Police Roundup

Man charged with assault

MANCHESTER — A local man has been charged with first degree burglary and third degree assault after he smashed a neighbor's door with a fire extinguisher and threatened to kill him.

Police say 25-year-old Richard Freeland, of 14 Arch St., second floor, knocked on a neighbors door about 2 a.m. Saturday, asking to use a telephone. When he was refused, police say Freeland started banging on the door with his fist.

The resident of the apartment attempted to call police, but was interrupted when Freeland started using a fire extinguisher to break the door down. Police say Freeland broke a hole in the door, peered through and threatened to kill the neighbor.

Another resident of the building heard the disturbance and called police. When that resident approached Freeland, he dropped the extinguisher and ran out of the building, where he was found by police a short time later. Freeland is being held on a $10,000 cash bond. No date has been set for his court appearance.

Young authors' books presented

By MATTHEW FLYNN
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Coventry teachers, town officials and other dignitaries were on hand Saturday morning at Nathan Hale Middle School for the unveiling of a number of new novels, short stories and poems.

John Urdike's latest? Alice Walker? Stephen King? No. The authors of the new works were none other than students at Robertson, Coventry Grammar and Nathan Hale Schools, participating in the first annual Coventry Young Writer's Conference (CYWC).

Each student engaged in the production of a book, from the more creative task of writing the text, to the more technical job of constructing the book covers. The fruits of their labor form a small library of books by a young generation of authors.

Eta Brewer, reading consultant at Robertson School and co-ordinator of the event, described the conference as a method of encouraging writing and creativity through the involvement of an audience. She said people are motivated to write or create by the realization that others may be entertained by their work.

The books which the children wrote are out to be read, she said, "as opposed to tucked away in a teacher's desk drawer."

CYWC is an outgrowth of the Young Author/Reader's Conference. In previous years, the conferences were held at the state level. Towns and cities selected representatives from among their students. Brewer said the local event ensures that more local students can participate in the program and a larger array of works can be represented.

Brewer said that the top priority of the conference is to assist children not only in the writing, but also the thinking process. Students are trained to brainstorm for ideas and to mold the ideas into comprehensible forms.

The young authors are led through a four-part process: pre-writing (thinking of ideas for a story), writing, revising and editing. Though the audience sees only the finished product, the students must pass through each phase, changing and rethinking their works until they become finely-tuned literature. As the young authors pass through each phase, Brewer says, they witness the development of ideas.

Guest speaker Mortdecai Gerstein, a distinguished cartoonist and author, engaged the conference members in a number of stories and parables. Among them, he told the tale of the "New Beings," a hypothesis of why people care for and serve their cats and dogs. As he spoke, Gerstein illustrated his story with drawings. The illustrations worked with his oration to create an entertaining storyline.

"Books are like little theaters held in your hand," Gerstein said, summarizing the central idea of the CYWC.

Highland Park Elementary School fifth-grader Jessica Smith, swings a gauge with a shoelace attached to it. Smith and other fifth-graders carry out this process each morning to measure the "dew point," the temperature at which dew starts to form.

Student advisor wins recognition

MANCHESTER — Despite being named Connecticut's Guidance Counselor of the Year by the New England Association of College Administrators, Counselors, East Catholic High School's Joe Duffy says the students are the real heroes.

With federal aid for college-bound students diminishing, the cost of higher education escalating, and social problems rising, students today have it rougher than ever before, said Duffy, who has been a guidance counselor at the school for the past 12 years.

Duffy's career at East Catholic has been a guidance counselor at the school for the past 12 years. He began 24 years ago when he was hired as a history teacher.

"I found that the longer I taught, the more students would open up to me about their problems," Duffy said, explaining his decision to become a guidance counselor.

Although most of his day is spent behind his desk in the school's guidance department, Duffy still teaches an advanced-placement humanities course.

At a school where nearly 98 percent of its graduates attend college, a large part of Duffy's work is meeting with the college representatives who voted him the best counselor in the state.

Duffy said the award does not depict him as much as it does East Catholic's guidance staff as a whole.

"We have one of the best counseling staffs there is," he said.

Doctor's day off goes to the poor

Dr. Jeffrey Etinger apparently doesn't subscribe to the popular myth. Doctors, we hear, are supposed to spend their time away from work playing golf in the sun.

But Etinger spends part of his day off each week in the basement of a church with electric light. He staffs the Messiah Medical Ministry every Thursday for people who cannot afford health care and are referred by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches (MACC).

