

Unbeaten Nebraska not getting respect in college poll

By RICK WARNER
The Associated Press

Nebraska has won everything this season but the respect of poll voters. The 7-0 Cornhuskers, who have yet to play a ranked team, remained fourth in this week's Associated Press Top 25 even though the two teams ranked ahead of them lost.

Miami dropped from second to eighth after losing to Notre Dame 29-20 and Tennessee played from third to 11th after falling to Alabama 9-6. But instead of Nebraska moving up, Auburn and Notre Dame leaptfrogged over the Cornhuskers to take over the No. 2 and No. 3 spots behind top-ranked Virginia.

Nebraska, which routed Oklahoma State 31-3 Saturday, has outscored its opponents 305-53. But the opposition has a combined winning percentage of only .471, so many of the 60 sports writers and broadcasters who vote in the poll aren't sure if the Cornhuskers are for real.

"There's a perception that we haven't played anybody," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said Monday. "Our schedule hasn't been overwhelming, but it's better than perception."

The Cornhuskers have beaten Notre Dame, Northern Illinois, Missouri and Oklahoma State. Although none of them were ranked,

Voters OK 5th budget

COVENTRY — On the fifth try, in a vote of 1,264-1,005, townshippers approved a $15.4 million budget Tuesday in a referendum — four months into the current fiscal year.

Not even pouring rain could keep voters away, as 43 percent of the town's 5,352 registered voters turned out, according to Town Clerk Rob Bena.

"After nine months, a budget has been born," shouted someone after results were announced at the Town Office Building.

Voters had rejected four previous higher budgets in separate referendums.

Candidates have debate debate

By ALEX GIRELLI

Reginald Preble, the Republican challenger in the 13th Assembly District, said this morning he will give his Democratic incumbent opponent, John Thompson, until noon Friday to respond to his request for a Nov. 2 debate.

Preble said that Thompson had agreed to the debate, but on Tuesday night declined in a conversation with Preble that he had accepted.

He said Thompson told him he would be unavailable Nov. 2.

Despite the embargo, the Israeli military remains "very solidly in Kuwait" and is proof that the embargo imposed by the United Nations is beginning to take effect, he said. He said U.S. authorities also believe Iraq is running short of tires, spare parts and other supplies needed to keep its military machinery running.

He said the international trade embargo placed on Iraq after its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait is starting to have an effect, says Pete Williams, the chief spokesman for Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Williams said Tuesday that Iraq's recent rationing of civilian gasoline supplies is proof that the embargo imposed by the United Nations is beginning to take effect. He said U.S. authorities also believe Iraq is running short of tires, spare parts and other supplies needed to keep its military machinery running.

Probate judge term limited

By ALEX GIRELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Leo Barrett, the Republican candidate for probate judge, charged this morning that his incumbent Democratic opponent, William FitzGerald, comes with a $50,000 price tag he is not willing to pay.

Barrett, who described his claim as a "blockbuster issue," said that if FitzGerald is elected he will not be allowed by the state constitution to complete his four-year term and a special election may have to be held to replace him at a possible cost of $50,000.

FitzGerald will turn 70 years old on April 13, 1994, and will not be allowed under the constitution to continue in office after that. His term would expire in Jan. 1, 1995.

Barrett, who described his claim as a "blockbuster issue," said that if FitzGerald is elected he will not be allowed by the state constitution to complete his four-year term and a special election may have to be held to replace him at a possible cost of $50,000.

Freon overcomes students

By SCOTT BREDE
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — A leak of freon gas at Illing Junior High School around 10 a.m. today sent five students and 13 cafeteria workers to Manchester Memorial Hospital.

The three students were apparently not injured. But one cafeteria worker was suffering from involuntary vomiting and at least one other was hospitalized.

Richard Lindgren said the students and employees were taken to the hospital for "precautionary checks."

Thomas Zowin, a chemistry professor at Manchester Community College, said that freon, because its molecular structure is close to chloroform, has a similar effect if inhaled, causing lightheadedness, dizziness and nausea.

Stan Choman, a technician at Appliance Repair Inc. of Coventry, also said if the gas comes in contact with open flame, it becomes poisonous, a colorless, volatile and highly poisonous gas.

Budget bombast bombards

By MELISSA B. ROBINSON

WASHINGTON — As one Connecticut man sees it, smokers cannot control their habit and should not have to pay because of it.

"The cigarette taxes proposed are grossly unfair," wrote the man in a letter to Sen. Christopher Dodd.

This week, Manchester students are getting treated to the antics of Alexander "Sasha" Slaughton, a clown from the Soviet Union, who is the first independent circus artist from that country to be touring the United States.

"The kids isn't even following us," said his partner Ray Grin.

Sasha, who is in United States on an exchange program, has been touring the U.S. with the National Circus Project for the past year.

"Being thousands of miles away from his home in Riga, Latvia, doesn't make Sasha any less at ease with his audience."

"Children in United States think same as children in Soviet Union," said Sasha in his broken English. "Children are very open, they have many, many ideas."

"Children are the best critics because they are not inhibited to say what they really think about the show," said Grin, translating his partner's statement.

Sasha, 42, joined the professional circus when he was 16, but he began clowning when he was seven.

"In Soviet Union, clowns are held at much higher regard" than in this country, Sasha said, comparing the vocation to that of a rock star or a Hollywood actor.

"It was really neat," said sixth grader Kelly Chameroy, who was shown earlier.

Students clown around with circus performers

By SCOTT BREDE
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Nine-year-old Chris Cote was in the gymnasium of Waddell Elementary School Tuesday afternoon trying to balance a plate on a stick.

"It's real easy," said Cote, a fourth-grader at the school. "All I do is balance it in the middle of the stick and then spin it."

With that, the plate spiraled around the stick for about seven seconds before it tipped down and fell off.

Despite his plate spinning talents, Cote said he rather be a trapeze star.

Behind him, other Waddell students were juggling and tossing Chinese balance sticks.

Not your average day at the elementary school, but then again it's not every day that the circus comes to town.

All this week and next week, performers from the National Circus Project are touring Manchester's elementary schools, teaching children tricks they never expected to learn in school.

Two circus performers came to Waddell Tuesday to give an early morning demonstration of their talents. In the afternoon, fourth- and sixth-graders at the school got to try some of the tricks, which were shown earlier.

Rights leaders angered over veto of bias bill

By SONYA ROSS
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Months ago, President Bush was "talking the talk." But in the language of the civil rights movement, "talking the talk" must be accompanied by "walking the walk," and now Bush is seen as walking the wrong way.

Civil rights leaders bitterly accused the president of betrayal for vetoing, as expected, a major anti-discrimination bill Monday. Bush said the measure would have led to hiring quotas, something sponsors dispute.

Coretta Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King Jr., said Tuesday the president had rendered to "those who profit from discrimination." She said the veto "demonstrates racist attitudes among those who call the shots in the White House."

