GAMES & HOBBIES

Parody the perils of the game makers

By JENNIFER PLANTIER
Copley News Service

If you've always secretly wondered what it feels like to run a company $500 million into debt, try out this board game that pokes fun at the very industry from which it was born. Pursuit of Insolvency, from The Avalon Hill Game Co., makes light of the ups and downs of the game makers.

Game play, for two to six players, incorporates all the hostile takeovers, mergers, buyouts, over-night successes, devastating failures and other happenings characteristic of the game industry.

Struggling companies, which could be any of a number of well-known manufacturers from Mattel to Milton Bradley, fight to knock each other out of the competition.

Adventure
Be the first player to run your company into the ground and incur $500 million in debts and victory is yours.

Now video adventures can tote games featuring their favorite action heroes just about anywhere. Star Trek, Top Gun II and Bucky O'Hare, new from Konami, offer kids irresistible fast action.

Based on the almost legendary TV series, Star Trek gives real diadems more than just a video game. This talking game keeps real Trekkies motivated with familiar phrases such as, "Beam me up, Scotty," "Warp Speed!" and "Engage!" as they wage galactic battles to protect the universe from evil.

Take off on a hunt for the dangerous MGD with Top Gun II. Pilots fight through five levels in their F-14 Tomcat, but must make a perfect landing on a Navy flattop before advancing. The electronic voice gives helpful warnings like, "Target and Range" and "Bail Out."

Bucky O'Hare, the high-spirited star of a weekly animated TV show, is one crazy rabbit. As the captain of the Righteous Indignation, he and his loyal crew are under attack by some terrible loads who have come from a distant dimension. This Chinese Checkers or Dominoes if you're in the mood for a familiar challenge. Or try out Conquest, Tidily Winks, Acy Deacy, Backgammon, or Snakes and Ladders. The list seems endless.

The plastic playing pieces, card decks, and game boards are on the small side, but if variety tickles your fancy Pick-a-Game is hard to beat.

This extensive collection promises to have something for everyone. Play in pairs or invite a whole crowd over to play tournament style.

Choose from Chess, Checkers, Chinese Checkers or Dominoes if you're in the mood for a familiar challenge. Or try out Conquest, Tidily Winks, Acy Deacy, Backgammon, or Snakes and Ladders. The list seems endless.

The plastic playing pieces, card decks, and game boards are on the small side, but if variety tickles your fancy Pick-a-Game is hard to beat.

GAMES Book / Game Reviews

Gobs of games

Why settle for just one new game when you can get 30 of your all-time favorites in one set? Pick-a-Game, from Buki Toys, offers more fun than any family could possibly stand in one sitting.

Players become the werewolf, a superhero who must find and destroy Dr. Furry, an evil mad scientist who wants to destroy the world. As his physical state changes so does his fighting ability—from man, to wolf or superwolf. The werewolf's powerful weapons include claws, spurs and flaps.

The wolf must first trudge through six levels of sewers, underground forts and dark forests, while fighting an army of mutant slaves protecting Dr. Furry, before he reaches the mad scientist himself.

A 20-page full-color comic book tells the story of the Indian chief who acquired great powers and transformed into the feared werewolf, preparing players for the task ahead of them.

Lots of action, eye-opening graphics and a catchy sound track make Werewolf a hot video find.

Kiddie computer
Start little prodigies early with a talking computer designed just for them. The Little Talking Scholar, from VTech, teaches simple numbers, letters, colors, mazes and matching.

In this age, kids who can take on a computer are a step ahead. This model has the capacity to expand along with your children's abilities. The original set comes with learning cards for over 300 activities, and expansion packs with additional cards are available for 3- to 6-year-olds.

The viewing screen folds down, and the sturdy console has a handle that makes it easy for youngsters to transport without breaking. Big, colorful buttons and a friendly voice invite kids to play along.

town employees should base an example of their grievance. "I'm sorry to hear that they're doing this," Wetherby said. "They have always presented themselves well."

Gulf

Fort Riley, Kan., and bases in Germany. "It's hard to say in words how proud I am of you." Allied forces had taught the world's "pretty dictators" a lesson, Schwarzkopf said. "They just can't get away with bullying their neighbors and taking what they want because they think they're so tough."

With uprisings reported in the north, south and Baghdad, Saddam extended the deadline for amnesty offered to army deserters. A decree signed by Saddam and read on Baghdad Radio said the deadline was changed to March 15 because of transportation problems.

