Gulf crisis hits new peak

By LISA GENASCI
The Associated Press

Iraq turned up the heat Friday on diplomats refusing to leave embassies in occupied Kuwait, while Western nations promised more soldiers, tanks and ships for the military machine confronting Iraq.

Iraqi troops stormed the French ambassador's residence, seizing four citizens, including a diplomat, the French Foreign Ministry said. Troops also burst into the Belgian compound and the Canadian ambassador's residence. The consuls from the United States and four other nations were briefly detained.

The incidents in the oil-rich emirate were the most serious confrontations involving diplomats in the emirate since Iraq ordered the embassies closed Aug. 24.

President Bush said the raids and brief detention of the American consul, who represents U.S. interests in Kuwait City, add up to "clear violation of international law."

In the strongest show of force against Iraqi shipping, American troops fired a warning shot at an Iraqi tanker, then boarded it briefly. It was the first instance of U.S. forces boarding an Iraqi ship. Warning shots were fired in two previous incidents, but the ships were allowed to continue on their way.

Iraq denied its soldiers entered the foreign compounds, which it referred to as "former diplomatic missions." The official Iraqi News Agency said the troops were under strict orders not to enter the compounds.

At least 17 embassies in Kuwait have defied an Iraqi order to close, and Baghdad has tried to make life insufferable for diplomats, in several cases surrounding the missions with troops and cutting off power and water.

After the raid on the French compound, French President Francois Mitterrand called an emergency Cabinet meeting for Saturday. He said the Iraqi move "is an aggression, and we will respond to it."

While Iraq tightened screws on defiant diplomats, military pressure built on Iraq.

Britain said Friday it would send an armored brigade of more than 120 tanks and 6,000 combat troops to the Persian Gulf. British Defense Secretary Tom King said another squadron of Tornado ground attack aircraft and additional air defense aircraft would also be sent.

The British forces mark the first dispatch of tanks and significant ground troops by any Western country besides the United States since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of oil-rich Kuwait.

Canada on Friday committed a dozen fighter jets and a total of 450 fliers and ground crew. "This is not a conflict between Arabs and the West, nor is it a conflict between Iraq and the United States," said Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. "It is Saddam Hussein against the civilized world."

Several other nations, including West Germany, Italy, Belgium and South Korea, pledged either money or equipment Friday to shore up the multinational contingent in the Gulf.

Japan, facing allegations it has been too tightfisted during the crisis, pledged $3 billion on top of $1 billion in non-military aid.

Discrimination claimed by cemetery employee

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Patricia Havens, a secretary in the town's Cemetery Division, has filed a complaint with the town's Human Relations Commission, claiming she was discriminated against in the appointment of a cemetery superintendent because she is a woman.

In the August 24 complaint complaint, obtained yesterday by the Manchester Herald, Havens said she applied for the job but was not appointed. Instead, a less qualified male was selected, she said.

Floyd Totten, former cemetery foreman, has been named to the post, vacated when Robert Harrison retired from town employment.

Havens said in the complaint that she believes she was not appointed because she is a female. And, she said, she believes the selection procedures were flawed because there were no women involved in interviewing the candidates.

Totten and Havens were among those who got passing scores on the oral examination, according to Assistant General Manager Steven Werber.

Jonathan Mercier, chairman of the Human Relations Commission, has appointed Vivian Garside and Joseph Sweeney, HRC members, as a committee to investigate the complaint. Sweeney said the investigation is in progress.

He said that he and Garside will probably present a preliminary report to the HRC when it meets Tuesday, but the investigation will not be complete by that time.

Both Mercier and Sweeney said it is likely that a hearing will be held by the HRC and that a special meeting will be scheduled for the hearing.

Soviet plan admits danger of bankruptcy

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev presented to the national parliament an economic reform plan Friday that proposes market-oriented policies and other measures to halt the nation's slide toward bankruptcy.

But Gorbachev rejected the Russian parliament's conclusion that the solution to the economic crisis requires stripping the central government of much of its power. The Gorbachev plan refused to surrender the Kremlin's power to tax or give republics' laws superiority over national ones.

Gorbachev's disagreement with the Russian parliament reduces hope of a national consensus by the Oct. 1 deadline set by the president.

Industrial output has dropped to the point of "economic depression, which worsens with every month," according to a copy of his plan obtained by The Associated Press.

"The international economic position of the country is catastrophic. The government's solvency is not guaranteed and foreign debt is growing rapidly," it says.

Without prompt action, "we would be forced to choose between hyperinflation and direct seizure of cash from the population and enterprises," the plan says.

Already, some regions of the Soviet Union are refusing to trade with each other or resorting to barter.

The Soviet Union stopped paying its international bills on time months ago and has sold vast amounts of diamonds and gold in recent months to raise cash.

Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov said Tuesday that imports of medicine and consumer goods could be cut by two-thirds because of lack of foreign currency. He said the nation's loan debt service has risen to $12.5 billion a year and that Western banks were refusing to lend the Soviet Union more money.

Gorbachev's report is a combination of a conservative Ryzhkov plan with the more-radical 500-Day plan approved by the Russian parliament Tuesday.

It accepts large parts of the Russian proposal, written by economist Stanislav Shatalin, including selling government property to the public, followed by a gradual freeing of state-set prices.

Meanwhile, the U.N. sanctions on trade with Iraq were taking their toll on the Iraqi economy. The ruling Baath Party newspaper Al-Tharwa said that starting Saturday, Iraqis will be limited to three pieces of bread a day. Rationing of sugar, rice, cooking oil, soap and detergent began in some neighborhoods earlier this month.

The 6-week-old Middle East crisis also was taking its toll on the U.S. economy. The government announced Friday that wholesale prices shot up 1.3 percent in August.

The Labor Department blamed virtually the entire increase on higher oil costs since Iraq's invasion, which led to a 4 million barrel daily shortfall of oil worldwide and pushed fuel prices up by about 20 percent. Oil prices moved higher Friday, to $32 a barrel.

Bush, meanwhile, asked Congress for $1.9 billion more to cover the costs of deploying the 150,000 U.S. troops in the Middle East. Operation Desert Shield is costing Washington an estimated $1 billion a month, officials have said.

Iraq has massed an estimated 265,000 troops along or near Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia since Saddam sent his forces into the emirate in a dispute over oil, land and money.

The raids on the Kuwait compounds appeared designed to intimidate diplomats who have remained in their embassies to symbolize their rejection of Iraq's annexation of Kuwait. The diplomats also are trying to provide some protection for their citizens trapped there.

Iraqi soldiers forced their way into the French ambassador's residence early Friday and seized four French citizens, including the military attaché. The diplomat was later released, but the whereabouts of the other three was not known.

At the Canadian compound, troops entered and briefly detained the consuls from the United States, Britain, Ireland, Australia and Canada, who were meeting there. Canada issued a formal protest with Iraq.

Soldiers also entered Belgium's diplomatic compound in Kuwait and ordered the two remaining diplomats to leave, officials said in Brussels. The soldiers left after the diplomats fled to the ambassador's residence nearby.

A day earlier, the Dutch government announced a similar incident at its diplomatic residence in Kuwait but refused to provide details or say when the incursion occurred.

About 2,200 Americans remain captive in Iraq and Kuwait, and some Western men have been transferred to strategic Iraqi installations to deter attacks by Western forces. Many Western women and children have been allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait on chartered flights in recent weeks.

An Iraqi Airways Boeing 747 chartered by the U.S. government flew to Kuwait City to pick up about 400 Americans scheduled and fly them home, a U.S. Embassy official said.

Hundreds of thousands of refugees from Arab and Asian nations have fled Iraq and Kuwait through Jordan and Turkey, straining the already tight resources of both nations.

In a late-night session Thursday, the U.N. Security Council voted 13-2 on the U.S.-sponsored resolution to allow food shipments to Iraq only to alleviate "human suffering." Cuba and Yemen opposed the measure, saying all food should be allowed in.

Early Friday, the council's committee on sanctions approved a request by India to send a ship loaded with 11,000 tons of food to Kuwait to feed about 120,000 stranded Indian citizens.

U.S. diplomatic efforts to isolate Iraq forged ahead. Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with Syrian President Hafez Assad, Syria, Iraq's arch-enemy, is likely to send 15,000 more troops to the gulf. Western diplomatic sources said Friday on condition of anonymity, Syria has 3,000 soldiers in Saudi Arabia and 1,000 in the United Arab Emirates as part of the multinational force.

In other developments:

—The West German government — prevented by its constitution from deploying forces outside the NATO area — said it had given the United States a list of more than 50 merchant ships that could be used to transport American troops to the gulf.

—The Norwegian government offered to help carry fuel and supplies to U.S. warships enforcing the economic sanctions and increase its aid to refugees fleeing the crisis to about $11 million.

—Italy said it would send an additional warship and eight Tornado fighter-planes to the gulf region. Italy already has contributed five ships.

Report: man held in Iran freed after years in prison

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An American businessman who once worked as a pilot for Jimmy Carter has been allowed to leave Iran after spending more than a decade in prison, a newspaper reported today.

E. David Rabhan, 64, was released from Iran's Evin Prison on Aug. 6, and flew out of Tehran late Thursday, The Philadelphia Inquirer reported.

The newspaper said Rabhan was returning to the United States via Switzerland. The Swiss Embassy, through which the U.S. government maintains contacts with Iran, would not confirm the newspaper's report that it looked after Rabhan's interests and guaranteed he would not flee before being given a visa to leave Iran.

The Inquirer said Rabhan's sister Joan Jacobson said Iranian authorities agreed to allow Rabhan to leave the country Sept. 3 for unknown reasons.

According to letters smuggled out of Iran, Rabhan was physically abused and his weight once fell by 44 pounds. He spent part of his imprisonment in solitary confinement in a windowless cell.

"I'm happy and I'm sad," Ms. Jacobson told the Inquirer. "I'm happy he will soon be here and sad because he lost more than 10 years of his life."

"His physical condition is good," said Ms. Jacobson, who has spoken to her brother on the phone. "I don't know if he has gained the weight back."

After leaving the presidency Weicker on questions about Weicker's personal finances and the way he proposes to rectify the mounting budget problems.

Morrison, a four-term congressman from Hamden, piled on the personal finance question too, accusing Weicker of thinking he was above the rules others play by.

Last month, Weicker, a former three-term Republican U.S. senator, had refused to release his federal tax returns for 1989, but Morrison, and some editorial writers, raised such a furor over what Weicker might be trying to hide, that Weicker ultimately released partial tax returns and the sources of his half-million dollars in income last year.

Weicker took even more heat when Morrison raised questions about his decision to keep more than $11,000 left over from his unsuccessful bid for a fourth Senate term. Morrison claimed that was a violation of Senate rules. Weicker said it was allowed under federal law, but he then wrote a check to charity for the amount he had kept.

At the debate, Weicker said the only issue should have been how much he earned and how much he paid in taxes, that voters care more about issues like jobs and running state government.

Rowland scoffed at what he said was Weicker's "righteous indignation" and how, during his 18 years as a Republican U.S. senator, "you would go on and on and on about the importance of full disclosure."

"You had to be shamed into disclosing the information," Rowland said.

Morrison said he was proud of having raised the issue with Weicker.

Weicker said he had fulfilled his obligations.

"A candidate for governor has every right to ... release the amount of money made and the taxes paid on it," Weicker said. "But after that, you get into personal matters and there I think a candidate for governor has a right to privacy."

Part of the reason he had balked at releasing his state and federal returns was that it would have required him to reveal the amount of alimony he was paying to his two former wives. When he

Rowland and Morrison unite to beat up Weicker

By JUDG EVERHART
The Associated Press

STAMFORD — Republican John O. Rowland and Democrat Bruce A. Morrison took turns Friday beating up on third-party contender Lowell P. Weicker Jr. in the first debate among the three gubernatorial candidates.

But Weicker, the current leader in the polls who's running under his newly created Connecticut Party ticket, easily held his own and, recalling his losing 1988 campaign when he was compared to a sleeping bear, proclaimed, "The bear is back."

All three candidates said after the hour-long session that they were pleased with their performances and had made the points they wanted to make.

But Rowland, a three-term congressman from Waterbury, was the fiercest combatant, repeatedly jabbing Weicker on questions about Weicker's personal finances and the way he proposes to rectify the mounting budget problems.

Morrison, a four-term congressman from Hamden, piled on the personal finance question too, accusing Weicker of thinking he was above the rules others play by.

Last month, Weicker, a former three-term Republican U.S. senator, had refused to release his federal tax returns for 1989, but Morrison, and some editorial writers, raised such a furor over what Weicker might be trying to hide, that Weicker ultimately released partial tax returns and the sources of his half-million dollars in income last year.

Weicker took even more heat when Morrison raised questions about his decision to keep more than $11,000 left over from his unsuccessful bid for a fourth Senate term. Morrison claimed that was a violation of Senate rules. Weicker said it was allowed under federal law, but he then wrote a check to charity for the amount he had kept.

At the debate, Weicker said the only issue should have been how much he earned and how much he paid in taxes, that voters care more about issues like jobs and running state government.

Rowland scoffed at what he said was Weicker's "righteous indignation" and how, during his 18 years as a Republican U.S. senator, "you would go on and on and on about the importance of full disclosure."

"You had to be shamed into disclosing the information," Rowland said.

Morrison said he was proud of having raised the issue with Weicker.

Weicker said he had fulfilled his obligations.

"A candidate for governor has every right to ... release the amount of money made and the taxes paid on it," Weicker said. "But after that, you get into personal matters and there I think a candidate for governor has a right to privacy."

Part of the reason he had balked at releasing his state and federal returns was that it would have required him to reveal the amount of alimony he was paying to his two former wives. When he did release the returns, that information was blanked out and no one questioned it.

"You get what you see in a campaign. If it's a visionary campaign, you're going to have a visionary governor," Weicker said. "If it's a dirtbag campaign, you're going to have a dirtbag governor."

The three also squabbled over the issue of a state personal income tax. Only Rowland would say flatly that he would veto an income tax.

Morrison stuck to his position that he would only sign one into law if the idea were first approved by voters in a statewide referendum.

Weicker and Rowland ridiculed Morrison for that stance, with Weicker saying governors are elected to lead, not follow, and Rowland calling the idea "government by referendum."

Weicker said voters had already been through a couple of referendums, when Democrats this week chose Morrison as their nominee over state Rep. William J. Cites Jr. in a primary, when Rowland was nominated by Republicans and when Weicker gathered 105,000 petition signatures to get on the ballot as an independent.

"You missed one referendum," Rowland said to Weicker. "We had one (in 1988) in the U.S. Senate race" — the election Weicker lost.

Morrison defended the referendum idea, saying "I trust the people to decide."

Videotape killer will die

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A woman whose killing of a man was videotaped received a death sentence despite her claims it was either kill or be killed.

Deidre Hunt, 21, said her manipulative boss forced her to fatally gun down Mark Kevin Ramsey, 19, while the victim was tied to a tree. The videotape viewed in court showed her fire three shots, then grab Ramsey by the hair and deliver a final shot to the temple.

The condemned woman bowed her head and wept when Circuit Judge S. James Foxman imposed the death penalty Thursday. The judge called the killing "cold, calculated and premeditated."