"How far we have regressed since the days when a courageous and principled president supported civil rights legislation and challenged the nation to a higher standard of equality," she said, referring to President Lyndon Johnson, who signed the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Civil rights leaders' criticism for the veto ended a relatively peaceful period in the relationship between the White House and civil rights.

"We don't have to read his lips anymore," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Atlanta-based civil rights group founded by King. "His lips have spoken loud and clear."

"A few months ago, he was talking the talk," said Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., once a King aide. "He met with people. He said good things. It was a breath of fresh air for the civil rights movement." But Lewis said Bush walked the wrong way.

"He's not talking the talk anymore," Lewis said. "But there is a rift, there will be a schism, because his action was very divisive."

The Senate planned an override vote today on the measure, which would effectively overturn six U.S. Supreme Court decisions that have made it harder for women and minorities to prove job discrimination. Two-thirds majorities in both the Senate and House are required to override a veto.

Bush predicted Tuesday that Congress would uphold his veto.

"I feel pretty good. I think we're in good shape," he said in Waterbury, Conn., where he was campaigning for Gary Franks, a black Republican congressional candidate who also opposed the bill.

Asked what signal his veto sent to minorities, the president said, "I think it sends a signal that we are for civil rights and are opposed to quotas."

He added, "I do what I think is right and I think I'll have strong support across racial lines."

'Keating Five' investigation put off until after election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee, unable to make a decision to dismiss or advance cases against the "Keating Five" senators, will instead hold a post-election hearing that will keep the inquiry alive for all those under investigation.

The committee decision ignored for the present its special counsel's recommendation that the investigation be dismissed against Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and the only Republican in the probe, John McCain of Arizona.

The ranking committee Republican, Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, said the three Democrats and three Republicans on the panel voted without gaining a majority of four on "every possible combination and permutation" that would have advanced or dismissed the investigation.

But the committee was unanimous, he said, in ordering the fact-finding hearing that panel Chairman Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said could take 10 days.

Heflin said the committee expected to complete its work and report to the Senate by Dec. 31.

Cranston issued a statement saying, "The public is entitled to get beyond the malicious rumors and selective leaks, and to know all the facts. I see this as an opportunity to achieve the public vindication I know I deserve."

Robert S. Bennett, also proposed that the investigation be continued against three Democrats: Alan Cranston of California, Donald W. Riegle of Michigan and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona.

McCain called the committee's refusal to act "an outrage" that will lead to allegations of a cover up of findings that proposed his exoneration.

Riegle said he was bound by a committee requirement not to discuss the case, but said, "It's impossible to respond adequately to false charges and inaccurate and misleading characterizations."

New balloon technique helps infertile women

CHICAGO (AP) — A new device that opens blocked fallopian tubes with a tiny balloon can offer a simpler and cheaper method for helping infertile women become pregnant, doctors reported today.

However, the technique is designed for a particular type of blockage, present among only 10 percent of the estimated 1 million American women who have blocked fallopian tubes.

The procedure, which requires neither surgery nor general anesthesia, is similar to the use of balloons to open the clogged arteries of heart patients, according to the report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The balloon is mounted on a flexible tube called a catheter and threaded through the womb into one of the fallopian tubes, which connect the uterus to the ovaries. Once the balloon is in place, doctors inflate it to open the passage.

Dr. Edmund Confino, the study's lead author and director of education in obstetrics and gynecology at Mount Sinai Hospital Medical Center in Chicago, said the procedure could reduce by two-thirds the cost of treating women with blockages, who now usually choose between microsurgery or test-tube fertilization.

The procedure is expected to cost a third as much as test-tube fertilization, which totals about $6,000, succeeds about 20 percent of the time and results in only a single pregnancy. Microsurgery, in which the patient's abdomen is opened, typically costs up to $10,000, Confino said.

Former model wins $4 million from Guccione

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Guccione and Penthouse magazine have been ordered to pay more than $4 million to a former Pet of the Year who said she was forced to perform hard-core sex acts and sleep with two Guccione associates.

"Sexual slavery was not part of her job description," Supreme Court Justice Elliott Wilk said in finding that the magazine publisher made sexual demands on Marjorie Thoreson as a condition of employment at Penthouse, where she worked from 1973 to 1980.

She said Guccione also ordered her to carry on an affair with his financial adviser so he would move from England to the United States. She said she severed the relationship because it appeared the adviser was going to leave his wife and children.

Thoreson's lawyer, Murray Schwartz, said she cried when he called her in California with the news.

This decision is "for all the women like her who may have suffered at the hands of Guccione," Schwartz said. "He has finally been held accountable."

Penthouse's lawyer, Jeffrey Datchman, called the award an outrage and said he will appeal.

He said that Thoreson had a relationship with Guccione before she was employed by Penthouse. But "during the time of her employment, there was no sexual relationship between her and anybody associated with Penthouse."

At the trial, Guccione testified that Thoreson was a potential Marilyn Monroe whom he had rescued from a life of crime.

Guccione's only evidence to contradict Thoreson was his word, Wilk noted. The judge, who heard the case with no jury, added, "I do not believe him."

Wilk awarded Thoreson $60,000 in compensatory damages and $4 million in punitive damages. The judge said the amounts were based on Guccione's $150 million personal worth and Penthouse's market value of about $200 million.

Thoreson, originally from St. Paul, Minn., approached Guccione in 1973 at age 20. She sent him nude photos of herself and a letter.

of sexual coercion forced her to safeguard her employment by sacrificing her body," the judge said Tuesday.

Thoreson, 37, testified during the 1989 trial that Guccione forced her to perform hard-core sex acts in a pornographic movie and used her sexual favors as partial payment to furnish a hotel-casino he owned in Atlantic City.

Higher education change suggestions criticized

By ANDREW FRASER
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Critics of a consultant's report on improving the state's public university system say some of the key proposals face too much opposition and may be too "impractical" to implement.

The preliminary report from MGT of America Inc., of Tallahassee, Fla., was presented Tuesday to a subcommittee of the Thomas Commission, which is studying ways to improve state government efficiency.

The report outlined a broad plan for saving as much as $77 million next year, and more than $370 million by 1995, in the $500 million-a-year higher-education bureaucracy.

Some of the most controversial recommendations in the report call for merging the state's public universities, consolidating 20 two-year colleges into six community colleges, and increasing tuition.

State Rep. Robert Farr, R-West

tions to take away the Legislature's control over budget appropriations and give it to the Board of Governors for Higher Education, calling the idea "politically naive."

"I'm not convinced that it's desirable or feasible," he said. "It adds another layer of bureaucracy. We are trying to reduce bureaucracy, not add to it."

Farr predicted that the state's universities and colleges will lobby strongly against the recommendation. He said the state tried merging three Hartford-area community colleges four years ago and phoned out the program because it didn't work.

If that didn't work what makes them think something on a larger scale will?" Farr said.

Andrew J. Carozzelli, chairman of UConn's board of trustees, said merging the policy boards of UConn and the Connecticut State University System would be impractical.

