

Notre Dame prepares for sweep of Michigan teams

By BILL BARNARD
The Associated Press

Gen. Sherman had his march through Georgia in the Civil War. Lou Holtz and Notre Dame are trying to pull off a similar trampling of Michigan's football teams.

The top-ranked Fighting Irish defeated Michigan, then ranked No. 4, 28-24 last Saturday after trailing by 10 points in the fourth quarter. This week's battleground is East Lansing, Mich., against No. 24 Michigan State.

Notre Dame will be looking for its fourth consecutive victory over the Spartans and its 12th straight against Big Ten foes. Michigan State was the last Big Ten team to beat the Fighting Irish, 20-15 in 1986, Holtz's first road game as coach at Notre Dame.

Michigan rolled up 443 yards against the usually sturdy Notre Dame defense last Saturday, including 190 yards and two touchdowns through the air.

"I was surprised Michigan moved the ball as well as it did against us, but that's a credit to Michigan," Holtz said. "Sometimes you win a game like that and you take great momentum out of it. We've got some problems to address, and how well we deal with them will determine where we go from here."

"If we don't address them, we're probably not going to win as many games as we'd like to," Holtz said. "Sometimes you win a game like that and you take great momentum out of it. We've got some problems to address, and how well we deal with them will determine where we go from here."

"They generally have the top recruiting class in the country," Perles said. "It was that way last year. And it'll be that way this year, next year, and five years from now. They're Notre Dame. They're good."

In other games Saturday involving Top 25 teams, No. 3 Florida St. at Tulane, San Diego State at No. 4 Brigham Young, No. 5 Southern Cal at No. 21 Washington, UCLA at No. 7 Michigan, Minnesota at No. 8 Nebraska, and No. 10 Virginia at Duke.

Also, Tulsa at No. 11 Oklahoma, North Texas at No. 12 Texas A&M, Mississippi at No. 13 Arkansas, Southern Illinois at No. 15 Illinois, Appalachian St. at No. 17 Clemson, Oregon at No. 18 Arizona, Furman at No. 19 Florida, No. 20 Colorado at No. 22 Texas, and No. 25 Pittsburgh at Syracuse.

In its history, Notre Dame is 59-9-3 in games when it's held down the top spot in the national rankings, including a 21-13 decision over Michigan State last year.

Holtz's biggest problem will be replacing senior cornerback Todd Lyght, who aggravated a hamstring injury during the Michigan game. He's not expected to play against the Spartans, leaving Holtz with a secondary without much experience as starters.

"When you're at Notre Dame, you always expect a miracle, but this is a tremendous loss," Holtz said. Lyght's likely replacement is freshman Greg Lane.

At Provo, the Western Athletic Conference's top two passers of 1989 will meet when Brigham Young plays host to San Diego State.

SSSU's Dan McGwire, runner-up to BYU's Ty Detmer last season, has not been as effective this fall, averaging 229 yards passing. But BYU has given up 431 yards per game in three victories this year.

Detmer has thrown for an average of 413 yards, including 448 last week when the Cougars stayed unbeaten by rallying from a 29-7 halftime deficit to beat Washington State 50-36. BYU has turned the ball over 11 times, but has only four takeaways.

San Diego State has yielded 711 yards passing in its two games, not a promising figure considering BYU's passing prowess. In seven trips to Provo, SDSU has never won.

Washington, which struggled to win its first two games despite being prohibitive favorites in both, has to figure out a way to slow down Southern Cal sophomore quarterback Todd Marinovich and his favorite target, flanker Gary Wetman.

William has caught 16 passes for 230 yards and one touchdown in victories over Syracuse and Penn State.

"He's as good as anything I've ever seen," Washington coach Don James said. "He's incredible. He's making catches with people all around him. He's got tremendous speed and quickness."

"And Todd just puts the ball right where it's not going to be intercepted," Washington coach Don James said. "He's incredible. He's making catches with people all around him. He's got tremendous speed and quickness."

Third official convicted

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A third Florida Federal Savings Bank executive has been convicted in a scheme that bilked $18 million from the federal student loan program.

Jeffrey A. Flatten was convicted Thursday of fraud and conspiracy in connection with 17,000 false insurance claims seeking $35 million from the Department of Education. The government paid out about $18 million before the fraud was discovered.

Flatten, formerly vice president in charge of student loans, faces up to 135 years in prison and more than $6 million in fines when he is sentenced Nov. 14 by U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman.

Flatten, 39, is the third former thrift official convicted of submitting false claims for reimbursement of defaulted student loans in 1986 and 1987.

Loan collectors are supposed to make a series of telephone calls and write letters to delinquent borrowers, with each collection attempt recorded.

But under Flatten, officials did not even try to collect the loans, the government claimed. Instead, they made false entries on telephone logs and filed copies of letters that were never mailed, the government claimed.

Flatten was convicted of conspiracy, 15 counts of filing false statements, four counts of mail fraud, three counts of filing false claims and two counts of theft of government funds.

Robert O. Harmas, former vice president of operations for the student loan division, and James J. LaMantia, former manager of collections and claims for student loans, were convicted in May for their part in the scheme.

Harmas was sentenced to two years in prison and ordered to pay $2,150 in court costs. LaMantia was placed on three years probation, assigned 300 hours community service and ordered to pay $1,500 in court costs.

Keating is denied bail reduction

By E. SCOTT RECKARD
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A judge refused Friday to reduce Charles H. Keating's $5 million bail, ruling that the central figure in the nation's most expensive savings and loan collapse was a flight risk.

Bail was reduced for three co-defendants named in a 42-count criminal fraud indictment, but Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner said numerous civil lawsuits and the threat of prison gave Keating "significant reasons not to stick around."

"There has been a picture painted here ... of a person who has creditors knocking at the door," he said.

After a two-day hearing, Klausner reduced bail to $100,000 each for Ray C. Fidel and Robin S. Symes and $200,000 for Judy Wischer. Fidel and Symes quickly posted checks, but there was no indication Wischer would make bail. All four have been held in the Los Angeles County Jail since Tuesday.

Keating is the former chairman of Phoenix-based American Continental Corp., which owned the failed Lincoln Savings & Loan of Irvine, Calif. Bailout of the S&L is expected to cost taxpayers $2 billion.

Fidel, 32, was president of Lincoln. Symes, 37, was its chief executive officer; and Wischer, 42, was president of American Continental. The indictment alleges that all four bilked investors by selling them worthless American Continental "junk" bonds at Lincoln branches.

The defense said Keating could not afford $5 million and wanted his bail reduced to $500,000, which his children could post.

A Keating son-in-law, Robert Wurzelbacher, listed homes and other real estate worth about $500,000 owned by the children, testifying that all were paid for legally. The court required that any money used for bail could not come from criminal activity.

Defense attorney Stephen C. Neal called the high bail "insupportable as a matter of law." He indicated the matter would be taken to a state appeals court.

Neal said Keating would be unable to adequately assist in his defense as long as he is jailed.

Under usual California bond practices, if Keating were to go to a bail bondsman for the $5 million, he would pay a non-refundable fee of $500,000 and he or others would have to pledge $7.15 million in property or bank accounts as collateral. The collateral would be returned if Keating made all his court appearances.

Klausner said pending lawsuits and the threat of prison combined to make the Arizona developer a flight risk.

"Now you're facing the possibility of 10 years in the state penitentiary," the judge told Keating.

Keating also is named in numerous civil lawsuits — including a $1.1 billion racketeering case — accusing him of looting Lincoln, which was seized in April 1989 by federal regulators.

Wealthy blacks feel bias too

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Despite economic gains, many wealthier blacks still face discrimination ranging from racial epithets to suspicions that they are criminals, a study shows.

University of Florida sociologist Joe Feagin cited numerous examples Friday of racial discrimination from a recent nationwide study in which he interviewed about 200 blacks in medium-sized and large cities.

Everyone in the survey said they experienced some form of discrimination, although the severity differed from person to person, Feagin said.

The blacks in his study came from families earning $40,000 a year or more. He said he wanted to study middle- and upper-income blacks because most research has focused on discrimination against poorer blacks.

Feagin said his study shows that wealthier blacks — including doctors, lawyers and executives — deal with discrimination every day and don't feel they get the respect they deserve.

One subject, a news director at a TV station, said she

Morrison criticizes Rowland

By JUDD EVERHART
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bruce A. Morrison took his Republican rival John G. Rowland to task Friday for a series of votes taken this week on bills in Congress.

Morrison, a four-term congressman from Hamden, said Rowland, a three-term congressman from Waterbury, had voted in favor of an amendment giving less assistance and fewer benefits to defense industry workers who lose their jobs as a result of cuts in defense spending.

"He doesn't care about working people," Morrison said.

Rowland acknowledged the vote, but said he cast it with the idea of amending a good bill to make it a little better. He ultimately supported the bill itself.

Morrison used that stance to portray Rowland as trying to "cover himself politically."

Rowland tried to turn the criticism back toward Morrison, noting Morrison's poor attendance record in Congress this year. During the first six months of the year, Morrison missed about 30 percent of the votes as he campaigned for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Rowland, who was also campaigning at the time, missed fewer than 10 percent of the votes, to keep his average better than 90 percent.

"At least I show up for work," said Rowland.

He also said Friday that Connecticut businesses have difficulty competing because of the high tax burden in the state.

Connecticut's corporations tax, at 13.8 percent, is the highest in the country. The top rate on the capital gains, interest and dividends tax, at 14 percent, is the nation's highest, as is the state sales tax at 8 percent, he noted.

Some insurers wary of military policies

By DENISE LAVOIE
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Some life insurance companies, after initially refusing to write new policies for U.S. soldiers headed for the Persian Gulf, have settled for a special wartime clause that allows them to reject claims for combat deaths.

The provisions, generally called "war risk exclusion clauses," allow insurance companies to refuse to pay claims when death is combat-related.

Diane Coffey, a spokeswoman for the American Council of Life Insurance, said some of the trade association's 600 members are still rejecting applications for new policies because of fear of potentially massive claims if the United States and Iraq enter a full-scale war. She declined to name companies or say how many are involved.

"Some companies are hesitant, and are either not accepting applications from those with military orders or they're adding war-exclusion clauses to (new) policies," Coffey said.

Allstate Life Insurance Co., based in Northbrook, Ill., issued a memo on Aug. 9, telling territorial sales managers not to submit applications on people expected to be sent to the Gulf.

Allstate spokesman Robert Lapinski said the company changed its policy within 48 hours after deciding "it didn't seem fair." The company has since added a war-exclusion clause for new policies for soldiers.

The Beneficial Life Insurance Co. of Salt Lake City also warned in a memo sent to its sales force, "It is not prudent underwriting to issue coverage on people who air traffic, "obviously the United States would do its part."

"There seems to be a systematic dismantling of Kuwait that does violence to the rights of every single Kuwaiti but also sends a signal that he (Saddam) is trying to incorporate Kuwait into kind of a piece of territory of Iraq," Bush said.

He spoke as the Persian Gulf crisis heated up on the diplomatic level, with Iraq's decision to expel three American diplomats. The United States retaliated by expelling three Iraqi diplomats from Washington.

Bush said economic sanctions against Iraq authorized by the United Nations remained "the major thrust of our policy."

But, asked whether he could make a commitment not to take the first shot at Iraq, Bush said: "I'm not making any commitments. ... There are so many contingencies. ... The treatment of American citizens is one thing that concerns me greatly."

At the same time, Bush said he did not want to send a signal "that I'm shifting more to the military."

Ralph Pearson, legal counsel for Beneficial, said company officials do not have a blanket policy of rejecting new policies for Gulf-bound soldiers, but said decisions on whether to write policies will be made on a case-by-case basis.

"Obviously, if you were an insurer you would not be excited about writing a policy for $100,000 term insurance for someone who's on his way to Saudi Arabia," Pearson said.

The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, based in Newark, N.J., had also been rejecting applications for new policies on military personnel with orders to go to the Gulf. The company changed its policy Sept. 18, but added a war-exclusion clause to new military policies, said Prudential spokesman James Longo.

Because the vast majority of servicemen receive military life insurance from the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance Program, they only use private companies if they want to get additional coverage.

Military personnel are automatically enrolled in the program, and, for $4 a month, they receive $50,000 in life insurance, said Major Douglas Hart, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Defense.

Many insurance companies, rather than flatly reject new policies for soldiers, are using the war-exclusion clauses.

The clause, which essentially cancels a military policy if the insured person is killed during combat, is not a new concept.

Insurance companies have used the clauses to limit wartime losses since World War II, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

Kenneth Ferraro, a spokesman for TIT Hartford Insurance Co., said war-exclusion clauses have long been standard provisions of life insurance policies at The Hartford Insurance Group.

Some companies say the Persian Gulf crisis has not affected the way they write insurance for military personnel.

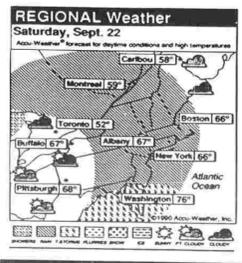

A spokesman for The Travelers Corp., based in Hartford, said the company has not inserted war-exclusion clauses or refused to write policies for soldiers. Aetna Life & Casualty, another Hartford-based insurance giant, said the Gulf conflict has not changed its underwriting rules, but would not say whether the company has added war-exclusion clauses.

Companies trying to decide how to handle new life insurance policies for servicemen during the tenuous Gulf crisis say they are torn between the need to protect their firms from big losses and their desire to help the U.S. effort.

Pearson, a retired reserve officer, said his firm, Beneficial Life Insurance Co., paid claims for policyholders who died in World War II, despite the fact that the policies all contained war-exclusion clauses. Forty-five years later, the company is again grappling with the same issues.

"We're protecting our solvency ... you do that no matter how patriotic you are or how sympathetic you are to their situation," Pearson said.

Complaint response not enough

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Town Directors Stephen T. Casano said today he is not satisfied with the response of the town administration complaints by tenants of the Bernet Apartments for the elderly that they cannot safely cross Main Street near the apartments.

Casano said something can and should be done to provide a temporary traffic control light to provide for the safety of the residents.

Casano first brought up the subject at the meeting of the Board of Directors Tuesday, and this week he delivered copies of a petition from about 50 residents of the town-operated apartments to the office of Town Manager Richard Sartor.

The petition said tenants need a working traffic light, not a caution light, at Main and Forest streets equipped with a pedestrian push button.

The light now shows flashing amber on Main Street and flashing red on Forest Street.

Included with the petition are notes saying that residents have phoned town officials and have spoken with Mayor Terry Workhoven and have been told the spare parts are not available to repair the obsolete traffic light.

Casano said that is not an adequate response.

Plans for the reconstruction of downtown Main Street call for new traffic lights including one at Main and Forest streets with normal red, green, and amber phases and a pedestrian control. The reconstruction has been delayed, however, by a series of complications.

