

Higher taxes will go into effect Tuesday

By JIM LUTHER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New federal taxes will raise the price of tobacco, beverage alcohol and some luxuries beginning Tuesday while upper-bracket Americans will have to pay higher income taxes to help reduce the nation's budget deficit.

The changes, combined with the 5.1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase that took effect Dec. 1, will raise the average household's federal tax bill by about $215 a year, Congress estimates the average family making less than $50,000 will pay an extra $1 a week.

Those with incomes between $50,000 and $100,000 will pay about $278 a year more on the average. The increase for the $100,000-to-$200,000 group will average $839. The richest 600,000 couples and individuals — with incomes over $200,000 — will pay an average of $8,598 more per year.

Congress hit top-income earners to correct what many lawmakers perceived as overly generous tax cuts during the 1980s. The new law boosts the top income-tax rate on people at that income level, restricts their itemized deductions, phases out the value of their personal exemptions and subjects more of their wages to Medicare payroll taxes.

On the other hand, prior law will give all taxpayers bigger exemptions and other adjustments designed to prevent last year's inflation from raising their income taxes.

The new year also brings a major increase in the earned-income tax credit, which benefits low-income working families with children, and expanded tax incentives for energy investment.

Here are highlights of the changes:

TOBACCO: Taxes are rising by 25 percent, meaning the 16-cent tax on a pack of cigarettes goes to 20 cents. Other levies: as much as $30 per 1,000 large cigars; $1.125 per 1,000 small cigars; chewing tobacco, 12 cents a pound; snuff, 36 cents a pound; pipe tobacco, 67 1/2 cents a pound.

ALCOHOL: The liquor tax goes up $1 to $13.50 for a gallon of 100-proof (50 percent alcohol), an extra 20 cents a fifth for 100-proof; 16 cents for 80-proof. The beer tax is doubled to 32 cents a six-pack. The tax on wine is rising, depending on alcohol content. Table wine, now 17 cents a gallon, goes to $1.07; the levy on artificially carbonated wine, now $2.40, goes to $3.30 a gallon.

LUXURIES: A new 10 percent tax applies to that portion of the price above $30,000 for cars, $100,000 for boats, $250,000 for aircraft and $10,000 for furs and jewelry. Vehicles, including taxis and cruise ships, used to transport people for hire are exempt.

The tax applies only to the first retail sale of an item. However, Coopers & Lybrand accountants note, for example, that if stones from an antique bracelet worth $10,000 were reset into a new piece of jewelry worth $15,000, the tax would be levied against $5,000.

TELEPHONE SERVICE: The 3 percent tax on local and long-distance telephone service, which had been scheduled to expire Dec. 31, was made permanent.

GAS GUZZLERS: The penalty tax on fuel-thirsty cars is doubled. Any new car bought in 1991 with an EPA rating under 22 1/2 miles per gallon is subject to a tax ranging from $1,000 (for a 21 1/2-mpg model) to $7,700 (less than 19 1/2 mpg).

TAX RATES: A quirk in the 1986 law that allowed some top-income people to pay a lower rate on part of their earnings than applied to those with slightly less income has been eliminated. This results in a new top rate of 31 percent, down from 33 percent. The majority of Americans will continue to pay a flat rate of 15 percent on their taxable income.

Because of the new law and the automatic inflation adjustments, the new rate structure looks like this:

—Single people pay 15 percent of the first $20,350 of taxable income (after exemptions and deductions); 28 percent on the next $28,950 and 31 percent on everything over $49,300.

—Couples filing a joint return pay 15 percent of the first $34,000 of taxable income; 28 percent on the next $48,150 and 31 percent on everything over $82,150.

EXEMPTIONS: Increased by $100 to $2,150. Once adjusted gross income (AGI) exceeds $100,000 for a single person or $150,000 for a couple, the exemptions are reduced gradually. They are eliminated totally once income tops $222,500 (single) or $272,500 (couple).

STANDARD DEDUCTIONS: Go up from $3,250 to $3,400 for singles and from $5,450 to $5,700 for couples.

■ Iraqi officials are applauding a separate European peace initiative amid indications Saddam Hussein may compromise on a date for high-level talks with the Bush administration on avoiding armed conflict.

■ But overtones of war continued to dominate pronouncements from Baghdad. A government newspaper warned Sunday of terrorist attacks if combat breaks out, and the country's information minister boasted that Iraqis would "show the world America is a paper tiger."

Saddam Hussein said in a New Year's message that because of the threat of war a "false happiness" should pervade any holiday celebrations.

■ In Saudi Arabia, Vice President Dan Quayle pressed King Fahd for more financial support for the U.S. military buildup that has secured his country against feared Iraqi aggression.

Quayle planned to visit troops today, about two weeks before a U.N.-imposed Jan. 15 deadline Iraq to quit Kuwait or face the possibility of attack.

■ President Bush, in a Time magazine interview published today, said he has a "gut feeling" Saddam would relinquish the territory he seized Aug. 2, after failing to secure financial and territorial concessions. But Iraq's information minister, Lutfi Jassim, said Sunday that Saddam has no intention of leaving Kuwait.

Quiet night planned for New Year eve

By SCOTT B. BREDE and DIANNA M. TALBOT
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — For many, New Year's Eve is no longer a night of lavish dining and extravagant parties.

With the slumping economy and the risks associated with drunk driving, a number of Connecticut residents are opting for a quiet night at home, according to managers of several local businesses.

Instead of splurging money and slurring down drinks, many people are receiving movies at local video stores and stocking up on wine — not hard liquor — to accompany their at-home celebrations.

"Cooching, or staying at home, is very cool this year," said one video store owner.

"I don't think people want to spend that kind of money just for one evening," said Marianne Jensen, manager of Eastern Video on East Middle Turnpike, who added that New Year's Eve is one of — if not the — biggest nights of the year for video rentals.

Jensen said she is expecting at least the same, if not a larger, volume of rentals tonight as during past New Year's Eves, noting that concern over drunk drivers has kept many families at home in recent years.

Jensen predicted that new

Go easy: make resolutions you can keep

By SUSAN EATON
The Advocate

Are you among the many who have resolved to lose that paunch, quit smoking, get to the gym each day, eat right or be happier beginning Jan. 1? It isn't going to be easy.

