Gorby gives Aziz new peace plan

By THOMAS GINSBERG
The Associated Press
MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbychev today offered an Iraqi envoy a new proposal aimed at ending the Persian Gulf War, and the Soviets indicated they expect a quick response from Saddam Hussein.
No details of the plan were provided, but Gorbychev spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko said it is "fully in line with the Soviet position that there should be an unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait."
Tass quoted Ignatenko as saying the proposal, which comes as the war threatens to explode in an allied ground offensive, offers "a concrete plan of settlement in the Persian Gulf through political means."

The Iraqi envoy, Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, received the plan after a 3 1/2-hour meeting with Gorbychev that Ignatenko described as "very constructive."
Aziz apparently left the meeting without commenting on its outcome. The Foreign Ministry said Aziz would leave for Baghdad later in the day, and Ignatenko said he would return to Moscow "very soon, as soon as possible."
Ignatenko said Gorbychev did not give President Bush or other

Navy ships strike mines in the Gulf

By RICHARD PYLE
The Associated Press
RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Two U.S. warships struck floating mines in the northern Persian Gulf early today. Both vessels reported damage, but no casualties and were not in danger of sinking, U.S. officials reported.
Initial reports said the USS Tripoli, a helicopter-carrying amphibious assault ship, and the USS Princeton, a 2-3-year-old missile cruiser, were operating under their own power after the explosions.
It was the first mine damage to U.S. vessels in Persian Gulf deployment — both the month-long and the preceding five months of enforcing the embargo on trade with Iraq imposed after its seizure of Kuwait.
U.S. officials have said they believe Iraq is dumping floating mines in the gulf. More than 80 mines have been found and destroyed in the past few months, but none had previously damaged a vessel.
The 18,500-ton Tripoli is one of four helicopter carriers in the 31-ship task force moving north in the gulf in preparation for a possible

London bomb blast kills 1

By JESSICA BALDWIN
The Associated Press
LONDON — A bomb went off at Victoria station today, 45 minutes after a caller with an Irish accent told officials there would be an explosion, police said. The blast killed one person, injured 37 and sent screaming commuters running from the terminal.
Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist unit, told reporters there had been a telephone warning from a man with an Irish accent at about 7 a.m.
The warning came less than three hours after a device similar to the Victoria bomb exploded in Paddington station, where only a dozen employees were on duty and no one was injured.
The caller said: "We are the Irish Republican Army." Please see BOMB, page 6.

Cibes gets second shot at state income tax plan

By PETER VILES
The Associated Press
HARTFORD — In a year of historic upheaval in Connecticut's political system, a central figure has been a soft-spoken and heavyset man who grew up on a farm in Kansas and looks and talks like a college professor.
Last year, William J. Cibes Jr. was a Democratic state representative from New London running a doomed campaign for governor, trying without success to rally support for a major overhaul of the state's tax system, including an income tax.
Now he is one of the most powerful figures in the independent Weicker administration, and is widely seen as the architect of Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr.'s plan to rewrite the state tax system.
Like Cibes' proposal last summer, the first participants in the Manchester Area Retarded Citizens (MARK) Inc.'s Supported Living Program, have been in the apartment together for about one year. It was Schwager's "We get along well," said Schwager. "We haven't had any fights."

WILLIAM CIBES and GOV. WEICKER
When Weicker chose Cibes in November as his secretary of the Office of Policy and Management, some in Hartford immediately concluded that Weicker would propose an income tax to solve the state's $2.4 billion budget crisis.
"Ala, here comes an income tax," was the response from Deputy House Minority Leader M. Jodi Rell, R-Brookfield.
But both Cibes and Weicker said that wasn't the case. First, they said, they would attack the spending side of the budget, seeking the deepest cuts they could find without destroying state services.
And in budget talks Weicker held with his top aides after taking office, he made it clear — as recently as this month — that he wanted to look at every possible way of raising money.

Five die today in morning fire

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Five swept through a 2 1/2-story boarding house in a low-income neighborhood early today, killing five people and injuring another, a fire official said.
Assistant Fire Chief John Rees confirmed the deaths and said the sixth person was taken to St. Anthony Medical Center for treatment of burns and smoke inhalation.
Identifies of the dead and injured were not available immediately.
The cause of the fire was not determined immediately, but Rees said it started in the first-floor living room. He said chairs were situated around a television set, indicating the residents had been watching TV earlier.

North Korea cancels talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Communist North Korea canceled high-level talks with archival South Korea today, saying Seoul was undermining dialogue by holding joint military exercises with the United States.
South Korea immediately urged North Korea to reconsider. The premiers' talks were scheduled Feb. 25-28 in the North's capital of Pyongyang and would have been the fourth round of meetings since last September.
North Korea accused Seoul officials of "turning their back on the hard-earned dialogue." The North also said the United States was bringing the dialogue "to the brink of rupture" with the annual joint military exercises.

New oil slick threatens seals

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Wildlife teams gathered Monday to help save a colony of rare New Zealand fur seals soaked by oil from a stranded Korean tanker.
Conservation and Land Management Department officials said officers and volunteers were planning to take at least 15 oil-coated seal pups from their breeding ground on Hood Island off Australia's southwest coast.

Journalists at risk

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Allied warplanes attacked the Iraqi city of Samawa while foreign journalists were visiting to inspect damage from earlier raids, Iran's official news agency said today.
The Islamic Republic News Agency said in its report from Baghdad that reporters from about 30 news organizations were in Samawa when the raid occurred Sunday night.
It said no information was immediately available about possible casualties, and did not identify any of the journalists or their affiliations.
It also was not known whether the journalists were still in Samawa, where the reporters might not have access to communications links capable of reaching the outside world.

IRAQI WORLD Iraqi protesters reportedly kill 10 leaders

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The first reported anti-Saddam demonstration in Iraq since the Persian Gulf War began occurred one week ago, with protesters killing 10 members of the country's ruling party, according to travelers from Iraq.

The travelers said the deaths took place on Feb. 10 as up to 5,000 people in the city of Diwaniyah, 110 miles south of Baghdad, protested Saddam Hussein's refusal to relinquish Kuwait.

The 10 officials of the ruling Baath Arab Socialist Party were all shot when they tried to confront the demonstrators, the travelers quoted Iraqi officials as saying. The unnamed government and Baath officials, whose accounts could not be independently confirmed, said members of the crowd mutilated at least two of the bodies.

Diwaniyah is in a predominantly Shiite Muslim region. Shiites make up about 55 percent of Iraq's 17 million people; President Saddam Hussein's ruling elite is made up of minority Sunni Muslims.

The reported protest came amid a relentless allied air offensive in which Iraqi officials claim thousands of civilians have been killed. The bombings are intended to force Saddam to withdraw his troops from Kuwait.

"There were a lot of arrests after the demonstrations, the travelers quoted Iraqi officials as saying. The unnamed government and Baath officials, whose accounts could not be independently confirmed, said members of the crowd mutilated at least two of the bodies.

The well-dressed man, identified as one-time lawyer and peace activist John Schuchardt, 51, of Ipswich, Mass., rose as the Rev. Patricia Adams, pastor of the First Congregational Church, invited parishioners to speak of any personal concerns.

"I have a concern," Schuchardt began in a calm voice. "Think of the 18 million people of Iraq, half are children under the age of 15. We must think of what it means to be bombed by more than 2,000 planes every day. The spirit of Lord is upon me."

Bush, accompanied by his wife Barbara, appeared stony-faced as Schuchardt, standing across from him in the small, white chapelboard church, looked straight at the President as he spoke for a total of 10 minutes. The Secret Service made no move to intervene, and Schuchardt never threatened the President.

As Schuchardt continued his lecture, several in the congregation said "Enough," but Schuchardt ignored them. A man then shouted, "This is not a political forum. This is a church of God. Get out of here!"

As Schuchardt continued talking to the women rose and began singing "God Bless America," he drew him out, drawing the President and Mrs. Bush and the rest of the 60-member congregation to their feet to join her in singing.

"I'm glad you spoke," Rev. Adams said as Schuchardt left the church. "Ironically, Adam's prepared sermon was on the virtues of listening 'to those with whom we disagree. It is essential to listen to those people because they, too, may be right."

Schuchardt stood up and started speaking again. Kennebunkport Police Chief John Prescott went out and said, "Will you sit down or will I show you to the door?" Schuchardt sat down.

But as the service was ending, Schuchardt again rose and shouted, "I have a word this morning. I am the voice of the voiceless, for those who cannot worship... Stop the bombing! Stop the massacre in the name of God!"

Prescott and Det. Sgt. Gary Roman took Schuchardt by the arms and dragged him out. Schuchardt, an experienced peace activist with ties to the Bergin brothers' protests that began during the Vietnam War, immediately went into the church, dragged from the church as the services were ending.

It was not the first time he had disrupted a church service, and he was arrested for speaking out at a 1977 service in Washington where based on comments by these officials, the travelers said heavy allied bombing has led a growing number of Iraqis to conclude that Iraq cannot withstand an allied assault and that Saddam must moderate his stand or face catastrophe.

The travelers said there was no evidence of any popular move to try to topple the Iraqi leader. He has survived at least seven assassination attempts and several coup attempts since taking power.

President Bush suggested Friday, when he rejected Iraq's conditioned offer to withdraw from Kuwait, that the Iraqis should overthrow Saddam. Still, one traveler noted, the mood is changing from defiance to alarm as the bombing takes its toll.

It's "not what you'd call an anti-Saddam tide — yet. But people are questioning his stand over Kuwait and believe he should negotiate now," the traveler said.

The travelers said Saddam is reported to have tightened his usual uniform to avoid attention, one traveler said.

They quoted officials as saying that Saddam, who is usually escorted by scores of hand-picked bodyguards, sometimes moves around in a heavily armored sedan that has been disguised as a taxi.