At the meeting Tuesday, Casano said that in order to cross the street to get to a store close to the apartments, the tenants have had to walk to the intersection of Oak and Main streets.

Northspring gets grant

Northspring Consulting, a Manchester-based organization, will receive two grants of $31,500 each from the Connecticut Developmental Disabilities (DD) Council in 1991.

One grant will enable Northspring to continue to develop training and resource materials for people interested in organizing circles of support around people who have severe and multiple disabilities.

The second grant will continue to demonstrate how circles of support can work with elderly people who have disabilities and with aging parents whose sons or daughters have severe disabilities. Lower Fairfield County is the site of the demonstration project.

Speaking of the grants, DD Council Director Edward T. Prentiss said, "The Council is committed to empowering people with developmental disabilities to live full lives in their communities. We are learning through the work of Northspring that when friends, family, and other ordinary citizens form circles of support, people with severe disabilities are more readily included in schools, jobs, and community associations."

Announcement of the grants to Northspring Consulting came in conjunction with an announcement of the DD Council's plan to spend a total of $331,570 on grants in 1991. Funds for new projects will go to the Disabilities Network of Eastern Connecticut, the UConn Health Center, Catherine Ludlum of Waterbury, the Southeastern Connecticut Blind-to-Three Coordinator Center, New Haven's Department of Services for Person with Disabilities, WeCAHR in Danbury, and the A.J. Pappalardo Center (Connecticut's University Affiliated Program).

Googins wants deficit limit act

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

A state version of the federal Gramm-Rudman Act has been proposed by Sonya Googins, Republican candidate for the State Senate from the 4th Senatorial District.

Googins, who is challenging incumbent Democrat Michael Mouti, said the law she proposes would apply to the current state debt, which she said reaches nearly one billion dollars, and would limit appropriations.

She said a staged retirement of the debt that also triggers controlled spending is a realistic approach.

She said it is impossible to implement the myriad cuts in state spending being discussed by candidates in one year because every town and state service would suffer from the continuing retrenchment by government of its obligation to education, cities and

Corrections

In the Friday, Sept. 21 issue of the Herald, the article, "Fall Festival's shuttle schedule," contained an error. The shuttle bus, which runs from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., makes stops on the half hour at the Manchester Senior Center, 549 Middle Turnpike, not the Manchester Superior Court. The Herald regrets the error.

A story published in the Thursday, Sept. 20 issue of the Herald included an incorrect phone number for a woman who is in charge of the Befriend a Child program, which is under the direction of the Manchester Youth Services Bureau. Any couples interested in the program should contact Cheryl Garino at 649-8367 or Youth Services Coordinator Bob Digan at 647-3494.

■ HARTFORD (AP) — A teenager accused in the firebombing of the Wesleyan University president's office last April has applied for youthful offender status.

Sudhama Ranganathan was 17 on April 7 when William Chace's office was firebombed. He was charged by state authorities last month with the manufacture of a bomb, third-degree arson, conspiracy to commit third-degree arson and first-degree criminal mischief, all felonies.

Middlesex Superior Court Judge Richard T. O'Connell scheduled a hearing for Oct. 5 to rule on the request. The judge has ordered Ranganathan's court records sealed until a decision is made on the application.

Federal authorities have also charged Ranganathan in the firebombing, but are treating him as a juvenile. All court documents in the federal case have been sealed and the proceedings have taken place behind closed doors.

Federal law considers anyone under 18 to be a juvenile. Connecticut law considers someone an adult at 16 and court proceedings are open to the public, but youthful offender status can be granted to a person between the ages of 16 and 18 for less serious crimes.

If O'Connell approves Ranganathan's request, all the court proceedings will be closed to the public and will be held without a jury. In addition, youthful offenders receive lesser sentences than adults charged with the same crimes.

Chief State's Attorney John T. Redway has filed a new set of charges against Ranganathan, but those charges could not be learned because they were filed after court records were sealed.

Ranganathan's cousin, Kumar Viswanathan, 21, of Hartford, is one of two men accused of killing former Wesleyan student activist Nicholas B. Hadzad.

■ HARTFORD (AP) — The state Department of Labor has cited Somers Correctional Institute for 20 alleged violations of safety and health regulations and has proposed fining the prison $8,400.

The violations stemmed from inspections prompted by the death of an inmate, who accidentally fell into a paint stripping vat in the maximum-security prison's furniture-making shop last June.

The department also received similar citations in March, before the inmate's death, but failed to correct them, according to records from the Department of Health's Occupational Safety and Health Administration division.

The citations issued Sept. 17 and made public Thursday, alleged the prison failed to install a guardrail to prevent inmates from falling into the paint stripping vat.

The department also said the prison failed to provide inmates with adequate safety equipment, training and instruction to work in the furniture stripping area using hazardous chemicals.

Paul Allen Safford, 37, died of methylene-chloride poisoning, Safford, whose body was found floating in the vat, was serving a 10-year sentence for first-degree assault.

The state Department of Corrections has 15 days to contest the citations or must correct the alleged violations by Oct. 15 if the citations stand.

■ CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. (AP) — A man wanted in at least eight states was arrested after he returned a stolen car to its owner because it had too much mileage on it, state police said.

David G. Curtis, 26, whose hometown was not available, came to Charles Town and stole a BMW from a family from whom he stole a car last year, state police spokesman Greg Stevens said.

However, Curtis decided to return the BMW because "he was used to driving a car with less mileage," Stevens said.

Curtis, who was arrested Thursday, was being held in the Eastern Regional Jail pending a bond hearing, Stevens said.

Authorities in Utah, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Connecticut contacted West Virginia authorities about Curtis, Stevens said. Curtis also is wanted in connection with up to 40 burglaries in several Eastern states, he said.

Three Colombians charged in largest state drug bust

By JANET L. CAPPIELLO
The Associated Press

BRIDGEPORT — A family of three Colombian nationals pleaded innocent Friday to federal conspiracy charges in the state's largest cocaine seizure.

U.S. Customs agents arrested a husband, wife and their 25-year-old son Thursday in Stamford after the husband, allegedly confessed to being paid to watch the boat that was intercepted in Bridgeport Harbor on Tuesday with 145 pounds of cocaine strapped to its hull.

The three were charged with one count each of conspiracy to import cocaine. The father and son were taken to Bridgeport jail pending a Tuesday bond hearing, while the mother was to be released on $40,000 bond.

"There was no cocaine discovered at the time of their arrest," said U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. "They have been charged for their roles in conspiracy to import."

Officials identified the suspects as Fernando Francisco Reyes, 51, and his wife, Berta Lucia Osorio de Reyes, 53, both of West Palm Beach, Fla. Their son, arrested with them, was identified as Francisco Fernando Reyes, of Chicago.

The family appeared before U.S. District Court Judge Warren W. Elington. Each was appointed an attorney, and an interpreter translated the proceedings into Spanish for Mrs. Reyes.

They face a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine if convicted.

The complaint said the father and son had been previously convicted of cocaine-related offenses. Twardy said officials did not yet have specific information relating to the previous convictions.

The complaint said Francisco Reyes, the son, was allegedly seen in the vicinity of the Clico Terminal in Bridgeport Harbor, where the rival rebel leader Prince Johnson and four West African leaders.

A Ghanaian government spokesman said Nigeria had made a unilateral decision to take over the 3,000-member task force and implied there could be a dispute with other nations that have sent troops. The other nations are Ghana, Guinea, Sierra Leone and Gambia.

The spokesman said only the Economic Community of West African States, which sent the army and named Quainoo its commander, could decide a change of command. Oil-rich Nigeria is the most powerful of the communty's 16 members.

Ghana and Nigeria each have about 1,000 soldiers in Liberia. Another 1,000 Nigerian soldiers on a warship in Freetown, Sierra Leone, are preparing to reinforce the army. Several hundred Ghanaian soldiers also are in Freetown, waiting to go to Liberia.

There was no reports Friday from Monrovia, the Liberian capital where the rival rebel armies have been battling each other and remnants of troops loyal to slain President Samuel Doe.

Dogonyaro, a friend of Nigerian President Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, sits on the country's Armed Forces Ruling Council and is a veteran of Nigeria's civil war in the 1960s.

Nigeria takes control

LAGOS, Nigeria — Nigeria announced Friday it is taking command of a West African task force in Liberia and will send a general with orders to fight until the civil war is over.

Military sources said the change of command from Lt. Gen. Arnold Quainoo of Ghana to Gen. Joshua Dogonyaro is seen as a declaration of war against rebel leader Charles Taylor.

But at least one official said Nigeria's action was not supported by all members of the five-nation task force sent to Liberia to end the 9-month-old civil war, which has killed more than 5,000 civilians.

The guerrilla chief's spokesman, Tom Woeziya, said Friday they are ready to go to a peace conference, but only if the West African force withdraws.

Cult leader gets death sentence

By DWIGHT WOODWARD
The Associated Press

PAINESVILLE, Ohio — A judge today sentenced a religious cult leader to death for killing a family of five last year on a farm.

Jeffrey Lundgren, 40, showed no emotion as he was led from the courtroom after Judge Martin O. Parks accepted the jury's recommendation.

Lundgren, 40, was convicted Aug. 29 of five counts of aggravated murder and five counts of kidnapping in the deaths of Dennis and Cheryl Avery and their three children. They were bound, gagged and shot one at a time and then buried in a common grave in a barn.

Parks set an execution date of April 17, 1991, exactly two years after the slayings. But mandatory appeals likely would delay execution beyond that date. Ohio has not executed anyone since 1963, but the state has 100 people on death row.

A Lake County Common Pleas Court jury recommended Thursday that Parks issue the death sentence. The jury's other choice was life in prison without parole for 20 or 30 years.

Lundgren, his wife and son were among 13 cult members arrested early this year in the April 1989 slayings at a rented farm in Kirkland, 30 miles east of Cleveland.

During his trial, Lundgren's attorney admitted Lundgren shot the Aversys.

And at a sentencing hearing Wednesday, Lundgren had told the jury in a five-hour outburst statement that he was a prophet of God.

Country music star Reba McEntire says she felt honored to spend 20 minutes with President Bush at the White House and get a tour of the living quarters from first lady Barbara Bush.

The Bushes, who are country music fans, invited McEntire to visit while she was in Washington Sept. 11 for radio and television appearances. At the time, Bush was working on his nationally televised speech about Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

"Considering all the president has on his mind, it was very gracious of them to take the time to make us feel right at home," McEntire said Thursday as she reflected on the visit.

McEntire was the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year from 1984 through 1987. Her hit records include "Whoever's in New England" and "Walk On."

Actor Gary Coleman, famous for his part as the wise-cracking Arnold Jackson of the old sitcom "Diff'rent Strokes," is selling his Highlands Ranch house for $490,000, two years after he bought it.

No reason was given why Coleman has listed the home in the exclusive Falcon Hills neighborhood with Dove and Donna Evans, the same real estate agents who helped Coleman buy the house in 1988.

Coleman, 22, paid $470,000 for the 4,319-square-foot home.

In an interview last year, Coleman called the house his dream home, especially after he added 600 square feet to the basement to house his electric train set.

"I just love the house; there isn't one thing that I would change or move. They must have been thinking about me when they built this house," Coleman said at the time.

The home, styled after an English manor, features double-brick arches leading the way to the entrance, a curved stairwell and a kitchen with a hardwood floor.

Mayor David Dinkins told a group of clergy and children the tale of a petty thief reformed by tough love — himself.

Dinkins described how, as a child, he stole reflectors from a license plate to decorate a "skate-scooter," which he described as a two-by-four and a soapbox, with skates on either end.

He said a police officer "who happened to be an African-American, caught me because I was the slowest and the smallest."

The officer told his mother and grandmother, who were "crushed that their nice little boy could do this terrible thing."

He said they did not usually spank him, but this time "they took all my clothes off, stood me in the bathtub and beat me with straps."

"I have not stolen a reflector since," he said.

President Bush has accepted an invitation to become an honorary member of Britain's Royal and Ancient Golf Club.

The 236-year-old club at St. Andrews in southeast Scotland made the announcement Thursday.

Bush, who'll be the club's ninth honorary member, and his family have a long connection with golf.

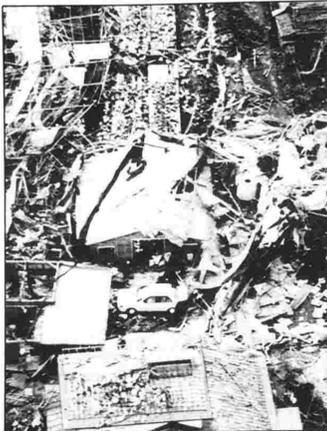

His grandfather, George Walker, a past president of the U.S. Golf Association, donated the Walker Cup, which American and British amateur players compete for every two years. His father, Prescott Bush, was also president of the USGA.

The other honorary members of the Royal and Ancient are Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II; British Open champions Kel Nagle, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Gene Sarazen, Peter Thomson and Roberto de Vicenzo.

Terry O'Ketty, the 22-year-old whose effort to keep his six brothers together became a made-for-TV movie, has fulfilled a promise he made to his dying mother: getting a high school equivalency diploma.

He graduated last weekend from the Gainesville-Hall County Adult Learning Center.

"I've always pushed education on my brothers, so I thought it was time that I gave them an example," he said. "My mother always wanted me to go to school. I was only in high school one year, so I had a lot of catching up to do."

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — About 300 police cleared striking workers from the government bus depot Friday, and tires smoldered in city streets from anti-government disturbances led by Sandinista unions.

Also Friday, the government, business and some unions met for a second day in talks aimed at rescuing the economy. Neither the Sandinista National Liberation Front nor the party's powerful labor unions took part, throwing into doubt the effectiveness of any accord.

The Sandinistas oppose large-scale layoffs, a part of President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's austerity plan.

The first day of talks, on Thursday, was marred by clashes between Sandinista militants and police. Vehicles belonging to diplomatic missions and government officials were damaged, and shots were fired. There were no arrests reported.

Union members set fire to tires at many intersections throughout

Managua. The fires smoldered Friday, blocking traffic.

At dawn Friday, about 300 police officers took control of the government bus depot, forcing out 40 Sandinista unionists who had shut down operations since Monday as part of a nationwide bus strike. There was no violence or arrests.

"I think that Nicaragua's friends throughout the world are asking themselves if the objective of the Sandinista Front is a democratic opposition or the destruction of Nicaragua's economy," British Ambassador William Marsden said.

Barricada, official newspaper of the Sandinista Front, called the talks "a show" and "a farce." The Sandinista Front and its labor unions say they will not take part in the talks if the government continues laying off workers.

The possibility rose of another strike such as the two that temporarily paralyzed the government earlier this year.

The Sandinista-controlled police have been criticized lately for allowing strikers and marchers much leeway.

