Gulf of a glance

(AP) — Here, at a glance, are the latest developments in the Persian Gulf crisis:

- U.N. chief Javier Perez de Cuellar was quoted Thursday as saying he sees little progress toward peacefully ending the Persian Gulf crisis, and noting that the United Nations is empowered to authorize military action against Iraq.
- The U.N. Charter's Article 42 permits military action. Should the Security Council come to that decision, that would be completely legal," the German newspaper Stern quoted the U.N. secretary-general as saying.
- "At the moment I see little movement in the direction of a peaceful solution," he told the weekly.
- Iraq announced Thursday that it is willing to sell oil for $21 a barrel, about half the market price. The announcement appeared aimed at trying to undermine the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq.
- Iraq already has offered free oil to the Third World but there have been no reports of any takers willing to get around a naval blockade.
- Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov, who has said Iraq might withdraw from most of Kuwait as part of a settlement, was to travel to Washington Thursday for talks with President Bush.

Inflation up 9.5 percent

By DAVE SKIDMORE
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soaring energy prices after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait pushed Americans' cost of living up 0.8 percent in September, the second consecutive monthly dose of bad inflation, the government said today.

The September rise matched the August increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index. If prices continued rising at that pace for a year, it would produce an annual inflation rate of 9.5 percent.

The pickup in inflation this year translated into the biggest boost in Social Security benefits in 8 1/2 years. Based on today's CPI report, the government announced a 5.4 percent raise in benefits beginning in January for the 40 million Social Security recipients.

In addition to boosting inflation, the Iraqi invasion had a detrimental effect on the nation's merchandise trade deficit, which jumped 2.4 percent in August as rising oil prices pushed imports to a record high.

The gap between imports and exports climbed to $9.3 billion, the largest since January.

In the inflation report, energy prices in September jumped 5.6 percent, the worst rise on record since the department began tracking the sector in 1957.

Gasoline soared 9.5 percent, the worst in 17 months, and fuel oil rose 15.9 percent. For August and September together, gasoline rose 17.9 percent and fuel oil was up 33.7 percent.

Electricity and natural gas charges also rose, but less steeply.

For the first nine months of the year, consumer prices advanced at an annual rate of 6.6 percent, well above the 4.6 percent increase for all of 1989.

Analysts expect the bad news to continue through November or December, even if oil prices stabilize near $40 a barrel, double the July price. The oil shock will begin feeding through to chemicals, airline tickets and other energy-related products and services.

The big bite out of consumers' wallets is expected to slow an already sluggish economy.

"We're going into a recession, very clearly," said economist David Wyes of DRI-McGraw Hill.

Prices excluding energy rose a more moderate 0.4 percent in September, the same as the previous month.

But the Labor Department noted several sectors of above-average in-

GOP members angered by Foley's remarks

By ALEX GIRELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Republican State Chairman Richard Foley told the Manchester Republican Town Committee Wednesday night that voters for Lowell Weicker will weaken the status of Manchester Republicans within the party.

And then the brouhaha began.

Thomas H. Ferguson and the former registrar Patricia Cottle walked out of the meeting in protest over Foley's comments and their departure drew criticism from Robert Schneider, a committee member.

Foley said that Weicker, running for governor as a Connecticut Party candidate, is not a Republican and will be removed from the party rolls after the election Nov. 6.

He said Manchester now has 13 delegates to the party convention and stands to lose delegates until 1996 if the Republican vote in town falls off.

The number of delegates is geared to the Republican vote in the election.

Foley said any third party candidate in the election who erodes the GOP vote will weaken the party locally.

Senate to face taxes on rich

By JIM LUTHER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate is considering raising taxes on the rich and moderating a Medicare premium increase after refusing to strip a higher gasoline levy from its deficit-reduction bill.

The measure, which would raise taxes and reduce benefit programs by $250 billion over the next five years, is on a fast track that congressional leaders hope could place it on President Bush's desk for his signature Friday night.

Without final action, or at least considerable progress on such a package, Bush has said he will shut down the government Saturday morning, when federal spending authority is due to expire.

The package appeared to be in considerable trouble Wednesday after Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, proposed to strip out a 9½-cent increase in the gasoline tax. The issue was not settled until almost 14 hours later, just before midnight, when the Senate, heeding pleas from Democratic and Republican leaders, used a procedural vote to dispose of Symms' amendment.

"Once again the American people are going to have their pockets picked," Symms protested.

"A vote for this amendment is a vote to destroy this effort at deficit reduction," countered Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine. "No senator who votes for the Symms amendment should have the temerity to go anywhere and say they are trying to reduce the deficit."

Symms' amendment, which was put aside on a 59-40 vote, probably was the biggest challenge facing the

Woolly worm fur: cold winter ahead

By ROB WELLS
The Associated Press

PIKEVILLE, Ky. — Start rumormongering for your long underwear, flannel sheets and electric socks. The ninth annual Lee County Woolly Worm Survey, issued today, says there's a cold winter ahead.

The folksy forecast of Kentucky's winter weather is based on the coloring of caterpillars, known locally as woolly worms. The number of foggy mornings in August, inner designs of persimmon seeds and the height of borney's nests also are factored into the forecast.

"The Lee County woolly worms are never in error," said dogsranger Porter Kilduff of Beatyville in rural eastern Kentucky.

Mrs. Kilduff compiles woolly worm sightings in and about Lee County and releases the winter forecast in time for Lee County's annual Woolly Worm Festival, which begins Friday.

Organizers expect Lee County's population of 7,000 will double with visitors for the woolly worm races, crafts show and a '50s street dance. A parade will feature Tasha Harris of Beatyville, Miss Woolly Worm Festival Queen for 1990.

Lee County residents hope the caterpillar's predictions someday will gain the same status in forecasting as Punxsutawney Phil. Move-

Lawmaker lateness is lauded

PHILADELPHIA — Some criticize the snail's pace of the budget talks on Capitol Hill. Others give it their highest praise.

The Procrastinators Club of America has given its Procrastinator of the Year award to President Bush and Congress.

The club, which champions delayed decisions and postponed projects, announced the honor Wednesday — and said it will begin working on a ceremony for the winners sometime in 1992. Or maybe later.

Bush and Congress did "an outstanding job" of putting things off, said club president Lee Waas.

"The procrastinators were aware of what was going on with our taxes because we eventually read Bush's lips," Waas said. "But we also like Congress, and people in politics, because they are just like us, they procrastinate."

The Procrastinators Club, established in 1956 by employees at a Philadelphia advertising agency, says it has about 8,500 members and half-million who haven't found the time to sign up.

The award was accompanied by advice for the president and Congress:

"Send the money first," Waas said, "then determine the budget later. That way, they will always come out even and without any need for quibbling."

P. Parenthood allowed at fair

SHELTON (AP) — School officials in Shelton have approved a compromise plan that will allow Planned Parenthood to participate in a school health fair, ending a month-long controversy over the group's involvement in the event.

The Board of Education approved the plan Wednesday night on a 5-0 vote. Under the plan, the health fair will be held at the Shelton Intermediate School during school hours with a Planned Parenthood booth. The school sends out permission slips to all parents asking if they want their child to attend.

Emissions target of clean-air bill

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Industries that now release more than 2.4 million pounds of toxic chemicals into the atmosphere each year would have to cut those emissions by 90 percent under provisions tentatively added to a compromise clean-air bill.

House-Senate talks produced an agreement Wednesday that would require factories and many businesses to install new technology over the next 10 years to contain 189 hazardous chemicals, including many that cause cancer.

The members of the congressional conference committee were expected to formally adopt the measure today along with provisions tentatively approved last week requiring tougher emission controls on automobiles.

Approval of the toxics section of the 600-page clean-air bill represented a major step toward possible completion next week of the legislation, the first tightening of federal air pollution laws in 15 years.

Only one major section — requirements for utilities to reduce emissions that cause acid rain — are left to consider and several participants in the talks say they expect those differences to be resolved.

"It shouldn't be that difficult," Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn.,

Bush threat angers rights groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights forces say President Bush will unleash widespread anger among minorities and women if he carries out his promise to veto a job discrimination bill on grounds it would encourage hiring quotas.

"If the president vetoes the civil rights act, there will be a firestorm of protest," civil rights advocate Ralph Nease said Wednesday after the House approved the bill, 273-154, and sent it to the president.

The veto vote fell just short of the two-thirds margin sponsors would need to override a veto. It was the second such disappointment for civil rights forces in as many days.

The Senate approved the bill Tuesday but also was a handful of votes short of a veto-proof margin.

Bush is expected to veto the measure and return it to Capitol Hill with an alternative version he would be willing to sign. But the chances of winning approval for an alternate version this year appeared all but nil.

The measure is aimed at overturning six job discrimination rulings that created a furor when the Supreme Court issued them last year.

Truce reached on defense bill

By DONNA CASSATA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House and Senate negotiators agreed Wednesday to a 1991 defense bill that barely keeps alive the B-2 stealth bomber and slashes President Bush's request for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The $288 billion military budget blueprint for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 — $19 billion less than Bush had sought — would cut 100,000 troops and sharply reduce the president's request for land-based nuclear missiles.

The legislation provides $2.9 billion for SDI, well below Bush's proposal of $4.7 billion and $900 million less than Congress spent in the last fiscal year on the Star Wars program.

Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services panel, and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and the committee's chairman, said they were optimistic Defense Secretary Dick Cheney will recommend the president sign the bill despite the drastic cut in SDI funds.

But Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said Cheney "is not going to be happy."

Sen. John Warner said that although the legislation is silent on the two planes, legally the Air Force can use the money at its discretion and use as many of the Northrop-built bombers as fiscally possible.