"The universities are so large, I don't think that any one group can handle it all," he said.

Farr also opposed recommendations to take away the Legislature's control over budget appropriations and give it to the Board of Governors for Higher Education, calling the idea "politically naive."

Davidson, who is also chairman of the board of trustees of Central Connecticut State University, said the proposed changes would make higher education unaffordable for many working class state residents.

"I am really concerned about those kinds of increases for those reasons," he said. "They make college inaccessible for many people."

To bring state tuition closer to the average tuition in other public institutions in New England, MGT recommended collecting an additional $90.9 million in tuition money over the next five years.

The highest increases would be at the four campuses of Connecticut State University and the state's community colleges, higher education officials said.

The seven-member subcommittee will now review the consultant's report and recommend changes to the state's community colleges by as much as 30 percent next year.

—Increase the 35-hour state employee work week to 40 hours with higher education, reduce holidays and personal days and reopen contracts to reduce salary raises, a step needed to avoid layoffs.

—Eliminate binding arbitration in settling state contracts, a method designed to avoid strikes.

Drug moment urged in state

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut takes pride in its reputation as a leading hub of industry.

But for five minutes Thursday morning, the state's political and business leaders were urged to drop everything and focus their thoughts on the drug problem.

The event, dubbed "The Moment of Consciousness Day," will last from 10:55 a.m. to 11 a.m., and is being taped on public service television commercials being broadcast across the state.

"For five minutes, businesses will stop... schools will stop... TV and radio programming will be interrupted," the television ads say. "We're asking you to do one more thing in your life to fight substance abuse."

The event coincides with a nationwide anti-drug effort in which people are asked to sport red ribbons. But William Kaufman, a former banker who is working full-time as president of Drugs Don't Work, a partnership of state business and political leaders that organized "The Moment," said the Connecticut effort is unique.

"It's kind of like the Great American Smokeout," he said. "But we don't know of anyone in the nation who has tried to stop a state — or at least make it unique."

More than 1,300 schools and businesses have agreed to participate, representing more than

Protests greet Bush

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press

WATERBURY — President Bush encountered rain everywhere in his campaign visit to Connecticut, as well as a smattering of protesters angered by his veto of civil rights legislation and his Persian Gulf policy.

In Stamford, where Bush campaigned for Republican gubernatorial candidate John G. Rowland, a dozen AIDS rights activists protested what they consider inadequate federal funding for research and treatment of AIDS.

In Waterbury, about a dozen local black activists stood in the rain with about twice as many anti-war activists to protest at Bush's appearance on behalf of GOP congressional candidate Gary Franks.

The black activists said Bush should not have vetoed the Civil Rights Act of 1990.

In Stamford, members of the local chapter of ACT-UP, which stands for AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, marched outside the hotel where Bush appeared for Rowland.

"They chanted, 'George Bush, you can't hide. We charge you with genocide' and 'Ninety-thousand dead from AIDS, where is George?'"

"I think it was an awful bad move," said Booker T. Paris, a member of the local chapter of the NAACP. "It will not only hurt him with black voters, it will hurt him with white voters too."

The anti-war demonstrators called for a full U.S. withdrawal from Saudi Arabia. They said the Gulf crisis should be settled peacefully by the United Nations.

The protesters, kept about 200 yards from the hotel where Bush spoke, saw the president only briefly as his motorcade sped by. They chanted, "Civil Rights Now," and "No Gulf War."

Lieberman asks why gas prices haven't fallen

By JOHN DIAMOND
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gasoline prices are showing a strange ability to defy gravity — they go up, but they don't come down — and a U.S. Senator says a greedy oil industry is to blame.

"I want to make a simple request of the American oil industry: give the American people and the American economy a fair deal. Lower the retail price of gasoline and heating oil and propane immediately," Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., said Tuesday at a Capitol Hill news conference.

Lieberman charged that over the weekend, crude oil prices dropped about 11 cents per gallon to about 70 cents per gallon. But over the same period, he said, retail gasoline and home heating oil prices continued to gradually rise to between $1.32 and $1.37 per gallon.

An industry lobbying group, saying that companies and dealers held back prices in the heat of the crisis and are trying to recoup those losses by delaying price reductions.

But Lieberman said that if the oil industry continues its unfair pricing practices, he and others will win support for a windfall profits tax on the oil industry.

"If we in Washington were reflecting the will of the American people, the outrage of the American people who understand that they've been taken advantage of in the price of gasoline and heating oil and propane, then we would be rushing to adopt a windfall profits tax," Lieberman acknowledged that with powerful lawmakers representing oil producing states and with a president in office who has ties to the oil industry, winning passage of such a tax won't be easy.

During the budget debate, Lieberman won over 35 Senate votes in support of using the proceeds of a windfall profits tax toward reducing the gasoline tax.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee is planning to hold three sessions Thursday to look into the gasoline price situation.

A spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute said it was understandable that prices at the pump have remained at their high levels despite a drop in crude prices.

"We're not surprised if the pump prices are declining at a rate somewhat out of sync with crude prices or wholesale prices because some companies, in response to requests, exercised restraint in increasing the price of gasoline to the same proportion as crude," said API spokesman Bill Taylor.

Taylor also said wholesale prices have closely reflected the ups and downs of crude oil, indicating that major oil companies aren't gouging consumers.

The spot price of West Texas crude oil on August 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait, was $29.59 per barrel, according to figures provided by Taylor. The price peaked at $41.07 on Oct. 11. On Monday, Oct. 22, it had declined to $28.46, the lowest it had been since mid-August.

"We said at the time of rapidly rising prices that we were being responsive to the market," said Robert J. Raucher, Amoco's marketing vice president. "And the same holds true now."

Lieberman insisted that figures released by oil companies indicate that they have profited handsomely from the Mideast crisis at the expense of consumers.

CBT to close more branches

HARTFORD — Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. plans to close seven more branch offices and put three more branches up for sale by the end of January in an ongoing effort to reduce expenses and improve the bank's financial health, the company said.

Richard J. DeNoia, a CBT spokesman, said Tuesday the closings are part of a larger plan, announced in June, to cut costs at the company's parent company, Bank of New England Corp., last year lost $1.1 billion, and cost-cutting is a central part of its recovery plan.

Branch offices to be closed and consolidated with nearby branches are located in Bridgeport, East Granby, Eastford, East Haven, Norwich, Plainfield and New Haven.

In addition, CBT plans to put three branch offices up for sale in Ellington, Somers and Stafford.

In June, CBT announced it would close 19 branches and put six others up for sale. At that time, Bank of New England Corp. said it later

UPS heats up FedEx rivalry

By JANET L. CAPPIELLO
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — United Parcel Service is zooming onto the overnight package delivery scene, giving Federal Express Corp. some stiff competition.

In a move aimed at carving a permanent niche in the overnight market, UPS announced this week two services that match Federal Express — guaranteed 10:30 a.m. overnight delivery; at Federal Express, the world's largest package delivery service, and Federal Express, the company that invented overnight delivery, will both try to woo customers with their reliability and expertise.