Reduced logging advised

By SCOTT BONNER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A White House task force today recommended a 20 percent reduction in Northwest logging to help save the northern spotted owl from extinction, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan and Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yuster announced.

A White House source said President Bush is prepared to accept the recommendations as a balance between protection of the threatened owl and the economic needs of the timber-dependent region.

"The decision was made by the task force. The president was informed of the decision and supports it," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Lujan and Yuster said the task force recommended that allowable harvests in Northwest national forests be cut from the 3.85 billion board feet Congress approved for this year to about 3 billion board feet in 1991.

The actual amount of timber cut would be closer to 3.2 billion board feet because of a carryover of 200 million that was approved for this year but will not be cut before the next fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Dems may delay cuts

By ALAN FRAM

WASHINGTON — Democratic congressional leaders will probably try to delay severe cuts in federal spending beyond the Oct. 1 Gramm-Rudman deadline while budget negotiations continue, officials said Friday.

But Republicans said they might oppose the effort in an attempt to leave the bargainers under intensifying pressure to work out a $500 billion, five-year package to cut the deficit.

Under the plan Democrats are likely to pursue, Congress would consider legislation next week postponing the Gramm-Rudman spending slashes until Oct. 20, said officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity. The measure would finance the government through that date at levels no higher than current spending.

The proposal to delay the Gramm-Rudman deadline is becoming the focus of planning for congressional leaders because the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

ACLU defends Hitler shirt

EAST ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union said Friday a high school student's freedom of speech rights were violated when he was ordered to remove a T-shirt with "Adolf Hitler European Tour 1939-1945" emblazoned on it.

"This is definitely a free speech issue," said David Jampol, an ACLU attorney representing the student, Anthony Traficante.

When Traficante, 17, a senior at East Islip High School on New York's Long Island, wore the T-shirt to school Sept. 7, school administrators told him to take it off or face suspension.

Traficante said he had not meant to offend anyone and that school officials missed the shirt's black humor. He changed shirts, but he

That package would probably include about $2 billion to cover some of the expenses of U.S. military forces in the Middle East, the officials said. Placing those funds in the measure would make it difficult for many lawmakers to vote against it.

At the White House, meanwhile, President Bush said he would take no stand on a suggestion by Senate Republican leader Bob Dole that Bush's capital gains tax cut proposal be considered separately from a deficit-reduction package.

"We're down to the wire ..." Bush said. "I'm not endorsing the Dole suggestion, nor would it be appropriate for me to criticize it."

The proposal to delay the Gramm-Rudman deadline is becoming the focus of planning for congressional leaders because the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

also called the ACLU to take up his case.

"We hope we will be able to get the school district to take a more reasonable position," said Jampol. "If they don't, we are prepared to take this to litigation."

East Islip High School Principal Clyde Payne said at the time that the shirt is anti-Semitic and was not worn in jest. Neither he nor other school district representatives were available for comment Friday because of the Jewish new year, Rosh Hashana.

Jampol said he will be sending copies of Supreme Court cases on freedom of speech to the school district's lawyer "so he can talk to the school board about this issue."

Jampol said he hopes to contact the school attorney on Monday or Tuesday.

Missile damage may cost U.S.

By DONNA CASSATA

WASHINGTON — When the United States invaded Panama last December, forces loyal to dictator Manuel Noriega took refuge in a hangar operated by a subsidiary of North American Van Lines.

When small weapons failed to shake the Panamanians loose, missiles were called in, destroying the hangar on the U.S.-operated Albrook Air Station.

The cost to the company: $357,000.

The United States is not liable for private claims for combat damages, but the company, based in Fort Wayne, Ind., may be reimbursed after all.

Thanks to the Indiana delegation and several House Democrats, the reimbursement is included in both the Senate- and the House-passed versions of the 1991 defense bill.

Granted, $357,000 isn't much in a bill that would allow the spending of $283 billion. But the provision brought down the ire of House Republicans, who say it's little more than pork-barrel politics.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., questioned why the company was more deserving than Xerox Corp., Coca-Cola or Eastern Airlines, all of which also suffered losses in Panama.

10 dead after storm

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Tropical Storm Ed tore through central Vietnam with torrential rains this week, killing at least 10 people and leaving thousands homeless, the official Vietnam News Agency said Friday.

The report said nine people were missing after the storm hit the provinces of Quang Nam-Da Nang,

"Equity dictates that we not just deal with the problem of one company who happened to knock on Congress' door; equity dictates that we address this issue in a manner which treats all eligible claimants in an equitable manner," Hopkins said during this week's debate on the bill.

But Rep. Jill Long, D-Ind., whose district includes Fort Wayne, argued that an "act of war" clause in the company's insurance policy prevented North American from collecting. Moreover, she said, the Army had rejected the company's claim.

"It is a great injustice that the United States is sending millions of dollars to Panama to help restore the country ... while a United States-owned firm ... cannot even get reimbursement for damages which resulted from U.S. military action on a U.S. military installation," Long told the chamber.

Another Hoosier Democrat, Rep. Frank McCloskey, said the company has served military personnel being transferred to and from Panamanian bases for 27 years.

"Save this Hoosier company," McCloskey told his colleagues in remarks he later had deleted from the official transcript of the day's proceedings in the Congressional Record.

Quang Tri, Thua Thien-Hue and Quang Binh.

The rain damaged tens of thousands of acres of crops and submerged or badly damaged more than 100,000 houses, said the report, which was seen in Bangkok. More than 160 boats were sunk off the port of Da Nang.

David Souter's supreme agenda

By WALTER R. MEARS
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sometimes the obvious, simple question is the tough one. Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter is a judge who studies the precedents, so he was ready when asked why he wants the job he's about to get.

Souter told his confirmation hearing that he loves the judiciary, wants no calling but to be a judge, and would seek on the high court to serve as a steward of the Constitution.

He said it is the greatest responsibility a judge can undertake, "to join with eight other people to make the promises of the Constitution a reality for our time and to preserve that Constitution for the generations that will follow us after we are gone from here."

That's an unassailable if vague answer to a question that would seem elementary for any nominee or office-seeker. It isn't always answered effectively.

When Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was asked why he wanted to be president as he prepared to run in 1980, his awkward, rambling attempt to answer became a campaign liability.

Robert H. Bork told the contentious Senate hearing on his doomed nomination to the Supreme Court that service there would be "an intellectual feast." He also said he wanted to contribute to maintaining constitutional government as he saw it.

Bork, of course, had spelled out the way he saw it, in lectures, writings, and rulings as a federal appeals judge that established positions on most major constitutional issues of the times.

Souter has not. Three days of questioning by the Senate Judiciary Committee didn't change that. Souter talked about himself, about his experiences, about his judicial philosophy, about dozens of decisions and precedents. But he did not telegraph to skeptical liberals or to newly wary conservatives just where he would stand on the questions awaiting the closely divided court — matters including abortion, civil rights and criminal justice.

Souter foreclosed answers to the abortion question early in the process, declining to discuss the court's 1973 ruling or to express his personal opinion on abortion.

At the same time, he said that he believes the 14th Amendment to the Constitution "does recognize and does protect an unenumerated right of privacy." That position doesn't fit the conservative agenda.

The ruling that legalized abortions was based on the right to privacy, something Bork had said was invented by the court. That was one contentious point among many at the 1987 hearings on his court nomination. Bork is a formidable legal scholar. He showed it in disputing critics and, at times, questioners.

Souter was said to have reviewed the Bork hearings and to have watched videotapes of some points in that testimony as he prepared for his own confirmation hearings.

Souter was no less the scholar; some of his answers came complete with footnotes as he cited legal history, Supreme Court cases and provisions of the Constitution.

At the same time, he sought to dispel the notion that a 51-year-old bachelor who still lives in his boyhood home in a small New Hampshire town — he remarked, rather proudly, that "I still have a black and white TV" — is isolated from everyday concerns, remote, a theorist rather than a judge who can understand real world concerns.

He worked at countering that impression from the beginning, saying that his first lesson as a judge was that "at the end of our task, some human being is going to be affected, some human life is going to be changed in some way by what we do."

The ABCs of school choice

RED LAKE FALLS, Minn. — Whenever the concept of school choice is discussed, Minnesota invariably is cited as the pioneer in allowing parental selection of children's schools on a statewide basis.

Indeed, the seductive notion of allowing every youngster to pick any school in Minnesota to attend has been a public relations triumph noted and even copied in other states. But a close examination of what has occurred here in recent years suggests that "open enrollment" has been oversold by its zealous promoters.

In rural areas, geography decreases the likelihood that school choice will be used," says Herbert Benz, school superintendent in Rosau, where only five of the 1,280 students participate in the school choice program.

"Kids and their parents basically want to attend school in the district where they live," adds Richard Larsen, school superintendent in Crookston.

Although Minnesota formally initiated its open enrollment program in 1988, Larsen says, "we've always had informal exchange agreements with adjoining school districts" to serve families who may live closest to a school in another jurisdiction or who need the specialized resources that only some schools provide.

In the Twin Cities, home-to-school commutes are much shorter. But the adults in many poor families cannot afford the autos needed to drive either themselves to and from work or their children to and from out-of-district schools.

"There is no question that the lack of transportation can have a chilling effect on school choice," says David Bennett, school superintendent in St. Paul. "Low income parents without their own transportation often 'choose' neighborhood schools out of necessity," adds a St. Paul parent.

Moreover, in Hennepin County, where Minneapolis is located, and adjacent Ramsey County, where St.

Paul is situated, no inter-district student transfers are being approved by school officials if they threaten to adversely affect a delicately balanced racial desegregation program.

When Cavazos came to Minnesota last year to offer lavish praise of the open enrollment program, he was exposed to mixed reviews of the school choice concept including criticism from some parents, teachers and administrators.

Figures for the new school year are not yet available, but in the 1989-90 academic year, only 3,200 of the state's 721,000 elementary and secondary school students — less than 0.5 percent — elected to participate in the open enrollment initiative.

FDIC files $200m lawsuit against Bush

By MARY GORDON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators filed a $200 million suit against President Bush's son Neil and other officers of the failed Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association on Friday, accusing them of "gross negligence" contributing to the institution's collapse.

The civil suit, filed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in U.S. District Court in Denver, said the defendants "repeatedly breached their duties" to the Denver-based institution and its depositors.

It said Bush and the other outside directors failed to properly monitor the affairs of Silverado and the conduct of its senior management.

"Our conclusion is that Silverado was the victim of sophisticated schemes and abuses by insiders and of gross negligence by its directors and outside professionals," FDIC Senior Deputy General Counsel Douglas H. Jones said in a statement.

"We are seeking in this case to recover every available dollar for the federal deposit insurance funds and the American taxpayers," Jones said.

Bush, 35, served from August 1985 to August 1988 on the board of Silverado, which was seized by regulators on Dec. 9, 1988. The failure cost taxpayers an estimated $1 billion.

Bush and his attorneys were not immediately available for comment. He has denied any wrongdoing concerning Silverado in a separate conflict-of-interest case brought against him by the Office of Thrift Supervision.

The FDIC said improper loans and investments were made by Silverado's officers and approved by its directors. Many of the transactions violated federal regulations, it said.

"Silverado's lending and investment practices during this period were unsafe and unsound and were designed to achieve the appearance of growth at the expense of the long-term health" of the institution, said the brief filed by the FDIC.

In addition to Bush, former Silverado officials named as defendants were: Michael Wise, chairman and chief executive officer; Robert Lewis, chief financial officer; Richard Vandapool, chief operating officer; Russell Murray, executive vice president; W. James Metz, who owned 88 percent of Silverado's stock, and board members Florian Barth, Richard Bunchman, Diane Ingels, Marjorie Page and Richard Vikous.

The suit also accuses Wise, Lewis and Metz of "unjust enrichment."

The FDIC also named Silverado's lawyers as defendants. They are the firm of Sherman & Howard of Denver, general counsel to Silverado from 1984 to 1988, and Ronald Jacobs, a partner in the law firm who served on the board of the institution's holding company.

The law firm and its attorneys placed "the interests of a few insiders over those of the institution they were retained to protect," the FDIC said in a statement.

Separately, Bush faces a public hearing in Denver starting next Tuesday on thrift regulators' charges of conflict of interest.

The Office of Thrift Supervision is seeking an order against Bush that effectively could bar him from working for a bank or a savings and loan. The thrift agency contends that Bush failed to adequately disclose to Silverado his business relationships with developers Kenneth M. Good and Bill L. Walters, two big borrowers from the institution who defaulted on their loans.

The FDIC lawsuit will have no effect on the Office of Thrift Supervision's proceeding. OTS spokesman Tom Mason said Friday.

A final decision in the OTS case isn't due until next April, after Administrative Law Judge Daniel J. Davidson makes a recommendation to OTS Director Timothy Ryan.

Silverado was closed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which was dismantled by last year's S&L legislation. The FDIC inherited many of that agency's responsibilities.

On Wall Street, it's Year of the Bear

Stock prices at lowest levels of the year

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The bears look like runaway winners as the stock market heads into the homestretch of 1990. With the arrival of autumn on Wall Street, stock prices are hovering close to their lowest levels of the year.

Fears abound of war in the Persian Gulf, recession in the domestic economy, and possible new shocks to a worldwide banking and financial system that seems ill prepared to absorb them.

Chairman Alan Greenspan of the Federal Reserve has just told Congress that his options are limited in seeking to stimulate the economy, given inflationary pressures that have been aggravated by soaring oil prices.

More than a year after profits of corporate America went into a slump, Wall Street analysts are still busy lowering their earnings projections for the last part of this year and the early stages of 1991.

"The probability of recession mounts, yet stocks remain overvalued," says Martin Zweig, a prominent forecaster, in the new issue of his advisory letter The Zweig Forecast.

"The major risk is that if recession bites, the mountain of debt in the economy will unwind."

For most of the time since early August, Wall Streeters have been preoccupied with the tensions in the Middle East arising from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, and the subsequent upsurge in world oil prices. But other concerns have crept into the picture — fears of more bad news from the beleaguered banking industry.

Analysis

and strains on the budgets of both the federal and some state and local governments.

Amid all that gloom, a good many analysts still see reasons for optimism about the intermediate to long-term outlook for stocks and bonds.

Most of the problems confronting the markets are characteristic of the business cycle after a prolonged expansion, they say, and are obscuring important long-term growth opportunities such as the opening up of much of Eastern Europe and Asia to capitalism.

"You can make a very bullish case for the rest of this decade," contends Harold Mackinnon at Fleet-Norstar Financial Group in Providence, R.I.

Such reassurances didn't carry much weight with traders in the past week, however. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 51.73 points to 2,512.38.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 3.12 to 171.03; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 12.17 to 362.25, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was Volume on the Big Board averaged 149.08 million shares a day, against 174.15 million the week before.