An undetermined number of Iraqi soldiers abandoned their positions. In addition, more than 60,000 were captured. Allied officials said the repatriation of the prisoners of war would begin Monday.

Addressing worshippers at Tehran University for Friday prayers, Rafsanjani said Iraq would cooperate with Iraq only if Saddam and his Arab Baath Socialist Party surrendered "to the will of the people."

Saddam is making a mistake while suppressing the people. This is the last mistake," Rafsanjani said in his sermon, broadcast by Tehran Radio.

Rafsanjani said Saddam and his party "should surrender to the will of the people... If the Baathists will not listen to the voice of the people, it will be their last mistake."

He cautioned the various Iraqi factions opposed to Saddam to "act very carefully" and "not set aside differences so that together you can overcome your difficulties and rebuild your country."

It was the first time an Iranian leader openly backed the revolt, which began after Iraq's rout in the Persian Gulf War.

Iraq was neutral during the allied war against its neighbor and former enemy in the 1980-88 Gulf War. During the U.S.-led air war, it provided sanctuary to scores of Iraqi warplanes.

Among the rebels are Iraq's Shiites, who make up 55 percent of Iraq's 17 million population. They have deep ties with Iran's predominantly Shiite population of 55 million. Saddam and his top aides are Sunni Muslims.

Rafsanjani denied that Tehran had a hand in the rebellion, but in Syria, Iranian Vice President Hassan Habibi met with Iraqi opposition leaders.

The 40 journalists and two American soldiers captured by Iraqi troops were handed over Friday to the Red Cross and will depart Baghdad on Saturday, said Gabriel Montemolin, a spokesman in Geneva.

Among those freed was Cable News Network reporter Greg Lamotte, who said he was kept in a small room with three other journalists and was well treated.

Of course, the thing that always ran through our minds was, "Would we ever get to go home again?" Lamotte said.

Earlier, CBS technician Timothy Dickey and cameraman Chris Everson surfaced near the Iraq-Kuwait border. They said Iraqi gunmen stole their four-wheel drive vehicle and equipment in the weeks and U.S. Army units found the journalists in the desert.

An unidentified Iraqi government spokesman on Baghdad Radio identified the captives as Lt. Lt. Gavin Rice and Pvt. Allen Jeffrey Allen of the VII Army Corps. The spokesman said they were captured in Basra, the southern Iraqi city where the rebellion against Saddam began.

Basra also was the headquarters of Saddam's Republican Guards and was far from the Iraqi territory occupied by the allies.

Pentagon spokesman Army Col. Miguel E. Monteverde said he was aware of the Baghdad Radio broadcast but "they don't match any names that we've got... Right now we don't know who they are."

At a Kuwait-Iraq border crossing, returning Kuwaitis said Iraqi soldiers captured most of them from their homes Feb. 21-23. They told Associated Press correspondent John Pomfret that they were taken to police stations, then moved to Iraq in trucks and held in military camps.

Americans are living it up inside Kuwait

KUWAIT CITY — An American asks for street directions. "No problem, I will take you myself," says the Kuwaiti.

Short on food, my American friend? Here, have 50 hot loaves of pita bread, straight from the bakery oven.

Need gas? Don't wait in that mile-long line, Mr. American, go to the front for a free fill-up, the Kuwaiti says with a smile.

Americans aren't always welcome in this part of the world, but carry a U.S. passport in Kuwait these days and you're treated as if you belong to the al-Sabah royal family.

"Welcome, America number one," Kuwaiti soldiers say as they wave American journalists past the military roadblocks throughout the city.

In much of the Middle East, Arabs are suspicious of other foreign journalists trying to find their way around a city without electricity, working telephones or street lights, and with many of the road signs missing.

Instead of giving directions, Kuwaitis often volunteer to chauffeur journalists to their destination. A press pass allows one to go directly to the front of lengthy gas station lines for a free fill-up.

When two Associated Press reporters went to a garage to get two flat tires fixed (free of charge), they came across a bakery with a long line outside.

When they inquired about buying bread, they were given (free of charge) 50 loaves of hot pita bread, a true windfall in a city where virtually all shops and restaurants remain closed.

Can this huge outpouring of goodwill last forever? Probably not.

U.S. Ambassador Edward Gnehm joked about it Thursday. "I bet I'm the only American ambassador in the world with pro-American graffiti on my walls," he said.

day with marching bands, flowers and folk dancers, but some women watching the festivities in Moscow said unequal pay, poor living standards and the scarcity of consumer goods made women second-class citizens.

