot overcome the discomfort. Any suggestions?

ANSWER: You have the ingredients for making the finished basement into a comfortable office all year long. However, either you need additional heaters and dehumidifiers or you are not using the ones you have long enough each day.

If you have two or more rooms in your basement, a single dehumidifier in one room will not effectively reduce the humidity in the other room, especially if the connecting door is closed. If the door is open a single dehumidifier will need a fan to circulate the air.

Most dehumidifiers have an automatic control switch which will shut them off at a predetermined humidity setting. Let the unit operate until it shuts itself off.

During hot, muggy summer days, the dehumidifier may run almost continuously. If you shut it down prematurely, the unit will not reduce the humidity to the comfort level.

A space heater is effective in heating a single room. If you want to heat more than one room, you'll need a fan to circulate the air between rooms. Even in a single room, a fan will be helpful in achieving uniform heat distribution.

MUSEUM PIECE — This 1926 Crosby Pup is one of many antique radios on display at the Old Time Radio Museum in Lawndale, Calif.

Old time radio museum opens

This 1926 Crosby Pup is a good example of what you would find in the Museum of the Month as reported in the latest Antique Trader newspaper. The fanfare is for the newly opened Old Time Radio Museum in Lawndale, Calif. The owners, Charles and Terri MacQuarrie, would welcome any word from like-minded collectors. (Zip 90260; Tel. 213-475-6017).

At Mac's place with its 1,000 receivers, you can track the evolution of the radio from the early contraptions that used a movable wire to poke here and there on a lead sulfide crystal until something jittered on the headphones. Tops for this type was probably the Beaver "Baby Grand" as shown in the Time-Life Encyclopedia of Collectibles.

A real boost for radio listening came with the first commercial broadcast by KDKA of Pittsburgh

The horizontal stamps depict headresses from the Assiniboine, Cheyenne, Comanche, Flathead and Shoshone tribes. The designs were based on a privately owned Comanche bonnet, and four headresses in the Plains Indian Museum at the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyo.

Headresses, sometimes called war bonnets, were worn by the Indian men as badges of honor and prestige. Usually, the headress was created by the individual who wore it. In most instances, his headpiece was buried with him.

First-day cancellations are available in either of two ways. The deadline for ordering is Sept. 16. Collectors may buy the stamps at a local post office, affix them to their own self-addressed covers and send them to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Indian Headresses Stamps, Postmaster, 1301 Stampede Ave., Cody, WY 82414-9991. The Postal Service gives this type of request preferential service.

You may have the Postal Service affix the stamps, but it will only affix sets of five stamps, one per envelope. Aruba Honors Nature

The West Indies island of Aruba has issued two new stamps series with the themes Environment Protection and Underwater View.

The Environment Protection set contains three stamps. The 45-cent depicts a landscape showing the restoration of nature; the 55-cent illustrates the Aruban Eagle, or "waru waru"; and the 1-dollar shows respect for the living sea.

The Underwater Views set has two 60-cent, two 70-cent and three 1-dollar stamps. Pictured are anemones, shrimp, queen angelfish, red coral and sponges, all found in Aruban waters.

Collectors who specialize in baseball stamps will welcome a multicolored commemorative envelope honoring the International Baseball Association All-Star Game held recently in Atlanta.

U.N. stamps to be issued

By SYD KRONISH

The United Nations Postal Administration plans to release a set of six stamps and a souvenir card in recognition of the U.N.'s crime prevention program. The new issues will be released Sept. 16, at the conclusion of the Eighth U.N. Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, held in Havana.

The U.N. program of crime prevention and criminal justice aims to reduce crime throughout the world and to establish international standards for the administration of justice.

The program was established in 1950 to provide a forum for the presentation of policies and to stimulate progress. Crime Congresses meet every five years. Each stamp represents one of six topics on the agenda of the 1990 Crime Congress. Stamps bearing U.S. denominations of 25 cents and 36 cents depict crimes of young offenders, organized crime and criminal activities.

The souvenir card features the complete set of six stamps and carries a message from Javier Perez de Cuellar, U.N. secretary general. It reads: "Trans-national crime presents a growing threat to individuals and societies all over the world. It must be combated through a concerted drive by the whole international community."

For information on acquiring these issues, write to: U.N. Postal Administration, United Nations, New York, NY 10017.

New TV drama stars Arnaz

By JERRY BUCK
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Lucie Arnaz says that her new CBS drama "Sons and Daughters" is a series that has something to say about everyone.

"That's a broad statement, but she thinks the series title, a last-minute change from "The Hammersmiths," helps.

"When people ask me what the new name means I ask, 'Are you a son or a daughter?'"

"When they say yes, I say, 'It's about you.' It's a name that says something about parenting and being a son or a daughter."

She says, "It's not a show that's easy to explain and 'The Hammersmiths' didn't give you a clue."

"Sons and Daughters," a one-hour show on Thursday nights with a 13-member ensemble cast, is about a lot of offspring — mostly the spawn of Bing Hammersmith. There are four generations of Hammersmiths, with the "thirtysomething" sons and daughters as the major focus.

"I play Tess Hammersmith, and she's a survivor, like some of my favorite people in the world," says Arnaz. "She's trying to make ends meet. She's trying to be a good soul to her daughter. We all have stuff that happens to us that make us swear our family's crazier than any other."

"Being a parent is one of the most important things in the world, but you don't need a license for it and no one gets any training. Tess's father, Bing, had a traveling job and was never home. Her mother got fed up and walked out, forcing Tess at 15 to be the reluctant mother to her brother and sister."

The series opens with Bing (Don Murray) unexpectedly returning home with a new young wife (Lisa Blount) and a baby son. He wants to reclaim the house that Tess has been living in with her adopted daughter.

The series also stars Peggy Smithhart as Tess' sister Patty, Rick Rossovich as Patty's husband, Scott Plank as Tess' status-conscious brother and Stacy Edwards as his wife.

"Sons and Daughters" is set in Portland, Ore. "I tell people we're in the town next to Twin Peaks," says Arnaz, referring to the offbeat mystery series set in Washington state featuring the murder of a high school girl.

She says her show is also more true to life than "Father Knows Best," "The Donna Reed Show" or "Here's Lucy," in which she and her brother, Desi Arnaz Jr., starred with their mother, Lucille Ball.

"It's fascinating raising kids," she says. "I have three kids, each two years apart and each going through a phase." Her husband is actor Laurence Luckinbill.

"Larry also has joint custody of two older children," Arnaz says. "His ex-wife, Robin Strasser, lives two blocks away. She's an enormous help, let me tell you. The day my mother died she was at my doorstep and took care of the kids. I was in shock."

Arnaz made her acting debut in "Here's Lucy" in 1968. In 1985, she starred very briefly in "The Lucie Arnaz Show." She has spent much of her career on stage, but she has also been in feature movies including a major role in "The Jazz Singer" and such TV movies as "Who Is the Black Dahlia?" "Washington Mistress," "The Mating Season" and "Who Gets the Friends?"

Her husband is currently working on a Broadway musical about her father called "Desi."

"Larry's writing the musical and I'm sort of protecting it from my brother and my side of the family," she says. Some relatives may not like it.

"It's been a longstanding project. Larry only recently turned it into a musical. We originally took it to CBS as a TV movie. Larry worked on the script with Bernard Dubert of 'M.A.S.H.' In 1987 it went out with a lot of other CBS projects.

"Rosalie" lively and colorful

By DOLORES BARCLAY
The Associated Press

"Rosalie Goes Shopping" (Vidmark, VHS-Beta, $89.95, Rated PG)
German filmmaker Percy Adlon has an extraordinary eye for the absurdly familiar. A documentary maker and highly literate director, he uses the camera like a gentle and loyal lover to capture in a blink the richness of everyday life as lived by the most ordinary people.

And what he achieves on the large screen, translates well to video.
In "Rosalie Goes Shopping," his third movie with the delightfully zofig German actress Marianne Sägebrecht ("Sugarbaby," "Bagdad Cafe"), Adlon sets moods and establishes motivations with angled shots and still lifes. His camera does not rush, but what it records bursts on the screen in colorful and lively images.

He has created a memorable family of crazies nested in a heartwarming story about American consumerism and credit. They live in Stuttgart, Ark., where Ray Greenpeace (Brad Davis) is a crocheter whose passion is flying and whose mistress is his yellow plane. He turns over his paycheck to his wife, Rosalie (a "peacemaker war bride"), and marvels at her ability to provide a good home and manage the books.