Many people fail when they try to make good on their infamous New Year's resolutions, psychologists say, partly because people not only make the wrong promises, but because they also make them the wrong way.

Compelled to improve their lives or selves, experts say people often make promises without plans on how to keep them and set impossible goals. Everyone deserves the chance to observe themselves and start anew, they say, but inflated expectations often start off the new year with disappointment and discouragement.

Psychologists suggest several strategies to improve the chances of making a successful resolution.

Resolution makers should have a clear, thought-out idea as to why they are making a New Year's promise, said psychologist David Carlson, who works in Stamford Hospital's mental health clinic. Those connected with friends on New Year's Eve are bound to fail.

Carlson and Daitzman both suggest writing a step-by-step plan to meet a series of smaller goals which eventually lead to a bigger resolution. Above all, the resolution should be attainable and offer immediate rewards, they said.

"There has to be a reward built in," Carlson said. "A lot of times, resolutions have to do with taking away something that is pleasurable. What you have to say is, 'If I quit smoking for a day, I'll get a new shirt,' or something like that."

For example, some people resolve that 1991 will be the year that they get married or be successful, Carlson said, and then feel frustrated when they cannot meet the goal.

"These are things over which they may have no control," Carlson said. "They promise themselves they will be successful, but they have no measure of what successful is. They set impossible resolutions."

Daitzman said once people suffer a setback — such as eating cheesecake on Jan. 3 after pledging to lose weight — they are apt to give up on the resolution.

"If the resolution absolutely has to be attainable," Daitzman said, "or it will extinguish quickly."

The self-made resolution has appeal, psychologists say, because it makes people feel they have power and control over their own lives, more so than when someone else nags them to make changes. But a lot of times, Carlson said, people might just be fooling themselves.

"A lot of people are just superstitious at heart," Carlson said. "They think if they write

MANCHESTER — Twelve-year-old Adam Carpenter wants to join the Air Force and become an astronaut when he gets older. David Nielsen, 12, wants to join the Air Force, too, but would like to work with spy satellites in a strategic defense program.

Both local residents are two of 30 St. Bridget School students involved in a Young Astronaut Program offered by the Connecticut Space Center at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

The program is voluntary, open to schools across the state and provides instruction materials for students interested in math and science. St. Bridget is the only local school involved in the Young Astronaut Program, according to the space center.

Program projects include space research and making replicas of rockets and planes. Participating students choose to attend the class

Congress study contains surprises

By JOHN DIAMOND

WASHINGTON — The Democrats in Connecticut's congressional delegation vote their party agenda while Republicans in the delegation stay from the GOP line frequently, according to a year-end survey.

The study by Congressional Quarterly, a publication that follows Congress, confirms much of the public perception about the Connecticut delegation and shows some unexpected findings.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., opposed President Bush on roll call votes more often than fellow Connecticut Sen. Christopher Dodd despite Lieberman's reputation as a more moderate to conservative Democrat. On 93 roll calls on which Bush took a position, Lieberman opposed the President on 62 percent to Dodd's 58 percent.

While Dodd was one of the Democrats in the Senate most likely to vote with his party on partisan votes, Lieberman voted his party

Israeli attack kills 12...

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli planes bombed a PLO guerrilla base early today, killing 12 of the fighters manning the villa. It was the highest death toll in 21 such attacks this year.

Police and the Palestine Liberation Organization confirmed in separate statements that there were no survivors. The base belonged to Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction of the PLO.

Two F-15 fighter-bombers attacked at 12:20 a.m., dropping two 1,500-pound bombs that flattened the villa, which was located in a lemon grove 7.5 miles southeast of Sidon, a police spokesman said.

"There were no survivors. Those dug out alive died in ambulances before reaching hospital," the spokesman said. He could not be named in line with standing rules.

Police say 28 people were killed and 82 wounded in 20 previous Israeli raids into Lebanon since Jan. 19.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli military command said its planes returned safely to base after hitting "a launching pad for attacks on Israel."

Sidon is the Palestinians' main stronghold in Lebanon. Western military sources estimate about 6,000 PLO guerrillas are based in the area.

The air raid came a day after Soviet-designed Katyusha rockets landed in Israel's self-designated security zone and across the border in northern Israel. The rockets caused no damage or injuries.

A PLO military communiqué issued in Tunis and telefaxed to The Associated Press claimed the raid was part of a "massive military operation" Israel was planning in southern Lebanon.

...as bomb plot fails

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bomb ripped through a toilet at an outdoor market in the heart of Jewish Jerusalem today, killing an Arab woman who apparently was handling the explosives, police said.

They said the victim was a 24-year-old woman from the occupied West Bank.

"Apparently the person who was handling the charge was killed in this toilet stall," said police commissioner Yacov Terner. She was alone in the toilet and there were no other casualties, he said.

The explosion occurred at about 11:30 a.m. at the Mahane Yehuda market. Terner said the woman was "torn to pieces" but a witness said she was still alive immediately after the blast.

Shopkeeper Meir Cohen said he ran into the toilet and found the woman lying under a fallen door. "She was alive, the woman. I lifted her head. She moved her head as if she wanted to speak, helped," he said.

Cohen said she had something in her hand which he feared might be another bomb, so he ran to nearby police to summon help.

Shahar Asalon, a senior police officer, said a bag of vegetables was found beside the woman, and "it is reasonable to assume that she intended to plant the bomb in the bag and place it on one of the adjacent streets."

EVACUATED — Wendy Sommers and Steve Menheimer, of Indianapolis, are evacuated by Sunday. About eight homes were isolated by the flood waters from the river.

New Year brings laws on taxes, recycling, guns

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

At gasoline pumps and city dumps, new state laws take effect Jan. 1, raising taxes on motorists in California, Delaware, Florida and Massachusetts and imposing mandatory recycling in Connecticut and Wisconsin.

An ethics law is imposing a New Year's resolution on Florida officials, and laws in Louisiana and Hawaii are altering old ways of dealing with divorce and adoption.

California becomes the first state to require a waiting period and a police background check to buy rifles and shotguns.

"It will help save the lives of many innocent victims," said Gov. George Deukmejian.