But the big difference appears to be price.

The average shipper pays $11 for UPS to pick up and deliver an overnight envelope; Federal Express charges $15.50 for the same service. If a customer drops off the envelope at a UPS facility, it costs $8.50 for overnight delivery; at Federal Express, it's $13.

The UPS move is aimed directly at those customers who look their overnight business to Federal Express because it was faster, said Alan Caminiti, a spokesman for the Greenwich, Conn.-based company. UPS used to offer delivery by noon and couldn't pick up a package until the day after a customer called.

"We knew that this is what we needed to compete in this market," Caminiti said.

So far, Federal Express is unimpressed.

"They're basically playing catch-up," said spokeswoman Shirlee Finch, whose Memphis, Tenn.-based company opened the doors to overnight delivery in 1979 and added 10:30 a.m. delivery in 1983.

"We founded the market and pretty well set the industry standards," she said. "It's not surprising that once again our competitors have followed the lead."

Federal Express doesn't plan to lower its prices, she said, and isn't worried about losing customers to UPS.

But analysts said that might just be wishful thinking.

"Federal will either see an erosion in their volume or may have to do something on price, or both," said Paul Schlesinger, a transportation analyst with Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette.

"Any competition will have some impact on Federal Express' results," said John E. Hilton, an analyst with Argus Research Corp. "While at this point the impact is not quantifiable, we do expect it to erode Federal Express' earnings growth rate slightly."

School and fire officials said they were unaware if the fire had come into contact with any open flames, either in the cafeteria or in the custodial area.

The affected students were: Megan Lavator, Amy Yost, Natalie Plummer, Abby Hamm and Jill Westernman.

Among the affected cafeteria workers were: Holly Frepin, Jeanie Colombe, Irene Moore, Janet Adams, Lois Page, Joan Gruesner, Eleanor Wojnarowski and Lynne Wells.

Lindgren said a custodian, while cleaning up, accidentally broke a coolant line to the cafeteria refrigerator. Student council members were in the cafeteria getting water for flowers to be sold as part of the school's annual "Spirit Week."

According to Manchester Deputy Fire Chief Graim MacDonal, the leak originated out of a refrigerator in a custodial area that abuts the cafeteria kitchen. MacDonal said that while ambulances were called to transport affected workers to the hospital, there appeared to be little substantial injury.

MacDonal said there was some question whether the leak was ammonia rather than freon.

MacDonal ordered anyone near the custodial area at the time of the leak be examined by a physician.

Barrett said, "It should be made known he is not a full-term candidate."

FitzGerald has said publicly that the forthcoming term is the last he would be able to serve, but has not said he couldn't complete the term.

Barrett said the governor would have to call a special election to replace FitzGerald if he is elected, or a substitute judge would have to be assigned.

In response FitzGerald said, "They don't order a special election."

He said that his predecessor, John Wallcut, became ill and was not able to complete a portion of his term from February, 1972, to January, 1973, when FitzGerald took office.

FitzGerald said the administrator of the probate court system appointed Probate Judge David Rappe of Coventry to serve in the interim.

FitzGerald said Rappe has also been appointed to serve in Glastonbury where the probate judge retired in May.

Barrett said that in the 16 years FitzGerald has served as probate

Their concerns ranged wide, touching on everything from Medicare to tax hikes on gasoline and life insurance companies to defense spending levels, according to a review of dozens of the budget letters.

Mary said the proposals would simply be too painful for low and middle-income citizens who are already having financial troubles.

"My husband and I work four jobs between us. We make $40,000 a year and are barely surviving," one woman lamented. "I don't believe we could survive this new tax package ... When can we stop a little, slow down a little, live a little."

One man put it simply: "If you take care of and look out for us, we will support you. Don't let them shaft us."

Debate

Thompson told the Manchester Herald Tuesday morning that he has not agreed to a Nov. 2 date for any debate nor has he agreed to a limitation of subjects as proposed by Freble.

At this morning's press conference, Kevin MacKenzie, the Republican challenger in the 12th Assembly Dist., said the debate is set for Nov. 2 and that Democratic incumbent James McConaway has accepted.

Yet Joseph Sweeney, issues chairman in the campaign committee for Democratic State Rep. James McConaway, told the Herald he and McConaway were upset when they read the newspaper account of the forthcoming debate.

He said McConaway agrees in principle to a debate. But he said he heard about the Nov. 2 date for the first time Tuesday from Thomas H. Ferguson, campaign manager for MacKenzie.

Sweeney said, however, that a separate debate should be arranged for the 12th District and not linked with the 13th District.

Her friend Melanie Finney agreed, but thought that the act with Sasha and his dog was the best part of the show.

Sasha said children from schools he has previously visited send him letters of their appreciation. One student's letter he said was marked with peace signs.

"That is beautiful," he said. "Peace is absolutely what children think."

The circus performers are scheduled to visit Martin School on Thursday and Buckley School on Friday. Two different performers will be touring other Manchester schools next week.

He said probate forms are difficult to complete and the court offers no help. Barrett said he would produce video and audio tapes to explain the court procedures and will create a lending library. He said he will buy a van to go to the homes of seniors and handicapped people.

He also said that handicapped people are entitled to a front entrance that is accessible, and he criticized the accommodations for disabled people on the lower level of the court.

He said that his predecessor, John Wallcut, became ill and was not able to complete a portion of his term from February, 1972, to January, 1973, when FitzGerald took office.

FitzGerald said the administrator of the probate court system appointed Probate Judge David Rappe of Coventry to serve in the interim.

Democrat Joan Lewis, chairwoman of the Town Council, appeared to be on pins and needles before the outcome of the referendum was known. Afterward, she got a few hugs from supporters.

"I think maybe there was a realization of all the programs that had been cut and what we would have to cut to reach a 37 mill rate," Lewis said.

Lewis said she believes information made public two weeks ago that Coventry High School's accreditation from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges is in jeopardy because it does not have a full-time assistant principal made a difference.

"It was another reality that could be pointed out — we are not in excess of administrators, we don't have enough," Lewis said.

Asked if she thought the accreditation threat received in July should have been made public by school administrators sooner, Lewis replied, "In retrospect, it would have been good to know about it earlier."

The assistant principal position currently shared between the high school and middle school was one that was targeted by budget opponents as unnecessary.

Lewis also credited GOP Councilman Stephen Clarke for taking a "bold stand" against his own town committee, in support of the budget.

Democrat Patrick Flaherty, chairman of the Board of Education, attributed the budget approval to other factors. "There was a tremendous amount of attention given to this by the media," Flaherty said.

In addition, he said the school's Parent Teacher Organizations took out advertisements asking for budget support, and Flaherty said he personally spent the weekend dis-

All young people under 18 are admitted free to MSOC concerts. For information, call Betty Henderson at 859-8260 or Bonnie Relelin at 423-1753.