"We are on the lowest level of society," said Valentina Zavyaskina. "It's bad when you have nothing to wear, when there are no cosmetics, when you don't know if you will have a job tomorrow or less."

Soviet women earn less on average than men and, while there are female legislators, there are no Soviet women in top leadership posts.

In addition to a career, women spend long hours standing in long shopping lines and are the principal care-givers to children.

Grazhina Landsberg, wife of Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, told the newspaper Komunisticheskaya Pravda that like all women, "I have been standing in lines all my life and do the shopping myself using rationing coupons."

In London, Amnesty International condemned the "barbaric" treatment of female prisoners in more than 40 nations.

The human rights group said jailers often rape women prisoners, knowing their victims won't accuse them because of the social stigma of rape.

Amnesty cited the house arrest of Burmese opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi, restricted since 1989, and the death of South African black lawyer Victoria Mxenge, whose lawyer said she died in 1985 from claims of government complicity.

Only four of the 159 U.N. member-states have female ambassadors — Liechtenstein, Senegal, Singapore, and Trinidad and Tobago.

Of the 42 undersecretaries-general, only two are women — Theresa P. Sevigny, the head of the dedicated his Women's Day message, cutting the corporate tax and imposing a 6 percent tax on family income above $25,000.

Georgetown sends UConn to the sidelines

By JIM TIERNNEY Manchester Herald

NEW YORK — The antidote seemed simple enough.

In its Big East Conference tournament quarterfinal against Georgetown Friday night at Madison Square Garden, the University of Connecticut had to contain the Hoyas' imposing "Twin Towers" — 7-2 Dikembe Mutombo and 6-10 Alonzo Mourning.

For the Hoyas, "simple" turned over so quickly into impossible.

Mutombo (13 points, Big East record 27 rebounds) and Mourning (19 points, 6 rebounds) dominated the inside play as the Hoyas knocked off defending Big East Conference Tournament champion Connecticut, 68-49.

The previous rebounding mark was jointly held by Syracuse's Derrick Coleman and Dan Schayes at 23.

On a downtown street, several schoolgirls were passing out cards with pink ribbons to U.S. soldiers and other Americans that read, "Thank you for kicking Saddam Hussein's butt."

Villanova, PC pull off up sets in Big East play

By The Associated Press

Villanova, known for its postseason upsets, did it again Friday, downing fourth-ranked Syracuse 70-68 in the Big East tournament on two foul shots by Greg Woodard with 4.7 seconds to go.

The Wildcats, who upset Georgetown in the 1985 NCAA tournament final, had led by 11 points in the first half, then trailed by 16 with less than 10 minutes to go before beginning a run that dumped the second-seeded Orangemen (26-5).

The win by Villanova (16-13) came just 18 hours after the Wildcats beat last-place Boston College 74-73 in the game between the eighth and ninth seeds, coming from 10 points down in the last 2½ minutes.

On Friday, they rallied from a 63-47 deficit with 9:35 left to win for the first time in six post-season games against the Orangemen.

"The kids showed a lot of perseverance," Villanova coach Rollie Massimino said. "We set goals. With five minutes to go we wanted to be down six. We were down 12 when we set the goal. With two minutes left we wanted to be down three and that's pretty much where we were."

The lost end Syracuse's string of eight straight semifinal appearances in the conference tournament and may have damaged its chances for a No. 1 seed in next week's NCAA tournament. It also may have given Villanova a tournament shot — despite 13 losses, the Wildcats have now beaten such ranked teams as Syracuse twice — St. John's and LSU.

"All I'm concerned with is winning this tournament," Massimino said. "Whether they look as good as they do now is up to the committee. A lot has to happen between now and Sunday night."

Woodard, who finished with 18 points, started and finished a 7-0 run over the next two minutes with a jumper in the lane and a 3-pointer.

Billy Owens, who had 17 points and 22 rebounds for Syracuse despite playing the entire game in foul trouble, made one free throw, but Lloyd Mumford scored his only points of the game, a 3-pointer, and Marc Dowdell added a foul line jumper to bring the Wildcats within 66-65 with 2:12 left.

Conrad McRae made two free throws but Chris Walker tied it with a 3-pointer with 1:25 left.