There is enough money in the budget to enable the secretary of the Air Force to build the number of aircraft anticipated in this budget as requested by the president," Warner said.

In July, Air Force Secretary Donald B. Rice told the House Armed Services Committee the service needs $1.4 billion to acquire the 14th and 15th B-2s, which had been scheduled to be delivered in the last fiscal year. Rice said that without the money those bombers could not be bought until 1997.

The question now is whether the $2.9 billion left in the compromise bill after subtracting the $1.4 billion would be enough to buy planes No. 16 and No. 17.

Ma. Richard Cole, an Air Force spokesman, said the service is "not sure what we got. We haven't seen the language, but it would appear that we got enough to do what we want to do."

Bay area quake is remembered

By LAURA MYERS
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A day of somber remembrance gave way to a night of celebration as survivors of the San Francisco Bay quake marked its anniversary at a restaurant that stayed open a year ago for those needing a good stiff one.

"To some people, it's like surviving the Titanic. They were panicky a year ago, but now they're just happy," Alexander Morticavi, owner of L'Entrecote de Paris, said Wednesday night on the anniversary of the Oct. 17, 1989 earthquake.

Earlier Wednesday, people throughout the Bay area fell silent or went to 504 p.m., the moment the disaster struck. Church bells tolled and mourners in Oakland heaped white carnations near where the Cypress Freeway collapsed and killed 42 people.

The quake, which measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, killed 67 people throughout the Bay area and caused $7 billion in damage.

"My daughter is still scared, that's why I brought her out here," said Jennifer Martiney, who gathered with 3-year-old Jenel and several hundred others in the town square in Watsonville. The town 70 miles south of San Francisco was one of the hardest hit.

In Oakland, grief mixed with celebration as about 200 residents gathered near the double-deck Cypress Freeway.

"A year ago today, we heard the loudest noise ever heard in Oakland," said Paul Cobb, head of the Citizens Emergency Relief Team, a neighborhood group. "We saw neighbors grabbing ladders out of their basements. Those who stood on corners with nothing to do all of the sudden rose to the occasion."

People across the nation first knew something had happened when the TV signal from the 1989 World Series between the Oakland Athletics and San Francisco Giants at San Francisco's Candlestick Park went dead.

At the stadium Wednesday, Mayor Art Agnos said the disaster "tested our character as a city and a people."

Those were some of California's most terrifying few seconds, Gov. George Deukmejian said at an earthquake conference in San Francisco. "But they were followed by some of the finest hours of our society."

L'Entrecote de Paris, Morticavi recalled how the Financial District hot spot stayed open after the quake because so many people in the neighborhood "insisted they needed a drink."

"They came again tonight because they all wanted to be together again," he said.

"We came back to celebrate surroundings and many people are still shaken.

Under the state's emergency plan, beekeepers and farmers won't be allowed to move bees beyond a two-mile radius of where the swarm was trapped.

Their sting is no worse than that of European bees commonly raised in the Americas, but their persistence and swarm attacks make them more dangerous. Several hundred people in Latin America have been killed by the bees.

The killer bees first escaped from a breeding experiment in Brazil in 1957 and have rapidly expanded their range since.

Several stowaway swarms have been trapped at U.S. ports aboard ships from Latin America, and one swarm arrived in California aboard a truck.

The bees trapped Monday are the first known to have made it to the border on their own, said James W. Griesler, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Scientists have expected them since a swarm was trapped last November about 150 miles south of Brownsville in the Mexican border state of Tamaulipas. Hundreds of traps were placed to detect bees crossing the border.

Ms. Collins said the swarm caught Monday was taken alive in a trap baited with a natural chemical sex lure known as a pheromone.

Pope approved married priests

By STEPHEN R. WILSON
The Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — A Brazilian cardinal has disclosed that two married men in his country became priests with the approval of the pope, and says the church should seriously consider the ordination of more married men.

Cardinal Aloisio Lorscheider said papal approval of the two ordinations came on condition the two men live with their wives as "brother and sister," meaning they must abstain from sex.

The disclosure by Lorscheider, which appeared in the Italian magazine Famiglia Cristiana (Christian Family) in the third week of a monthlong gathering of bishops, appeared to be an attempt to keep the question of married priests alive.

Pope John Paul II has resolutely opposed waiving the celibacy rule for priests, and conservative bishops kept the subject off the agenda of the bishops' synod, which among other issues is dealing with the diminishing number of candidates for the priesthood worldwide.

Lorscheider, one of more than 200 bishops attending the synod, said allowing ordination of married men could help alleviate the shortage of priests in some areas.

"There are Christian communities, not only in the Third World, which desire the Eucharist and can't receive it," he said. "We need to seriously study the issue."

Roman Catholic church rules require priests to be celibate and forsake marriage. Protestant and some Eastern-rite Catholic churches allow married priests.

The celibacy rule is based on the view that sex and marriage would distract the priest from giving his complete attention to the work of God.

Lorscheider, archbishop of Fortaleza, Brazil, did not identify the priests.

A Vatican spokesman, Monsignor Piero Pennacchi, identified one of them as Ivio Schmidt, who had been serving as permanent deacon of the diocese of Federico Westphalen, a city of 500,000 people in southern Brazil.

The spokesman said he was still checking on the second married priest. Italian newspapers reported he apparently lives in the state of Pernambuco in northeastern Brazil.

NATIONAL CAR CARE MONTH

Choosing a mechanic is a difficult task

By The Associated Press

Before you take your car to an unknown fix-it shop, check with friends to see where they take their vehicles. It's best, obviously, to find someone with a car like yours — at least from the same manufacturer.

There are a growing number of repair "boutiques" specializing in a particular part of a car, such as the exhaust system, suspension or transmission. These can be a good bet for repair work.

A mechanic must have two years' experience before ASE certification is possible. The organization holds tests twice a year nationwide which determine whether a technician will be certified.

A written certification is not a guarantee that a mechanic is competent, but it indicates that the technician has passed an examination.

Lengthen tire life with these few tips

By The Associated Press

The worst enemies of automobile tires are underinflation, out-of-balance wheels, and bad driving habits.

Being aware of these problems can lengthen the life of your tires, according to experts at Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

"Tires should be inflated to the pressure recommended by the manufacturer of your car," advises Frederick J. Kovak, vice president of tire technology of the Akron, Ohio-based company. "The most important part of tire care is air."

An underinflated tire generates excessive heat which reduces fuel economy and increases tread wear in the shoulder area, the company points out, adding that inflating tires to — but not over — the maximum inflation pressure specified on the tire sidewall can improve fuel economy and extend tire life.

If the car is carrying extra weight, such as luggage on a vacation trip, a little additional air should be added to the tires — preferably four pounds over the car manufacturer's recommended cold tire pressure.

Out-of-balance wheels definitely can rob tires of thousands of miles, Goodyear notes.

"For a tire to run true, weight of the tire and wheel assembly must be distributed uniformly," Kovak says. "A heavy spot in the tire and wheel assembly must be counterbalanced by precision-made wheel weights.

"Improper balance could lead to 'cupping' and excessive wear of the tread at the heavy spot. The tread will eventually cup out to the point where the tire will no longer be usable."

More often, though, the extra horsepower is coming from the growing number of multi-valve engines. These are power plants with four valves per cylinder instead of the traditional two. Such technology, coupled with more efficient fuel delivery systems, boost horsepower while reducing fuel consumption.

The 5-series of BMW cars have the same size engine for 1991 as it did for 1990 — a 2.5-liter, six-cylinder model — but with the addition of more valves per cylinder, horsepower is boosted to 189 from 168.

Another way to boost power from the same size engine is to add a turbocharger, which boosts air compression entering the engine. But turbochargers produce higher engine temperatures which can speed engine wear.

Pontiac has dumped turbochargers from its entire 1991 line. The 3.1-liter Turbo engine has been replaced

New cars pack punch; drivers want speed

By FREDERICK STANDISH
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Carmakers are packing more punch under the hoods of their 1991 cars and trucks and are wrestling with ways to persuade America's drivers to use it wisely.

The hundreds of new models that U.S., Asian and European automakers will be showing off late this year and early next year are aimed at the U.S. love affair with power on the highway.

Perhaps the longest-awaited entry into the U.S. market is General Motors Corp.'s Saturn car. The car is due in showrooms in October or November, but GM kept the lid on preview peeks at the vehicle.

It's expected to be priced somewhere between $10,000 and $12,000 and compete in the thickest part of the market. GM officials have said they expect that 80 percent of Saturn's sales will come from traditional import buyers.

But analysts say that 1991 to be seen.

Increased power in 1991 cars comes despite rising fuel prices stemming from the Middle East crisis. Actually, they say, cars have made great strides in fuel efficiency since the last big oil crunch of the late 1970s.

Ford Motor Co. officials, in fact, like to brag that the Lincoln Continental of today gets just about the same mileage as the Ford Pinto of 1979, a gas sipper of its time.

But with more power, automakers also are finding that safety sells, too. Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca has appeared on a series of television ads along with accident survivors who thank the company for installing air bags in all of its North American-made cars.

The ads say little, if anything, about air bags being supplemental safety devices, designed to work in conjunction with seat belts.

Along with air bags, and all in the name of safety, new cars have automatic seat belts, beefed up door structures to absorb more shock in a side impact, and traction control systems to deter skidding.

Mercedes-Benz, in fact, has a system that puts on the brakes automatically if the car's wheels begin to spin.

Nearly all automakers are bragging about more power in their vehicles' engines. In some cases, usually with large, luxury cars, that comes from simply larger engines like the engine for General Motors Corp.'s Cadillac DeVille and Fleetwood, which goes to 4.9-liter from a 4.5-liter.