Some observers believe the Federal Reserve's dilemma will be resolved, possibly in the not-too-distant future, as the dangers posed by credit problems and slumping economic conditions become clearer.

"The Federal Reserve has every reason to ease monetary policy and bring interest rates lower," maintain analysts at the investment management firm of Wright Investors' Service.

Initially, following such a move toward easing, it is possible that bond-market investors may, somewhat perversely, push bond yields higher for fear of the inflationary implications of the Fed's easing. But later this year or early next year a bull-market rally in bonds is expected to get under way.

"If the present weakness in employment, production and incomes persists, inflation pressures will move down on the temporary boost from higher oil prices moves through the system," Wright argues.

"Recession is by far a greater threat to the U.S. economy than inflation."

Santana wants spirit of oneness

By MARY CAMPBELL
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — With his new album, "Spirits Dancing in the Flesh," Carlos Santana wanted the same feeling of "oneness" experienced at the finale of the Olympic games.

Every four years at the Olympics, you see people from all walks of life joining hands, dancing, laughing together, crying. I wanted to do the kind of album to create that spirit every day," he said in an interview at Columbia Records, where he has been since his first album in 1969.

As word spreads that Santana's in the building, it seems that every employee comes by to say hello and ask for an autograph.

The first video, for "Peace on Earth . . . Mother Earth . . . Third Stone from the Sun," he says, "shows the Earth in the womb and we are the babies. Forget about national anthems, flags and passports and get into one-family consciousness. That turns me on."

"The first part of that piece was composed by Jimi Hendrix, the second by me and the third by Jimi Hendrix."

"I met Hendrix at a concert. He mentioned about joining my band. Musically, he knew the band was embracing something different than show business, that he was being put into. We were just kids, but he knew. I think he had enough of show business. He wanted to seriously play some music."

Tramaine Hawkins, for whom Santana predicts big things, and Bobby Womack sing on "Spirits Dancing in the Flesh." Santana plays guitar.

This is the last album under his present Columbia contract and his thoughts are full of what he wants in a new contract — the chance to advise the company about non-mainstream records. "I don't want a big juicy contract with a lot of money. I would like to create a new branch in the company that deals with people in a different way than the predictable." Only college radio is open to experimenting with music programming, says the man of whom it has been declared, "He IS Latin rock."

"This company needs a branch of rebels and renegades," he says. "I want to work with them. There are a lot of bands not that predictable, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Tracy Chapman, Bonnie Raitt, John Lee Hooker. Turn on the radio, it is very insulting. A lot of people don't want the same formula of canned soup. They want the real gumbo."

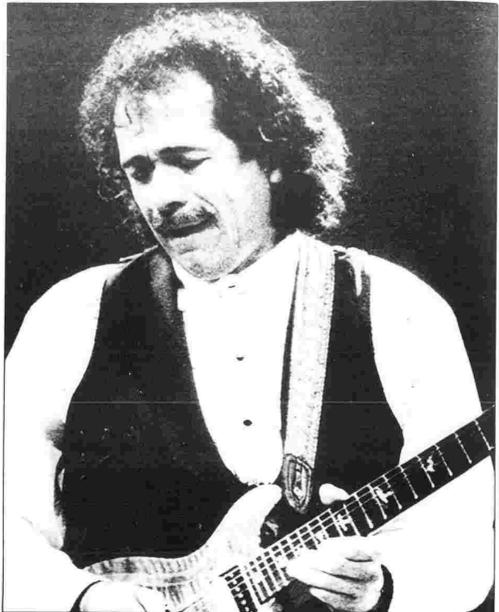

"I would like to bring my first-hand experiences with the streets. I'm trying for music you and I can be revitalized from spiritually. A lot of people aren't dealing with the heart. 2 Live Crew and Madonna have to do everything controversial to sell something. I'm a lover. My sound penetrates deeper than a surgeon's knife because I go all the way to your subconscious."

"I'm not Beethoven or Mozart but my music is going to last longer than the people who service my records. They're like generals who make phone calls; I'm in the trenches every day. I have more first-hand experience with people's needs than these people. I have to deal every day to make sure nobody walks out on my show after two hours. They stay."

"I see children and grandparents, hip and square, black and white. People tell me how my music consciously or unconsciously helped them find their own identity in this world."

Outspoken and never at a loss for words, Santana says that Columbia Records would like him to repeat "Black Magic Woman" of 1970. "They treat you as a legend and don't put your new records in the stores. Every time I go on the road for the last five years, it's been sold out. People are waiting for the new thing we're going to play."

Santana found it frustrating to take "The Healer," which he composed, and the soundtrack to "La Bamba" to Columbia and have them rejected. "La Bamba" came out on Warner Bros. and "The Healer" on Chameleon Records. "I did a jazz album with Wayne Shorter two years ago. They haven't put it out."

"He hasn't done music for a film since "La Bamba." "All the scripts they send me are demeaning to women. If I can't play music in front of my four sisters, Mom, wife and daughters, I won't play it. Thank God I'm in a position where I don't need to do it," Santana said.

"Musicians respect me. I have a lot of confidence and peace of mind because of what I do and how I do it. I feel confident about my future. Very few bands can go to Jerusalem and make Hebrews and Palestinians dance together or play at San Quentin and see blacks, Latinos and whites dancing together. For the duration of the concert they forget about their hate. That's what my band does."

Santana is touring the United States. Next year he plans to go to South Africa and South America. "I promised my wife some domestic rhythm time. The Lord gave us a daughter eight months ago. I need to watch her grow. I've tried all my life to balance my life. Salvador is 7, Estella 5 and Angelica Faith 8 months. I'm very grateful."

Santana left Mexico for San Francisco at 14, and has only played in his native country twice. "Next March I'm invited by the president of Mexico to perform in Mexico City. I'm banned from Mexico. All I said was they have to stop imitating the worst of American music and get into their own thing."

"In 1973, they let me play for rich people in a small ballroom. I wanted to play in a coliseum and have a ceiling on ticket prices. They said I couldn't because I play rock 'n' roll. In 1988, they let me play in a town kind of like Fresno (Calif.)."

"Now the president says I'm an international musician and invited me to come to Mexico through the front door, with Linda Ronstadt and Los Lobos. If we do seven concerts, I want the money from three to stay in San Diego and collect interest and the money to go to a hospital in Mexico to take care of children."

How to get a dose of town history

Historic tour, museum offered

By DIANNA M. TALBOT
Herald Features Editor

MANCHESTER — Herbert Bengtson thinks that everyone, especially children, should be familiar with the history of the town they live in.

"No matter where you live," the town historian says, "there is some history. Someone had to come in and start a town."

Bengtson, a 1931 graduate of Manchester High School and lifelong town resident, has taken a vested interest in preserving and promoting the history of Manchester. He is acquisitions chairman for the Manchester Historical Society and provides commentary during bus tours of historic Manchester.

The tours are sponsored by the historical society and Arbors at Hop Brook retirement community, which supplies a bus for transportation. They feature stops at over 30 historic locations, including spots where Indian villages and paper and silk mills used to be. Cost is $5 per person.

The tours have not attracted enough public attention to be scheduled regularly, Bengtson says. They are held only about four times per year. The historical society usually waits until between 13 and 17 people are registered as "interested" in a tour before setting a tour date.

The society's next bus tour is Tuesday, Oct. 2. It will begin with a coffee hour at the Arbors from 9 to 10 a.m., followed by a riding tour of Manchester.

So far, only four of 18 available seats have been filled, according to Bengtson. Anyone interested should call the Arbors at 647-9343.

Bengtson says people can gain a sense of personal satisfaction from knowing how the roots of their communities were formed.

Richard "Dick" Egan, president of the Manchester Historical Society, agrees.

"Knowing the history of one's town provides 'a point of orientation, a sense of community and education,'" he said.

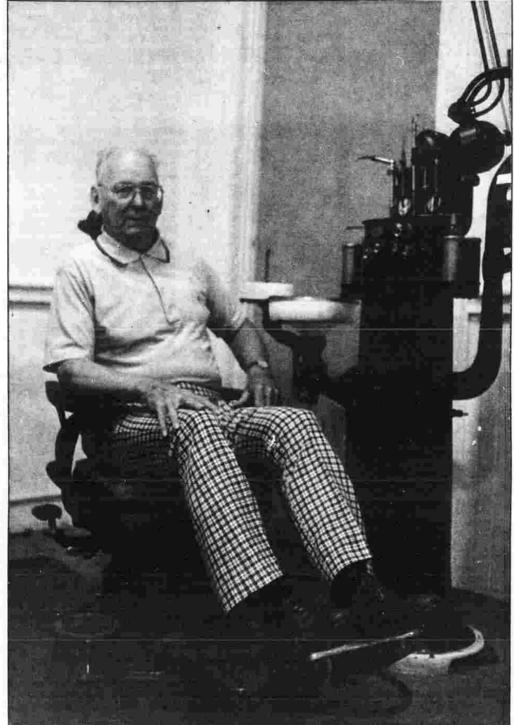

Many Manchester residents mistakenly think only of the Cheney Brothers' silk mills when they think about Manchester's history, Egan said. Besides silk mills, the town was built up with the help of workers in glass factories, wool, cotton and paper mills and in other industries.

In addition to the bus tours, residents can get a dose of town history by visiting the Manchester Historical Museum, 126 Cedar St., which exhibits many historical items, including photographs and displays of clothing, furniture and business and farm tools.

Currently, the museum is organizing a new exhibit: a local "Sports Hall of Fame." The exhibit will feature mainly photographs of local high school sports players, Bengtson said.

The museum has no regular hours due to lack of staff. Anyone wishing to go inside the museum should contact Bengtson (649-2502) and he will arrange for a visit. Admission is $1 per person.

The historical society also operates and manages the Cheney Homestead at 106 Hartford Road. Built in the 1970s, the homestead was the home where the Cheneys were born and raised in. Hours are Thursday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is $1.

FOCUS/Home Plumbing system precautions

By POPULAR MECHANICS

If you are shutting down a summer home, here are some plumbing-system precautions you should take.

Shut off the power to the water heater. Then, using a garden hose, drain the water heater and the pressure tank. In each case, close the hose bibs when the tanks are completely drained.

Because plumbing codes prohibit any unnecessary fresh water piping traps, you should be able to drain your system by draining your water heater and opening the meter unions or pressure tank hose bib. Open all upper level faucets and fixtures. You can expect gravity to do most of the work for you, especially if you have basement fixtures.

But even well plumbed homes sometimes have one or two small piping traps, so you should also force the system with compressed air. This can be done with an air tank, a blow gun attachment — both are rental items — and a damp rag. Begin by closing all the faucets and valves, except the lowestmost drain points. Then proceed to the faucet farthest away from the drain point and open just the cold side of the faucet. Then remove the spout erator and insert the blow gun attachment into the spout and wrap the damp rag tightly around the joint. Release several short bursts of air. Then, shut off the cold side and repeat the procedure on the hot side. When you've finished, close all faucets, valves and unions.

If your fresh water supply piping is made of copper or plastic, sediment will not be a problem. If it's made of galvanized iron, flakes of rust will float free when the system is recharged. When recharging a galvanized system, simply remove the aerators from all faucets and purge the system through those and other restricted outlets, such as tub spouts and sillcocks. When the water runs clear, replace the aerators and flush the toilet several times. If you find the toilet does not shut off completely, stop the water at the shutoff valve and remove the diaphragm cover from the ballcock. Pick out any rust particles with tweezers.

If your plumbing system steps down and then up again, forming a long length of trapped water, you won't be able to blow enough water from it to prevent a freeze from splitting the pipe. In most cases, cutting a union at the lowest point in the trap will be your best alternative. Unions for copper piping are the easiest to install. All you'll need to do is cut about 1/2 inch from the line and solder the two halves of the union in place. Steel piping (usually called iron piping) will require you to first cut the pipe with a hacksaw near the closest fitting. Then remove the short length that goes into the fitting and thread the end of the longer pipe. Now install a new threaded nipple. If your piping is made of plastic, cut out a section of pipe and glue a tee and male adapter into the trapped line. Then thread a cap onto the adapter.

The portion of the service line buried between your public water main (or private well) and your home will be protected by the soil that covers it. Any piping extending from your basement wall to your meter or pressure tank will need protection, however.

In the case of a service line connected to a public main, you'll have two choices. The first and best solution is to have your service shut off near the street. If the valve between your sidewalk and street is accessible and in good shape, a city worker or plumber should be able to turn it off in a few minutes with a long street key. If your meter is buried in an outdoor meter pit, the job is even easier. In either case, you can then drain the service line from inside your home.

Homes: Questions and answers

By POPULAR MECHANICS

QUESTION: I have a chronic problem with cracking and peeling paint on the inside of windows and sills. How can I reduce the need to paint so frequently?

ANSWER: Many factors can contribute to paint failure on interior surfaces around windows. When windows are leaky, paint is subjected to damage from moisture. The tendency of moisture inside the house to evaporate through points of least resistance, like windows, causes extreme dryness on the surfaces. Installing storm windows, caulking windows tightly and installing window shades can reduce such weathering.

Paint can also fail when it's applied to a surface that's too glossy or dirty. It's wise to knock off the sheen on existing paint before repainting. High infiltration of dirt and dust makes it a must to pay careful attention to cleaning surfaces during preparation. Lab data indicate latex polymers bond better than oil-based paints and that latex is chemically more stable when dry.

QUESTION: I want to make the correct mix of concrete for replacing a sidewalk section, but am confused by instructions that say, "mix so many parts of cement with so many parts of sand," etc. Are the parts determined by weight or volume?

ANSWER: The correct ratio of sand, cement and aggregate differs according to the way the concrete is to be used. For a sidewalk slab, the classic 1:2:3 mix is best. Ingredients are measured by volume. One bag of cement equals 1 cubic foot. Add 2 cubic feet of sand and 3 cubic feet of coarse aggregate to one bag of cement to make 4 cubic feet of concrete. Use 5 to 6 gallons of water in the mixture. Add water slowly, however, since the sand may already be wet. The consistency is right when a handful can be compacted into a ball.

QUESTION: I built a silt house that is 15 feet off the ground. I put down 3/4-inch-thick tongue-and-groove plywood floor over 2-by-12 floor joists and covered it with carpeting. The floor now squeaks in several places. How can I fix it?

ANSWER: The type of floor you have is called a single-floor system. It was developed by the plywood industry and can be used in place of the standard floor, which consists of two panels (subfloor and underlayment).

The squeaking is caused by the floor panels rubbing against one another or against the framing. It's a fairly common condition and usually results from the loosening of some of the nails holding down the subfloor because of shrinkage or warpage of the framing. This generally occurs when smooth shank nails are used to fasten the subfloor rather than ring-shank or spiral-shank nails, which are less likely to pull loose. It's also possible not enough nails were used to fasten the floor to the joists. In that case, the squeaking should be reduced by reaming the loose sections.

