Hostages freed only if Bush doesn't attack

NEW YORK — Saddam Hussein said Thursday he would release his foreign hostages only if President Bush promises not to attack his country and claimed that he needs nuclear weapons to balance what he said was Israel's.

"Such an open pledge of this nature — a declared statement of this nature — would be sufficient for us to allow all foreigners to leave Iraq," the Iraqi president said in an interview with ABC-TV.

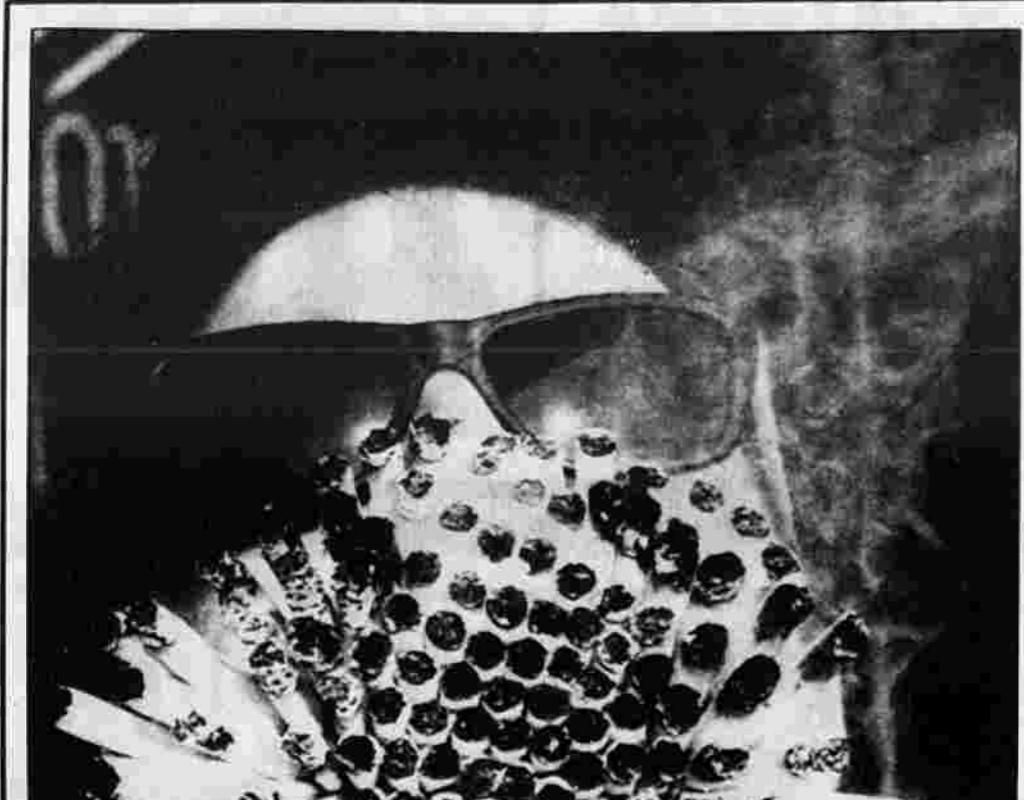

The Iraqi government says it is holding hundreds of foreigners at strategic locations such as military installations to protect against attack. Hundreds also have been released intermittently the past few months, many at the request of individual envoys.

Saddam, interviewed in a government guest house in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, said he regrets holding the hostages.

"This is the only decision which we have taken which rather chokes us up," he said. "Not for fear of anybody but out of this sense of respect for humanity."

However, he again asserted that the hostages were his best protection against attack.

"The only justification for this situation is that the presence of these people may help distract anybody who may opt for war. It may make them hesitate a little before jumping into a decision of this nature," he said.

RECORD ATTEMPT — Jim Mouth, a non smoker, went for a new world record by smoking 152 cigarettes at once Thursday.

On other topics, Saddam was asked why he sought nuclear weapons. "Because Israel is in possession of chemical, biological and nuclear weapons. And Israel is following a policy of expansion at the expense of the Arabs," he replied through an interpreter.

"So the way we see it is that peace sometimes dictates for a kind of balance to be drawn."

Iraq has made several attempts to acquire equipment and technology useful for producing nuclear weapons. In two notable instances, U.S. and British authorities blocked a shipment of fast-acting electrical switches, and U.S. authorities seized high-temperature ovens that authorities said could have been used for nuclear devices.

Though many analysts have concluded that Israel either has or could quickly produce nuclear weapons, Israel has never admitted having them and has said Israel will not be the first to introduce them into the Middle East.

Phone firms warned

WASHINGTON — Telephone companies are taking precautions today against a possible disruption of service somewhere in the country by computer "hackers" breaking into the phone network.

Non-specific threats had been made to invade the massive computer that control the telephone network, but not to attack physical facilities, industry sources said.

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the threats apparently were in connection with a sentencing scheduled in Atlanta this afternoon for three members of a hackers' group called the Legion of Doom who had broken into BellSouth Corp. computers.

Franklin E. Darden Jr. and Robert J. Riggs pleaded guilty earlier this year in federal court to one conspiracy count each. Adam E. Grant pleaded guilty to possessing 15 or more access devices with intent to defraud.

"We have not been able to assess the validity of the threats, but we certainly take any threats seriously, and we've taken precautions to minimize the risk of intrusion," BellSouth spokesman Bill McCloskey said.

Senators were deeply involved in Keating scandal

WASHINGTON — Three of the "Keating Five" senators were deeply involved in helping financier Charles H. Keating Jr. strong-arm federal banking regulators, and in some cases discussed money and favors at the same time, the Senate ethics committee says.

Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston, Dennis DeConcini and Donald Riegle played the largest roles in helping Charles H. Keating Jr. seek waivers of federal rules limiting risky savings and loan investments, the Senate Ethics Committee's lawyer said as the panel opened hearings Thursday.

Special counsel Robert S. Bennett — who concludes his summation of evidence today — assigned lesser roles to Sens. John McCain, R-Ariz., and John Glenn, D-Ohio.

"While Senator Cranston and DeConcini were by far the most active on Mr. Keating's behalf, the evidence shows Senator Riegle played an important role in the early stages," Bennett said.

On the other hand, it is to be said for Senator Riegle that like Senators Glenn and McCain, his efforts on behalf of Lincoln appear to have ended as of April 9, 1987.

On that date, the five lawmakers were told by federal officials that criminal referrals involving Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan Association would be made to the Justice Department.

Cranston, of California, was the only one of the five senators who did not stand Thursday. He begins radiation treatment for prostate cancer next week and, after today's session, may miss much of the proceedings.

The five senators are accused of improperly intervening with federal banking regulators on Keating's behalf. Riegle, of Michigan, is chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. DeConcini is from Arizona.

Keating and his associates contributed more than $1.3 million to the senators' campaigns or favored causes. His California-based S&L's collapse may cost taxpayers as much as $2 billion. Keating is free on bail while facing fraud charges in California.

Bennett said there was no disputing that each senator tried to help Keating in some way.

But he said the question of whether they exerted improper influence arises partly from the campaign finance system that increasingly requires members of Congress to seek financial contributions.

"It is a booming warning," Bennett said. "Unless the trends are recognized and dealt with, we will have more cases like this and the reputation of this body and its members will be in utter ruin."

Bennett said Cranston continued contacting federal regulators on Keating's behalf after being told that criminal complaints about Lincoln would be referred to the Justice Department. He said Cranston's efforts continued even after former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt told him Keating was "a crook."

Cranston received the most money from Keating, including $850,000 to three voter registration projects he backed, Bennett said.

Cranston, a liberal Democrat, should have questioned why a conservative such as Keating would give money to causes that probably would lead to more black and Hispanic voters.

"I will give you many instances where acts and money were discussed at the same time and hundreds of thousands of dollars, in the case of Senator Cranston, passed in an office in this building," Bennett said.

Evidence shows DeConcini offered a deal on Keating's behalf to top Utah regulator Edwin Gray, Bennett said. DeConcini has denied such a deal was offered.

The counsel said Riegle "set into motion" plans for Gray's meeting with Keating, and hid from his own aides his role in arranging that meeting.

Campaign contributions by Keating and associates to Riegle came just weeks before that meeting, Bennett said.

Poll boosts Maggie foe

By MICHAEL WEST
The Associated Press

LONDON — Former defense secretary Michael Heseltine's bid to replace Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was boosted today by a poll that showed support for a change in leadership.

The survey showed that if Heseltine replaced Mrs. Thatcher as leader of the governing Conservative Party — which would automatically make him prime minister — the Tories would shoot to a 10-point lead over the opposition Labor Party.

The poll, conducted by Market and Opinion Research International and published in The Times of London, showed that if Mrs. Thatcher remained party leader and prime minister, the Conservatives would trail Labor, their main challenger, by four points.

The Tories have trailed Labor in opinion polls for the past 16 months. The next general election by law must be held by mid-1992. But the prime minister can call one any time before that.

The British domestic news agency Press Association said the poll's findings "represent an enormous boost for Mr. Heseltine's chances of winning the leadership from Mrs. Thatcher."

Heseltine, 57, on Thursday formally submitted his bid for the leadership of the Conservative Party.

He will challenge the 65-year-old Mrs. Thatcher in a secret ballot Tuesday among the 372 Conservative legislators in the House of Commons. It is the first serious challenge to her leadership since she took office in 1979.

To win Tuesday, a candidate needs 50 percent of the votes cast and have at least 15 percent more than the runner-up.

A second ballot, if necessary, would be held on Nov. 27, and other candidates are free to come forward. The winner needs only to get a majority.

The opinion poll was based on face-to-face interviews with 1,088 people after the close of nominations for the Conservative — or Tory — leadership on Thursday. Heseltine was the only nominated challenger.

The poll showed 49 percent of the respondents would support the Conservatives if Heseltine became leader, compared with 39 percent for Labor and seven percent for the Liberal Democrats. The other five percent was split among smaller parties.