Trucks, too, are getting more powerful. The Dodge Dakota pickup gets a 5.2-liter V-8 for 1991, the first V-8 in a pickup its size.

More often, though, the extra horsepower is coming from the growing number of multi-valve engines. These are power plants with four valves per cylinder instead of the traditional two. Such technology, coupled with more efficient fuel delivery systems, boost horsepower while reducing fuel consumption.

Most drivers north of the Mason-Dixon Line know that it's best to gently pump the brakes when slowing down on slippery pavement. ABS systems do that for the driver.

Sensors detect when wheels are beginning to lock and send signals to the braking system to pulse pressure in the brake lines, in effect pumping the brakes and avoiding a slide.

But all the new technology, whether it's under the hood, at the wheel or in the passenger compartment, costs money and consumers will see it.

Prices for 1991 models, announced through mid-September, will rise somewhere between 1 percent and 5 percent, depending on manufacturer and model.

Perhaps the least expensive car on the market for 1991 is the Yugo GV Plus, a Yugoslav import with a base price of $4,435. With a little bit of hunting, a consumer can find a car that cracks the quarter-million-dollar mark, too.

Do these days, seeing a new price doesn't necessarily mean a car buyer will actually pay it.

Interest is up again in fuel efficient autos

By FREDERICK STANDISH
The Associated Press

DETROIT — The days of wild swings in gasoline prices are just a Mideast crisis away. During the first three weeks of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, gasoline prices rose an average of a penny a day.

Consumers who can't reduce their driving and plan to keep their current car for a while still can cut fuel costs by using a little common sense and spending a little time on their vehicle.

One of the best ways to conserve gasoline is to organize a driving route before starting out. If planned carefully, a driver can avoid backtracking which wastes gasoline and time.

Also choose a time of day when traffic is lightest to avoid getting involved in any fuel-wasting traffic jams.

The United States Auto Club of Dallas says trips of five miles or less make up 15 percent of the driving in the United States and consume 30 percent of all fuel.

Planning also pays off when getting ready for a trip. The less packed into the trunk, the less weight the car has to haul. Try to avoid rooftop loads which increase wind resistance and gobble fuel.

Proper maintenance of a vehicle also can save gallons of gasoline. Keep tires inflated to recommended pressures, be sure the air filter is clean, keep the engine tuned and change oil according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

"When a car needs maintenance, it typically will use 5 percent to 25 percent more gas than when it's well-cared for," says Ken Lehman, chairman of the Car Care Clinic in Fort Clinton, Ohio.

Once on the road, motorists can get more miles per gallon by driving sensibly. The U.S. Auto Club and vehicle manufacturers offer these fuel-efficient driving tips:

— After starting the car in cold weather, let it warm up no longer than 30 seconds. When driving with a cold or cool engine, avoid sudden accelerations if possible.

— Allow the car to idle for no more than a minute or two. Waiting in a drive-in bank line or at a railroad crossing with a long train crawling by can eat fuel needlessly.

— Avoid quick accelerating or braking.

Keep car looking good

DETROIT (AP) — You've just paid about $75 for that snazzy clear-coat finish on your new car, and it's so deep looking that you think you could stick your hand into the hood before touching metal.

So with good reasons — investment and pride — you want to keep the car looking new even after it's had a year of getting beat up by sun, sand and snow slush.

There are three basic ways of keeping your car clean:

— Do it yourself and spend the better part of a summer afternoon getting a little damp but taking the time to be sure the vehicle is really clean.

— Run it through a professional car wash in a fraction of the time but with less personal satisfaction.

— Take it to your favorite fundraiser in a parking lot somewhere, with a bunch of kids intent on soaking each other turned loose on your $18,000 pride and joy with high-pressure water, unknown solvents and sometimes questionable ability.

It may not be much of a choice, but it's a necessary evil.

A well-kept car has a higher resale value, and some people insist that a clean car runs better than a dirty one. But sometimes the best of intentions to keep a car looking beautiful can produce disastrous results.

Budget

bipartisan proposal.
In addition to raising the 9-cent gasoline tax and the 15-cent tax on diesel by 9/10 cents a gallon, the bill would boost taxes on alcoholic beverages, tobacco, and such luxuries as expensive cars, boats, furs and jewelry.
It would require retirees to pay slightly more for Medicare coverage of doctors' bills; limit itemized deductions of people making more than $100,000 a year and raise to $89,000 the $51,300 maximum wage against which the 1.45 percent Medicare tax is applied.
More than two dozen amendments were ready for Senate consideration, many of them designed to move the bill closer to the so-called rich package that won House approval on Tuesday.
For example, a proposal by Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., and Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., would scale back the increased gasoline tax and Medicare premiums and substitute a House-approved, three-pronged attack on those with higher incomes.
The plan would raise from 28 percent to 33 percent the maximum income tax rate that applies to upper-income people; impose a 10 percent surtax on those with taxable incomes over $1 million; and raise to 25 percent the alternative minimum tax designed to ensure well-to-do investors who have so many deductions that they might otherwise escape any tax.

A bigger package was about down for the Senate on a 67-32 vote. Sponsored by Sens. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., and Max Baucus, D-Mont., it would have included those three tax increases on the wealthy, moderated the gas tax increase and Medicare charges, retained half of $15 billion in farm-program cuts that would be required for deficit reduction, and eliminated the proposed limitation on itemized deductions claimed by higher-income people.
Raising the gasoline tax in the name of deficit reduction is one of the less popular ideas in Congress. The House would not accept a package that included such an increase, and senators were told Wednesday that drivers would rebel.
The price of gas already has gone up 35 to 40 cents a gallon over the last two months and we have the temerity to raise it another nine cents," said Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H. "Well, the president may have changed his mind (in accepting tax increases) but I haven't. I'm digging in my heels."
Symms argued that the tax is unfair to rural states, whose residents must drive considerably farther than others.
Although the bill states that 60 percent of the gasoline tax increase should go to pay for highways and bridges, other parts of the deficit plan would freeze spending for such projects. Thus, the higher gas tax likely would be spent for other services.
The $250 billion in tax increases and tightening of Medicare and other benefits represents about half a promised $500 billion deficit-reduction plan.

Inflation

flation.
"While prices in most components of the index accelerated, the run-up for petroleum-based energy prices has had the largest effect," it said in its release.
Medical care was up 0.7 percent, bringing prices 9.3 percent higher than a year earlier.
Clothing costs were also up 0.7 percent in September. Men's and boys' clothing prices fell, but women's, girls' and infants' clothing costs rose, as did the price of shoes.
On a positive note for consumers, food prices rose 0.3 percent, the same as last year. New car prices edged up only 0.1 percent after remaining unchanged in August. Car dealers better with lagging sales have been unable to wean the public from rebate programs and discounted financing.
Housing costs were up 0.4 percent, held back by a decline in hotel and motel costs, which had been rising steeply earlier in the year.
The various changes put the index for all consumer goods at 132.7 in September. That means that a hypothetical selection of goods and services costing $100 in the 1982-84 base period has risen to $132.70 last month, up $7.70 from a year earlier.

As had the short-term inflation outlook seems, analysts expect inflation to return to normal next year, unless a shooting war breaks out in the Persian Gulf and sends oil prices up further.
"It's important to draw a distinction between a one-time rise in price level... and whether or not that works itself permanently into a higher rate of inflation," said Michael Boskin, President Bush's chief economic adviser.
"Thus far it appears that the most likely outcome will be similar to its mirror image: The collapse of energy prices in 1986 when consumer prices fell... but then, the following year inflation went back more or less to its long-run historical level," Boskin told an American Stock Exchange conference earlier this week.
Previous oil shocks in 1973 and 1979 helped feed an inflationary psychology that sent prices higher for a variety of goods and services with little connection to energy.

Wyss said that's less likely to happen this time.
Because of the sluggish economy, "workers are going to be much more concerned with job security than they are desirous of wage increases," he said.
Another factor, according to Donald Ratajczak, economist at Georgia State University, is that fewer wage and other contracts are written to change automatically with the inflation rate.
Nearly 80 percent of contracts had cost-of-living escalators in the early 1970s, compared with 15 percent to 20 percent now, he said.

Worms

ments of the Pennsylvania groundhog foretell the coming of spring on Groundhog Day.
This fall, 88 of the 188 woolly worms sighted were black.
"With black in the lead, it pains me to say that we can predict a very, very cold winter from beginning to end," Mrs. Kilduff said.
The 25 foggy mornings in August mean there will be 25 days of snow. A sighting of a hornet's nest low to the ground means the snow won't stay around long, she added.
The communities of Vermilion, Ohio, and Banner Elk, N.C., also forecast winter's severity with the caterpillars. Vermilion forecaster Willis "Goodnews" Gebhardt predicted chilly weather for Ohio after examining the bugs.
"The thick overcasts on the Ohio woollyworms are as dark as a tax collector's heart — the sign of an unusual snowy and cold winter," he wrote in a Brantville weekly paper.
Mrs. Kilduff turns the Woolly Worm survey over to the National Weather Service station in nearby Jackson to aid in their forecasting.
Gil Russell, official in charge of the nation, promised to take Mrs. Kilduff's forecast into consideration. Last year, the woolly worm forecast accurately predicted an early cold winter in Kentucky, followed by a warming trend. But the worms' prediction of a harsh ending to winter didn't occur.
"There are some things I hear in folklore that I can make some kind of scientific reason for, but woolly worms is not one of them," Russell said.

