Gossip's truth is only the pain

DEAR ABBY: I am a sheriff's deputy. I love my job. A couple of years ago my husband got fired because of some ugly rumors that were not true. This was very hard

Around the time this happened, you had a poem in your column titled "Gossip." It fit my husband's situation to a "T." I took that poem to work and it disappeared. The sergeant who was working that day told me that the officer who had wrongly accused my husband took it! I guess that poem must have hit home. Would you please run it again?

DEAR HURT: Here's the poem. It first appeared as a full-page ad in The Wall Street Journal: NOBODY'S FRIEND

I make innocent people cry in their pillows. Even my name hisses. I am called Gossip. I make headlines and headaches. Before you repeat a story, ask yourself: Is it true? Is it harmless? Is it necessary?

If it isn't, don't repeat it. DEAR ABBY: A couple of my co-workers and I have been involved in a dispute lately that only you can settle. It seems that I read in your column about the way a bride wears her wedding ring. Question: Should the engagement ring go on first and then the band - or vice

Surgery cures painful bunions

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have bunions on both large toes. What is the procedure today for removal? DEAR READER: Bunions are actually caused by two conditions: bursitis of the joints at the bases of the first toes and an overriding of the toes on the foot-bones. This causes subluxations (loss of normal joint mechanics) with resulting destruction of cartilage, swelling of the joint, pain and inward deviation of the toes. Bunions cause a characteristic appearance of the joints: enlargement (making shoes uncomfortable) and displacement of the big toes. The affliction requires no treatment until the deformity is severe enough to interfere with normal activities, such as walking. The preferred therapy is surgery to remove excess tissue and re-align the toes. This is a bread-and-butter operation for

I suggest you make an appointment with such a specialist, who can describe the surgery in detail and help you to decide whether to have it. In my experience, bunionectomy is almost always successful, has few complications, is permanent, and makes bunion sufferers

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has been diagnosed with Lou Gehrig's disease. I understand there is a cure in Europe, but it is not available in the United States. We're willing to make the trip if we can treat the disease. DEAR READER: Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, sometimes known as Lou Gehrig's disease, after the famous baseball player who had it, is a progressive neurological disorder of unknown cause. It is marked by worsening weakness, muscle cramps and difficulty in swallowing and talking. The disease typically begins in middle-aged males and follows a relentless course; death occurs within five years, although about 20 percent of patients live five years or longer.

There is no treatment. Therapy is directed toward naintaining comfort, mobility and independence. There-and DALE VAN ATTA WASHINGTON - The border town of Brownsville, Texas, is at the front in America's so-called "war" on drugs. Some authoritative sources say it is also a sieve for cocaine and marijuana. Customs employees who have observed the Brownsville scene for years have tried in vain to alert the U.S. Cus-tion operations are flawed and possibly even corrupt. Last year a sister agency, the Drug Enforcement Administration, warned Customs that it had received information that an average of three-fourths of a ton of cocaine a day was crossing into the United States at Brownsville, in produce, equipment or cattle trucks. But Customs insists it doesn't have an employee problem in Brownsville. Interviews with Customs sources, and internal documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd, point a finger at the Brownsville Customs office of Inspec-

Busby, a former Customs inspector at the We reported last month on the case of two Corpus Christi, Texas, Customs agents who claimed they found evidence of corruption in Customs while they were investigating a major drug ring. The two claimed that once they began to press for an internal investigation, they were harassed and threatened by their su-

The memo told of Customs officials "passing loads of cocaine and marijuana in return for large monetary payoffs." Last April, in a report to Southwest Regional Customs Commissioner James C. Piatt, the same whistleblower documented some of the ties between Customs employees and drug smugglers, and said that some of the information was obtained from personal knowledge and "informants in Mexico." In a sworn affidavit to the Customs office of internal affairs in McAllen, Texas, former inspector Busby said he also had seen Brownsville employees let contraband into the United States. Another Customs agent in Texas told us that the situation is hampering the drug war. "We spend so much time covering for ourselves, we don't have time to fight any war on drugs. You can imagine how effective we are." Although the Brownsville Port has seen some management changes in the past year, Busby said "many of the same gangs continue to work down there." Another former Customs agent told us the changes were "largely cosmetic." George Flores became the chief Brownville Port inspector nearly a year ago after his predecessor was indicted, and then later acquitted, on charges of smuggling liquor and saddles across the border. Flores says the latest allegations about the Brownsville operation "sound far-fetched. We have a good group of people here and we're tired of being beat up with these accusations." That indignation goes up the ranks. Regional Customs spokeswoman Donna De La Torre told us, "Based on the information we have been given, we have not been able to substantiate these allegations." She said the information was so general, "I would be surprised if they could substantiate them." To nuke, or not to nuke An ominous question hangs over the Persian Gulf battlefield. If Saddam Hussein uses chemical weapons against allied troops, how strong should the response be? In the backrooms of the Pentagon, some generals favor striking back with tactical nuclear weapons. U.S. forces have more than 400 nuclear weapons in the war zone. Bush has not given his generals the authority to use them, but it is an option he is leaving open in case of a chemical attack. Mini-editorial The plan to bring Colombian drug lords to justice is going just as we ex-pected it would — badly. Colombian President Cesar Gaviria promised the cartel leaders that if they surrendered, they would be tried in Colombia, not the United States. They agreed, and now we know why. The first trafficker to turn himself in under the new deal was set free last week by a Colombian judge, who then resigned. There is little doubt that the padge feared for his life and that the cartel still uses terror to get its way.

