Dodging volcanic debris, troops look for survivors

SHIMABARA, Japan (AP)—Soldiers in firefighting gear ventured today into the shadow of a suddenly ferocious volcano, recovering four bodies and sighting 24 more before being turned back by Mount Unzen's searing ash and rock.

At least 31 people, including three researchers and 16 journalists, were reported missing following Monday's first serious eruptions of the 4,485-foot volcano in southern Japan.

The debris were the first from a volcanic eruption in Japan since 1962.

People with severe burns and their clothes in shreds were taken to nearby hospitals after the volcano began sending torrents of molten ash, gas and rock down a valley in a fast-moving flow that is the most destructive known.

The liquid fire set dozens of homes ablaze in the mountainous town of Kamikoba, from which authorities evacuated about 5,000 people, scorching everything in its path.

Officials said 20 people were injured, 15 of them seriously burned.

"There were popping sounds, and there was tremendous smoke. I expected death at any moment," said Chiyou Matsuo, a housewife who gathered up valuables from her home and fled.

Much of what Mount Unzen was spewing is known as pyroclastic flow, or glowing avalanche.

Much faster than any lava stream, a glowing avalanche can move dozens of miles per hour and consist of a superheated, fluidlike emulsion of volcanic ash, gas and rock fragments too heavy to rise skyward.

White clouds of steam boiled up hundreds of yards from the mountain, site of Japan's worst volcanic disaster 200 years ago, when 15,000 people died. The area was jolted by earthquakes early today, the Meteorological Agency reported.

Miles away, thick volcanic ash splattered windshields and covered buildings.

"We are about eight kilometers (4.8 miles) away from the volcano. I don't know how far the lava is going to run, but I don't think it will reach the city," said a Shimabara city official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

French volcanologists Maurice and Katia Kraft and American researcher Harry Glicken were among the first to arrive.

Officials said the three had been making daily appearances at a site near the mountain, which erupted on a far smaller scale on Nov. 17 for the first time in 198 years, then again on Feb. 12 and May 24.

Ethiopian ammo dump explodes

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP)—An ammunition dump blew up in a series of thunderous explosions in a heavily populated area early today, sending a huge fireball across the capital's southeast side. The interim government blamed it on sabotage.

By midmorning, officials said 31 people had been hospitalized and one person was known dead. The death toll was expected to rise as the devastated area was searched.

"I saw two bodies that had obviously been decapitated by shrapnel," said Norbert Schiller, a photographer for The Associated Press. "The devastation is incredible."

The explosion occurred one week after a cease-fire was declared in Ethiopia's long civil war and a rebel group that took over the capital struggled to maintain control in Addis Ababa.

Several square blocks were flattened and fires and explosions spread for blocks. Thousands of people were seen fleeing the area, a neighborhood of small factories and flimsy wood-and-mud homes about a mile from the central Revolutionary Square.

"We still haven't been able to get into the center of the area. It's still burning too hot," said Dr. Tebebe Yemane Berhan, chairman of the Addis Ababa Red Cross.

More than 500 people were killed last week when an ammunition dump on the west side exploded during the city's capture by Tigrean rebels.

Witnesses said today that they heard what sounded like an exchange of gunfire about 45 minutes before the first explosion at 4:20 a.m.

Israel attacks: five dead

SIDON, Lebanon (AP)—Waves of Israeli warplanes blasted Palestinian guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon today for the second time in 24 hours, and police said at least five people were killed and 30 wounded.

Residents said it was the fiercest attack since Israel's 1982 invasion.

A source from Fatah-Revolutionary Council, an extremist PLO faction, said troops and tanks from Israel and the allied South Lebanon Army militia were sighted massing in Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" east of Sidon.

Household smoke and smoke billowed overhead near target areas as the Israeli jets fired rockets into the hills overlooking Sidon in swoops spaced about 10 minutes apart that police said lasted for three hours.

"The jets are raining rockets and bombs," said a police spokesman, who by regulation could not be identified. Black clouds of smoke and dust obscured the sun over the areas targeted by the raiding jets.

Thunderous explosions repeatedly shook Sidon and its surroundings.