Alzheimer's care group

The Alzheimer's Caregivers Support Group of the Visiting Nurses of Manchester will hold an educational program on Wednesday, Oct. 24. The meeting is from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Manchester Memorial Hospital, 71 Hayes St., Manchester, in the conference room of the Mental Health Wing. For more information, call Louise Letour of the Visiting Nurses at 647-1481.

Businessmen protest sign regs

By JACQUELINE BENNETT
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — A dozen residents have voiced concerns to the Planning and Zoning Commission during a hearing on revisions to some of the town's zoning regulations.

Over the past year the PZC — aided by Glastonbury attorney Mark Brane — has been revising the regulations in groups of sections. One hearing was held in March on some previous sections.

On Monday, mostly local business people spoke, asking that the commission reconsider new restrictions on commercial signs that require them to be smaller.

"Any business person is concerned with signage; it's crucial to foot rather than 40 feet. The current permit allows a height of 75 feet rather than 40 feet. The current regulations are 24 inches by 24 inches. New restrictions of 16 inches by 10 inches would mean 'for sale' signs would have to be custom made. Don Bernier of Kaleidoscope Signs and Lettering, a local business, said smaller signs also are hazardous because motorists have to strain to read them. 'You're creating a hazard. Smaller letters are hard to read at a distance,' said Bernier.

David Dummer also asked that the restrictions on radio antennas for amateur radio operators be relaxed, eliminating the need to get a special permit, and allowing a height of 75 feet rather than 40 feet. Art Hall said the new regulations would require too much investigation and design expense, are appropriate only for large developments, and require special permits in too many areas, which will result in an excessive workload for the PZC.

Brane noted revisions will be reviewed before being made final. Before conducting regular business, PZC chairman Jonathan Kreisberg, who is retiring from the commission November 1 after five years of service, was presented with a plaque by Joan Lewis, chairwoman of the Town Council.

Lewis praised Kreisberg for fairness, commitment to protecting the environment and playing a "key role" in revision of the zoning regulations.

Kreisberg also received a red T-shirt from the town planning staff that read "World's Greatest Chairman." He put it on immediately.

"It seems like it's been a really long five years, sometimes I didn't feel appreciated," Kreisberg said, adding, nonetheless, that it was rewarding. "We are fortunate to live in a country where any little of personal involvement makes a difference, and in Coventry where we all scream and yell, yet still remain neighbors and friends," he said.

Naek submits low firehouse bid

Naek submits low firehouse bid

By ALEX GIPELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — The apparent low bid submitted for construction of a town firehouse was $485,000 at a bid opening Tuesday.

The bid was submitted by Naek Construction Co. of Vernon, one of 11 bidders.

Naek's bid called for a renovation of $20,000 of the $485,000 cost if the town decides to use a pre-engineered building.

The bids will be studied by town officials and considered by the Building Committee at a special meeting Nov. 1.

Following are the 10 other base bid and alternatives for a pre-engineered building:

- Eastern Building Systems of Southbury, $530,000 with a $46,022 reduction for a pre-engineered building.
- Allied Construction of Manchester, $539,000 with an $8,500 reduction.
- Conyers Construction Co. of Manchester, $553,000 with a $10,000 reduction.
- Orlando Annulli and Sons of Manchester, $555,600 with an increase of $30,000 for a pre-engineered building.
- Enfield Builders of Enfield, $582,000 with a $10,000 reduction.
- Andrew Ansaldi Co. of Manchester, $582,478 with $9,202 addition.
- DinCo Construction Co. of Manchester, $589,820 with a $26,500 reduction.
- Utility Development Co. of East Hartford, $593,500 with an addition of $18,000.
- Pelletier Builders of Coventry, $611,568 with a reduction of $13,285.
- Atlantic Coast Construction of Middletield, $624,000 with a reduction of $17,000.

In addition to the cost of the construction, the town will have to pay an added cost for an on-site sewer system. Bids for that system ranged from $3,800 to $6,000, the figure asked by Naek.

PZC allows pet-grooming business

By CAROL CLEVENGER
Manchester Herald

HEBRON — At Tuesday's meeting of the Hebron Planning and Zoning Commission, members voted unanimously to approve a regulation that would make a dog and cat grooming business possible in a residential zone by special permit, provided that the property fronts onto an arterial road such as Route 85 or Route 66.

"We must be satisfied that we are clear on the nature of the use and that it is compatible with other special permit uses," Fred Schott, chairman of the commission said.

"A grooming business on an arterial road such as Route 85 or 66 will have less impact on the neighborhood than on a secondary road," he said.

The new regulation becomes effective on Monday, Nov. 12. Schott describes the business as similar to veterinary services, which has been a permitted use.

Alex Bishop Jr., owner of J&B Distributors, approached the Planning and Zoning Commission in August for permission to expand his pet supply business to include a grooming business. At that time, dog grooming was not permitted in town.

Dog groomers are licensed by the state and grooming facilities are regulated by the state with the help of local enforcement from the building inspector and the health officer.

Bishop will be able to apply for a special permit to add a grooming service to his West Main Street business.

In other business: The commission declined to act on a subdivision proposed by Hebron Plaza Associates pending a ruling from the Zoning Board of Appeals. In order to create a back lot, the developer was forced to create a small parcel of land which was offered to, and turned down by, the town, a land trust, and an abutting property owner.

The recommendation of the commission was that the developer apply to the ZBA for a variance and add the parcel to one of the lots rather than create little pieces of what town planner Mike Roark termed "shopping cart" land.

Town leaders want to see red today

By JACQUELINE BENNETT
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Town Officials were hoping to see red today as people to reflect on the problem of substance abuse and what, as an individual, each of us can do about it.

Newton said although some deny the Moment of Consciousness is as foolishness, it can be effective.

"It is one more time to state the message against drug and alcohol abuse. We don't always take enough time to think about what we are doing or what we can do for ourselves," Newton said. She said, for example, Grady said it was about going for a run or walk instead of grabbing for a beer.

The Moment of Consciousness is an event sponsored by Drugs Don't Partnership to Prevent Substance Abuse in the Workplace. The goal is statewide participation in building a "wall of commitment" to take more responsibility as individuals to fight substance abuse.

Newton said this is the second year the town will take part in Red Ribbon Week, which runs from Oct. 21-28, part of a national campaign. This year's theme is "The choice for me, Drug Free."

Red ribbons are available at local stores, supermarkets, banks and churches, purchased by the local Council for the Prevention of Student Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Newton says she believes efforts to fight abuse are paying off. Although the town does not have statistics on the use of alcohol and drugs by Coventry High School students, "This definitely is a factious year," she said. "It's not my choice," Newton said.

Remember Veterans Day

To the Editor:

Each year on November 11, America takes time to remember the men and women who have fought, served and died in the Armed Forces of the United States. From the days of battle at Yorktown through the troubles of Gettysburg and on to Vietnam, America's young men and women have given their most precious gift — life itself. That's why it is so important for each and every one of us here in Connecticut to take time to remember Veterans Day really stands for.