Hunt's former boss, Kosta Fotopoulos, 31, faces multiple murder charges and was accused of videotaping Ramsey's killing.

"I was confronted with a decision that Kosta Fotopoulos had absolutely already made," Hunt said Thursday. "It was my decision of living by shooting Mark Kevin Ramsey or dying with Mark Kevin Ramsey. My decision was a choice to survive and I chose to live."

Hunt had pleaded guilty to murder charges in the deaths of Ramsey and Bryan Chase, 18. She also was sentenced to six life prison terms for two counts of attempted murder, two counts of solicitation to murder and one count each of conspiracy to murder and armed burglary.

Chase was killed after allegedly shooting Fotopoulos' wife, Lisa, Hunt, allegedly at Fotopoulos' bidding, hired Chase to kill Mrs. Fotopoulos so they could inherit her wealth along with $700,000 in life insurance.

Fotopoulos allegedly shot Chase after the 18-year-old broke into the house Nov. 4 and shot Mrs. Fotopoulos in the head. Prosecutors say he was shot to prevent exposure of the plot. Mrs. Fotopoulos recovered from her wound.

Hunt apologized to the victims' families Thursday and blamed Fotopoulos.

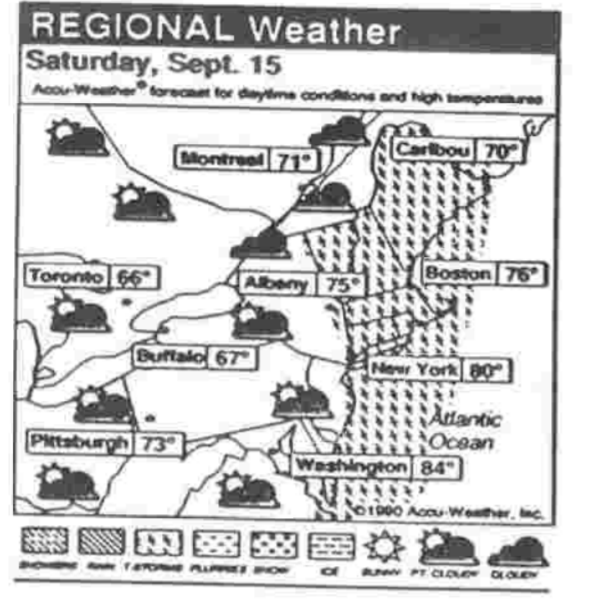

"He's evil, vicious and a professional assassin who eliminates human beings for a living and for his own personal gain," she said. "He didn't just eliminate others' lives, he eliminated minds as well."

Mutiny ends

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis closed the book on the Massachusetts Mutiny on Friday when he returned from a European trade mission and ended Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy's brief reign as acting governor.

There was some consolation for Murphy in the aftermath of an episode that sunk her floundering race for governor. An aide said Dukakis would consider adopting some elements of her plan to restructure the state's frail budget.

Dukakis said he planned to meet Saturday with assistants to discuss the state budget, which already is running at a deficit two months into the fiscal year.

De Klerk, Mandela see link behind township violence

By GREG MYRE
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela said Friday that he and President F.W. de Klerk had concluded a "hidden hand" was orchestrating the black township fighting to undermine peace talks aimed at black-white power sharing.

Five blacks were killed in Soweto on Friday and 15 others were thrown from moving trains and injured in Johannesburg, police said. On Thursday night, youths with guns and machetes killed 26 people and injured more than 100 on a train traveling from Johannesburg to Soweto.

"We are dealing with highly professional killers," Mandela, the African National Congress leader, said at a Johannesburg news conference after meeting with de Klerk in Pretoria.

"The government is convinced this is no longer a clash between black and black," he said. "There is a hidden hand here the government intends to track down."

Asked who he thought was responsible, Mandela said, "We don't know... but we have our own suspicions." He refused to elaborate.

Anti-apartheid groups have alleged that police, rogue elements of the security forces and white extremists have spurred on the fighting. Witnesses in several townships have claimed that masked white men participated. But no proof has been offered.

Almost 800 blacks had died in the townships ring Johannesburg since fighting erupted in early August. The main combatants have been Zulus loyal to the conservative Inkatha movement and Xhosas and other blacks supporting Mandela's ANC.

Police still look for clues in Fla. college slayings

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Searchers waded through alligator-infested swamps and scoured dense woods in humid 90-degree heat Friday, looking for evidence in the grisly slayings of five college students.

Searchers looking for body parts and other evidence concentrated on wilderness areas near the three apartments where the bodies of five students were found slain almost three weeks ago.

Rusty knives, metal, paper products and clothing were among the items found. Officials said it will take lab work and analysis to determine if they are connected to the slayings.

"It's right on target," police Lt. Sadee Darnell said of the searches that ended Friday afternoon.

Polk County authorities, meanwhile, announced that the Florida Department of Law Enforcement had taken "body samples" from Stephen Bates, 30, a burglary suspect jailed in Bartow.

Bates is one of the two suspects publicly identified by police. Six other people also are considered suspects.

Near the Williamsburg Apartments, Gainesville police and Navy searchers combed dense woods 30 yards behind the apartment where the bodies of the first two victims — Sonja Larson, 18, and Christina Powell, 17 — were found Aug. 26.

Similar searches were going on behind the Glenwood Apartments, about a mile away, where the bodies of Manny Taboada, 23, and Tracy Puares, 23, were found Aug. 28, and outside the apartment where Christa Hoyt, 18, was slain.

At the Williamsburg site, searchers kept a close watch for a 4½-foot-long alligator that slithered away when they came near.

Searchers using dogs, metal detectors and probes examined Hogtown Creek and wooded areas Thursday around the Hawaiian Village Apartment where suspect Edward Lewis Humphrey lived.

Investigators already have taken blood and hair samples from him at the Brevard County Jail, where he has been held since days after the slayings on unrelated charges that he beat up his grandmother.

"We have a lot of information on Mr. Humphrey, but we have not connected him to these murders," Darnell said.

Lotto line lasts all day, most of night

MANCHESTER — Despite a jackpot soaring past the $100 million mark, some gold diggers mobbing the Loto Express but Friday wondered if their chance of striking it big in the Florida lottery was worth the wait.

"Once you got here, you were pretty much in it for the duration," said Richard Carpenter, of 141 Tutor Lane, who waited more than 90 minutes to pick up two tickets he had purchased on Wednesday.

"I could have come back later, but it could have been a longer wait," said Carpenter, who sounded relieved to finally be walking back to his car and leaving Loto Express, which is at the corner of Spencer and Adams Streets.

People who bought lottery tickets earlier this week were forced to come back either on Friday or today to pick up the tickets, which were delivered from Florida. The drawing will be held at 10:58 p.m., tonight.

"I had no idea the system [of getting the tickets] would have been this bad," said Harriet Green, of Millford Road, who was upset with the wait.

"To me, if you come up with just a receipt of your purchase, you should be able to collect the prize," Green said. "We shouldn't have been made to stand here and pick up the tickets."

The line was long all day Friday. Faced with humid weather, hostilities arose. At about 3 p.m., a scuffle broke out between people in line. No one was injured, but infractions were issued to two people involved, police said.

Loto Express hired two members of the Manchester Police Department to handle the crowds.

"We brought down barricades and police tape to get things organized around here," said Police Officer Sandy Ficarra, one of officers who helped control the pack.

The swarm dissipated at about 9:30 p.m., said Jean Pagan, a co-owner of the Loto Express.

About 36,000 of the $2 tickets were sold at the Loto Express during the course of the week.

Today, people who bought their tickets before Thursday can show up at Loto Express to collect them starting at 10 a.m., while those who bought their tickets on Thursday have to wait until 2 p.m.

Vocalists, musicians needed

MANCHESTER — The Manchester Symphony Orchestra and Choral is calling for new string players and vocalists to join its membership for the 31st season of concerts. The Orchestra also needs a second clarinet player who will be asked to audition.

Rehearsals are held on Monday evenings from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at Manchester High School. Concerts are scheduled for Oct. 28, Dec. 8, Jan. 19, April 6, and May 17 and 18.

The October and January concerts will feature only the symphony orchestra. The December Christmas concert is a presentation of the choral. Remaining concerts combine efforts of both.

New bus routes

COVENTRY — On the heels of complaints from parents, school officials say revised bus routes will be available early next week.

Business manager Frank Mari told the Board of Education Thursday during a meeting at Coventry High School that he will review the routes and they will be made available to local newspapers for publication next week.

Two weeks ago, several parents complained to the board about long routes that were resulting in their children arriving late to school. Parents also said they were confused about pick-up and arrival times as well as exact routes, because the routes were changed after publication.

Kathleen Ryan, transportation committee chairwoman said, "Things are quieting down. The routes are still long and are going to be. We have two fewer buses and the town is not any smaller."

State pols denounce oil-tax plan

By JOHN DIAMOND
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An oil import tax proposed by participants in the closed-door budget summit would cripple the already limping New England economy, Connecticut lawmakers warn.

With word leaking out that the summiters have agreed to taxes on many petroleum products, including imported crude, members of the Connecticut delegation are moving quickly to head off a potentially crippling proposal.

"An oil import tax would be an absolute outrage," said Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn. "It would have a disproportionate impact on the Northeast."

Lawmakers from northeastern states said they were not about to wait for the budget summit to conclude before they began lobbying. "Dear Colleague" letters went out from the offices of New England lawmakers. And a coalition of oil-dependent states laid out the economic damage an import tax would do to the region.

"The imposition of such a tax would be bad tax policy, bad energy policy and bad economic policy," 28 lawmakers said in a letter circulated late last week.

An oil import fee of $5 per barrel would translate into a $106 annual penalty for every man, woman and child in the northern and eastern states, according to calculations by the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition. The South and West, by contrast, would pay $52 per person because to its warm climate and lower oil consumption.

On a state-by-state basis, the damage could be even greater. Connecticut residents would pay $132 per year to finance such a tax. And in chilly Maine, the cost would rise to $188.

Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., called the oil import tax proposal a revival of an old, discredited idea.

"We are going to fight this tooth and nail," said Kennelly. "There's nothing new about these arguments. It's discriminatory to the Northeast. It's an inefficient tax."

Both Johnson and Kennelly are members of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, which would have to approve any tax proposal that emerges from the budget summit, a bipartisan group of congressional leaders and Bush administration officials. They said they would put up a fight in committee if leadership tried to push through an oil import tax.

But Kennelly sounded exasperated that she and other New Englanders were being forced to fight a battle they thought they had won years ago.

"A couple of years ago we had to go on the floor and set our hair on fire about this," Kennelly said. "I can't believe that at this time when we're supposed to spread the pain around and you have all these arguments against it and they go back to an old chestnut. It just bothers me."

Both Kennelly and Johnson said they would loudly point out that the Southwest is benefiting heavily not only from the rise in oil prices but also from the savings and loan bailout.

Sen. Lloyd Bentson, D-Texas, the Senate Finance Committee chairman, proposed the import tax along with a host of other energy taxes.

As drafted by Bentson and discussed in the closed-door summit, the import tax would kick in only when the price of oil dropped to $20 a barrel or lower. Thus, in times of crisis in the Mideast such as now, when the price has risen to more than $30 per barrel, consumers wouldn't be saddled with paying an additional import tax.

Bentson's plan calls for a tax that would make up any gap between the price of oil per barrel and the $20 figure. If oil was selling for $15 per barrel, for example, the tax on imported oil would be $5. Through that method, domestic producers, whose product would not be taxed, would have a guaranteed minimum price of $20 per barrel.

Banks seek to force realty into bankruptcy action

HARTFORD (AP) — Six Connecticut banks filed suit Friday to force West Hartford-based real estate giant Colonial Realty Co. and its partners into involuntary bankruptcy, according to a news report.

Attorneys for the six banks filed four petitions in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Hartford Friday asking the court to force Colonial Realty partners Jonathan N. Gogel, Benjamin Sisti and Frank Shuch into Chapter Seven bankruptcy for defaulting on a number of loans, according to a report Friday by WFSB-TV.

The banks filing the petitions were Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., Bank of Boston Connecticut, Mechanics Savings Bank, People's Bank, Burrill Interfinancial Bancorp. and Connecticut Savings Bank.

Together, the six banks have claimed they are owed a total of more than $40 million.

According to court documents, CBT claimed Colonial owes the bank a total of close to $26 million. Other money allegedly owed to the banks includes $4 million to Bank of Boston Connecticut; almost $2 million to Mechanics Savings Bank; $10,250,000 to People's Bank; $350,000 to Bur-ritt Interfinancial Bancorp.

Earlier this week, The First Bank of West Hartford filed claims totalling $2.4 million against the founders and majority partners of Colonial Realty Co., attaching five properties in West Hartford and Farmington against Gogel and Sisti.

Last week, Colonial officials issued a statement acknowledging that Colonial was trying to restructure its debts and protect its hundreds of Connecticut investors. The company blamed the downturn in the real estate market and a credit crunch for its problems.

Retraining fund proposed

HARTFORD (AP) — State Senate leader John Larson on Friday renewed his call for a $50 million fund of state bonds to help Connecticut's defense contractors retrain their workers and shift to new products to survive anticipated defense cuts.

Larson, the Senate president pro tem, told defense contractors and other businessmen gathered at a conference at the state Capitol that the money is desperately needed to help struggling defense contractors move into new product fields.

"I think it could go as high as $100 million based on the layoff figures we've heard recently," Larson said. "But we've got to put $50 million, minimum, into manufacturing."

He said Connecticut lost 1,550 defense-related jobs in 1989. Defense contractors in the state have announced another 2,700 layoffs, he said.

Larson, D-East Hartford, pushed for a similar measure in the legislative session earlier this year. The bill had broad support and appeared close to passing in the final hours of the session, but died in the House as time expired in the session.

Larson's comments came at a one-day conference sponsored by the Legislative Task Force on Manufacturing and defense giants United Technologies Inc. and the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics.

Rep. Sam Gogjenson, D-Conn., who helped organize the conference with Larson, told about 150 attendees that the federal government can't afford to wait any longer before offering aid to defense-reliant industries.

He suggested, for instance, that Sikorsky Aircraft, the Stratford-based helicopter maker, might be capable of making high-speed, light-rail commuter trains.

Tourists make natives antsy

By MARCUS ELIASON
The Associated Press

LONDON — The islanders are restless. Hordes of tourists are pouring into their hallowed sanctuaries, intruding upon their ancient ways, corrupting them with cash, snapping their pictures.

It sounds like a familiar lament from some exotic corner of the old empire, but these islanders are the British, and many are fed up with the more than 17 million tourists passing annually through their small and crowded realm.

The problem has become serious enough to merit a government task force. The English Tourist Board has produced a leaflet that appeals to visitors, foreign and domestic, to behave themselves.

"Always remember you are the guest; show consideration for residents and their environment," the leaflet begins. "Respect local laws and customs." It is called "20 Tips for Visitors."

It advises tourists not to photograph the locals without permission; to refrain from touching valuable tapestries, vases and paintings; avoid wearing high-heeled shoes in historic buildings; and dress appropriately in holy places.

Although William Davis, chairman of the Tourist Board, insisted in launching the leaflet that "We don't want to nag," some of the tips have a distinctly nannyish tone.