Lulu does he know?
The family is living far beyond its means, with Rosalie just one step ahead of creditors and possibly jail. She forges checks, bounces checks, charges up a sum on a credit card and then reports it stolen. Rosalie knows every scam in the pay-with-plastic trickbook.

Armed with her 37 credit cards, rubbery checks, wit and guts, she spends her days shopping for her family of seven, providing them with the best in clothing, food and entertainment.

Son Schimück (John Hawkes) is an aspiring gourmet chef, so he needs to practice on the family. And so for just one evening's meal, Rosalie spends hundreds of dollars on food supplies.

Daughter Barbara (Narcia Zehentmayr), furious that her mother traded in her car to buy one for her brother Schimück (Alex Winter), will settle only for an $11,000 computer for her birthday. Rosalie inflates her husband's advance paycheck to buy it.

But the computer turns out to be a godsend for Rosalie who becomes a hacker extraordinaire and a tycoon. As the mailman tells her, if you borrow $100,000 it's your problem; if you owe $1 million, it's the bank's problem.

Brad Davis, who played the drug smuggler in "Midnight Express" and a '60s counterculture type in "A Small Circle of Friends," is just wonderful with his lip-pursed stupid grin and graced hair. Big excitement for Ray is the sound of his plane's engine, which he has recorded and often plays at the dinner table.

He's the perfect mate for Sägebrecht, who does wonders for the self-esteem of heavy women. She's intelligent, loving, sensual, cute, pretty and all-woman—a Bavarian Molly Bloom. She doesn't think she's doing anything too terribly wrong, just behaving the way America wants its citizens to behave—by buying and spending and supporting the American economy. Besides, her daily confessions to the priest make it all OK.

Adlon's camera loves Sägebrecht. He photographs every pore of her face and every angle of her ample body. And she has so many different looks, from alluring to hurt.

She loves her husband and children; but she misses Germany. She loves her parents but is not above appropriating their first-class airline tickets so she can use the money for her own designs. In the end, she beats the system and keeps everybody happy—except perhaps a bank or two.

Films in fall turn serious

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Still glowing from a hot though non-record summer, the movie business enters the fall season with something a little different from the high-budget, body-count films that dominated the past three months.

The warm-weather box office produced some big numbers, with "Die Hard 2," "Total Recall," "Dick Tracy" and "Ghost" passing the $100 million mark. Daily Variety's Art Murphy calculates the 1990 summer is only 6 percent short of last year's sizzler, which amassed a record $719 million.

The surprises this year were a pair of romantic fantasies, "Pretty Woman" ($170 million) and "Ghost" (climbing to $100 million in only five weeks). Hollywood is hoping for more of that hit in the fall product, which leans heavily on comedy and drama and less on violence.

There are a few promising films among the fall harvest:

— "Postcards From the Edge," Meryl Streep and Shirley Maclaine as mother and daughter in Carrie Fisher's novel, directed by Mike Nichols.

— "Awakenings," Penny Marshall ("Big") directing Robert De Niro and Robin Williams as amnesia victim and doctor.

— "Goodfellas," a Mafia yarn based on the book "Wiseguy," Robert De Niro and Ray Liota directed by Martin Scorsese.

— "White Hunter, Black Heart," Clint Eastwood directs himself in a script based on John Huston's adventures during the filming of "The African Queen."

— "Pacific Heights," a thriller with Michael Keaton as a presumably friendly neighbor to a couple, Melanie Griffith and Matthew Modine.

— "The Rescuers Down Under," a new Disney animated feature and the first sequel; Bob Newhart and Eva Gabor repeat their voicing of special mouse agents Bernard and Miss Bianca.

— "Dances With Wolves," Kevin Costner starring and directing an epic of Western America.

If the fall season seems a bit serious, that's because the studios trot out the dramas that might get lost in the summer and, not coincidentally, that might contain potentials for Academy Awards.

Some of the more prestigious offerings include:

— "Akira Kurosawa's Dreams," an interpretation of the great director's dreams with a mostly Japanese cast and Scorsese as Vincent van Gogh.

— "Deceptive Hours," a remake of the Humphrey Bogart-Fredric March thriller with Mickey Rourke and Anthony Hopkins directed by Michael Cimino ("The Deer Hunter," "Heaven's Gate").

— "Reversal of Fortune," the Claus von Bulow story starring Glenn Close, Jeremy Irons and Ron Silver.

— "Avalon," Barry Levinson ("Rain Man") continues his trilogy of Baltimore life that includes "Diner" and "Tin Men."

— "The Last Picture Show" with most of the original cast.

— "White Palace," Sean Sarnandan and James Spader involved in a misanthropic sexual adventure.

— "State of Grace," Sean Penn returns to his childhood haunts in New York's Hell's Kitchen.

— "Miller's Crossing," the offbeat Coen brothers ("Raising Arizona") return with a mob-oriented drama starring Gabriel Byrne and Albert Finney.

Comedies will also play a major role in the fall season.

"Alice" is Woody Allen's return to comedy, with a cast including Mia Farrow, William Hurt, Cybill Shepherd and Alec Baldwin.

Bob Hope writes about tours

By RON BERTHEL The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's hard to say how many times in his career Bob Hope has introduced some notable as "a person who needs no introduction."

But if ever there were someone who needed no introduction, it is Hope himself.

Hope was in New York recently to promote his latest book, "Don't Shoot, It's Only Me" (Putnam), and, cool, despite the midsummer heat and the fact that, for the past two nights, he hadn't gotten to sleep "until 5 in the morning. I'm still on Coast time," he explained.

"Don't Shoot, It's Only Me" concentrates on the many years of Hope's career in which he led a troupe of entertainers on Christmas visits to American servicemen. These tours spanned three wars and took Hope and his party to some of the world's hot spots.

"They took good care of us," Hope said of his military hosts, "but we ran into a couple of spots."

One of those spots was Saigon, and Hope details in his book how an unexpected, 10-minute delay kept him and his ensemble from being right at the scene of a hotel explosion set by the Viet Cong. "Two were killed and 99 injured," said Hope, who had heard the blasts as his convoy was approaching.

The visits to military bases began innocently in 1941, when Hope and the cast of his Popolotario radio show were asked to perform at a nearby California air base. The entertainers were astounded and gratified by the tremendously appreciative military audience. Soon after, when the United States became involved in World War II, regular tours to entertain the fighting men and women seemed to follow naturally.

And they followed for more than 40 years. For many Christmases, while Hope was entertaining his military "family" overseas, the four Hope children were home, celebrating the holiday without their father.

When the tours began, the children were young. "But they got to understand after awhile. Then I started taking them on trips with me. . . . After they got to know more about it, they appreciated it."

"When I got back, we had great times. We had our New Year's Eve together. It was more important to be over there at Christmas time. That's when the kids (in the service) really needed it."

Hope was hard-pressed to name anyone in his illustrious show business career with whom he would have liked to have worked but didn't. "Maybe Greta Garbo," he said after awhile, adding, with a twinkle: "She wanted to be alone."

Typical humor has long been one of Hope's reliable laugh-getters, so "Don't Shoot" is a reflection of the times as well as an informal history of the United States.

Hope writes: "There is an old proverb that those who don't learn from history are destined to repeat its mistakes. . . . One of the reasons for writing this book is to tell a whole generation that what happened before they were born does matter. In the modern world, Americans are being outsmarted every day by nations we defeated over 40 years ago."

"Their kids know exactly what happened."

The book is co-authored by Melville Shavelson, whom Hope hired more than 50 years ago as one of the writers for the Popolotario show. But, Hope says, "It took a lot of people to write this book. . . . about 40 people worked on (it). I'm talking about all the writers that worked on the material over the years."

At 87 years of age, and with a phenomenal, six-decade career behind him in which he seems to have done it all, he's been everywhere, and known everyone there is to know. Hope the entertainer entertains no thought of "retiring and going fishing."

NEW QUEEN OF COUNTRY? — Reba McEntire has accomplished, among other things, being the only person ever voted female vocalist of the year four times by the Country Music Association.

Reba McEntire has many goals

By JOE EDWARDS The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Reba McEntire is the only singer ever voted female vocalist of the year four times by the Country Music Association.

She has performed live for millions. She has a platinum album (more than a million copies sold) for her "Greatest Hits." She's won a Grammy, appeared on three Bob Hope TV specials and branched out into acting.

"Everything," she said. "We want to sell more tickets and more albums. Do movies and television. Produce records. Have a bigger publishing company. Have more acts for my company."