Colonial owes Hartford $340,000 in Back Taxes
HARTFORD (AP) — Limited partnerships of the financially troubled Colonial Realty Co. owe the city of Hartford $340,000 in back taxes, according to city tax officials.
So far this year, limited partnerships affiliated with Colonial Realty Co. or its partners have paid $3.5 million of their $4.3 semi-annual tax bill. The $4.3 million balance is due at the beginning of the year.
"The biggest issue is what will happen in January when they owe $2 million to the City Manager Gene Shippman."
Taxes are up-to-date on the company's most prominent Hartford buildings, such as the Gold Building

Office towers and Constitution Plaza.
But two limited partnerships have not paid about $324,000 worth of taxes plus $15,000 in interest on the Summit Hotel building and Charter Oak Square apartment building at 250 Main St.
Tom Drohan, Colonial spokesman, said the taxes will be paid.
"We're negotiating with the lender and those negotiations are completed, we expect the taxes to be settled," Drohan said.
Colonial, one of the largest property owners in Connecticut, was forced into bankruptcy court Sept. 14 by six banks. Since then, the West Hartford company has filed for Naab later apologized for interrupting Foley and said it was out of order. He also said he had been misunderstood. He said Foley was wrong in saying there was only one party and only one candidate.

Naab said there are hundreds of candidates in the Nov. 6 election and he named local Republican candidates as examples.
Naab said he plans to vote for John Rowland, the Republican Party gubernatorial candidate, and he said the current campaign has shown that Weickler is a "bag of wind."

While that proceeds, city officials say they expect most of Colonial's tax bills will be paid.

However, Collins is not optimistic that money now to make sure it gets paid later, he said, and the city must develop these limited partnerships into bankruptcy court, which would force any payments.

MANCHESTER — The hiring of a Main Street project coordinator is one of several developments that have taken place in the planning of the Main Street reconstruction project, it was announced this morning.
William Snow, a former selectman and consulting engineer in the town of Naugatuck, Conn., is the coordinator, he said. Public Works Director Peter P. Lozis, who updated the massive project's status to about 25 merchants, business persons and town officials in the hearing room at Lincoln Center.

James Garvey blasts Kennelly

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

James Garvey, the Republican candidate for U.S. representative from the 1st Congressional District, has charged his opponent, Democrat incumbent Barbara Kennelly, with claiming that reform is needed in campaign finance law, but voting against attempts at real reform.
Garvey said in a news release that the ability of incumbents to garner warchests, particularly through political action committees, has led to a deterioration of the democratic process.
Garvey has proposed a plan under which the two political parties would control the distribution of political contributions to candidates, with a floor enabling everyone to

Committee backs bonding for building renovations

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — By a vote of 18-5, the Republican Town Committee Wednesday night voted to urge a "yes" vote Nov. 6 on an $11.1 million bond issue for an addition and renovations to the Municipal Building.
The vote came after three Republican town directors spoke in favor of the project and two critics of the plan reiterated their opposition.
At the beginning of the meeting, about 40 members of the town committee were present, but many had left by the time the vote was taken on the town hall question.
Republican Town Chairman John Garde asked committee members to suggest names of people to be considered for appointments to vacancies in a number of town boards and commissions when terms expire next month. The Republicans, who won a majority on the Board of Directors last November, will replace Democrats with Republicans in some posts.
The committee also heard from Robert Samuelson, who served a committee to study town office space needs, called the current plan an "out-of-control" monster.
He said the plan has been studied thoroughly since then and while the outcome is not a perfect solution, it is a good one that he can now support.
Osella said that originally he felt the about 55,000 square feet provided in the plan was too much, but that since then he has become convinced it is necessary.
Mayor Terry Markowski said that he spends a lot of time in town hall and he can see the need for space and for adequate parking.
Robert Samuelson, who served a committee to study town office space needs, called the current plan an "out-of-control" monster.
He said the flat roof planned for the addition is impractical in New England. He said the plan calls for 1,000 feet of hallways 8-foot wide and three elevators.
During her 23 years as a town resident, she also has volunteered at Manchester Memorial Hospital and has been active in the Manchester League of Women Voters.
"There are so many unusual heroes, and she certainly is one of those people who deal with the doer," she doesn't just take a position."
Jacobs said receiving the honor was a surprise.

Resident receives award

MANCHESTER — Despite being selected as the Greater Hartford Business and Professional Women's Woman of the Year, Edna Morgan Jacobs, of 62 Alexander St., remains modest about her accomplishments.
"It's a little uncomfortable [with the award], but I am a rather ordinary person that undergoes a series of events because the award is from the Connecticut Alliance for the Mentally III," Jacobs said.
Besides being the president of the 1000-member state organization, Jacobs is also president of the Genesis Board of Directors, a psycho-social rehabilitation agency in Manchester, and a member of the Manchester Commission of Mental Health.
During her 23 years as a town resident, she also has volunteered at Manchester Memorial Hospital and has been active in the Manchester League of Women Voters.
"There are so many unusual heroes, and she certainly is one of those people who deal with the doer," she doesn't just take a position."
Jacobs said receiving the honor was a surprise.

Parents' school survey planned

By BRIAN M. TROTTE
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Parents with children in the school system will get a chance to send a report card to the school system.
School Superintendent Richard Packman plans to survey parents on their opinion of the school system in order to help administrators set educational goals.
Packman said he is studying similar surveys that have been used in other towns as a guide for the local study. He expects to have a draft of the survey ready in time for the next Board of Education meeting Oct. 25.
Survey questions will ask parents how they feel about teachers, administrators and school curriculum. There also will be open-ended questions asking parents what they think the school system's goals should be for the next five years.
The town's last school survey was done in 1978. Packman said that study was far more detailed than the one he is planning. The questionnaire will be mailed to parents in early November and is expected back shortly after Thanksgiving.
Members of the PTA have volunteered to tabulate the results.
At this time, Packman said he will only survey the parents of students because they are the people who have the most direct contact with the school system.
However, school board member Thomas Manning doesn't want to limit the survey to just parents. He said that the schools exist for the entire community and it would be inappropriate to exclude anyone from the survey.
But Packman said he wants "direct feedback, not hearsay," and that the only people who can give that feedback are the parents.
"I want to specifically zero in on the people who deal with the schools on a daily basis," he said.
Packman said he had considered a town-wide survey, but chose to stick with a parental survey.

Parks and Rec Department Offerings

The following are some of the programs, trips, and special events being offered by the Manchester Parks and Recreation Department. For more information on programs, recreation facilities, or parks areas, please call the department at 647-3084/3089.

Dear Voters of the Thirteenth District,
Connecticut is in a real budget bind. The problem will not go away overnight. And it won't be solved by simplistic campaign slogans.
The challenge is to control state spending yet preserve programs and services important to people.
We're doing this! This year's state budget was up only 6.1 percent, the lowest increase in 14 years.
In this budget more than 40 percent of department budgets were frozen for the second year in a row. And almost 2000 positions were eliminated through attrition.
The Democratic Legislature formed the Thomas Commission to improve the way state government works. And there are more savings to come.
As chairman of a key Appropriations subcommittee I held the budget increase for fourteen state agencies to just 1.4 percent...eliminating 250 positions or more.
I know that programs and services state government provides are a limit to what taxpayers can afford to pay.
Bringing the state budget into balance will be a major focus of the 1991 legislative session, and I hope to be an active participant in that process.

Sincerely,
Jack Thompson

Vote for new town hall

To the Editor:
As concerned citizens and taxpayers of Manchester we must admit that we were of divided opinion when we cast our votes for the new Town Hall last year.

We are happy to note that the last year has not been wasted. We've seen the architect's revised plan where they have addressed many of the other problems. By responding to the questions asked by a special committee appointed by the board of directors, as well as from the public, they have simplified and fine-tuned the plans and have been successful in reducing the cost by nearly $3 million.

We are no longer in doubt. We will vote for this improved plan for the new Town Hall. We are sure that everyone who takes the time to study the problems that we are faced with will vote for it too.

Water-skiing benefits

To the Editor:
From the beginning of the arrival of the Coventry Lake Water-ski Club slalom ski course last spring, marvelous things have occurred.

Several members competed successfully against skiers at regional tournaments. Judy Nilson placed first in slalom skiing twice and first in trick slalom four times in the Eastern Regional Tournaments. Tonya Mauer and Tina Sawyer took first place in slalom skiing at the Connecticut Novice Tournament. Tonya Mauer also placed first in slalom skiing at the Novice Frontline Tournament and the Connecticut Federation for Water-skiing Tournament.

These women are Water-ski Club members with close ties to their community. Judy Nilson not only coached members but held a ski clinic for 14 Russian expert skiers visiting the Felix family at Coventry Lake. After the clinic, all the youngsters successfully skied on the lake.

Our community slalom course helped develop specific skills and respect for Coventry Lake. More importantly, new friendships were established with fellow community members.

Clinics in boating, skiing and water safety are planned next summer for community children and adults. Your support and suggestions are greatly appreciated.

Sheriff endorsement

To the Editor:
Along with many others, I would like to recommend Bob Neil for the position of High Sheriff of Tolland County.

As Chaplain for the Vernon Police Department, I have known and worked with Bob for approximately fifteen years. In all of that time, I have known him as a friend as well as a professional.

Bob's work for the police department and for the town should be the best recommendation for the kind of job he will do if elected to be High Sheriff.

U.S. way behind in fuel research

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — America's failure to reduce its dependence on Middle East oil could help the Japanese further bury the U.S. economy.

While U.S. leaders ponder why we failed to heed warnings about another gas crisis, some officials have been gathering evidence that the Japanese are quietly preparing to mass produce cars that don't need gasoline.

Rep. Robert Wise, D-W.Va., recently learned that Japan may be on the cutting edge of alternative fuels. The Japanese have been showing great interest in the technology, but being as coy as always about what they plan to do with it.