Tourists are advised to say please and thank you, and when complaining, to "do it politely."

"Don't argue with staff who seek to enforce rules," it says. "They are only doing their jobs."

And, inevitably, "Don't push, shove or jump queues." Davis says the leaflet does not mean to single out foreigners as the sole offenders — it isn't being translated into other languages — but it comes at a time of heated debate about whether tourism is good for the nation.

Foreign tourism generates $42 billion a year for Britain and employs 1.5 million people, making it a prime money-earner as heavy industry declines.

It is spreading well beyond the familiar landmarks of London. Foreign tourism in Oxford rose 44 percent between 1983 and 1988. Bath recorded a 38 percent increase, York and Canterbury 33 percent.

Internal tourism, measured by the 109 million overnight hotel stays in 1989, also is a vast industry.

Some of the people under invasion are protesting, and this has prompted the government to announce a task force to identify problem areas.

"I travel around the country a lot and have noticed a growing tension about tourism, and we are seeking a way of heading off a backlash which could damage the entire industry," said Iver Manley, the Employment Department official chosen to head the team.

"In some areas, like Portsmouth or Bradford, a museum is welcomed as a badge of civic pride, but in others such a plan would cause resentment," he said at a news conference. "They do not want tourists in their town and will not build for them."

Officials say they want to spread tourism to less familiar territory, such as Liverpool or the Romney Marshes of Kent county. Rather than head straight for Westminster Abbey, how about seeing the Victorian cotton mills of Lancashire, or going down into a Yorkshire coal mine?

Davis of the Tourist Board worries about "the growing tendency to use the word 'tourist' as a term of abuse." Phrases such as "tourism plague" and "hordes," he protests, are "totally and utterly inappropriate to describe visitors whom we ought to be making feel welcome in this country."

Dispute over Marilyn medals

PARIS (AP) — A dispute over the rights to Marilyn Monroe's image is keeping a French mint from distributing a gold medallion depicting her nude figure.

La Monnaie de Paris, established in the time of the Emperor Charlemagne, is a branch of the Finance Ministry. It took the medallion off the market because of claims by Roger Richman, a California licensing agent.

La Monnaie de Paris has made medallions for 400 years and first produced the Marilyn medals in bronze in 1985, said Patrice Cahart, director of the mint.

"It was part of a series of medallions featuring about a dozen cinema stars struck to commemorate the Cannes Film Festival," he said in an interview. "It is something done quite frequently with figures from the arts, theater, etcetera."

In 1987, the mint produced the Marilyn medal in gold because of an order from a Japanese dealer, Cahart said.

The coins have her face and name on one side and, on the other, her nude figure in the reclining pose reproduced on countless posters and calendars in the 28 years since her suicide.

Richman claimed he controlled the rights to the commercialization of her image and La Monnaie de Paris halted sales of the medallions in 1988, Cahart said.

Early in August, Richman told The Associated Press in Los Angeles: "We are now in the process of settlement negotiations." He said no lawsuit had been filed, but he would not rule out the possibility.

"The estate of Marilyn Monroe has French trademarks covering this classification," Richman said.

The gold medallions are of 18-karat gold, less than an inch in diameter and weigh slightly more than a quarter-ounce.

Cahart said most of the medallions produced had been sold, but would not say how many there were or give the market value, citing the negotiations with Richman.

De Maiziere spokeswoman Angela Merkel said Eberhard Stief, state secretary in the ministry, would take over the role of overseeing the secret police committee.

The committee last week gave the government a list of 5,000 people who once worked for the secret police unit known as the Stasi and had been assigned to various government ministries.

Officials subsequently fired or suspended nearly 60 people on the list still holding government posts, most of them in Diestel's ministry.

Parliament spent the better part of a 14-hour session on Thursday debating the recent allegations that the government was still rife with Stasi agents.

However, a vote to demand Diestel's resignation failed after de Maiziere defended the interior minister, who also is the deputy prime minister.

De Maiziere relieved Diestel of his duties in an effort to calm the political crisis, Merkel said. Diestel has become a focal point for lawmakers seeking a more aggressive purge of the old security apparatus.

Merkel also said de Maiziere would authorize an investigation of his Cabinet ministers after the head of a previous committee investigating the Stasi said four ministers had worked for the secret police.

Feminists fight Souter placement

By DIANE DUSTON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Feminist leaders said Friday the clock would be turned back 25 years on women's rights if David Souter is confirmed as a Supreme Court justice.

"If we lose this one, we'll never get it back," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority, who is lobbying the Senate to reject the nominee.

Smeal said she had read all 200 of Souter's legal opinions and believes he would work to cut off women's access to birth control and abortion.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, said Souter revealed his opposition to abortion by calling it the "killing of unborn children."

"That's the language of the right wing," Yard said.

Police duty stripped

By MARK FRITZ
The Associated Press

EAST BERLIN — An East German official in charge of disbarring the secret police was stripped of those duties Friday after lawmakers criticized him for keeping former agents on his payroll.

Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere relieved Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel of responsibility for a committee investigating the dreaded security arm of the old Communist regime, a spokeswoman said.

The change was the latest development in a chaotic government that will soon be out of business when West Germany assumes control of the economically reeling country on Oct. 3, the formal date of German unification.

De Maiziere spokeswoman Angela Merkel said Eberhard Stief, state secretary in the ministry, would take over the role of overseeing the secret police committee.

The committee last week gave the government a list of 5,000 people who once worked for the secret police unit known as the Stasi and had been assigned to various government ministries.

HOUSEHOLD HAZARD
A safety hazard occurs when you combine chlorine bleach with acids or ammonia; it produces chlorine gas that irritates the eyes, skin, and respiratory tract. In large doses, it can be fatal. This can happen when bleach is mixed with some toilet bowl cleaners containing acid. To clean the toilet bowl, use a bowl cleaner, or an in-the-tank sanitizer, but not both.

Human gene therapy study begins

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A 4-year-old girl received an intravenous injection Friday and made history by becoming the first patient to receive gene therapy.

"The patient is doing beautifully," said Dr. French Anderson, a scientist at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

"This is a small but crucial step to treating a whole array of genetic diseases," said Dr. R. Michael Blaese, another cancer institute researcher on the project.

Success could lead to use of the procedure against cancer, hemophilia, sickle cell anemia, AIDS and other diseases in years to come.

The child suffers from a rare genetic disease called ADA Deficiency, which weakens her immune system so that it cannot fight infection and disease.

About 1 billion cells — approximately a small thimbleful — were mixed in a saline solution in the first infusion, which took about a half hour.

Anderson said he would not expect to see results for the first several months, but that within a year they should know whether the treatment is working.

The National Institutes of Health has approval to treat up to 10 patients with ADA Deficiency. The afflicted children were born with a gene that does not produce the enzyme adenosine deaminase, or ADA, which is essential for an immune system to function normally. This leaves them vulnerable to infections and diseases most people can fight off.

The best of the current treatments for the 10 children born in North America each year suffering from the disease, is a bone marrow transplant with a donor whose tissue type matches the child's. But most of the children don't have a matched donor, and success with an unmatched donor is about 50 percent.

Untreated, children with the disease die within the first two years of life. They usually don't live into their second decade even with current treatments.

"They objected in general, but it was pretty clear that it was the women that set them off," said a military source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Olsen said the military decided it would not send audiences to the shows because of the Saudi objections.

Waite may be released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Britain's ambassador has held talks with Lebanon's leading Shiite Muslim cleric on a plan for swapping Anglican church envoy Terry Waite for a Shiite cleric held by Israel, a magazine reported Friday.

Al-Shirra magazine said the talks were held Wednesday between Ambassador David Thorne and Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah and focused on "details of releasing the British hostage Terry Waite in return for the release of Sheik Abdul Karim Obaid."

The story was not attributed to any source. Al-Shirra received international attention for breaking the story of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran in 1986 in return for the release of American hostages.

His recent reports on Western captives held mainly by pro-Iranian factions in Lebanon have not been accurate.

Fadlallah, the reputed mentor of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, called the magazine report "a lie."

The British Embassy in Lebanon could not be reached for comment.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said: "I don't even know whether the ambassador did meet him. It's possible."

Kidnapper outwitted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The daughter of a McDonald's Corp. executive escaped from a 28-hour kidnapping ordeal and police said they arrested a friend of the family who had demanded $400,000 ransom.

Sarah Zien, 24, outwitted her abductor by persuading him to take her to a drug store, where she managed to use a phone out of his presence long enough to call her parents. They in turn called police. Sgt. Bill Holmes said Thursday.

J.C. "Bob" Aler, 55, of Point Loma, was arrested Wednesday by El Cajon police in the store parking lot while apparently looking for Zien, authorities said. He had partially disguised himself and had a pistol in his car, police said.

Aler, who owns Industrial Plastics Inc. in El Cajon, was being held in county jail without bail.

Zien's mother, Lois, said the family was shocked at Aler's arrest because he and his wife are social friends of theirs whom they had most recently seen two weeks ago at a dinner.

Doe's death spurs talks

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Rebel leader Prince Johnson met with U.S. Ambassador Peter de Vos on Friday and discussed how to end Liberia's tribal war following President Samuel Doe's death, the U.S. Embassy said.

Bursts of gunfire interrupted periods of calm in the war-torn capital as the rival rebel armies of Johnson and Charles Taylor raced to reach the fortified presidential mansion, Liberia's seat of government.

Johnson appeared to have pushed Taylor's forces back after they had advanced from the city's eastern suburbs to within a few hundred yards of the mansion.

Johnson controls the city center and areas west of the capital — including the diplomatic enclave on Mamba Point — below the cliff-top executive mansion.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said Johnson and de Vos talked for 45 minutes at Johnson's request and discussed "how to bring peace to Liberia and to provide humanitarian relief to the Liberian people." It was Johnson's first visit to the embassy, the spokesman said.

American and Arab cultures clash

By JOHN KING
The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — A variety show with women dancers that expatriates were staging as a morale booster for U.S. troops was canceled Friday after the Saudi government complained, military officials said.

The Saudis said their objection was based on television coverage of the show, which Lt. Col. John Olsen, a U.S. military spokesman, said "caused some discomfort on the part of the Saudi government and we regret that."

The Saudis apparently found a burlesque-like dance routine in the first act of the show especially offensive. They complained to U.S. military officials after monitoring the show on CBS, which aired a brief segment showing four women dancers.

"They objected in general, but it was pretty clear that it was the women that set them off," said a military source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Olsen said the military decided it would not send audiences to the shows because of the Saudi objections.

The episode is the latest in a series of incidents that have caused increasing cultural strains between the Americans and their Saudi hosts.

Earlier in the week, the Saudi government complained to U.S. commanders about American soldiers venturing into Saudi towns carrying their weapons.

Saudi officials have also been relaying complaints about women in the military driving on Saudi roads. Women are not allowed to drive here.

The 90-minute show was being staged by a group of Americans, Britons and other Westerners who wanted to show their appreciation to the thousands of Americans deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

At opening night Wednesday, 400 members of the 82nd Airborne were repeatedly brought to their feet by the performers and many said afterward that the show was a break from the heat, boredom and isolation of the desert.

Saudi women appear in public draped in clothing that covers their faces, arms and legs. Western women also are advised cover their calves and arms when in public here.

Refugee's story told

By MORT ROSENBLUM
The Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — Justo Enrique Dellosa's trip from Kuwait to Queen Alia Airport took 22 days. Along the road, his fiancée died of the heat. Then he was one of the faceless thousands stranded in the Jordan desert.

"It was terrible," Dellosa said, shaking his head at the inadequacy of the word but not finding a better one. "Terrible."

He sat on the curb Friday with 50 Filipino friends awaiting an evacuation flight to Manila. Nearby, a young man hugged his girlfriend, who wept silently. A group of others joked and laughed. Chased out of Kuwait by hunger and fear after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion, they did not know what to expect back home.

Dellosa said his friends had gone to the gulf for work they could not find in the Philippines. Nearly a million foreigners — many of them citizens of impoverished Asian countries — had come for the same reason. Hundreds of thousands have begun tortuous trips home in the last six weeks.

"I'll find something, maybe," Dellosa said, looking dubious. His last possessions were within reach, stuffed into a cheap suitcase. His pockets held a few dollars worth of Iraqi dinars.

As an office boy in Kuwait, he earned $450 a month. For four years, he fed a bank account to pay for a trip to the United States for a shot at the American dream.

"I have an auntie and two uncles in California," he said. "Also, an auntie in New Mexico. You know where that is?"

But Iraqi authorities froze all Kuwait bank accounts. They searched Dellosa at the border and shook him down for a few electronics items he might have sold for a small stake.

Dellosa's parents live in Manila, but with four daughters and three other sons, they have scant means to provide for a destitute 27-year-old son.

The Filipinos' plight was shared by the 12,000 to 15,000 Asians who mob the airport each day to get onto the dozens of special flights home. On Friday, ragged lines of Indians, Bangladeshis and Sri Lankans snaked out of Terminal 2. Each slight movement touched off a mad scramble among people terrified of being left behind.

Dellosa and his fiancée, Thelma Cajayon, left Kuwait early Aug. 23 in a taxi with two others. The driver left off the air conditioning, afraid of overheating the car in the blasting sun.

After 11 hours on the road, only 60 miles from Baghdad, Thelma collapsed from the heat. Revived, she went into convulsions from nervous anxiety.

"We got her to a doctor, but it was a small provincial hospital," Dellosa said. "They could not do anything."

After her death, he pressed on with his friends. A day later, they crossed out of Iraq. Besieged by refugees, Jordanian authorities held the newcomers in a no man's land without admitting them to Jordan. Fate landed Dellosa in Shaalan II, a tent camp with water tanks and a clinic. It was a luxury next to the filthy squalor of Shaalan I, where refugees with no shelter battled for food and water.

But the same heat and dust beat down on both camps, with bone-chilling cold at night. Refugees tried to sleep on sharp rocks infested by scorpions and snakes. Day and night, they were tormented with fear and confusion. None knew when their consulates might find enough airplanes to get them home.

For 22 days, Dellosa and his friends paced in the sun and tried to keep up their health. "We ate sandalines, some tomatoes, Arabic bread," he said. "At the end, they gave us only some kind of corned beef with hair from the cow still in it."

Eventually, buses took the refugees to another camp outside of Amman. From there, three days later, they were at the airport. Prowled by questions, Dellosa reflected on his ordeal.

"I suppose I am happy to be going," he said. "But I left my girlfriend behind. And my whole life in Kuwait. They destroyed our futures. All of our dreams, they are nightmares."

Trouble, culture have always been brewing in Iraq

Since the pale light of civilization, the part of the world we know today as Iraq has been the pernicious scourge of the Middle East.

This was once Mesopotamia. Its spacious borders encircled great nations that have long since disappeared from map and memory. It was from Mesopotamia that the dreaded hordes of Assyria, Babylonia and Chaldea swept to their bloody conquests in the Holy Land.

It was from Mesopotamia in the 6th century B.C. that Nebuchadnezzar, the ruler of Babylonia, sent his marauding armies into Palestine and brought back captive most of the Hebrew population of that day.