"We've got lots to do."

McEntire, 35, who took off five months to have her first baby in February, has had six straight gold albums, and was voted best female country vocalist from 1984-87.

She's in the midst of a 115-city concert tour that began May 3. Her 17th album, "Rumor Has It," has just been released.

She recently acted in her first movie, "Tomors," appearing as a survivalist with star Kevin Bacon.

"I like to act and I want to pursue it more," she said in an interview in her office a few days after singing at the Goodwill Games in Seattle. "Of course music and touring is No. 1."

Her single, "Walk On," reached No. 2 on the country music charts in July. It was about persevering during hard times, and joined other topical issues she previously has tackled: "The Stairs" was about wife abuse, and "Am I the Only One Who Cares" dealt with teen-age suicide and alienation.

"Fancy," in her new album, is about a mother pushing a girl into prostitution to get ahead in life. "I chose it because I liked it," McEntire said. "I've wanted to record it for five years."

Her 1987 Grammy was for "Whoever's in New England." Her other hit records include "Cathy's Clown," "New Fool at an Old Game," "Little Rock," "Love Will Find Its Way to You," "One Promise Too Late" and "What Am I Gonna Do About You."

McEntire recently was co-host of ABC's "Good Morning America," filling in for Joan Lunden who was on vacation. She appeared on the Hope specials on NBC during the past few years.

LIAM NEESON

A rising star

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — As a boy growing up in Ireland, Liam Neeson loved to be scared by Hollywood horror movies. Now he can do some of the scaring himself.

The towering (6 feet, 4 inches), gentle-voiced actor stars as "Darkman" in the new thriller from Universal Pictures. He plays Dr. Peyton Westlake, a dedicated scientist whose breakthrough research on synthetic skin is stolen by hit men who ruin his face and leave him for dead. Westlake rises from the ashes, sets up a new lab in an abandoned building and returns as Darkman to punish the bad guys. Sort of the Phantom of the Opera meets Batman.

"It's a mixture of the genre," Neeson admitted, "with lots of characters who have been cinematically created in the '40s and '50s: Charles Laughton in 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,' Karloff, Colin Clive, the scientist in the 'Frankenstein' films. It also owes a lot of allegiance to 'The Shadow.'"

"I was attracted to it for a multitude of reasons. Darkman was part of my growing-up process, my first appreciation of cinema — certainly with Charles Laughton, also Spencer Tracy in 'Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde.'"

"It was a chance to actually fulfill some childhood wishes and fantasies, which was to play this romantic lead — because I see Darkman as very romantic — yet this dark, somewhat sinister, mysterious guy. He's sort of like an avenging angel, but he's just a regular guy trying to get his life together. It was a good compilation for an actor to try to do."

It would also be an ordeal: climbing into the makeup chair at 2 or 3 in the morning and emerging five hours later with Dr. Westlake's ravaged face.

"I had to get physically fit for it, and I trained like an athlete," he said. "I trained throughout the film, because my next role was as a bare-knuckle fighter. I killed two birds with one stone, so to speak."

"Darkman" marks a major leap for Neeson's career: It's his first starring role in an American film. He has already made a profound impression in a succession of attention-getting roles: as the sardonic director of horror film in "The Dead Pool" with Clint Eastwood, as the mute accused-murderer defended by Cher in "Suspect"; as Diane Keaton's sculptor lover in "The Good Mother."

Ballymena in Northern Ireland was Liam Neeson's birthplace, and he drifted comfortably into acting. He started in school plays at 10 or 11, and decided at 16 that he had to act.

came on the Sabbath. So does ours. "And the child that is born on the Sabbath Day is fair and wise and good and gay" — Why is that? Fair because he understands the idea of fair play, of sharing? Wise, because he's learned the Good Word and lives it? Good, because it's truly the easiest thing to do, just to be good? Gay, because a happy heart is one that lives forever?

FOCUS/Advice

Widow suspects her ace may be a joker

(NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.)
DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my late 50s who has been keeping company with a bachelor my age for three years. My problem is I still haven't met any of his family members.

He lives on a farm with his mother and two sisters. I've never been to his house because his mother is senile and both his sisters are crazy.

He doesn't work and says he has no income, but he owns a little property and drives a nice car. He's asked me not to phone him because he has a party line, which he says everybody listens in on, and he doesn't want people knowing his business.

Last year his brother died, but he didn't tell me until after he buried him because he said it was a private funeral and his brother was crazy. I'm beginning to think insanity runs in his family.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

If I weren't so darned lonesome, I'd forget him, but he does play a nice game of gin rummy. How do you and your experts figure him?

DEAR MINNIE: My experts suspect that your gentleman friend is either married, crazy or both. And your advice is to determine his marital status, find another gin rummy partner or take up solitaire.

DEAR ABBY: I took your advice and acted like a liberated woman by calling up a guy and arranging a date with him.

Well, it just didn't work out. You said a man would feel "flattered" to have a girl call him and tell him up front she thought they would enjoy each other's company.

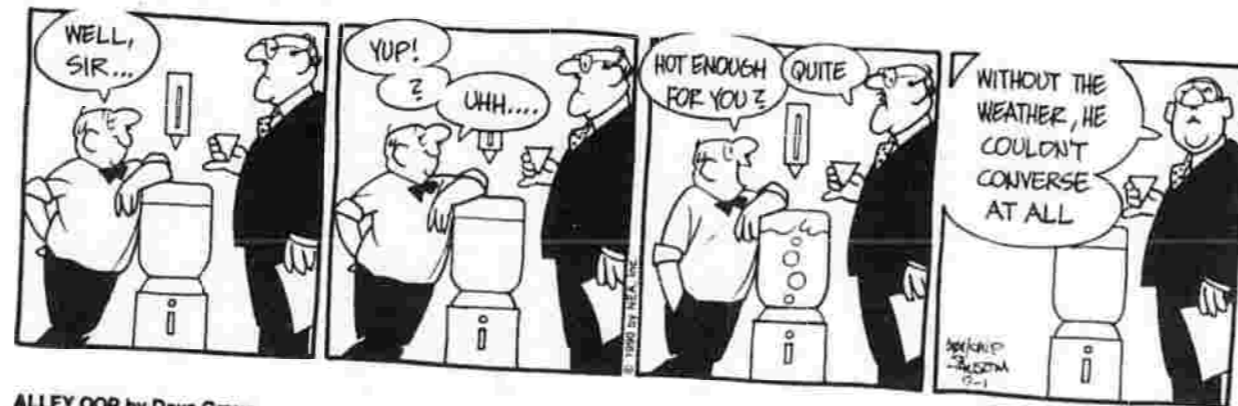

This guy was flattered all right, but his ego got to be too much by the end of the evening. He couldn't buy the idea that I didn't want to get him between the sheets. (I'm afraid the average man still likes to take the initiative when it comes to dating. Or did I just happen to get a dud?)

DEAR GUESSED: I think you got a dud. Just because a man asks a girl for a date doesn't mean he wants to take her to bed. And the same applies to women who take the initiative.

Unusual blood vessel disorder has no cure

DEAR DR. GOTT: Recently, my aunt was diagnosed with Osler-Weber disease. Since I never heard of this before, I wonder if you can provide any information.
DEAR READER: Osler-Weber disease (hereditary hemorrhagic telangiectasia) is an unusual inherited disorder marked by vascular abnormalities of the skin and intestine: small, dark-red areas of swollen blood vessels that bleed easily. The red patches typically affect the face, lips, fingers, toes and intestinal lining. The intestinal lesions often bleed, leading to bowel hemorrhage and anemia.

The skin lesions can be treated with laser therapy or surgical excision, therapy that is close to impossible for the intestinal areas. Therefore, people with multiple bleeding lesions in the bowel may require transfusions or regular iron supplements to compensate for the blood loss.

Unfortunately, this treatment fails to address the underlying abnormality of the blood vessels, so the affliction can be treated but not cured. Nonetheless, if your aunt's doctor supervises her closely, checks her frequently for anemia, and administers iron (or, if necessary, (alprazolam), an anti-anxiety agent, is unusual. Although the symptoms you describe have been reported in patients taking Xanax, the drug is ordinarily safe to use for short periods under medical supervision. Also, many of the medicine's side effects are dose-related and do not appear unless excessive quantities are prescribed for extended times.