Thursday will mark its fourth week of operation at South United Methodist Church on Main Street.

Etinger, 34, who has practiced internal medicine in Manchester for the past four years, went to MACC last September with a concern and a proposal. Recognizing the national crisis in health care, he wanted to assist those in his own town who could not afford services.

"I feel there's a biblical mandate to care for the poor and oppressed," he says quietly. "I practice here, I live in town, and I feel I should be here to help out the community."

So the church, with the assistance of its senior pastor, the Rev. Dr. Frederick Marger, helped Etinger work out the logistics and provided him with the space for his work.

In a corner of the large basement room, Etinger's office is set off with privacy panels and equipped sparsely with a lamp, a card table and a chair. The physician's desk, a small locked filing cabinet and an examining table. Patients waiting to see the doctor may sit on 'church pews outside the room.

Etinger plans to treat only adults, most with primary care problems such as colds, bronchitis, sore throats and earaches. He will also screen for high blood pressure. Pharmaceutical companies provide samples of medication that Etinger may prescribe; serious medical problems will be referred to the hospital emergency room, he says.

"It would be nice if other physicians would volunteer their services from time to time so I could refer to specialists or primary care follow-up," he says.

"Any one physician can't take in large numbers of patients who can't pay," he continues. Despite the desire to provide free services, the high cost of medical practice makes it impossible to run an office in town, and he feels I should be here to help out the community."

Etinger, a soft-spoken, youthful-looking man, is married and the father of two. What motivates a doctor busy with his own practice and young family to spend his free time as a volunteer?

"God has given me a lot of talents and abilities," he says. "Part of my way of expressing care for people is to provide for the needs of those who can't afford care."

For now, Etinger takes only patients who have been referred by MAACC. He expresses hope, however, that eventually his practice can be accessible to anyone in town who needs it.

Etinger plans to treat only adults, most with primary care problems such as colds, bronchitis, sore throats and earaches. He will also screen for high blood pressure. Pharmaceutical companies provide

Signs

must have made a lot of noise and bystanders must have seen the vandals in action.

"People just look the other way," he says.

But they would not if they knew how many of their tax dollars go to replacing and repairing signs. About $125 will cover the cost of replacing a sign and a pole, not including labor. And the time to replace the sign is time Zanolungo spends away from driving trucks.

To make a sign, Zanolungo arranges the letters on the blank steel sign plates in his shop. The letters are melted to the sign by heating the two in an oven. Then the sign is ready to replace another or be stockpiled. He keeps stock of signs for those streets that are more commonly vandalized.

More common targets are the streets with common names or names with special meanings.

Zanolungo and O'Connor suspect there are a lot of parents who know of signs displayed prominently in the bedrooms of their children, but don't do anything about it.

"Whether the old man and old lady know how much it costs the town, I don't know," Zanolungo says.

In the six months from October of last year through March of this year, the town spent $5,977 for materials to repair and replace 289 signs and 68 poles.

And with the work flowing steadily to Zanolungo, he estimates the amount of time before he fixes or replaces any sign to be anywhere from two weeks to six months, depending upon the urgency of doing the job.

Besides the obvious problem that missing signs make it difficult for people to find their way around strange neighborhoods, O'Connor is concerned about the more serious problem of rescue vehicles losing time when responding to a call to an obscure street.

"Even the smallest amount of time lost in finding a street could be a disaster," said O'Connor. "I don't think kids think about that. I don't think a lot of adults think about that."

Another reason O'Connor is getting tired of the vandalism is he has been hoping to begin replacing the letters on the signs with larger letters that reflect light with far more intensity than the letters on the signs now. The high-intensity letters can be seen from much farther away with a lot less light.

However, O'Connor refuses to spend 70 cents per letter for the new letters — compared to the 25 cents for current letters — because of the level of vandalism, which he says has increased drastically in the last two years.

But he and Zanolungo are not resigned to finding a lot of missing signs and replacing them.

One technique they are using to ward off thieves is to spread a thick layer of grease along the sign poles, so people cannot climb to them with their legs and yank at the signs with their hands. Instead they would have to use their hands to grab the signs, making it very difficult to remove the sign.

"One jump and handful of grease on their way to school and that's that," Zanolungo said.

O'Connor says he is seriously considering another method to reverse the sign-matching trend. The plan involves placing a dye on the signs that is invisible until it is on human skin. Some banks use it on money stored in safes.

"It's a dead giveaway," he said, and an embarrassment to those who are literally caught red-handed.