Now, our nation faces a dangerous and unpredictable point in time once more. As our Armed Forces in the Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force and Coast Guard stand ready to defend the vital interests of the United States thousands of miles away in the Arabian Desert and Persian Gulf, each American must stand ready to show both support and gratitude for their precious freedom, and give thanks to our military people.

Opposing Meotti

To the Editor:

It's election time again and Michael Meotti is up for reelection. There are many reasons why Mr. Meotti should be thrown out of office by the voting public, as are as follows:

- Senator Meotti's voting record is, in part, responsible for the state's present deficit of $360 million in 1990, which is predicted to approach $1 billion by year end. This is deplorable conduct on his part.
- Senator Meotti voted for the last round of tax increases which have resulted in businesses fleeing the state and unemployment rising above the national average.
- In talking with Mr. Meotti several months after his last election, he was very condescending and made it quite clear that he felt the voting public, especially women, are too stupid to make an intelligent decision.
- I think the voting public should show Senator Meotti just how intelligent we are and vote him out of office. He's done enough damage to the economy of his state.

In support of Munn's

To the Editor:

The Democrats obviously still believe they can spend their way to prosperity.

Appropriations by a Democrat controlled legislature caused a state deficit that required nearly $1 billion in increased taxes. The Democrats then continued to make appropriations that have caused another huge deficit. The deficit spending and increased taxes were accompanied by a further downturn in Connecticut's economy, increased unemployment and increased welfare costs.

Paul Munn, the incumbent candidate for the 9th Assembly District, has worked hard to reduce spending. Henry Genga, his opponent, has done an acceptable job as Treasurer for the Town of East Hartford. However as Treasurer he is running for the legislature where the Democrats are the big spenders. What Connecticut needs for an economic recovery is a balanced budget with no additional taxes.

If you want an improved economy a vote for Republican Paul Munn's is a step in that direction.

"Trump, trump, trump. It is the sound of the American proletariat marching to the guillotine on the middle class: Pierce the Bubble, / Cease the Trouble, / Raise the Marginal Tax Rate on Those Earning / Over $200,000 in Adjusted Gross Income.

Because of such passion, we are told that Republicans are losing ground. Luckily, at times like this we have Wattenberg's First Law of Politics for guidance: When everyone says it, doubt it.

I go further: If Democrats make headway and concentrate on the reasons rarely stated, they will cause further self-inflicted wounds. The reasons may be more important than the results.

The case for the alleged Republican nose dive includes these factors: President Bush's popularity is down, there is an anti-incumbent mood, Republicans favor the rich, people think America is on the "wrong track," and we're in a recession.

Ed Rollins, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, says GOP campaign contributions are drying up and Republicans will likely lose marginal races. It is, he says, "an abyss." (Abyss is as good as a mile.)

A few weeks ago it was said Republicans would hold their own in the congressional races. Now it is claimed

Father should know better

By JOSEPH WALKER

As far as I can tell, there's only one thing standing between me and becoming the world's greatest dad. And it's not that I don't love my kids. And it isn't even that I don't understand how significant my role as a parent is to their growth and development. It's just that every time I think I'm on the verge of becoming King Daddy, something comes along to remind me how far I have to go before I'm the kind of father my children deserve.

Take last weekend, for instance. For the first time in I don't know how long, I didn't have anything scheduled that was going to take me away from my family either Saturday or Sunday. I looked forward to it as a time to clear away the projects that have been piling up around the house and spend some serious quality time with my children.

But the projects came first, and I attacked them with obsessive abandon. About mid-morning Amy asked me to listen to her violin recital piece. I told her that I'd love to, but I was up to my elbows in dryer parts, so it would have to be later.

But "later" never came. Because there were these football games, see — three different games on three different channels. Thanks to my remote control zapper, I was able to keep track of all of them at once. I had time to sit and eat and watch football for a long time, and it felt great. At least, that's what I told Joe when he asked me to go outside with him when he threw a few passes.

"Besides," I said, "the games are on now. We'll have plenty of time to play catch."

But "later" never came. My sister and her family did. So we shooed the children off to the other room while the adults talked and laughed late into the night. I did have one nice interchange with Amy, though. When sleepy-eyed baby Elizabeth came to me, her arms outstretched and her favorite blanket in her hand, I asked Amy to get her ready for bed and then put her down. And I thanked her nicely for doing it, too.

Last Sunday night, Andrea reminded me that I had promised to fix the flat tires on her bicycle and help her learn to ride it.

"It's too late for that now," I snapped, tired from a long, busy weekend. "Why didn't you talk to me about this yesterday?"

"I did," she said softly, huge tears beginning to form in her clear blue eyes. "You said you'd do it later. And I thought this was later."

It was. Later than I thought.

That night during the usual round of goodnight kisses, hugs and "I love you's," I remembered my noble fatherly intentions for the weekend. Suddenly, those projects didn't seem so important and those football games didn't seem so compelling. Even the visit with my sister and her family, usually a highlight around our house, seemed intrusive and ill-timed.

But my sister wasn't to blame here. I was. King Daddy. An opportunity had presented itself, and I had fumbled it in a fog of selfishness and misplaced priorities.

One wise man once said that "no other success can compensate for failure in the home." Now, I wouldn't go so far as to say that my lost weekend automatically qualifies me as a "failure in the home." But if I string a bunch of these together long enough, it might.

And not just because I'm not available to my kids 24 hours a day. There are plenty of successful parents who spend even less time with their children than I do. But what makes the difference is that they know when they can't be home at all. I'd definitely be a contender.

Reflections on elections

By BEN WATTENBERG

1987. Phillips modestly notes that it validates his rich-poor thesis. It is extraordinary data. T-M has apologized for "an unfortunate error." The 1990 number is not 51 percent, but 21 percent.

Still, Democrats are delirious. Tax the rich. It is a good and valid idea. But it's not the solution to our Democratic ills. The best (but what do they have against Joe Montana and Magic Johnson?)

But in recent years, Democrats have shown tunnel vision on issues. One, alas, is all they can handle at a time. That hurts them.

Democrats have told us before that they have found the golden kazoos. Don't you know that the issue of the gender gap, (nada), (El Salvador), (the nuclear freeze), (abortion), (Nicaragua) will sweep Democrats into office?

Such tunnelitis allows Democrats to ignore The Social Issue, the one that has plagued them for 25 years. But crime, race, drugs, permissiveness and values — let alone big spending — cannot be finessed. Hortatized Democrats should have learned that in 1988.

Will they learn? Democrats are whooping it up for The Civil Rights Act of 1990. It is described (accurately, in my judgment) as a "quota" bill. Bush says he will veto it. The Democrats think they have him on the spot.

Some spot. Who spins in 1992 — the key year — when Democrats say they were for more laws for minorities, and Republican say they protected the middle class from quotas?