Earlier this month, the Medellin cartel chief an elderly woman six weeks in the face and killed a Toronto magazine publisher. The victims, Martin Montoya and Diana Turbay, had been taken hostage by the cartel to pressure the government into granting more concessions.

And broad rebellions by Colombia's two remaining rebel groups, the National Liberation Army and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia have left at least 350 people dead this year. Guerrillas have said they were retreating for the army's bombing and capture in December of a rebel jungle headquarters.

The violence comes despite Gaviria's offer of lenient treatment for cocaine traffickers and promises by making deals with drug smugglers and granting rebels amnesty, only to face more slayings, kidnappings and bombings.

The image being portrayed to the world is that of a state which is accommodating legislation to the demands of a rebel jungle headquarters. Gaviria's strategy of accommodation hasn't stopped the violence any more than the tough tactics of his predecessors.

Former President Virgilio Barco launched a major offensive against the traffickers when Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the leading presidential candidate, was assassinated in August 1989 by gunmen employed by drug smugglers.

power — a goal of U.S. foreign policy for a decade, dramatized by its support of the former Contra rebels — led to a dramatic lowering of Central America's profile in Washington.

Now, those analysts say, the region's profile has been all but obliterated by the Persian Gulf War.

"You can almost hear Central America falling off the map," said Daniel Wolf, a University of California, San Diego, political scientist and Council on Foreign Relations fellow in Nicaragua.

One of Freud's major works is an accounting of how he treated six patients. The work, said Sulloway, is considered a pillar of the whole concept of psychoanalysis, the so-called "talking cure" which is mentally ill or anxious.

Of the six case histories, said Sulloway, recent research has shown "one actually a patient who fled therapy in disgust, two actually were not treated by Freud and another involved no therapy."

Freud claimed to have cured two of the patients, yet when one was interviewed at length in later years the cure was found to be "a complete misrepresentation of the facts," said Sulloway.

The case histories, he said, "are rampant with censorship, distortions, highly dubious reconstructions and exaggerated clinical claims."

Freud lived from 1856 to 1939, and after his death some of his patients were interviewed. From this and other research, flaws and faults in Freud's work became known.

Much of Freud's theories, said Sulloway, are based on "outmoded assumptions from the 19th century."

Studies by a number of experts have shown that "Freud's logical inferences and conclusions about his research and empirical evidence are simply not justified," he said.

Of Freudian psychoanalysis Sulloway said: "It's not a science. It's like a religion."

Morris Eagle, a psychologist at York University near Toronto, said that the whole idea of psychoanalysis has never been subjected to the rigorous evaluation of controlled studies that are the routine scientific method in other areas of medicine and of science in general.

In accepted medical practice, a method of treatment is tested rigorously against other methods before it is generally accepted as an appropriate way to treat patients. In effect, has to prove to promote cures or relieve symptoms.

Millions of people now spend years visiting psychotherapists who try to relieve mental illness or anxiety by probing the patient's psyche through talk and discussion.

Eagle said there are growing doubts among health professionals about the value of psychoanalysis and that unless the technique is proven to be of true value, Freud's whole "talking cure" could be abandoned eventually.

President Jimmy Carter was expected to listen to those people because they, too, may be right."

Schuchardt stood up and started speaking again. Kennebunkport Police Chief John Prescott went out and said, "Will you sit down or will I show you to the door?" Schuchardt sat down.

But as the service was ending, Schuchardt again rose and shouted, "I have a word this morning. I am the voice of the voiceless, for those who cannot worship... Stop the bombing! Stop the massacre in the name of God!"

based on comments by these officials, the travelers said heavy allied bombing has led a growing number of Iraqis to conclude that Iraq cannot withstand an allied assault and that Saddam must moderate his stand or face catastrophe.

The travelers said there was no evidence of any popular move to try to topple the Iraqi leader. He has survived at least seven assassination attempts and several coup attempts since taking power.

President Bush suggested Friday, when he rejected Iraq's conditioned offer to withdraw from Kuwait, that the Iraqis should overthrow Saddam. Still, one traveler noted, the mood is changing from defiance to alarm as the bombing takes its toll.

It's "not what you'd call an anti-Saddam tide — yet. But people are questioning his stand over Kuwait and believe he should negotiate now," the traveler said.

The travelers said Saddam is reported to have tightened his usual uniform to avoid attention, one traveler said.

They quoted officials as saying that Saddam, who is usually escorted by scores of hand-picked bodyguards, sometimes moves around in a heavily armored sedan that has been disguised as a taxi.

AFL-CIO meets on health, strike issues

By KAREN BALL
The Associated Press

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. — Labor leaders tried to bridge differences on how much to reform national health care as they prepared for the opening of the AFL-CIO's annual winter meeting today.

But they were unanimous on the 14.2-million-member labor federation's other top legislative priority: outlawing the hiring of permanent strikebreakers.

The AFL-CIO's 33-member Executive Council, made up of leaders of the nation's largest unions, also was expected to recommend ways the federal government can combat the recession and return the jobs to work.

House Speaker Thomas Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell were to lead off the meeting's opening round.

Labor leaders gathered Sunday at this beachside resort to hash out differences over how far any proposed health care changes should go. Union presidents hoped to strike a compromise by Tuesday.

One side wants a government-financed universal health care plan akin to Canada's; the other is backing a more modest plan that provides coverage to indigent Americans but keeps much of the current system in place.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland put himself squarely on the side calling for less drastic changes, the option believed more likely to pass Congress.

Just a few years ago, Kirkland noted, most union leaders backed a full-scale program like Canada's $50 billion program, which guarantees universal health care.

Many now back something less than that. "A new sense of pragmatism seems to be taking hold," Kirkland told a leadership conference of the American Medical Association meeting at a hotel near by.

"This time, we intend to see real health care reform enacted into law. Our members simply cannot afford another year of impasse and delay," he said.

Other labor officials contend unions should push the full-scale plan from the start, rather than proposing a compromise to Congress.

"Pragmatism has nothing to do with it," one union official said of Kirkland's comments. "You don't start out bargaining with your last, best offer."

Kirkland's critics spoke on condition of anonymity because AFL-CIO executives want the issue settled privately.

Though health care is a major rift, labor leaders are united supporting legislation to bar employers from hiring permanent replacement workers during a strike.

In recent and painful examples for labor, companies have, in essence, fired striking union members by hiring permanent replacement workers at defunct Eastern Airlines, Greyhound Bus Lines and the Daily News of New York.

Union leaders say the legislation is needed to restore Americans' right to strike. They predict it will pass Congress, despite opposition from business.

"The question isn't if it will pass Congress, but if it will pass by a big enough margin to override President Bush's veto," said Joyce Miller, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union.

Labor leaders are also mixing in a little politics. They planned receptions for candidates mapping bids for 1992, including Attorney General Robert Abrams of New York, who plans a run for the Senate, and St. Louis Mayor Vincent Schoelkopf, who plans to run for Missouri's governor.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt was the guest of honor at two receptions. As a congressional leader and trade expert, the Missouri Democrat gets to rub shoulders with labor leaders at a time the AFL-CIO is trying to stop potential presidential candidates from testing the waters at its meeting.

Later in the week, labor leaders will have their first face-to-face encounter with newly confirmed Labor Secretary Lynn Martin, a Republican former congressman from Illinois. The AFL-CIO said the voted against workers more than two-thirds of the time in the House.

Efforts to end bloodshed bring Colombia only more

BOGOTIA, Colombia — When Cesar Gaviria became Colombia's president six months ago, he faced the daunting, some say impossible, task of controlling both a murderous drug cartel and a violent leftist insurgency.

But few could have predicted the price Gaviria would pay in his search for peace. His strategy of leniency has seemed to bring only more bloodshed.

The last two months have been among the most violent in the history of this nation of 32 million people.

On Saturday, 22 people died and 140 were injured in the explosion of a 450-pound bomb outside a building in Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city and home to the nation's notorious drug cartel of the same name.

Earlier this month, the Medellin cartel chief an elderly woman six weeks in the face and killed a Toronto magazine publisher. The victims, Martin Montoya and Diana Turbay, had been taken hostage by the cartel to pressure the government into granting more concessions.

Nicaragua forgotten by U.S.

The other day, a former Contra commander expressed a concern that the United States remains recently interested in the region. But a leading U.S. scholar suggested that a little benign neglect for Central America might not be such a bad idea.

The electoral defeat a year ago of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua was a watershed event in terms of U.S. foreign policy toward Central America.

For many analysts, the ouster of the Marxist-led Sandinistas from power — a goal of U.S. foreign policy for a decade, dramatized by its support of the former Contra rebels — led to a dramatic lowering of Central America's profile in Washington.

Now, those analysts say, the region's profile has been all but obliterated by the Persian Gulf War.

Freud's ideas outmoded, called 'not real science'

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON — Sigmund Freud, father of psychoanalysis, made exaggerated claims of cures, drew conclusions with little evidence and generally ignored basic principles of scientific research.

Those are the conclusions of experts who have re-examined the fundamental theories and work of Freud and now believe the Austrian physician may have been more sick salesman than scientist. Their studies were prepared for presentation today at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The kind of evidence we have now is extremely critical of Freud," said Frank J. Sulloway, a professor of science history at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

One of Freud's major works is an accounting of how he treated six patients. The work, said Sulloway, is considered a pillar of the whole concept of psychoanalysis, the so-called "talking cure" which is mentally ill or anxious.

Studies by a number of experts have shown that "Freud's logical inferences and conclusions about his research and empirical evidence are simply not justified," he said.

Of Freudian psychoanalysis Sulloway said: "It's not a science. It's like a religion."

Morris Eagle, a psychologist at York University near Toronto, said that the whole idea of psychoanalysis has never been subjected to the rigorous evaluation of controlled studies that are the routine scientific method in other areas of medicine and of science in general.