If Mrs. Thatcher survives Heseltine's challenge, Labor would have 45 percent support; Tories 41 percent, and Liberal Democrats 10 percent, according to the poll. It did not state a margin of error.

Another newspaper, The Independent, reported today that a survey of London-based Japanese investors showed 54 percent would be more inclined to buy shares in British companies if there were a new Tory leader. The survey was conducted by the securities house Nomura.

Mrs. Thatcher, who won general elections in 1979, 1983 and 1987, said on Thursday she intends to fight for the job. She was responding to a Labor legislator who held up a 5-year-old newspaper in which she'd promised to quit in 1990.

Heseltine, reported to be a millionaire, resigned his Cabinet post as defense secretary in 1986

Pretty boys face losing prestigious Grammy

NEW YORK — Milli Vanilli, the drowsy pop duo whose debut album sold 7 million copies, could become the first act to be stripped of a Grammy after it was learned they didn't sing a single note on the record.

"The record company never knew that I never told them anything," said Farian. "Later on, after the record was out, there were some people who raised some questions."

The Vanillis won a Grammy for Best New Artist and Rob and Fab became international stars. "Girl You Know It's True" and "Blame It On the Rain" were both huge hit singles for the band. At the MTV awards, the boys boasted they were better than Elvis or Bob Dylan.

Farian would not say who the real singers were but added that they will appear on his next album — a Milli Vanilli album.

He said Wednesday she was forced to go public with the revelations when the boys told him they wanted to sing on the follow-up to "Girl You Know It's True."

Gorbachev promises shakeup

By THOMAS GINSBERG
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today promised a government and military shakeup to break the paralysis of power that has blocked transition to a market economy.

The Soviet leader, addressing the Supreme Soviet legislature which had demanded that he give a full report on his plans, said measures to reorganize the government and "get rid of outdated, clearly useless structures" would be submitted to the legislature within 10 days.

Gorbachev said the changes were necessary to implement the union treaty which hold the country together. "The reorganization of the government should be accompanied by a renewal of its members, those most competent should be brought into government," he said.

He did not spell out the changes but said they had the approval of embattled Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov. Reformers in parliament and elsewhere have demanded that Ryzhkov and his Cabinet resign, but Gorbachev has stood by him.

Speaking of the impending changes, Gorbachev promised the legislators that "you will see for yourself in several days when you get a draft concept of the treaty."

Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin, Gorbachev's leading political rival, spoke afterward and demanded the ouster of Ryzhkov's Cabinet, or Council of Ministers, and the creation of a crisis committee to lead the country during the transition period to a market economy.

Yeltsin gave the Soviet leader two weeks to set up the committee, which would apparently be a coalition of central government and republic leaders.

"The crisis we are experiencing now is still a crisis of a totalitarian state which is reflected in the paralysis of power," Yeltsin said.

He said, "the center is sliding down to confrontation with the republics, and first of all, with Russia."

Gorbachev also clearly worried about maintaining order during the chaotic period of transition to a market economy, promised a shakeup of the top military leadership.

He rejected persistent rumors of a military coup and said people were spreading them to discredit the army. "We cannot discredit the army because we need them now to maintain stability in the country," Gorbachev said.

The changes "would be made in the top echelon of the armed forces command," he said.

Gorbachev also said he would cancel all decisions taken by republics and local government bodies that deny rights to Soviet soldiers and their families, particularly those stationed in the Baltics.

Founding the lecture for emphasis, Gorbachev appealed for the deputies to give him the support he needs to carry out his reforms. He said some of his decrees have been reversed by officials in the republics.

"The president cannot be just on his own, just as you cannot settle many questions without his participation and without his powers," Gorbachev pleaded. "Let's act together."

Fake dependents cost U.S. billions

By JIM LUTHER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Millions of Americans have been cheating the government out of billions of dollars a year by claiming non-existent children and parents as dependents for tax purposes, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The year after Congress required that children 5 or older have Social Security numbers, the number of dependent exemptions dropped by 7 million below what had been predicted. That brought in an extra $2.8 billion in taxes in 1987 alone, the IRS says.

Returns filed by 11,627 couples and individuals showed declines of seven or more dependents claimed from the previous year. Nearly 67,000 claimed four, five or six dependents than before. In most cases, the exaggerated claims had been made for several years.

"The decrease is particularly significant because it seems to indicate that a 20-year trend of increasing numbers of improper dependency exemptions has finally been reversed," concluded IRS researcher John A. Szilagyi.

The study indicated that most of the cheating was being done by single taxpayers and by married people who filed separate returns. The number of dependents claimed by singles dropped 48.3 percent from 1986 to 1987; claims by married people filing separately declined 28 percent; the number claimed by couples filing joint returns dropped 3.9 percent.

The IRS is not through with those taxpayers who were found to have exaggerated their claims for dependents over a period of years.

FBI obtained CNN tapes; network demands return

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — CNN is demanding the FBI return a box of recordings and papers related to the government's tapping of Manuel Noriega's jailhouse phone calls. The material was taken from a hotel room where a CNN reporter stayed.

It wasn't immediately clear whether the recordings were audio or video tapes, and whether they were the phone calls between Noriega and his lawyers that are at the center of a legal battle now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The box of material was given to the FBI on Thursday by security guards at the hotel, Cable News Network said. CNN claimed the box was improperly removed from the reporter's room and that the FBI obtained it without a warrant.

Meanwhile, the network has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a federal judge's order, issued last week, barring it from stirring recordings of conversations between Noriega and the fallen Panamanian dictator's legal team.

In addition, a hearing was scheduled in Miami today to determine whether Noriega, whose assets have been frozen by prosecutors, should be declared indigent and appointed a government defense attorney.

Noriega is being held in a Miami jail, awaiting trial on charges of taking $4.6 million in payoffs to fund the cocaine trade. The FBI is investigating how CNN obtained seven tapes of his jail cell phone conversations.

FBI spokesman Scott Nelson in Washington said agents would go through the box today. He said he did not know whether it contained videotapes, audio recordings or both. Nelson said agents obtained the box without a warrant.

"We were made aware of the tapes and merely picked them up for analysis," he said.

CNN President Tom Johnson said he protested the FBI's action "in the strongest terms" to agency officials in Washington.

CNN spokesman Steve Haworth said network officials were not certain of the box's contents but it contained "confidential material accumulated by CNN in its investigation of possible government tapping of telephone conversations of General Manuel Noriega."

The New York Times today quoted an unidentified CNN official as saying the actual Noriega recordings were not in the box.

"The FBI did not get the main course," the official said.

The box was removed Monday from a room that had been occupied by investigative reporter Marlene Fernandez at the Omni Hotel, part of a complex that also houses CNN's offices.

Hotel manager Bill Thompson said hotel security officers thought Fernandez had checked out when they removed a box containing papers and at least one videotape.

But CNN's Johnson said "it is in dispute" whether the room had been vacated by Fernandez, who normally is anchorwoman of CNN's Spanish-language telecasts in Washington.

Judge awards $45.3 M to ex-Lockheed workers

By LINDA DEUTSCH
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Lockheed Corp. says it will appeal a jury's $45.3 million award to three employees who claimed they were wrongfully fired for ensuring the safety of the defense contractor's mammoth C-5B cargo plane.

A Superior Court jury made the award Thursday to Clyde W. Jones Jr., 62, Terrence F. Schielke, 50, and Thomas E. Benckel, 48.

The three said they were dismissed in 1985 after questioning the structural stability of the plane, now being used to ferry troops to the Persian Gulf.

"We believe the punitive damages are an injustice and come as a result of appealing to the passions and prejudice of the jury," said Lockheed attorney Gordon Kricher. "The evidence doesn't warrant this verdict."

Kricher said the planes were checked by the Air Force and found to be safe.

Former Lockheed Chairman Lawrence O. Kichen testified the men behaved unprofessionally in going outside the company to obtain independent metallurgical tests on the C-5B.

He said that Jones had already elected to retire before Lockheed officials learned of the employees' concerns. Schielke and Benckel were fired for circumventing company policies and audit procedures, Kichen said.

"I just wonder what else is wrong with the rest of their airplanes," said juror Jackie Grundman.

Each of the plaintiffs was awarded $15 million in punitive damages. Awards for compensatory damages and emotional distress totaled $202,065 for Benckel, $21,660 for Jones and $82,789 for Schielke.

Thanks, voters

To the Editor:
Now that I have had a chance to catch my breath, after five referendums, I would like to at least say thanks to all the voters that participated in the annual budget process in Coventry this year. I firmly believe that even if the proposed budget was voted down the fifth time they would still not have made cuts in the right places. How could they be trusted after gambling four times?
I feel somewhat pleased with our accomplishments. The first proposed budget was reduced by over two mills. What went wrong?
Why did the Town Council lay a tax rate of 38.85 mills before the budget was approved?
Did the flyer sent out over the 6 council members names just prior to the fifth referendum mislead the voters in regard to the accreditation of the Coventry High School, since the superintendent now says that there is no reason to believe the high school will not be accredited next spring? Why did he hold back the report? Did they correctly search out all the facts before reporting them as facts?
I got down the way the budget was approached and handled. Put it in the memory bank and review it before the next budget meeting and town election. I feel we certainly gained and will continue to gain even if only one step at a time. I feel this town council's credibility was severely damaged by their actions.
After reviewing the many responses, both written and oral, I received personally I want to again say, "thank you."

Blood donors needed

To the Editor:
The Annual Thanksgiving Race Blood Bank Collection is scheduled for Friday, November 23, at St. Mary's Episcopal Church at 41 Park St., Manchester from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.
It may be of interest to the donors to know that while whole blood transfusions constitute the greatest use for their blood, there are still other important uses for it as well. The so-called "blood components", i.e., the red blood cells, platelets, and plasma, can be separated from each other and used independently to treat specific diseases. For example, the red blood cells can be used to treat anemia; the platelets in bleeding disorders; and the plasma in certain coagulation deficiencies.
As chairman of the collection committee, may I remind you that this year's motto is "Be A Life Saver," and I would urge all who can to come in and join the "Life Savers."