According to the American Plywood Association, you should use 6d ring-shank or spiral-thread nails. Also, the nails should be spaced 6 inches on center at the panels' edges (where panels butt each other), and 10 inches on center at intermediate joints.

Select plants to ensure color

By EARL ARONSON

As trees don their autumn foliage colors, you will notice that some trees, especially maples, are brighter on one side than on another. This is due largely to varying light.

Often, the brightest colors develop on the side of the tree most exposed to afternoon sun, where leaves have a higher sugar content and thus produce more brilliant pigments than do leaves on the shady side. The warmer daytime temperatures on the sunny side can speed the entire process of fall coloration on one side. Shade leaves will be less brilliant than sun leaves.

Another common factor in promoting development of fall colors is cooler air, particularly at night. Often, the earliest — and sometimes the best — color appears in low spots, where proper temperatures for trapping sugars in leaves occur earlier.

You can select plants to ensure good autumn color and set them in a proper location. A plant growing in a sunny spot in the woods or in a nursery may not be as bright if transplanted to a shady, poor location. Some tree varieties have been developed that have dependable fall color. Among them are the red maples Autumn Flame, October Glory and Red Sunset. Water well if there isn't enough rainfall.

Although many red and orange displays are more spectacular, yellow is another favorite, especially when combined with red and orange. Trees that normally offer good yellow color include poplar, ginkgo, birch, redbud, Norway maples, hickory and yellowwood.

Yellow occurs in most of these plants regardless of weather conditions. In summer, you can't see the yellow because green pigment masks it. As days become shorter and the weather cooler, production of green pigment halts.

In dry years, leaves may turn brown almost as soon as they turn yellow. The result is poor yellow fall color.

Some trees, such as sweet gum, show variability in fall color. Some trees may produce only yellow, some may never develop any color but green until the leaves turn brown and drop.

Sugar maples, I am told, show good variability and, unless they are named varieties with a known fall color, fall selection is important to get the color desired.

The best reds are produced in red maples, sugar maples, sourwood, Bradford pear, red oak, scarlet oak and black gum. For the best reds, plants should be in a sunny spot where they can manufacture plenty of sugar.

Protect Bulbs
Most summer-flowering bulbs planted in spring should be dug up and stored before severe frost hits. Few can survive winter cold in the great outdoors. Plants in this category include dahlias, gladiolus, calladium, tuberous begonia, elephant ear, mum, tuberoses and other tender varieties.

Some tender bulbs store best at warm temperatures (50-60 degrees) and others at cooler temperatures (40-50 degrees).

Some bulbs, or tuberous roots, need higher storage humidity than others to prevent over-drying. A few need low humidity with good air circulation to prevent development of rot.

Among bulbs needing cool storage are gladiolus, dahlias, tuberous begonia and Mexican tiger flower. Those needing warmer temperatures include elephant ear, calladium, lily and Famosa lily.

If you can't dig up all your bulbs at one time, first remove those that grow near the soil surface, such as elephant ear and calladium. Those deeper in the soil, such as gladiolus and dahlias, can better stand frost if one develops early.

Gladiolus should be dug, and spread to dry in a warm place.

A rising star: Ray Liotta

By HILLET ITALIE The Associated Press

NEW YORK — At one time Ray Liotta would have been perfectly happy to just stay home.

His mother was the movie fan of the family. Liotta preferred sports. He went out for the senior play in high school only after quitting the basketball team because of a fight with his coach.

And when Liotta decided to study acting at the University of Miami, he wasn't doing it out of a compulsion to entertain or a need for artistic expression. He simply had nothing better to do.

"My parents wanted me to go to college and I didn't want to go," said Liotta, who stars with Robert De Niro and Joe Pesci in "GoodFellas."

"My parents then suggested I take a year off and find out what life's all about. I decided to go to the University of Miami and take drama so I wouldn't have to take a math class. And when I got there, I didn't want to do anything."

But he changed. Not right away. Liotta had no great desire to act immediately after graduating. But by 1986, when he hustled his way into a small, but memorable role in "Something Wild," the actor was hungry for work.

Now, after "Dominic and Eugene" and "Field of Dreams," the offers come to him. Liotta didn't have to beg for the starring role of "GoodFellas." He wanted the part and director Martin Scorsese wanted him. Even De Niro put in a good word.

The movie runs more than two hours and covers four decades. Liotta is in virtually every scene. "You have to have a certain amount of confidence to be an actor," Liotta said in an interview. "In this film, I had to show jealousy, rage, happiness, anger... everything was there. You want to take that challenge as an actor. It was pretty intense."

"I had 80 costume changes, one day's in the '50s, the next day's in the '60s. Emotionally, it was all different things. One day I'm sweet. Then the next day I'm cocked out of my mind. We'd span 20 years at one location."

"GoodFellas" is based on Nicholas Pileggi's best-selling novel, "Wiseguy." Liotta plays Henry Hill, a half-brother, half-Sicilian Brooklyn kid drawn to the fast-paced gangster life who eventually hooks up with mobsters De Niro and Pesci.

Off screen, Liotta had to fit in as well. De Niro and Scorsese have worked many times before, notably in "Raging Bull" and "Taxi Driver." Liotta, knowing this was his chance to establish himself as a major star, did his best to treat the film like just another job.

"These guys have made major, major movies. They're considered geniuses and brilliant and all that. I just approached it as a game, just telling a story, no big deal. I read the book about five years ago and thought, 'Geez, I could do this.'"

Liotta began acting in workshops shortly after graduating from college. He worked for three years on "Another World," appreciating the steady work and learning how to feel comfortable in front of a camera. But after appearing in the short-lived TV series "Casablanca" and "Our Family Honor," he struggled to find work.

Having nothing to do wasn't much fun anymore. When Liotta learned there was an opening for a violent ex-con in "Something Wild," he pushed hard, trying unsuccessfully to get an audition and finally calling on his friend, Melanie Griffith, the film's star.

"I said, 'Let me phone Melanie,' she was already cast. (Director Jonathan Demme was down to three guys and it was the final week of casting. She said, 'Great idea, I'll do that.' I wish she had thought of that before. I was just so angry about trying to get in and the part called for an angry guy. I went in angry and luckily it worked out."

Former Go-Go gets 'Tangled'

By HILLET ITALIE The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jane Wiedlin's group consciousness started at age 10 — in church.

"I was raised Catholic, but we went to this sort of hippy Catholic church," explained Wiedlin, the former Go-Go who has released her third solo album, "Tangled."

"The preacher was this young, hip, cute priest. We had this church band I was in. We'd sing the popular songs of the time. We'd sing 'Leaving on a Jet Plane' in church. We got away with bloody murder."

"That environment sort of nurtured people to be socially aware, and to try and be a good person. That group of people was trying to live out the Christian ethic, trying to help other people."

"She's craved community ever since, as a punk in Hollywood, as rhythm guitarist for the Go-Go's and as an active member of the animal rights movement. But she also takes time off to be alone, to write songs about peace and love and consider the challenge of making happy music in a sad world."

"I am somewhere in the middle," she said, dressed cheerfully at the EMI Records office in a purple sweatshirt and purple shorts, a purple headband wrapped around her jet black hair.

"I can really start thinking too much about everything, but on the other hand, you can't give up. You got to keep trying. I think life is full of small little joys that you have to grab onto."

Happiness is offered in three-minute bites on "Tangled." This is ear candy, but bitersweet, with fears of the future hidden under sunny harmonies. In "Flowers on the Bougainvillea," she worries "innocence gets crushed beneath the anger and desire, and everything that's pure and good gets caught in the crossfire."

"I wanted to write a song about war and not be so specific so that that it all could be about," she said. "I wanted it to be on all different levels, in war and relationships in general."

"It's not just the butters that get hurt, but the innocent victims as well. I'm kind of on the outside looking at the situation. I was thinking more about children, really. The picture in my head was of war and think of what gets decimated in the war, of soldiers and children and animals."

With the Go-Go's, Wiedlin was right in the middle, the one who left the band first and helped speed its breakup in 1985. She met the other members — Belinda Carlisle, Charlotte Caffey, Gina Schock and Kathy Valentine — in the late 1970s, in the Hollywood punk clubs where Wiedlin hung out as a teen-ager.

The Go-Go's, like the Beach Boys in the 1960s, presented fun as a way of life. "We Got the Beat" set the tone, a snappy update of the Beach Boys' "I Get Around" that captured the attitude of five young women who wrote their own songs and played their own instruments.

"But the breakup in 1985 was a nasty affair with name-calling and finger-pointing and rumors of drugs and emotional problems. Briefly, Wiedlin recalls, she was glad to get away."

"First there was the whole relief that everybody else's problems weren't my problems anymore," she said. "I had to deal with emotional problems with four people who were worse off than I was, basically."

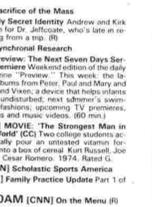

"On my first solo album (Jane Wiedlin), I had a song called 'Traveling Heart,' which was about feeling disloyal and I was writing about it because I was in love with two different men."

"But in the end, the song was about leaving the Go-Go's. Because I had terrible guilt feelings about leaving the band. Talk about leaving a deership ship. I really felt like a rat."

"Tangled" is a good way of summing up her solo career. "Jane Wiedlin," which included a song called "One Hundred Years of Solitude," sold poorly.

In Brief . . .

Missionary to be commissioned

Becky Bowman of South Windsor will be commissioned as a missionary to Japan at the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services Sunday at Emmanuel Lutheran Church, 69 Church St.

The Rev. Paul Goetting, assistant to the bishop, New England Synod, will lead the service. Janet Gay of the Division for Global Mission, will deliver a greeting.

Bowman, daughter of Barbara and Clint Bowman of South Windsor, is a 1983 graduate of South Windsor High School and holds a bachelor's degree in global politics and foreign languages from Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania. She has also studied at the University of Vienna. She has worked as a substitute teacher in the East Windsor school system.

Bowman will spend 30 months in Japan under the sponsorship of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. She expects to teach English and to assist in the Japanese Lutheran Church. She will leave Oct. 1.

Pioneer Girls to meet

All girls in grades 1-5 and their parents are invited to Pioneer Girl's "Pizza Party" Sunday, Sept. 30 from 6 to 7 p.m. at Presbyterian Church of Manchester, 43 Spruce St. Those planning to attend are asked to make reservations by Sept. 26. For more information, or to make reservations, call Jean Hammer, Pioneer Girls coordinator, 647-7591.

Pioneer Girls is a nationally organized club for girls which includes Bible explorations, singing, crafts, outing and club fun.

Workshop at St. Bridget's

"Footsteps Toward New Life" is a workshop for the divorced, separated and widowed to be held in St. Bridget's auditorium, 80 Main St., Sunday from 1 to 5:30 p.m. Anyone interested is welcome to attend. Dorothy Levesque will lead the workshop. The charge is $5 in advance or $6 at the door. For more information call 649-2117 or 644-4600.

Sisterhood plans city trip

The Sisterhood of Temple Beth Shalom, 400 E. Middle Tpke., is sponsoring a bus trip to New York City on Oct. 17. The bus will leave the parking lot of the Temple at 7:30 a.m. with a stop at Corbin's Corner, West Hartford, to pick up passengers.

The bus will return from Rockefeller Center, N.Y., at 7 p.m. The cost of the round trip is $20. For more information, or to make reservations, call 643-9325.

Author switches faith

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Lutheran Bishop William H. Lazareth wished Lutheran author Richard J. Neuhaus well in his switch to Roman Catholicism, but said such moves can slow ecumenical efforts.

While Lutherans and Roman Catholics are working for agreement on the gospel, "ecumenical gridlock results whenever this church consensus is replaced by personal conversions in either direction," he said.

Network marks second year

NEW YORK (AP) — The Vision Interfaith Satellite Network marked its second anniversary this week, adding 12 new series in drama, documentary, children's and call-in programs.

A new drama mini-series, "Trinity Playhouse," consists of five specials adapted from the work of novelist Graham Greene, produced especially for VISION.

Ethics scholar dies

NEWTON CENTRE, Mass. (AP) — Jan Cary Peck, 58, a noted social ethics scholar at Andover Newton Theological School and social-justice activist, died Sept. 10 after a four-month illness with cancer.

The war against drug abuse

MACC News

A War We Can Win! Continuing the church-school partnerships in the war against substance abuse, local SARP's (Substance Abuse Resource People) in our Manchester churches will meet Thursday evening, Sept. 27 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Federation Room at Center Congregational Church, 11 Center St.

The function of SARP teams in the local church is to act as enablers in their congregation, coordinating church educational programs and activities with the school programs. In addition to acting as a link between church and school, SARP and religions provide the explicit faith context for anti-drug abuse education.

Other functions provided by SARP to their faith community include providing resources to teachers, youth workers, parents and youth, initiating consciousness raising in the community for the prevention, recognition, intervention of drug abuse, and acting as an advocate in both their church and Manchester regarding a "no use policy" for young people of drugs, including alcohol, and seeking the development of a church position on the use of drugs by adults.

SARP also acts in the church to encourage the understanding of and support for persons and families struggling with alcoholism and drug addiction. Ten Manchester churches have already sent 22 members of their congregation to the five-hour training programs co-sponsored by MACC and the public school.

Churches and individuals interested in working with the SARP program are invited to contact the MACC office 649-0993 for more information or the pastor of their church.

Thank you: Richard Wingard who donated a "just the right size desk" for our Clothing Bank. The volunteers are delighted.

Thoughts

I recently heard a story of a man who was informed while sitting in church that his house was on fire. Responding to the news, he gathered his two teen-age boys and hurried to their truck. Their home was a new one, some fifty miles out in the country, the home they had dreamed for many years of building. The man's wife was home alone recuperating from a recent surgery, but fears for her safety were allayed when a returning fire truck informed him that she was safe.

Soon they came to a high spot, and saw in the distance the smoke

The present furor over obscenity in certain artistic works as funded by the National Endowment for the Arts has led to some careless reasoning. To claim that the First Amendment protects all speech and printed matter is patently false. We live with laws which prohibit libel, false and misleading advertising, incitement to riot, etc.

Defenders of these questionable art works now claim they make political statements and so should be unregulated. If political, the government has no business funding them, obscene or not. Clearly some "art" violates some contemporary community standards, necessarily determined by someone. Incidentally, Americans need to read Romans 1:18-21. Moreover, the NEA has the right, even obligation, to screen applications without being wilyly accused of censorship. If artists want federal subsidies, they must accept the regulations. If they cannot abide these restrictions, let them remove their hands from Uncle Sam's pockets.