In accepted medical practice, a method of treatment is tested rigorously against other methods before it is generally accepted as an appropriate way to treat patients. In effect, has to prove to promote cures or relieve symptoms.

Millions of people now spend years visiting psychotherapists who try to relieve mental illness or anxiety by probing the patient's psyche through talk and discussion.

Eagle said there are growing doubts among health professionals about the value of psychoanalysis and that unless the technique is proven to be of true value, Freud's whole "talking cure" could be abandoned eventually.

Man targets Bush

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — A man shouting that the allied bombing of Iraq was "a vicious and immoral" attack disrupted church services attended by President Bush here Sunday, the first time he has been forced into such close contact with a protester of the Gulf war.

The well-dressed man, identified as one-time lawyer and peace activist John Schuchardt, 51, of Ipswich, Mass., rose as the Rev. Patricia Adams, pastor of the First Congregational Church, invited parishioners to speak of any personal concerns.

"I have a concern," Schuchardt began in a calm voice. "Think of the 18 million people of Iraq, half are children under the age of 15. We must think of what it means to be bombed by more than 2,000 planes every day. The spirit of Lord is upon me."

Bush, accompanied by his wife Barbara, appeared stony-faced as Schuchardt, standing across from him in the small, white chapelboard church, looked straight at the President as he spoke for a total of 10 minutes. The Secret Service made no move to intervene, and Schuchardt never threatened the President.

As Schuchardt continued his lecture, several in the congregation said "Enough," but Schuchardt ignored them. A man then shouted, "This is not a political forum. This is a church of God. Get out of here!"

As Schuchardt continued talking to the women rose and began singing "God Bless America," he drew him out, drawing the President and Mrs. Bush and the rest of the 60-member congregation to their feet to join her in singing.

"I'm glad you spoke," Rev. Adams said as Schuchardt left the church. "Ironically, Adam's prepared sermon was on the virtues of listening 'to those with whom we disagree. It is essential to listen to those people because they, too, may be right."

Schuchardt stood up and started speaking again. Kennebunkport Police Chief John Prescott went out and said, "Will you sit down or will I show you to the door?" Schuchardt sat down.

But as the service was ending, Schuchardt again rose and shouted, "I have a word this morning. I am the voice of the voiceless, for those who cannot worship... Stop the bombing! Stop the massacre in the name of God!"

Prescott and Det. Sgt. Gary Roman took Schuchardt by the arms and dragged him out. Schuchardt, an experienced peace activist with ties to the Bergin brothers' protests that began during the Vietnam War, immediately went into the church, dragged from the church as the services were ending.

It was not the first time he had disrupted a church service, and he was arrested for speaking out at a 1977 service in Washington where

Critics claim teen abstinence programs are too religious

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federally funded "teen chastity" programs are coming under renewed attack by those who contend many mix an unconstitutional dose of government-sponsored religion with advice about avoiding premarital sex.

The American Civil Liberties Union submits this as evidence. "A pamphlet distributed by one guidance program advises teens to 'pray together and invite God on every date.'"

A second program used federal money to buy books that ask pregnant teen-agers to consider whether giving their child up for adoption is "God's will."

The ACLU, in a case begun eight years ago, is asking a federal judge to declare anew that programs such as these are unconstitutional.

Jo Ann Gasper, director of Teen Choices in Falls Church, Va., responds: "The ACLU maintains that because we're encouraging kids to abstain from sex outside marriage that we're promoting religiosity, and that's crazy. We are teaching good values."

Scores of local groups — both secular and religious — get federal funds each year under the so-called "teen chastity" program created by the 1981 Adolescent Family Life Act. The program, which aims to convince young people to abstain from premarital sex, has a $7.8 million budget that also supports local case projects for pregnant teens and teen-age parents and the U.S. District Judge Charles R.

Richey, ruling on a suit filed by members of the clergy, taxpayers and the American Jewish Congress, struck down key provisions of the law in 1987. He said the law fostered an excessive entanglement between government and religion. The program teaches "prudence, temperance, fortitude and justice — in other words, making good decisions," Mrs. Gasper said. She said the program is not a religious organization. An Educated Choice, also offers privately funded guidance programs on substance abuse and other social problems.

Jordan's survival instincts

WASHINGTON — In the murky and frequently deadly byways of Middle Eastern politics, Jordan's King Hussein has to be credited with a major achievement — survival.

Iraq, the king, according to the popular perception here, has made a two-pronged tactical error.

First, he has sided perceptibly toward Iraq, the virtual certain loser in the military conflict. At the same time, the king has bitten the hands that feed him.

Now, as a result of his recent maneuvering, the king has become enormously popular among the Palestinians — a distinction that could propel him into playing a leading role in postwar negotiations.

Ironically, the king previously had surrendered to the PLO his interest in the West Bank, which Jordan lost in the 1967 Middle East war.

When the war is over and tempers cool, the king may be viewed by the Palestinians, the Israelis, neighboring nations and the United States as essential to settling the Arab-Israeli dispute and resolving one of the major sources of tension in the region.

But administration officials reportedly are so angry with the king that they are threatening to leave him out of any role in making postwar arrangements.

War is hell for U.S. Arabs

Saddam Hussein never conceived that his barbaric invasion of Kuwait would bring Americans together in a rare display of ethnic and religious unity.

But this time, each signatory was declaring, "Anti Yareel" (I am an Israeli). "We Are Outraged," proclaimed the headline over a full-page ad in the New York Times.

The ad was signed by representatives of 17 American ethnic groups, including Armenians, blacks, Chinese, Croatians, Cubans, Greeks, Indians, Indonesian, Italians, Japanese, Koreans, Lithuanians, Mexicans, Poles, Puerto Ricans, Turks and Ukrainians.

Good morning Riyadh

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

"THE EMERALD CITY," Saudi Arabia — At this huge military base north of Riyadh, the popular sounds on the airwaves are news and the tunes of another war.

These soldiers, many of whom learned about the Vietnam War in history books, prefer the songs of the 1960s. On any given day, either from the ubiquitous Walkman or over military radio stations, one is likely to hear Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin or The Doors.

But who in America — has spoken out against this galloping bigotry? Multi-ethnic silence on this issue indicates all Americans, just as their multi-ethnic outspokenness for Israel commands them.

Transportation budget has catch for Connecticut

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration transportation budget appears to provide more money for Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The Bush plan, unveiled last week by the President and Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner, has a catch: to get more, the states have to pay more.

The federal government would continue to pay three-quarters of the cost of repairing and expanding the 150,000-mile National Highway System and would pay 90 percent of the cost of high-priority interstate sections.

But the federal share would decrease for the 700,000 miles of important roads that would be grouped in an Urban and Rural Program. State governments would have to pay 40 percent of the cost of such projects, a 15 percent increase.

But the proposal is already drawing fire from congressional Democrats and will likely come through Congress a much-changed legislation.

The proposal "will get a very bumpy ride in Congress," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn. "I hope it turns out to be a highway to nowhere, because it's a bad bill for Connecticut and a bad bill for this country."

Lieberman said Connecticut would be the only state in the nation that would get less highway money in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 because of a proposed $40 million cut in the state's bridge repair allocation.

All the states stand to pay more because of formula changes that require states to spend more of their own money for every federal dollar they receive.

Yale student is murdered

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The slaying of a 19-year-old Yale University sophomore during an apparent robbery at the edge of campus has prompted the edges of the Ivy League community.

Princeton, a university lacrosse player, who lived off-campus, is the first student to be slain at the campus in more than 15 years.

His death has prompted university officials and student leaders to ponder the increasing danger in the community surrounding the urban campus.

Princeton's body was found by three Yale students who were on their way to the University Health Services building next door to St. Mary's Church, said Rhee. Rhee said Prince was on his way home from a party.

Extension cord cause of fire

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — A community devastated by a fatal fire that claimed 10 lives prayed and consoled each other in front of the gutted remains of the three-story tenement.

About 200 people — members of the local Puerto Rican community, clergy, government officials and relatives of the victims — turned out Sunday for the service.

Pentecost minister Carlos Santana urged the group to pray for the victims because "they are in the throne of God."

The state medical examiner's office confirmed that all the victims — three adults, three teenagers and four children — died from smoke inhalation.

Fire Chief Thomas Keough said on Sunday that the fire was started when an overloaded extension cord short-circuited, setting fire to a chair.

The extension cord was connected to an electric space heater used in the living room of a first-floor apartment, he said.

Keough said the extension cord was too tight to be used with the electric heater. The insulation around the cord melted, caused a short-circuit and a spark that set the chair ablaze, he said.

State papers split on Weicker budget

HARTFORD — Some editorial writers lavished praise on Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. for having the guts to propose a state income tax, but others accused the governor of betraying campaign promises.

The New Haven Register published a series of four editorial Sunday, criticizing the plan for not going far enough to help the state's cities, but praising Weicker for his attempt to implement at least some type of tax reform.

Some of the most stinging editorial criticism came from the Manchester Herald, which sharply denounced Weicker and his tax plan in an editorial that carried the headline, "Weicker's Plan of Lies."

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON — A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally sound diet and exercise program would help ease weight problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Researchers in Europe found that an ingredient in the aptly named product Food Source One actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter non-dietary patterns, according to a new study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition.

While the development of Food Source One, a product of Menlo Park, Calif., was not used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the study has been widely hailed for overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Fla. woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear."

In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 15 days on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One is available through physicians and pharmacists without a prescription because it is not a drug and contains only natural ingredients already known to be safe. Iraq

Both Iraq and the United States had said they expected the war to become bloodier if nothing came of today's Moscow meeting. Nevertheless, Aziz was quoted beforehand as saying he carried no new proposal to Moscow.