O'Connor said the town is scheduling an amnesty period for people to return signs, in hopes of reducing the number of replacement signs needed. For the next two weeks, people can return signs to the Highway Garage at 263 Olcott St., and no questions will be asked. The garage is near the town landfill.

Poor

that paycheck — not welfare checks — was the family's biggest source of income.

More poor children live outside big cities than inside them, and nearly two-thirds of all poor families with children have only one or two children.

The report blamed a declining effectiveness of government assistance programs and changes in the job market — such as increased unemployment and lower wages — for the increasing child poverty rate.

"Spending cuts during the 1980s exacerbated the extent to which poor families with children are shortchanged by public programs," the report said, adding that spending for cash payments to low-income families with children fell 21 percent over the decade.

The unexpected hero gave the Lakers an unexpected 93-91 victory over Chicago on the second anniversary of the Bulls' last playoff loss at home. It was only their second loss in 13 playoff games this year and broke their streak of 13 home playoff wins, an NBA record.

Neither team led by more than seven points. The Lakers' 84-80 lead was the biggest in the last 10 minutes. The lead changed hands six times in that span as Jordan and Johnson took turns making big plays.

But it was Perkins, a forward and backup center, who put the Lakers on top 92-91 with his 3-pointer with 14 seconds left. They held on as Jordan's 16-footer from the left hit the rim but bounced out with 4.9 seconds to go.

I was wide open," said Jordan, who all scores with 36 points. "It felt good."

"When I let it go, I feared it was going to be blocked," said Perkins, who scored 22. "This will be an experience I'll always remember."

His six points in Dallas were forgettable. He averaged 14.4 points during those regular seasons. The Mavericks got past the first round of the playoffs just twice and never reached the Finals.

Last Aug. 6, he signed as a free agent with the Lakers. But his value wasn't immediately obvious.

"I wasn't really involved into the system enough," Perkins said to the day before the opener. "I just got off on the wrong foot and... everything started jelling as time went on."

Perkins has developed into a more complete player. In the first quarter, he had three baskets off post-up plays and two 3-pointers. And he had six of the Lakers' last seven points.

"What we've come to find out since we had him is what a good low-post player he is," Los Angeles coach Mike Dunleavy said.

He also has confidence with Perkins on the perimeter.

"That's his shot," Dunleavy said of the game-winner. "He can make 3-pointers. He's got the green light to shoot any time he gets it."

There were 24 seconds left, and Chicago led 91-89 in the first Finals game in its 25-year history. Jordan's 15-foot bank shot from the right swished around the rim and bounced out.

Perkins rebounded.

After Jordan missed again with 4.9 seconds remaining, Los Angeles' Byron Scott got the rebound, was fouled and sank the final point with 2.7 seconds to play.

"When North Carolina guy made the shot," said Jordan, who was a college teammate of Perkins and James Worthy with the Tar Heels.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is Wednesday night in Chicago. Even if the Bulls win, the Lakers will retain the homecourt advantage they

Clemens now hardly unbeatable

By The Associated Press

Roger Clemens didn't seem so unbeatable these days.

After starting the season with six straight wins, Clemens has lost three of his last four starts. Baltimore won 5-1 Sunday as Boston's ace struck out three, his season low.

"They're an aggressive team. They have been the last couple of years against me," Clemens said.

Clemens (7-3) allowed three runs and eight hits in eight innings and walked one. The most interesting statistic was the low strikeout total.

"They weren't going to allow you to get them up for a strikeout," Clemens said. "They're not a team that's going to take a lot of pitches."

Clemens has lost to Texas, Detroit and Baltimore while beating only the New York Yankees. His previous-low strikeout total was four in the loss to the Rangers on May 18.

"When Roger doesn't win, it's his new Boston third baseman Wade Boggs said. "He's supposed to win every time out and we're supposed to get him a lot of runs. That's what the case today."

The loss dropped Clemens' career record after Boston defeats to 71-20.

AL Roundup

3-2, Minnesota beat Kansas City 4-1 and Chicago beat Oakland 4-3.

Roy Smith (2-0) gave up one run and three hits in seven-plus innings, struck out two and walked none. Mark Williamson finished with perfect relief for his second save.

Baltimore, which has won five of six, took the lead in the second when Joe Ortolak singled and scored on a triple by former Red Sox outfielder Dwight Evans, who scored when right fielder Tom Runnquist's throw went over second baseman Jody Reed for an error.

Candioti (7-2) won for the fifth time in six decisions, striking out eight and walking two. Doug Jones pitched a one-hit ninth for his sixth save, his first since April 28.