Social Security

QUESTION: My 78-year-old mother is recovering from a stroke which weakened the right side of her body. Will Medicare pay for treatment needed to help her recover the strength in those areas?
ANSWER: Yes. Medical insurance will help pay for medically necessary outpatient physical therapy services if her doctor prescribes the service, and if the doctor or therapist sets up the plan of treatment and periodically reviews the plan. Your mother is responsible only for the part of the medical insurance fee that is not deductible which she has not met, the 20 percent coinsurance amount and any uncovered services. She also may receive services directly from an independently practicing, Medicare-approved physical or occupational therapist in his or her office or in her home if such treatment is prescribed by her doctor. The maximum amount that Medicare can pay in 1990 for this service is $600 a year subject to the Medicare deductible. Contact your Medicare carrier for more information.

QUESTION: I know there's a limit on how much you have to pay in Social Security taxes. What is it for this year?
ANSWER: The maximum amount is $51,300. After you earn this much, Social Security taxes will not be deducted from your salary. If you have more than one job, however, you may pay Social Security taxes on both your jobs.

Today In History

Woman's day at beach turns into big pain

DEAR ABBY: A couple of weeks ago I was at the beach on a beautiful Saturday afternoon. I spent most of the time in the water and sunning myself. I didn't have any sunscreen because I ran out and neglected to buy more. (It's also quite expensive.)

Well, I learned the hard way that the sun is much stronger between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. than the rest of the day, and also that the gradual loss of our ozone layer causes the sun to do more damage to the skin than ever before!

I burned my back so badly that I had to lie on my stomach for 4-1/2 days because the pain from sitting down, leaning back in a chair and bending my knees to walk was too excruciating! It's been almost two weeks, and I've already peeled three layers of skin in most places and am still having trouble walking, because the veins in one leg have begun to clot up from lying dormant for so many days.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

I'm glad I have health insurance to pay for the ultrasound that had to be done, not to mention the doctor visits and prescriptions. Unfortunately, I missed celebrating my wedding anniversary, because I couldn't move.

Abby, please urge your readers to learn from my misery.

FRIED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR FRIED: I'm sorry about your mishap — but I'm publishing your letter to warn others:

Readers, exposure to ultraviolet radiation is one of the leading contributing factors to two kinds of skin cancer — and most of it is attributable to tanning.

Dermatologists recommend the following measures:

- Minimize exposure to ultraviolet rays. The sun's effects are at a peak between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily. If outdoor activities cannot be avoided during these times, wear a hat and protective clothing. These precautions should be especially heeded by fair-skinned people, because they are at a high risk for skin cancer.
- Be aware that reflective surfaces such as sand, snow, ice and concrete can reflect from 5 percent to 50 percent of the sun's rays.
- If you are considering using a tanning salon, discuss it with a dermatologist first.
- Use a sunscreen of at least 15 SPF whenever the skin is to be exposed to the sun. Fair-skinned people should apply sunscreens more liberally.

Lower body heat to raise sperm count

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been married nine years without getting pregnant. My husband's urologist says his sperm count is extremely low because his body temperature is one degree too high, which slows sperm production. He puts ice on every night with no luck because his doctor says he requires constant cooling. Is there any other way to reduce body temperature?

DEAR READER: Ordinarily, the testicles are protected from excess body heat because they lie outside the body in the scrotum. Scrotal temperature is 2 to 3 degrees cooler than rectal temperature. This is why, in cases such as your husband's, fertility experts advise against using jockey briefs; this type of underwear may cause the testicles too close to the body, thereby inhibiting sperm formation.

In a recent medical report (New England Journal of Medicine, July 5, 1990), researchers in Texas showed that semen quality deteriorates during the heat of summer, leading to less fertility and a deficit of births in the spring. The investigators concluded that this phenomenon is caused by the effects of environmental heat on the production of sperm. However, other experts believe that factors other than heat — such as increased exposure to light during the summer — may play an important role that has yet to be identified.

Dr. Gott

One fact remains clear: Sperm production is definitely seasonal — and heat may be a consideration.

Perhaps your husband should talk to a urologist about ways to lower body heat into the normal range. For example, the use of Tylenol could reduce body temperature and, secondarily, testicular temperature. Also, your husband should wear loose-fitting garments, avoid hot environments and make every effort to encourage loss of body heat — by sleeping under fewer blankets, for example. The ice therapy seems a bit brutal to me and, as the doctor suggests, it isn't appropriate.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm plagued with bronchial congestion. I use inhalants, but they leave me with a dry mouth and irritated throat. Can you offer any suggestions?

DEAR READER: It's not clear from your question why you have bronchial congestion and why you use inhalants.

Asthmatics are often aided by inhaling aerosolized medication. However, the over-use of such therapy can cause dry mouth and throat irritation, as well as worsening of the asthma.

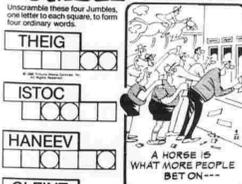

Bronchial congestion can also result from allergies (such as hay fever), air pollution and infection (chronic bronchitis). Rather than addressing the cause(s) of the congestion — for example, giving up cigarettes — some people prefer to use over-the-counter inhalers, such as Primatene Mist, in an attempt to solve the problem. This practice rarely succeeds.

I urge you to be examined by a doctor to discover the cause of your respiratory symptoms. If you are asthmatic, your physician might prescribe pills to help your congestion — and discontinue the inhalers — to give your throat and mouth a rest. If you are not asthmatic, the doctor will suggest more appropriate therapy.

Agassi gives U.S. tie in Davis Cup semifinal

By ROB GLOSTER The Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — Andre Agassi took the sting out of a charged-up Horst Skoff, then toyed with him for two sets, giving the United States a 1-1 tie with Austria after the first day of their Davis Cup semifinal Friday.

Thomas Muster had used his power to overcome the finesse of Michael Chang in the opening match as Austria took an early lead in the best-of-5 weekend series. Agassi won the last three points of a tie-breaker in the first set and captured 12 of the next 13 games as Skoff ran out of energy. The American needed less than two hours to complete his 7-6 (7-3), 6-0, 6-1 victory.

The fourth-ranked Agassi so dominated Skoff that the Austrian did not win a single point on his own serve in the second set.

"I think a lot of Skoff's tennis was on emotion that first set and I felt like it was just a question of getting through it," Agassi said. "If I had lost the first set I think he would have played like that for a little bit longer, but I'm not sure how long he would have kept that up."

In the other semifinal, Australia took a 2-0 lead over Argentina in Sydney, Australia. The semifinal winners will play for the title Nov. 30-Dec. 2.

Agassi and Skoff traded sharp passing shots and delicate drop shots in the tie-breaker until the eighth point, when Agassi recovered from a slip to take a 5-3 lead. He won the next point on Skoff's serve, then slammed an ace to finish the set.

"Andre was playing great tennis. I've never played somebody who could put me under pressure like that, never ever. There was nothing I could do," Skoff said. "If you don't put pressure on Agassi he makes you run like a dog."

With many of the 17,000 fans leaving the Prater soccer stadium in disgust, Skoff dropped the last 11 points of the match. "I picked up my game after the first set."

and he slowed down a little," Agassi said. "I don't know if he got fatigued, but he tried to hard the first set and had nothing to show for it."

In the opening match, 23 was the unlucky number for Chang as he lost 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 in an intermittent rain.

Muster improved his Davis Cup clay-court record to 23-0 by taking advantage of Chang's weak serve. The American was in trouble throughout the match, facing 23 break points overall.

Muster's victory sent red and white Austrian flags fluttering in the stands and brought fans, some with their faces painted red and white, to their feet. "It took me a while until I got used to everything," Muster said. "The last three sets I was playing some of my best tennis."

The Austrian left hander, ranked seventh in the world, did not lose his serve in the second or third sets and recorded four of his eight service breaks against Chang in those two sets.

"In the second and third sets he was able to dictate the points and I was having to play on the defensive," Chang said. The rain, which was not hard enough to stop play, did not seem to greatly affect either player.

In Sydney, Wally Masur defeated Martin Jaitt 3-6, 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-0, 6-2 in a three-hour struggle, giving Australia a 2-0 lead. Earlier, Pat Cash swept past Alberto Mancini 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 in the opening singles match on the grass center court at White City.

Masur was given a pep talk from his teammates during the break after the third set.

"The guys told Wally he had to get his feet moving," said Australian captain Neale Fraser. "He came out dancing. It was a fantastic effort."

In a world group qualifying match for the 1991 Davis Cup, Henri Leconte and Guy Forget gave France a 2-0 lead over Britain at London. Leconte beat Nick Brown 6-3, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2, and Forget downed Jeremy Bates 2-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-1.

Giants, Dolphins finally get to meet on field

By The Associated Press

The last time the New York Giants and Miami Dolphins met...

— Don Shula, now in his 21st season as Miami coach, was in his third year at the helm...

— Tim Robbie, now the Dolphins' president, was a 17-year-old ballboy...

— The Dolphins completed the NFL's first unbeaten, untied season, beating the Washington Redskins in the Super Bowl...

— The Giants' coach was Alex Webster and their quarterback was Norm Snead...

NFL Roundup

— The Giants were playing in Yankee Stadium... Sunday, the Giants and the Dolphins will meet for the first time... since December 1972.

Only one other NFL matchup has been dormant longer. The Philadelphia Eagles and Kansas City Chiefs last played each other in October 1972, and they're not scheduled to meet this year.

The renewal of the Giants-Dolphins "rivalry" at the Meadowlands — the meeting 18 years ago was the only one between the teams — is Sunday's only matchup of 2-0 teams.

The league's other four undefeated teams will be at home, with Cincinnati (2-0) playing New England (1-1), the Los Angeles Raiders (2-0) facing Pittsburgh (1-1), Chicago (2-0) meeting Minnesota (1-1) and San Francisco entertaining Atlanta (1-1).

In other Sunday games, it will be Dallas (1-1) at Washington (1-1), Indianapolis (0-2) at Houston (0-2), Kansas City (1-1) at Green Bay (1-1), Phoenix (1-1) at New Orleans (0-2), San Diego (0-2) at Cleveland (1-1), Philadelphia (0-2) at the Los Angeles Rams (1-1), Seattle (0-2) at Denver (10-1), and Detroit (1-1) at Tampa Bay (1-1).

Dolphins at Giants: The Dolphins, out of the playoffs since 1985, have been one of the league's early season surprises. This is their first 2-0 start since 1984.

Noted for their passing with Dan Marino, the Dolphins are an unaccustomed second in the league in rushing. Summie Smith leads NFL rushers with 215 yards.

The Giants, meanwhile, are first in the league in stopping the rush.

In their only previous meeting, Miami won 23-13. "We usually watch game film of our last meeting with a team in order to help prepare us for an opponent," Shula said. "I don't think watching film of our last meeting with the Giants will be too useful."

Patriots at Bengals: The last time these teams met, in 1988, the Bengals were 6-0, but the Patriots beat them 27-21, as Boomer Esiason threw five interceptions. Despite the loss, the Bengals wound up in the Super Bowl.

"I reminded our team that the last time we played New England... we were supposed to beat them," Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche said. "... We'd better not take them for granted."

Esiason has been intercepted five times in the Bengals' first two games this year, but the defense has bailed him out.

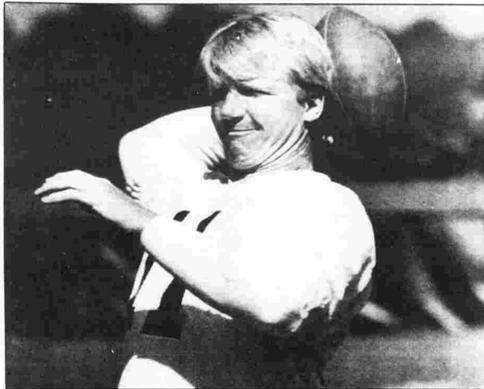

Steelers at Raiders: This should be a defensive struggle, since neither team has shown much ability to score. The Raiders' offense didn't score a touchdown for the first seven quarters of the season, and the Steelers' offense has yet to produce a touchdown.

But their defenses have been stingy. Each team has allowed only a total of 22 points, fewer in the AFC.

Vikings at Bears: The Bears, led by inspirational defensive tackle Dan Hampton, have surrendered only 13 points, the fewest in the league.

In the past two seasons, the Bears are 6-0 with Hampton in the lineup, 2-10 without him. "You can't put a value on his presence," said Trace Armstrong, who plays alongside Hampton in the Bears' dominant defensive line that also includes Richard Dent and William Perry.

"He's a leader and a motivator. He turns up the emotional notch on defense."

READY TO GO — Phil Simms and the New York Giants will take on an unfamiliar opponent when it takes on the Miami Dolphins on Sunday. It's their first meeting since 1972.

Falcons at 49ers: San Francisco will be without John Taylor, its leading receiver, against the penalty-plagued Falcons. Taylor, who has 13 catches for 235 yards, has a bruised back and will be replaced by Mike Sterraro.

The Falcons, under new coach Jerry Glavinski, have 22 penalties for 218 yards, both league highs.

Cowboys at Redskins: The Redskins will definitely be ready for this game. Last year, they were not prepared, and the Cowboys embarrassed them 13-3 at RFK Stadium — Dallas' only victory of the season.

"To lose to Dallas again this year, we can't really have that happen," wide receiver Gary Clark said. "Last year, we took them lightly and they stuffed us. This year, we're not taking them lightly."

Colts at Oilers: The Oilers, expected to be strong contenders in the AFC Central with their run-and-shoot offense, have been doing some foot-shooting, helping to account for their winless record.

Quarterback Warren Moon threw a career-tying four interceptions and his receivers dropped 10 passes in a 20-9 loss to Pittsburgh Sunday.

The Colts also are winless and Indianapolis fans already are booing rookie quarterback Jeff George. Coach Ron Meyer is stoutly defending George.

"He's going to be an outstanding talent as soon as we can get our scheme together and complement him," Meyer said.

Chiefs at Packers: The Packers' Magic Man — Dan Majkowski — will make his first start of the season, after a lengthy holdout. He will be facing one of the NFL's most aggressive defenses.

Last season, the Chiefs held the Packers to 208 yards total offense and limited Majkowski to 14 completions in 34 attempts with a fumble and an interception. Kansas City also had four sacks in the only game in which the Packers failed to score a touchdown in 1989.

Cardinals at Saints: This matches the two worst quarterbacks in the league — Phoenix's Timm Rosenbach and New Orleans' John Fourcade.

Rosenbach's quarterback efficiency rating is 35.7, about 10 points below the next lowest quarterback in the league. Fourcade's is 17.7.

Neither has thrown a touchdown pass. Rosenbach has been intercepted five times and Fourcade six.

Chargers at Browns: The Browns, with shortcomings on the offensive line, have struggled in their first two games. Their offense ranks 26th overall, including 24th in rushing and 27th in passing. Cleveland's defense also has been subpar, allowing the Jets 362 yards last week, including several big plays.