Another California law allows courts to suspend the license or future driving privileges of anyone over the age of 13 convicted of graffiti vandalism.

New Hampshire and Illinois laws authorize longer sentences for "base crimes" such as those motivated by a victim's religion, race or sexual preference.

The Florida law bans state legislators and some 30,000 other public officials from soliciting or accepting employer or a political action committee.

Louisiana is cutting the waiting time for a divorce in half by no longer requiring a six-month separation before a couple files for divorce.

"Our attempts to legislate morality in the divorce process have been unsuccessful," Rep. Allen Bradley said.

Hawaii is opening adoption records to adoptees who are at least 18, unless one of their biological parents does not want to be identified. The birth parents would have to restate every five years their desire to keep the records closed.

A higher income tax, expected to generate $1.3 billion, goes into effect in New Jersey. Democratic Gov. Jim Florio says the highly unpopular plan will give homeowners property tax relief and address imbalances in rich and poor school districts.

Strapped states continue to search for revenue. Washington state is imposing a $10 a pack penalty on untaxed cigarettes, often illegally bought by non-Indians on Indian reservations. Delaware is raising its cigarette taxes 5 cents a pack.

Gasoline taxes go up 4 cents in Massachusetts and Florida, 3 cents in Delaware, but only 1 cent in California, which prefers the gradual pain of adding a penny each year through 1994. Just a month ago, the federal government got a nickel-a-gallon gas tax increase, and Congress has raised alcohol and cigarette taxes nationwide effective Jan. 1.

To find a tax going down, you'd have to go to Indiana, where drivers were registering their vehicles out of state to avoid excise taxes. That tax will be cut from $413 to $289 for the first year on a $15,000 car.

New Hampshire is allowing judges to permanently revoke driver's licenses upon conviction of drug possession with intent to sell.

Maryland is going a step further, letting all vocational licensing boards suspend people convicted of drug violations, including simple possession. Plumbers, librarians, fishing guides and many others can be forced into drug tests or treatment programs to keep their business licenses.

"The profile of a cocaine abuser is a white male under 40 with a job. People don't understand that," Lt. Gov. Melvin Steinberg said.

On the environmental front, Connecticut is telling residents and businesses to separate corrugated cardboard, newspapers, office paper, glass and metal food containers, leaves, scrap metal, storage batteries and waste oil for recycling.

Columbus panel beleaguered

WASHINGTON — A presidential commission planning the 500th anniversary celebration of Columbus' voyage to America has been plagued by problems: a tiny budget, few corporate donations and, until this month, almost no publicity.

Now add a conflict-of-interest controversy to its list of woes.

The panel's chairman, Miami real estate developer John Goude, resigned amid disclosures that a close friend has ties to a company doing business with the commission.

The event's biggest corporate sponsor, Texaco Inc., suspended its donations in September after raising questions about the commission's management. Another potential sponsor, Chrysler Corp., may stay away from the event.

And a congressional subcommittee is looking into Goude's involvement with the Christopher Columbus Licensing Group Inc., or CCLG, of Miami and New York.

"To have this project blow up in our faces now is making it difficult to deal with future sponsors," said Frederick Guardabassi, a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., businessman who has served on the commission since 1985. "So much damage has been done to the commission. It's a tragedy."

The centerpiece of the celebration is replicas of Columbus' three ships being built in Spain and originally financed with money from Texaco. The commission is $600,000 in arrears in payments for the ships, which are to follow Columbus' route and visit 50 U.S. ports.

Chrysler says it wants to clear up unspecified contractual questions before making a donation of more than $1 million.

Group's forecasts just can't miss

By ERICH SMITH
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Procrustean Club could get a bad name for this. It released its 1990 predictions a day before the year ended.

"Normally, we wait until the very last minute to make these predictions. But we want to get this year over with," said president Les Waas. The club's annual "forecasts" have been completely accurate for the past dozen years. Among the latest predictions:

"A lip-synching pop group named Milli will mourn the loss of its beloved Grammy."

"An NFL team will show more of its stuff in the locker room than on the field."

"The biography of a dog named Milli will outsell one written by a former resident of the same house."

"A TV star will grab more than attention while singing our national anthem."

"Liz Taylor will parlay one scent into many dollars."

"A Trumped-up fortune will crumble as a Donald duck."

And perhaps most outlandish of all: East and West Germany will reunite.

The club formed in 1956 and now has 8,500 members. Waas estimates a half million potential members haven't gotten around to joining.

He said the club would never make advance predictions.

"By doing it our way, in one year we make more correct predictions than all of the other major prognosticators."

"Our theory is if you wait until the last minute to do something, it still gets done, and look at all the time you save," he said.

Homeless 'family' lives together

By TONY ROGERS
The Associated Press

BOSTON — They are homeless, but in their ramshackle camp on a railroad track, three couples and a man they took in have made a home.

Every day, Reggie and Isabelle Evon, Jeanette and Donald Benson, Jimmy and Terri Kelly and Eugene Sullivan laugh, talk, eat and argue together. And in a country that seems not to care for them, they care for each other. Like a family.

"We're homeless but we're not homeless," said Reggie, the group's informal leader. "Once in awhile we have arguments, but everybody has a good time here."

They have all held jobs, had apartments and lived "normal" lives in the past. But somewhere along the line a job was lost, the rent was raised, and they found themselves on the streets.

Like the hobos of the Great Depression, their lives are ragged, dictated by the vicissitudes of wind and weather. But while they want to return to their old lives, they'll choose an independent life in the camp over a homeless shelter any day.

"I've had it with shelters," said Jeanette, who in her 44 years has lived in enough shelters to know. "You have no privacy there. They go through your personal belongings, or they throw your stuff out. Here I don't have to go to bed at nine o'clock like a little kid."

The camp in the city's Roxbury section sits at the end of an unused Conrail track, in a ravine bounded by a chain link fence and a weedy knoll. Planted squarely on the track is Reggie and Isabelle's house, a large plywood shack that Reggie built with scrap supplies. Eugene and the other couples live in more modest tents.

The year-old camp is littered with their possessions — a rusting vacuum cleaner, an ancient TV set, plastic milk crates — and 14 stray dogs and cats.

The group is bound by ties of family and marriage, and by the solidarity born of life on the streets.