Frank Tanana (2-5) gave up two earned runs and eight hits in seven innings.

Twins 4, Royals 1: Scott Erickson (8-2) won his eighth consecutive decision, allowing five hits in 8 1/3 innings, striking out a career-high eight and walking one.

Tom Gordon (4-3) allowed four runs and seven hits in four innings, giving up three doubles, two home runs, a triple and three wild pitches.

Greg Gagne had three hits and Kirby Puckett doubled and hit his sixth home run as the Twins won the fifth time in six games. Rick Aquilino finished for his 11th save.

White Sox 4, Athletics 3: Pinch hitter Matt Merullo hit a two-run, go-ahead single in Chicago's eighth inning after Jose Canseco had put Oakland ahead 3-1 with a three-run homer in the top of the inning off Charlie Hoese (2-2).

Lance Johnson and Dan Pasqua singled off Mike Moore (7-3). Robin Ventura doubled just past a diving Dave Henderson in center and Steve Chiron relieved Merullo then got his sixth hit in 10 at-bats as a pinch hitter this season.

"It's not a rehab assignment, it's a big league start," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "He struggled early with location. He clicked for the two middle innings there and his velocity picked up a little bit every inning."

Higuera pitched only two innings in relief Tuesday night against the Detroit Tigers before making the start. He let a 4-3 lead slip away when New York scored three times in the fifth. The Brewers tied the score at 3-3 in the top of the fifth. Barfield hit a two-run triple in the top of the fifth. Barfield has driven in 10 runs in the last six games.

"I was fortunate today that we had a pretty good offensive day team," said Taylor, who walked one and struck out four.

Steve Sax opened the Yankees fifth with a third straight single and Roberto Kelly singled one out later before Barfield delivered his two-out double. Barfield scored on Mel Hall's single to right that finished Higuera.

Milwaukee took a 1-0 lead on Gary Sheffield's sacrifice fly in the first inning. But the Yankees scored twice in their half of the inning on Kevin Mauer's RBI single and Barfield's run-scoring groundout.

After Sax singled home a run in the second, the Brewers tied the score at 3-3 in the fourth on RBI singles by Greg Vaughn and Dale Sveum.

Sheffield's second sacrifice fly in the fifth gave the Brewers their brief 4-3 edge.

Steve Howe relieved Taylor in the sixth but created a bases-loaded jam in the seventh before being rescued

Morgan gets a new pact

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Joe Morgan will be around for at least another year.

The team has awarded Morgan a one-year contract extension through the 1992 season.

Morgan succeeded John McNamara on July 14, 1988. Entering Saturday's game against the Baltimore Orioles, he held a 243-204 record with the team.

"Joe has once again proven himself to be a top manager this year, keeping the club in first place while it has not been playing nearly up to its potential," Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman said.

Under Morgan, the Red Sox appeared in the American League Playoffs in 1988 and 1990.

Morgan is the 37th Red Sox manager and the 10th winningest for the team, behind Dick Williams who logged 260 victories.

In another move, Frankie Rodriguez, Boston's first pick in the 1990 amateur draft, signed a one-year contract on Sunday, a day before the Red Sox would have lost his rights.

Rodriguez, an 18-year-old shortstop and pitcher, got a signing bonus said to be worth $250,000. He was the first pick overall on the second round of last year's draft.

Curry warns peril with budget delay

HARTFORD (AP) — State Comptroller William E. Curry is warning legislative leaders of the "very real possibility" that the state's General Fund budget for fiscal 1991-92 will be delayed by more than two weeks.

Curry said Saturday the apparent problem is that the state's General Fund budget for fiscal 1990-91 was approved only the first two-week payroll period in June, from May 31 to June 13.

Money for the second pay period in June, he said, must come from the fiscal 1991-92 budget — a budget that doesn't exist yet. The problem exists because this year's budget actually paid for the last payroll period in June 1990.

"It appears that there is a problem, a very real problem, in paying state payroll for the last two weeks of this fiscal year in the absence of the adoption of some authorization," Curry said.

Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. vetoed the Legislature's budget late Friday, leaving Connecticut without a 1991-92 budget just five days before the Legislature adjourns. The fiscal year ends on June 30.

Curry sent letters Friday to House Speaker Richard Balducci and Senate President Pro Tem John Larson, warning them of the apparent problem with the late-June payroll.

Curry said the problem could also be solved through some sort of "mini budget agreement" that extends the current appropriations budget one or two months at a time.