Owens had the ball knocked away from him at the foul line with 38 seconds left. The Wildcats ran the clock down until Woodard was fouled on the left side as he took a jumper.

The other major upset occurred in the Southeastern Conference, with No. 18 Mississippi State, the top seed, beaten 87-70 by Tennessee.

In other early conference tournament games Friday, No. 21 Seton Hall edged Pitt 70-69 in the Big East. North Carolina State beat Georgia Tech 82-66 in the Atlantic Coast; Auburn beat No. 16 LSU 92-77 in the SEC and Pacific beat Fullerton State 74-67 in the Big West.

In the Big Eight, No. 14 Oklahoma State beat Kansas State 77-66 and Missouri beat Iowa State 97-81. No. 21 Texas beat Baylor 88-78 and SMU beat Houston 65-62 in the Southeastern Conference, and Ball State beat Central Michigan 77-69 and Toledo beat Miami of Ohio 70-59 in the Mid-American.

Providence 72, No. 20 St. John's 64; Eric Murdock scored 22 points and Providence pulled off another Big East tournament upset Friday night, holding No. 20 St. John's to one basket in a split of nearly 12 minutes in the second half win by 13 points in the first half.

ACC No. 7 North Carolina 67, Clemson 59; North Carolina didn't score a basket in the final 8:16, but King Rice made four free throws in the final 5:6 seconds as the seventh-ranked Tar Heels beat Clemson 67-59 Friday night to advance to the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Hubert Davis scored 15 points for North Carolina (23-5), which improved to 10-0 against Clemson in ACC tournament play. The Tar Heels on Saturday will meet the winner of the Wake Forest-Virginia game, which was played last Friday night.

Both teams had season-low totals in the second half — North Carolina scored just 31 and Clemson had only 17.

With the score tied at 49, Pete Chilcutt put in a jumper off the glass. Eric Montross hit a hook shot in the lane and Rice made a three-point play to give the Tar Heels a 56-49 lead with 10 minutes left.

The Tigers never quit, but couldn't take advantage of North Carolina's cold shooting to pull off the upset.

Ricky Jones led Clemson (11-17) with 16 points and Dale Davis added 15. Clemson finished the season losing 15 of its last 18 games, including three to the Tar Heels.

N. Carolina St. 82, Georgia Tech 68; Rodney Monroe scored 24 points as North Carolina State (19-9) advanced to the play No. 6 Duke in the semifinals. Georgia Tech (16-12) got 16 points from Matt Geiger and 15 points and eight assists from Kenny Anderson, who also committed five turnovers. Chris Smith led Connecticut with 17 points. He was 5-for-15 from the field. The Huskies overall were 17-for-53, 32 percent, and an inept 12-of-21 from the foul line. UConn 21 turnovers, including 16 in the first half where Georgetown grabbed a 34-30 halftime lead. Freshman Charles Harrison had 12 of his 15 points in the opening half for Georgetown.

There were four technicals assessed in the opening 20 minutes as UConn coach Jim Calhoun tossed out two technicals with quality for the NCAA tourney was in 1978.

"We felt we had to win this game to win the Big East. We don't do that kind of thinking at Georgetown," Thompson responded when asked if his team needed to win to make the NCAA Tournament.

Two Mornings free throws put the Hoyas up 50-38 with 11:47 left. A Mutombo 3-point play gave Georgetown a 61-45 edge with 5:06 to go. After the first minute of the second half, UConn couldn't come within six points of the Hoyas.

In their first meeting on Feb. 11 in Hartford, UConn beat Mornings and Mornings to a combined 17 points (on 3-for-11 shooting) with all five of Mornings' points coming from the foul line in the second half.

ACC No. 7 North Carolina 67, Clemson 59; North Carolina didn't score a basket in the final 8:16, but King Rice made four free throws in the final 5:6 seconds as the seventh-ranked Tar Heels beat Clemson 67-59 Friday night to advance to the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Arkansas, which won the SWC's regular-season title with a 15-1 record and its seeking its third consecutive league title, topped the previous SWC tournament record victory of 111-67, set by Houston against Texas Christian in 1977.

Big West Pacific 74, Fullerton St. 67; Don Lytle scored 25 points and Dell Demps got 18 of his 23 on 3-point shots Wednesday for Pacific (14-14). Blackhawks finally get win on the road

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Wayne Gretzky scored twice in the second period, his 35th and 36th goals of the season, as the Chicago Blackhawks won their first road game since Oct. 17, 1987.