Elections bring S&Ls into fray

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Democrats and Republicans have broken the cease-fire in the savings and loan war. With the congressional elections just two weeks away, members of Congress and their challengers are freely slinging accusations trying to link each other to the scandal.

That's something House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., had hoped to keep to a minimum. Several months ago Foley said that he believed Congress and the White House should simply deal with the crisis instead of pointing fingers across the aisle.

Finger pointing is tolerated during odd-numbered years, but in even-numbered election years, the rule is to keep broad subjects for the campaign trail. Both parties, however, are doing just the opposite. Party leaders on both sides of the aisle had already agreed to downplay the general congressional pay raise during the election.

Foley's own party angered him by firing the first shot. Last month the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee filed an ethics complaint against Sen. Dan Rostenkowski, R-Ill. One of the accusations against Rostenkowski was that he tried to pull strings to exempt savings and loan directors from liability for the time that he thought any open accusation against a Republican over the S&L mess could backfire.

Knowledgeable sources told our associates that Sen. Rostenkowski was asked by the Democrats pointed the finger at Smith. Foley had been hinting for some time that he thought any open accusation against a Republican over the S&L mess could backfire.

The Republicans shot back with a complaint to the Federal Election Commission accusing Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., of failing to file proper information about campaign receipts. Annunzio is a senior member of the House Banking Committee.

Foley had good reason to attempt a cease-fire on the S&L issue. GOP leaders in the House are clear on that they were ready to fight, and they were. In their best position and quality. Just as it was, they were ready to fight, and they were. In their best position and quality. Just as it was, they were ready to fight, and they were.

Today In History

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 24, the 297th day of 1990. There are 68 days left in the year.

Today's Birthdays:
Football Hall-of-Famer Y.A. Title is 64. Actor-prince David Nelson is 54. Actor Kevin Kline is 43.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Oct. 24, 1901, Anna Edson Taylor, a 43-year-old woman, became the first person to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel and live to tell about it. Mrs. Taylor's dream of fame and fortune failed to materialize, however, and she died in poverty in 1921.

On this date:
In 1537, Jane Seymour, the third wife of England's King Henry VIII, died 12 days after giving birth to Prince Edward, later King Edward VI.
In 1648, the Peace of Westphalia ended the 30 Years War and effectively destroyed the Holy Roman Empire.
In 1861, the first transatlantic telegraph message was sent as Stephen H. Field of California transmitted a telegram to President Abraham Lincoln.
In 1931, the George Washington Bridge, connecting New York and New Jersey, opened to traffic.

Public Meetings

The following meetings are scheduled for today:

Democratic Town Committee, Town Office Building, 7:30 p.m.

HEBRON
Recreation Commission, Town Hall, 7:30 p.m.
Republican Town Committee, Town Hall, 8 p.m.

Thoughts

"We pray for all HIV care-givers, hospital workers and researchers. Be with them in their tasks, enlighten their spirits and grant success in your time."

A Litany in the Time of AIDS
The National Episcopal Church at fears about "catching AIDS through casual contact. HIV care-givers, hospital workers and researchers are people with HIV. Most medical work is sometimes tedious and lonely; how much more so it must be with this (AIDS) disease which is often cruelly ostracized. But the above litany asking God to "be with" HIV care-givers, hospital workers and researchers reminds us that they are not really alone. God is with them — even when they're performing the most difficult tasks — to strengthen them and work through their humble offerings in the fight against AIDS.

FOOD

GHOSTLY GOOD HALLOWEEN FUN!

For a Monster-ously Fun Party...

- Remember to shop early for food and paper goods. All of our tasty recipes can be made ahead of time. The day before the party, you can prepare Chocolate Caramel Nut Bars, Caramel Apple People can be made early in the day or the children can make and decorate their own Caramel Apple People during the party.
- Let the kids make simple, scary party invitations. Just cut out Halloween shapes like pumpkins, cats and witches' hats from orange and black construction paper. Write party specifics in crayon.
- Use miniature pumpkins, about the size of oranges, as place setting markers. Just write each guest's name on a pumpkin with a felt-tipped pen. For extra fun, carve the pumpkins first, fill with caramels and you've got easy, festive, take-home treat cups.
- Blow up orange balloons. Draw jack-o'-lantern faces and tie on black and orange streamers (ribbons) for spooky, floating decorations.
- Let each guest decorate his or her own Zap an Apple™. Provide candy corn, nuts, hard candy, raisins, etc. to create chewy, gooey Caramel Apple People.
- Serve Caramel Crispy Treats. Use a pumpkin cookie cutter to cut the Crispy Treats into fun Halloween shapes.
- Make a pin-the-tail-on-the-black-cat game. Draw a large black cat (without a tail) on a piece of poster board or a cut and flattened paper grocery bag (use tin foil for gleaming eyes, uncooked spaghetti for whiskers, etc., if you like). Cut out several paper "cat tails" or create by braiding pieces of black yarn. Attach a small piece of tape to each tail and let blindfolded guests take turns at "pinning" on the tail.
- Host a treasure hunt. Hide caramels, plastic toy spiders and bats, gold candy coins, etc. in your yard. Give each player a flashlight to search for the treasure. The one who finds the most wins!
- Create a pumpkin pinata. Blow up a large, round balloon and cover with paste-soaked strips of newspaper (paste can be flour and water, diluted glue, wallpaper paste, etc.). Let dry for two days, paint orange and black, pop the balloon and fill with caramels and other treats. Hang the pumpkin up and let each guest take turns striking the pinata with a plastic bat. Watch the treats come raining down!
- Play the Mummy Wrap. Divide guests into teams. One guest (the mummy) holds the end of a roll of toilet paper while the other guests take turns unrolling it around him or her to create a mummy. The first group done wins!

Spooky, ghoulish, ghostly, wicked witches. Entertaining the little goblins this Halloween doesn't have to be scary. All it takes is a few simple tricks to create a monster-ously fun party with delicious caramel and marshmallow treats from the KRAFT kitchens.

Everybody loves Halloween, so why not bring the fun inside! Invite children and even some grown-up goblins into your home this year. Put on a costume, carve a jack-o'-lantern and get ready for a silly, scary party, complete with easy-to-prepare, festive goodies your guests will howl about! We've even included a bagful of simple party tips, guaranteed to make your celebration a scream!

Chocolate Caramel Nut bar, or a taste from any of the hauntingly good recipes listed below and your guests will be bewitched.

So make sure you prepare plenty of these simple, goblin-good Halloween treats. Because with ghouly guests in the house, they are sure to disappear like magic!

Revamped Coventry now on winning trail

By LEN AUSTER Manchester Herald COVENTRY — Sometimes, when Plan A doesn't work out, it's best to try Plan B.

That didn't work out, with the Patriots off to a skinnish 0-3 start. Enter Plan B.

They had some good scoring opportunities, but they were more on individual efforts.

Plaster said the lineup juggling was something that had to be done. "We were just not getting powerful crosses, and getting ridden off a lot of balls (in the penalty area).