Lawrence Halloran, Weicker's top legal aide, said the administration is also studying the issue.

"It's a valid concern," Halloran said Saturday. "Before too much longer, the comptroller and the governor will be discussing this with the attorney general."

square-foot to $30 per square-foot, Sartor estimates. The town would have to pay at least $10,000 to make the necessary computer connections and $1,000 per month for a phone line for the computers.

The town has also been in negotiations with the U.S. Postal Service for the purchase of the Post Office building at Main and East Center streets. The Post Office building would provide an additional 6,000 square feet of temporary office space. When the permanent town hall addition is built, the Post Office could be used as a town heritage center or as a museum for the Historical Society, town officials have said.

sion is not the solution to the state's problems."

"Something may make the situation easier for some people who might have thought about supporting an income tax earlier," House Minority Leader Edward C. Krawicki Jr., R-Bristol, another architect of the bipartisan conventional plan rejected by Weicker. "That the larger question will be, what happens if you can't muster enough votes over that kind of methodology, I won't out of hand reject (a sunset plan), but I'm certainly not leaning in that direction."

"I think all legislators will take another look" at an income tax, he said. "But what I believe, very strongly however, is that when they do take another look at it, when the votes are counted, they will still be short."

"That then drives the question of, what do we do at that point," Krawicki said. "How do you raise the revenue? There are lots of people out there that fundamentally believe that having an income tax, especially in midstream when the people are already planning is not good.

"There are probably 50 or 55 who won't switch given all of the information in the world," he said. He also said that some lawmakers won't vote for any package that contains tax increases.

Krawicki said that if the current bills remain intact, income tax advocates are going to have to "look at what it is that makes an alternative tax package palatable to the voters."

"I think there is a very deep feeling that (an income tax) is not good for people and there is a great concern that spending will be escalated because of it," Krawicki said.

One alternative gaining some acceptance is one with a 2 percent income tax that would be sunset after a couple of years. That idea came from the Southwestern Area Commerce and Industry Association, based in Stamford.

The vetoed conventional plan was based on a dramatic increase in the base of the 8 percent sales tax, extending it to clothing costing more than $25, down from the current $75 exemption; haircuts; over-the-counter medicines; newspapers; and numerous other new-exempt items. A new 5.75 percent sales tax, on top also is imposed on gasoline, on the current 22-cents-a-gallon gas tax.

It also had a new tax on residential mortgages over $150,000 and all commercial mortgages over $100,000, a new tax on gambling winnings and a new tax on the income of out-of-state residents working in Connecticut.

The business tax surcharge would remain on the books, along with some business tax increases.

Weicker had proposed a 6 percent tax on family income over $25,000, a reduction in the sales tax to 4.25 percent, elimination of the business tax surcharge and reductions in other taxes.

Rapport and other progressives in the General Assembly are pushing for an income tax on a graduated scale, from 4 to 9 percent, as well as cuts and eliminations in other taxes.

placed Middletown High School on warning for failure to meet minimum standards in its building and other areas, many local officials were alarmed.

"It would be a tragedy and a nail in the coffin of public education if the high school were to lose accreditation," Mayor Paul Gionfriddo said.

The scenario being played out in Middletown is likely to be repeated elsewhere as school budgets and bonding projects are defeated in cities and towns throughout the state. Middletown received its warning after voters twice defeated projects to bring the high school building up to state code specifications and to expand it.

The warning to Middletown is one other communities should heed, said Terry Cassidy, executive director of the Connecticut Association of Boards of Education.

"We are going to have more and more problems with public schools, being able to maintain standards, both in terms of the physical structure and the academic programs, as a result of the state's unwillingness to support public education as it has to be supported," Cassidy said.

"People have been cutting (school budgets) over a period of years, and it's hitting all over," he said. "Now, their backs are against the wall. There are no longer minor problems."

"Twelve of the 59 schools placed on warning by the commission are in Connecticut. Of those, three — Litchfield Middle and New Fairfield and Thomaston high schools — have been placed on probation. New Fairfield Middle School's accreditation has been denied. No high school has lost accreditation.

Abortion policy upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let the Bush administration continue exporting its anti-abortion policies through the way it funds family planning programs in Third World countries.

The court, without comment, left intact the government's ban on financing for health care organizations abroad unless they promise not to use money from any source to "actively promote abortion as a method of family planning."

The ban also denies federal aid to family planning groups in the United States unless they agree not to channel the money to foreign projects that perform abortions or provide abortion counseling.