But the peoples of Mesopotamia did more than make war. They gave birth to one of the world's oldest cultures.

During the prehistoric ice age, the melting ice and snow made much of the world a pleasant grassland. Men lived as nomads in tribes and families, wandering from place to place, hunting and gathering food.

But the end of the ice age turned much of the world into an inhospitable dry place and desert. To survive, people had to seek homes near a supply of water. Their wandering days were over. Fixed localities grew up around rivers and lakes. For the first time people were forced to live together in communities.

This was the beginning of civilization which reaches back to about 5000 B.C.

One of the first of the cultures in the early world grew up in a fertile arch or semicircle that stretched from the Nile River in the West to Asia Minor in the East and is known today as the Fertile Crescent.

On the eastern side of the crescent, the mountains of Mesopotamia caught the moisture from the winds. The waters rolled down the mountain sides into the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers. The rich alluvial soil on the river banks made the area into a lush paradise of trees and fruits.

Here in present-day Iraq tradition places the Garden of Eden. Genesis mentions the Tigris and Euphrates as two of the rivers flowing out of Eden. The Adam and Eve creation story in Genesis shows a marked resemblance to the creation story of the Sumerians, an early civilization on the Persian Gulf where world attention today is centered.

In the Sumerian version, the animal who tricked the god and goddess was a fox, not a serpent. Eight fruits instead of one were forbidden the pair.

The ancient city of Ur in this region was the ancestral home of Abraham. Here in about 2000 B.C., the venerable patriarch of the Hebrew nation heard the Lord God speaking to him and saying, "Get thee out of thy country and from thy kindred and from thy father's house, to a land that I will show thee."

Corruption and color

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson Jr. didn't spend much time in Memphis during a whirlwind visit earlier this year — but he stayed long enough to join other blacks in suggesting that a white conspiracy exists to persecute politicians of his race.

"This determination to cut down (black) leaders at all costs may not be a plan — but it sure is a pattern," Jackson told the 1,500 people attending the Congressional Prayer Breakfast sponsored by Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., a black politician facing criminal charges in connection with his alleged receipt of more than $1 million in payoffs from a pair of Tennessee bankers in return for the exercise of his political influence.

Ford is accused of using those funds to pay for personal extravagances. But since he was indicted in 1987 by a federal grand jury on conspiracy, bank fraud and mail fraud charges, the congressman has portrayed himself as the victim of a racially inspired vendetta and accused the U.S. attorney here of being "a liar, a coward and a racist."

Jackson and Ford are hardly alone in making those accusations. Benjamin L. Hooks, the respected executive director of the NAACP, recently argued that "at no time since Reconstruction has there been a comparable period of harassment" on the part of "overzealous, hostile — if not racist — district attorneys and U.S. attorneys ... (who) will bring a black official to trial on the flimsiest evidence."

Similarly, Mayor Marion Barry of

Washington has portrayed himself as one of the "black officials all over the land who have been disproportionately harassed and harranged by U.S. prosecutors." While Barry was being tried on criminal charges, his attorney charged that an "assault force" of FBI agents travels the country, targeting black political leaders.

But some blacks resent that race-based paranoia. "Far too often, when black officials are caught with one hand in the public till, they reach with the other for their civil-rights credit cards," says Robert L. Woodson, president of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise.

Moreover, the record does not support the allegations of racial targeting. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh notes, for example, that of the 22 members of Congress convicted of criminal offenses since the Justice Department's Public Integrity Section was established in 1956, one was black, one was Hispanic — and 20 were white.

The Abscam scandal a decade ago led to the indictment and conviction of one senator and six representatives — all white. When the House moved within three weeks to expel one of them, Rep. Michael "Ozzie"

GEORGE PLAGENZ

Myers, D-Pa., he claimed to be the victim of a double standard, noting that the House earlier took eight months to expel Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., a black convicted on charges relating to the misuse of public funds.

There's a long list of white politicians toppled by official probes or unofficial scandals. Rep. James C. Wright Jr., D-Texas, resigned in disgrace from the powerful position of House speaker, followed by Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the chamber's majority leader. Allegations of sexual improprieties damaged the careers of Sens. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and John Tower, R-Texas, as well as Reps. Dan Crane, R-Ill.; Donald "Blair" Lukens, R-Ohio; Wayne Hayes, D-Ohio; and Barney Frank, D-Mass.

Five members of the Senate — all white — are being formally investigated in connection with their role in the savings and loan scandals. Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., recently was censured by his colleagues. Possible ethical lapses on the part of Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., also are being officially probed. They too are white.

Ford, Barry (both of whose initial trials ended with hung juries) and other blacks who imagine persecution where none exists might seriously consider the injunction from the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who called for all people to be judged "not by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

Prices rise, sales sink due to Gulf

By KAREN BALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Shock waves from the Persian Gulf crisis rippled through the economy in August as record increases in oil prices sent wholesale inflation surging and pushed retail sales into a nose dive.

The Labor Department said wholesale prices were up 1.3 percent last month, the steepest rise in seven months. Private economists were pessimistic about future reports.

"The worst is yet to come," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at the Boston Co.

The government blamed virtually all the increase on higher oil costs that followed Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

A 16.9 percent increase in the price of gasoline and the 62.5 percent rise in crude petroleum were the highest one-month increases recorded since the government began tracking those commodities in 1947.

Also setting a one-month record was fuel oil, which soared 38.8 percent. Kerosene, diesel fuel and residual fuels also hit new highs.

The fallout from the Middle East upheaval has heightened economists' fears that higher inflationary pressures could push an already weak U.S. economy into a recession.

In more weak economic news, the government said industrial production dropped 0.2 percent in August. That poor showing in factory activity — the manufacturing sector's worst monthly performance since April — was also linked to higher energy prices, analysts said.

Friday's data was the first hard evidence that the oil crisis has indeed had a staggering effect. While private analysts only expected inflationary pressures to worsen in coming months, the White House tried to sound a note of calm.

President Bush called the big jump in wholesale inflation "a matter of concern given the state of the economy." But he insisted that energy prices had been pushed higher because of unfounded market fears about possible shortages of supplies.

"The speculative atmosphere belies the reality, which is that there are sufficient petroleum products," Bush said. "The market should not be going for higher prices."

Private economists were far more discouraging. "The economic consequences of the Iraqi event is going to be worse than we expected in terms of costs to the U.S. economy in lost growth and higher inflation," said the Boston Co.'s Sinai.

"The initial round is so large, it implies that the ripple-through effect in coming months will be quite sizable," he said.

Robert Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago said Friday's data on high wholesale inflation, coupled with weak growth, indicates the Iraqi conflict threatens to push a vulnerable U.S. economy into recession.

"It may well be the shock that broke the camel's back because the back was already bending," Dederick said.

August's inflation outbreak is likely to become more entrenched, analysts said, filtering through to the thousands of plastic, chemical and other products made with petroleum. Oil also figures into products that must be transported long distances and shows up in utility costs as well.

"It's a component that's embedded in everything. It's not something you can hide from," said Peter Radford of National Westminster Bancorp. of New York. "It's like ripples in a pool. You've just seen the wave in the middle and it's going to go all the way out through the rest of the economy."

AVOIDING THE PRESS — Robert C. Stempel, left, chairman and chief executive officer of General Motors Corp., makes his way through the news media to avoid questions concerning the United Auto Workers union contract negotiations with GM Friday in Detroit.

Insurance-pool motorists could face higher rates

HARTFORD (AP) — Insurance rates could rise substantially for Connecticut motorists who buy policies through a statewide pool designed for high-risk drivers.

Insurers have proposed rate increases averaging 18 percent to 43 percent for the roughly 183,500 motorists in the Connecticut Automobile Insurance Assigned Risk Plan. The plan covers just under 10 percent of the insured private cars in the state.

The plan insures people who cannot find an insurance company that will voluntarily sell them policies, often because of their accident and violations records, inexperience or spotty cars.

Through the pool, drivers are assigned to regular insurance companies but pay at rates approved by state regulators instead of the companies' usual rates.

The new rates were proposed earlier this year by the Automobile Insurance Plans Service Office in Johnston, R.I., an association of insurers.

However, the workload at the state Department of Insurance delayed a review of the rates, according to John Linden, director of the department's property-casualty division.

The pool last raised rates in March 1989 with a 9.7 percent average increase for careful drivers and 6.6 percent for other drivers.

The pool has two sets of rates, one for careful drivers who have had clean driving records for three years, and the other for all other drivers.

Donna Mills returns to comedy

By JERRY BUCK
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Donna Mills sheds her vamp image in a CBS movie in which she plays a successful lawyer who loses so many secretaries to wedding bells that she finally hires a man for the job.

Of course, she ends up seeking her own wedding bells after she falls in love with him.

"The World's Oldest Living Bridesmaid," to be shown Friday, Sept. 21, is the first of a four-movie deal between CBS and Miss Mills, who spent nine years as temptress Abby Ewing on CBS' "Knots Landing." She left the series last season.

"She's been a bridesmaid in so many weddings," Miss Mills said of her character in the CBS movie. "She's never been married, and until now she hasn't ever wanted to get married. Finally, she meets the right guy and falls in love. The problem is he's on a lower social and economic order and he's younger."

He has no problem dealing with that, but she does. He works as a secretary because he's an artist and sculptor who's never sold anything. I go to London to try an international case and take my secretary with me — that's where the romance begins."

Joe Scanlon directed the movie on location in Toronto and London from a script by Janet Kovalick. It co-stars Ann Magnuson and Brian Wimmer, a regular on ABC's "China Beach."

"I was known as a vamp primarily from 'Knots Landing,'" Miss Mills said. "I didn't do any movies like that. I didn't want to get typecast as the vixen. But I think most people know me from 'Knots.' They know that I can do that well. But they don't know if I can do other things. I hope to prove it."

Miss Mills said she has had talks about doing another series, and would prefer to do a half-hour one.

"People forget I used to do comedy," she said. "Larry Hagman and I did 'The Good Life' on NBC in 1971-72. After that, I was offered only comedy. I didn't want to get typecast as a comedy actress, but then I was typecast as a dramatic actress."

Miss Mills credits Burt Reynolds with launching her career. She did a guest part on his series "Dan August" and his recommendation to Clint Eastwood got her a role in "Play Misty For Me."

The other movies she has in development for CBS are "Runaway Father," "Lipstick on His Collar" and "Into the Darkness."

She's also working on a television movie titled "West End," which would focus on three women in an emerging cable television empire — a young anchorwoman, a talk show hostess and an ambitious television news producer. The latter character would be played by Miss Mills.

If that's not enough, she's involved in a number of other projects — on both sides of the camera.

She currently is raising money for a six- to eight-hour miniseries she wants to produce called "A Pride of Royals."

"We'll film it in Russia in a co-production with the Soviet Union," she said. "They'll provide services such as hotels, transportation, the cameras, the horses and equipment. They're very anxious to do that sort of thing."

It's based on a novel by Justin Scott about an attempt by King George V of England and Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany to get Czar Nicholas II out of Russia before the Communist Revolution. It's a real adventure story. The only American in it will be a Naval commander. He falls in love with a Russian ballerina.

"I don't think it will go to a network," she said. "They're not very big on costume drama."

Miss Mills may take a role in another miniseries, to be based on a book by Barbara Taylor Bradford and filmed in Europe. She turned down the lead because it would re-

In addition, the actress is developing a television series called "Riverside Drive" in which she would not appear.

"We'll shoot it in New York because the look is important to the story," she said. "It's about five families who live on Riverside Drive and are linked together by their Hispanic maid. They'll all be from different economic levels."

On the domestic front, Miss Mills is busy having her house painted to look like Claude Monet's home in Giverny, France.

"It's pink with green shutters and white trim," she said. "It's a very country house. It was white, and it needed to be painted. One of my hobbies is doing over houses."

Antique vehicles fuel local man's hobby

By DIANNA M. TALBOT
Herald Features Editor

COVENTRY — For 54 weeks, Stephen A. Wright obsessively rebuilt a 1931 Ford Model A pickup truck from a large stack of parts he bought for $1,800. He couldn't wait to get behind the wheel and drive it.

Once it was ready, Wright prepared for his first ride in the handsome, freshly painted antique. He loaded up the pickup's wooden bed with garbage bags and pieces of household trash and drove it to the town dump.

Upon his arrival, he generated exclamations of surprise from other people who were working at or also visiting the garbage depot.

"They went crazy!" Wright remembers of the bystanders' reactions. "They yelled, 'Why are you hauling trash in this nice truck?'"

The self-taught mechanic remembers relying that the truck was not an art piece. "It's a truck and should be used as one," he said.

That was in 1986.

Currently, the 39-year-old still tinkers with the truck, which he says is worth about $9,000, and uses it to haul things. He also takes it on joy rides around the area and sometimes to old car and truck shows.

The 14-year town resident said he gets a kick out of watching the expressions and reactions of people he passes when he drives the antique. Older people, especially those over age 60, usually smile and wave because the truck triggers memories of when they used to drive or see similar-looking vehicles.

Wright also feels nostalgic behind the wheel.

"I get a feel for what it was like in my grandparents' time — no heat, no radio. It's different," he said.

Most of what Wright, a sales engineer for Wetzel Tool Co. of Bloomfield, knows about antique cars was derived from reading books, he said.

Before the truck, the only antique Wright had restored was a 1903 ice boat, which he still has. But shortly after getting the antique truck on the road, Wright bought for $3,000 a 1931, five-window, Ford Model A Sedan that he found rusting in a field in Vermont.

That restoration is taking longer. Whereas with the truck, he replaced or restored only what he needed to get it running, every part of the antique car is being replaced, or restored, and painted.

After the car is restored, Wright said he would like to buy a 1934, '35 or '36 Ford automobile to fix up. And after that's done, he said he might buy and restore a 1930s-era, two-wing airplane and get his pilot's license.

Buying condos and co-ops

By READERS DIGEST

Buying a condominium or a cooperative apartment is similar to buying a house.

As with a house, you must negotiate a price with the present owner, for example, and get a mortgage from a bank. But because condos and co-ops usually share the land and common areas, there are additional issues to consider.

Condominiums and co-ops can be either a group of attached or single townhouses or units of rooms in an apartment building. Although condos and co-ops are individual units, they share such common areas as entrances, elevators, grounds, parking areas and recreational facilities. They also employ a staff to take care of these areas and maintain security.

When you buy a condo, you receive a deed. You own the unit you live in and, if it's a townhouse, the land it's on. You share ownership of the common areas with the other residents and pay a monthly maintenance fee for the upkeep of such areas. Residents elect an association to make and enforce rules.

When you buy a co-op, you get shares of stock in the corporation that owns and manages the building. The number of shares you receive depends on the size of your unit. Monthly maintenance charges, based on how many shares you have, are a portion of the building's mortgage charges, taxes and maintenance costs. The co-op board of directors — shareholders elected to run the co-op — approves sales of any units and sets and enforces bylaws and rules to operate the building.

Here are some things to consider when shopping for a condo or a co-op:

1. Investigate the unit's location. A convenient area with stores and public transportation protects your investment.

2. Carefully inspect the unit, the entire complex and its common areas. Look for potential and existing problems that may change your mind about buying or help you negotiate a better price. If you don't know much about structural problems, hire an engineer to inspect the premises.