Your comments are a vivid reminder that all psychotropic (brain-altering) drugs have the potential for serious complications, especially if the substances are misused or taken too long. For instance, the manufacturer of Xanax states that the medicine should not be prescribed on a regular basis for more than four months because of the possibility of drug dependence. While doctors who prescribe Xanax over long periods can be criticized, I suspect that equal responsibility lies with the patient who requests the drug and with physicians who continue to dispense it.

I am glad you were finally able to overcome your problems with Xanax. Thank you for sharing your experience with other readers. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help II - Mental Substance Abuse."

transfusions), she should not suffer dangerous consequences from the disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have just finished reading your article on Xanax seven years ago and am medical proof of long-term use of this drug and its side effects. I've suffered nosebleeds, dizziness, blindness (not blurred vision) and instant vomiting. Even under a new doctor's care, I almost died of massive seizures while coming off Xanax. It cost me my job and seven years of my life. Please alert your readers of the alarming statistics of long-term use.

Mariners may make room for elder Griffey

By JOE KAY
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds have removed the major obstacle to Ken Griffey joining his son, Ken Jr., on the Seattle Mariners for the last month of the season.

The Reds put Griffey on waivers Friday in order to release him, making him eligible to play for another major-league team this season. Griffey wants to join Ken Jr. in Seattle, making them the first father-son combination on a major-league team.

The move followed several days of discussions among Griffey's agent, the Reds, the Mariners, the National League office and the players' union, according to a source familiar with the talks.

The Griffey's became the first father-son combination to play in the major leagues at the same time last year when Ken Jr. was promoted to the Mariners and Ken Sr. played for the Reds.

When Griffey agreed to retire last Saturday to open a roster spot for the Reds, he was unaware that it meant he wouldn't be able to play in the major leagues for 60 days. The parties agreed to allow Griffey to come off the voluntarily retired list and instead go on waivers, which could allow him to play for Seattle after rosters expand Sept. 1, according to the source, who demanded anonymity.

Griffey could remain on waivers for three working days. The Mariners, in Kansas City on Friday for a weekend series against the Royals, declined to discuss the matter while he remained on waivers.

"We can't say anything," said Dave Aust, the Mariners' director of public relations. "He's still the property of another club. Any time you make comments about a player from another team, it can be considered tampering."

Griffey, 40, found himself trapped by baseball's rules when he agreed last Saturday to retire on short notice to open a roster spot for Chris Hammond, who was scheduled to start a few hours later against Pittsburgh.

Griffey wasn't aware that by voluntarily retiring, he made himself ineligible to play for the rest of the season. His agent, Brian Goldberg, negotiated the agreement announced Friday by the Reds that would allow him to join another club.

"As Ken Griffey's request, the Cincinnati Reds today asked irrevocable waivers for the purpose of granting Ken his unconditional release," Reds general manager Bob Quinn said. "This procedure will allow Griffey the option of pursuing alternative baseball opportunities, if he so wishes."

Quinn declined further comment. A spokeswoman for the National League also said the league would have nothing to add.

Griffey can be claimed off waivers by another club. If he goes unclaimed for three days, he's free to negotiate an agreement with any club.

A club that claims him off waivers would have to pick up the rest of his 1990 salary. If he clears waivers, he'd be free to work out an agreement with any club.

Just before the waiver move was announced, Goldberg said he was confident an agreement would be worked out to unite Griffey with his son after Sept. 1.

"I'm confident — real confident," Goldberg said. Griffey said shortly after his retirement that he hoped to play again this season. Both Griffey's have said over the years that they'd like to play on the same team together.

The Associated Press photo, has been one of the hottest players in baseball this season. His father, Ken Griffey Sr., was placed on waivers by the Cincinnati Reds Friday and the Mariners may pick him up to form the first father-son combination on the same major league team.

Where will the Raiders fall — LA or Oakland?

By TIM LIOTTA
The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — With denials pouring in from all sides, an Oakland city official said Friday he expects the Los Angeles Raiders to become the Oakland Raiders sometime this season.

"I believe we've just about got everything wrapped up," Oakland City Councilman Wilson Riles Jr. said in a report in Friday's edition of The National. "I feel very confident they are going to play here this year ... at least some of their games here."

Raiders owner Al Davis earlier this week denied an ESPN report that the team would be moving, but a newspaper report Thursday said a Raiders player who asked not to be identified said Davis said he was "100 percent certain" that the team would be playing its home games this year in Oakland.

Raiders executive assistant Al LoCasale said the newspaper report was inaccurate.

The Raiders have two years remaining on a lease with the Los Angeles Coliseum. However, the team has sold only 22,600 season tickets for the 1990 season at the 90,000-seat stadium that lured the Raiders from Oakland in 1982.

Richard Riordan, a former president of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission who is still a member of that group, said the subject of moving this season has not come up in discussions with Raiders officials.

"Al LoCasale denies that the Raiders are leaving Los Angeles," Riordan said. "Secondly, we have had zero negotiations with the Raiders about leaving Los Angeles this year. We are still talking to them."

"I don't know how it's going to come out. He's still talking to Oakland, and he's still talking to us."

The Raiders have been negotiating for more than a year with the city of Oakland and Alameda County to work out a return to their original home. Davis has until the end of the month to accept or reject the city and county's latest offer.

Riles said the Raiders' first two home games — against Denver on Sept. 9 and against Pittsburgh on Sept. 23 — would be played at a location other than the Oakland Coliseum, but that the Raiders' remaining six home games would be played there.

"There is too much money to be made by the Raiders and the NFL by them coming (to Oakland)," Riles said.

The Sept. 9 game could not be played in Oakland because of a "New Kids On The Block" concert scheduled at the Oakland Coliseum the night before. The Oakland Athletics are scheduled to play Minnesota at the Coliseum that day.

A report that the "New Kids On The Block" concert scheduled for the Coliseum on Sept. 8 had been cancelled is wrong, said Boston sports attorney Bob Wolfe, who serves as the group's business manager. He said the show will go on as scheduled.

The Raiders' third home game is scheduled for Oct. 14 against Seattle. The game would not conflict with any of the Athletics' postseason plans because the seventh game of the American League Championship Series is scheduled for Oct. 14 in the city of the East Division winner.

The A's lease says that no event can be scheduled at the Coliseum 36 hours prior to one of their games.

Olazabal continues torrid pace with a 67

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jose Maria Olazabal continued his record-breaking assault on one of America's most difficult courses and threatened to run away from the winners-only field in the World Series of Golf.

The 24-year-old Spaniard added a 3-under-par 67 to his opening 61 and reached the tournament halfway point Friday with a 128 total and an incredible 9-stroke lead.

The huge 36-hole lead may or may not be the largest in the history of the PGA Tour.

"We simply don't know," said Tom Place, the tour's director of information.

What is known is that his complete domination of the famed Firestone Country Club course — long recognized and respected as one of the most difficult the touring pros encounter all season — suddenly placed the tournament in his hands.

"I know everyone else is saying it is now mine to lose," said Olazabal, the brightest young star on the European circuit but an infrequent competitor in this country.

"With a 9-shot lead, I should win. But I could lose. I've played for a while now and I know anything can happen in this game."

"Maybe I shoot three over par tomorrow and somebody shoots five under and it's very close," he said.

His closest pursuers, U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin and Larry Mize, agreed: Olazabal must back away for anyone else to have a chance.

"Mr. Olazabal has to come back to us," Irwin said. "It's a fairly competitive tournament except for one man."

"I just can't see him playing four rounds like this, but maybe he can."

It seemed a safe assumption on Irwin's part — that Olazabal would not continue to play four rounds at the same pace. It hasn't been done in the history of the tour. The best 72-hole score is 257, one more than Olazabal's current pace.

"It's going to be tough to catch Jose with such a big lead," Mize said. "But it can be done. I'm not throwing in the towel yet."

Olazabal's total is 12 under par and — by three strokes — the record for two rounds at Firestone.

The 36-hole score also is — by two strokes — the best of any of the 34 PGA Tour events played this season. It's only two strokes off the tour's all-time record for the first two rounds.

While Olazabal was giving the 7,148-yard, par-70 course the most severe drubbing in its history, the rest of the international field had much more conventional scores.

Irwin and Mize shared second at 137, Irwin with a solid, 3-under-par 67 and Mize with a scrambling 71.

Payne Stewart, Larry Wadkins and Donnie Hammond were at 138. Wadkins shot 68 and Stewart struggled to a 73.

Hammond improved from a tie for 134 to a tie for fourth with a bogey-free 65, the best round of the day.