Part of dental health is eating the right kinds of food and brushing your teeth after every meal or snack. Foods that are high in sugar or starch cause tooth decay. Fruits can be high in sugar but because they require a lot of chewing, they increase the saliva in your mouth which helps clean your teeth. Draw a circle around the foods that are healthier and draw an X on the ones that are not as healthy for your teeth.

Marinovich declares for NFL draft

By DAVE GOLDBERG The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Southern Cal quarterback Todd Marinovich became the latest underclassmen to declare himself eligible for the NFL draft, informing Trojans coach Larry Smith Friday that he would opt for a questionable pro future.

The declaration by the red-headed left-hander, one of the more publicized high school stars of recent years, capped a month in which he was suspended indefinitely from Southern Cal's football team and arrested on a misdemeanor charge of cocaine possession. Marinovich's declaration came on the deadline for underclassmen to declare their eligibility for the draft, which will take place April 21-22. But the NFL said it would not release the entire list until Monday. Last season, the first in which underclassmen were allowed to declare without mitigating circumstances, the deadline was two weeks before the draft. It was moved up to Feb. 1 by the league at the request of the colleges, allowing the sophomores and juniors players to attend the NFL scouting combine workouts in Indianapolis, thus avoiding the distraction of last-minute

Marinovich, groomed from birth to be an NFL quarterback by his father, former NFL linebacker Marv Marinovich, is expected to be no better than a third-or fourth-round draft choice. War experts abound

By DEBORAH HASTINGS The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Everyone has an opinion, and the networks appear to be broadcasting all of them. From Gen. Richard Secord of Iran-Contra note to the ubiquitous Jesse Jackson, television news has held forth with an endless stream of talkers who feel comfortable speculating on everything from the inner thoughts of Saddam Hussein to whether Iraq is torturing its allied

This unrelenting use of on-air speculators provides a revision of Andy Warhol's famous maxim: When it comes to TV experts, anyone can be famous for hours on The speculators fall into two categories: paid consultants and unpaid talking heads. In the former group, the networks have a total of 13 military consultants, most of them retired generals (no one will say how much they're paid. The Los Angeles Times recently said one unidentified former general was rumored to be receiving $10,000 a month for the duration of the war). The unpaid category includes an eclectic blend of former advisers, past cabinet members, journalists, politicians and the former Prime Minister of Pakistan, Benazir Ali

But the bottom line is that only one person knows the thoughts of Saddam Hussein. The only people who know whether the allied POWS have been tortured are not available for ABC's "Nightline" or other network shows.

This lack of knowledge has not stopped television from talking ad nauseum. It has, however, generated a mountain of criticism that ranges from the tongue-in-cheek to charges that the experts' pronouncements are biased and one-sided. Rick Kogan of the Chicago Tribune wrote that TV has shown enough retired military officers to staff a new cable network: "The Old Generals Channel." Jeff Cohen of the liberal, New York-based watchdog group Fairness & Accuracy in Reporting said: "TV has given us a steady parade of military analysts, but they're also giving us a steady stream of the more hawkish ones.

"Their coverage amounts more to propaganda than it does to unbiased news reporting," he said. To a network, all defended their use of military and civilian experts as a needed complement to sparse Pentagon reports.

"They are military men. They know what they're talking about," said Suzanne Allen, the senior producer on CBS' war desk. "I'm curious as to what the alternative is," she said. "Throwing a bunch of stuff on the air that may or may not be important?"

Since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, CBS has hired retired Gen. George Crist and Gen. Michael Dugan, who was fired in September for talking too much to reporters, specifically about U.S. contingency plans for war.

When Dugan saw the allied POWs on videotape, he said, "Gee, this is the way I looked when I bailed out over Vietnam," Allen said. "He explained how it is when you're going 600 mph and the canopy comes off and the oxygen mask gets ripped off your face. We went on the air and said that."

ABC and Ted Koppel went on the air with another expert, who said the videotape clearly showed the POWs had been beaten.

"Clearly it's speculation and clearly it's an educated opinion," said ABC news spokeswoman Sherrie Rollins. "When Ted Koppel is interviewing a former POW, I think that's of interest. We make it very clear that these are opinions."

CNN, with 24 hours of daily coverage to provide, has the largest number of experts. Retired Maj. Gen. Perry Smith and James Blackwell of the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a conservative TNT think tank in Washington D.C., are its paid consultants.

AIDS

By DEBORAH HASTINGS The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — AIDS has ravaged this country for a decade. A leading killer of young American men, it has snuffed out more than 100,000 lives - or roughly the same number of people who live in Berkeley, Calif.

Television programming mirrors neither these staggering statistics nor the group most devastated by this disease. Of 80-plus current TV series, not one has a gay character who appears on a weekly basis, according to the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation. GLAD and other gay groups long have complained about the dearth of programming, but more militant organizations are staking out a more and soap operas. PBS' "American Playhouse" presented "Andre's Mother," starring Richard Thomas and Sada-Thompson as a son afflicted with AIDS and his mother.

ABC now is producing "Our Sons," a TV movie starring Ann Margaret and Julie Andrews as the mothers of a gay couple, one of whom has AIDS. "I think we're going to have trouble, but to what extent, I don't know," Iger said.

Actually, network executives say they hope "Our Sons" will be more "palatable" to advertisers and the American public because Ann Margaret's character has shunned her gay son and is unable to accept his lifestyle. The presence of two popular stars also is expected to help the movie, scheduled to air late this