3. Talk to other owners about the complex and its management. If the developer has built or owns other complexes, find out whether the owners of units there are satisfied.

4. Read the prospectus carefully. For a condo, it describes size and location, buyer and seller, purchase price, down payment, monthly fees, taxes and closing date.

5. The management agreement that spells out the responsibilities and costs of operating the complex. The service employees' contract often accompanies this.

6. The purchase and sale contract. For a condo, it states the number of shares bought, price and down payment, monthly charges and any special assessments. If the sale depends on board approval, be sure you'll get back your down payment if rejected.

Homes: Questions and answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS

QUESTION: I recently moved into a condominium with a heat pump for central heating. When the unit is operating, I feel cool air coming from the register, although the house is warm. Is something wrong with the heat pump?

ANSWER: The heat pump is working correctly. It heats air to about 90 degrees F, which feels cool because it is lower than body temperature, but is warm enough to heat the room. The air discharged from an oil- or gas-fired furnace is about 110 to 130 degrees F. To compensate for the lower temperature, heat pumps require an airflow rate, and may create a drafty feeling.

QUESTION: My daughter's home in Michigan has double-glazed windows. Almost all of them have developed leaks in the vacuum seals and are clouded between the panes. Somewhere, I read this fog could be eliminated or alleviated with the injection of a gas. Any help would be appreciated.

ANSWER: Short of taking them apart, cleaning the panes and resealing the edges, there is no easy method of correcting clouded double-glazed windows. Injecting a dry gas or drawing a vacuum (both extremely difficult procedures) in the space between the panes may temporarily minimize the condition. But unless the seal failure is located and corrected, the condition will recur. Usually, the failure is just a tiny hole or crack in the perimeter joint, and difficult to find. Often where there is repeated condensation and drying, a residue forms on the inner surfaces that is almost impossible to clean.

Most insulated panes are made with a hollow spacer around the edge that has an open end facing the space between the panes. The spacer is filled with a desiccant to absorb residual moisture. When there is a seal failure, the desiccant becomes saturated, and moisture condenses on the panes.

To repair a faulty window, you would have to remove the existing seal, clean out the edge joints so that a new seal can be applied, replace the desiccant in the spacer, clean the panes and reassemble the window unit. It's really not a do-it-yourself project.

Your best bet would be to contact the manufacturer of the windows. Most of them have a warranty — usually from 5 to 10 years — against product failure caused by a faulty seal. They will replace a pane at no cost within the first five years and at a prorated cost for the next five years.

QUESTION: I'm confused about the different ways to prepare new galvanized iron gutters for painting. I've left mine unpainted for a year. But the time has come. What's the best preparation method?

ANSWER: Galvanized iron gutters must be degreased before you do any painting. Naphtha and trichloroethylene both work well. After degreasing, rinse with water and dry gutters immediately. Paint with an acrylic latex.

Inspect previously painted iron gutters for rust. Remove any you find with emery cloth and steel wool. Apply a metal primer to bare spots before painting.

Plant fall trees

By EARL ARONSON

Summer is winding down, but that's no signal to neglect your yard and garden. Autumn is an excellent time to plant many kinds of shrubs, trees and spring-blooming bulbs.

Fall plantings will add beauty and value to your home grounds. The plantings will develop roots during the winter, getting them off to a strong start next spring.

As you plan your landscaping, think of the benefits: sight-screening, comfort, beauty, convenience, safety and easy maintenance.

The American Association of Nurserymen says that most homeowners want their yards to afford some privacy. A hedge of trees and shrubs can screen out unsightly views while affording some privacy.

Your yard can provide outdoor room for comfort and relaxation. The temperature in a tree's shade, for instance, may be 15 to 20 degrees cooler than in the sun. A row of trees and shrubs can protect against disturbing winds. Thick foliage can muffle city noise and help cleanse a polluted atmosphere.

Maintenance can be a pleasure rather than a burden. Flat borders of brick or stone between flower beds and lawn can minimize edging and trimming around beds. Planting in containers can ease gardening chores by eliminating the need for stooping. Some lawn mowing, watering and weeding work can be reduced by the use of mulches and groundcover plants.

The Nurserymen also advise: "Once your plan has been made for your yard, don't feel installation can be done immediately. If the design is sufficiently flexible, it can take shape over months or even years as circumstances dictate, whether you do it yourself or have professionals do it."

Fall Fertilizing
Take time to fertilize shrubs and trees in early fall. During this period of maximum rainfall, plants absorb nutrients more efficiently, whereas hot summer temperatures cause soil to become dry and compacted; and, in cold weather, plants are dormant and the soil is hard to work.

Experts at the American Association of Nurserymen point out that in the forest, trees draw nutrients from a steady supply of organic plant and animal matter, such as decomposed leaves. This layer of matter covering the forest floor acts as a fertilizer. Like mulch, it helps the ground hold moisture and maintain moderate temperatures.

But, in the backyard, this nutrient-rich layering process doesn't often take place. Instead, the ground is covered with lawn, which must compete with trees and other plants for nutrients and water. Construction and other land-use projects may alter the soil by adding pollutants and rubble to it.

The experts added:
"Without the balanced natural environment, even vigorous plant specimens may have some trouble. Because a plant's well-being depends on its ability to grow, the health of the root system is crucial. Roots must keep drawing sufficient nutrients and water to sustain growth. But as they continue to grow, at some point they'll run into restrictions such as paving, structures, rocks, rubble, roots of other plants, and hard, compacted soil."

"Under such conditions, they may not be able to absorb nutrients and water as easily as before. The result: less new growth, pale color, and damage due to insect attacks and disease."

It's important to fertilize plants early or during a time so that the tissues of the new growth will toughen sufficiently to weather the first freezes. Without the "hardening off" and casting into dormancy, the plant can be severely damaged by winter storms. Proper timing will help you promote dormancy early enough to prevent much damage.

Anniversaries

Mahoney

Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Mahoney of Misquamicut, R.I., formerly long-time residents of Manchester, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with family and a few friends, at a surprise luncheon on Aug. 26 at Shelter Harbor Inn, Westerly, R.I.

He is a former mayor of Manchester, having served in that position for four years. He was a state representative from the 13th District of Manchester for 12 years, and a 1977 recipient of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce "M" award. Before his retirement, he had been employed at Hamilton Standard.

Mrs. Mahoney, the former Lucille Murphy of Manchester, was employed at Pratt & Whitney before her retirement.

The Mahoneys were married Sept. 12, 1940, in St. James Church, Manchester, with the Rev. Dum officiating.

After the luncheon, a lawn party was held at the summer homes of their daughters and their husbands, Nancy and Mark Mooney and Susan and Robert Bronnell, at Misquamicut.

Besides their two daughters, they have six grandchildren, Deborah, Mark Jr., Jennifer and Michael Mooney and Kristopher and Matthew Bronnell and one great-grandchild, Daniel Williams.

The Mahoneys have been spending their retirement years in Misquamicut and Sarasota, Fla.

A few no-cost video tips

By VIDEO MAGAZINE

Good ideas don't have to cost a million dollars, especially with home video.

These no-cost tips are contained in the current issue of Video Magazine.

How's about making a camcorder double as a video recorder? After popping for the backs to buy a camcorder, a video buff needs' also immediately lay out the dollars to buy a VCR. The camcorder can be connected directly to any television (if

Water and video equipment don't mix. In the event of a downpour, carrying a small plastic grocery or trash bag can save a camcorder. If a rainstorm breaks out, the unit can be quickly placed in the bag.

Ever try to get those pesky labels off videotapes? There are costly concoctions for doing this, but common lighter fluid will do the job.

'Internal affairs' hard to watch

By DOLORES BARCLAY The Associated Press

"Internal Affairs" (Paramount Home Video, VHS-Beta, No suggested retail price, Rated R)

The men and women who police the police are the lowest of the low to their fellow officers — pariahs, scum, filth in blue. But the feeling is more than mutual.

In Mike Figgis' "Internal Affairs," the clash of wills and collision of ethics come barreling to a bloody and shattering conclusion for Detective Raymond Avila and Dennis Peck, the celebrated street cop he brings down.

Avila (Andy Garcia) is a methodical and eager cop who gets promoted to the Internal Affairs Division of the Los Angeles police. He believes in his job and he believes in the law. His partner, Amy (Laurie Metcalf), is a careful investigator who goes by the book and who understands that all their job means is a shot at becoming a lieutenant.

A routine investigation of excessive violence in an arrest by another police officer leads the pair to suspect Peck of being the mastermind behind a complicated network of crime ranging from murder to extortion to prostitution to money laundering and fraud.

Peck (Richard Gere) is a master manipulator who knows what buttons to push to get a desired reaction from people and thus set plans to his liking. He's also a leathesome misogynist and racist.

He and Avila lock horns. And Peck, finding Avila's Achilles heel, plays a psychological game that involves Avila's wife, Kathleen (Nancy Travis).

After a memorable bit in "The Untouchables" as the fed who lines up a killing shot while stretched out at an impossible angle on a staircase, and teaming with Michael Douglas as a cop in "Black Rain," Garcia has landed his first starring role. But there's more to this actor than cop roles. His smoldering good looks, quiet manner and intensely held promise for greater things to come.

Figgis' uneven pacing and reliance on blood and guts makes this a difficult movie to watch on the home screen.

Quick-fix jokes

"Heart Condition" (RCA-Columbia Home Video, VHS-Beta, $89.95, Rated R)

Is racism the stuff that comedy is made of? Can bigotry get a laugh or two? As writer and director, James D. Parriott has borrowed freely from the Hollywood movie mill to craft his film about a heart transplant, sex, drugs and politics, a coverup and murder and the improbable relationship between a black ghost and a bigoted white cop.

Unfortunately, Parriott, whose work has been limited to television ("Six Million Dollar Man," "Hillside Blues," "From Here to Eternity"), brings a TV mentality to "Heart Condition" with quick-fix sight gags and jokes. You can almost imagine a laugh track.

He has all the standard characters: a prostitute with a heart of gold; a classy lawyer who works for gangsters; a seedy and bigoted vice cop; a slick nymphet; a police captain who spends most of his time playing golf.

There's also the standard story line: A high-powered senator dies while having sex and drugs with two hookers. There's a coverup, and the silencing of those who know or might have known. And who is to solve the dastardly deed? The seedy, bigoted vice cop with a brand new heart.

Hoskins and Washington are both top-flight actors, who are versatile enough to handle high drama (Washington in "Glory" and "A Soldier's Story," Hoskins in "Mora Lisa" and "A Prayer for the Dying") as well as comedy (Washington in "Carbon Copy" and Hoskins in "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?")

'State of Grace' is astonishing

By BOB THOMAS The Associated Press

'State of Grace' is an astonishing film directed by Phil Joanou and written by Dennis McNulty. In the movie, the Irish mobsters are just as deadly as the Italian Mafia, perhaps more because the Irish grow more crazed as they lose their power over the Hell's Kitchen underworld.

'State of Grace' is based in part on the history of the Westies gang in the notorious Manhattan neighborhood which nurtured generations of vicious hoodlums — as well as an actor who portrayed them on the screen, James Cagney. Frankie Flannery (Ed Harris) attacks the gang from suburban New Jersey, where he lives with his wife and family. His brother, Jackie (Gary Oldman), is the hit man, a wild-haired psychotic with zero sense of danger.

Along comes Terry Noonan (Sean Penn), a byproduct chum of Jackie, long gone from Hell's Kitchen. He seeks to join the gang, and his credentials seem suitable: He reportedly killed a couple of drug dealers in a shootout. Frankie lets Terry join, but he remains suspicious. And he is furious when Terry falls in love with Frankie's sister (Robin Wright), who has turned her back on the violent family.

The plot is right out of a 1930s Warner Bros. movie, but the treatment is miraculous. First of all, the script. The original writer was off-Broadway playwright McNulty, who died before the film was completed. Another noted playwright, David Rabe, made sizable additions. Their dialogue vibrates with the language of the streets.

Director Joanou is likely to be this year's wunderkind, matching Steven Soderbergh's 1989 achievement, "sex, lies and videotape." A mere 28 with only a small feature ("Three O'clock High") and a documentary ("12 Rattle and Hum") in his portfolio, he paints a lyrically violent cityscape that compares favorably with "The Godfather II."

The final shootout, edited by Claire Simpson, is a masterpiece. The buddies and marchers of the St. Patrick's Day parade are shown in slo-mo counterpoint to the carnage in a sidestreet tavern.

Sean Penn, with his winning smile and hard-eyed stare, is perfectly cast as the gunman who is not what he seems. Ed Harris remains cool despite his fears over the wisdom of joining forces with the Italians. Gary Oldman as the gun-crazy Jackie never quite falls over the brink. Robin Wright is highly effective as the only voice of reason.

The Orion Pictures release is rated R for excessive violence and street language and a sex scene. Running time: 134 minutes.

Keeping peace with in-laws

CHICAGO (AP) — Want to get along with your in-laws? Learn how and when to say no, an author says.

"You don't have to like (your in-laws)," said Leah Averick, a social worker and author of "How In-Laws Relate: It's All Relative." "But you can be very polite to them. Remember, these are important people to your husband or wife."

Averick writes about how to make a good first impression, how to decide what to call in-laws and how to get along with grandparents, brothers and sisters. The book also discusses several tension points in in-law relations, including weddings, holidays, births and gift-giving occasions.

In weddings, for instance, she said parents and other relatives often try to play too large a role selecting the apparel, planning the reception or preparing the guest list.

FOCUS/Religion

In Brief . . .

New intern at Emanuel Lutheran

Sharon Israel of Atlanta, Ga., has been chosen as an intern at Emanuel Lutheran Church, 60 Church St. She has been placed at Emanuel through Luther Northwestern Seminary, St. Paul, Minn.

She will be in the church sanctuary Sept. 16 at 9:45 a.m. to meet churchgoers.

Holy days observed at temple

High Holiday services, in observance of the Jewish New Year 5751, will begin Wednesday, Sept. 19, at 8:15 p.m. at Temple Beth Shalom, 400 E. Middle Tpke.

The observance will continue Thursday and Friday beginning each morning at 8:30 a.m. The services will be led by Rabbi Richard Flisov and Cantor Wayne Krieger.

Residents of Manchester and area communities may call Shirley Segal, temple president, at 649-5460, for information on obtaining admission tickets.

McCaw to be installed at SUMC

The Rev. Kyle W. McCaw will formally be installed as associate pastor of South United Methodist church on Sunday at the 10 a.m. service at the church, 1256 Main St.

He was ordained into the United Methodist ministry in 1982 and was appointed to a church in Agawam where he served for eight years.

Craft fair at area church

There will be a craft fair today on the grounds of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 673 Ellington Road, South Windsor, sponsored by the Ladies Guild of the church.

The fair will include skilled crafters, baked goods and activities for children. There is no admission charge. Ample parking is available.

Workshop set at St. Bridget

"Footsteps toward New Life" is the theme of a workshop for the divorced, separated and widowed, to be held in the auditorium of St. Bridget's School, 80 Main St., on Sept. 23 from 1 to 5:30 p.m.