No one else was within 10 shots of the runaway leader. Fred Couples, with a 68, and Craig Stadler, 69, were tied at 139 and were the only others in the 47-man international field under par.

Olazabal, winner of an English tournament and the Irish Open earlier this season, had a 4-stroke advantage when he started and wanted no time expanding it.

He dropped an 18-foot birdie putt on the first hole, reached the par-2 second with a 3-wood second shot and two-putted for birdie.

The Associated Press

NOT QUITE — Jose-Maria Olazabal watches as his birdie attempt on the 11th hole rolls past Friday during the second round of the World Series of Golf at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. The Spaniard shot a three-under par 67 to assume a commanding 12-stroke lead at the halfway point.

Money flows and everyone goes to U.S. Open

By STEVE WILSTEIN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Money flows and everyone goes to the U.S. Open, kid millionaires and middle-aged millionaires, limping or bandaged, chasing the record $6,349,250 prize total even if they have no chance to win.

There isn't much reward for just showing up Monday, a measly $5,195 for first-round losers and $120 per diem — not bad for regular working stiffs but hardly the stuff modern tennis players dream of.

Stefan Edberg, the serene Swede with the sweet strokes, and Steffi Graf, the West German trying to find her way back to a Grand Slam title, are the top seeds in the hunt for the big score — $350,000 each for the men's and women's winners for two weeks' effort and a lifetime of training.

Money swirls around the stadium and through the mar-ques like green dust, and if cash is short, vendors will gladly take plastic for hats and jackets, sneakers and rackets, shirts and posters, you name, they've got it. Tickets go for up to $40 legit; scalpers get as much as they can.

Jennifer Capriati will show up in her native city for her first U.S. Open as a pro, already bearing patches for millions of dollars worth of endorsements, everything down to the lotion she puts on her 14-year-old skin to fight wrinkles and pimples.

"There is nothing more American than New York," says USTA President David R. Markin, a New York-born businessman. He has visions of spending $100 million, $150 million, whatever it takes, to build a three-stadium cathedral to tennis on the same site as this 12-year-old

"antique" National Tennis Center. It is all too much? Is money killing the game, taking away the drive of the top players, luring the young too soon?

Andre Agassi, the kid with all the strokes, the $3.5 million in annual endorsements and all the promise unfulfilled, explains his erratic ways by saying he's got things on his mind. Clothes and cars, maybe, but not tennis.

"I don't see many guys who have what it takes to go out and do the daily grind," says Jimmy Connors, who has grunted and worked and given his best to the game since playing his first U.S. Open in 1970. "I don't know, maybe it's too easy for them."

"It's tough to say (if there's too much money) because I'm still in the game, and I like to see the money also. But there comes a time when you don't play for the money. You go out and play because that's your job, that's your pride, and that's what you're out there to do. It doesn't seem that a lot of guys have that feeling. It seems a lot of guys are out there playing for just the money, and whether they win or lose doesn't matter."

Connors' strained left wrist is heavily taped, his career in tennis is on the edge of extinction, but he's trying to come back from a seven-month layoff. Surely, he doesn't need the money. He's made more than $8 million on the courts, and millions more from endorsements and exhibitions. But he's a dinosaur who refuses to die, stubbornly refusing to yield to injury, age or skeptics.

Why does he go on? "I enjoy it, and it's also my work," said Connors, who's never missed a U.S. Open in 20 years, won it five times, and reached the quarters the past two years. If his wrist keeps hurting, though, or if he feels he can't perform up to a level to be competitive, he may pull out before his first-round match against hard-bitting Kevin Curren rather than embarrass himself.

Anyone who truly enjoys great athletics giving their best, even if their best is not quite as good as it once was, can't help but applaud Connors' effort as he approaches his 38th birthday Sept. 2. Stroke for stroke, grunt for grunt, he still puts on one of the best shows in tennis.

The players who "grind it out day after day to make it happen," as Connors describes it, are on the short list of those with good shots at winning the Open. On the men's side: Edberg, Ivan Lendl and defending champion Boris Becker. On the women's side: Graf, Martina Navratilova and Monica Seles.

John McEnroe, who won his fourth U.S. Open in 1984 and has amassed nearly $11 million in prize money, never was really into doing the daily grind. He's been on the decline for years now, only rarely showing glimpses of his marvelous natural talent. Come early if you want to see him this year. His first-round opponent is Spain's dangerous young Javier Sanchez. Looming in the third round is No. 10 Andrei Chesnokov.

Mats Wilander, another former U.S. Open champ unseeded this year, has slipped to No. 58 in the ranks from the No. 1 spot two years ago. It won't get any easier for him when he meets No. 8 Brad Gilbert in the first round.

The young and restless, the ones with talent and ambition not yet spoiled by having too much too soon, could make the big leap to the top in the next two weeks. Among those to look for especially is Yugoslavia's Goran Ivanisevic, who beat Becker in France and almost beat him at Wimbledon.

"When we asked Greg to take the position of field manager, we did so with the intent that he would make a positive contribution to the team's performance," said Tom Werner, the Padres chairman and managing partner. Terms of the four-year extension were not released, said Heidi Holland, director of the Bruins' media relations. Neagle, a 6-foot-4, 200-pound left-hander from Gambrell, Md., was 8-0 for Visalia of the Class A California League before being promoted to Orlando in June. He is 12-3 for the Minnesota Twins' farm club. "At the beginning of the season, my goal was to win 18 games," Neagle said. Can the 49ers make history and 'three-peat'?

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NFC West

How frustrating is it to play in the same division as the San Francisco 49ers, who are trying to become the first team ever to win three consecutive Super Bowls?

Coch John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams thinks of his team as the second best in the NFL... and the second best in his division.

President Jim Finks of the New Orleans Saints engages in wishful thinking — "If they only didn't have No. 16..."

Atlanta? Well, Jerry Glanville talks a good line.

Welcome to Year Ten of a reign in which the 49ers have won four Super Bowls and eight division titles. To put it another way, the Rams have made the playoffs six of the last seven years, five of them as a wild card.

"If you spend too much time looking at the 49ers, you can get yourself off the track," says Robinson, whose team split with San Francisco during the 1989 regular season, then lost to them 30-13 in the NFC title game after beating Philadelphia and the New York Giants.

"If you consider them a 10 on a scale of 1 to 10, then you have to build yourself into a 10, too."

Actually, San Francisco isn't quite a 10.

Despite a 14-2 season and a roll through the playoffs by a cumulative score of 126-26 that was capped by a 55-10 rout of Denver for their fourth Super Bowl victory, the 49ers are less than perfect.

Yes, there's "No. 16," Joe Montana, who is now rightfully the highest-paid player in NFL history. He has No. 80, Jerry Rice, and No. 82, John Taylor, to hand the ball to.

He may even get a new playmate if No. 88, Mike Sherrard, the one-time No. 1 pick of the Cowboys, has truly recovered from the broken leg that kept him out for most of the last three seasons.

So where are the problems for the 49ers, who, after becoming the first NFL champion in a decade to repeat, are now trying for three in a row?

If you look closely, you can find a little concern about the offensive line, where Harris Barton, the best all-around player of the bunch, may be shifted against his will to center. That would free Jesse Sapola to play left guard, his best position. But it might make a full-time tackle of Bubba Paris, down from 370 pounds to 330, though his stamina is suspect.

More problems? Perhaps nose tackle, where there are three good, but iffy players — Michael Carter (foot and weight); Jim Burt (back); and Plan B acquisition Fred Smerlas (age 33).

But everyone remains happy at Camp DeBartolo. Smerlas, Burt, Matt Millen, Dave Wayner and Hanford Dixon have all been added to the mix in the last year. And if last year's repeat was a product of George Selferf succeeding Bill Walsh, there seems little sign of a falloff in the search for a "three-peat."

"We all know what we have to do," Paris says.

Selferf is more circumspect. "I don't see any slackening of effort... yet," he says.

That doesn't stop the other three teams in the division from hoping.

Robinson's efforts to build a team that will reach San Francisco's efforts revolve around the 10 high draft choices the Rams got in the deal that sent Eric Dickerson to Indianapolis. Despite their run to the NFC title game, the Rams were inconsistent last year, finishing 10-6 in a season that included a four-game midseason losing streak.

Some are known quantities, like running back Cleveland Gary, one of last year's first-round picks. He reported late to camp last year and never quite found his way into the offense.

This year, quarterback Jim Everett is the hub of the offense but Gary, augmented by Plan B acquisition Curt Warner, is the spoke. "I expect great things from Gary, great things," Robinson says.