Isabelle, 32, and Terri, 31, are sisters who grew up in South Boston. Both had several husbands before meeting Reggie and Jimmy.

Reggie, 37, used to be a truck driver before coming to Boston from Colorado four years ago. Jimmy, 35, came from Oklahoma City to be a house painter. But there was never enough work.

Along the way they met Jeanette and Donald, 46, both from Malden, who have worked odd jobs and been in and out of shelters together for years.

Eugene joined the group when Reggie found him sleeping under a bridge on a rainy day.

"We kidnapped Gene," Reggie joked. "He was shivering real bad, and I said, 'Come on over.' We warmed him up with coffee."

Eugene, in his 50s, came to Boston from Tennessee 15 years ago. He married, had several children and was later divorced. He has been on the streets since 1987.

On a typical day the group gathers in the morning for coffee brewed in a charred pot over a wood fire. Later, some go out "canning" — collecting recyclable aluminum cans for the deposit money.

Meager industrial growth predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. industry should log a ninth consecutive year of growth in 1991, but just barely, says the government's 32nd annual forecast of winners and losers in American business.

The Commerce Department predicted Sunday that 110 of 184 manufacturing industries it surveyed would enjoy rising sales next year, and the rest will suffer no growth or a drop in sales.

The new year holds promise for high-technology and medical companies, but a broad array of businesses tied to automobile and housing production face dim prospects, it said.

Overall, the median growth rate for manufacturing sales is expected to be a barely perceptible 0.89 percent, down from an almost-as-dismal 0.95 percent this year.

The median rate was far healthier in 1988, 2.1 percent and 1987, 3 percent. The median is the point where half the industries had bigger sales increases and half smaller.

"The outlook is generally one of continuing but slow growth for most sectors," said Commerce Undersecretary J. Michael Patten.

However, the department's forecasts are based on the assumption the economy will avoid a recession. Private economists, however, believe the economy was in recession by the fourth quarter of this year and will continue to shrink through at least the first three months of 1991.

The Commerce Department assumed growth in the gross national product next year would be toward the lower end of a 1 percent-3 per-

Greece, Israel expect wave of Albanian emigres

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Surprised Greek officials struggled to put up hundreds of newly arrived Albanian refugees in makeshift shelters today and prepared for another wave of immigrants to cross the rugged frontier.

The new exodus from Europe's last hard-line Communist nation also included at least one flight of Albanian Jews to Israel following Albania's decision to allow its small Jewish community to emigrate.

"This is going to save Albanian Jews from total extinction. Had they remained there, they would have been wiped out in a generation," said Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, a consultant to the American Jewish Committee in New York.

In the largest one-day emigration from Albanian since reforms began last summer, at least 500 Albanians arrived in northern Greece on Sunday seeking political asylum.

In addition, 37 Jews flew to Rome from the Albanian capital of Tirana en route to Israel.

So far this month, more than 1,000 people from the tiny Balkan nation of 3.3 million have fled into Greece across the once tightly sealed 100-mile frontier. Border police said reports indicated about 3,000 more Albanians were expected to try to cross the border today.

"It looks like there are whole villages crossing — it's a madhouse up here," said a police spokesman in the Greek border village of Filiates on Sunday.

"Our police station has become a refugee center," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We don't know what to do with these people."

He said it appeared the Albanian government had opened its frontier with Greece. "There can be no other explanation," he said. "A mosquito couldn't get across the border before."

Police have reported that Albanian border guards killed at least five people trying to cross the frontier in recent weeks.

Last week, the Greek government charged that Albanians were murdering many ethnic Greeks who tried to flee.

Greece claims that more than 350,000 ethnic Greeks live in southern Albania. The Albanian government says the figure is 60,000.

It is a fact that a type of slow democratization has begun," Greece's foreign minister, Andonis Karamanlis, said in an interview published Sunday in the Athens daily Kathimerini. He also asked Albanians to remain in their country.

Shooting suspect wounded, arrested

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A teen-ager arrested in connection with a fatal shooting during a showing of "The Godfather Part III" was shot and wounded when he tried to escape, police said.

Norman Williamson, 18, of Cambria Heights, was arrested late Sunday outside a Long Island roller rink. He was shot in the left hip a few minutes later when he tried to get away. Police thought he was reaching for a gun, said Lt. John Nolan of the Nassau County Homicide Squad.

Officials at Winthrop University Hospital declined to release Williamson's condition early today. Nolan said the gunshot wound was not life-threatening.

Police say Williamson took part in a shootout at the Sunrise Cinema in Valley Stream on Christmas night that left one bystander dead and three others wounded. Another teen-ager was arrested in the case Thursday.

Trenam Hall, 15, of the New York borough of Queens, was fatally wounded during the shootout, which occurred after an argument between two groups of moviegoers. One group had accused people in the other of talking during the gangster film.

Williamson and Lawrence Bartley, 17, of Laurelton, were charged with reckless endangerment and criminal possession of a weapon.

Williamson was also charged with resisting arrest and possession of a controlled substance, which police declined to describe.

Authorities said it was unlikely Bartley or Williamson would be charged with murder because detectives were unable to determine who fired the shot. Twenty-five bullets were recovered at the theater.

Congress faced with debate on war or peace

By WALTER F. MEARS
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the new Congress convening on Thursday, the questions of peace and war are waiting, with added urgency as the days dwindle toward Jan. 15 for Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Five months of intermittent debate and a dozen House and Senate hearings have produced no answers and scant guidance to define the role of the Democratic Congress in a crisis under Republican management.

At this point, it's a crisis on hold for the holidays.

According to the Democratic leaders of Congress, U.S. forces cannot be sent to fight without congressional approval. According to the Republican administration, Bush already has all the authority he needs to act.

That debate will resume when Congress does, it won't be conclusive. The answer has been elusive for two centuries under a constitutional system that makes the president the commander in chief and empowers only Congress to declare war.

There were demands during the fall that Congress be summoned back to declare war. There were calls for a resolution of approval for Bush's policy of threatening military action against Iraqi occupation of Kuwait. There were proposals to invoke the creaky machinery of the war powers system, under which a president can't send troops into danger unless Congress approves.

None of that happened, and none of it is likely to happen now.