Accompanied by Iraqi Deputy Premier Saadoun Hammadi, Aziz met first today with his Soviet counterpart, Alexander Bessmertnykh, and Yevgeny Primakov, a presidential envoy and Middle East expert. The officials then joined Gorbachev.

On Friday, two days after Primakov met with Iraqi leaders in Baghdad, Iraq's rulers offered to withdraw from Kuwait under conditions that were deemed unacceptable by the Bush administration and its key allies.

Soviet officials said over the weekend that Gorbachev would try today to obtain clarification of Iraq's offer, which would link withdrawal from Kuwait to a U.S. pullout from the Gulf region and Israeli pullout from the occupied territories.

On Saturday, Iraq's envoy to the United Nations suggested that his country's call for Israel to leave the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip might not be a fixed demand linked to an Iraqi pullout from Kuwait.

Bomb

Bombs to go off at all mainline stations in 45 minutes," Churchill-Coleman told a news conference.

He said the warning was passed to the British Transport Police, who were already searching all the main railway terminals.

"You will ... appreciate I am sure the vagueness of the information, the manner in which it was passed, combined with the time lapse involved was quite deliberate," Churchill-Coleman said.

The bomb "was quite deliberately intended to maim and kill," he added.

Iain McGregor, assistant chief constable of the British Transport Police, told reporters his staff receives a half dozen bomb warnings every day.

Earlier today, Home Secretary Kenneth Baker said it appeared the Irish Republican Army planted the Victoria station bomb. The explosion came 11 days after the IRA fired three mortar bombs at government offices, including one at the prime minister's official residence.

IRA's official news agency, however, said in an unattributed report that the bombings might have been in retaliation for Britain's role in the Persian Gulf War.

Churchill-Coleman said the devices used in the bombings were similar and contained high explosives. He said the IRA apparently planted the bomb in a garbage can on the concourse at Victoria Station.

Police permitted a few reporters to enter Victoria station hours after the blast, and they saw trails of black leading from the concourse to the front entrances.

British Rail closed all mainline stations as a precaution, suspending service that carries half a million people into the capital every day.

The IRA, which is fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland, last attacked a civilian establishment in London on July 20, when a bomb blew a hole in the wall of the Stock Exchange. No one was injured. In December 1983, five people were killed and 91 others were injured by an IRA bomb at Harrod's department store.

One person was dead on arrival today at Westminster Hospital, where 31 other people, including a boy, were treated for injuries, said hospital spokesman Jonathan

Cibes

Cibes' job, during an estimated 100 hours of meetings in January and February, was to come up with those options. They fell into three categories: expanding the sales tax base to tax groceries, gasoline, and other non-exempt items; imposing a one-time income tax; or combining a permanent income tax with other tax cuts.

"My view was that the governor wanted a series of options rather than an advocate," Cibes said. "That's what I tried to give him."

"If anything, he went overboard to avoid being the advocate of the income tax in the group," said Stanley A. Twardy Jr., one of Weicker's two chief of staff.

"His role was very much professional," Twardy said. "In each case he would say, 'Here are the pros and here are the cons. He was very much the presenter of facts and options. The governor was very much the final arbiter.'"

Cibes maintains he never pushed for an income tax, but he acknowledged that Weicker may have

FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS — Manchester residents David Stansberry, left, and Carl Schwager say hello to a friend who lives downstairs from them. The two men are enjoying their participation in MARC Inc.'s Supported Living Program.

MARC

"Once parents let go, many are amazed at what their children can actually do," said the director.

For Stansberry and Schwager, who were friends for eight years before deciding to live together, the past year has been a memorable one. The two have made several friends in their neighborhood and shared in the decorating, housekeeping and cooking duties.

To pay the rent, food and utility bills, Schwager works in the bakery at Edward's Food Warehouse in Manchester. Stansberry is employed as a baker's assistant at Finast Supermarket in Vernon. Future plans include moving to a larger apartment, so the two can fit more guests in their living room, they said.

The two men have been good neighbors, according to Pat Riley, who lives in the apartment across the hall.

"We've formed a sort of friendship," said Riley, a local distributor for Coca Cola. However, that friendship could be ruined if Schwager and Stansberry continue to drink Mountain Dew instead of Coke, he joked.

Landlords who house Supported Living participants in town speak positively about the program.

"It's wonderful," said Carroll Johnson-Matton, manager of Fountain Village, a 314-unit apartment complex at 175 Downing Drive in Manchester. "I've had no problems. I'm happy to have them." Four of her tenants — Debbie Caldwell, Ann Masur and Rachel and Cosette Potiez — are also in the Supported Living program.

At first, the property manager says, it seemed like a gamble to accept residents who weren't accustomed to living on their own, but fears soon vanished. Johnson-Matton said she has gotten to know the participants through routine communication, such as inquiries about maintenance and noises in the apartment.

"They haven't done anything that any other tenant wouldn't do — except keep their apartments immaculate," she said.

MARC's program is designed to give participants freedoms they otherwise might not have, Goldfarb says.

"It gives them the opportunity to make choices and decisions, to take risks within reasonable parameters," he said. "They get to be [people] in their own right."

central golf on April 14, 1988, in the last year of the Iraq-Iran war. The small ship was nearly blown in half by a mine planted by Iran, but similar to those being used today by the Iraqis.

U.S. military sources said today that many of the mines currently being found in the Gulf, while based in San Diego, can carry up to a battalion of Marines — more than 2,000 men — and carries up to 25 helicopters.

Bogue pushes job creation

By BRIAN M. TROTTA
Manchester Herald

State Rep. Robert Bogue, R-Columbia, is signing on with Republicans in the state House of Representatives in support of their platform to create more jobs in the state.

Their campaign, titled "Jobs: The Bottom Line," aims to create new jobs by lowering government spending and subsequently, taxes.

"The most important issue facing the state right now is jobs," Bogue said. "The more jobs we have, the healthier our economy becomes."

Bogue said the cornerstone of the campaign will be the repeal of the 20 percent corporate income surtax. Passing that piece of legislation will give business a boost and help create new jobs by freeing up capital, he said.

"I don't think it will get through as it is proposed right now," Bogue said. "There are going to be a lot of changes before it is passed."

In addition, Bogue said that enterprise zones are needed in the state to spur the economy. Enterprise zones are special areas created by state laws that encourage business development by giving tax incentives.

Bogue said he will also be fighting Gov. Lowell Weicker's proposed income tax. "It is inappropriate to tax the economy during a downturn," Bogue said. "This would hurt the economy tremendously."

The freshman representative said he will also push for a repeal of two other taxes he says have impeded the economy, the service tax and the real estate conveyance tax.

Charity meal raises $3,500

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — An estimated $3,500 was raised for children with life-threatening illnesses at a breakfast held at the Masonic Temple Sunday, according to an official from Brotherhood-In-Action, the group that sponsored the event.

John Nelson, the secretary and treasurer for Brotherhood-In-Action, guessed that more than 400 breakfasts were served, including one that was eaten by Mayor Terry Werkhoven.

"We're still enthusiastic about this town's response to the breakfasts," he said. "We're looking forward to doing it again," Nelson said.

The group, a coalition formed in New Haven in 1984, is made up of members of the Masonic Fraternity, Knights of Columbus, B'nai B'rith, and UNICO.

Ex-cop enjoys wetlands enforcement

By EDWARD DeVOE
Manchester Herald

HEBRON — Changing from being a resident state trooper in Hebron to a wetlands agent officer for the Conservation Commission is just another phase in public service for John Soderberg Jr.

"I went from being a people cop to an environmental cop," he said.

The position was created in 1989 because the Conservation Commission did not have anyone to investigate environmental concerns of the community. With the increase in construction in the town, there was a need for an enforcement officer to monitor development.

Soderberg said that even though he did not have extensive training in the environmental sciences, he felt he was qualified, due to his training in investigations and his past service to the community.

"I thought I could contribute because I know the areas and the people," he said.

His responsibilities include reviewing all building permit applications and sub-division plans that go through the commission, which are then passed on to the other branches of the town office building.

Soderberg enforces wetlands regulations, handles complaints and questions, goes into the field to investigate possible violations, and then reports back to the commission.

"I am the ears and eyes of the commission," he said.

Some of the objectives of the Conservation Commission are to save the resources, soil retention, and to preserve the fish habitat, in addition to controlling and regulating all wetland activities.

He sees the commission branching out in the future as the needs of the community become more specialized.

One of his biggest concerns is the individual landowner who may not be aware that he or she is in violation.

"I find that when a developer comes in, they are pretty much aware of the regulations and situation and they know what to do. But the biggest problem is that the individual landowner doesn't understand the regulations or what they were created for."

"They (landowners) don't understand that it is an endless chain and what one person does effects others down the line."

In Brief . . .

Attorney Thomas P. Cella recently accepted an offer to become a partner in the Hartford and Manchester law firms of Howard, Kohn, Sprague & FitzGerald. Cella became partner in the firm effective January 1, 1991.

A 1979 graduate of the University of Connecticut and a 1983 graduate of Western New England School of Law, Cella has been employed by Howard, Kohn, Sprague & FitzGerald since 1984. Following graduation from law school, he served as a Law Clerk to the Superior Court Judges from 1983-84. He was previously employed by the Judiciary Committee and Transportation Committee staffs.

Cella specializes in civil litigation and worked as a part-time Assistant Town Attorney of Manchester from 1986-1989.

Policing the town pool hall

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

My 18-year-old son came home one afternoon last week and made an announcement.

"I'm going down to the pool hall," he said.

"The pool hall?" I repeated. "You're going to a pool hall? My son has taken to hanging around a pool hall? I can't believe you are actually going to a pool hall. A pool hall." The more I repeated the words, the more agitated I became.