The Rams will probably revert to a 4-3 defense with an unbalanced defensive line like Minnesota, Cleveland and Philadelphia. They expect a lot from last year's other No. 1, defensive tackle Bill Hawkins as well as Brian Smith, one of last year's No. 2s, who will line up as a linebacker-defensive end and may help what has been an average pass rush.

Two of Everett's main targets, Aaron Cox and Flipper Anderson are also products of the Dickerson trade.

The Saints, who won their last three to finish 9-7 last year, have plenty of targets but might not have a quarterback.

The leader for the moment is John Fourcade, the 30-year-old journeyman who replaced Bobby Hebert and led the Saints to those three wins, all against contenders. Hebert hasn't reported and probably won't, leaving it up to Fourcade, who has played in four different leagues.

"That's all I hear — that I can't do it," he says. "I think I showed what I can do."

CAN HE DO IT AGAIN? — San Francisco 49er quarterback Joe Montana, shown at training camp in Rocklin, Calif., in July, will try to set football history this year by guiding the 49ers to their third consecutive Super Bowl victory and fifth overall.

Beyond quarterback, Mike Mora's Saints are solid but unspectacular, which is probably not enough to overtake the Rams and 49ers.

Rickey Jackson and Pat Swilling are one of the game's better outside linebacking duos. Eric Martin is a vastly underrated receiver and the same goes for running back Dalton Hilliard, who rushed for 1,262 yards and scored 18 touchdowns last year.

Atlanta, 3-13 last season, should be a much better team this year, if only because it finally got some luck with the No. 1 pick.

The choice was traded to Indianapolis for the rights to quarterback Jeff George, and brought the Falcons Pro Bowl offensive tackle Chris Hinton; wide receiver Andre Rison; and a No. 1 that was turned into running back Steve Broussard.

Rison and Shawn Collins were arguably the two best rookie receivers in the league last year and should put some punch into the run-and-shoot offense being installed by Glanville, hired to replace Marion Campbell.

One question mark is Glanville himself, whose tactics in the past have tended to alienate both his own players and the opposition. He is already angry with Hinton.

The Roberts announcement was a shocker. After losing Jackson after two seasons, LSU was counting on Roberts and O'Neal to lead the Tigers in a successful 1990-91 effort.

Coach Brown was on vacation and could not be reached for comment, but LSU issued a statement by Roberts, a Hopkins, S.C., native who averaged 14.1 points and 9.8 rebounds in his sophomore season.

Roberts said he wavered at the end of last season between playing another year at LSU or entering the NBA draft in June. Roberts averaged 14.1 points and 9.8 rebounds in his sophomore season.

"I could have," Roberts said. "But I really really wanted to stay. I didn't want to leave but I had some academic problems. Instead of stay-

Top LSU hoop recruit Brandon must sit out

CHICAGO (AP) — Jamie Brandon, a top college basketball prospect, was accepted Friday for fall classes at Louisiana State University but must sit out his freshman year under Proposition 48.

"He was accepted provisionally, pending receipt of his official high school transcript, a transcript from the University of Illinois, and his official ACT scores," said LSU spokesman Gary Ballard.

He has 30 days to get his paper work in order, said Ballard, noting classes begin Monday.

LSU basketball could use some help.

Thursday, Stanley Roberts and Maurice Williamson, both starters last season, were declared academically ineligible for the first semester. Roberts is preparing to withdraw from school and play in Italy.

Brandon — a 6-foot-4, 200-pound forward — led

Chicago King High School to the Illinois Class AA title last March, but became a Proposition 48 victim when his ACT college entrance scores failed to meet NCAA requirements.

"Under Proposition 48, a student athlete must do well on his ACT."

If not, he's ineligible to play or practice his freshman year.

LSU coach Dale Brown had been concerned about Brandon's grades, and his high school transcript was sent express mail on Tuesday by Landon "Sonny" Cox, King's head coach and counselor.

"It showed he had a 2.0 grade average," Cox said.

Brandon, considered by recruiters as one of the top 10 high school players in the country, had first decided to go to University of Illinois, but balked at attending prep classes this summer and left the Champaign-Urbana campus several weeks ago.

"It had nothing to do with Illinois' problems," Cox said.

"He just didn't want to go to summer school."

Illinois faces possible heavy penalties, even suspension of its basketball program if found guilty of charges it offered cash and cars to recruits last year.

After leaving summer school, Brandon then considered Georgia Tech, Nevada-Las Vegas, Oklahoma and Kankakee (Illinois) Community College, but opted instead for LSU.

Brandon averaged 26.7 points as King went 32-0 and was ranked No. 1 in the nation by USA Today.

LSU's Roberts opts for Europe

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Coach Dale Brown dripped sarcasm at sports writers who kept pestering him about who might jump to the NBA from his talent-rich 1989-90 Louisiana State University basketball team.

Was two-time All-America Chris Jackson turning pro? How about Stanley Roberts and Shaquille O'Neal, LSU's young, 7-foot twin towers?

It was March 24, LSU was in the hunt for a post-season NCAA championship and Brown was clearly annoyed.

"Stanley is going to Europe, Chris is going pro, and San Antonio is drafting Shaquille. And I'm going to become a Trappist monk," Brown said at one session.

A few days later, Jackson, with a 27.8-point scoring average, announced his sophomore season would be his last. He later was a first-round draft pick by the Denver Nuggets.

On Thursday, LSU announced that Roberts had decided to pursue a professional basketball career in Europe after losing his academic eligibility.

Roberts, who would have been a junior, was one of two players declared ineligible Thursday by LSU. Maurice Williamson, a junior from New Haven, Conn., and sometimes starter at guard, will try to pick up 15 credit hours and rejoin the team in late December, LSU announced.

Williamson, who had a shot at replacing Jackson as starting point guard, played in 31 games and started 17 at guard last season. He averaged 12.2 points and 3.8 assists during 1989-90.

The Roberts announcement was a shocker. After losing Jackson after two seasons, LSU was counting on Roberts and O'Neal to lead the Tigers in a successful 1990-91 effort.

Coach Brown was on vacation and could not be reached for comment, but LSU issued a statement by Roberts, a Hopkins, S.C., native who averaged 14.1 points and 9.8 rebounds in his sophomore season.

Roberts said he wavered at the end of last season between playing another year at LSU or entering the NBA draft in June. Roberts averaged 14.1 points and 9.8 rebounds in his sophomore season.

"I could have," Roberts said. "But I really really wanted to stay. I didn't want to leave but I had some academic problems. Instead of staying here and fighting it on through, I decided that the best chance I had was to go ahead and play ball overseas and make a few dollars."

Roberts took the blame for his academic woes.

"There were times when I did slack off," he admitted.

"I'm kind of depressed. I didn't want to leave. It's something that just happened. It can't be explained. I guess it was meant to be like this. I'm just going to try to make the best of it."

"My mom called me today. She wanted to pay my way through school, but I told her there was no reason to worry about it. I can go ahead and make the money and I can always come back. We agreed on that. I think she'll be financially stable for awhile," he said.

Roberts has hired a Baton Rouge lawyer, Oscar L. Shoefelt III, as his agent.

Shoefelt said he's already negotiating with teams in Italy and Spain, and there's a lot of interest in Roberts. A salary of more than $1 million a year was being thrown around.

Shoefelt said he'd seek a one-year deal so Roberts could enter the 1991 NBA draft.

"I think it's going to be for a substantial sum of money," said Shoefelt. "He could have gotten more if he'd gone in the NBA draft this year, but he tried to make his grades and stay at LSU. I hope the fans appreciate that."

The European season starts next week, Shoefelt said, and that is making negotiations a little more difficult. He's enlisted the services of other agents more familiar with the European leagues, he said.

"We're going to try to decide where we're going to be in the next couple of days," said Shoefelt, who represents a handful of other athletes, mostly former LSU football players.

"There's a big adjustment to make. Here, you have a 20-year-old kid going half a world away. I'm going to go over with him and spend at least a week. It would be a big adjustment for anyone."

One big adjustment for Roberts will be conditioning. He admitted he's out of shape and appears to be easily carrying an extra 20 pounds. He played at about 285 last season.

"It will take two weeks to get back," Roberts said, adding, "I think I'm mentally ready. I don't know about that long season, but for the early part of the season I'm ready."

Huffman not surprised by ND players' reactions

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Former Notre Dame lineman Steve Huffman, who says the Notre Dame football program has tolerated widespread steroid abuse, borrows a line from his brother to describe the school's fervent denial.