The Sabres pulled goalie Clint Malarchuk after Gretzky's first goal, in which the center faced Malarchuk out of position before shooting in a rebound at 16:13 of the second period on the power play with two goals left.

That goal put Chicago up 4-1, and Gretzky made it 5-1 a short time later when he outmuscled Buffalo defenseman Dean Kennedy for a loose puck along the boards, cut across the middle and slid a low shot past goalie Darcy Wakulak.

The victory snapped a 0-4-1 road streak for the Blackhawks, who close out the season playing six of their remaining 11 games in Chicago.

Heizer posts fourth victory
ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Franz Heizer has erased the notion he doesn't know how to win a medal. Now, he appears to have a World Cup trophy in his collection.

Once known as "Mr. Fourth Place," the Swiss downhill skier posted his third victory of the season on Friday, edging Norway's Aale Skarland to virtually clinch the men's World Cup downhill title.

Heizer, 28, gold medalist in downhill in last month's world championships, fashioned a nearly perfect run on a course that was significantly faster than in training, when crews had struggled to remove more than two feet of new snow from the track.

With no overnight snowfall and a harder surface, Heizer was clocked in 1 minute, 44.89 seconds — 2.66 hundredths ahead of Skarland, who was timed in 1:45:15.

Azinger to be extra cautious this week

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. — Paul Azinger, once again a shot out of the lead, will take precautions to prevent a repeat performance of his day-in-a-disqualification of a week ago.

So will the PGA Tour.

"I'm just happy to be playing," Azinger said Friday after moving within a stroke of John Huston Dan Halldorson, Steve Pate and Joe Ledner at the halfway point of the Honda Classic.

It was a very, tongue-in-cheek and slightly bitter reference to his misfortune in the Doral Open a week ago when a telephone call from a television viewer resulted in Azinger's ouster from the tournament.

Then, at now, he appeared to be one stroke behind the leader.

Before he signs his card following Saturday's round, Azinger will ask tour officials to review television film of his play.

"I won't sign my card until he says everything is okay," Azinger said. "I'm not kidding."

But a really won't be necessary. As a result of Azinger's disqualification, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman ordered a rules official to monitor the telecast with an eye toward catching any infractions immediately.

This practice, in effect for the first time in pro golf, will continue until the next regular meeting of the policy board on June 4.

At that time, Beman said in a statement released from tour headquarters in Ponte Vedra, Fla., the board will "formally review the application of a disqualification penalty as a result of a prior round's breach of the rules."

It's all a result of the incident at Doral, when a television viewer saw Azinger inadvertently move a couple of rocks when taking a stance in a hazard, a violation of the rule that calls for a two-stroke penalty. Azinger, unaware he had committed an infraction, signed a card that did not include the penalty.

The viewer didn't call until a day later, however. At that point, Azinger was guilty of signing an incorrect scorecard, a breach that calls for disqualification.

"After what happened to me, I'm pleased I wasn't trying to force anything, just let things happen," Azinger said after a 5-under-par 67 in the second round put him at 135 after 36 holes.

He said he has put the Doral incident behind him, but admitted to some lingering after-effects.

"I'm unbelievably gun-shy," he said. "I'm scared to death, scared to death to do something stupid. I'm paranoid."

Huston, whose only victory came in this event a year ago, Halldorson and Pate shared the lead at 134, 10 under on the TPC at Eagle Trace.

Huston and Pate, whose last victory came three years ago, shot second-round 65s. Halldorson, a Canadian, had five birdies and an eagle-3 on the way to a second consecutive 67.

Greg Norman and Mike Sullivan were tied with Azinger at 135. Each had a second-round 66.

They were followed by John Daly, Brad Faxon and Dave Barr at 136. A number one Canadian, shot 66 while Daly and Faxon carded 68s.

IN CONTENTION — Paul Azinger, disqualified in his last outing on the PGA Tour, is a little gun-shy, but again in contention at this week's Honda Classic. He's one stroke off the lead after 36 holes.

TONIGHT Viewers compare opinions

By HOWARD GOLDBERG The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pulling has always been one part science and one part art. Add several years of "action news" and you have the "Great American TV Poll," a daily show that debuted this week on Lifetime Television.

Hosts David Birney and Eleanor Mondrake interact like chatty local news anchors, smoothing over the half-hour's somewhat abrupt shifts from weighty to fluffy topics.