"I've got a bad feeling you're going to see the Japanese on alternative fuels doing to us in a few years what they did in subcompact cars maybe 20 years ago," Wise told our associate study director.

Japan isn't the only country to forge ahead with alternative fuels development. Western Europe, for example, relies on coal and nuclear power in spite of the environmental hazards of both, and uses natural gas for heating.

Thus, among the industrialized nations, the United States has the most to lose if the Persian Gulf and its oil falls into the hands of Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

Why hasn't the United States been as smart as Japan? One reason is America's insatiable appetite for oil that cannot be eliminated overnight.

"We are one of the biggest petroleum consumers on Earth. The cheap price of oil has also been a factor. So long as the commodity is cheap, the American mentality is to assume it will always be cheap.

Jimmy Carter, who presided over the oil crunch of the 1970s, began initiatives to develop new fuels. But an oil glut came along during the Reagan years. Prices plummeted and Americans got complacent. There was little incentive to conserve, much less to look ahead for a time when the nation might need another source of energy.

So the U.S. continued to shop from OPEC, despite warnings that supplies could be cut off if a crisis erupted in the Middle East.

Bush has finally pledged to seriously explore energy options, but it remains to be seen whether we have read his lips correctly on this issue.

Coal, which can now be burned more cleanly thanks to pollution control devices, is being touted as a predominant energy resource. Nuclear power is also gaining more attention. And natural gas and solar power still will be used to meet many needs.

But the efforts are mixed in politics. With oil prices rising and the Persian Gulf crisis looming as a major economic spoiler, both Democrats and Republicans will use the oil crunch to further their own goals. With no clear-cut energy strategy from the White House, each side is pushing its own agenda and no one is pushing a comprehensive approach.

U.S. leaders, including George Bush, deserve some heat for ignoring the warnings of the past. It's unfortunate that it took a maelstrom like Saddam Hussein to get the ball rolling, and it will be even more unfortunate if American soldiers pay the ultimate price for the mistakes of their leaders.

Beyond abortion
The abortion issue is not the only reason Americans should keep their eyes on new Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Liberals are concerned about the decisions he will influence on less publicized cases having to do with business practices and anti-trust laws. They also fear Souter will pick away at civil rights laws. And First Amendment purists fear Souter will try to rein in the press by taking away its protected right to express opinions. Bit by bit, Americans will learn, post facto, whether or not Souter was a good choice.

Adopt a pet: Rusty and Agatha

By BARBARA RICHMOND Manchester Herald

A male golden retriever is this week's lone dog at the Manchester Dog Pound, other than a dog being held under quarantine. For two weeks, Dog Warden Thomas Pascamelli didn't have a single dog to put up for adoption.

The golden retriever, given the name of Rusty, is about 5 years old. He was found on Adams Street on Oct. 14.

The dog pound is located off Olcott Street near the town's landfill. The dog warden is in the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. There is also someone at the pound from 6 to 9 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The phone number at the pound is 643-6642. If there is no answer, call the police department at 646-4555. There is a $5 charge to adopt a dog and the new owner must have the dog licensed. Before being licensed, it has to have its rabies shot.

A fluffy little kitten named Agatha is this week's featured pet of Aid to Helpless Animals Inc. The group, made up of volunteers, has numerous cats and kittens in need of good homes.

Protectors of Animals, another volunteer group, also has many cats and kittens in need of homes. Animals adopted from either group are given their shots, are spayed or neutered, and most are tested for feline leukemia, unless too young when taken.

The numbers to call for Aid to Helpless Animals are 242-2156, day or evening, or 232-8317. To adopt a cat from Protectors of Animals call 666-7000.

Thoughts

In his article "What Price War," Jim Wallis states, "We are confronted with soul-searching questions that simply will not go away. What are we most willing to sacrifice — an 'endless' supply of cheap oil, or the lives of the young American and Arab people it may take to keep it flowing?...What are we ready to risk — changes in our lifestyle, or the prospect of endless wars and inevitable conflagration, perhaps involving chemical and nuclear weapons?"

These questions call us to prayer and honest reflection. There will be a Peace Vigil on Friday, Oct. 19, at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Park on the corner of Main and East Center Streets from 5 to 7 p.m. It is the beginning of the Peace Sabbath weekend and an opportunity to join together and "lift every voice" to God in search of wisdom. "The more wise people there are, the safer the world will be," Ws. 6:24.

And as a sign of your commitment to search for peace, perhaps you would like to make this Peace Sabbath and Oil-Free weekend by exploring oil-free means of transportation for these two days. The most serious problems require both fasting and prayer. With this Peace Sabbath, we have the opportunity to pray.

Eccentric local musician creates unusual sounds

By DIANNA M. TALBOT Herald Features Editor

Manchester — The cover of local musician John St. Cyr's latest self-produced album, "Embassy One," features a photograph of him standing in front of an old run-down Cheshire Mill building off Pine Street.

"I find it fascinating to look at these buildings that are old and not sand-blasted," the 23-year-old

Laurel Street resident says. "It's sort of neat to look at them and think, 'Hey, there used to be a man in there, and he had a family and a life.'"

That introspective and somewhat desolate mood which the album cover depicts also serves as an outlet for St. Cyr's own feelings about his hometown.

"I'm in oblivion right now," said the singer, keyboard player and guitarist who has self-produced and sold seven of his own solo albums. "I've sort of moved into obscurity."

Not that St. Cyr is, or has ever been, a well-known musician. But many people in the local music circuit say they either know St. Cyr, have met him or have heard of him.

During the past 15 years, he says he has written about 600 songs. About half of these St. Cyr has recorded and produced onto cassettes, the best seven of which he has sold on consignment at Record Breaker in the Manchester Parkade and by word of mouth.

He says he has sold about 300 tapes for between $7 and $10, or a few dollars above the cost of making them, and has given away about the same amount.

Craig Dalek, owner of Record Breaker, calls St. Cyr a "lab musician" who creates unique sounds. "He used to walk around the parkade with a guitar, playing and singing," said Dalek, describing St. Cyr's self-promotional efforts of a few years ago. "We used to wonder where he was coming from. Not many people do that. We would think to ourselves, 'Is John altogether or working on a different wavelength?' He definitely travels to the beat of a different drummer."

Michael Beller, owner of Beller's Music Store on Purnell Place, says St. Cyr has a vivid imagination which fuels his music. His recordings and performances often are exaggerated and "done in his own, off-the-wall, bizarre way," Beller said.

About two months ago, St. Cyr performed during "Open Mike (microphone) Night," a weekly event at Oh! Riley's on Spruce Street where local acts perform in front of an audience. "He made quite an impression," said Beller, who runs the event.

During the event, St. Cyr performed music by the Beatles and his movements were exaggerated and dramatic. In the process St. Cyr chirped a guitar he was using as "windmilling" or violently whipping his playing arm around in a circle as he played the guitar, Beller said. Cyr damaged the guitar by missing the guitar strings and hitting the guitar with his pick, he said.

"It was great," said Beller, adding that St. Cyr's performances can be overwhelmingly "wacky."

"If John was an actor, he'd probably overact."

"He's got a different approach and some pretty good talent inside that wacked-out body," Beller continued. "I suppose he could be successful if he found the right balance."

St. Cyr's musical roots go back to his early childhood. He says he started playing piano at age 5 and soon after began writing poems to match the music he played. By age 10, St. Cyr said his favorite amusement was to imitate musicians in front of a mirror.

A few years later he taught himself how to play guitar and at age 13 recorded his first song — a tune called "You've Got to Know What to Do" — in a Hartford music studio. St. Cyr said he paid $10 to use the studio's equipment for one hour because he had no recording equipment of his own.

Since then, the musician has bought and acquired his own recording equipment and made recordings at his home.

St. Cyr is the first to admit that his music is unusual.

"I do a lot of different stuff on my own," he says. "I put a lot of effort into the arrangement and composition of songs."

The musician's latest album, "Embassy One," features a mixture of instrumentals and rock and roll sounds sung in ballad-like form. As with all of his own recordings, St. Cyr sang and played all the instruments on the albums.

Based on positive feedback he has received, St. Cyr said he considers the album, which he named after a pack of cigarettes he saw while vacationing in Florida, his best one yet.

This year, St. Cyr produced and sold two other albums, "Go to the Show," which he describes as sounding "cerebral" and having ballad-like songs; and "Guidance is Internal," featuring a more rock and roll sound.

St. Cyr said he enjoys making and releasing albums. "I love to release the stuff and show other people what I can do," he said.

The musician also said he is wooing record companies in the United States and in Europe for a contract to record and release his music, but so far has not struck a deal.

In the meantime, St. Cyr says, he is trying to overcome an identity problem.

"A lot of people have heard of me, but I haven't kept up with a band," he said. This has made it difficult for him to get the attention he wants.

St. Cyr has sung and played bass guitar with several area bands, including Tempus Fugit, a heavy metal band he was in during the early 1980s; and The Figs, a new-wave band he played in from 1986 to 1987. St. Cyr's most recent band, The Tuscan Iniquiters, broke up two weeks ago when it lost its rehearsal space in Vernon due to a lease change, he said.

St. Cyr also has performed as a soloist at the Manchester Elks Club and with other area bands at most night clubs in the area.

The musician says he hasn't stayed with any one band because he doesn't like being locked into playing one type of music, which is what he says most bands do.

"I'd like to find a band that plays all types of music, from dance and jazz to heavy metal, but I haven't found yet," he said. "A lot of bands like to stay in a safe corner and just play one type of music. I'd rather take a chance and play all types. It would be a thrill to see if it comes off. I might, I think I could make it if I got the vacation."