Discipline at Bolton High

To the Editor:
Due to an increase in the rate of suspensions at Bolton High School, some are calling for the replacement of high school Principal Joseph Fleming. I am a senior at Bolton High, and cannot see any reason for this demand. The increased suspension rates are caused by a new smoking policy at the high school which suspends those students who violate the rule. Also, remember that Mr. Fleming was the principal when the suspension rate was much lower at 15 percent in 1987.
Discipline is one issue that Mr. Fleming and his students take great pride in. The high suspension rates — up 32 percent in 1990 — are merely a credit to the enforcement procedures. Mr. Fleming is performing his duty very well and taking heat for it. Is this right?

Mixed signals on taxes

WASHINGTON — Once again voters have sent mixed signals about exactly where they stand on taxes. On the one hand, several governors were turned out of office because they had raised taxes. However, when confronted with the chance to directly cut taxes, voters this year almost uniformly turned their backs on the opportunity.

Republican Govs. Mike Hayden in Kansas, Kay Orr in Nebraska, Edward D. DiPrete in Rhode Island and Democrat James Blanchard in Michigan were all turned out of office, in whole or in part, because of their tax policies.
But ballot propositions in Massachusetts, California, Nebraska, Utah, Montana and Colorado — all aimed at slashing taxes or imposing spending limitations — were defeated.

The so-called "tax revolt" started in California with the 1978 passage of the famous Proposition 13. Many observers said it ended in 1988 when California voters approved a rollback of many Prop. 13 cuts and effectively voted themselves new taxes.

But this year tax-revolt proponents pointed to the fact that anti-tax or anti-spending ballot initiatives had qualified in 11 states as proof that the tax revolt was alive and well.

Now, in the election aftermath, the debate will begin anew.
Probably the most surprising defeat came in Massachusetts where a massive $2.6 billion tax rollback failed. The Massachusetts measure would have shrunk state taxes and fees to 1988 levels, cutting $1.3 billion from the state's $13.4 billion budget this year and $2.6 billion next year. The measure would also have receded recent increases in the state's income, sales and gas taxes.

All summer and fall, Massachusetts voters decided to speak for themselves and recognize reality. In Montana, voters refused to do away with all state income, property and sales taxes and to replace them with a kind of value-added tax called a "transaction charge" of 1 percent on all financial dealings. No expert was able to predict whether the proposed new tax would actually raise more or less revenue than the current set of taxes.

In Colorado, voters narrowly rejected a measure requiring voter approval for any state or local tax increase. A similar proposal was soundly defeated in 1988.

Turkey is for the birds

I am not against turkey. I'm really not. I am not against eating turkey, either. Even though there's a nice lady who travels around in a van with her pet turkeys, trying to convince people what smart, affectionate birds they are and henceforth they should not be killed and eaten. Pigs are cute, too, and I have yet to swear off barbecued pork.

However, I have yet to meet a person who counts roast turkey among his or her favorite foods. I'll admit that on occasion most of us have eaten a succulent, perfectly cooked piece of turkey breast. But if we're keeping score, we've all been treated to more leathery pieces of overdone gobbler than we have sublime breast.
Let's face it, turkey is not our greatest national dish. In fact, if all the animals we eat had to compete in a popularity poll, I'd be surprised if turkey beat out opossum.

So why in the name of Colonel Sanders do we take one of our greatest national holidays — and the week thereafter if we're especially unlucky — and subject ourselves to 23-pound turkeys? I know I'll be accused of trying to ruin the entire turkey industry, but ever since I was introduced to the law of supply and demand in Economics 101, I've thought of us-Americans as trying to force people to demand something just because there was a large supply industry already in place.

If we start eating something we like for holidays instead — say big, golden platters of fried chicken — let the turkey industry convert some of their plants to processing chicken.
Think about it: First, since most of us only cook 23-pound turkeys once or twice a year and are novices at it, we've sentenced whoever draws the duty to two days of nervous stomach.
Why two days, you ask?

Send youngest child into living room to entertain waiting diners with highlights of the last five episodes of "The Simpsons."
While a household of relatives wander through your kitchen as you mash potatoes, fill iced-tea glasses and unroll the Cranberry-Yule Log Surprise, you have to cook the darned thing all morning and hope it's ready when everything else is. There will be a pop-up thermometer in one of the drumsticks to tell you when it's done, but Booklet 48-C has warned you not to trust it.

And while we're on the subject, is there any reason we have to eat pumpkin pie when there are entire supermarket shelves full of chocolate just waiting to be made into chocolate-cream pies?
What, you say, because the pilgrims did it almost 400 years ago? Since they had a choice of either pumpkin, squash or possibly poison berry pie, I hardly think their selection should qualify for four centuries of preference.
This year, I'm letting the family decide the Thanksgiving menu. I have a feeling we'll eat cashew chicken, later turkey and Hostess cream-filled cupcakes.
But at least it will all be done at the same time and we won't have to eat leftovers for a week.

Two approaches
Pentagon strategists are divided on the best way to carry out a war with Iraq. The Pentagon is still dominated by the old guard that favors a massive air assault, and they have the ear of the president. But our sources say that younger planners who were raised on the Vietnam War have a strategy to save American lives. They want to dig in and arm the Kuwaitis to conduct guerrilla war against the occupying Iraqi army.

Mini-editorial
The high command of the Soviet Red Army is close to open rebellion because of Mikhail Gorbachev's support of the U.S. troop buildup in the Persian Gulf. The Soviet soldiers should not be judged too harshly on this point. The buildup is akin to a Soviet deployment of 250,000 troops to the Caribbean. Americans may like Gorbachev's new openness, but would they feel at ease if he sent such an army to our corner of the world?

Nuclear industry bailout

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — When Congress is under the gun of a deadline to pass a bill, like the deficit reduction package, it's best to check the coattails of that bill. Attached like stubborn lint will be unrelated bills that are so unpopular they will only pass if they are tucked to a sure thing.

Fortunately, this time around, the conference committee recognized lint when it saw it. A bill to perpetuate a multibillion-dollar taxpayer bailout of the nuclear power industry was stuck to the deficit reduction legislation, but Congress picked it off at the last minute.

The bad news is that the senators who have tried to convert this lint into law more than once will be back to try again in the next session.

Since 1964, the Energy Department has operated uranium enrichment plants and sold the product to nuclear power utilities to generate the fission heat that drives nuclear reactors. And since 1984, that program has been operating at a deficit, running up a $10 billion debt in spite of a law that says the operation must pay for itself with no taxpayer subsidy.

Rather than make the Energy Department comply with the law and sell its uranium for a price that covers the cost of enriching it, two senators are determined to repeal the law and let the taxpayers pay the difference.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., and Bennett Johnston, D-La., are the ringleaders for the nuclear industry. They have been nurturing an unpopular energy bill through the Senate for years, but just can't seem to get it through the House.

Their bill would stick it to the taxpayers in more than one way. It would repeal the law that requires the nuclear enrichment program to cover its costs. It would force the taxpayers to cover the $10 billion in losses already accumulated. It would also require for at least another $10 billion spent to decommission one enrichment plant and other cleanup costs. And it would authorize the Energy Department to raise $2.5 billion more to build yet another uranium enrichment plant at a time when nuclear power is about as popular as the nuclear industry with the savings and loan industry. One was not guaranteed a bailout. In fact, the guarantee went the other way. The establishment of the uranium enrichment program in 1964 was surrounded by plenty of promises that the government would never have to subsidize it.

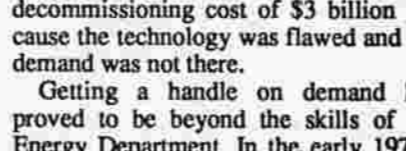

The Energy Department is compounding its mismanagement of the program by proposing to build yet another enrichment plant using untested technology. The department has already abandoned one of the three existing plants at a decommissioning cost of $3 billion because the technology was flawed and the demand was not there.

Getting a handle on demand has proved to be beyond the skills of the Energy Department. In the early 1970s, the department predicted that the nuclear power industry would go through the ceiling — profits wise, that is. To gear up for the demand, the department increased its capacity to enrich uranium, but the demand never materialized. One nuclear power plant after another has been shut down.

Now, the National Taxpayers Union told our associate Melinda Maas, the uranium enrichment program is losing $1 billion a year.

There is no reason to believe that the Energy Department will learn its lesson about backing a loser. Energy Secretary James Watkins, a former admiral in the nuclear Navy, is a big booster of nuclear energy, wars and all.

BUSINESS

In Brief . . .

Government regulators for the first time have laid much of the blame for the savings and loan industry collapse on the junk bond dealings of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.
In a 60-page legal claim, federal thrift regulators accuse the failed investment firm of bribery, fraud, market manipulation and other serious crimes they allege hastened the demise of 48 savings and loan institutions.

The claim, which seeks $11.3 billion on behalf of the thrifts, was released Thursday.

Business inventories grew 0.5 percent in September, the government said, leading some analysts to express concern the buildup could lead to further production cuts and loss of jobs.

Economist Evelina Tainer of the First National Bank of Chicago noted Thursday that industrial production in October already had dropped 0.8 percent, its sharpest drop in nine months. "It is consistent with the idea that the economy is sliding into a recession and growth will be negative in the fourth quarter," she said.

MCI Communications Corp. said as many as 1,500 workers may be laid off in the next six months as the company restructures its operations because of competition and "changing economic conditions."

MCI, the nation's second largest long-distance telephone company behind AT&T, employs about 25,000 people. It said Thursday the 1,500 layoffs would be spread around the nation.

Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. Ltd. currently negotiating with unions over debt relief, reported a 31.3 percent decline in its operating profit after taxes for the first quarter.