But in one form or another, the 102nd Congress is going to have to come to clear, majority decisions on the Persian Gulf, possibly but not necessarily on direct questions of policy, certainly on the money and manpower to back up that policy.

The administration will need a supplemental appropriation of up to $20 billion early this year to finance Operation Desert Shield. Call-up authority for some support units summoned to active duty will begin expiring in March unless Congress extends it or Bush declares a national emergency.

And there may have to be action later in the year to change the timetable for cutbacks that are supposed to reduce active duty military forces by at least 80,000 before next Sept. 30.

An attempt to write a policy resolution and get it through House and Senate would be risky for both Congress and the White House. Bush has been quoted as telling members of Congress that he would welcome a resolution of support, along the lines of the United Nations resolution authorizing force after Jan. 15, but "if you're going to debate this for months and reach a conclusion and argue about it, then that may not be helpful."

Resolutions endorsing his policy were adopted by overwhelming votes in the House and Senate early in October, backing "continued action by the president ... to deter Iraqi aggression and protect American lives and vital interests." But the authors of those measures said they covered only what had been done to that point, and did not authorize the use of force.

When those measures passed, the strategy for forcing Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait was built around economic sanctions against Iraq, with the United States assigned to defend Saudi Arabia against any attack by Saddam Hussein's forces.

On Nov. 8, Bush ordered U.S. forces doubled, to create the capability and raise the possibility of military action to retake Kuwait. Democratic leaders were told of the decision shortly before Bush announced it. And support that had been almost unanimous began to fray, with Democrats urging patience, to give economic sanctions more time to work.

But Democrats can't risk becoming the party of dissent while American forces are at risk. That could weaken the U.S. position in the current confrontation, at a time when Bush says the best way to avoid war is to convince Saddam Hussein that he faces war unless he retreats. And it could do them lasting political damage.

Vice President Dan Quayle produced a preview of a Republican counterattack, saying earlier this month that "patience at any price" would amount to appeasement of Saddam Hussein.

As the debate resumes, Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, the majority leader, says whatever the differences on timing and tactics, the United States is united on the goal of getting Iraq out of Kuwait.

The question is how.

Gulf soldier sends thanks

You may not know me, but I am a Manchester native and one of the 250,000 servicemembers currently serving in Saudi Arabia.

This letter is just to let you know that every man and woman serving in the Armed Forces would like to thank you for the tremendous support that you, the American people, have given to us. Without your support the deployment to Saudi Arabia would have been difficult at best.

It is impossible for all of us to thank all of you individually, but rest assured that every letter, package, card is greatly appreciated.

While our morale has been low at times, it is only because we miss our loved ones and the U.S. I would hate to think of how low our morale would be without your support and encouragement.

Since we are all volunteers, we all understand that we have a job to do and we will do it to the best of our ability. And while we cannot wait to come home to you, you must realize that our job must come first.

Sooner or later we will be coming home, and when that day arrives perhaps we can thank you in person. But until then we would like you to know that it is you that has made the difference in our ability to withstand the heat, sand, boredom, and separation from our families.

Thank you!!!!

Weicker and the party pols

By BOB CONRAD

The Democrats and Republicans are in this together — a textbook Catch 22 — as the great adventure with an independent governor gets under way at the State Capitol on Jan. 9.

Lowell P. Weicker, a former Republican from Greenwich and Pied Piper to an electorate that wanted to break with "old" politics, takes over as governor.

Will he do so well during his four-year term that voters call for an encore in 1994 at the expense of any challenger put up by the two established parties — both of them still smarting from the beating Weicker handed their candidates this year?

"I don't want to make him look too good," says Democratic House Speaker Richard Balducci of Newington. Senate President Pro Tem John Larson of East Hartford, also a Democrat, feels that way, too. They will allow Weicker a honeymoon, at least for a while, by cooperating. Balducci will even sign Weicker's bills to get them procedurally to the floor.

Balducci and Larson, along with majority Democrats and minority Republicans who also won on Nov. 6, are aware that voters will be looking over their shoulders and expecting such a relationship with the fellow they elected as governor.

In a recent televised interview, Democratic House Majority Leader Robert Frankel of Stratford said legislators have got to put differences aside and work for the welfare of the state. That is "paraphrasing," he said.

Deputy House Minority Leader Richard Bolden of Shelton, also part of that interview, said the road may be bumpy at times but the GOP would also give priority to the public's best interests.

But when they all come down from making those heady speeches, Democrats and Republicans are politicians who want victory for their respective parties. And the governor's office is the biggest prize around. It is the "candy store," the seat of ultimate political power in state government and its most visible office.

Lowell Weicker is here now, and for the next four years. Early this year, he took a hike on his Republican Party and the GOP effectively booted him out and created his own vehicle, the Connecticut Party, for riding in as governor. What's more, his victory gave that new status as a third major political party in Connecticut and the top line in the 1994 state election.

Not since William T. Minor of Stamford ran as American Party candidate in 1854 and his lieutenant governor, Alexander H. Holley of Salisbury came along two years later as the American Party candidate, has the state had anything but Democrats or Republicans as governors.

So more than Lowell Weicker is on trial in the next few years. The status of the "old" political parties is also at stake.

President cheapens causes

By VINCENT CARROLL

George Bush is a hummingbird of political enthusiasms. He flits from one cause to another, hovering just long enough to extract whatever personal advantage he can before scooting off to the next opportunity.

In less than two years in office, this suspicious man has supported no fewer than five amendments to the Constitution. Count them: An amendment to curb abortion; one to balance the budget; another to permit a line-item veto; a fourth to ban flag-burning; now, according to his chief of staff, the president also favors a constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms.

As a longtime supporter of term limits, I suppose I should rejoice. Yes I don't. Bush has a way of cheapening causes with which he's aligned, no doubt because his commitment so often exudes transparent opportunism. Having abandoned his "no new taxes" pledge and then having fecklessly attempted to revive it, the president now finds himself virtually bereft of a domestic agenda. If he can co-opt a cause as wildly popular with voters as term limits, he'll have scored an impressive coup.

Better yet, from Bush's point of view, there's no risk in supporting limits, since there's no prospect in the next two years of a down-and-dirty battle to push an amendment through Congress. The present Congress utterly disdains term limits. Before the president launches an assault on Capitol Hill, it must first subdue a host of states — expanding its current domain of California, Colorado and Oklahoma.