The prominent careers from what Americans would like to do to rapists to the question of what parts of their own bodies they most would like to change. Within the first two weeks, the 6:30 p.m. EST cable program will touch on sexual satisfaction, pregnancy, depression and vigilantism.

Since Lifetime's target audience is women, the producers ask each other, "What questions on that topic would a woman want to know?" said Donna Harris, the network's vice president of original programming.

"I think they should appeal to a wide spectrum of people and are interested in the world around them," Birney said.

Birney, who starred in the television series "Scorpion" and "Bridget Loves Bernie," is commuting from Los Angeles to New York to fit the show in with his career and being a part-time single parent.

Mondrake, the daughter of former Vice President Walter Mondale, was a television reporter in Los Angeles and host of a Minneapolis show.

Backing them up are a respected polling company and free-lance news camera crew members from the country, who provide the video shot from experts and ordinary people that give the show a lively pace and visual appeal.

Lifetime's publicists call these "random video samplings," a tag that unfortunately cuts to the heart of mistrust and misunderstanding of polling.

Random sampling is the statistical science that lets the producers measure American attitudes with several hundred-telephone calls.

At Princeton Survey Research Associates, led by two people who ran the Gallup Organization in the 1950s, use random digit dialing to reach 600 adults.

Of course, those 600 cannot perfectly mirror all Americans, including the 7 percent of households that don't have phones. But answers of those who reflect undistorted people get extra weight in calculating the percentages read on the air, Princeton pollster Diana Colasanto said.

When the show says 70 percent believe repeat rape offenders should be surgically disabled, the figure should be within a few percentage points either way of the results that would have been obtained from all Americans. The show will report findings only outside this margin of sampling error, Colasanto said.

Accompanying sound bites ("Castrate them," a woman says) do not come from random sampling. A photographer chooses an approach, a producer in a control plane, and the producers select only comments.

The show's integrity depends on the producers' abilities to make the sound bites amplify and not distort the poll findings, which could get lost amid glibby music and graphics. Survey quality and accuracy are the art of wording questions that people can and will answer. Years ago, when pollsters first tried to ask sensitive. As it became more of a subject of debate, poll seemed to show the public on both sides, depending how questions were framed.

The "Great American TV Poll" will be facing these pitfalls because it must be topical and groundbreaking to keep interest day after day.

Quaid's new series

By JERRY BUCK The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Randy Quaid helps his new show, ABC's "Davis Rules," help correct the way teachers and school principals are usually depicted on TV.

In his first prime-time series, Quaid plays a man who reluctantly gives up teaching to become a principal. Jonathan Winters co-stars as his eccentric father.

"Television's responsible for the image of teachers being a fool for money," Quaid says. "It shows like 'Ferris Bueller' show students doing things to get around their responsibilities. These shows put teachers in an unrealistic and bad light. It sends a signal to students that it's OK to be lazy and cut class and see how much you can get away with."

"But 'Davis Rules' replaces one of the best school shows on the air, 'The Great Class.' In that series, a dedicated teacher, played first by Howard Hesseman and this season by Billy Connolly, inspires a class of gifted students.

There have been good shows set in schools, such as the '80s 'Mr. Brooks,' 'Mr. Peepers,' 'Mr. Novak' and 'Room 222.' But many series, and movies too, have made teachers and principals into bumbling idiots easily outwitted by the students. The reason is that young actors and principals are theaters and in the early evening on television.

"I thought Davis is a science teacher, and that's his first love," Quaid says. "He believes in the quality of a good teacher in a student's life. He tries to have an impact on all his students. When his fellow teachers select him to become principal, it's a dilemma for him. He doesn't want to be a principal, but he has to be."

"Davis is a good teacher. He's conscientious about his family. He's radical in the things he tries in his approach to his job as principal. One day he's working only in his classroom, and the next day he's in a classroom full of students. He doesn't want to be a principal, but he has to be."

Quaid comes to the series after three busy years working only in theatrical movies. His only regular appearance on television was on NBC's "Sanford and Son" in 1985-86. He has been in nearly a dozen TV movies, most recently as Lyndon B. Johnson in "LBJ: The Early Years" in 1987 and as a golf pro in "Dead Solid Perfect" in 1988.

He made his motion-picture debut with "The Untouchables" in 1987, a role in "Tomb Raider" with Marlowe in "The Last Picture Show" in 1981. Quaid and his wife, Evi, and their 7-year-old daughter, Amanda, live near Santa Barbara.