St. Cyr, who lives with his parents, said that in the future he might move to a major city in order to get his music career in full gear. The only thing he wants to do is to make music, he says, but for the past several years he has supplemented his income as a musician with part-time security jobs.

Archaeological site uncovers dental fad

By LAURA CASTANEDA The Associated Press

CUIDAD VICTORIA, Mexico — Archaeologists say the tombs of a mysterious city have yielded the first example of the use on children of an ancient art: carving or engraving teeth as a sign of beauty.

Evidence of the engraving was discovered on the teeth of a young boy's skeleton found in the ruins of Montezuma's Balcony, whose civilization was far more advanced than any previously thought to exist in the region.

Montezuma's Balcony is 310 miles north of Mexico City outside Ciudad Victoria, capital of northeastern Tamaulipas state. Its name is derived from that of Moctezuma, the Aztec king.

Tamaulipas, which spent more than $55,000 on the project, plans to open the site to the public this year.

"Two canyons and a mountain surround the remote, 12-acre city. It is reached by a steep, rocky road that veers two miles off the main highway to 80 huge slabs of stone named the "grand stairway."

Only from the top of the stairway can the remains of more than 100 circular structures be seen, each up to 50 feet in diameter, built from stacked and fitted rocks.

More than 100 skeletons were found in basements, along with ceramic fragments, food-grinding utensils, pipes, necklaces, arrowheads, knives and small figurines.

The remains of the boy, no older than 5, showed evidence of the carving, called dental mutilation, in his two upper incisors and one lower incisor.

"This is a very rare find," said Jesus Narez, director of the Montezuma's Balcony restoration project. "Until now, we have never detected dental mutilations in a person this young."

"The retained of the boy, no older than 5, showed evidence of the carving, called dental mutilation, in his two upper incisors and one lower incisor.

"We never thought we'd find these types of buildings so far north," he said, adding that huge pieces of rock used to build the Montezuma's Balcony structures were moved with the aid of planks and rope.

In primitive cultures, dental mutilation would not have had sufficient social structure to construct these buildings," he said. "They may have had chiefs, priests, workers and so on."

Several other things make Montezuma's Balcony unique, said Narez, curious investigator of the architectural and cultural collections of northern Mexico at the National Museum of Anthropology and History in Mexico City.

He said two groups of people lived there: the Grasslins, thin and fine featured, and the Robustus, big-boned and heavy. Archaeologists chose the names.

"At least for now, we think they lived there together, but radiocarbon testing is being done to determine if they were there at the same time or if one group followed the other," Narez said.

According to Narez, the city's 3,000 people probably lived between the years 600 and 1400. The elite occupied in the structures and were buried in their basements, and the others lived in wooden huts, he said.

References to Montezuma's Balcony appeared in a researcher's report in the mid-1800s, and there was another report in the 1940s. The remains of the site began in 1988 and was completed in August.

Although their culture was higher than others in the area, the Montezuma's Balcony residents were not as advanced as the Teotihuacans, Zapotecs or Mayas of southern Mexico, who built pyramids and cities in the same period.

Northern tribes like the Huastecas the warrior-like Chichimecas, led more primitive, simpler than the people of Montezuma's Balcony, Narez said.

"We never thought we'd find these types of buildings so far north," he said, adding that huge pieces of rock used to build the Montezuma's Balcony structures were moved with the aid of planks and rope.

In primitive cultures, dental mutilation would not have had sufficient social structure to construct these buildings," he said. "They may have had chiefs, priests, workers and so on."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Lady not in love with man who is

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman with a male friend who is obsessed with me. I have been dating him for more than five years. Abby, this man is totally crazy with me, but for me there is no "space" at all. He's kind, considerate and very generous. I have had him many times that I like him as a friend, but he won't accept it. He's hoping that in time it will blossom into love. Believe me, it never will.

Since I have been seeing so much of him, my social life is the pits; everyone thinks it's a love affair, and it's not.

Some of my friends have suggested that this could be a "fatal attraction" situation. I want to end this friendship, but I don't know how to handle it. Your year-old niece,

NOT ATTRACTED

DEAR NOT ATTRACTED: This man is trying to wear you down with his persistence. He has nothing to lose and everything to gain by taking up as much of your time as you will give him.

Stop doing him: tell him you love him "like a brother," but he deserves someone who can love him like a lover.

Don't you have any friends you can fix him up with? One woman's leftovers can be another woman's banquet.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for 28 years, but his behavior these past few months has me worried. He goes out in the mornings to turn on the lawn sprinkler wearing only his boxer shorts. We live on a corner where he is visible from two angles.

Daily, after he comes out of our sauna, he wraps a towel around his middle, then sits on the patio to cool off in full view of our neighbors. Last week, I was apalled when I came home from work to find him preparing supper with only a T-shirt on!

Tonight, I discovered him barbecuing in a long shirt. Abby, he had to walk up several stairs to come back into the house. I am totally disgusted with this kind of behavior and want your opinion of this 49-year-old man.

DEAR BAFFLED: Your husband could be careless, thoughtless, or just plain unconcerned about what the neighbors might see or think.

But if you suspect that his behavior has suddenly become exhibitionistic and totally out of character with his normal personality, I urge that you persuade him to see his physician for a complete examination from the neck

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for 28 years, but his behavior these past few months has me worried. He goes out in the mornings to turn on the lawn sprinkler wearing only his boxer shorts. We live on a corner where he is visible from two angles.

Daily, after he comes out of our sauna, he wraps a towel around his middle, then sits on the patio to cool off in full view of our neighbors. Last week, I was apalled when I came home from work to find him preparing supper with only a T-shirt on!

Tonight, I discovered him barbecuing in a long shirt. Abby, he had to walk up several stairs to come back into the house. I am totally disgusted with this kind of behavior and want your opinion of this 49-year-old man.

DEAR BAFFLED: Your husband could be careless, thoughtless, or just plain unconcerned about what the neighbors might see or think.

But if you suspect that his behavior has suddenly become exhibitionistic and totally out of character with his normal personality, I urge that you persuade him to see his physician for a complete examination from the neck

Drug therapy may control asthma

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you please provide information on asthma and asthmatic bronchitis?

Nancy Judd, 44, said at a tearful news conference Wednesday that she will continue writing songs. Her daughter, Wynonna, 26, will start a solo career.

The Judds were voted out of the year for the third straight year Oct. 8 by the Country Music Association. Their hits include "Grandpa," "Mama He's Crazy," "Why Not Me," "Rackin' With the Rhythm" and their current "Born to Be Blue."

Their current tour is booked through Nov. 4 at Philadelphia, but RCA spokesman Greg McCam said they were certain to be set.

Nancy Judd did not specify which type of hepatitis, an inflammation of the liver, she has. Symptoms include weakness, loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting and jaundice. Some strains of hepatitis are chronic, others more short-lived.

Arsenio Hall's former manager says he made the talk show star and is suing for half his profits from "The Arsenio Hall Show."

Robert Wachs, fired by Hall on Aug. 2, said in a lawsuit filed Wednesday that Hall broke his contract with him. He is seeking $75 million in damages. Wachs said he and Hall agreed in a 1988 oral contract that Hall would pay Wachs' X Management Inc. half the comedian's profits from his show and 15 percent of Hall's fee as the syndicated program's executive producer.

The lawsuit said Hall made about $5.5 million from the show in 1989.

A spokeswoman for the comedian had no comment on the lawsuit. An attorney for Hall did not return a call.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE — Playwright Arthur Miller got a surprise during a gala in his honor when Naughtaug High School's marching and concert bands came tooting "Happy Birthday" down the aisles of New York's Lincoln Center.

Ashma attacks are often caused by air pollution. I remember, as a medical student in New Orleans, seeing epidemics of asthma when the wind direction changed over the city and brought in fumes from garbage incinerators in nearby communities. Asthma can also be triggered by tobacco smoke, pollen and other respiratory irritants. In addition, bronchial infection (bronchitis) in asthmatics can lead to asthma attacks.

Treatment of acute asthma requires drugs called bronchodilators — medicine taken in pill, liquid or aerosol forms to relax bronchial spasms. Such drugs include Proventil, Alupron, theophylline and cortisone. Epinephrine injections may be necessary. In severe attacks, intravenous theophylline plus inhaled aerosolized medicine, is standard therapy.

In the presence of infection (asthmatic bronchitis), antibiotics must be added.

Asthma can frequently be prevented by avoiding air pollution and using several types of bronchodilators such as Proventil, inhaler or Azmacort — on a regular basis.

Although asthma is a common, often serious affliction, it can be treated and controlled with the variety of drugs now available.

Peck bankruptcy plan wins speedy approval

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Connecticut real estate giant Arnold Peck said a federal bankruptcy judge's decision to let him stay in business while he reorganizes and gradually liquidates his properties will help him find his way back to the top in six to nine months.

"Now I can stick to just buying and selling and negotiating real estate deals. In five years I will be the No. 1 real estate man in New England," Peck said Wednesday.

These last two years have been particularly tough for Peck. A fire in his home in 1987, followed by a major fire at one of his properties, and a major fire at another, all in 1988, wiped out much of his fortune.

Peck's bankruptcy plan was approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Alan H.W. Shiff on Wednesday. The plan provides for the liquidation of his properties and the reorganization of his business.

Peck said he had been in court for three weeks, but the judge's decision was reached in a matter of hours.

Peck had warned that if he were forced to dump all his property on the market at once under a forced liquidation, real estate prices would sink even further.

Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings had begun on Feb. 1, after an initial attempt by three banks to force Peck to liquidate his properties to satisfy his debts. Under Chapter 11, a company obtains a court order freeing it from the threat of creditors' lawsuits until it can develop a plan to pay its debts in order.