"You're overreacting," he said, and turned to his father for support. "You're overreacting," my husband said. He yawned and went back to the newspaper.

I turned to the boy accompanying my son, a nice kid from a good family. I know his parents. "What would your mother say about this?" I demanded.

"She says it's OK," he stammered, backing toward the door.

I left the room. "I can't believe we're letting him go to a pool hall," I muttered. "A pool hall?"

Actually, my experience with pool halls had been limited to one brief excursion 25 years ago. My college roommate, who lived in Brooklyn (the one in New York) had taken me home with her for the weekend, and wanted to expose me to some local color. She chose a dirty old Brooklyn bar and pool hall.

One naked, swaying bulb wired precariously above a pool table was the only light in the place. The room was fogged gray with cigarette smoke and the floor was sticky with grease and drinks spilled weeks before. Swarthy men in leather and chain and Tom Toms were hanging around, eyes half-shut, swelling beer. On the whole, it was my first experience with culture.

Armed with those images, I decided to look into the matter of Manchester's own pool hall. I called my friend, a mother of two teenagers.

"What would you say if your kids told you they were going to the pool hall?" I asked, punctuating my voice dramatically.

"It wouldn't bother me at all," she said.

I decided to dismiss her comment. After all, she grew up in New Jersey. That's one of the beauties of using the non-scientific method of research: One is free to discard any facts that disturb the original mindset.

I decided to check out "pool halls" in the Yellow Pages, to determine the extent of the problem. Under "pool halls" the directory said, "see billiard parlors." Perhaps this was just a problem of semantics.

True, if my son had come home and said, "Cheerio, Mum, I'm off to the billiard parlor," I might have said, "Capital idea, old boy. Ta ta," and gone back to my tea. Euphemisms are soothing.

In a last-ditch attempt to get to the truth, I drove to Manchester's tucked-in parlor, Four Aces, tucked into the back of the Parkade, on the lower level. What a shock.

There were no swarthy men dressed in leather swilling beer. There were lights and the lights had green glass shades. The floor was clean and carpeted and the windows were dressed with venetian blinds. Death to another stigma.

I phoned the place. Sue, the young woman in charge, told me her clientele includes mostly teenagers. The Around 10 p.m. the teens go home, she said, and the older players come in. No liquor is served. It's against the law. Vending machines provide snacks. Altogether, pretty nice.

So if you want local color, you'll have to look elsewhere. I know this funky little place in Brooklyn.

Susan Plese is a Manchester resident and instructor at Manchester Community College. She writes this column on local people and issues weekly for the Herald.

Correction

A story that appeared on page 7 of the February 13 Manchester Herald incorrectly reported where a fire had started on Monday. The story should have stated the fire started under an unoccupied bed in the children's room. The Herald regrets the error.

Thoughts

With all the turmoil and unrest in the world today, we rightfully desire to have conflicts come to an end. It is normal and right to desire peace in the world. But something far greater to attain is peace with God, where we find peace with God? The Bible, God's word, gives us the answer.

"Therefore, having been justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

"These things I have spoken to you, that in Me you may have peace. In the world you will have tribulation; but he who endures to the end will save his soul." (John 16:33).

Do you have peace with God? Have you personally received the Prince of Peace, the Lord Jesus Christ, into your life? But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in His name" (John 1:12).

WHO IS HE? Man struggles with amnesia

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He calls himself Eric Green, although he doesn't know his real name or remember the blow that obliterated his past.
He wandered into a church in December and asked who he was. Since then, he has been trying to piece together the identity he lost to amnesia from a head injury.
"I'm a little depressed about this, but I seem to be doing OK," said the young man with short blond hair who appears to be in his early 20s. "Nothing's overwhelmed me yet," he said. "I don't know if I'll be the same person as before, but I want to find my people. All my waking moments I want to know who I am."

Police believe that Green, who was diagnosed as having psychogenic amnesia, was mugged. He walked into St. Mary's Cathedral on Dec. 2.
"I'm just real fuzzy on anything before that time," Green said. "He spent three weeks in the hospital, undergoing hypnosis and treatment with a memory drug. All that came up was a possible birth date of Oct. 14, 1969, and the possibility that his last name is either Lundgren or Green."

ALTOONA, Pa. — Mary David apparently didn't read her cards right. She was arrested for illegal fortune telling and claims she didn't know a thing about Pennsylvania's anti-psychic law.

"I've always wanted to learn to read my own cards, but I look at them and for me, they come out a jumbled mess," said Ms. David, one of three fortune-tellers who have been charged here.

"I never thought it was a crime until I was arrested," she said. "I said Paula Alper, a Blair County assistant prosecutor who handled the case against Ms. David.

forced. Charges usually are filed only after complaints are made.
"We've only used this law once in the last 20 years — about 15 years ago," said Police Detective Terry Stony of Independence, Mo. Eight people were arrested there late last month in a raid on a "psychic fair."

Pennsylvania police say there's been no concerted effort to track down fortune-tellers. They prefer to chalk up the spore of bad luck to psychics not good enough to foresee legal trouble.

"I don't think the police would take it upon themselves to track these down," said Paula Alper, a Blair County assistant prosecutor who handled the case against Ms. David.

member of his staff said she had visited her.

Ms. David, 45, was arrested in February 1990 after someone complained. Another Altoona woman was charged after police noticed a steady stream of traffic in and out of her apartment, and she paid $116.50 in fines, court costs and restitution last month. A third woman is accused of bilking money from two clients.

"Until the recent arrest, officials largely looked the other way, choosing not to enforce the 1972 state law prohibiting fortune-telling for money."

"Nobody who didn't know Mary David looked the other way in Altoona very long," said District Magistrate Kenneth Sherman, who heard the case against the woman. Even

Heroic repo man ripped off

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A professional car reposessor took a break from his work to rescue a woman, residents of a burning apartment, and while he was helping save lives a thief stole his briefcase from his truck.

Robert Stanton of Byrum, 56, who repossesses cars for Central Alabama Recovery and Collection Service, was in Gadsden early Tuesday with his grandson, Andrew Veres, 22, to pick up some cars.

The two saw smoke coming from an apartment building and Stanton stopped and began blowing his horn to awaken the occupants.

"I guess it was lucky that I have a loud horn and a loud voice," Stanton said.

Police officer Don Patterson said three children in an upstairs apartment ran onto a roof over the first floor in a panic. Stanton and Veres persuaded the children to jump into their arms.

"My grandson caught two of them," Stanton said. "Other family members were able to get out of the building through a downstairs entrance."

During the rescue, someone opened the door of Stanton's truck and fled with his briefcase. Patterson said it contained more than $200 in cash, credit cards, automobile titles and keys to cars, as well as the possible locations of the auto Stanton was planning to repossess.

Annulment of gender-bender marriage sought

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — An Italian businessman has asked a court to annul his 8-month-old marriage to a Thai after learning his wife had a sex change operation and was not a "genuine female."

BEELE SWALLOWED — Curious bystanders regard R Volkswagon Beetle that fell into a 16-foot-deep pothole caused by a torrential downpour that flooded several areas of Sao Paulo, Brazil, recently.

Paolo Adadso Boeris, 27, petitioned the Bangkok Civil Court on Wednesday to annul his marriage to Riem Kuejman, 26, of Phrae province in northern Thailand.

Boeris said he came to Thailand last May as a tourist and fell in love with Riem. They were married in Bangkok on June 4.

"The Italian later learned the truth that his wife was not of genuine female sex, but a man who had undergone a sex change."

Milkshakes and matrimony 23 couples wed at McDonald's

By JAMES HANNAH
The Associated Press

WEST CARROLLTON, Ohio — Twenty-three couples gathered in a McDonald's restaurant today and made it their kind of place to get married.

The couples exchanged wedding vows in a mass Valentine's Day ceremony sponsored by a radio station.

One couple got married in their car, Miamiburg Mayor Don Lucas read the vows over the drive-through's loudspeakers to Brian Brengman and Tammy Purdy, both of Union City, who listened with a car window rolled down in the 31-degree cold and blowing snow.

Lucas pronounced them husband and wife, then said: "Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Brengman. Please drive through."

The rest of the couples lined up in an alcove of the restaurant for the ceremony, some dressed in tuxedos and wedding gowns, others in a line and tie or a dress.

Surrounded by family members, reporters and restaurant machinery, Lucas led the couples in their vows. Some customers looked bewildered by what was happening, but stood in line to buy breakfast.

Lucas pronounced the couples married. The crowd applauded, and an accordion band played "Here Comes the Bride."

"It's not every day you can get married in your car," said Jamie Oshon of Dayton. "We heard about it over the radio station and said 'Hey, this is a good opportunity because we were going to get married anyway.'"

CHUCK SHEPHERD

Colorado District Judge Connie Peterson dismissed a lawsuit in December filed by Vance Hewewe over the allegedly "arrogant" and "outrageous" initiation rites of a local disabled veterans auxiliary group, the National Order of Trench Rats. According to Hewewe, he was fed "worms" while blindfolded (actually, spaghetti) and then introduced to a nude woman with a substantial amount of Limburger cheese held in front of him as 60 Trench Rats laughed at him. Hewewe said the humiliating experience caused him to "lose all interest in sex with (his wife)."

In Kisumu, Kenya, in August, Michael Odongo confessed to assault charges in the May death of his employer, Joshua Okiki. The two had gotten into a fistfight when Odongo failed to explain satisfactorily why he was asleep in Okiki's kitchen, wearing Mrs. Okiki's underwear.

Salt Lake City police reported in September that a 19-year-old man, wearing only a pair of briefs, was arrested in his home pointing a BB gun at a young neighbor boy. When the boy's mother discovered the man, he said he was angry at the kid because he was "bugging" him.