The results, reported Thursday, came as the international media company talks with bankers about allowing more time to repay billions of dollars in debt due within the next three years. Murdoch, chief executive of News Corp., was scheduled to meet with bankers in London.

Jurors have ordered Lockheed Corp. to pay $45.3 million in damages to three former employees who claimed they were wrongfully fired for questioning the safety of the giant C-5B military cargo plane. Lockheed will try to have the award reduced or overturned, company vice president Joseph G. Twomey said in a statement following the Thursday order.

The plaintiffs asserted that four C-5Bs built with defective mainframes continue to fly and are currently transporting troops to Saudi Arabia, said Herbert Harif, lawyer for two of the whistleblowers.

The Bush administration is considering cuts in popular government benefit programs such as Social Security and Medicare as part of the budget it will submit to Congress in February, an administration official said.

The official, who spoke Thursday on the condition his name not be used, said the cuts being considered would reduce benefits for affluent recipients with the savings used to provide tax cuts to the poor and middle class.

Such an action "is clearly being contemplated very seriously," said the official, who also stressed that all planning for the new budget was in a very preliminary stage with final decisions a long way from being made.

Reeling from a $17.8 million loss in the third quarter, Advanced Micro Devices is laying off about 200 employees to cut costs, the company announced.

"Intense global competition dictates that we make a number of difficult decisions to improve productivity," Richard Previt, president and chief operating officer of the electronic equipment manufacturer, said Thursday. The layoffs are in the sales, general and administrative departments both in the United States and overseas, said a company spokesman. AMD employs more than 12,000 people.

Changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe will drive down prices for food and energy worldwide, an international panel of experts predicted.

Increased grain production will end the common farm policy that has helped keep prices high in the 12-nation European Community and elsewhere, said L. Alan Winters of the University of Birmingham in Britain, a panel member.

The report, released on Thursday, said the biggest drop in food prices would come in grain and dairy products.

Campbell Soup Co. said higher sales and a worldwide reorganization boosted first-quarter earnings 28 percent for the best quarter in the company's history.

For the three months ended Oct. 28, net earnings climbed to $105.1 million, or 82 cents a share, on sales of $1.6 billion, the company said Thursday. In the first quarter last year, earnings were $83 million, or 64 cents a share, on revenues of $1.5 billion.

The stock market suffered a moderate setback Thursday, giving up some of the gains recorded in its rally since mid-October. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 14.60 to 2,545.05.

Bond prices eased. The dollar inched higher. Gold prices fell overseas but advanced domestically. Wheat prices fell sharply on the Chicago Board of Trade, plunging to near contract lows.

Crude oil prices finished slightly lower after see-sawing in brisk trading in the absence of significant news from the Persian Gulf.

Charter

making it clear that the general manager does not have the power to fill a vacancy on the Board of Directors if the board itself fails to do so.

Ocella said he had no strong opinion on giving the mayor broader powers.

But Irish recommended direct election of the mayor, possibly making the mayor a chief executive officer with the general manager serving as a chief operations officer handling the day-to-day government functions.

He suggested salary of $15,000 to $40,000 and a two-year term. Along with that, he suggested a board of eight directors, instead of nine, with no more than five from the same party.

Irish also urged a review of provisions on conflicts of interest, a larger Park and Recreation Commission, review of the status of the Library Board, creation of a separate water and sewer commission to relieve the Board of Directors of operating what he said is the 10th largest water and sewer utility operation in the state.

Robert Samuelson, a town resident, had submitted a list of 19 suggestions to the commission and spoke about several of them. Among his suggestions were creation of a separate finance commission to help the directors arrive at budget decisions, a separate wetlands commission with expertise in environmental fields, a town building sites committee for all town projects to help make decisions on those projects before the Building Committee begins its operations.

At Lutz, another resident, said he will submit suggestions in writing to the commission and he urged creation of a traffic authority apart from the police chief.

The commission plans to meet twice a month, and Diana repeated Thursday night that he might appoint committees to study specific issues.

In their deliberations, commission members will have as one resource a compendium of the work of previous charter revision commissions on related topics in 1973, 1978, 1981, and 1986.

Commission members are Republicans Diana, Paul Berie, Scott Clendaniel, William Hunniford, and Beverly Malone and Democrats Penny, Kevin O'Brien, Eleanor Colman, Leonard Seader, and JoAnn Moriarty.

Hunniford and Seader were not present Thursday night. Their absence, along with the small public turnout, prompted the commission to delay considering the substance of the suggestions before them until after the second public hearing set for Dec. 6.

Revising the charter involves a number of steps with the final one a vote by the town voters at a regular or special election.

In the interim, the directors must hold at least one public hearing and must accept or reject the report of the commission or accept parts of it and reject others.

At the outset of the meeting Thursday, Ocella, speaking for Mayor Terry Werkhoven and the directors, praised the commission members for volunteering to serve and said he hoped the effort would remain bipartisan.

Republican and Democratic directors reached a compromise on the makeup of the commission and on the scope of its work after considerable dispute.

Beverly Malone, a commission member, asked how long the commission would continue to accept suggestions. William Diana, vice chairman, said, "If an idea pops up in April, we are not going to preclude consideration of it."

The commission is scheduled to present a report to the directors May 1, but at the first commission meeting, Nov. 1, some members were concerned about completing work on all 16 items in their formal charge and others that may arise by that deadline.

At Lutz, another resident, said he will submit suggestions in writing to the commission and he urged creation of a traffic authority apart from the police chief.

Turkey

we do at the school," the science teacher said of the event which is being sponsored by the Bennet Student Council.

Woodbridge said he chose the camp to receive the money raised by the event three years ago because it was a new charity and it needed help getting off the ground.

"It's better than any camp I've seen," said Kelly, who visited the camp along with other Bennet students. Many of the patients at the camp

"need treatment right there," Bill Woolbridge said, noting the exorbitant cost of hospital equipment.

"Some of the kids there may only have a couple months" to live, he said.

In last year's Turkey Trot, students raised more than $1,500 for the camp, in addition to 24 area businesses which contributed more than $700, he said.

Main St. The 4.7-mile course will take the runners down Charter Oak, Highland, Wyllys, Porter, and East Center Streets before winding up where it started.

Pledges are collected by students before the race, and a Turkey-Trot T-shirt will be given to the top 50 pledge-getters.

The other 10 percent of the donations will go to the Bennet Athletic Fund to help coaches at the school improve their programs.

Forum on taxes open to public

By BRIAN M. TROTTA
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Residents will get a chance to speak out on taxes tonight at an open forum sponsored by a local taxpayer group.

The event, sponsored by The Neglected Taxpayers, will be held at town hall and begins at 7:30 p.m.

The featured speaker will be Michael Levin, vice president and director of research for the Connecticut Public Expenditures Council. CPCE is a business-sponsored, non-profit watchdog group that tracks municipal and state spending.

Town Chairman Charles Holland said that in last year's survey by CPCE, Bolton ranked 13th in the state in per capita spending. Bolton's fiscal year 1989, spending $1,849.77 per resident.

"When this year's figures come out, I think they'll show that we've moved even higher on the list," Holland said, adding that the figures may be available in time for tonight's meeting.

In comparison, towns of similar size spent far less money, Holland said. Mansfield, for example, spent $895.42 per resident, Columbia spent $1,224.02 and Lebanon spent $1,459.60.

Holland said the event will also include an open forum where residents may express their feelings about taxes. The financing plan for the proposed school building project is expected to be the focus of much of the discussion.

The $10.5 million project includes a 27-room addition to the elementary school, a new cafeteria, music room and an addition to the Industrial Technology area at the high school.

Sixth-graders get achievement awards

By CAROL CLEVENGER
Manchester Herald

ANDOVER — The Andover Board of Education, at its meeting Tuesday, recognized two sixth-grade students for their exemplary achievements and leadership at Andover Elementary School.

Honored were Lisa Kendall, for school and community service, and Tyler Bushey who was described by his teachers as personable, positive, and a good student. Bushey is an active Boy Scout.

The award is given annually by the Connecticut Association of School Superintendents in an effort to recognize achievement and to draw superintendents into a closer relationship with the students.

In other action, the board received a request from Jay Lindy, who spoke for the Recreation Commission, to install four new basketball hoops on the playground area near the school's upper level parking lot.

Lindy cautioned that the asphalt surface of the play area is in need of repair before winter sets in and he offered to make the repairs along with the installation of the hoops.

The recreation commission also offered to purchase a basketball clock to be installed in the gym. The hoops and the clock would be purchased out of Recreation Commission grant money.

Board Chairman Cindy Dakin questioned the feasibility of installing hoops in an area of the playground where the children play four square.

There was also concern that the play area may be redesigned in the next year or so and that a playscape is also in the planning stages.

"The poles and hoops can be re-installed," Lindy replied.

Lindy indicated that the hoops would be college quality that would stand up to the students' hanging on them without damage.

The board, at its last meeting, placed a freeze on funds allocated for repair of the existing hoops in order to pay for needed repairs to the heating system.

The board discussed the possibility of increased liability and vandalism that might occur with greater after-hours use of the new equipment.

Lindy withdrew the request. The board continued discussion of safety problems associated with the routing of the late bus from RHAM High School. Four members of the board rode the bus after deciding, at the last meeting, that they needed to see the route firsthand.

Board member Ruth O'Neill reported that two areas of concern were stops at the intersection of Jurorway and Old Andover Roads and a stop at Route 87 and Lindholm. Also discussed was a turnaround in the intersection of East Street and Boston Hill Road.

The board agreed to allow the driver the discretion to decide whether to take the students to their homes rather than the designated stops. Home stops would add an estimated seven to 10 minutes to the route.

Member Carl Shillo suggested that the board consider adding a bus since there was concern about the length of the route.

"I can't vote for a route that is knowingly longer than the state's mandated one-hour limit," Shillo said.

The route takes about 90 minutes without extensions if the bus is full. The board would have to find the money to pay for a second bus. They will try to determine if there are enough regular riders to warrant the expense of a second vehicle.