Eagles at Rams: Philadelphia, expected to contend with the Giants in the NFC East, are in danger of going 0-3, and Coach Buddy Ryan has been feeling the heat.

"I heard rumors there was some conspiracy to get rid of Coach Ryan," tight end Keith Jackson said after ending his 50-day holdout this week. "So, I figured that if I come in and we win, there is no way they can get rid of him."

AMERICAN HERO — Andre Agassi pulls on a stars and stripes T-shirt after winning Friday's second Davis Cup match against Austrian Horst Skoff. Agassi won 7-6, 6-0, 6-1, to tie the semifinal 1-1 ball between the two countries.

Preparation for '96 Games won't start just yet

By ROBERT BYRD The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The chief of Atlanta's Olympic effort said Friday there is much to be done to prepare for the 1996 Games — but not just yet.

"There seems to have been created... a great sense of urgency about how fast we need to make decisions, about how we should feel intimidated by the job ahead. We don't feel that at all," said Billy Payne, president of the Atlanta Organizing Committee after returning Thursday night from Tokyo, where the AOC was awarded the '96 Games.

The next official order of business will be the creation of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, the corporation which will actually operate the Games. But Payne said that probably won't happen until the end of the year, still well ahead of the International Olympic Committee's nine-month time limit.

"We feel that what we have achieved over the last several years is of such significance that we need to take a little time to enjoy it," he said.

The ACOG board, including representatives of the sporting, business, volunteer and government sectors, will be created by the AOC. That board then will appoint officers for the Games — presumably including Payne, who says he would like to stay on — and the AOC will technically cease to exist.

Payne said the only matter of any urgency appears to be the formalization of Atlanta's participation in The Olympic Program, a marketing venture which sells sponsorship rights to the Olympic name and logo for a four-year period.

Atlanta will share in that revenue with Lillehammer, Norway, the site of the 1994 Winter Olympics, "and they need it sooner than we need it," Payne said. "There is some sense... we need to get on with that."

Also, "around the first of the year," the Atlanta committee will begin negotiating contracts for the official Olympic cars, air travel, banking services and such, Payne said.

For the first time, the Atlanta committee hopes to negotiate those deals in a joint marketing agreement with the United States Olympic Committee — the permanent U.S. Olympic agency — to prevent a situation where one product might be licensed by the USOC and a competitor by ACOG, Payne said.

Money for the Games, for stadium construction and other costs, could come through bonds issued by the Metropolitan Atlanta Olympic Games Authority, which was established by the Georgia General Assembly.

"That's one option," Payne said, adding that "the preferred way" would be for deposits from TV networks and other deals to finance capital costs, "without the need of any bonding capability."

Calgary borrowed immediately against its television revenues after its 1988 Winter Olympics TV deals were struck, he noted.

Meeting with reporters Friday, Payne was careful in responding to criticism of Atlanta's selection by other bidding cities, chiefly Athens, which hoped to mark the 100th anniversary of its first modern Olympics by hosting the games again in 1996.

Weekend scholastic slate

In football action today, Manchester High (0-1) will host Berkeley High in a CCC interdivisional game at 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Field. The Indians are coming off an 18-7 loss at Windsor last Saturday. Meanwhile, East Catholic (0-1) will entertain Fairfield Prep in its All Connecticut Conference opener at Mt. Nebo's Carlin Field at 1:30 p.m. East is coming off a 28-0 loss at New London last Saturday.

In boys' soccer action this morning, East Catholic (0-2-1) hosts Fairfield Prep in an All Connecticut Conference game at 10. In cross country action, the Manchester High boys' cross country team will compete in the Manchester, New Hampshire Invitational. The East Catholic boys will compete in the Bethel Invitational while the East girls will run in the Guilford Invitational.

UConn at William & Mary WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The University of Connecticut football team (0-2) will travel to Williamsburg, Va., to meet William & Mary this afternoon at 1. UConn is coming off a 48-21 loss at North Carolina. Husky quarterback Matt DeGennaro separated his right shoulder versus the Tar Heels and will be replaced by Cornelius Benson.

Whalers top the Flyers HARTFORD (AP) — Ray Fennan's two third-period goals gave him a hat trick and Hartford a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia in exhibition play Friday night.

Fennan intercepted an outlet pass by the Flyers, faked a shot on the Flyers' sprawling goalie, Bruce Hoffert, and fired a wrist shot in from left of the crease to give the Whalers a 3-2 lead at 1:18 of the third period.

Fennan added an insurance goal six minutes later on a rebound in a crowd in front of the net.

The 5-10 center scored his first goal in the first period as he fought off Philadelphia defenseman Lance Pitlik. Fennan tapped a pass from Scott Young past the right skate of Flyers goalie Ken Wreggett to give the Whalers a 2-0 lead.

Ron Francis scored the Whalers first goal on a spin-around snap shot from just inside the right circle on a pass across the front of the net from Mark Greig.

Good Murphy and Mark Howe scored second-period goals for the Flyers to tie the score at 2-2. Murphy scored on a slap shot from near the back of the right circle and Howe's goal was a wrist shot from left wing.

Lemieux may miss opener PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux, still recovering from a back injury that sidelined him for two months last season, is having back spasms and may not be ready for the Pittsburgh Penguins' season opener on Oct. 5.

The Penguins' plan for Lemieux, the NHL's two-time scoring champion, was to play him in exhibition games Sept. 28 and 30, but General Manager Craig Patrick said he might not be ready.

Padres fire Jack McKeon SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jack McKeon was fired as general manager by the San Diego Padres on Friday night, ending a decade-long stay.

The Padres' new ownership group, which bought the team from Joan Kroc in June, announced the firing following a day-long meeting at a Mission Valley hotel.

"We believe that the Padres have the nucleus of a championship club, but we also believe that as we looked at the decade ahead, a change in the front office is necessary to strengthen ourselves for the future," the ownership group said in a statement. "Therefore, we have asked Jack McKeon to step aside as we search for a new general manager. We are presently interviewing candidates and expect an appointment in the near future."

Henke leads B.C. Open ENDCOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Nolan Henke matched the PGA's best 36-hole score of the season with a 12-under-par 130, sinking five consecutive birdies Friday on the way to a 64 and a two-stroke lead in the B.C. Open.

Henke's precision putting allowed him to overtake Jim Hallet, who shot his second straight 66 for a two-day total of 108-under-par 132.

Beck reaches golf semis

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Chip Beck survived Nick Faldo's runaway start and beat the defending champion 2-and-1 Friday to reach the semifinals of the World Match Play golf championship at Wentworth.

Beck led by as many as five holes at point after Faldo, the Masters and British Open champion from Britain, won the first two of 36 holes.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin lost 6-and-4 to Mark McNulty of Zimbabwe, while Welshman Ian Woosnam whipped Northern Ireland's Ronan Rafferty 5-and-4.

Greg Norman of Australia beat countryman Wayne Grady with a birdie on the second playoff hole to gain a semifinal berth against McNulty. Beck plays Woosnam.

Robertson to attend program MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks guard Alvin Robertson must attend a program on spousal abuse and perform 50 hours of community service in a pre-trial agreement in connection with a misdemeanor assault charge brought against him by his wife.

Robertson, 28, was charged with misdemeanor assault with bodily harm after the Aug. 13 incident in San Antonio.

According to records, Robertson allegedly broke a window to gain entry to the family house and followed his wife into the garage where he allegedly grabbed her hand and struck it against a concrete floor.

Robertson's wife, Jacqueline, was treated and released the same day.

McBee leads senior golf RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Rives McBee, a two-time winner this year, fired a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a 1-shot lead after the opening round of the Crestar PGA Senior Golf Classic.

"The two events I won I led after the first round," said McBee, 10th in earnings on the Senior Tour this year. McBee had six birdies in a bogey-free round over the 6,644-yard Heritage Country Club course.

South African Gary Player shot a 67 with six birdies and one bogey to earn the No. 2 spot heading into the second round on Saturday, when rain is forecast.

Lee Trevino, the leading money-winner on the Senior Tour with slightly more than $712,000, was one of six golfers at 68. He also had a bogey-free round.

Spurs don't want Wingate ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — San Antonio Spurs officials said today that guard David Wingate will not be back with the team following his indictment on rape charges in Maryland.

A grand jury in Howard County, Md., indicted Wingate Thursday on charges of second-degree rape, assault and battery and a third-degree sexual offense. Wingate was arrested Monday after a 17-year-old woman said that he assaulted her at his apartment on Sunday. Wingate claims she consented to have sex with him.

Wingate remains free on a $10,000 bond; a trial is expected in about four months.

After the Maryland charges were filed, the Spurs suspended contact negotiations with Wingate, a restricted free agent. Spurs owner Red McCombs said team and league officials would investigate.

Anderson to face Foreman LONDON (AP) — First, Terry Anderson found out that he was fighting George Foreman. Then, he decided it wasn't such a bad idea after all.

"I can't lose anything, but I can gain a lot," said Anderson, who will meet Foreman at the London Arena on Tuesday.

Anderson learned about his heavyweight bout against Foreman from a TV announcer, just two weeks beforehand.

"It was amazed," Anderson said. "Nobody had told me. I was just watching a fight on TV, and they said I was going to fight Foreman. I was really mesmerized by the news," Anderson said.

The 30-year-old former U.S. Marine from Tampa, Fla., made some phone calls to confirm the news and then decided it was OK. He flew into London Friday as a replacement opponent for Argentina's Walter Masaretti, who pulled out last week.

UConn soccer hosts Villanova

STORRS — The University of Connecticut men's soccer team (4-4-1) will host Villanova University in a Big East Conference match Sunday afternoon at 1 at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium. The Huskies, 1-1-1 in Big East play, are coming off a 2-1 loss at Harvard on Wednesday.

Dates may be switched

NEW YORK (AP) — The game between the Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals scheduled for Riverfront Stadium on Oct. 14 will be switched to the Astrodome if the Cincinnati Reds win the National League West, the NFL said Friday.

The site change would be necessary because the NFL West champion is scheduled to host a night playoff game on Oct. 13 and the stadium cannot be converted in time for the following afternoon's football game.

Should the switch be necessary, the Oilers-Bengals game scheduled for Dec. 23 at the Astrodome would be moved to Cincinnati to complete the home-and-home series.

Minoso has struck out

CHICAGO (AP) — Minnie Minoso has struck out in his bid to become the first major league baseball player to appear in six decades.

Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent directed the Chicago White Sox not to activate Minoso, 68, for the final days of the season, the team said Friday.

"We had never gotten to the point where we'd decided to let Minnie play, but now it's a moot point," White Sox Chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said in a statement. "Minnie had taken batting practice and we had satisfied ourselves that he could have competed."

Reinsdorf didn't specify why Vincent took the action, but it had been reported that some baseball officials thought Minoso playing again was a publicity stunt that would hurt baseball's integrity.

Minoso, a community representative for the White Sox, came out of retirement in 1976 to play in his fourth decade and in 1980 for his fifth decade. He was 1-for-8 at bat in 1976 and 0-2 in 1980.

British top Mercedes Mile

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not like the invasion of the Beatles in 1964, but the British are coming.

In fact, they're already here — for Saturday's Mercedes Mile on Fifth Avenue.

For the men's elite race, the Brits have sent their two best milers, defending champion and two-time winner Peter Elliott and world mile record-holder Steve Cram.

For the women's elite race, their representation is not as formidable, but still is very respectable — Christina Boxer Cahill, who has finished second twice and third four times in seven appearances in the Mercedes Mile, and Trena Colebrook, the NCAA mile record-holder who attended Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

The powerful men's duo prompted Steve Scott, America's top hope, to quip, "Where's Paul Reveré?"

Penske teammates top field

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — Penske teammates Rick Mears, Danny Sullivan and Emerson Fittipaldi swept the top three positions Friday in provisional qualifying for the Texaco-Havoline 200 Indy-car race at Road America.

Mears was quickest at 129.812 mph, followed by Sullivan at 129.325 and then Fittipaldi 129.186, all in virtually identical Chevrolet-powered Penske 90s.

It is the first time three Penske racers have been up front since Mears, Sullivan and then-teammate Al Unser did it in qualifying for the 1988 Indianapolis 500.

"Really, we haven't been that far off (in qualifying) most of the year," Mears said. "Each of us has had some real good days and a few bad ones. We just happened to all get it together here at the same time. I hope we can do it again (Saturday), in the same order, of course."

The second and final round of time trials for Sunday's 200-mile race is scheduled Saturday, with one point in the CART PPG Cup championship race riding on the outcome.

UConn football must offset adversity, William & Mary

STORRS (AP) — Connecticut coach Tom Jackson has been thinking this week about what Penn State Coach Joe Paterno told him when he played for the Nittany Lions as a player 21 years ago.

"I can remember him telling us if you can overcome adversity and win a game it can change your season," Jackson said. "I'm just not sure he knew how much adversity I'd be facing when he told me that."

It's been a hard two weeks for Connecticut, the preseason pick to win the Yankee Conference. The Huskies (0-2), ranked No. 8 in the preseason, have lost to New Hampshire and North Carolina and head into Saturday's game at William & Mary (1-1) without several key players.

Quarterback Matt DeGennaro, who holds 14 school records, has a separated right shoulder; guard Lyndon Johnson, one of two offensive linemen with extensive experience, has a hyperextended knee; and defensive tackle Mike McCarthy has a sprained knee.

DeGennaro will be replaced by Cornelius Benton, a junior who has quietly been waiting for his chance.

"I've got to take advantage of this and show what I can do," Benton said. "I've been waiting a long time."

Benton played the second half against North Carolina, completing 11 of 19 passes for 129 yards. But Jackson isn't sure how Benton will play as a starter.

"He did a nice job for us against North Carolina, but it's not the same as starting," Jackson said.

Jackson also is concerned about his struggling offensive line.

"We've made some progress, but we haven't been able to practice as a whole much because of injuries," he said.

William & Mary coach Jimmye Laycock said despite the injuries, he's concerned about the Huskies offense.

"They're a difficult team to defend. They give you a lot of looks and they have a lot of good receivers," he said.

It's the second straight Yankee Conference foe for the Tribe, an independent. The Tribe beat Villanova 37-14 last week after losing to The Citadel.

"Our goal this week is to continue to get better," Laycock said. "We need to cut down on turnovers and run a balanced offensive attack."

The Tribe, which has five turnovers, has been well-balanced.

BEATS THE THROW — The Mets' Kevin McReynolds, left, scores on a sacrifice fly in the second inning by beating the ball to the plate as Cubs' catcher Joe Girardi waits to make the play during Friday's game at Wrigley Field. The Cubs won, 4-3.

Mets are beaten by the Cubs as Pirates top the Cardinals

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice fly scored Jerome Walton, breaking an eighth inning tie, and the Chicago Cubs dealt the New York Mets their fifth straight loss, 4-3, Friday.