In December, Sandy, Utah, police arrested a man who had spent more than an hour in a stall in the only women's restroom in Sandy City Hall. During the morning, as word got out, a parade of women marched by the stall to see the pair of men's shoes on the floor of the stall. When a janitor tried to talk to the man, he answered in a falsetto voice. When police finally rounded him up, he said he was there because he was looking for his daughter.

Priscilla Brayboy, 32, was shot to death in Houston in November when she charged into the wrong house chasing her philandering husband. The "gray Volvo" she had followed to the neighborhood was actually parked in front of a house several doors down.

Roseville, Calif., police arrested physician Wayne Petwell and his wife when a Sacramento bank employee notified them that currency just deposited for the Petwells had a strong smell of marijuana. A search of their home revealed nearly 100 bags.

As of November, the cremated remains of retired postal worker Earl Miller, which were mailed from Fort Lauderdale in July, had not been received by his niece in Birdsboro, Pa. Said a postal worker heading the nationwide search for the urn, "If it was mailed, it's got to be somewhere."

An international telecommunications conference in Vancouver last fall, Saudi minister Alawi Darwish Kayyal (who was to be introduced as "seated in the audience") got up, walked to the podium, and began delivering the words on the speech prompter for Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. (He read, straight, a line about "our mountains and lakes and prairies and forests.") When frantic officials finally persuaded Kayyal to step down, an unsmiling Mulroney walked to the podium, improvised the beginning, and resumed where Kayyal had left off.

In December, adamant security guards at Atlanta's Hartsfield Airport forced a Taiwanese woman to place the baby's car seat on the conveyor belt to be X-rayed, unaware that her 20-day-old baby was strapped inside. Doctors later said the baby was unharmed.

Robert Hernandez, convicted in Dallas in a 1986 murder case and sentenced to 65 years in prison, appealed and won a new hearing in 1988. At the new hearing, in December, he was sentenced to 90 years (and a $10,000 fine).

In September, Dallas police officer Joe Copeland, who had slowed his vehicle because of an object in the road, was rammed from behind by a car driven by his wife. Both

Good to stop a bad marriage

DEAR ABBY: A writer signed "From the Tall Corn State" asked, "Are there any other children who want to thank their parents for splitting up?"

I am a teen-ager when my father moved out of the house. It was the biggest favor he could have done for my family. I should have done it a lot sooner. I was a teen-ager when Dad moved out. He and Mom never got along. After he and Mom divorced, believe it or not, they became good friends. They both met other people and eventually married. Their only regret was waiting so long to end a marriage that was all wrong from the beginning.

So tell "From the Tall Corn State" she is not alone — there are many children who are glad their parents had the courage to split. Sign this...

FOUR KIDS FROM THE LONE STAR STATE DEAR ABBY: I received a surprising number of letters from growing (and some not yet grown) children giving the same sentiments. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: My parents finally divorced after 22 years of "staying together for the sake of the kids." They were just kids themselves when they eloped, and when they finally grew up, they grew in different directions. I don't believe people should be condemned to a lifetime of unhappiness because of one mistake made when they were too young to know any better. By that time, they wanted a lot of good years. As I look back, I realize that their staying together while we were growing up was no favor to us. We were affected more by their unhappiness together than we were by their divorce.

I wish parents would be more honest with their children instead of trying to pretend that everything is OK, when in reality it's a mess. I can still remember my sister and I pulling the covers over our heads at night to drown out the yelling and cursing of those late-night family fights.

I'll bet you get a lot of mail on this subject.

Q. Very often we see on TV the old Frank Capra movies, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "It's a Wonderful Life," but we never see Capra's masterpiece, "Lost Horizon." Why not — G.C., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Primarily because in its original version, it is too long to fit into a TV movie niche, which is generally two hours. There is a drastically cut version assembled, but Capra objected to it, so it was withdrawn.

Q. Is Sabu of "The Jungle Book" alive and, if so, how old is he? — D.D.C., Newnata, Ariz.

A. I recently heard Lorenzo Lamas died. Is this true? — A.M., Racine, Wis.

Q. Whatever happened to Dorothy Shay, the Park Avenue Hillbilly? — W.J.M., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Q. Please let me know if Jean Stapleton is alive. I've known her for years. — G.R., Scranton, Pa.

Q. I recently saw a movie with Harold Peary, "The Great Gildersleeve." What a good clean, funny movie! Whatever happened to him? — S.S., Scotts, Mich.

Q. Betty Hutton? Is she still living? — P.L., Magazine, Ariz.

A. From the top — Sabu Dasgupta died in a bus crash when he was 39 when he died in '63; Lamas is alive, but his father, Fernando, died in '82; Shay has passed away; Stapleton is living; Peary died in '85; Hutton is alive.

PEOPLE

Playwright Neil Simon reaped the fruits of Broadway commercial success — the kind of respect he likes to bank on, he says.

"I know how the public sees me because people are always coming up to me and saying, 'Thanks for the good times,'" Simon, 63, told Sunday's New York Times Magazine.

"But all the success has demanded me in a way. Critically, the thinking seems to be that if you write too many hits, they can't be that good."

Simon, who starred in the "Thin Man" film series of the 1930s and '40s, was donated to Boston University for its 20th Century Archives.

University officials called the acquisition a "milestone."

Loy, 85, will receive an honorary Oscar at the Academy Awards March 25.

Her other screen credits include "The Great Ziegfeld," "Petition Fever," "Too Hot to Handle," "The Best Years of Our Lives" and "Cheaper by the Dozen." She also appeared in many stage plays including "Barefoot in the Park" and "The Women."

Loy's papers, presented at a reception Saturday in Palm Beach, Fla., are the archive's 1,500th acquisition.

"The queen of the Maori people of New Zealand, Te Ariarangi Dame Te Aitangaakahu — Dame Te Ata for short — has accepted an invitation to the Memphis in May International Festival."

"To tell you the truth, I don't know why she's coming," festival spokeswoman Lucy Shaw said. "I think she likes it. I think it's that simple."

The visit by Dame Te Ata, 16th in line of direct descent from the first Maori king, was crowned in 1858, comes after Shaw and other Memphis dignitaries visited New Zealand in March.

"We hit it off so well," Shaw said last week. "She was so warm and so excited about New Zealand being honored and about our apparent concern and attention to her people's culture."

The monthlong festival features art displays, concerts, parties and a barbecue concert.

The first Maori landed in New Zealand in about 950 A.D. Of Polynesian ancestry, they comprise 13 percent of the 3.4 million New Zealanders.

Extra heartbeats usually harmless

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 46-year-old woman diagnosed with premature ventricular contractions. An echocardiogram revealed mitral valve prolapse. My doctor says the condition is not life-threatening, yet after hearing of the death of a young basketball player who suffered from arrhythmia, I'm terrified this could happen to me. Now I refuse to even take a brisk walk. How dangerous is my condition?

DEAR READER: Premature ventricular contractions are extra heartbeats. They are exceedingly common and affect most people once in awhile. They are harmless and do not require treatment unless they are frequent or occur in long bursts that lead to lightheadedness, shortness of breath or other symptoms.

PVCs are not usually associated with mitral valve prolapse, a weakness of the mitral valve that causes a murmur (extra heart sound). Rather, patients with MVP are more prone to supraventricular tachycardia, prolonged episodes of rapid heart rate due to electrical impulses arising in cardiac tissue above the ventricles. This is usually treated with beta-blockers, such as Inderal.

If your physician has pronounced you in good health and has judged your PVCs to be harmless, I believe you can relax and engage in normal activity. Brisk walking and other exercise is entirely appropriate for you.

Young athletes occasionally die unexpectedly and tragically from heart irregularities. In most cases, such arrhythmias are caused by unsuspected cardiac abnormalities, especially disorders in the heart's conduction system. Death can occur during periods of strenuous physical activity. Fortunately, such devastating events are extremely rare, given the huge number of young people who engage in competitive sports.

However, given the information you provide, I believe your condition is not serious enough to warrant fear and apprehension. Because you are interested in preventing heart disease, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Eating Right For A Healthy Heart." $30 MILLION MAN — The Associated Press

Simon has had his share of Broadway hits in the past 30 years, helping him gain a net worth of $30 million. But, he says, "Even if my play is successful, I'll never win a Pulitzer."

The British public favors taxing Queen Elizabeth II and it's particularly unhappy with her "Domesday" tax. The Duchess of York, better known as Fergie, according to a new opinion poll, would be the world's fourth wealthiest person with an estimated personal fortune of $11.7 billion.

The poll also found that 48 percent of respondents thought some members of the royal family abused their positions and 74 percent surveyed pointed at the duchess, wife of the queen's second son, Prince Andrew.

Fergie has often been out of favor for her party-going, her "Budgee the Helicopter" books and her taste in clothes and home architecture. A publicized donation of blood last week apparently failed to bring the public around to her side.

Canada's Circus of the Sun like no other

By ANNE MARIE WELSH
Copley News Service

When clowns cast stars and angels fly and acrobat trapezes, the place must be Le Cirque du Soleil. Born seven years ago from the streets and street performers of Montreal, the Montreal-based Circus of the Sun with one ring and no animals is a multimillion-dollar corporation with television and recording editions, European productions and awards ranging from Emmy to Canadian Corporation of the Year.

With this year's version of the Cirque, founding president (and former fire-breather) Guy Laliberte risks the security already achieved by previous, highly acclaimed productions. There's a bigger big top seating 2,500, a larger cast with just three Cirque veterans, and a darker show than those that have toured since the Cirque was the runaway hit of the first Los Angeles Festival in 1987.

Only the genre-defying look of the production and the creative process that fuses parts into a single world have stayed the same.

With a director, a composer, a choreographer, and set and costume designers, the Cirque has the setup of a rock show, the dramatic characters of a musical, the image-driven structure of a music video, plus the death-defying, gasp-inspiring stunts of a traditional circus. Director Franco Dragone creates the frame and the visual style; a three-month process of improvisation includes the rest.