Anyone interested is welcome to attend. Dorothy Levesque will lead the workshop. The cost is $5 for those who register in advance, or $6 at the door. Call 649-2117 or 644-4660 for more information.

Take part in installation

Several Manchester people will play key roles in the installation service Sunday at 3 p.m. at Asylum Hill Congregational Church, Hartford.

It will be the installation of the Rev. Dr. David Y. Hirano as minister of the Connecticut Conference of the United Church of Christ. The church is located at 914 Asylum Ave.

The Rev. Newell Curtis Jr., pastor of the local Center Congregational Church, has served as chairman of the Installation Committee. Shelly Dieterle, also of Manchester, has represented the state Youth Council for this planning group that has been meeting over a period of four months.

Mrs. Peggy Wright, administrative assistant to the minister of the conference, will represent the conference staff in the ceremony of installation.

Roberta Marcaro and Kim Boerner will direct and take part in the dance group that will perform.

Bishop dislikes phrases

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Episcopal Presiding Bishop Edmund L. Byrne told an Episcopal youth gathering he hates phrases that typcast youth as the "church's future" rather than its present.

Citing the trite phrase, "The youth of today is the church of tomorrow," he said, "I want to say to you that that's bull. Your witness, your ministry, is terribly needed at this date in time."

That evoked a thunder of cheers from the nearly 1,500 youths.

Tag Sale and Auction on way

You all plan to come down to Community Baptist Church next Saturday cause the Town of Manchester is planning to hold the local version of Connecticut's Very, Very Big Celebrity Tag Sale and Auction to benefit the homeless. Not only will you have an opportunity to donate the candy dish Aunt Harriet gave you when you got married, and that good-as-new rocking chair you've replaced with a wing back to a Very Worthy Cause, but you'll have an opportunity to bid on or buy all kinds of Manchester hidden wonders and surprises—everything from bean bag chairs to sewing machines.

Governor William O'Neill and our own Mayor Terry Wickhaven will be among the celebrities joining us during the day. Who knows, one of them may even be the proud purchaser of Aunt Harriet's candy dish.

Our favorite celebrities are, of course, our own good folk who make Manchester such a great place to live—so come on down to say "Hi" to your friends and neighbors and join the fun. The Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens will be selling their delicious baked goods, so be sure to take home at least one treat with you.

Plan an All Manchester Day by starting the morning bright and early at the Downtown Farmer's Market in front of St. James to purchase the glowing harvest colored fruits, vegetables and flowers. Catch the free shuttle bus from Town Hall to the Tag Sale and Auction at Community Baptist, Manchester Green, to take advantage of the exciting bargains you'll find.

At the same time, you'll be supporting the Manchester's emergency shelter and soup kitchen. Then take the shuttle back to Center Springs Park to the Manchester Fall Festival

With deficit of more than $30,000 projected for 1990-91, your support of the Town sponsored benefit could make a significant impact in helping us keep the door to the shelter open.

Thank you to the good folk at People's Bank, including Kate Malen and Wendy Luddy. Working with the Chamber of Commerce and the Feast Fest committee, the People's Bank set up a booth to benefit the MACC Emergency Pantry and collected 42 bags of non-perishable foods to fill our shelves. A most welcome success.

And thanks to Roberta Marcaro, Roberta is recently selected as a local recipient of the 1990 James Cash Penny award for Community Service and a check in her honor has been received to benefit Samaritan Shelter.

Roberta is and has been one of our most outstanding shelter volunteers and supporters. Not only was she one of the prime movers behind the CKOP Walk, which raised almost $3,000 for Shepherd's Place Soup Kitchen last October, but worked with her religious community (Center Congregational Church) to raise funds to purchase a VCR for Samaritan Shelter. The VCR will be used to show the AIDS educational video to new guests at the shelter as part of the intake process and to provide recreational videos in the evenings.

Notice: The Fall Church Fair Season has begun with the St. James Fair spectacular. If you haven't been down yet—today is the last day. Don't miss it.

being sponsored by the Manchester Recreation Department. There you will find a wide variety of hand-crafted (by our own local artists) stained glass, stuffed bears, wood carving, baskets, ceramics, silk and ribbon treasures and lots more. Don't miss the big day. It will be a great way to spend a Saturday.

For the Tag Sale and Auction, we still need lots and lots of volunteers to help pick up, sort, price items all this week, to set up on Friday (help any hours between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m.) and staff the Tag Sale itself on Saturday between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Call the Town of Manchester Human Services Department at 647-3092 for information on how to join the team. Also looking for lots and lots of donations. You can drop them off at the Army between 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. any day but Sunday.

Not only was she one of the prime movers behind the CKOP Walk, which raised almost $3,000 for Shepherd's Place Soup Kitchen last October, but worked with her religious community (Center Congregational Church) to raise funds to purchase a VCR for Samaritan Shelter. The VCR will be used to show the AIDS educational video to new guests at the shelter as part of the intake process and to provide recreational videos in the evenings.

Nasal sprays give only temporary relief

DEAR DR. GOTT: A member of my family has seasonal allergies that cause nasal congestion. He's regularly used long-acting nasal spray for at least three years. Now the nasal congestion is daily with increasing obstruction. Would you please comment on the dangers of excessive use of nasal sprays and the remedies for correcting the damage done?

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Most inhalational allergies, such as hay fever and seasonal rhinitis, are marked by sinus congestion and nasal obstruction. These symptoms result from swelling of the nasal lining and, in many cases, increased mucus secretion. Patients with such allergies often complain of excessive stuffiness, trouble breathing, headache and sneezing.

Nasal sprays may be used for the temporary relief of symptoms; the medicine shrinks swollen nasal linings, decreases mucus secretion and relieves sinus congestion. In general, nasal sprays are safe and effective. However, they must be used cautiously in patients with hypertension because the decongestant compounds in most sprays can worsen high blood pressure.

Despite their benefits, nasal sprays have one glaring drawback: a phenomenon called "rebound." After con-suggest he follow these steps:

Stop the sprays.

Purchase over-the-counter antihistamine/decongestant pills, such as Sudafed or Actifed. Use the pills regularly until the congestion has subsided. There is no danger of rebound from the pills. However, like the sprays, these drugs must be used cautiously (or not at all) in patients with hypertension, who should check with their doctors before taking any non-prescription medicine.

Attempt to define the cause of the seasonal allergies. An allergist should be able to determine, by examination and testing, what substances cause your family member's nasal congestion. Such a specialist can then offer recommendations about a program of environmental controls (avoidance of allergens, if possible) and prescription desensitization injections, if needed.

If the congestion continues, your family member should see an ear-nose-and-throat specialist for an examination, because chronic nasal congestion can be the hallmark of sinus infection (which would require antibiotics) or nasal polyps, benign growths in the nasal lining that may have to be removed.

They're as interested in promoting your well being as you are. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your great est asset today is your ability to effectively deal with others and to get them to do your bidding without feeling they are being manipulated or used. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Interests which are of importance to you personally will be advanced today through the efforts of others as well as your own. People will help you because they want to, not because they have to. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you have to make an important decision today, choose the alternative that opts in favor of a solid protracted approach rather than a quick fix. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) There is a possibility you might be asked to unravel a complicated matter for a close friend today. Gratitude may be your only, but ample, reward. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you might have to make a decision about which you're dubious because you'll let your heart rule your head. Actually, you'll eventually discover you couldn't have selected a wiser counselor. ARIES (March 21-April 19) If conditions warrant it might be advisable to take a calculated gamble where your work or career is concerned to achieve your priorities today, but don't go overboard. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) People with whom you have close emotional bonds should be awarded the lion's share of your attention today. Both you and they could benefit in some unique manner. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A matter you thought might be rather difficult to deal with looks like it can be accomplished with relative ease today owing to a favorable shift in circumstances. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let the one you love know how much you care today either with flowers or some tangible evidence of your affections. It doesn't have to be expensive, just visible. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is one of those days when you might reap benefits in your overall dealings with others. It could be special consideration from a commercial vendor or a friend picking up your tab for lunch. ## 49ers very much remain the team to beat

By The Associated Press

Last week, the San Francisco 49ers played poorly, and that's what makes them so good. They won when they weren't on top of their game, and that's what good teams do. Washington Redskins special teams coach Wayne Sevier said.

This week, the 49ers try to improve upon their 13-12 victory over New Orleans when they entertain Washington, which is coming off a 31-0 victory over Phoenix.

The 49ers, six-point favorites, might not dominate the '90s the way they did the '80s, but they're still special. What's their secret?

NFL Roundup

"Their secret, if that's what you call it, is that they line up and knock you on your tail," Redskins running back Ernest Byner said. "A lot of teams show you different looks, but you still have to make the plays."

In Sunday's other NFL games, it's Buffalo at Miami, Cincinnati at San Diego, Cleveland at the New York Jets, Los Angeles Raiders at Seattle, New England at Indianapolis, Atlanta at Detroit, Chicago at Green Bay, Los Angeles Rams at Tampa Bay, New Orleans at Minnesota, New York Giants at Dallas, Phoenix at Philadelphia, and Houston at Pittsburgh at night.

Monday night's game is Kansas City at Denver.

Redskins at 49ers: The 49ers won four Super Bowls during the '80s, but the Redskins were no slouches, capturing two. The 49ers have won nine games in a row, including last January's Super Bowl.

49ers quarterback Joe Montana had a tough time against New Orleans Monday night, getting sacked six times and scrambling much of rest of the time. Yet, he threw for 210 yards, one touchdown and led a 60-yard drive in 78 seconds that led to the winning field goal.

Mark Rypien, the Redskins quarterback, threw for 240 yards and three touchdowns against a defenseless Phoenix defense.

Bills at Dolphins: The Dolphins open their 25th season at home as two-point underdogs to the Bills. Don Shula will be going for his 200th victory as Miami's coach.

Dan Marino rallied the Dolphins to a 27-24 victory over New England last Sunday with an 8-yard scoring pass to Tony Paige with 1:46 left.

The Bills are coming off a 26-10 victory over Indianapolis in which Jim Kelly completed his first 14 passes.

Bengals at Chargers: These teams haven't met since 1982, when San Diego won 54-30 and set four club records including 661 total yards. This time, Cincinnati is a three-point favorite, coming off a 25-20 comeback victory over the Jets.

Browns at Jets: Cleveland coach Bud

The Associated Press

GOOD ENOUGH — Joe Montana and the San Francisco 49ers struggled in their NFL opener last Sunday before downing the New Orleans Saints, 13-12. But that's what makes the two-time defending Super Bowl champs so tough.

Carson returns to New York for the first time since taking over the Browns job in 1989. Carson was the Jets defensive coordinator from 1985-88.

The Browns are two-point favorites, coming off a 13-3 victory over Pittsburgh.

Raiders at Seahawks: The Seahawks have won four straight against the Raiders but are on the downside. Seattle lost 17-0 to the Bears last Sunday, while the Raiders beat Denver 14-9. The game is rated even.

Both of Los Angeles' touchdowns last week were defensive. Linebacker Jerry Robinson scored with an interception, and cornerback Terry McDaniels with a fumble recovery 5:44 apart in the third quarter.

Patriots at Colts: QB Jeff George completed 13 of 24 passes for 160 yards and a touchdown, without an interception, in Indianapolis' season-opening loss, and the Colts are 2½-point favorites to beat New England.

Steve Grogan had a pair of touchdown passes for the Patriots and completed 14 passes in a row during one stretch, only to see the Dolphins beat them last week.

Falcons at Lions: This game matches a pair of run-and-shoot teams. Last year, Falcons QB Chris Miller set club records for completions (37) and attempts (66) in three touchdowns as Minnesota lost to Kansas City 24-21 last week.

Giants at Cowboys: New York is favored by 7½ at Dallas, even though the Cowboys started their season with the victory over San Diego. The Giants beat Philadelphia 27-20 last Sunday as Phil Simms threw for two touchdowns. Dave Meggett had a 68-yard punt return for a touchdown against the Eagles.

Dallas, 1-15 last year, got two touchdowns from their QB, Troy Aikman, one on the ground and one in the air, against San Diego.

Cardinals at Eagles: Second-year QB Timm Rosenbach threw for 228 yards for Phoenix last week, but also threw four interceptions in his second NFL start. Eagles QB Randall Cunningham, meanwhile, was intercepted three times by the Giants.

The Eagles are 1½-point favorites. Oilers at Steelers: These teams met three times last year. Houston won the first two, but the Oilers lost 20-23 in overtime to the Steelers in a wild-card playoff game. Pittsburgh is favored by 2½.

The Oilers had four fumbles in the first quarter against Atlanta last week, while the Steelers' only points against Cleveland, a 19-yard field goal by Gary Anderson, were set up by a fumble recovery.

Chiefs at Broncos: Denver is a five-point favorite Monday night despite its loss to the Raiders. The Broncos allowed the Raiders only 194 yards in offense, but Los Angeles scored touchdowns on an interception and a fumble recovery.

Kansas City outlasted Minnesota after Christian Okoye's 2-yard TD run in the fourth quarter gave the Chiefs the lead. The Chiefs stopped the Vikings on a fourth-and-1 at the Vikings' 31 with 2:14 to go.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — New England's Steve Grogan, the oldest NFL starting quarterback at 37, credits luck and durability for his longevity. Indianapolis wide receiver Stanley Morgan, a teammate for most of Grogan's 16-year career, says there's a lot more.

"I've been lucky along the way to get some breaks. I think I've taken care of myself to the point where physically I'm still able to do what I need to do. And I think I've done whatever they've ever asked me to do without letting my ego get in the way," said Grogan, who will find Morgan on the opposite side of the field for the first time Sunday when the Indianapolis Colts host New England.

"It's going to be very strange to look over at the other sidelines and seeing him standing over there after so many years together and so much fun together," Grogan said of Morgan. "I knew when he left here that he still had the ability to play. I just wish he was still here making the plays for us instead of against us."

At Boston College, coach Jack Bicknell is getting used to playing nationally ranked teams. Although his Eagles' tough schedule has led to three consecutive losing seasons, he wouldn't have it any easier way.

"In 1968 when I was an assistant here we went 6-3 but we'd play Buffalo, Massachusetts, Villanova, Holy Cross and somebody else," he said. Boston College was expected to beat weaker teams like that.

Now, if the Eagles beat nationally ranked teams, they at least have a chance to attract national attention and, perhaps, a bowl bid.

"The only thing that bothers me about it is we need to boost our confidence and it's hard to do that" against

Young Irish quarterback to be tested early

While Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz is hoping Rick Mirer can ring down the thunder for the Fighting Irish this season, he also is hoping he can keep the untested quarterback calm down.

Besides the pressure of playing a position which has produced such Notre Dame greats as Angelo Bertelli, Johnny Lujack and Paul Hornung, Mirer will be facing fourth-ranked Michigan in the 1990 debut for both teams Saturday night at South Bend, Ind.

"I expect him to be a fine quarterback," Holtz said. "But by the same token, my realistic objective for him in the first couple of games is just to get him to calm down and be himself."

While Mirer, who has replaced the graduated Tony Rice, will be trying not to let down the alumni and ghosts of glories past, Gary Moeller will be trying to snap the Wolverines' three-game losing streak against Notre Dame. Moeller has succeeded Bo Schembechler, who coached at Michigan for 18 seasons.