The defeat tied the Mets longest losing streak of the season and dropped New York 3 1-2 games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Walton led off the eighth against David Cone (12-10) with a single. Walton then stole second and went to third when catcher Charlie O'Brien's throw went into center field.

Sandberg hit a fly to medium center, and Walton easily beat the throw to the plate from Keith Miller.

Paul Assenmacher (6-2) pitched the final two innings. Assenmacher had given up a game-tying homer to Howard Johnson leading off the eighth. It was his 22nd.

Cone allowed eight hits and struck out eight in 7 1-3 innings. Assenmacher relieved starter Steve Wilson, who had permitted just three hits and had retired 17 in a row since giving up a second-inning RBI double to Johnson. Wilson left for a pinch hitter.

The Cubs grabbed a 2-1 lead when Mark Grace and Andre Dawson started the fourth against Cone with consecutive homers. It was Grace's ninth and Dawson's 24th.

It was the first time since July 15, 1989, when Sandberg and Dwight Gooden did it, that the Cubs hit consecutive homers.

Wilson had not started since Aug. 2 and had his last victory in relief against the Mets on Aug. 11.

NL Roundup

The Cubs grabbed a 1-0 first-inning lead on Dawson's two-out RBI single. Sandberg had singled and wound up on second after Cone's errant pickoff attempt.

O'Brien hit a sacrifice fly for the Mets second run in the second.

Pirates 1, Cardinals 0: At Pittsburgh, Zane Smith pitched a five-hitter to improve to 5-1 with Pittsburgh and Sid Bream broke a scoreless tie with a one-out double in the seventh inning, leading the division-leading Pirates past the St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 Friday night.

The Pirates, trying for their first National League East title since 1979, increased their lead over slumping second-place New York to 3 1/2 and lowered their magic number to nine. The Mets lost to Chicago 4-3 earlier Friday.

Smith, a combined 1-13 for Atlanta and Montreal last season, hasn't yielded an earned run in three of his last five starts, including a one-hit, 1-0, over New York on Sept. 5. He had been 0-2 with a 6.00 ERA in two previous starts against St. Louis.

Bonds walked with two outs in the fourth, then ran on the first pitch for his 50th stolen base. His previous career high was 36 stolen bases as a rookie in 1986.

Bonds became the first 30-30 player earlier this week by hitting his 30th homer. Bonds and father Bobby Bonds are the only father-son combination in major league history to have 30-30 seasons. Bobby Bonds did it a record-setting five times in his 14-year career.

Bosox blank hapless Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Dana Kiecker and Larry Andersen combined on a three-hitter, Ellis Burks and Mike Greenwell homered and the Boston Red Sox won for just the third time in 11 games Friday night, beating the New York Yankees 3-0.

The Red Sox began the night trailing Toronto by one game in the American League East. The hapless Yankees lost their seventh straight and were shut out for the 14th time.

Kiecker (7-9) had lost his last three starts with an 8.56 ERA. He stopped his slide by giving up only two singles, striking out two and walking one in seven innings.

Kiecker, who does not have a complete game in 23 starts, retired 10 straight batters before Andersen relieved to start the eighth. Andersen, acquired from Houston on Aug. 31, earned his first AL save.

Chuck Cary (5-11), who sustained a concussion in his previous start against Detroit last Sunday when he collided with first baseman Steve Balboni, is 1-7 in 14 starts since the All-Star break.

The game was scoreless when Wade Boggs tripled with one out in the Boston sixth, an opposite-field fly ball that left fielder Hensley Meulens barely missed catching. It was Boggs' first hit in 12 at-bats in Yankee Stadium this season.

Burks, in a 3-for-24 slump and just 9-for-27 in driving home runners from third base with less than two outs this season, followed with his 20th home run, tying his career high. Greenwell hit his 13th home run with two out in the eighth as Boston beat the Yankees for the ninth time in 11 games.

The Yankees wasted a chance in the first inning when Roberto Kelly led off with a single and stole second. He was stranded when Kiecker retired Steve Sax, Don Mattingly and Kevin Maas.

Mattingly, who played first base for the first time since he was activated from the disabled list last week, singled in the fourth for the other hit off Kiecker. Pinch-hitter Oscar Azocar had a bunt single in the eighth.

Orioles 5, Brewers 3: At Baltimore, Pete Harnisch allowed a run and four hits in seven-plus innings Friday night as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-3, handing Ron Robinson his first loss since Aug. 1.

Chris Hoiles had two hits and scored twice for the Orioles, who have won three straight. Milwaukee has lost four in a row and seven of eight.

Robinson (11-4) was bidding to tie the club record of eight straight victories. He gave up only four hits — three Baltimore runs were the result of errors — but was outduelled by Harnisch, who had only one victory in his previous 10 starts.

Harnisch (11-11) was relieved by Jose Bautista after yielding singles to Mike Felder and B.J. Surhoff to start the eighth inning. Bautista retired Paul Molitor on a pop fly before giving way to Jeff Ballard, who retired the side but was tagged for a leadoff home run by Greg Vaughn in the ninth.

Gregg Olson took over and earned his 33rd save. He gave up a run on singles by Rob Deer and Jim Gantner and Bill Spies' sacrifice fly.

Rangers 2, Twins 1: At Minneapolis, Bobby Witt equalled his career best with a two-hitter and won for the 14th time in his last 15 decisions as the Texas Rangers defeated the Minnesota Twins 2-1 Friday night.

Jack Daugherty drove in both Texas runs with singles in the fourth and sixth innings, the first off Kevin Tapani and the second off Juan Berenguer (8-5).

Witt (17-9), who won 12 straight before losing Sept. 11 in New York, yielded just two singles. He batted one streak of wildness, issuing all four of his walks and throwing two wild pitches in a string of six batters in the second and third innings. He struck out eight.

After walking Nelson Lirio to start the third, Witt retired 10 straight batters before Kent Hrbek's one-out single in the sixth.

MHS girls' soccer rolls to fourth straight win

VERNON — Another game, another victory for the Manchester High girls' soccer team. The unbeaten Indians made it four straight wins in 1990 Friday afternoon with a 4-0 victory over host Rockville High in CCC East Division play.

Rockville goes to 2-1-1 with the loss. "Rockville played an extremely aggressive game that caused our club to make adjustments," Manchester coach Joe Erardi said.

The Indians scored just once in the opening half, that at the 2:18 mark with Kathy Cumberbatch scoring her fourth goal of the year, assisted by Mary Moriarty.

"The play of our midfield was the key," Erardi said. "The ball was played two touch and forward, giving us space advantage throughout. I thought Mary Moriarty had her finest match as she was a dominant force in the game."

Patti Hornbostel, Jessica Marquez and Sharon Fish added second-half goals for Manchester. Hornbostel notched her second of the year, a 20-yard left foot blast, off a corner kick taken by Cumberbatch. Marquez deposited a 15-yarder inside the box for her second of the year. And Fish tallied her third of the year, a 20-yard unassisted blast.

"Once again our entire club (players) 1-17 participated. We're working hard and getting real leadership from Jen (Brindisi), Shelly (Dieterle) and Kathy (Cumberbatch). Our training session was brought to the match today."

Darlene Johns, Amy Shumaker and Missy Jolly played well for Manchester. The Indians' next set action Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at Enfield High.

Bolton earns second tie
EAST HAMPTON — There was a first, and a second, for the Bolton High boys' soccer team Friday afternoon in its Charter Oak Conference clash with East Hampton High.

The Bulldogs scored their first goal of the 1990 season, and earned their second tie with a 1-1 draw with the Bellinghams.

Bolton is now 0-2-2 overall, East Hampton 0-3-1. Bolton's next game is Tuesday when it hosts Coventry High at 5:30 p.m.

"This was our best outing of the year," Bolton coach Ray Boyd said. "We distributed the ball well and built our offense with some support and depth."

Bolton had the edge in shots, 22-10, but found itself trailing 1-0 10 minutes into the game as the Bellinghams' Chris Blaise put a short shot home after East Hampton keeper Chip Furan misplayed the ball.

"Our defense was a little suspect against their counterattacks, which they generated off their defense," Boyd analyzed. "We gave up too many corner kicks (four), which we'll have to work on."

East Hampton threatened on all four of its corner kicks. Paul Sauer and Luke Morford played well for Bolton.

Coventry wins first of year
COVENTRY — After opening the season with three consecutive losses, Coventry High boys' soccer coach Bob Plaster was hoping for success in Charter Oak Conference play.

He got it Friday afternoon as the Patriots began their COC schedule with a 2-0 victory over visiting RHAM High.

Coventry is now 1-3 overall, the Sachems 1-2. Each resumes action Tuesday with Coventry High at Bolton High and RHAM at home in Hebron against Cheney Tech.

OUT OF CONTROL — Manchester High's Brian Sardo (22) is out of control after tripping over Rookville's Joe Petrella during Friday's CCC East soccer game. Evan Milone (17) and Jason Dieterle (7) of Manchester trail the action. Rockville won in overtime, 1-0.

"We played a lot of young kids today and they played pretty well," Coventry coach Bob Plaster said. "They looked tiny on the field, but they really used their speed. The younger guys used their skill to their advantage. They trapped well and passed well. They were ball-hawking all day."

"We played poorly in terms of going for the ball," RHAM coach Mike Zonta said. "It was very similar to the Hamden (6-2 loss) game. We're up and down. We're not able to put anything solid together. Like I told Bobby (Plaster) it seemed they went to the ball tougher than we did."

Coventry got single goals in each half. In the first half, Doug Roberto came up the left wing and passed it to Jeremy Harford. He touch passed it to Randy Leece, and the latter deposited a 12-yard boot into the lower right corner.

Sophomore Cory Wajda, at his right halfback slot, collected a ball in the midfield area. He passed it forward to center forward Isaac Walters, and he touched it over to sophomore Jeremy Haynes who blasted one home from 18 yards out.

"It was nice to start off the conference schedule with a win," Plaster said. Rob Toploff, Leece, Harford, freshman Josh Walters, Isaac Walters and Haynes had strong games for Coventry.

Gwynn severs ties with club

SAN DIEGO — A bitter Tony Gwynn cleaned out his locker Friday at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium, swearing off contact with the press and fellow players for the winter.

Stung by criticism from San Diego Padres teammates and hurt by the recent discovery in the Padres' dugout of a mutilated Tony Gwynn figurine, Gwynn came to the stadium early to pack his belongings and leave before players arrived for Friday night's game against the Cincinnati Reds.

The season of turmoil for the four-time National League batting champion came to end because of a fractured right index finger suffered last Saturday while trying to field a fly ball in Atlanta. He underwent surgery on Wednesday to repair the injury.

Approached by a reporter as he cleared his locker in the clubhouse, Gwynn said matter-of-factly: "I'm through with you guys. You're on my time now."

Gwynn, known for accommodating reporters, was asked why he didn't want to talk. He replied, in profane terms, that the media had treated him badly, just as his teammates had, and so didn't want to talk to anybody. Earlier this week, Gwynn was quoted as saying the best part of being injured was not having to be around his teammates.

As he drove off in a golf cart packed with his gloves, clothes and other personal belongings, Gwynn said, "See ya' at spring training."

Shortstop Garry Templeton, the Padres' captain, said he hoped Gwynn would reconsider and attend the Padres' final home stand to meet with his teammates.

"I think he should come in and at least say something to us," Templeton said. "He's frustrated and sometimes you say some things you're going to regret later. Things like that can come back to haunt you."

"The ball is in his court. You can't have one guy going against 24 other people." Gwynn's relationship with teammates has been strained since a clubhouse meeting in May, during which some of them criticized Gwynn for being a selfish, statistics-oriented player.

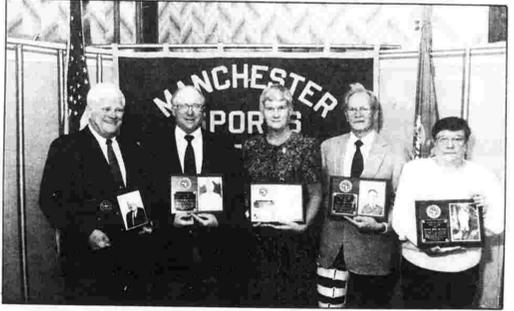

He also has said that he believed a teammate was responsible for mutilating the plastic figurine that was found hanging in the Padres' dugout during the last home stand.

HALL OF FAME — The Manchester Sports Hall of Fame added five names to its list Friday night at the 11th annual dinner at the Army and Navy Club. Two of the inductees were in attendance with a third unable to attend. Two were honored posthumously. Tom Kelley, left, and Ronald "Red" Smith, second from left, accepted for themselves. Ruth Tucker, center, accepted the award for her daughter, Katie Tucker Maguire while Fred Tedford accepted the award for the late Johnny Hedlund and Marie Kelley accepted the award for Francis "Hook" Brennan.

Manchester hall of fame adds five more to its ranks

MANCHESTER — The Manchester Sports Hall of Fame inducted five new members into its ranks Friday night at the Army and Navy Club.

"Ten years ago tonight I accepted an award posthumously for my dad (the late Thomas F. Kelley), but never in my wildest dreams did I expect to be accepting my own award," said Thomas G. Kelley, golf coach at Manchester High School for 14 years and a basketball official for over three decades. "It's just mind boggling."

Kelley, 59, was inducted with other local sports legends, Ronald "Red" Smith, Kate Tucker Maguire, John Hedlund and Francis "Hook" Brennan before the crowd of nearly 275 Manchester sports enthusiasts. Hedlund and Brennan were honored posthumously.

"When this type of thing happens, it makes it all worthwhile to work in education," said Kelley, the former athletic director at Iling Junior High.

Kelley and his father, a longtime baseball and football coach as well as a former athletic director as well, make up the first father and son combination to be inducted into the town's Hall of Fame.

"He is a man who dedicated his entire life to sports as an athlete, an athletic director, a coach and an official," said Iling Junior High vice principal Andy Vincens, who presented the award to Kelley.

"How many of you can say that you looked forward to work everyday for 30 years," said Kelley, who officiated more than 2,000 boys' and girls' basketball games over the course of his career. Kelley said one of the greatest thrills of his career was having the gymnasium at Iling Junior High School named after him.

Kelley was just one of the who's who crowd in Manchester sports to show up to the Friday night ceremony. Smith, 49, a member of the Pro Golfer's Association for 18 years, won both the Manchester and New Hampshire Opens as well as two New England pro titles. Currently, the former Manchester High School student is the head pro at Webbsman Country Club in Kennebunk, Me.

The late John Hedlund had an outstanding career as a catcher for many local baseball teams. "In the twenties Brennan was the idle of many North End youngsters," said Jim Balsano, who read the presentation of the award to Brennan.