The raid, Israel's 11th this year, coincided with the ninth anniversary of the 1982 invasion, which was intended to crush Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization at its main Middle East base.

In terms of the number of runs, the number of planes involved and the firepower they dropped, this is the biggest Israeli air attack on Lebanon this year and possibly since the invasion," the police spokesman said.

He said the casualty count was expected to rise dramatically as rescue operations continued. Some of the more than 90 missiles fired were delayed action devices, he said.

"Rescuers haven't been able to evacuate casualties from some of the stricken bases because bombs and rockets kept exploding," the spokesman said.

President Elias Hrawi's government accused Israel of deliberately escalating its attacks on southern Lebanon in an attempt to frustrate U.S. efforts to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The police spokesman said 30 Israeli Phantom II Sky Hawks and F-15s participated in the attack.

A new pet could be yours!

By JODIE QUAGLIA

Here I am again, this week with four more topics. Or four more answers to four more questions.

Wanting a Pet — What do you when you really want a pet? Besides just begging and promising your parents you can handle one, be extra nice to your little brother or sister. If you don't have a sibling, you can impress your parents by being responsible with chores and school work.

If your parents seem somewhat receptive to the idea of a pet, convince them by offering to pay for some of the pet essentials, like the food, cage, etc. Or at least chip in a little out of your allowance on some of the backgrounds of the animals you like. Check it out if they shed, too. Browse around for vets and then ask them about what shots are needed for your pet.

I also suggest checking with a pet store on the kind of needed equipment. Best of all make sure you have time to give your pet some TLC (Tender Loving Care).

Nine-hundred numbers — These 900 numbers say that someone famous is waiting for your call, but is he really? Is it just a recording? Yeah, it is. I called one of those 900 numbers that says you can speak to New Kids from 10 miles away from you, that's a different story. Get out your Walkman and walk while bobbing to some music. If you do a little walking every night, you'll be more fit. Or, if it's raining, turn on some fast music (or MTV) and make up a dance. Dance each night for about 30 minutes or so.

Innomia — One sheep over the fence. Two sheep over the fence. Three, crash right through the fence. Everyone else is sleeping, you're lying awake, tossing and turning, and there's school tomorrow!

Possible solution: Heat up some milk, turn on the radio, or do some quiet jumping jacks. The warm milk will hopefully knock you out soon. Although you're not a beast, the music on the radio can still soothe your soul — unless it's very hard rock.

Relax. Put all your thoughts in the back of your mind. Pretend your brain has closed down for the night, some people have that problem in the days. Jumping jacks. That's right, good old jumping jacks. Do about 25, then you'll feel real dizzy and drowsy.

Easier Exercise — In a previous column, I told you about some strenuous exercises to do, but what can you do to stay in shape that's fun and healthy and not as hard? Take walks. Walk home from school, walk to a friend's house, or even to a park. Walk home from school with your friend. Or course if your friend lives 10 miles away from you, that's a different story. ## Directors approve land purchase plan

By BRIAN M. TROTTER Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — The Board of Directors has approved the purchase of a piece of land next to the police station despite the protests of several neighborhood residents who said they did not want a new police station built there.

Based on their review of preliminary plans for the station, the residents said they were fearful the station would change their neighborhood and add to the traffic on a street already heavily traveled by both automobiles and pedestrians.

"Any one of the plans will jeopardize one of the loveliest streets in town," said Ellen Morse of 31 Princeton St.

The plans were drawn in 1988 by the Lawrence Associates of Manchester to aid a citizen's advisory committee in choosing a site for a new police station. The committee's recommendation of a site on Camp Meeting Road was rejected by the Board of Directors in favor of the station's current location.

Morse said the location of the station would be less than ideal because the intersection of Princeton Street and East Middle Turnpike was "accident prone." There are also many school children and elderly residents who use the street, she said.

The town has long sought to purchase the land, which is at 265 East Middle Turnpike, but until recently it was not for sale. When the current owner of the property died, the town began negotiations for the land with the estate. The agreement calls for the town to pay $245,000 for the house and land, which totals 1.09 acres.