Notre Dame became No. 1 without so much as a kickoff when preseason No. 1 Miami was upset by Brigham Young 28-21 last Saturday.

Brigham Young, which moved from No. 16 to No. 5 with the upset, will try to boost its record to 3-0 at home against Washington State.

"We need to stay prepared for every game, because it's going to be tough the rest of the year for us now," said BYU quarterback Ty Detmer, who passed for 406 yards and three touchdowns against Miami.

While BYU is expected to roll against Washington State, Miami, which dropped to No. 10, is not expected to have much trouble rebounding against California at Berkeley.

Alabama coach Pat Dye doesn't want to discuss numbers like his Tigers' No. 2 ranking and seven-game winning streak over Mississippi, but the Tigers are 11-point favorites against Ole Miss Saturday.

As for numbers, No. 3-ranked Florida State could put some big figures on the board at Georgia Southern.

NCAA Football

Another Top Ten team that will meet a ranked opponent is No. 9 Colorado, which will play at No. 21 Illinois. Colorado beat the Illini 38-7 last year. The Buffaloes are 1-0-1, while Illinois will be looking for its first win in its second game.

The second-best matchup of ranked teams appears to be the one at Norman, Okla., where No. 13 Pittsburgh (2-0) plays No. 14 Oklahoma (1-0).

Put mixed up its offense with the passing of Alex Van Pelt and the running of Clavin Richards in its first two games, but Ohio University and Boston College aren't Oklahoma. The Sooners, who beat UCLA last week, depend on the run.

Other games involving Top Ten teams, Penn State will be at No. 6 Southern California and Texas-El Paso at No. 7 Tennessee. No. 8 Nebraska is idle.

Other ranked teams in action will be No. 11 Virginia at home against Navy, No. 12 Texas A&M at home against Southwestern Louisiana, No. 15 Arkansas at home against Tulsa, No. 16 Clemson against Maryland at Baltimore, No. 17 Ohio State at Boston College, No. 19 Michigan State at Syracuse, No. 20

FOR THE GOOD — Houston Cougars' receiver Tracey Good (1) makes a catch for a first down as Texas Tech's Ronald Ferguson defends on the play during the second quarter in Lubbock, Texas, Thursday night. Houston won, 51-35.

Arizona at New Mexico, No. 22 home against Colorado State, Washington at Purdue, No. 24 Florida at No. 18 Houston beat Texas Tech 51-35 Thursday night and No. 23 Texas is idle.

Bicknell not fearful of brutal BC schedule

By The Associated Press

Another game, another 17th-ranked team for Boston College to play. Another season, another chance for Yale and Princeton to exercise their apparent superiority in the Ivy League.

Boston College, a 29-6 loser to 17th-ranked Pittsburgh last Saturday, plays its home opener this Saturday against Ohio State, which moved up to 17th by beating Texas Tech 17-10.

The Ivy League starts its season Saturday with four games, including Yale at Brown and Princeton at Cornell. Yale and Princeton shared the conference title last year.

In the Yankee Conference, the winner of the Delaware-New Hampshire game will hold first place by itself just two weeks into the season. In the New England Football Conference, perhaps the strongest team, Plymouth State, should cruise past perhaps the weakest, Fitchburg State.

At Boston College, coach Jack Bicknell is getting used to playing nationally ranked teams. Although his Eagles' tough schedule has led to three consecutive losing seasons, he wouldn't have it any easier way.

"In 1968 when I was an assistant here we went 6-3 but we'd play Buffalo, Massachusetts, Villanova, Holy Cross and somebody else," he said. Boston College was expected to beat weaker teams like that.

Now, if the Eagles beat nationally ranked teams, they at least have a chance to attract national attention and, perhaps, a bowl bid.

"The only thing that bothers me about it is we need to boost our confidence and it's hard to do that" against tougher teams, Bicknell said. "Right now our team needs to feel good about themselves."

He feels he has a talented squad that can have a winning season, but it needs to start winning to believe it can succeed, Bicknell said.

Redshirt freshman Glenn Foley will start at quarterback instead of Willie Hicks, who is nursing a bicep injury on his throwing arm. The Eagles will have to stop Ohio State quarterback Greg Froy and running backs Scottie Graham and Robert Smith, an outstanding freshman.

"I believe that this is a game we can win," Bicknell said. "Yale, 6-1 in the Ivy League last season, should win at Brown, which had a 2-5 conference mark. Princeton, also 6-1 in league play, is favored to beat Cornell, 2-5 in the conference last year."

Yale's Darin Kehler is back after setting a school record for quarterbacks of 903 rushing yards in a season. Brown's 17 returning starters are the most in the league, but numbers can be deceiving. They started for a team that won only two of its 10 games.

In other NEFC games, it will be Bridgewater State at Massachusetts-Boston, Curry at Westfield State, Nichols at Framingham State, Worcester State at Lowell and Maine Maritime at Massachusetts Maritime. Southern Connecticut State at Millersville, New Haver at Clark, Glassboro at Norwich, RPI at Coast Guard, and Worcester Tech at Western Connecticut State.

Mark Johnson and fullback David Clark.

In the Yankee Conference, New Hampshire is coming off a 21-16 upset win at Connecticut. Delaware, also 1-0 in the league, beat Boston University 34-20.

In another Yankee contest, Maine, a 31-7 loser to Villanova in its opener, is at Massachusetts, which tied Division I-AA power Holy Cross 10-10 last Saturday. Richmond visits Rhode Island in the other league game.

In non-conference games involving Yankee teams, West Chester goes to Boston University and Connecticut visits North Carolina.

Holy Cross, which won its previous 10 openers, goes for its first win Saturday at Army, which opens its season.

In the New England Football Conference, perennial champion Plymouth State should have an easy game after starting its season by beating defending champion Bridgewater State. Fitchburg State fell to Lowell 42-0, gaining just 90 yards and allowing 400.

In other NEFC games, it will be Bridgewater State at Massachusetts-Boston, Curry at Westfield State, Nichols at Framingham State, Worcester State at Lowell and Maine Maritime at Massachusetts Maritime. Southern Connecticut State at Millersville, New Haver at Clark, Glassboro at Norwich, RPI at Coast Guard, and Worcester Tech at Western Connecticut State.

In Saturday's other games involving New England schools, it will be Youngstown State at Northeastern, Mansfield at Central Connecticut State, Southern Connecticut State at Millersville, New Haver at Clark, Glassboro at Norwich, RPI at Coast Guard, and Worcester Tech at Western Connecticut State.

Forte enters guilty plea

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Chet Forte, Emmy Award-winning former producer of "Monday Night Football," pleaded guilty on Friday to federal mail fraud and tax evasion charges. His attorney said obsessive gambling caused his legal problems.

Forte, 55, also pleaded guilty to a one-count indictment charging him with wire fraud. Forte admitted defrauding $100,000 from a New Jersey businessman.

U.S. District Court Judge Joseph H. Rodriguez accepted the guilty plea at a one-hour hearing and scheduled sentencing for Jan. 11. Forte faces a maximum sentence of 11 years in prison and $27,000 in fines.

Forte fidgeted nervously before the judge. He remains free on $500,000 bail and declined to comment to reporters after the proceeding.

Bruins in exhibition tie

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Rob Cimetta and Dave Poulin scored 2:18 apart late in the third period as the Boston Bruins rallied to a 4-4 tie with the New York Islanders in the exhibition opener for both NHL teams Friday night.

The Islanders took a 4-1 lead on goals by Derek King, Pat LaFontaine and Bill Berg in the first 6:23 of the second period.

But Nevin Markwart made it 4-2 on a tip-in at 10:05 of the middle period. Cimetta cut the deficit to one goal with 5:54 remaining in regulation time when he stuffed Stephane Quinart's passout behind Mark Fitzpatrick.

Poulin then tied the game with 3:36 remaining, beating Fitzpatrick from in front on a pass from Chris Nilan.

Criminal Type heavy favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — For three years, Criminal Type was just another racehorse, but in 1990 there has been no other racehorse quite like him.

"He should be Horse of the Year," said Jeff Lukas, who assists his father, trainer D. Wayne Lukas.

The 5-year-old Calumet Farm horse, who is heavily favored to win the Woodward Handicap Saturday at Belmont Park, certainly is the leader for racing's biggest honor on the strength of six stakes victories this year. He has won Grade 1 stakes in each of his last four starts and in the process has beaten Sunday Silence, the 1989 Horse of the Year; Easy Goer, who was Sunday Silence's arch rival; and Housebuster, the brilliant 3-year-old sprinter.

Housebuster and Go for Wand, the wonderful 3-year-old filly, probably are Criminal Type's main rivals for Horse of the Year at this point.

Expos' sale almost complete

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal Expos president Claude Brochu said Friday that an agreement to sell the team to local buyers is nearly complete, meaning the NL club will stay in Montreal.

"I'm 99.9 percent certain that everything is in place," Brochu said in a news conference. "I'll say 100 percent when everything is signed."

Expos principle owner Charles Bronfman put the team on the market in the spring for about $85 million, asking Brochu to solicit offers only from local groups.

Brochu met with the Major League Ownership Committee this week in Pittsburgh and confirmed reports that both the Government of Quebec and the City of Montreal will be involved in the purchase.

Dunston battles Cub teammate

Dunston, who is in a 3-for-36 slump, was removed from the starting lineup with a slightly strained shoulder. Three stitches were required to close the cut on Wynne's forehead.

A little more than an hour before the game, the players wrestled and traded punches just outside the Cubs' dugout before being separated by teammates.

Burrell favorite over Lewis

SHIZUOKA, Japan (AP) — Although Carl Lewis is the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash, Leroy Burrell is the favorite in an international track and field meet Saturday.

Burrell has won 20 of 22 races this year and owns the year's fastest time, 9.95 seconds. He already has beaten Lewis in two of three meetings.

Burrell is confident he can run faster than Lewis again. Although both will be running 100 meters Saturday, they will be running in separate heats.

"If you look at the statistics, I believe the tide has turned," Burrell said Friday.

NOT THE FAVORITE — Carl Lewis, shown in a file photo, is the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash, but is not the favorite in an international track and field meet in Japan today.

"Unfortunately for my competitors, I've accomplished all that I wanted to this season. I wanted to win the (Mobil) Grand Prix, and I did. I won the Goodwill Games, and I wanted to be ranked No. 1 in the world and I am."

Burrell said that being ranked No. 1 this season was not as hard a feat to accomplish as it could have been.

"Carl was injured and a lot of people who should have been in there (this season) weren't," Burrell said. "So I've been at the top, but it's been pretty slim pickings."

Burrell's self-declared ranking is unofficial. The official rankings do not come out until the end of the year.

Lewis, a teammate of Burrell's on the Santa Monica Track Club, injured a hamstring this year, limiting the number of meets in which he was able to compete.

NBA not planning further expansion

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The NBA has no plans for further expansion, despite interest expressed by a number of cities, including some overseas, Commissioner David Stern said Friday.

The league added franchises in Charlotte, N.C., and Miami in 1988, and in Orlando and Minneapolis last season.

"We had our expansion," Stern said at the annual league meetings. "It is our goal now to make sure the 27 teams we have are fiscally sound."

Cities that have approached the NBA about acquiring expansion franchises, Stern said, are Toronto, San Diego, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Memphis, Tenn., Nashville, Tenn., and St. Petersburg, Fla., as well as Orange County, Calif. The NBA also has heard from investors overseas, he said.

"There has been interest expressed, but we've discouraged it," Stern said. "We will meet with new cities interested in franchises, but there are no plans now to expand. That is not on our agenda."

Stern estimated existing NBA franchises are worth $90 million to $100 million. He said three or four teams lost money last season but none is in financial difficulty.

"All our owners have deep pockets, and their assets are growing," Stern said. "For that reason, the possibility of franchises being relocated is not a great concern. Our teams aren't available."

But Stern expects the NBA's role in international basketball competition to continue growing. The commissioner said he foresees the day when the NBA champion will participate in an international tournament similar to soccer's World Cup.

"It might be 10 years away, but I think the time will come when there will be a world club championship involving the NBA champion," Stern said. "This isn't a vision. It's just an analysis of the possibilities."

NBA players will be allowed to compete in the Olympics for the first time in 1992 at Barcelona. The New York Knicks will compete in the 1990 McDonald's Open at Barcelona Oct. 11 and 13 with three of Europe's top teams — Spanish League champion Barcelona, two-time European champion POP 84 Split of Yugoslavia, and Italian League champion Scavolini Pesaro.

In addition, the NBA will become the first major American sports league to play regular-season games overseas when the Phoenix Suns and Utah Jazz open their 1990-91 seasons with two games in Tokyo Nov. 3-4.

"It is not our intent to impose NBA basketball on the rest of the world," Stern said. "But we will work with other organizations to expand basketball on all levels. We'll stay flexible, work with everyone and see how it unfolds."

Stern said he expects several foreign NBA players to compete for their countries in the 1992 Olympics. Yugoslavia, Spain and the Soviet Union are among the nations that could benefit from the ruling last year by FIBA to allow professional athletes to compete in international competition.

The U.S. Olympic Committee plans to take advantage of the rule to strengthen its men's basketball team. A subcommittee said Thursday it would recommend that an NBA coach head the U.S. team at Barcelona in 1992.

NBA coaches and players will not be paid to play in the Olympics. But Russ Granik, NBA deputy commissioner, said he expects many NBA players to express interest.

For the first time, there will be no tryouts for the Olympic team. USA Basketball and the Olympic coaching staff will select the 12-man team plus alternates prior to July 5, 1992.

That team then will compete in a qualifying tournament involving 10 teams from the Americas at a U.S. site to be determined. Four teams will advance to Olympic competition July 26 through Aug. 7.

The U.S. team is expected to be dominated by NBA players.

IOC thinking of tightening eligibility rules

By LARRY SIDONS
The Associated Press

TOKYO — The decision-making panel of the International Olympic Committee agreed Friday to consider measures that could severely tighten eligibility for future Olympic sports and athletes.

The IOC's Executive Board approved a "general philosophy and principles about how to proceed" with plans to limit the growth of the Games, committee spokeswoman Michele Verdier said.

The board, in the second day of meetings before the IOC session begins Sunday, also adopted a $13.7 million plan to help nations pay to send teams to the 1992 Winter and Summer Games.

It can afford it. The board was told that television rights fees and sponsorships would produce nearly $2 billion for the Olympic movement by the time the '92 Games are staged.

With increased popularity in the past decade, the Olympics have attracted record numbers of athletes and sports. In Barcelona in 1992, there will be 237 gold medals awarded in 25 sports, and the IOC this summer imposed a ceiling of 10,000 athletes for those Games.

The Winter Games' schedule is "well-balanced and stable" and will not be affected by the squeeze, Verdier said.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch has said that the time may be near when some outdated sports are dropped from the Summer Olympics and replaced by more popular ones. Verdier said Thursday's discussion did not deal with any sports in particular but rather the need to limit the growth rate.

"We have to understand that by adding sports and athletes, we place a tremendous burden on organizing committees," she said. "We might wind up with no candidate cities to host the Games."

Six cities are bidding for the 1996 Summer Games. The IOC decides the winner Tuesday.