Such an effort presupposes commitment to the long term, not just two years, but five or seven or 10. Yet what do you suppose George Bush will have to say about term limits once he's exploited the issue in '92 and safely secured his reelection? Probably about as much as he has to say today about flag-burning.

Thanks, Mr. President, but we term-limiters would just as soon march up the slopes without you preening at the head even half of the zest and intellectual fervor of William Bennett, Reagan's second education secretary, he'll restore Bush's credibility by the issue.

Middle class relief: "Not Getting Ahead?" a recent headline in The New York Times asked. "Better Get Used to It." The article went on to explain that for 80 percent of American families, "real incomes ... have declined over the last three years."

Bush could tap into this frustration and boost the economy at the same time. Why not fight for full restoration of IRAs and the creation of additional tax-sheltered savings for education and housing? And why not specifically involve middle-class interests when fighting against future tax hikes, and so put Democrats on the defensive?

There are plenty of domestic issues crying out for presidential leadership, but term limits isn't one of them. Leave it to Bush, however, to horn in on the one issue enjoying a surge of momentum — one on which his assistance isn't needed.

Finland suspicious of USSR

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

HELSINKI, Finland — Excitement over Soviet reforms stops at the coast of Finland, where the Finns aren't assuming that their neighbor, the Soviet Union, is down and out.

The United States and the Soviet Union have signed an ambitious conventional arms reduction agreement, but neutral Finland is buying more arms than ever. Next year, defense spending in Finland will increase by 17 percent.

The Finns, in short, are taking no chances.

It is ironic because, for decades, Finland has endured criticism that it was the lackey of its giant neighbor — the price it paid to keep from being forcibly annexed by the Soviet Union. The Finns have quietly resented, but seldom protested publicly, their manipulation by the Kremlin.

From their point of view, the Finns have maintained their independence and neutrality with little outside help. If, for example, the Soviets charged them $300 million for World War II reparations, which they paid off over the years so they would not be economically beholden to Moscow.

The Finns managed to make it through the Cold War so successfully that the end of it has thrown Finland into a furious debate over the future.

The Soviet Union has long been Finland's major trading partner. The Soviets have raw materials and the Finns have consumer goods that are far better than anything available in the Soviet Union. Now the trade relationship is in doubt.

For the last year, Finns have been engaged in a lively debate about whether or not they should join the European Community. Some Finns are nervous that their manufacturing economy has grown lazy after years of having the Soviet market handed to them on a platter. But they are not sure they could compete with the revitalized Western Europe.

More recently, another concern has emerged in Finland about the survival of the Soviet Union. Finnish officials virtually never comment in public on their foreign affairs, especially with the Soviet Union. But in an interview last September, Finland's Prime Minister Harri Holkeri expressed grave doubts about the Soviet Union. "If we leave these people (Soviets) to their own devices, to describe the consequences as chaos is perhaps putting it mildly."

There has even been some discussion about whether neutral Finland should join NATO. But the prime minister rules that out for now. He believes neutrality is the safest course if the Soviet empire breaks apart. "Even though Russia is weak," he said, "it is still sufficiently strong to be a superpower" — meaning, it still has nuclear weapons.

The Finns cannot forget, as one told us, that they have fought 60 wars with Russia — "and lost every one!"

So they're upgrading their military, including communications, command forces, army weaponry and the air force. There are plans to buy 40 more jet fighters and to increase the draft to keep troop numbers at maximum strength, just in case.

No back door
President Bush privately believes that no matter what happens, he cannot leave an escape route for Saddam Hussein to slip out and remain in power. Bush does not want Saddam left in a position to intimidate the oil sheikdoms with nuclear weapons. Bush recently announced that he would support a resolution to force Iraq to accept a nuclear device within a year. It will take him a few more years to develop fall-back nuclear weapons. His willingness to let international nuclear officials inspect his nuclear facilities is a ruse. All of Iraq's known enriched uranium was accounted for at those facilities, but intelligence sources say he has acquired much under the table from Europe and is hiding it.

Mini-editorial
The tobacco industry has announced new measures to discourage children from taking up smoking before the legal age of 18. Apparently it's OK to endanger the lives of adults, but not children. Apparently the profits of the industry won't suffer too much from the loss of its teenage customers. Apparently by being a good corporate citizen will win the industry more points than selling to the kiddie set. Apparently the industry is cultivating even victims in foreign countries that it can afford to be selfless at home.

once per week throughout the school year in place of their regular science or math class. At St. Bridget, the Young Astronaut Program is open to fifth through eighth graders, but there is course material available from kindergarten on. Each year, different topics are studied so that students can continue in the program for as long as they change grades. "It's designed to further knowledge of math and science in a fun atmosphere," said Donna Bernardi, a math and science teacher who four years ago initiated and still coordinates the program at St. Bridget. "It helps prepare students for the future and jobs that will be available in space industry and supplementary industries which feed off it. It also gives them self confidence and hands-on experience" in dealing with math and science, she added.

Students work together to figure out space-related phenomena, such as the angle and altitude of an in-flight rocket or the distance between two planets. An annual field trip usually involves visiting the New England Air Museum in East Windsor or the planetarium at Central Connecticut. Carpenter, Nielsen and fellow student Matthew Cafarella, 11, are three of Bernardi's students who have won $500 scholarships to, and attended, a week-long Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala., where they concentrated on learning about space and being an astronaut. They won the scholarships, which are awarded to one student per school each year, by answering questions about space in general and how to help people learn more about the topic.