Bush to grant favored status to Soviets

By JIM DRINKARD The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush is poised to ease tariff barriers to Soviet imports, opening the door to normal commerce for the first time since World War II, administration and congressional sources say.

Sometime in the next few weeks, the sources said Tuesday, the White House will announce its approval of "most-favored-nation status" for the Soviet Union, which carries with it the lowest available tariffs on imports.

For example, MFN status would cut by 90 percent the current $1.32 per liter levy on a bottle of Soviet vodka.

At the same time, the White House will formally submit for congressional approval the U.S.-Soviet trade agreement signed at a Washington summit a year ago that held in abeyance while Moscow passed a liberalized freedom-of-emigration law.

"It's a done deal," said a Republican source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Project explained to 'watch' officials

By SCOTT B. BREDE Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Spruce Street Area Crime Watch block captains met Tuesday night with officials from Project Reentry to discuss their concerns with the assistance program for ex-convicts.

In February, Project Reentry moved from its former location on Hilliard Street to a boarding house on Spruce Street, Clark said.

Project Reentry, which is run by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, provides temporary housing for people just out of prison until they are able to support themselves or enter a town assistance program, its director Chara Clark told the Spruce Street residents.

By the end of the two-hour meeting, most of the block captains said their principle concern was that the boarding house is located right next to Nathan Hale Elementary School.

HARTFORD (AP) — Bipartisan legislative leaders, who worked on their own to put together a budget package only to see it vetoed by independent Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., are determined to avoid another veto.

Despite the veto, Senate President Pro Tem John B. Larson, D-East Hartford, said "we hope to include the governor in the process. (But) we'll remind everybody that we're only here because the governor vetoed the bill."

Sgt. Larson said "they will be invited to the table," likely including Weicker's budget chief, William J. Cibes Jr. Larson said that he and House Speaker Richard J. Balducci, D-Newington, had agreed to consider any proposal Weicker suggests.

Abortion issue an ongoing struggle

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana state senators on Tuesday sent a strict anti-abortion bill to the Louisiana House of Representatives.

Sen. Roderic Roemer, who vetoed similar legislation last year.

This year's proposal, however, includes one new provision that would give the legislature more power to override a veto.

The Senate rejected several amendments Roemer had proposed, including one to allow abortions in cases of severe fetal deformity, and passed the bill 29-9.

Roemer said he will discuss the bill with his supporters and opponents before deciding whether to veto it. He has 10 days to decide but said he won't make lawmakers wait that long for his decision.

"I want to give them time to react to what I do," he said while in New Orleans for an appearance with the Republican Party officials.

He said he was disappointed with Senate rejection of his amendments and said there are possible loopholes and constitutional problems with the bill as drawn. For instance, he said, the measure contains penalties only for doctors.

"The bill allows women to abort themselves but they cannot have a medical doctor do it. Wow!" said Roemer.

The bill would send doctors who perform abortions to prison for one to 10 years, with fines of up to $100,000. It contains exceptions in cases of rape or incest.

He also mentioned current law that prohibits contributions to international organizations that fund abortion programs. In 1989, Bush vetoed a foreign aid appropriations bill that would have allowed such contributions.

"I believe all these policies should continue. I will veto any legislation that weakens current law or existing regulations," Bush said.

WASHINGTON — When it comes to abortion, President Bush puts it bluntly: "I will veto any legislation that weakens current law or existing regulations."

Bush delivered that warning to leaders on Capitol Hill on Tuesday, as House and Senate committees moved ahead with bills to limit government rules banning abortion counseling at federally funded family planning clinics.

Given the importance of this issue, it is surprising to make sure there is no misunderstanding of my views or convictions," Bush said in his letter.

He specifically mentioned Health and Human Services Department rules on abortion counseling as well as a House vote last month to overturn a Defense Department policy against performing abortions in military facilities, unless the life of the mother is endangered.

Books help parents with aspects of child's development

Dear Parents: Once in a while the accumulation of new books and programs that I see related to parenthood encourages me to share them with you — but only the ones that seem to be practical and readable. There are, of course, many others also available for parents.