"He said it was like turning on the light late at night and watching the cockroaches scramble," Huffman said in a telephone interview from his parents' home in Dallas.

The brother, Tim, played football at Notre Dame in the late 1970s under Dan Devine.

Huffman stirred the controversy with a first-person article in the Aug. 27 issue of Sports Illustrated in which he claimed nearly half the lettering Irish players used steroids. The muscle-building drug is banned by the NCAA.

Notre Dame officials admitted five players have tested positive for steroids since 1987 but deny the drug was widely used. Current players deny any use of steroids and attacked Huffman for making unsubstantiated claims. Huffman did not identify any alleged users.

"I'm not surprised by the players' reactions," Huffman told the South Bend Tribune in Friday's edition. "Most of my friends weren't football players. And I guess maybe I wasn't a team player. But they're the ones who are going to have to live with their statements."

The only time I got nervous was Tuesday night when the first reports were coming out on TV," he said. "I think on Tuesday people were just writing it off as sour grapes. But now I think they're starting to ask questions — good questions."

Huffman left the Notre Dame football program in 1987 and kept silent until Holtz published an account of the 1988 championship season. The book, "The Fighting Spirit," included Holtz's criticism of Huffman's decision to quit. The remark angered Huffman, who sold his story to Sports Illustrated for $5,000 in retaliation.

Huffman says he'd like to ask Holtz, "Was it worth it?"

The coach has said he regrets having used Huffman's name.

Taiwan LL rolls; Shippensburg holds on

By KELLY P. KISSEL
The Associated Press

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Wang Chih-Chang and Cheng Chang-Ming combined for a one-hitter and Hsieh Yi-Chieh drove in seven runs with two homers as Taiwan trounced West Germany 14-0 Friday in a Little League World Series quarterfinal.

Wang struck out seven and was pulled after issuing a fourth-inning walk. Cheng fanned six of the nine batters he faced.

Brian Huddleston of West Germany's Ramstein Air Force Base team singled to right with one out in the sixth to break up the no-hitter.

The victory moved Sun-Hua of Taiwan into a Saturday semifinal against Trail, British Columbia, which defeated Matamoros, Mexico, 8-3 Tuesday. Rain interrupted play each day since.

Earlier Friday, Shippensburg, Pa., defeated Mobile, Ala., 3-1 in the completion of a suspended game, and will play Cypress, Calif., in Saturday's other semifinal.

Hsieh hit a grand slam over the left field wall in the first inning, giving Taiwan a 4-0 lead. The homer scored Chen Chin-Feng and Sun Chao-Chi, who had singled, and Kuo Wen-Chu, who walked.

Wang walked later in the inning, advanced on a walk to Cheng plus Yang Sun-Hsuan's sacrifice, and scored on Chen's single, making it 5-0.

Sun walked in the second, Hsieh reached on an error and Chen Chien-Wei was safe on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. Walks to Sun and Wang forced in two runs and another scored on Chen Chin-Feng's single.

In the four-run fourth, Chen Chin-Feng scored on a passed ball and Hsieh hit a three-run homer.

Sun had hit a solo homer in the third, and Chen scored on three wild pitches in the sixth after reaching on his third single. In the first game, Bob Shannon struck out 14 and Shippensburg clung to the lead it had taken Wednesday.

Shannon struck out three in the sixth inning, including two in a row after allowing two infield singles.

Chris Driskell struck out nine for Mobile, which had protested starting the game in steady drizzle and rain Wednesday.

The rain also forced postponement of the championship game from Saturday to Sunday for the first time.

Shippensburg, the first team from Pennsylvania to play in the World Series since 1969, took a 3-0 lead Wednesday. Jimmy Smith, Mike Ocker and Gregg Mellott scored in the third after reaching on singles.

Smith scored on Jason Phillips' throwing error at third. Ocker on David Orndorff's bunt and Mellott on Driskell's wild pitch.

The game was suspended in the bottom of the third by rain. Under tournament rules, suspended games are resumed instead of started over if they aren't official.

Chris Williams homered over the center fielder's head in the fifth for Mobile's only run.

WAY TO GO — Shippensburg, Pa., Little League pitcher Bob Shannon reacts after striking out Aubrey Floyd of Mobile, Ala., with two men on base to end the Little League World Series game Friday in Williamsport, Pa. Shippensburg won, 3-1, and meets Cypress, Calif., in the semifinals.

Fabi wins pole for the inaugural Denver Grand Prix

By MIKE HARRIS
The Associated Press

DENVER — Teo Fabi overcame brake problems and a slippery downtown street circuit to take the provisional pole Friday for the inaugural Denver Grand Prix.

The opening of the new 1.9-mile, 16-turn circuit was held up for three hours and 45 minutes by construction delays.

But once the challenging track was ready, there were no major problems. Fabi, driving a Porsche-powered March, turned a fast lap of 78.760 mph during the 30-minute qualifying session late in the day, driving the new circuit six-tenths of a second faster than second-place Michael Andretti, whose fast lap in a Lola-Chevrolet was 78.213.

"I was very close to the limit," Fabi said. "I was very close to the wall a couple of times. That's qualifying. You really try hard."

"There's not too much (speed) left. I hope there is enough left to stay on the front for the race."

The Italian driver will try to nail down his ninth career Indy-car pole on Saturday in the final session of qualifying that will determine the 26-car lineup for the race.

Colorado, Tennessee get head start

By BERNIE WILSON
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Colorado and Tennessee get a head start on the rest of the national championship contenders when they open the college football season Sunday in the inaugural Disneyland Pigskin Classic.

"This game has big stakes," Colorado coach Bill McCartney said Friday. "The winner will be in great shape nationally. The loser will have to pick up the pieces."

Kickoff in the newest NCAA-sanctioned preseason game is at noon PDT at Anaheim Stadium. A crowd of about 40,000 is expected.

Colorado came a lot closer to winning the national championship last year than Tennessee did, but they both had superb 11-1 seasons.

The undefeated Big Eight champion Buffaloes were ranked No. 1 heading into the Orange Bowl, but lost 21-6 to Notre Dame. Tennessee's only loss was to Alabama in the sixth week.

The Volunteers shared the Southeastern Conference title with 'Bama and Auburn, and then beat Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl. Colorado finished No. 4 in the Associated Press poll while Tennessee was No. 5.

The Volunteers have plenty of motivation going into their centennial year of football.

"We liked what we did last year," quarterback Andy Kelly said. "We want to get back to the level we were at last year, or better."

A big question for the Buffaloes is whether they can sustain the emotion that carried them last year. They dedicated the season to quarterback Sal Aunese, who died of stomach cancer on Sept. 23.

"I honestly don't know," McCartney said, "but we have 23 seniors, and some of them have started for three or four years and are very goal-oriented. I've got a hunch that they will provide the leadership we need to duplicate what we did a year ago. We'll find out Sunday how emotional and cohesive the squad is."

"There's no doubt that last year's events had a unifying effect, with our quarterback suffering and dying right there."

Colorado and Tennessee were invised last spring to play in this game. The schools exchanged game film from all 1989 regular-season games.

Preparation was probably tougher for Tennessee, which has to defend against Colorado's hybrid I-Bone.

The Volunteers already faced a tough schedule when they agreed to play here, and have had to focus mostly on Colorado in preseason practice.

"We normally practice against multiple looks, but this has limited our preparation, because we have to spend time on the I-Bone," Volunteers coach Johnny Majors said. "It takes the most discipline against any offense that we will face."

"I cut into about two or three rounds of golf this summer, but the Heisman Trophy balloting, returns after a stellar sophomore year."

Hagan, who finished fifth in the Heisman Trophy balloting, returns after a stellar sophomore year. Hagan, of Los Angeles, became the sixth player in NCAA history to run and pass for 1,000 yards in the same season: 1,004 rushing and 1,002 passing.

GOING NOWHERE — New England Patriots' running back Don Overton (29) is stopped after a short gain by Cincinnati Bengals' linebacker Leon White (51) in the first quarter of exhibition action Friday night in Foxboro, Mass. The Bengals beat the Patriots, 13-10, in overtime.

Leitz singled with two outs in the fifth. Paul Molitor opened the game with a single extending his hitting streak to 18 games, the longest for the Brewers this season.

Athletics 6, Tigers 4: In Detroit, Carney Lansford's bases-loaded, two-run double in the fourth inning broke a tie as the Oakland Athletics beat the Detroit Tigers 6-4 Friday night.