Party

releases, such as "The Hunt for Red October" and "Dick Tracy" will be vacant from the shelves by the store's closing time tonight. Area package store managers predicted increased sales due to a boost in the number of people who will celebrate at home. "We figure that more people are staying at home because of the economy and concern over drunk drivers," said Thomas Taylor, the owner of Manchester Discount Liquors on Tolland Turnpike. "I anticipate that there will be a lot of wine sales." Taylor also cited a new federal excise tax on beer and liquor, which takes effect tomorrow, that he said will bring in a large amount of business from people stocking up on products before prices rise. George Parkhurst, owner of Fred's Package Store on Spruce Street, said he also expected an increased volume of sales. "People are having their parties at home and not drinking and driving," he said. Parkhurst added that he anticipated beer and wine to sell more than hard liquor because more people are conscious of their alcohol intakes. Beer and wine generally has less alcohol in it per ounce than does hard liquor. "Hard liquor (sales are) definitely down," he said. Managers at both Willie's Steakhouse and The Adams Mill restaurants in Manchester said this morning that reservations for tonight are down, but for different reasons. Tony Scarpace of The Adams Mill said the number of dinner reservations are down about 20 percent from last year's 400-person mark. He added that he thinks that is so because New Year's Eve falls on a Monday, instead of a weekend. "It's a Monday evening, so busi-

it down or say it out loud, then it is going to happen." If a person is not devoted to making a change or sacrifice, said Norwalk psychologist Barbara Powell, a resolution will likely be an empty promise. "It is just a matter of reaching the time in your life where you feel you have to do it," said Powell, who said the most popular resolutions any time of the year still appear to be quitting smoking and losing weight. "A lot of people make the change, simply because it is a new year and they want to start something new. But you really have to have reached a decision to make the change before you do it." Powell suggests that resolution makers keep a written record of successes in reaching their goal, so they can see progress.

Mill conversion plan filed with town PZC

MANCHESTER — The owner of the Yam Mill has filed an application with the Planning and Zoning Commission to convert several shops on the first floor of the 210 Pine St. mill into seven one-bedroom and three two-bedroom apartments. However, the two remaining retail tenants of the building say they have not been sold the proposal by officials of Brophy Abers. "I'm a little surprised," said Mariel Ortielli, co-owner of the Main Attraction hair salon. "As landlords they've been great up 'til now."

District approves engine payments

MANCHESTER — The authorization of a $243,000 payment for a new fire engine was approved by Eighth Utility District Directors without a hitch at a special meeting called Saturday afternoon. After the 10-minute meeting at Willis Hall, which went by with virtually no debate, the directors walked across the street to the fire station to look at the district's new equipment. "Everything looks great," said district Director Thomas Ferganese of a fire engine, which is a combination of an emergency medical vehicle and a pump. According to John D. LaBelle Jr., the district's legal adviser, $113,000 of the $243,000 will come out of the district's Reserve Apparatus Fund, which is set aside to pay for such purchases. The remaining $130,000 was borrowed on a note which matures in July, LaBelle said. The $130,000 will be combined with other debt into a bond issue. At an October meeting, the directors said they had originally hoped to pay for the truck in part from the sale of the district-owned former Kenney garage land on Tolland Turnpike, but added that the district had been unable to find a buyer for the lot. "The market [for the property] has just about evaporated," LaBelle said.

We'd be happier if they listened

Members of the Herald staff have a host of good wishes for the New Year for the many people with whom they associate regularly in the course of providing information to readers of the newspaper. For instance, we wish each and every member of the Manchester Board of Directors — and, for that matter, all elected town officials who determine public policy — an entire year clearly and definitively free of conflicts of interests or the appearances thereof. As a corollary, we wish for the members of the Ethics Commission an idle and boring 1991.

X-mas tree chipper

MANCHESTER — Residents wishing to discard their Christmas trees can bring them to one of six recycling spots around town where they will be fed through a chipping machine to provide mulch and trail base material. The locations are: Saulters Pond parking lot on Lyall Street; Tolland Turnpike at the gravel pit entrance; The sandpile on Kenney Street near Primer Road; The sandpile on Edgerton Street; The sandpile at Union Pond on North School Street; The Oak Grove Nature Center. The Park Division, which is carrying out the project, is requesting residents remove all nails or other metal from the trees and pile the trees adjacent to the sandpile to prevent them from blowing around. Residents are also asked not to dispose of trash or garbage at these locations.

GARAGE FIRE — Manchester town firefighters worked Sunday to put out a garage fire at the home of Roger Fisher at 88 Bigelow St. The fire was caused when gasoline fell onto a light left hand and wrist, and was treated and released at Manchester Memorial Hospital. Firefighters quickly extinguished the blaze, and the garage sustained moderate fire damage.

Teachers have no qualms about moves into education

MANCHESTER — After four months of being in front of the classroom, Leslie Belanger, a fourth-grade teacher at Robertson Elementary School, has no regrets about her career choice. "It's the best move I ever made," said Belanger, a former medical technologist at Rockville Hospital, who, after raising a family, returned to school to become a certified teacher. "My own children grew up and I missed having children around," she said, reflecting on her decision to switch jobs. Now in her first year as a full-time teacher in the Manchester school system, Belanger claims the ins and outs of her job have not flustered her excitement for teaching. "I made a job at getting a job," Belanger said, saying that she would hand deliver her resumes so that school principals would get to know her. But the hard work paid off, Belanger said, and she is fortunate enough to be teaching her destined age group. "They're terrific," she said, complimenting her students. "Everyone in class still likes to learn."

Thoughts

In certain Asian traditions, the symbol for crisis and opportunity are the same, meaning that every situation, easy or difficult, can become either a crisis or an opportunity depending upon how we respond to it. With God's help, which comes through the love of family and friends, every crisis is an opportunity for great things to happen in our lives.

CHAINSAW MASSACRE — Arun Vohra, left, with his children, Amira, center, and Arvin, points to a pine tree near his yard in Bethesda, Md., that was to be cut down by state workers because it might fall and block the road. But workers cut down the wrong tree — seven times and Vohra is left with seven stumps.

Scientists test reality's bounds

Architects will walk through unbuilt buildings, getting a feel for proportions and encouraging design problems long before construction begins. Children learning foreign languages will step into simulated versions of other lands and hold conversations with the people they encounter in their computer travels. The first major commercial applications have been in the realm of entertainment.

Last year, Mattel Toys introduced "The Mattel Toys" Power Glove, which uses a glove to translate hand movements into electronic signals that control Nintendo electronic games. But the captains of industry are beginning to show an interest.

A recent two-day conference on artificial reality in San Francisco drew representatives from IBM, AT&T, Apple Compute, Digital Equipment and other corporate giants eager to learn more about artificial reality.