Called "Nouvelle Experience," the 1991 Cirque includes a dedication to Earth as the goddess Gaia and an invocation from the Native American hero, Chief Seattle.

If all this sounds like a magical, mystical tour, it's not. One beefy Cirque flier named Vladimir, a Soviet with Pypsy blood, spoke of the practical bottom line. "Flying is not difficult. I like it. It's better than coal mining."

Vladimir and four other of the 39 Cirque voices chatted after rehearsals and lunch at the cheery Cirque cafe. Their observations follow: Vladimir Kekhalai, 29, aerialist from the Ukraine, Soviet Union, wears a G-string and flies through the air with the greatest of ease, thanks to four men who pull ropes attached to straps attached to his rippling torso. His only gripe about his act is those men.

"I want girls to pull the strings (the ropes)," he says, beaming. "I want four girls to pull. Beautiful. Strong. When I go up every girl is amazed or afraid, but not every man. I want to put something in for the men. I may make my six minutes into eight. I want good art for everybody."

Kekhalai credits his coach, Valentin Gneouchiev, with the artistic success of his act. "I do everything slowly which is more difficult than fast. That's why it's so beautiful. Valentin has a beautiful phrase: 'You go from no possible to make possible, from difficult to make easy, from easy to make beautiful.'"

During the circus' recent season in Santa Monica, Kekhalai met Sylvester Stallone, Paula Abdul and Janet Jackson. He plans to stay in the West when they tour, nearly two years long, ends.

"I have good business here. Here you're free if you want. If you like it, you can do it."

David Lebel, 30, acrobat and frouse from Montreal, was a street artist in Montreal, mostly performing on trampoline when he ran away, at 29, and joined this circus. Now he's one of the frouses — a cross between a fool and a clown — with new acrobatic skills. "The frouses are innocent and naive with a child-like curiosity. They got their own ways, their own universe," Lebel says.

"(The show) is a work in progress. He chose a few of us through an improvisation process. It was a lot of fun, pretty funny, too. We are constantly renewing and working on these characters."

Lebel says the learning process with the circus is the opposite of what you might expect. "The theatrical side was the hardest, not the acrobatic skills. Acrobatics is 90 percent mental," he says, tapping his head.

"It's a matter of concentration and timing. You've got to get over the fright factor, but once you do, you can perform well past 60."

The Cirque has been his favorite workplace, so far. "In terms of playing and theater, it gives me all I need; in terms of acrobatics, what better place is there? With so much emphasis on costumes, lighting, music and the look of the big top, they make me look good."

Brian Dewhurst, 58, wire-walker and frouse from England is the son of a knife-drover and his target. Dewhurst has walked the wire in circuses since childhood. But the Cirque, he says, is very different.

"The concept is more theatrical here, for everyone is involved in group work and ensemble work. Their vocabulary is shared in other people's numbers. Very seldom does a director (in other circuses) say anything more than out or ad. Here Franco (Dragone) takes three months to rehearse and is spending three weeks now to refresh and change things and give us a second look."

"After 40 years of doing this work, at this time of my life it was a challenge not to fall into the feather bed. I don't think the young people here realize the opportunity they have to develop new skills and artistry."

Dewhurst, married to an opera singer, has also managed to marry circus skills with theater. He has choreographed acrobatic numbers for operas, trained performers for the London cast of "Phantom of the Opera" and raised two children who move from theater to tent with ease.

Debra Brown, 34, choreographer from Montreal, works with every act in the show except the clowns and the two Russian acts. A student of ballet and the modern dance techniques of Martha Graham and Merce Cunningham, she also works for the Canadian gymnastic Federation.

"My job is to put more fluidity between the acrobatics, to find the fluidity, so you're not looking at just stunts," she says. "When you can fly, you don't dance" — a concept for nine years, then studied dance at York University.

"The circus has been his favorite workplace, so far. In terms of playing and theater, it gives me all I need; in terms of acrobatics, what better place is there? With so much emphasis on costumes, lighting, music and the look of the big top, they make me look good."

Brian Dewhurst, 58, wire-walker and frouse from England is the son of a knife-drover and his target. Dewhurst has walked the wire in circuses since childhood. But the Cirque, he says, is very different.

"The concept is more theatrical here, for everyone is involved in group work and ensemble work. Their vocabulary is shared in other people's numbers. Very seldom does a director (in other circuses) say anything more than out or ad. Here Franco (Dragone) takes three months to rehearse and is spending three weeks now to refresh and change things and give us a second look."

Perfect shot enables OSU to slip past Indiana

By The Associated Press

Ohio State needed a perfect shot to beat Indiana and got it — after playing a near-perfect game. "That was a tremendous college basketball game. I've never been involved in a better game," Ohio State coach Randy Ayers said after his second-ranked Buckeyes beat fourth-ranked Indiana 97-95 in a double overtime thriller on Sunday.

The Buckeyes needed some late heroics from Jim Jackson and Treg Lee to win the Big Ten showdown. Indiana had a five-point lead with one minute left in regulation and a four-point lead at one time in the first overtime.

Jackson sent the game into the first overtime with a last-second shot. Lee's basket tied the first period, then he won it with a 10-foot baseline jumper with four seconds left in the second overtime.

"I went to the baseline and got the ball and shot a short jumper," Lee said. "It felt good when I shot it. I had plenty of time to square up, but I had to arch it high because Eric Anderson was there."

The textbook shot ended Indiana's six-game winning streak, stretched Ohio State's to five and gave the Buckeyes their second season sweep of the Hoosiers since Bob Knight took over at Indiana in 1972.

On Saturday, Wake Forest upset No. 5 Duke 86-77 and No. 1 UNLV remained unbeaten with an 86-74 win over No. 12 New Mexico State. Elsewhere, No. 3 Arkansas buried TCU 97-61, No. 7 Syracuse beat Boston College 106-85, No. 8 North Carolina beat Maryland 87-75, No. 9 Southern Mississippi beat Florida State 62-58 and No. 10 East Tennessee routed North Carolina-Charlotte 96-80.

Also, it was No. 11 Kansas over Kansas State 69-67, No. 22 Pittsburgh over 13 St. John's 94-83, No. 14 Utah over BYU 81-74, No. 15 UCLA over Stanford 89-86, No. 16 Kentucky over Mississippi 89-77, No. 17 Nebraska over Oklahoma 105-95, Seton Hall over No. 18 Georgetown 63-50, No. 19 Virginia over Clemson 57-47, No. 21 Oklahoma State over Missouri 71-56, No. 23 Mississippi State over Georgia 70-64, and No. 25 Princeton over Yale 59-54.

Jackson helped erase a five-point Indiana lead in the final minute of regulation with a free throw and a basket. Lee's shot was the game-winning shot that set up Lee's winning basket.

Jackson finished with a career-high 30 points for Ohio State (22-1 overall, 12-1 in the Big Ten). "We didn't get the kind of help on Jim Jackson that we needed at the end of the game," Knight said.

Freshman Damon Bailey had a career-high 32 points to lead Indiana (22-3, 10-2). "We're an Ohio State's home winning streak to 13 and stopped the Hoosiers lead to Ohio State in Bloomington 93-85 on Jan. 27," Anderson said.

George Tech 62, No. 6 Arizona 56; Jon Barry scored 19 points and forced a turnover with an 86-74 play to lead Georgia Tech. The Yellow Jackets (14-0) probably had to win the game to keep alive any at-large postseason chances. They did that without a big effort from Kenny Anderson, who finished with 15 points on 6-for-21 shooting with six turnovers.

Brian Williams led Arizona (20-5). No. 20 LSU 88, Alabama 81; Shaquille O'Neal had 36 points and 11 rebounds.

NCAA Hoop
19 rebounds and blocked seven shots to lead LSU. Five of O'Neal's points were foul shots in the final two minutes as he led LSU (17-7) into a tie with Alabama for the SEC lead at 10-4. Alabama (16-7) had a six-game winning streak snapped.

Houston 82, No. 24 Texas 73; Byron Smith's 29 points helped Houston snap a 10-game winning streak by the Longhorns (17-6, 11-2). Smith made 2 of 18 shots in his two previous games, both Houston losses. But Saturday he combined with Akbar Tolbert, who had 22 for Houston (15-8, 7-5). Locky Collier led Texas with 24.

Wake Forest 86, No. 5 Duke 77; Anthony Tucker scored 31 points to drop Duke (22-5, 8-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) into a tie with North Carolina for the ACC lead. "We been telling him for two years that he couldn't score, and that's what I know," said coach Dave Odom of Wake Forest (15-8, 6-5). Christian Laettner had 29 points for Duke. No. 8 North Carolina 87, Maryland 75; Rick Fox had 19 points and North Carolina concentrated on beating the Maryland press. Fox Chilton added 14 points for the Tar Heels (19-4, 8-3 ACC). UNLV 86, New Mexico State 74; Anderson Hunt scored 27 points and Larry Johnson added 18 to lead UNLV (22-0, 13-0 Big West) to its 33rd straight victory. Reggie Jordan led the Aggies (19-3, 11-3) with 18 points.

No. 3 Arkansas 79, TCU 61; Lee Mayberry and Arlyn Bowers keyed a 14-2 second-half run that led Arkansas (25-2, 12-0 Southwestern Conference) to a 67-41 lead with 12:49 to play. Michael Strickland had 22 points for TCU (15-8, 6-6). No. 7 Syracuse 106, Boston College 85; Billy Owens had 30 points and 12 rebounds and Dave Johnson had 24 points for Syracuse (22-3, 8-3 Big East). The Orangemen led by as many as 29 points through the second half against opponent BC (11-14, 1-11).