Manchester led the division at 9-2-1 with Public a half game back at 8-2-2.

Thoughts Aplenty

Meets held by CCC must have meaning

When events are scheduled, they're there usually for a purpose. People don't just capriciously spend money, especially in these hard times, just for the heck of it.

Last Friday at Manchester's Wickham Park, the Central Connecticut Conference, the 24-team superconference that was formed seven years ago to cut down on travel costs, etc., had the Eastern Division hold its annual county meet.

East girls to join league

MIDDLETOWN — Representatives from six schools, including four from the All Connecticut Conference, met two weeks ago and the result was two new leagues for 1991.

East Catholic, Hamden High, Sacred Heart of Hamden and Mercy High of Middletown will compete in the Connecticut Girls' Tennis League beginning in the Spring of 1991. East Hamden, Mercy, Sacred Heart, St. Joseph of Trumbull and West Haven High have formed the Connecticut Girls' Soccer League which will begin play in the Fall of 1991.

St. Joseph is forming a girls' varsity team in '91. Hamden and West Haven are presently independents. St. Joseph and West Haven have co-ed tennis teams and will participate in the new league.

Manchester needs coaches

MANCHESTER — Manchester High School is looking to fill two vacancies for the spring sports season. Manchester needs a varsity girls' softball coach to replace Cindy Wald, who left to take a college coaching position in New Jersey, and a junior varsity boys' baseball coach.

Anyone interested in either position should forward their resume to Director of Athletics Mike Simmons at the school, or contact him at 647-3533.

Celtics extend their contract

HARTFORD — The Hartford Civic Center and the Boston Celtics have entered into a new three-year contract which will bring the NBA team to Hartford through the 1992-93 season. The agreement calls for the Celtics to play one exhibition and three regular season games at the Civic Center.

The Celtics have been part of the Civic Center schedule since 1975. This year's regular season lineup is: Nov. 26 vs. Miami Heat; Feb. 26 vs. New Jersey Nets; and March 4 vs. Indiana Pacers.

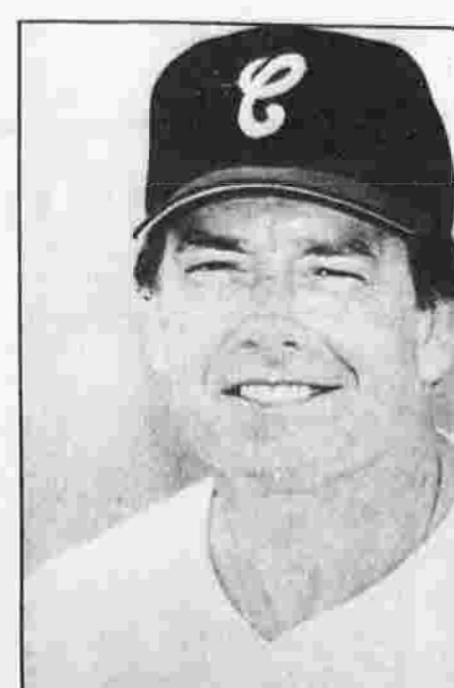

Casillas suspended without pay

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Falcons nose tackle Tony Casillas was suspended without pay for two games for missing the NFL team's flight to Los Angeles and Sunday's game against the Rams.

Coach Jerry Glaviano will call Casillas to work not paid for the Rams' game. Glaviano met with Casillas at the Falcons' training complex, but said he would not discuss the matter.

Casillas, a five-year veteran from Oklahoma, was the Falcons' top draft choice in 1986.

Torborg named AP manager of year

The Associated Press

MANAGER OF YEAR — Jeff Torborg, who led the Chicago White Sox to the second-best record in the American League and third-best in the majors, was named the AP Manager of the Year Monday.

Torborg received 70 votes from the American League and 82.2 million from the major leagues. He was named manager of the year for the second time in his career. He led the White Sox to a 94-68 record in 1989 with a .549 winning percentage.

Tip a Whaler dinner is set

HARTFORD — The ninth annual Tip a Whaler dinner will be held on Nov. 19 at the Hartford Civic Center. The dinner benefits the whaler prevention program of the Connecticut Society to Prevent Blindness.

Doors will open at 6 p.m. with dinner at 7 p.m. Members of the Hartford Whalers hockey club will serve as waiters at the event.

Tickets are $55 apiece. To reserve a seat, or table of 10, call the Society at 1-800-842-0692. Last year, $43,086 was raised at the dinner and in eight years over $20,000 has been raised.

Cooper hopes to be back

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State coach John Cooper says he has missed just three practices in his 27 years as a head coach.

He may double those absences this week. Cooper, recovering from surgery Sunday to repair a ruptured spinal disc, said Tuesday he hopes to make it to at least one Ohio State practice this week and plans on coaching the Buckeyes against Minnesota on Saturday.

Speaking on the Big Ten teleconference, the third-year coach of the Buckeyes said he expected to be released from the Ohio State University Hospital this morning. He added that he will be at Ohio Stadium for the Buckeyes' next game, either on the sideline or — if his back is bothering him — the pressbox.

Igwubeke under investigation

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Vikings game kicker Donald Igwubeke is being investigated in connection with drug-smuggling allegations, ABC News reported.

ABC reported that the U.S. attorney's office in Tampa, Fla., has "irrefutable evidence" linking Igwubeke to an attempt to smuggle heroin into the United States from his native Nigeria.

The player's name surfaced about two weeks ago when a Nigerian was arrested by customs agents at the Orlando airport, ABC said. The school teacher had 31 small bags of heroin in his stomach, authorities said.

The ABC report quoted law enforcement officials as saying that Igwubeke bought the alleged drug courier's ticket and participated in phone conversations which indicated he was aware of the deal.

Marinovich suspended one game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern Cal quarterback Todd Marinovich has been suspended from Saturday's game against Arizona State because he skipped classes, coach Larry Smith announced.

"This afternoon I suspended Todd Marinovich through this Saturday's game for academic reasons," Smith said in a statement.

Marinovich was the All-Pacific-10 quarterback as a freshman last season.

Higuera files for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Milwaukee left-hander Ted Higuera and nine other players filed for free agency, raising the total to 31 in the first three days following the World Series.

Higuera, who made $2,125,000 this season with Milwaukee, is among the top available pitchers in this year's group of free agents, along with Bob Welch of Oakland and Dave Righetti of the New York Yankees.

Higuera, a former 20-game winner, struggled to a 11-10 record with a 3.76 ERA while being limited to 27 starts by injuries.

Also filing were Atlanta infielder Jim Prentley, Boston outfielder Tom Brunansky, Detroit pitcher Dan Petry, Kansas City pitcher Steve Ferrar, Los Angeles second baseman-outfielder Juan Samuel, Minnesota outfielder John Moses, Pittsburgh outfielder R.J. Reynolds and St. Louis third baseman Peter Pennington and pitcher John Tudor.