Landfill stinks, tenants assert

By ALEX GIRELLI
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Tenants of Spencer Village housing for the elderly have complained about odors they say come from the town's sanitary landfill and have asked the Housing Authority of Manchester to write to town officials about it.

At a Housing Authority meeting this week, Carol Shanley, executive director of the authority, said she would write a letter to Mayor Terry Werkhoven.

Shanley said one tenant said she became ill from the odor.

Lee O'Connor, town sanitation superintendent, said Thursday he gets complaints from time to time, depending on the direction of the wind. He said that during the week day when raw waste is being buried, it is difficult to avoid odors. He said the waste is covered over every night as required by state law.

He cited a recent case in which he got a complaint about an odor from a specific area of the landfill, and immediately went to that area but found no smell.

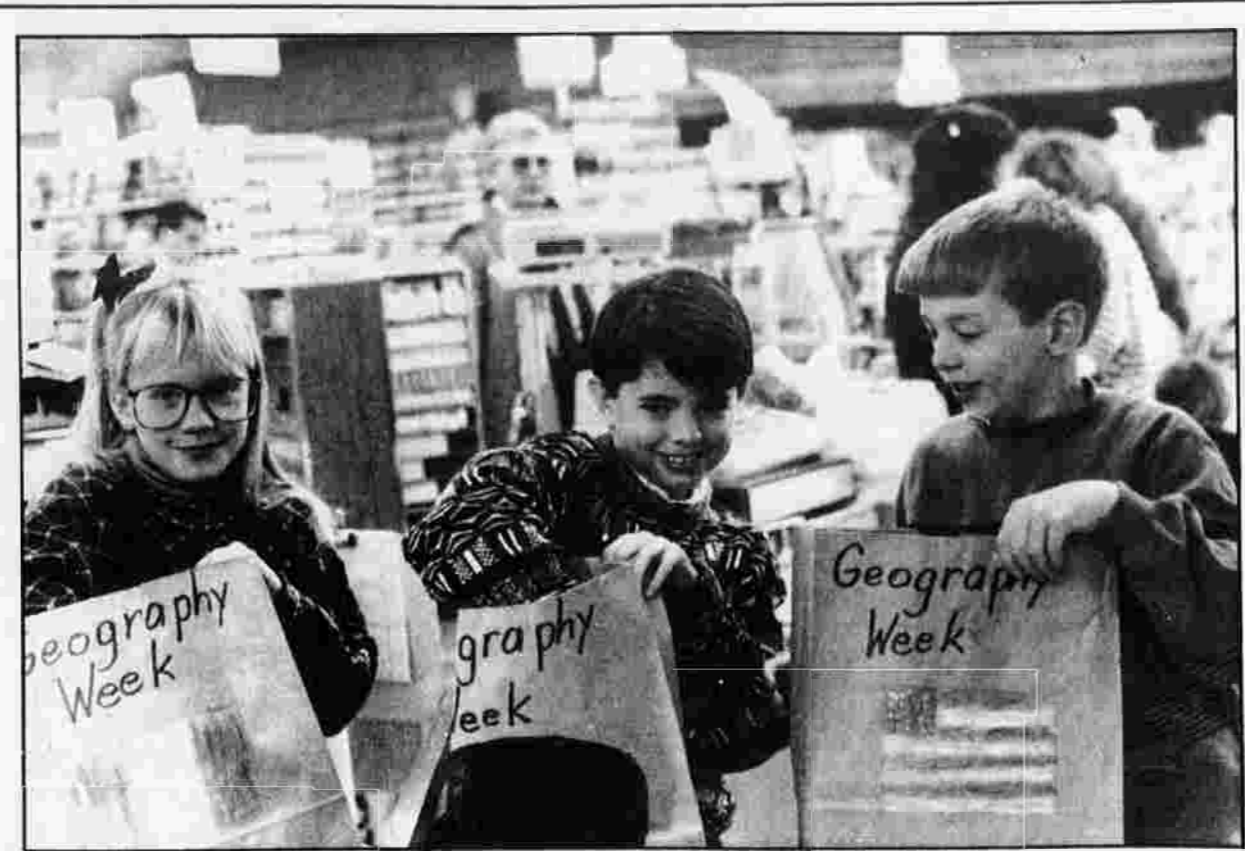

He said the best composting area and the sewage treatment plant are both within the general boundaries of the landfill.

He suggested that when residents detect an odor, they phone the sanitation division immediately so that it can be checked out.

MANCHESTER — Hundreds of pounds of lasagna, vermicelli and ziti came through the doors of Manchester High School Thursday, and the cafeteria wasn't even preparing an Italian meal.

Gears ground, and wheels burned as more than 100 students from the high school, Highland Park Elementary School, and Quirk and Fox Middle Schools in Hartford fought it out in the Great American Pasta Race yesterday afternoon.

Their cars were made almost exclusively of pasta with linguine axles and lasagna bodies, some painted elaborately, others retaining their natural shade of pale yellow.

Derek Prypiuniewicz, a student at the high school, looked tense as he placed his dragster diligently atop the starting ramp. Prypiuniewicz backed off and the ruler holding his car in place was released.

Whisking down the two-foot ramp, the dragster was barely past the qualifying line before trouble hit. It's rear wheel broke off, bringing it to a halt.

"I was hoping it would go a lot farther than that," said the advanced placement physics student. Prypiuniewicz said he didn't use aerodynamics when constructing his hot rod.

GENTLEMAN, START YOUR ENGINES — David Hoagland, a senior at Manchester High School, prepares his dragster at the starting gate in Thursday's Great American Pasta Race at the high school. The race judged cars made almost exclusively of pasta for their speed and distance traveled. Hoagland's hot rod went on to be judged the fastest.

Besides their speed and distance traveled, other cars were judged on their beauty — or lack thereof — in the event which was the brainchild of Earl Carlyon, a physics teacher at the school.

Students collect waste

By BRIAN M. TROTTA
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — High school students' rooms may often look like toxic waste dumps, even though few ever contain anything more hazardous than some old, smelly sneakers.

This weekend, though, local students will get a chance to handle some more dangerous items.

This weekend, though, local students will get a chance to handle some more dangerous items. Juniors and seniors in Karen Cordero's ecology class will be assisting in the town's first annual Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the fire station on Bolton Center Road.

Cordero said her class got involved with the collection when Helen Kemp, executive assistant to the Board of Selectmen, contacted her.

"We had worked together on Earth Day activities in the past," Cordero said. "So we decided to put something together for the town."

The nine students in the class participated in the selection of the company that would conduct the collection. They debated the pros and cons of the two companies that were bidding for the job and eventually selected Laidlaw Environmental Service of North Andover, Mass., over Clean Harbors Inc. of New Britain.

The students also participated in planning sessions between the town and Laidlaw. They will also receive special training from company officials on how to handle the waste that will be collected. They will be outfitted with special protective suits that will cover them from head to toe to protect them from the chemicals.

The students have also created a survey which will give to residents who show up at the collection. The questionnaire will ask residents their opinions on several environmental issues.

They are also organizing a swap table where residents may place unwanted but usable chemicals such as paint thinners. Other residents who have a use for the chemicals may take them away free of charge. Items for the table must be in their original containers with the labels still attached.

The amount of waste collected is limited to 20 gallons of liquids and 50 pounds of solids per household. Some pesticides, wood preservatives, radioactive or biologically active materials and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) will not be accepted.

The town has also set a limit of $12,000 in collected materials.

"Once we start holding up payments, then the landlords will not negotiate with us," she said.

In attempt to generate some cash for the fund, the band "Folkroots" is holding a benefit concert Friday, Nov. 30, at the Unitarian Meeting House at 153 W. Vernon St. Tickets for the 8 p.m. show are $8 for the general public and $6 for students and seniors.

With winter approaching, MACC officials are concerned also with its fuel bank, which has already been tapped for $18,500.

And while the warm fall has helped to keep those allocations under control, less than $2,000 remains in the fund, which has been used by 71 households.

MODERN DIVORCE
Divorce is now called dissolution. The whole procedure is easier. We need not prove fault. Formerly witnesses were needed. Now a spouse need merely say that the marriage is over but divorce is still difficult. The problems continue to center on money, custody, use of the house, alimony and child support.

Conn. units ready for Persian Gulf

By LARRY ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — A Connecticut-based Army Reserve unit of military police officers began preparing for service in the Persian Gulf by getting fitted for gas masks and packing up chemical warfare suits.

Activated late Wednesday, the 344th Military Police Co. is the first to be called up from Connecticut for Operation Desert Shield.

A second New Haven-based unit, the 439th Quartermaster Petroleum Co., will be activated Saturday, the Army announced. The unit is responsible for handling Army fuel sites.

The 344th has an authorized strength of 141, and the 439th a strength of 67. Both are part of the Army's 76th Reserve Division, headquartered in West Hartford.

Connecticut residents make up the majority of both units, with other members coming from throughout New England, New York and Pennsylvania, Army officials said.

The military police officers began assembling Thursday at the Army Reserve Center in New Haven, where they were inventorying weapons and other supplies, gathering their chemical warfare suits, getting fitted for gas masks and preparing their personal lives in order.

After three days of preparations that will include counseling for family members, the unit is scheduled to leave Sunday for training at Fort Meade in Maryland. At Fort Meade, they will spend much of their time learning how to respond to possible chemical attacks, Army officials said.

The reservists are likely to leave for the Persian Gulf within two weeks, with the probable destination Saudi Arabia, Army officials said.

Capt. Anthony Serrano of Stonington, the 344th's commander, said the company's ranks include police and correctional officers, security guards, university students, bank employees, and factory and office workers. Nine members are women.

The company's primary mission likely would be to escort enemy prisoners, Serrano said.

Spec. 4 Eric Daigle, 19, of Middletown, a criminal justice major at Tunxis Community College in Farmington, said he was stunned when he learned he was being called up for a likely assignment in Saudi Arabia.