UTC reports record third quarter earnings

HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford-based United Technologies Corp. reported a record 22 percent increase in third-quarter earnings, citing a one-time pre-tax gain of $46.5 million from the sale of the corporation's majority interest in two Italian automotive companies.

Net earnings for the third quarter totaled $29.8 million, or $1.76 per share, on revenues of $5.3 billion, compared with earnings of $19.6 million, or $1.39 per share, on revenues of $4.8 billion for the same period last year, the company announced Wednesday.

Profits for the first nine months rose 12 percent to $581.8 million, or $4.30 per share, compared with $517 million, or $3.84 a share during the same period in 1989.

"I am particularly pleased with the strength of our performance, especially in light of the poor economic environment and the weakness in the U.S. residential housing and automotive markets," said Robert F. Daniel, UTC's chairman and chief executive officer.

Without the gains from the sale of the corporation's 75 percent interest in Italian automotive firms Davia and Aura, earnings would have increased 7.5 percent in the third quarter, the company said.

The corporation's power segment, which includes Pratt & Whitney, posted earnings of $242 million for the third quarter, a $39 million decrease over the same quarter of 1989.

The decline reflected a slight cooling of last year's record jet engine sales and a one-time gain of more than $40 million when several of Pratt & Whitney's overseas partners increased their interest in joint projects, according to UTC spokesman Peter Kowalek.

Operating profits from UTC's building systems segment, which includes its Carrier Air Conditioning and Otis Elevator subsidiaries, were $138 million, down $15 million from the third quarter of 1989, due in part to the nation's housing slump, the company said.

The corporation saw improvements in performance in its flight systems segment, which includes Sikorsky Helicopter and Windsor Locks-based Hamilton Standard. Flight systems posted earnings of $50 million for the quarter, compared with a $34 million loss in the same quarter of 1989.

The company's industrial segment posted a net $5 million in earnings for the third quarter, up from $39 million for the same period a year earlier, but said the figure was inflated by the gain from the sale of UTC's interest in the Italian automotive firms.

UTC provides a broad range of high-technology products and support services for the aerospace, building systems and automotive industries. The corporation's best known products include Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines, Carrier heating and air-conditioning systems, Otis elevators and escalators, Sikorsky helicopters, Hamilton Standard aerospace systems and Norden defense systems.

ings, wallpiped by a slowing economy, foreign competition and rising fuel costs, industry analysts say.

Chrysler Corp. likely will report an especially hard quarter, more than wiping out the profits it made in the first six months of the year, analysts said Wednesday.

In Brief . . .

■ Housing starts skidded 0.6 percent in September, continuing an eight-month slide that has become the longest decline in residential building since the recession of 1982.

■ The Commerce Department said Wednesday that starts of new homes and apartments fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.4 million units on top of a 1 percent drop in August.

■ Industrial production rose 0.2 percent in September, with a 7.5 percent spurt in automobile production making an underlying manufacturing weakness.

■ Excluding autos, production dropped 0.1 percent. The Federal Reserve said Wednesday that at the same time, the Fed revised output figures for July and August to show the industrial economy stronger than first reported last summer.

■ Warren H. Phillips, chairman and chief executive of Dow Jones & Co. Inc., announced he would resign as chief executive duties on Jan. 1 and retire as chairman next July.

■ Phillips, 64, has been chief executive of the media and financial information companies since July.

■ Three auto consumer groups asked Americans to refuse to buy any car not equipped with air bags and chastised some Japanese automakers for lagging behind Western counterparts in installing the crash-protection devices.

■ Motor Voters, the Center for Auto Safety and the U.S. Public Interest Research Group staged news conferences and demonstrations Wednesday in 12 cities to propose the boycott.

Astrograph

Your Birthday

Oct. 19, 1990

There are strong indications your earnings will be up in the year ahead and this is well and good. However, there are also some signals that show you might not manage your resources as wisely as you should.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you get involved in a joint venture arrangement that requires an investment from both parties, be sure the ante on behalf of each is equal. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-9128. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Opinions you hold today regarding critical issues are not likely to be in step with those of the majority. There could be valid reasons why most see things one way and you another.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to go against making impulsive judgments based on your feelings today. If you let your emotions overrule your logic, it could result in a distorted assessment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you have rather sober judgment and if you take a chance, it must be on a sure thing. Today, however, you may be a little too reckless for your own good.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's best not to affix your signature to any type of agreement today about which you are dubious in hopes it will be recalled later. You may regret the decision.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have ample initiative and motivation today, but you might be inclined to do things in fits and starts. A lack of continuity and method could severely lessen your productivity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will require dedicated effort on your behalf to fulfill your expectations today. You could be disappointed if you depend upon chance or even old strategies to help better your lot.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Just because someone you respect is known, edible in a specific area, doesn't mean this person is as astute in every thing else. Be careful to whom you go for advice today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to keep abreast of your current duties and responsibilities because what you don't do now could be even more difficult with which to contend later. You can't foresee the inevitable.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Extravagant whims of the moment could overpower your more prudent thoughts today. You might miscalculate and bank too loosely on money. Control expenditures, and let them control you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) In an important involvement today, there is a possibility you might miscalculate and bank too heavily upon what you believe to be your ace in the hole. Be realistic.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a very thin line today between wistful thinking and positive thinking. Disappointments are possible if you have difficulty in being able to distinguish between the two.

Rare bird on display

By James Jacoby

In today's rather routine four-spade contract, West got off to the unusual lead of five hearts. Although hearts was declarer's second suit, West hoped to perhaps catch his partner with the ace or queen plus shortness. When dummy's jack of hearts held the first trick, declarer did not want to try to take tricks with a cross-ruff for fear that either defender might ruff the second round of diamonds. That might enable the defense to take four tricks. So declarer played trumps. East won the second spade and played another to prevent declarer from ruffing a heart in dummy. Declarer won the king of spades, played one more spade, discarding a

You can talk all you want about strategy and the technical aspect of the game of soccer, but one simple fact remains: That was never more evident than Wednesday afternoon when Xavier High, on the defensive much of the second half, made a first-half goal stand up for a 1-0 victory over East Catholic in All Connecticut Conference boys' action at the Eagles' field.

"There's only one star that means anything and that's who has the one on the scoreboard," Xavier coach Mary Ryzek rightfully pointed out. "We hit a quality goal post. Maybe we should have the post a little narrower," Eagle coach Tom Main said. "I should talk to the groundskeeper about doing a better job as far as home field advantage," he quipped.

The loss was the first in ACC play for the Eagles, who fell into second place at 4-1-1 (9 points). Fairfield Prep, with its 3-0 shutout of St. Bernard, took over the top rung at 5-1 (10 points). East is 4-4-2.

"This doesn't help us in the long run," Main said. "Our priority now is to work hard as a team. To win the conference would be nice, but our goal still is to be the tournament."

East didn't do that a year ago

Posts in the way as East suffers ACC loss

MANCHESTER — You can talk all you want about strategy and the technical aspect of the game of soccer, but one simple fact remains: That was never more evident than Wednesday afternoon when Xavier High, on the defensive much of the second half, made a first-half goal stand up for a 1-0 victory over East Catholic in All Connecticut Conference boys' action at the Eagles' field.

"There's only one star that means anything and that's who has the one on the scoreboard," Xavier coach Mary Ryzek rightfully pointed out. "We hit a quality goal post. Maybe we should have the post a little narrower," Eagle coach Tom Main said. "I should talk to the groundskeeper about doing a better job as far as home field advantage," he quipped.

The loss was the first in ACC play for the Eagles, who fell into second place at 4-1-1 (9 points). Fairfield Prep, with its 3-0 shutout of St. Bernard, took over the top rung at 5-1 (10 points). East is 4-4-2.

"This doesn't help us in the long run," Main said. "Our priority now is to work hard as a team. To win the conference would be nice, but our goal still is to be the tournament."

East didn't do that a year ago

CAREFULLY WATCHED — East Catholic's Peter Maglicic (14), shadowed most of the afternoon, comes under the watchful eye of Xavier's Matt Smith during Wednesday's game at Eagle Field. The visiting Falcons won, 1-0, to knock East out of first place in the ACC.

Attitude the key for new MHS baseball regime

MANCHESTER — A new coaching regime for the Manchester High baseball team will begin in the spring, one which will stress team unity and a positive attitude.

Dave Blanchard, a math teacher at Manchester High and junior varsity baseball coach the past two years, will step into the coaching batter's box for the Indians, assuming the position vacated by Don Race who retired in June.

Race had been the head coach since 1981. Historically, Manchester baseball has been a winner (117-95 during the Race era), but, that all-important intangible ingredient integral to championship teams has been missing.

Manchester, which had an opportunity to win the outright CCC East title on the last day of last season, has not won a league championship since 1959.

Blanchard, 27, will immediately address the attitude issue.

"Hopefully, I can be a motivator," Blanchard, a 1981 Griswold High graduate and 1985 University of Connecticut grad, said. "When I'm in practice I try to get the kids going all the time."

Since Blanchard, who lives in Manchester, began coaching baseball at Manchester, he has been encouraged by the array of talent present. However, that winning ingredient has been missing.

"They don't have that aggressive attitude," Blanchard said. "The past couple of years the players that played varsity had talent. I just don't think they used it to its ability."

First and foremost, Blanchard's main task will be instilling a winning attitude in the Indians.

"Hopefully, the coaches around the league will maybe see a different Manchester kid, a more competitive, aggressive player," Blanchard explained.

Blanchard was a member of Griswold's Class S state champion baseball team in 1981 before he played two years at UConn-Avery Point under George Greer and Roger Bidwell. Blanchard has coached the Jewish City American Legion baseball team the past three summers.