Today's action was not a surprise. The high court last month ruled that the government may ban some 4,000 government-subsidized family planning clinics nationwide from counseling about abortion or providing abortion counseling.

The ban at issue in the case acted on family planning groups in the United States unless they agree not to channel the money to foreign projects that perform abortions or provide abortion counseling.

morning that he has learned that two — and possibly three — additional positions may soon become vacant. The additional vacancies would leave the department five officers short of its authorized strength.

The Democrats are asking that the freeze on filling the two existing vacancies and the three additional officers if it were additional officers become vacant.

Cassano said that the Democrats are not asking for any money for the eighth patrol district because their primary goal is to get the department back to its authorized strength.

"If the department is five men down, it's not going to be able to function that well," Cassano said. "There are indications that they are already stacking calls. That's not the way the police department is supposed to operate."

Pirates remain red hot

By The Associated Press

As the Pittsburgh Pirates' streak kept going, Tommy Greene's catch to end.

The Pirates won their ninth straight game Sunday, 5-3 over Philadelphia, and Greene, arguably the league's hottest pitcher, saw his scoreless streak end at 21 innings.

Harry Bonds had a two-run homer in the sixth and a run-scoring double in the ninth as Pittsburgh matched its longest winning streak since July 1988 and beat the Phillies for the sixth time in as many games since the season and 12th in a row overall.

Greene had given up just five hits without a run in his last three starts, one a no-hitter over Montreal. The catch ended when Bonds hit his sixth homer of the season to tie the game 2-2.

"He got fired up more against the hot pitcher," said Bonds, who has 18 hits in his last 45 at-bats. "He made me nervous."

NL Roundup

As a little nervous in the beginning, he's an outstanding pitcher who throws very hard."

The Phillies managed a 2-0 lead against Druge Drabek, but a second run scoring on a two-out single by Greene in the second.

Bonds tied it and the Pirates briefly grabbed the lead in the seventh on an RBI-swing by Andy Van Slyke. The Phillies tied it in the eighth on a fielder's choice grounder by pinch-hitter Dale Murphy.

Philadelphia's hard-throwing reliever Mitch Williams, (0-3) started the ninth and Van Slyke had one out swinging but no run. Bonds' double then struck out, but Bobby Bonilla went left for the go-ahead run and then scored on Mike Webster's single to make a winner out of Bob Walk (2-0).

The Pirates are staying in first place and their lead is now comfortable six games over New York.

"We really haven't been over-pushing anybody; we've just been getting the runs at the right time," Bonds said. "That's what wins games, and that's what we've done."

Cubs 4, Expos 3: At Montreal, rookie Cedric Landrum's two-out, two-run single in the ninth kept the Cubs perfect in six games against the Expos this season. The loss was the fifth in a row and 10th in 11 games for Montreal, which had grabbed a 3-2 lead in the seventh with Alex Sanchez (3-2) working the second two innings for the victory while Dave Smith pitched one to his 13th appearance.

Cardinals 3, Mets 1: At St. Louis, Mitch Thompson did more than enough to soften the injury to Cardinals' starting right fielder Felix Jose. Thompson, who replaced Jose Saturday night after he slightly strained a groin muscle, had the game-winning hit in 10th that kept the win in their two-run tie.

Thompson went 1-for-3 as a right-field replacement for Felix Jose, who sustained a minor hamstring pull Saturday night. St. Louis manager Joe Torre said Thompson, who is hitting .413, might soon take a position role in the outfield.

Bob Tewksbury (4-2) allowed five hits in pitching into the ninth, and his last hit was a double by Dave Madagan which became the only run he allowed when Gregg Jefferies singled off reliever Lee Smith, who earned his 13th save.

The Cardinals batted around in the fourth against Ron Darling (2-3) and had four straight hits and six overall after two were out in the inning. Thompson's hit was the third of the four in a row.

Dodgers 4, Reds 1: At Los Angeles, Juan Samuel had three hits and two RBIs and Tim Lincecum came within one out of his first shutout since 1989.

Becher (6-4) allowed seven hits — three to Jeff Reed — and struck out only one walk. Reed drove in the only run in a two-out single in the ninth. Tim Creech got the final out of his second save.

Padres 3, Astros 1: Adam Peterson combined with two relievers on a two-hitter as the Padres completed a four-game sweep and beat the Astros in San Diego for the 33rd time in 40 games.

The Giants broke a tie in the eighth when Mike Felder walked with one out, scored, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Willie McCree's sacrifice fly to right.