"When I signed that contract with the Reserves, it was to go to college. I guess I didn't read the fine print," he said with a half smile before being measured for his gas mask.

"You hear stories from your grandfather and others about war, but you never think you'll be able to sit down and tell your kids one day your own stories," Daigle said. "It's an honor — but it's also scary."

Using a caliper to measure reservists for their gas masks was Sgt. 1st Class Donald Beaure, 35, of Wells, Maine, an Army Reserve instructor in nuclear, biological and chemical warfare. His decision to put his name on a volunteer list led to the assignment with the 344th.

ROCKEFELLER CENTER CHRISTMAS TREE — The 75-foot Norway spruce picked by the Rockefeller Center Christmas tree was guided onto a truck Thursday after it was cut in Norwalk. The tree, which weighs nearly five tons, was donated by Charles Cinci Jr. The tree was planted 60 years ago by Cinci's late father.

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Sikorsky Aircraft said it would not comment on a report that blamed a cracked washer for a fatal U.S. Army helicopter crash last summer, but the company said it now uses upgraded washers.

An Army investigation concluded the July 27 crash was caused by a crack in a $50 dollar aluminum retaining washer in a tail rotor mechanism that helps control the Black Hawk helicopter, the Bridgeport Post reported Thursday.

The crash at Fort Chaffee, Ark., killed five servicemen, three of whom were from Fort Devens, Mass. It also destroyed the helicopter and additional equipment, totaling $4.7 million in damages, the report said.

The report, obtained through the Freedom of Information Act, said the washer cracked because it was corroded, and recommended that Sikorsky use washers made of a metal less susceptible to corrosion.

Foster Morgan, spokesman for the report's author, declined to comment on the report's recommendations, but said the company has recently changed specifications for the part from aluminum to steel.

Morgan said the company remains confident in the safety of the Black Hawk, and is waiting for a second Army report to be completed before deciding what action, if any, to take.

The report makes no finding of negligence by anyone involved in the accident.

However, it does criticize the response of emergency medical crews to the accident and recommends changes in training procedures for helicopter pilots.

The accident occurred about 9:30 p.m. as the helicopter approached a landing area in the wooded hills of western Arkansas at Fort Chaffee.

Chief Warrant Officer Raymond Frank, the pilot, said in a sworn statement accompanying the report that he advised the co-pilot that the aircraft was getting too close to surrounding trees.

Twardy to join Weicker staff

By JUDD EVERHART
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Gov.-elect Lowell P. Weicker Jr., who's promised to pick the best and the brightest for his appointments, has decided to pluck U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. to serve as one of his two top lieutenants, sources close to the Weicker transition say.

Twardy, who served as Weicker's legal counsel during part of Weicker's 18-year U.S. Senate career, is to be named today, along with Weicker campaign co-chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr., as Weicker's chiefs of staff, the sources said.

Weicker officials refused comment Thursday night, saying only that Weicker would make two key appointments at a news conference at the state Capitol today.

Reached at his New Haven office, Twardy also refused comment and would not say whether he would attend the Capitol news conference. He said he had heard the rumors that he would be named.

But other sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Twardy was one choice. The other was D'Amore.

Peter W. Gold, Weicker's other co-chairman, said Weicker doesn't like the term chief of staff, but that those being appointed would be "top lieutenants" to Weicker, who takes office Jan. 9.

Weicker and Twardy are old friends, although Weicker is about 20 years older than Twardy. It is Weicker to whom Twardy owes his current job from Weicker's days as a Republican U.S. senator.

Twardy, a Stamford resident, was among those who met earlier this week with Weicker at the governor-elect's Greenwich home, Appljack Farm.

D'Amore has been with Weicker for years. He ran Weicker's 1982 and 1988 Senate campaigns and was also installed as state GOP chairman by Weicker after his win in 1982. Weicker lost a bid for election to a fourth Senate term in 1988.

Frankel again is majority leader

By JUDD EVERHART
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — State House Democrats, maintaining their reputation for drama, have re-elected Robert F. Frankel of Stamford as majority leader, but not before one tie vote and a last-minute switch in votes by a single legislator.

Frankel won a third term as majority leader 45-43 vote, turning back a stiff challenge from Ronald L. Smoko of Hamden.

Toward the end of a 90-minute, closed-door caucus Thursday night, House Democrats split 44-44 on a secret ballot. The second ballot resulted in Frankel's re-election. It could not be determined which lawmaker switched on the second ballot.

Smoko had been plotting the challenge for weeks, arguing that it was time for new leadership, especially with a new governor taking office in January. Frankel said that with a new governor and the state facing monumental budget problems, now would be the wrong time to change leaders.

Smoko apparently would have won on the first ballot, had one of his supporters, Rep. Joseph Courtney of Vernon, not missed a flight back from a Florida vacation Thursday morning. Courtney tried but could not make other arrangements to return.

Frankel had covered his bets by making sure that a freshman legislator supporting him, Thomas G. Moukawsher, D-Groton, delayed by a few hours a flight to London.

House Speaker Richard J. Balducci of Newington was unopposed for a second term and was elected by acclamation.

Ultrasound services at MMH

Ultrasound services at Manchester Memorial Hospital have been enhanced through the acquisition of a state-of-the-art Doppler color flow ultrasound system. Ultrasound, which has been used at MMH since the late 1970s, uses ultra-high frequency sound waves to produce images of organs and structures within the body. Real-time ultrasound produces that image in live action on a monitor as it is being detected by sound waves. In operation at MMH for only a few months, the new color Doppler equipment enhances non-invasive vascular examinations.

Thoughts

The guiding light
"And you light up my life, you give me hope to carry on..." Who lights up your life? Who gives you hope? Who is your "guiding light"? Is it a soap opera? Perhaps a badging nonsect? Or is it something more?

The Bible says that "the people walking in darkness have seen a great light; on those living in the land of the shadow of death, a light has dawned... For to us a child is born, to us a son is given, and the government will be on his shoulders, and he will be called Wonderful Counselor (Guiding Light), Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:1-6). "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish, but have eternal life... Light has come into the world, but men loved darkness instead of light, because their deeds were evil (John 3:16, 19).

What about you? Do you love the darkness, or the light? "Everyone who does evil hated the light, and will not come into the light for fear that his deeds will be exposed. But whoever lives by the truth comes into the light, so that it may be seen plainly that what he has done has been done through God" (John 3:20, 21).

Jesus is the light of the world. Whoever follows Him will never walk in darkness, but will have the light of life (John 8:12). And His Word, the Bible, is a lamp for our feet, and a light for our path" (Psalm 119:105).

O God, "your love shines just like a beacon in the night, illuminates each step I take, it keeps me on the path of life; I need your guiding light." (Russ Taff)

Iroquois challenged

By JOHN DIAMOND
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite a federal decision clearing the way for construction of the Iroquois gas pipeline, the fight is not over, according to rival oil dealers and residents in the path of the project.

Four groups said Thursday they plan to challenge the project by questioning the procedures used by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and other opponents may join in. The motives of the opponents range from fear of competition to concern about a pipeline through the back yard.

"I'm going through the (FERC) order at this point with a frustration comb. We have a number of points we want to raise," said Anne Marie Mueser, head of an anti-Iroquois citizens group called GASP.

FERC's approval cleared the way for construction to begin of the 370-mile, $583 million pipeline which will go from Upstate New York, through western Connecticut and under Long Island Sound to Long Island.

The line will bring Canadian natural gas to utilities and gas companies in New England, New York and New Jersey. The Boston area will be a major consumer of the Iroquois gas via an existing spur line.

Backers of the project say it will reduce dependence on Mideast oil and will provide a clean-burning energy alternative for heating and electricity generation.

The Iroquois Gas Transmission System, a consortium of utilities and gas companies based in Shelton, Conn., is coordinating the pipeline construction.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

'Lady loves man who won't commit

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing Philip — not his real name — for seven months. We get along famously most of the time, despite our age difference. Philip is 34 and twice divorced, and I am 20 and never married. We had both agreed to see other people if we wanted to, and it was going well until now.

Philip has been sleeping with other women, and I just can't handle it any longer. I told him how I felt about it, and he said he would not commit to just one person — me or anyone else — even though he loves me.

Abby, the thought of him sleeping with somebody else makes me hysterical! My friends tell me it's too early to expect an exclusive commitment from Philip. He says he will never marry again, but I think I can get him to change his mind.

I don't know if I should hang in there for a little while longer or break up with him. I love him with all my heart, but I'm afraid my love may be blinding me to the realities of this situation. Please advise me.

IN LOVE IN OMAHA
DEAR IN LOVE: Run as though your life depended upon it — because it does. Any person (male or female) who is having sex with a partner who is not monogamous is at risk for a sexually transmitted disease (AIDS included). You do not mention whether Philip practiced safe sex. But even if he does, no protection is 100 percent safe.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my daughter and son-in-law announced they were going to be parents. They were both thrilled. Then a few weeks later, my daughter had a miscarriage and had to have a D and C. After the surgery, my daughter spent two days with me, and while she was here, she received flowers and cards addressed to both her and her husband.

After returning home, she called and told me and my family for having included her husband's name on the cards. She said it meant a great deal to him because, after all, he would have been the father, and he also suffered the loss of the baby. He had told her that many people had telephoned him at his home asking how his wife was and telling him how sorry they were about her loss — but no one mentioned his loss.

My purpose in writing is to remind people that when a woman loses a baby, the mother is also mourning the loss.

HIS LOVING MOTHER-IN-LAW
DEAR M-L: Thanks for the sensitive and compassionate reminder.

PEOPLE

Paul Simon, joined by a 17-piece band with musicians from three continents, will begin a North American tour in January to promote his "Rhythm of the Sains" album.

The 12-time Grammy winner plans to mix his new, South American-flavored music with past hits such as "Bridge Over Troubled Water" and "Still Crazy After All These Years." Band members will come from North America, South America and Africa.