"That's where I got a lot of my coaching ideas from," Blanchard said, referring to Greer and Bidwell. "I found them to be outstanding coaches."

Making the adjustment from JV coach to head coach should be a smooth transition for Blanchard.

"I don't feel like I'm going to be the best of places or anything like that. Coming into it one of the questions you ask is how is the transition going to be from the prior coach. I'm familiar with the system and the majority of the players are going to be the JV players I coached for the last two years. They know where I come from and what I expect of them."

Blanchard retains the utmost respect for Race.

"I learned a lot from him," he said. "He's a very, very organized person and he really knew his stuff."

The Indian junior varsity team went 30-10 under Blanchard the last two years.

"I enjoy teaching, working with kids," Blanchard said. "I also love coaching."

Coches around the CCC East may see a different Manchester baseball player in the spring of 1991.

If Dave Blanchard has anything to say about it.

WINNING BLOW — Cincinnati's Joe Oliver delivers the game-winning hit in the 10th inning of Game 2 in the World Series Wednesday night. The Reds beat the A's, 5-4, to go up 2-0 in the best-of-seven series. The catcher is Terry Steinbach and umpire Rocky Roe.

Reds in the driver's seat as clubs head to Oakland

CINCINNATI — At least the Oakland A's have a day off to figure out what happened.

Manager Tony La Russa and his A's have some time to consider how they lost the first two games of the World Series and turned Billy Hatcher and Billy Bates into local legends.

In a game that had more twists and turns than the Ohio River, Cincinnati beat Oakland 5-4 in 10 innings Wednesday night. Teams that have taken a 2-0 lead have gone on to win the Series 31 times in 41 chances.

"Once we won the division, this year felt it could win," Kansas Manager Lou Piniella said. "I knew that once we got over the hump and won the division, we'd be competitive in postseason play."

Sure, most thought the Reds might win a game in the World Series. But a 2-0 lead against the mighty A's?

Oakland entered the World Series with 10 consecutive postseason wins and looking for its second consecutive world championship. They swept through the Boston Red Sox in the playoffs and had Dave Stewart well rested to open against the Reds.

Cincinnati took care of Stewart, winning 7-0 in Game 1, and used another team effort to make the long trip to California very pleasant.

Game 3 is set for Friday night when Tom Browning is scheduled to pitch for the Reds against Mike Moore.

The A's seemed set when Rickey Henderson scored in the first inning of Game 2. They were 2-7 during the season when Henderson scored.

"I had never seen Eckersley pitch before and I wanted to take a pitch and see how he threw. I was glad after I hit the ball that it stayed fair."

The A's took a 4-2 lead with three runs in the third inning off a shaky Danny Jackson. Jose Canseco hit his first homer since Sept. 16. Ron Hassey had a sacrifice fly and Mike Galego cutpied the timing with an RBI single.

Over on this night, the A's couldn't hold the lead in Hatcher.

Cincinnati tied on Ron Oester's pinch single off Bob Weir to make it 4-3. The Reds tied it in the eighth when Hatcher led off with a triple and eventually scored on pinch-hitter Glenn Briggs' RBI force out at second.

Hatcher, a platoon player in the center field, is 7-for-7 in the two games with five extra base hits. His streak of seven hits in a row broke the previous mark set by Goose Goslin (1924) and tied by Thurman Munson (1976).

"I don't care about the records," Hatcher said. "I just want that win."

Hatcher also doubled in a run and scored in the first, doubled in the fifth and reached on a bunt single in the fifth. He is 4th player to have four hits in a World Series game.

"We know we are playing against the world champions and they had won 10 consecutive postseason

TORONTO (AP) — It was easier to spell the name of the Hartford Whalers' goaltender than it was to get a puck past him.

Sidorkiewicz made 30 saves as the Whalers defeated the winless Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1 on Wednesday night. He's accounted for all of Hartford's 10 points this season with a 4-2 record and has a 2.25 goals-against average. Toronto is 0-5-1.

"My aim this season was to get off to a good start," Sidorkiewicz said. "Last year, I think after my first four games I was 0-4 and my goals-against average was about five, so this year I really wanted to get off to a good start."

Sidorkiewicz credits a summer of relaxation for his early-season success that has helped Hartford grab first place in the Adams Division with a one-point margin over second-place Boston.

"I tried to enjoy the summer because it's a long haul once the season starts," Sidorkiewicz said. "If you don't have some fun during the summer, you're in for a long hockey season. I didn't do that much. I'm a boring guy. But I arrived at training camp in a good frame of mind."

He got big hits from his goal posts against the Maple Leafs as three shots rang off the pipes.

"Sometimes, when things are going your way, you get those breaks," Sidorkiewicz said. "It all evens out over the course of a season though. There are nights those shots would get in every time."

Ray Ferraro and Scott Young scored power-play goals to give the Whalers a 2-0 first-period lead.

"We took the crowd out of the game early," Sidorkiewicz said.

Toronto's Vince Damphouse ended Sidorkiewicz's bid for a shutout with a goal at 8:04 of the third period.

Toronto pulled goalie Jeff Reese with 1:18 remaining and Hartford's Paul Cyr scored an empty-net goal with 42 seconds left.

Hartford was two for seven on the power play. Toronto was blanked in eight chances.

"We had to kill 10 minutes worth of power plays in the first period and you can't win that way," Maple Leaf coach Doug Carpenter said.

It was Hartford's first win in four road games of the new season.

"I'm pleased that the effort is there," coach Rick Ley said. "We're a lot better team right now than we were at this time last year."

"Everybody is working hard and coming to the rink prepared to put out for one another. That's what's important. It's a team thing and we're all going in the same direction."

Hartford ousted Toronto 17-6 in the first period and took a 2-0 lead. Toronto's Gary Leeman showed a gloved fist at Randy Ladouceur's 39 seconds into the game and was sent off for hitting. Six seconds later, Ferraro snarped Kevin Dineen's cross-pipe pass behind goaltender Jeff Reese.

Toronto's Drake Berenhouse hit Ulf Samuelsson's stick with a glove after a whistle and he was sent off for roughing at 15:54. At 15:51, Young drilled a low shot from the blue line that skipped past a screened Reese.

In the second period, Toronto came up empty on a four-minute power play set up by Samuelsson's temper tantrum. After a fight with Al Lafare, Samuelsson became enraged when he saw he had been assessed an instigating minor and an unsportsmanlike conduct minor on top of the fighting major.

He verbally accused referee Bill McCrea. A 10-minute misconduct followed, then a game misconduct. On the walk to the dressing room, the 6-foot-11 Swede grabbed a long-handled squeegee and smashed it against the ice-cleaning machine.

Hartford, 1-0-1 in its current four-game road trip, is idle until Friday night when it visits the Los Angeles Kings in a 10:35 p.m. start.

Sabres, Leafs remain NHL's winless

By KEN RAPPOPORT The Associated Press

The home-ice advantage hasn't meant much to the Sabres and the Toronto Maple Leafs so far this season.

Desjardins in the first period and Shayne Corson in the second.

The Bruins Skrudland and Denis Savard also scored for the Canadiens, and Savard scored two assists as Montreal outshot the Sabres 33-30.

Franco Turotte scored twice for Buffalo.

Keanes scored two goals on tips-in of blocked teammates' shots.

The Maple Leafs, meanwhile, are still trying to figure out their problem.

Canadiens 4, Sabres 3; Mike Keanes scored twice to lead Montreal over Buffalo.

Keanes scored both his goals on tips-in of blocked teammates' shots.

The Bruins Skrudland and Denis Savard also scored for the Canadiens, and Savard scored two assists as Montreal outshot the Sabres 33-30.

When it was 4-0, we seemed to go into a little bit of a shell in the second period and into the third, and we let them get back into the game," he said.

"We're playing with so much confidence right now. We felt we were in pretty good control even when they started coming back. Like anything, winning is a habit and losing is a habit."

Bradley broke a 1-1 tie at 15:45 with a 15-foot shot for the far corner, behind goaltender Andy Moog.

The Bruins argued vehemently that Bradley didn't clear the offensive zone on a delayed offside.

"Anytime you get a chance to get a national audience, you want it."

"Tonight's game will be the only prime-time appearance this season for the Bruins, which may be just as well. For one thing, they're 5-16 at night. For another, in the weeks since several players were accused of sexually harassing a female reporter, New England has lost three in a row and has been outscored 111-40.

"It's something that you have to overcome, but no one really cares what our problems are," Patriots coach Rod Rust said.

A loss to Miami would give the Patriots their first loss since 1981, when they finished 2-14.

Pats see the new Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — The new, improved Miami Dolphins make their 1990 prime-time TV debut tonight, and they're hoping the show's a hit.

"This is a good chance to show everybody that we're for real," cornerback Tim McKeyser said.

Seeing their first playoff berth since 1985, the Dolphins will assume sole possession of the AFC East if they beat struggling New England Miami 4-1.

The Dolphins used to frequent prime-time players; only the Los Angeles Raiders have more NFL home games as a night. For some Dolphins, prime-time TV provides additional motivation.

"I'll admit it does," McKeyser said. "Everyone's watching — fellow players, ex-teammates, friends. You want to play well . . ."

"It's something that you have to overcome, but no one really cares what our problems are," Patriots coach Rod Rust said.

A loss to Miami would give the Patriots their first loss since 1981, when they finished 2-14.

"Anytime you get a chance to get a national audience, you want it."

"Tonight's game will be the only prime-time appearance this season for the Patriots, which may be just as well. For one thing, they're 5-16 at night. For another, in the weeks since several players were accused of sexually harassing a female reporter, New England has lost three in a row and has been outscored 111-40.