No. 9 S. Mississippi 62, S. Carolina 58; Clarence Weatherup scored 20 points for Southern Mississippi (19-3, 10-1 Metro Conference). Jolo English led the Gamecocks (18-8, 5-6) with 13.

No. 11 Kansas 69, Kansas St. 67; Mark Randall scored 22 and Terry Brown hit the clinching free throw in the final minutes as Kansas (19-4, 8-2 Big Eight) beat Kansas State (12-11, 2-8).

No. 22 Pitt 94, No. 13 St. John's 83; Darrell Green had the first time in two seasons, scored all 20 of his points in the second half for the Panthers (18-8, 7-5 Big East). Malik Sealy scored 27 for St. John's (17-6, 8-6), which has lost four of its last six.

No. 14 Utah 81, BYU 74; Byron Wilson made six 3-pointers and scored 25 points as the Utes (24-2, 13-1 Western Athletic Conference) won their first outright league title since 1977.

No. 25 Princeton 59, Yale 54; Kit Mueller had 18 points and six assists as Princeton (18-2, 9-0 Ivy League) hit 77 percent of its shots in the second half to beat the Bulldogs (11-11, 5-5).

No. 23 Mississippi State 70, Georgia 64; Greg Carter scored 18 points and helped spark a second-half comeback as the Bulldogs (17-6, 10-4 Southeastern Conference) kept pace with the league leaders, Kentucky, ineligible for the title, and Alabama led the SEC.

No. 16 Kentucky 89, Mississippi 77; John Pelphrey, who missed his first nine shots, hit two 3-pointers and two free throws during a 13-1 run late in the game as Kentucky (19-5, 11-3) retained a share of the Southeastern Conference lead.

Seton Hall 63, No. 18 Georgetown 50; Terry Debrece scored 22 points as Seton Hall (16-7, 7-6 Big East) used some solid inside defense and impressive offensive rebounding to beat the Hoyas (15-8, 7-5). Bryan Stith scored 18 and Virginia (19-7, 6-3 ACC) pulled away to beat the Tiggers (10-13, 1-9). Dale Davis scored 19 for Clemson.

No. 21 Oklahoma St. 71, Missouri 56; Byron Houston had 17 points and 16 rebounds for Oklahoma State (18-5, 7-3 Big Eight), which stayed a game behind Kansas, Oklahoma State held the Tigers (18-9, 5-9) to two field goals during an 11-minute stretch of the second half.

'Ice' Monroe heats up and burns Huskies

STORRS — Known as the "Fire and Ice" backcourt — North Carolina State's tandem of senior guard Chris Corchiani and Rodney Monroe — one was doused while the other's shooting, for the most part, maintained a wild chill of minus 30 degrees during Saturday afternoon. The nationally televised game against the University of Connecticut at Gampel Pavilion.

But in the end, Monroe, the seventh-leading scorer in the country (28.3 points per game), was the difference in the Wolfpack's nine-pointing 60-59 victory before a sell-out crowd of 8,214.

An absolutely forgettable first half, in which N.C. State shot an abysmal 10-for-36 (28 percent) from the floor and UConn 30 percent (9-for-27), saw the 6-3 Monroe go 3-for-14 (seven points) and Husky junior guard Chris Smith 1-for-8, 5-for-19 for the game.

Corchiani, 1-for-10 shooting for the game, was 6-for-5 in the first 20 minutes against an intense Husky defense. (East) used some solid inside defense and impressive offensive rebounding to beat the Hoyas (15-8, 7-5).

Team effort gives MHS wrestling best-ever LL finish

EAST HARTFORD — "For The Team."

When Manchester High wrestling coach Barry Bernstein would gather his matmen before each match, the Indians had a new message before the start.

"For The Team."

And with that concept in mind, the Indians had their best-ever finish in the state Class LL Championships, taking fourth place in the team standings in the action Saturday at East Hartford High School.

"We did fantastic," Bernstein said.

Norwich Free Academy took the team title with 258 1/2 points followed by Danbury 219 1/2 points, Simsbury 178 and Manchester 159 1/2 points. There were 72 teams in the field.

"Last year's team was more talented weight class to weight class," Bernstein said, "but this year we had a tougher (minded) team. They had that determination to win, not get pinned. To do anything for the team. We won medals because of

Record crowd sees Huskies clinch tie

By Len Auster

STORRS — The last time the University of Connecticut and Syracuse hooked up in women's basketball, a crowd of 141 watched at Storrs' Memorial Field House.

They had to hold up Sunday afternoon's Big East contest 10 minutes to allow a record-setting "Connecticut Youth" crowd of 8,400 to pour into the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion.

The last time the teams hooked up, UConn escaped with a two-point victory.

Second meeting hardly resembled the first, either, as the 14th-ranked Huskies clinched at least a tie for their third straight consecutive title Saturday when it clinch the second-place Friars, Connecticut (21-3 overall) hosts Northeastern Wednesday at 7 p.m. in a non-conference clash.

The crowd set a UConn single-game and Big East record, surpassing the 7,000 mark set by the Huskies in 1990 in the Big East Tournament championship game between UConn and Providence.

"I think it's great for the kids," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said of the huge audience. "If we do something, and do it well, we want people to appreciate it. I'm happy for the kids because people are starting to appreciate them as athletes and how hard they work."

"When you have a crowd like that, it definitely plays in our favor," UConn coach Barbara Jacobs said. "We wanted to play well because we didn't play up there," Jacobs said. "We were competing for most of the season, but we were narrow 63-63 victory." "We were much more intense," Patyson commented.

Junior point guard Debbie Baer set the tone for Huskies with her aggressive defensive pressure on her sophomore Jason Andrews (130 pounds) and sophomore Len LaGuardia (152) advanced to Saturday's action. Andrews upset the No. 6 seed in his weight division while LaGuardia ousted the No. 7 seed by a pin.

"We had two overtime matches and both of them. And we had six matches go into this period and we won those," Bernstein said. "While the other guys were exhausted our guys came through. Our conditioning paid off. The kids work hard and it paid off."

Bernstein, who has a State Open championship in Aaron Dixon a year ago, says this should finally give Manchester some recognition. "We have to be considered as the top (in the state). Three of our four losses came to Top 10 teams."

"This is a huge boost for Manchester wrestling. We've proved that we can be competitive with anybody. You can get a champion, but when a team scores 100 points plus, that's just not one kid."

Call it a team effort.

At the Class M tournament at Berlin High, East Catholic High's Rob Rommel took sixth place in the 145-pound division.

Whalers win, but lose Burt

MONTREAL — The Whalers came out of the Forum Saturday night feeling pretty good, having beaten the Montreal Canadiens, 2-1, behind first-period goals from Rob Brown and Brad Shaw and the goal-tending of Darryl Reaugh (3 saves).

But there was a sobering feeling afterward as defenseman Adam Burt suffered a strained medial collateral ligament in his right knee in the second period while diving to try to stop Montreal's Russ Courtnall.

Burt missed two to three weeks.

"Hopefully it won't be that long," Burt said. "I want to be back as soon as possible because you don't want to go stale being out that long."

Burt has significant ice time of late and has done the job defensively for the Whalers.

"His confidence level has just been right up there," Whaler assistant coach Jay Leach said. "He's played very, very good hockey for us."

Brown got his 19th goal and Shaw his third of the season as Hartford ended its record at 27-21-7.

The 17,062 Forum fans booed the defensive struggle until Denis Savard scored on a third-period power-play for the Canadiens (32-23-7).

The loss extended the Canadiens' winless streak to three games.

Montreal outshot Hartford 32-22.

Montreal is in second place in the Adams Division with 71 points. The third-place Whalers have 60 points, two ahead of the Buffalo Sabres.

The Whalers have two games in hand on the Canadiens, and could help themselves immeasurably as the division rivalry heats up Wednesday night at the Hartford Civic Center.

Reaugh, a 26-year-old rookie from Prince George, B.C., said he and his teammates are "Plus he's the leader of our team and that is another 25."

Denver rookie Chris Jackson was more succinct in his assessment of the game.

"Larry Bird came out busting," Jackson said. "He couldn't miss."

Bird scored 17 of his 24 points in the first quarter, helping Boston take a 3-2 lead en route to its seventh consecutive victory.

"I wouldn't say this was easy," Bird said, "because you still have to prepare yourself for the battle. You just have to remember on any given day, anybody can beat anybody in this league, so you still have to be ready to play."

The Celtics increased the margin to 26-67-41 at halftime, then used their reserves for most of the second half. Boston shot 52.7 percent from the floor.

"When we shoot the ball well like we did early in the game, we were very tough to defend," said Boston's Kevin Gamble, who scored 21 points. "We play good team defense. We didn't let them have anything in the third quarter, helping Boston take a 3-2 lead en route to its seventh consecutive victory."

"I wouldn't say this was easy," Bird said, "because you still have to prepare yourself for the battle. You just have to remember on any given day, anybody can beat anybody in this league, so you still have to be ready to play."

Jim Tierney

Moore missed his first five shots in the second half, placing him at a very cool 3-for-19.

UConn had a 54-47 lead with 6:50 left, but Robby Benson in that 1977 classic, "One on One," Monroe literally took the game over at that point.

Moore scored the next nine points to catapult the Wolfpack into a 56-54 lead with 4:22 to go.

"Monroe just got hot in the second half," Husky forward Scott Burrell, who scored a team-high 19 points, said. "He started making everything. He's a great player."

UConn threw a variety of defenses at Monroe, but to no avail.

"That's Rodney," first-year N.C. State coach Les Robinson said. "He's really a great player. That's what we go to late, pre-type. It isolates Rodney."

Corchiani added, "The (Monroe) carried us."

Lymon DePriest tipped in another Smith miss to put the Huskies up, 58-56. Monroe responded in the other end and it was tied at 58 with 3:06 left.