His invention, called Videoplax, is tucked away in a corner of the Connecticut Museum of Natural History. Visitors can play "Light up the Town," shading in the night sky above New York with just the wave of a hand.

They create patterns of light in the city skyline by pointing the skyscraper windows they want to light up. Or they can draw on the screen just by wiggling their fingers.

It looks like the ultimate video game. But Krueger and other computer scientists experimenting with artificial reality envision thousands of practical applications.

In the world of artificial reality, a novice surgeon will one day perform a computer-simulated operation so realistic that he will feel the warmth of the body on the operating table and the weight and texture of the surgical instruments in his hands.

Krueger hopes one variation of his system, Videodesk, will some day take the place of paper and even desktop computers in the business world. In the prototype, a lighted desk surface is linked to a computer with a video camera. The computer can read hand gestures on the desk top and interpret numerous commands, eliminating the need for a keyboard.

Eventually, Krueger says, a simple typing motion on the desktop will summon a one-dimensional typewriter, on which the document and text are programmed into the computer, allowing it to respond to human movement.

Workers at the Middle Creek Garage joined in the joke, offering the car at no cost and even a free tow to the party Thursday.

The tow truck was used again, when Sauter politely declined the gift. "Maybe next year I'll ask for an airplane," he said.

Desert setting used in display

By NOEL K. WILSON
The Associated Press
FRESNO, Calif. — Bud Stanley's front yard is decorated like a desert this holiday season — the Saudi Arabian desert, to be exact.

While neighbors put Santa Claus on the roof and a nativity scene or menorah in the front yard, Stanley created a Desert Shield Christmas to honor the men and women stationed in Saudi Arabia.

Stanley's yard is in Tulare, about 50 miles south of Fresno in central California. It has holiday lights, reindeer and other traditional decorations. But they're scattered among sand dunes, palm trees, a camouflaged Jeep and military pup tents — even fatigues hanging on a line.

Stanley began working on the display in the day after Thanksgiving and put in over 150 hours before it was complete. "Once the idea of a display in honor of the troops in Saudi Arabia was decided upon, the display took off," Stanley said in a telephone interview. The chief of police told him about a sergeant who wanted to loan him pup tents and other military regalia.

"He asked me if I wanted an A-4 fighter and I said 'No way,'" Stanley recalled. "It really blew my mind."

Navy officials found a stripped-down fighter jet frequently used for parade floats. "I think it was a good thing to do," said Lemore spokesman Dennis McGrath. "We thought about Desert Shield and it being Christmas season, we decided. What the heck, it's do it."

McGrath said the jet's engine and hydraulic system were pulled, and the only real concern was security. Police officers in this San Joaquin Valley community 150 miles north of Los Angeles agreed to keep a constant watch over the jet.

By the end of the season, the display will cost Stanley between $1,000 and $1,500 in electricity bills alone. However, all the equipment and displays are on loan. Even the full team of reindeer was donated by an archery club.

Out of the roughly 1,000 people who visit the display every night, several stop to thank him. "We have had some ladies and men drop by to tell us that they have a husband or wife over there, and they thank us," he said. "But this is all to thank them."

Now karaoke systems, such as DKKaraoke Inc., include a remote control unit that lets a DJ select one of 700 songs at the press of a button; a graphic decoder to match video themes with songs; an amplifier and a compact disc loader. A home version will be on the market this spring, Fowls said.

"The average home karaoke system costs between $700 and $1,600. Commercial systems can start at about $10,000. "When people get up there, it's business people, blue-collar people, they leave their ties on their shirts and leave the office behind," said Singalongs entertainment director Dominic Kehr.

An estimated 400,000 American establishments and 7 million homes in Japan have karaoke. Makabe said. Karaoke's popularity there is attributable to businessmen's use of singing as an outlet for stress.

"The shyest person says they won't get up... Once they've tried it, you can't get the mike out of their hand. It's very infectious," Fowls said.

Classes will be held in Room CL-244 of the Lowe Building, 60 Bidwell St., from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. For information about registering, call 647-6065.

In January the classes will be held Jan. 12 and 19. Other classes are set for Feb. 2 and 9, March 9 and 16, April 13 and 20, May 11 and 18, June 8 and 15, July 13 and 20, and Aug. 10 and 17.

The fee is $160 and this includes text and hand-outs. The program includes lectures, video presentations and discussions.

Monthly Koffee Klatch set

The Friendly Circle of First Congregational Church, 1171 Main St., Coventry, is set for Jan. 9 from noon to 1:30 p.m.

Eat all you want from a variety of sandwiches, desserts, tea and coffee. The cost is $2.50. Chowder or salad is $5 cents extra. The Koffee Klatch is open to the public.

Graduation committee to meet

The Coventry High School Project Graduation Committee will meet Jan. 9 at 7 p.m. at the High School.

Anyone interested in learning more about the project and anyone interested in helping, is invited to attend.

Realtors sponsor courses

The Education Committee of the Manchester Board of Realtors Inc. is sponsoring two three-credit courses in January.

The first will be Jan. 10 and the topic will be taxes. It will be conducted at Manchester Country Club, 305 S. Main St. Registration will be at 5:30 p.m. and the program will run from 6 to 9 p.m. with dessert and coffee being served.

The second course being offered is on foreclosures. This will be Jan. 21 at the Second Congregational Church, 385 N. Main St. Pizza and soda will be served at 5:15 p.m. with the class from 6 to 9 p.m.

The cost is $25 per board member and $35 for non-members. Pre-registration is required. For more information call the board office, 646-2450.

Blood pressure screening set

The Visiting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester Inc. will conduct a blood pressure screening at the Bolton Pharmacy on Jan. 11 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Staffed by a registered nurse, the sessions offer the residents of Bolton a monthly opportunity to monitor their blood pressure, discuss prevention, treatment, or other health-related issues.

All residents of Bolton are encouraged to stop in. The sessions are offered by the VNA in association with the Bolton Board of Health. For more information call 647-1481.

Library features display

Whitton Library, 100 N. Main St., is featuring a display of miniature books of the Miniature Book Society. The exhibit is available for public viewing during library hours Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

It will be available through Jan. 19. Miniature books were among the earliest printed books and are still being produced today, bound by hand, by a small number of publishers who care about the preservation of this art.