The tour kicks off Jan. 4 at the Tacoma Dome in Tacoma, Wash., and will end up in London for two shows at Wembley Arena on May 21-22.

A mistrial was declared in the drunken driving case of former "Taxi" co-star Jeff Conaway, arrested in an accident that injured a bicyclist.

Superior Court Judge Sara Rodin declared the mistrial Thursday after the jury deadlocked.

There was no immediate word on whether prosecutors will retry the 40-year-old actor.

Prosecutors alleged Conaway was driving drunk Feb. 23 when his Porsche, traveling more than 60 mph, slammed into cyclist Farid Farhan. Farhan broke his leg and required 15 stitches on his head.

■ Trevor Nunn, director of such hit musicals as "Cats" and "Phantom of the Opera," and his wife, actress Sharon Lee Hill, are getting divorced.

A statement Nunn released Thursday said the director and his second wife had been separated since January.

At the time, Nunn was directing the $1.95 million musical "The Baker's Wife," which closed in London after six weeks. His wife appeared in the production.

Nunn also directed "Les Miserables," "Chess" and "Aspects of Love."

His first wife was actress Janet Suzman.

As CBS anchorman for 19 years, Walter Cronkite was often approached by well-wishers who urged him to run for office.

Not once did any of them, and there were quite a lot, not once did they ask me where I stood on the issues. Not once," Cronkite told about 800 people Thursday at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

Speaking as the first Theodore H. White lecturer on press and politics, Cronkite said White's "The Making of the President" books inadvertently turned the spotlight on the technique of politics rather than the substance.

"It's not his fault that we, since his example, have concentrated on the sizzle rather than the steak," he said.

Counseling helps marital conflicts

DEAR DR. GOTT: How does a woman deal with a husband who is going through a midlife crisis? I have a history of breast cancer, and my husband has indicated he wants a 35-year-old woman with a 40-D bust as his housekeeper. He has pictures of large-busted women strategically placed around our house. I'm at a loss to put this all together.

DEAR READER: Putting it all together, I conclude that your husband has a problem with breasts. This has taken the form of a breast fetish; an abnormal preoccupation with well-endowed women.

This unfortunate attitude is clearly maladaptive and harmful; I wonder if he realizes how much pain you are experiencing as a result of his thoughtlessness.

From your brief description, I'd worry that your husband wants more from the prospective housekeeper than someone to do the dishes and dust. Although at this point, the pictures and his fantasy are relatively harmless, his preoccupation with breasts could easily lead to behavior that would undermine your marriage.

I think you both could benefit from some counseling; your husband, to discover the reasons for his fetish and to find more appropriate ways of dealing with it; and you, to learn how best to handle a difficult situation. Ask your doctor to refer you to a psychologist or a marriage counselor.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Midlife Enigma: Enigma #125." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their names and addresses to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

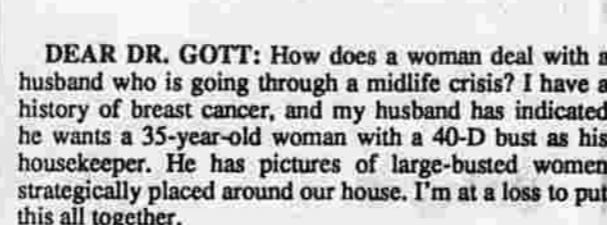

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 9½-year-old daughter was born with Mobius syndrome. She has no pectoral muscles or breast on her left side. The left side of her face is sunken in, and her left eye only closes when she is asleep. Her doctor can't explain what caused this abnormality. Can you?

DEAR READER: Mobius syndrome is an extremely rare hereditary disorder in which, during fetal development, certain key nerves in the brain (cranial nerve nuclei) fail to grow. Without these nerves to stimulate them, certain muscles also fail to grow. The syndrome is marked by absence or weakness of many facial muscles (facial palsies), including the muscles of one or both eyes, as well as the muscles of the upper extremities and chest.

TONIGHT ASK DICK KLEINER

DICK KLEINER

Q. I recently saw a movie on TV called "Skyway" with Bette Davis. Might you tell me the name of the young man who played the girl's boyfriend? — B.R., Princeton, N.J.

A. Ben Marley was the young man who played Scott in that 1980 TV film, opposite Suzy Gilstrap.

Q. Did Kluge (Jamie Farr) really act in real life as he does on "M*A*S*H"? — J.M., Seagrave, Mich.

A. Hardly. Jamie Farr is a normal guy — or as normal as an actor can be. He never puts on a dress. You have to remember that what you see on TV, or in the movies, is all make believe. Don't take it seriously.

Q. Is Katharine Hepburn any relation to Audrey Hepburn? — J.K.H., Grand Rapids, Mich.

A. Can you tell me if Kurt Russell and Patrick Swayze are related in any way? — M.B., Benton, Ark.

Q. Do you notice the uncanny resemblance between Connie Chung and Bruce Lee? Is he related to him in any way? — T.R., Trenton, N.J.

Q. Are Vincent and Liza Minnelli related? — S.B., Nagam, Idaho

Q. Please tell me if Katy Gallagher is any kin to Liz and Jean Seagal, the twins on "Double Trouble." — Mrs. B.W.P., Goldsboro, N.C.

A. The Minnellis are father and daughter. And all three Segals are sisters. But to no to all those others.

Soliciting prostitute charge faces Lakers' James Worthy

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Los Angeles Lakers forward James Worthy didn't allow his off-court problems to bother his on-court performance against the Houston Rockets. Several hours after he was arrested at his hotel Thursday and charged with solicitation of prostitution, Worthy reported to the Lakers' bench in the second quarter and finished with 24 points in a 108-103 overtime victory. "James is a great performer and he told me he wanted to play," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said. "He did and I think that says a lot for the kind of guy he is." Police spokesman Dan Turner said Worthy consulted the yellow pages of the telephone book Thursday and called an escort service that had earlier been shut down by police. Undercover police officers were dispatched to prospective clients in place of prostitutes, Turner said. "He made contact with two HPD undercover females assigned to the vice division," Turner said. "A solicitation by Mr. Worthy was made to cut a deal with the females to participate in prostitution. At that point he was arrested."

New league changes things
CHICAGO (AP) — The structure of Division I college basketball continued to change with the official creation of the Great Midwest. The formation of the NCAA's 34th conference ends DePaul's independent status. The Blue Demons join Alabama-Birmingham, Cincinnati, Marquette, Memphis State and St. Louis University in the non-football conference which will begin play in the 1991-92 season. Under NCAA rules, the new league will have to wait five years before it can be considered for an automatic NCAA tournament bid.

Katelyn Lindstrom was the first Manchester High School swimmer to win a state championship when she won Wednesday's state Class L 100-yard breaststroke. Katie Tucker was the first Manchester swimmer to win a state title in 1976 when she won the 50- and 100-yard freestyles swimming for East Catholic High School.

Moroso racing team is sued
SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit was filed Thursday against former NASCAR driver Rob Moroso's racing team and General Motors Corp., asking for unspecified damages resulting from a highway wreck that killed a 27-year-old woman. Moroso, 22, who also died in the two-car crash, had a blood-alcohol level of 0.22 percent — more than twice the legal limit, authorities said. Shortly after 11 p.m. on Sept. 30, Moroso's 1990 Oldsmobile Cutlass convertible was involved in a two-car wreck on a curve in the road. According to state police, he was traveling at least 75 mph in a 55 mph zone.

Horse racing industry mourns death of Alydar

By MIKE EMBRY
The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Alydar, a champion sire who will always be linked to Affirmed in racing lore, is remembered as a heartbreaker. Alydar, who ran a fast-closing second to an equally determined Affirmed in the 1978 Triple Crown races, was humanely destroyed Thursday after breaking his injured right hind leg. The death was the latest in a year of racing deaths and tragedies that began last October when the great 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat was destroyed after developing laminitis, an incurable inflammation of the hoof. Pappiano, sire of Kentucky Derby and Breeders' Cup Classic winner Unbridled, had to be destroyed on Labor Day when he developed laminitis while recovering from a leg fracture. And just three weeks ago in the Breeders' Cup, three horses died in two separate racing disasters. In the most heart-rending, the brilliant 3-year-old filly Go for Wand was destroyed by lethal injection in front of the grandstand at Belmont Park

OUT OF REACH — Portland's Clyde Drexler (22) and New York's Gerald Wilkins reach for the loose ball in their NBA game Thursday night in Portland. The Blazers remained unbeaten with a 141-125 win.

Wolves ball-control philosophy a help to run-and-gun Nuggets

By The Associated Press

If the Minnesota Timberwolves were facing a game of holdup men, they'd probably shout, "Don't shoot! Don't shoot!" That was their philosophy against the Denver night-fire machine-guns Thursday night and it paid off — but not for the Timberwolves. The Nuggets, whose raucous style had produced only defeats in their seven previous starts, were reduced to a more normal game by the ball-control Timberwolves and came away with their first victory of the season, 121-108. "I didn't place any added significance on this game," Denver coach Paul Westhead said. "We tried to shoot and trap as much as we could, but if a team doesn't want to shoot the ball, there is not much you can do to speed it up." Meanwhile, Portland remained the NBA's only unbeaten team (7-0) with a 141-125 victory over New York and Sacramento stayed the only winless team (0-6) by losing to San Antonio 122-103. Elsewhere, it was Orlando 102, Utah 99 in overtime; Los Angeles Lakers 108, Houston 103 in overtime; and Golden State 103, Chicago 93. The Nuggets, who averaged 137 points and shot 48.1 in their 0-7 start, wanted to run. But the Timberwolves' slow-down style turned out to be a help as Denver shot 54.5 percent to Minnesota's 41.1.

Galligan leads Nichols five
DUDLEY, Mass. — Senior Chris Galligan of Manchester, a graduate of East Catholic High, will lead a young Nichols College quintet into the 1990-91 season. Galligan was the fifth leading scorer in Division III a year ago, averaging 24.2 points a game for the Bisons who went 3-10. He also led Nichols in rebounding at 4.2 a game.