Verdier said the IOC's program commission would conduct a sport-by-sport review and make its first report to the board in December. She said no final action could be expected for at least a year.

Restrictions considered may include tighter qualifying standards, tougher rules for adding sports and eliminating artificial team competition in individual events, she said.

Last month, Vitaly Smirnov, head of the program commission, said he wanted the proposals to contain "serious measures" including the possibility of forcing sports to give up events if they wanted to add new ones.

The money to help pay for Olympic athletes comes from the IOC's Solidarity fund.

It will pay for air fare and board for three athletes and one official from each country at the Winter Olympics, and six athletes and two officials from each country at the Summer Olympics. In addition, each national Olympic committee gets equipment funding ($6,000 for Winter, $8,000 for Summer) and $800 for each athlete who competes.

The Solidarity program was established more than a decade ago to help developing countries finance Olympic projects. Its revenue comes primarily from television rights fees.

Those TV rights account for about half of the $1.84 billion that marketing will produce in the four years ending in 1992, Verdier said.

She said that figure included contracts with the IOC and national Olympic committees covering use of the Olympic rings, mascots and other logos and trademarks.

Straw is what stirs the Mets

By RONALD BLUM
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Mets would be an ordinary team without Darryl Strawberry.

That's what his teammates say. That's what opponents say. His bat, his power, his ability to turn losses into victories with one swing, all give the Mets a chance to win the National League East despite their problems in winning road games and beating left-handers.

"He means everything," Keith Miller said after Strawberry's three-run homer led the Mets past Pittsburgh 6-3 Thursday night. The victory pulled New York within 1 1/2 games of the first-place Pirates.

Strawberry threw out Barry Bonds at home in the top of the fourth to keep Pittsburgh's lead at 2-0, then hit his homer in the bottom of the inning to put New York ahead.

"It was like everybody knew what was going to happen," Miller said. "It was the weirdest feeling on the bench. The crowd sensed it."

Of the two, Strawberry thought the defensive play was more significant.

"The most important play of the game was the throw, not letting them get up three runs in that situation," he said.

Strawberry's two-run homer in the ninth inning Tuesday night had given the Mets a 10-8 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. He has six home runs and 20 RBIs since Aug. 30.

"We can win when Darryl's not hitting home runs," Mets manager Bud Harrelson said. "When he does, it's easy."

Strawberry has 11 hits against the Pirates this season. Eight of them are home runs.

"Strawberry kills us," Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla said. "But we put him in situations where he can."

Next year, Strawberry may be hitting home runs for a different club. He's eligible for free agency after the World Series and he wants a huge contract, one that will dwarf his current $1.8 million salary.

So far, Mets general manager Frank Cashen and Eric Goldschmidt, Strawberry's agent, haven't had much to talk about. Their ideas on the player's worth are very different.

"Certainly we're anxious to sign Darryl, but not at all costs," Cashen said after negotiations broke off in July. "It's a ludicrous thought that we're going to give everybody everything they want, that we're going to give away the store."

Cashen later said that Strawberry wasn't a $5 million player, alluding to the $23.5 million, five-year extension signed by Oakland's Jose Canseco.

Strawberry is a sensitive type. He falls into a funk when his emotions are hurt and Cashen's remarks stung him.

Goldschmidt has suggested the Mets might not want Strawberry back.

"If they wanted Darryl signed, they could have had Darryl signed," Goldschmidt said this week. "I don't know if they sincerely want him signed."

Strawberry's teammates want him signed. At all costs.

"Give him whatever he wants," Miller said. "Give him a blank contract and let him fill it in."

When teammates talk about the possibility of a future without Strawberry, they sound apprehensive if not scared.

"If you don't have Darryl, the whole team will change," Gregg Jefferies said.

Strawberry already has 100 RBIs this season, five short of the club record. And there are 19 games to go. He said it's not the looming contract talks that propel him.

"You don't play for a salary drive, you play for pride," he said. "I've worn the New York Mets uniform for a long time. There is a lot of pride playing for the New York Mets."

But next year, Strawberry won't be playing for the Mets unless they are paying Canseco-type bucks. If they don't, there are 25 other teams.

"I'm sure — I hope somebody wants me," Strawberry said. His face had a look of confidence that made you think he knows they do.

"Tommy made some adjustments at halftime," Longo said. "They neutralized our big guys (Marshall and Colvin) and they were able to open it up."

Maglicic set up the tying goal which came with 20:48 left in regulation. A perfect corner kick by Maglicic produced a scramble in the goalmouth. East's Paul Krasusky retrieved the bouncing ball and one-timed a side-winding eight-yarder past Bobcat goalie Shane Wirta.

"He (Maglicic) has the best skills of anybody on the team," Malin said. "If we can get him the ball and have the other guys feed off him, we'll be a good team."

East had two good chances to break the tie. A Jim Panagiotakakos shot with 3:56 left in regulation went off the fingertips of Wirta and around the post. And with one second left in the first overtime, Flood's 18-yard direct kick was tipped over the crossbar by Wirta.

"Two different games," Longo said. "We made some defensive errors. We don't mark their man (Maglicic) in the middle and they scored on us. You've got to give them credit for coming back. (In the second half) They dominated us. We were lucky to get a tie at the end. We were fortunate."

Tearful Reddy says Billy was driving pickup truck

PORT CRANE, N.Y. (AP) — A tearful William Reddy testified Friday that he didn't drive the pickup truck in which Billy Martin was killed but lied to authorities — including a priest — and said he was the driver "to protect Billy."

The Detroit bar owner, accused of driving while intoxicated during the fatal wreck that killed Martin on Christmas 1989, choked back tears when recalling how the five-time New York Yankees manager didn't respond after the crash.

"I said to Billy, 'If you can get up, I'll push you out of the window,'" Reddy said of the crash's aftermath. "Billy's back was against the wall and his head slumped forward."

Reddy, a longtime friend of Martin's, is defending himself against the charges by claiming that he wasn't driving and wasn't intoxicated. He testified for 1 1/2 hours Friday.

Reddy, who was staying at Martin's farm outside of Binghamton for the holidays, testified that he and Martin went to the city to run errands on Christmas afternoon and stopped at a bar for more than four hours.

Reddy said he had "four or five beers" and a screwdriver while at the bar. But he insisted he wasn't drunk and left liquid in each of his glasses.

Reddy was asked by defense attorney Jon Blechman if he had ever lied before on behalf of Martin.

"Yes, to the wife, many times," Reddy said. As an example, Reddy said he once lied and said he threw the punches in a barroom fight when it was Martin who had been the combatant.

Also Friday, Van Kuren testified that Reddy told him that it was Martin's wife who said she "didn't want Billy cut up," Martin, 61, died of head and neck injuries.

Two Broome County coroners also testified. One, Dr. Melvin Jones, said that an autopsy was not performed on Martin because Martin's wife said she "didn't want Billy cut up," Martin, 61, died of head and neck injuries.

The other coroner, Patrick Ruddy, said he noted in a report that Martin was the passenger in the vehicle, based on his conversations with hospital officials. He said he didn't talk to Reddy about this determination.

If convicted, Reddy faces a mandatory fine of between $300 and $500, revocation of his driver's license for at least six months and a possible jail sentence of up to a year.

Martin's widow, Jillhaan, who has been attending the trial, has filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the town and Reddy.

Martin was a member of five World Series championship teams with the Yankees during an 11-year playing career. He managed 16 years in the major leagues, including stints with Minnesota, Detroit, Texas and Oakland.

Florida State joins the ACC

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — After a summertime courtship with several prospective partners, Florida State joined the Atlantic Coast Conference on Friday, bringing a football powerhouse to a league known for its basketball and academic excellence.

"This is an outstanding opportunity for Florida State and I'm sure they'll make the most of it," State University System Chancellor Charles Reed said. "It's a good fit for the Board of Regents' goal of making student-athletes students first."

Florida State officials will host ACC Commissioner Eugene Corrigan on Saturday to discuss details. The Seminoles, who now compete in the Metro Conference in all sports except football, could begin their affiliation with the ACC in basketball and baseball in the 1991-92 school year. Football will take longer because schedules are made years in advance.

Florida State became the ninth member of the ACC when the regents unanimously approved the university's request to join the league in all sports.

"It's going to strengthen the entire university system," said Reed, noting Florida's membership in the 11-school Southeastern Conference. "It's an achievement for Florida State when you consider where we were 15 years ago in regard to this."

Blowers, Leary lead Yanks past the Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Mike Blowers' two-run double capped a five-run third inning that lifted the New York Yankees to a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers Friday night.

Tim Leary (9-18), trying to avoid becoming the first pitcher in 10 years to lose 20 games in a season, held the Tigers to one run on three hits in seven innings for the victory. The last pitcher to lose 20 games was Brian Kingman of Oakland in 1980.

Two singles by Larry Sheets, including an RBI hit in the first, and a seventh-inning double by Lloyd Moseby accounted for Detroit's only hits off Leary. The Tigers got another run in the eighth on another RBI single by Sheets, but three Yankees relievers got out of the inning.

Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his 32nd save.

Rookie Scott Aldred (1-1) took the loss for Detroit, allowing five runs in 2-2-3 innings.

New York sent nine batters to the plate in the third. Randy Velarde started the inning with a single, moved to second on a groundout and scored on Roberto Kelly's single.

After Jim Leyritz walked and Jesse Barfield flied out, Steve Balboni and Hensley Meulens hit RBI singles, and Blowers drove in the last two runs with a line drive into the left field corner.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 0: At Chicago, Sammy Sosa hit a two-run homer and Jack McDowell won for the seventh time in nine starts Friday night as the Chicago White Sox beat Boston 4-0, the Red Sox eighth loss in 12 games.

The loss — coupled with Toronto's come-from-behind, 8-7 victory over Baltimore — cut Boston's lead in the AL East to three games.

Sosa's homer, his 13th of the season and first since Aug. 20, was all Chicago needed as the Red Sox were shut out for the 16th time this season, the most since they were held scoreless 17 times in 1974.

McDowell (13-7), who had won six straight decisions before losing to Toronto on Sunday, equaled a career high with 10 strikeouts in seven innings, giving up four hits and four walks.

Joe Hesketh (0-3) walked Frank Thomas to lead off the fourth, and one out later Sosa homered into the left field stands.

Mets winning streak ends; Pirates also lose

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Combs, ejected after igniting a bench-clearing brawl in his last start at Shea Stadium, quieted New York on four hits and the Philadelphia Phillies ended the Mets' 11-game home winning streak 4-1 Friday night.

The Mets, the best home team in baseball all 50-23, tied a team record with their success streak at Shea. They had won four straight games to pull within 1 1/2 games of Pittsburgh in the National League East. They didn't lose ground Friday night when the Pirates lost to Montreal 4-2.

Lenny Dykstra drove in one run, scored another and regained the league batting lead. Dale Murphy hit his 22nd homer and later scored on Charlie Hayes' single for the Phillies' other runs.

Combs (8-9) sparked a full-scale fight on Aug. 9 when he hit Mets ace Dwight Gooden with a pitch. Gooden

Bonds in the second and fourth and a double by Bonds in the sixth.

Dodgers 10, Reds 4: At Cincinnati, Kal Daniels' third grand slam of the season completed an eight-run rally in the sixth inning as the Los Angeles Dodgers finally beat Tom Browning 10-4 Friday night and cut the Cincinnati Reds' lead to 5 1/2 games in the National League West.

The Dodgers trailed 2-1 when they broke through Browning (13-8), who had yielded just nine earned runs while beating the Dodgers in his four other starts this season.

Eddie Murray started the uprising with a one-out homer, his 24th. The other seven runs came with two out.

Mike Scioscia singled and Juan Samuel's double put the Dodgers ahead 3-2. An RBI single by Alfredo Griffin and a fielding error on the hit by right fielder Glenn Braggs produced two more runs.

Braves 7, Padres 3: At Atlanta, Jim Presley doubled home the first of five Atlanta runs in the fourth inning and homered in the fifth as the Braves beat the San Diego Padres 7-3 Friday night.

Tom Glavine (8-11) yielded two runs and six hits in six innings. The Braves trailed 2-0 before chasing former teammate Derek Liliquist (3-10) in the fourth. Mark Grant, who came to the Braves in the Liliquist deal, pitched three innings for his first save.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 2: At St. Louis, Bryn Smith pitched six shutout innings for his first victory in almost two months and Pedro Guerrero had two RBI doubles as the St. Louis Cardinals ended the Chicago Cubs' three-game winning streak 4-2 Friday night.

Smith (8-8) gave up four hits — all singles — in his second start since coming off the disabled list and won for the first time since July 17. Smith, who was sidelined from July 28 to Sept. 5 with a sore right shoulder, struck out three and walked one.

Mattingly sees action

DETROIT (AP) — Don Mattingly returned to the New York Yankee lineup Friday night for the first time since July 24.

Mattingly pinch-hit for Brian Dorsett in the eighth inning, with the Yankees leading 5-1, and doubled down the right field line. Jim Walawender pinch-ran for Mattingly.

Mattingly was activated on Tuesday from the disabled list, where he was placed on July 25 with lower back pain.

NL Roundup

charged the mound and both pitchers and three others were ejected and Combs left with a facial cut.

Combs drew scattered boos from the crowd of 36,339 but did little to excite the fans. The only tense moment came when he threw a curve ball over Dave Magadan's head in the sixth inning. The ball hit the bat and went foul.

Combs struck out five, walked two and is 4-1 lifetime against the Mets, including a 6-2 victory in Philadelphia last Sunday. The only run he allowed in his second complete game in 28 starts came on Howard Johnson's 21st homer in the second inning.

Lozer Sid Fernandez (9-13) struck out 12 and held the Phillies to four hits in 7 1-3 innings. But he walked five and three of them scored as he lost to the Phillies for only the second time in 11 Shea Stadium decisions.

Expos 4, Pirates 2: At Montreal, Tim Lincecum doubled home the tying run with two out in the eighth inning and rookie Larry Walker followed with a two-run homer as the Montreal Expos continue to dominate the Pittsburgh with a 4-2 victory Friday night.

Montreal is 11-5 against Pittsburgh this season. The Expos trailed 2-1 on two home runs by Barry Bonds and were held to five hits in seven innings by Bob Walk.

But Neal Heaton (12-9) relieved to start the eighth and walked Delino DeShields with two out. Walkach, celebrating his 33rd birthday, doubled DeShields home and Walker hit a 1-2 pitch over the right-field fence for his 18th homer.

The victory went to Steve Frey (8-2), who pitched two scoreless innings in relief of left-hander Brian Barnes, who made his major league debut. Barnes held Pittsburgh to four hits in seven innings — home runs by

EC swim is dunked

HAMDEN — East Catholic High girls' swimming team launched its 1990 season Friday afternoon, bowing 109-56 to host Hamden High.

East next sees action Tuesday at 4 p.m. against Middletown High at the Manchester High pool.

East's Laura Chilgasa was second in the 100 freestyle and third in the 100 breaststroke while Stacey Luoma was second in the 500 free and third in the 200 IM. Luoma, Cheryl Griswold, Kerry Murphy and sophomore Irene Flynn combined to take second place in the 4 X 100 freestyle relay.

East has 10 members on its squad, the fewest ever.