Oakland starter Scott Sanderson, who pitched five innings, won his 13th game in 21 decisions. It's his highest victory total since winning 16 in 1980 with Montreal. Dennis Eckersley, the fourth Oakland pitcher, worked the final two innings for his 39th save in 40 opportunities.

With the score 2-2 and Willie Randolph on first with no outs in the fourth, Mike Gallego laid down a bunt.

Terrell's throw to get Randolph at third was late and Rickey Henderson walked to load the bases. Lansford then hit a line drive down the left-field line to chase Terrell. Mark McGwire added a run-scoring grounder and Ron Hassey a sacrifice fly off Clay Parker.

The Tigers made it 6-4 in the seventh on Alan Trammell's two-run double, but reliever Gene Nelson got Cecil Fielder to line out and Rick Honeycutt came in to strike out Lloyd Moseby.

Oakland tied the score 2-2 with a pair of third-inning RBI singles by Hassey and by Felix Jose.

The Tigers took the lead with runs in each of the first two innings. In the first, Fielder drove in his 103rd run of the season with a double, and Travis Fryman's bloop single scored Chet Lemon in the second.

McEnroe upsets Gilbert after delay

COMMACK, N.Y. (AP) — John McEnroe overcame six hours of rain delays and his own temper to upset third-seeded Brad Gilbert 6-3, 6-2, in the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Hamlet Challenge Cup.

In another quarterfinal, Guy Forget of France, seeded eighth, eliminated second-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador, 6-7 (4-7), 6-0, 7-5. The second set lasted only 21 minutes.

Two more matches will conclude Saturday: Stefan Edberg against Jonas Svensson and Pete Sampras versus Goran Ivanisevic.

The sixth-seeded McEnroe, who now has a 13-1 career record against Gilbert, dominated the match after their third tie at beating the rain.

After a delay of almost two hours before the start, they played just four points before another two-hour break.

Then, rain halted play for two more hours with Gilbert up 3-2 and the score deuce in the sixth game.

Gilbert, who is ranked eighth, came back with an ace to be one point from a 4-2 lead.

But McEnroe won 15 of the next 19 points to win the set, and then the next eight games.

"I was lucky the third time we came back," McEnroe said. "I started to feel better. It's tough going on and off like that. You have to keep trying to prepare again, afraid to eat in case you're called right away."

McEnroe was looking forward to the completion of the other quarterfinal matches, which were suspended and will be finished Saturday at 11 a.m. EDT.

"I'm extremely happy I won. It gives me a chance to play the No. 1 guy."

Eric Davis puts on show in Reds' win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Eric Davis went 4-for-4 with a homer and scored all four Cincinnati runs as the NL West-leading Reds ended a five-game losing streak against East leader Pittsburgh by beating the Pirates 4-3 on Friday night.

The Pirates swept four games between the two division leaders last weekend in Cincinnati, then won the opener of their current four-game series 9-3 on Thursday night.

NL Roundup

Davis, who entered the game batting .225, broke a 2-2 tie with a solo homer leading off the sixth against Doug Drabek, who failed in a bid for his 17th victory. Drabek got off the hook when Jose Lind tied the score with a one-out RBI single in the seventh off reliever Bob Dibble.

But the Reds broke the tie in the eighth after Bob Kipper relieved Drabek. Hal Morris popped out, but Davis singled to center for his fourth straight hit. Paul O'Neill, who hadn't gotten the ball out of the infield in three previous at-bats, then lined a run-scoring double to left-center.

Kipper (5-2), who was 5-0 in his 21 previous outings, intentionally walked Sabo, but struck out Luis Quinones and got Mariano Duncan on a fly ball to escape further trouble.

Davis, hitting .188 against Pittsburgh entering the game, also doubled and scored on Chris Sabo's sacrifice fly in the second. He singled to start the fourth and scored on Jeff Reed's groundout.

Dibble (6-5) worked 2 1-3 innings for the victory despite allowing Lind's RBI single in the seventh. Randy Myers pitched the last 1 2-3 innings for his 25th save.

Reds' starter Jack Armstrong left with tightness in his right elbow after allowing three hits and two runs in five innings.

Armstrong, who was 11-3 at the All-Star break but is now 12-9, walked Wally Backman, Jay Bell and Barry Bonds to load the bases in the first. Sid Bream then singled in two runs to give the Pirates an early lead.

Drabek is 10-0 with a 2.29 ERA against NL West teams this season.

Braves 3, Cubs 0: In Atlanta, rookie Steve Avery pitched a six-hitter for his first major league shutout as the Atlanta Braves beat the Chicago Cubs 3-0 on Friday night.

Avery (3-7) struck out eight, walked two and had two of Atlanta's six hits in leading the Braves to their third victory in four games. It was the 20-year-old's first complete game in 14 starts.

The Cubs' biggest threat came in the fifth inning when they loaded the bases on one-out singles by Doug Dacuzo and loser Greg Maddux and a walk to Jerome Walton. But Avery escaped by getting Ryne Sandberg, the NL co-leader with 29 homers, to bounce to shortstop for an easy double play.

Maddux (11-11), who was 5-1 lifetime against the Braves, pitched his sixth complete game of the season. He struck out six and walked two.

Padres 2, Expos 1: In Montreal, Andy Benes combined with three relievers on a three-hitter and Roberto Alomar and Tony Gwynn had RBI singles as the San Diego Padres edged the Montreal Expos 2-1 on Friday night.

Benes (10-8) gave up three hits, struck out two and walked two in 6 1-3 innings to win his third straight start.

Montreal's only run came on Tim Lincecum's leadoff homer in the seventh. After Tim Wallach lined out to short, Rich Rodriguez relieved and went 1 1-3 innings. Greg Harris got the last out in the eighth and Craig Lef-ferts pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

The Padres took advantage of a pair of stolen bases to score both their runs in the third inning off Dennis Martinez (10-9).

Red Sox blank the Jays

ON THE BOUNCE — Boston Red Sox centerfielder Ellis Burks grimaces as he reaches to grab a shallow base hit off the bat of Toronto's John Olerud during the second inning of Friday night's game in Toronto. The Red Sox scored two runs in the ninth inning and blanked the Blue Jays, 2-0.

Lead back up to two games

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Marshall's RBI single in the ninth inning snapped a scoreless tie and the Boston Red Sox beat Toronto 2-0 Friday night to take a two-game lead over the Blue Jays in the American League East.

Wade Boggs started the ninth with a single off reliever Duane Ward (2-7) and Mike Greenwell followed one out later with a single to send Boggs to third. Marshall then singled past shortstop Tony Fernandez's outstretched glove and into left field. Tom Brunansky followed with a single to score Greenwell.

Dana Kiecker (5-6) gave up five hits, struck out five and walked four over eight innings and Jeff Gray pitched the sixth for his fifth save.

Toronto starter Jimmy Key gave up five singles in seven innings and didn't allow a runner to get past first base.

Kiecker gave up back-to-back leadoff singles to Junior Felix and Mookie Wilson in the fifth. But Fernandez hit into a double play and Kelly Gruber flied out.

Greg Myers started the Toronto seventh with a ground-rule double to right. But Manny Lee's sacrifice attempt was fielded by Kiecker who easily threw out pinch-runner Kenny Williams at third.

Brunansky came close to giving the Red Sox a 2-0 lead in the top of the seventh when he hit a drive to deep left field that was foul by inches.

The fans got on Toronto's George Bell for the second straight game, this time for swinging at several pitches that were more than just inches out of the strike zone. Bell struck out twice in his first three at-bats.

Brewers 1, Yankees 0: In New York, Bill Spiers scored the game's only run on a fifth-inning wild pitch as Mark Knudson and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter to oust Tim Lary in the Milwaukee Brewers' 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees on Friday night.

Spiers opened the fifth with a single and walks to Paul Mollitor and Gary Sheffield loaded the bases. Lary (7-16) fanned Dave Parker for the second out of the inning but the ball got away for a wild pitch, allowing Spiers to score.

Knudson (10-6) gave up six hits over seven innings. Chuck Crim got two outs in the eighth and Dan Plesac finished for his 21st save. It was the 11th time the Yankees have been shutout this season.

Lary pitched a complete game, yielding nine hits and striking out 10. Milwaukee had runners reach third base in each of the first three innings but failed to score.

Knudson gave up a leadoff double to Kevin Maas in the second but retired the next 10 batters before Jim