ESPN to curtail Ivy coverage
BRISTOL (AP) — After enjoying national exposure for three years on ESPN, Ivy League football is about to be shouldered aside by the Big Ten. The Ivy League's three-year contract with ESPN ended last week with the Yale-Princeton game, and ESPN plans to beef up its coverage of Big Ten football next year, leaving the future of the Ivy on TV uncertain.

Len Mathews, ESPN's senior vice president for programming, said Thursday that the network may find room for two or three Ivy League games next year, but certainly not five as it did this year. "The future is far more limited than the present," Mathews said. "Is the Ivy League totally out of the mix? No."

He said ESPN will give priority to the Big Ten in selecting teams for its early-afternoon games, and may try to televise Ivy League games on days when the Big Ten game is carried by ABC-TV.

Seles moves into semifinals
NEW YORK (AP) — Second-seeded Monica Seles finally outlasted fifth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 5-7, 7-6 (8-6), 6-4 to move into the semifinals of the Virginia Slings Championships at Madison Square Garden. On Saturday, Seles will face fourth-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez, who defeated eighth-seeded Manuela Maloeva-Fraginere 6-2, 6-4 in her quarterfinal.

The other two quarterfinals — top-seeded Steffi Graf against sixth-seeded Katerina Maloeva and third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini unseeded Conchita Martinez — will be played today. Sunday's unique best-of-5-sets final will be worth $250,000 to the winner, while the runner-up collects $120,000.

Becker, Lendl in ATP semis
FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Boris Becker and Ivan Lendl reached the semifinals of the ATP World Championships with straight-set victories. Becker, ranked No. 2 in the world, defeated Thomas Muster 7-5, 6-4. Lendl, ranked third, beat Andre Gomez 6-4, 6-1. Andre Agassi, the fourth seed, defeated Emilio Sanchez of Spain 6-0, 6-3 in the round robin event and qualified for the final four.

ATP to reduce requirements
FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The men's tennis tour will punish players who make last-minute withdrawals from tournaments, but also will reduce playing requirements for top-ranked players. ATP chief Mark Miles said the eight players who qualified for the ATP Tour Championships will have to play just 10 major events in 1991, down from 11. In addition, a "long-service" clause will allow such veterans as Ivan Lend and John McEnroe to make further cuts in their schedule commitments.

Dykes withdraws
NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Wilander differ on who punched New England Patriots wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes outside a Providence nightclub last month, but three people have testified that it was not the man who has been charged with the offense. Dykes was injured as he and teammate Irving Fryar were leaving the Club Shamir. Dykes testified last week that he believed he was struck in the eye with a crutch, though he never saw who hit him. William K. Earley, who was on parole and probation for 1981 and 1982 robbery convictions, was charged with assault. Earley, described by employees as a bouncer at the club, was on crutches at the time. But Ed Imondi, club manager, testified in Superior Court that Earley was not close enough to Fryar or Dykes to have hit either of them. Imondi said he saw a man he identified as Charles Ryan and another unidentified man punch Dykes two or three times, causing him to fall and hit his head.

USGA adopts new policy
NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Golf Association made it official, adopting a policy against discrimination of minority groups or women. The action by the U.S.G.A., the rules maker for golf in America, is expected to encourage the integration of private clubs across the nation. Similar anti-discrimination actions have been taken by the PGA Tour, which runs the weekly men's professional tournaments, and the Professional Golfers Association of America, which runs the PGA championship. The Ladies Professional Golf Association, while it has not issued a public statement, is including an anti-discrimination clause in its tournament contract for 1991.

NHL suspends King's Robitaille
MONTREAL (AP) — Luc Robitaille, the Los Angeles Kings' All-Star left wing, was suspended for four games by the NHL as the result of a match penalty incurred in a game against Edmonton on Nov. 10. Robitaille received the match penalty for attempting to injure Edmonton's Craig Simpson with his stick during a second-period brawl.

Jockey Valenzuela suspended
INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Patrick Valenzuela, who rode Sunday Silence to victories in the 1989 Kentucky Derby and Preakness, was suspended indefinitely by the board of stewards at Hollywood Park. Valenzuela, who served a 60-day suspension last year after testing positive for cocaine use, is suspended pending "complete medical and psychological evaluations to determine his fitness for license," the board said in its ruling.

Yale looking for revenge
NEW HAVEN (AP) — The Yale Elis will be looking to restore the gleam to their tarnished 1989 Ivy League championship rings when they play at Harvard on Saturday. "Every time I look at that championship ring I think of the Harvard loss," lalback Kevin Callahan said. "I'm not sure I can look at that ring with a clear conscience until we do the job this year." The Crimson beat the Elis 37-20 before nearly 60,000 at the Yale Bowl last year, costing Yale an outright Ivy League title. Instead, Yale had to share the championship with Princeton. Yale (5-4, 4-2) could capture a share of the Ivy title this year, but must beat Harvard (5-4, 3-3) and hope that Dartmouth and Cornell both lose.

Husky football after a winning season

By TOM COYNE
The Associated Press

STORRS — Rhode Island coach Bob Griffin hopes the Rams can trick their way into a winning season. The Rams (5-5 overall, 2-5 Yankee Conference) used two trick plays that went for long touchdowns to surprise New Hampshire with a 17-14 win last week. A win at Connecticut on Saturday would give the Rams their first winning season in four years. "Those trick plays were really the key against New Hampshire," Griffin said. "We're trying to figure out something to use against Connecticut. "This would be a significant win for us," Griffin said. "I think for us to really consider this a successful season we have to win this game." The Huskies (5-5, 4-3) need a victory to register their first straight winning season. "That's what our goal is, to make sure we're competitive every year," Connecticut coach Tom Jackson said. With quarterback Matt DeGennaro and tailback Kevin Wesley back this season, the Huskies were preseason favorites to win the conference and earn their first playoff berth. But both DeGennaro and Wesley were out about a month with injuries and the Huskies never really threatened in the conference race. But Jackson said aside from the injuries, the Huskies did have some success this year. "We developed in a number of areas that at the beginning of the season were question marks," he said. "In the areas where we had young people, like in the line, we knew it would take some time. But we've made great strides on the offensive line and all those people return next year." DeGennaro, who last week became the Yankee Conference career passing leader, and Wesley, who rushed for 135 yards on 12 carries last week, are healthy.

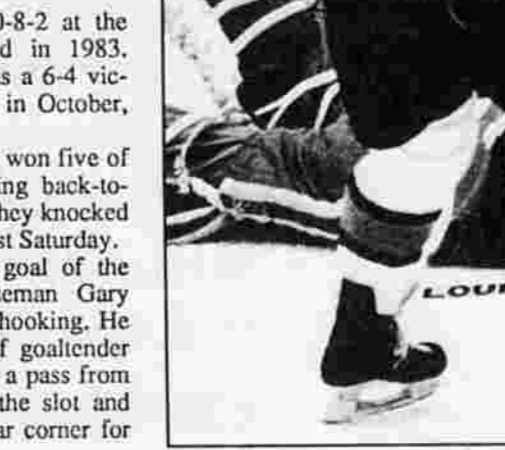

OT work is productive for the Islanders

The New York Islanders had to work overtime, but it finally paid off at the Saddledome in Calgary. They are a hard-working team," Calgary coach Doug Risebrough said after the Islanders beat the Flames 4-3 Thursday night on Brent Suter's goal with 42 seconds remaining in overtime for their first win ever at the Saddledome. "They are patient and disciplined." The Islanders had been 0-8-2 at the Saddledome since it opened in 1983. Their last win in Calgary was a 6-4 victory at the Stampede Corral in October, 1982. Overall, the Islanders have won five of their last six games, including back-to-back wins over the Flames. They knocked off the Flames 5-1 at home last Saturday. Suter scored his second goal of the game with Calgary defenseman Gary Suter in the penalty box for hooking. He was stationed to the right of goaltender Rick Wamsley when he took a pass from Patrick Platley, turned into the slot and whipped the puck into the far corner for his ninth of the season. Calgary led the game 2-2 on a quick wrist shot by Gary Roberts with eight seconds left in the second period, then took the lead on Jamie Macouit's goal 2:51 into the third period. Earl makes presence felt in big way for Iowa

By GREG SMITH
The Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Iowa's Acie Earl wasn't in the lineup at the start of the game against 19 Temple, but he made his presence felt in the winning seconds. The 6-foot-10 sophomore from Moline, Ill., took a perfect pass from freshman guard Kevin Smith and sank a layup with 6 seconds to play Thursday night to lead the Hawkeyes to a 73-71 upset victory over the Owls in a first-round game of the pre-season NIT. Iowa (1-0) faces Notre Dame, a 56-46 winner over Fordham on Thursday, in a second round game at South Bend, Ind., on Saturday. Tonight, it will be Boston College at No. 6 Duke, No. 15 Oklahoma at No. 2 Arkansas and East Tennessee State at No. 3 Arizona. Earl had been the starting center in Iowa's two exhibition victories and coach Tom Davis said all week he would be in the starting lineup against Temple. But when the game started, Earl sat on the bench while junior Brig Tubbs started at center. "Acie missed some practice time this past week to take care of some academic business he should have had taken care of earlier," Davis said. "It's not a bad idea, as it turned out, for Brig Tubbs to start and keep Earl for the last part of the game." In the game's opening minutes, Temple center Donald Hodge scored 11 of the first 16 points for his team, repeatedly turning and sinking short jumpers over Tubbs. That changed with 11:34 before halftime when Earl got into the game with Iowa trailing 16-12. He immediately sank two free throws and sparked Iowa on a 14-2 run that gave the Hawkeyes a 26-18 lead, capped by Smith's 3-point shot at the 7:45 mark. Iowa led 46-41 at the half and Earl had 11 points. Temple (0-1)