- Here goes with five of them on themes like these: 1. The period just before and after the baby is born. 2. Raising alcohol- and drug-free youngsters. 3. What makes families successful. 4. The child from birth to 5. 5. Surviving childhood sexual abuse.

One or maybe more of them may hit the spot for you, enough to suggest a visit to your local library or bookstore for the books mentioned.

- 1. "The Miracle Year" by Liane Carter with Lauren Simon Ostrow provides a guide for expectant parents six months before and after their first baby is born. From basic vital concerns like the baby's health and their own relationship to specific ones such as body changes, weight gains, the stages of labor, choosing a competent pediatrician, and budgeting needs, this book aims directly at providing solutions and comfort. It starts with this statement, "As an expectant parent,

- how you might handle it. 2. The most serious issue in thousands of families is how to prevent their children's alcohol and drug involvement. Prepared for parents and related to youngsters in grades three to six is a new program titled "Common Sense: Strategies for Raising Alcohol & Drug Free Children." Its source is the National PTA and the GTE Corp. (with a $1.4 million grant from the GTE Foundation).

The objectives are to improve parenting skills in three areas: Building bonds involving families and schools; setting rights, rules, and limits; providing children with sound parent role models.

The program is contained in a kit that offers research-based information and easy-to-follow instructions for conducting four parent meetings. Parent brochures with specific tips to help raise alcohol- and drug-free children, and a related videotape.

News In Brief

Trooper slain

WINDHAM (AP) — A 28-year-old state trooper was shot to death early today outside a store where he apparently stopped a burglar while on routine patrol, state police said.

A firefighter discovered the body of Trooper Russell Bagshaw slumped across the front seat of his bullet-riddled cruiser about 3:30 a.m., said Sgt. Dan Stebbins, a state police spokesman.

The firefighter stopped when he noticed the cruiser parked in the driveway in front of the Land & Seaports Center on Route 6, Stebbins said.

The passenger and driver side windows were both shot out and there were what appeared to be a number of bullet holes in the passenger door.

"He must have surprised someone in the building," Stebbins said. "He wasn't responding to a burglar alarm, it was just a routine check. This is the type of thing they do, check buildings and premises."

Toll rises to 37

SHIMABARA, Japan (AP) — Hundreds of searchers trugged through a smoking moonscape of ash on the eastern face of Mount Unzen today to retrieve the last victims of a sudden volcanic eruption that killed 37 people.

Soldiers in silver flame-retardant gear recovered 22 more charred bodies, including those of a policeman and a free-lance cameraman, before the search was called off in the afternoon.

Authorities said the six remaining bodies they sought were too high on the mountain to be reached by foot and that search crews would try to recover them by helicopter on Thursday.

Students sought

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police searched Tuesday for 16 students allegedly involved in an attack on the prime minister, and the government said the attack had turned the tide of public opinion against the dissidents.

Chung Won-shik, the prime minister and former education minister, was kicked, punched, pelted with eggs and covered with flour by militant students at a Seoul University Monday night.

Nerves may be regenerating

MIAMI (AP) — Researchers found a cure for paralysis said today that they were able to regenerate injured nerve fibers from the eye, a step toward the long-sought goal of repairing spinal cord damage.

Scientists at the Miami Project to Cure Paralysis said they regenerated injured fibers from the eye's retinal ganglion cells in a special culture.

Police Roundup

Two men arrested

MANCHESTER — Police have arrested two men on drug charges after catching them searching for cocaine hidden in the grass along West Center Street. Police have charged Christopher Castagna, 25, of 56 Sherwood Circle, with conspiracy to possess more than one ounce of cocaine, and Steven Adamson, 22, of 83 Main St., Westfield, with possession of more than one ounce of cocaine. Adamson is charged with conspiracy to operate a drug factory, and possession of cocaine with intent to sell, according to police records.

Officer Robert Leduc was traveling on West Center Street Tuesday night when he saw the two men by the side of the road and pulled over to investigate. The men said that their car was out of gas and were on their way to get some.

A check of Adamson's drivers license revealed that it was suspended, so Leduc arrested him for operating a vehicle while under suspension, police reports say. When Leduc frisked Adamson he found a beeper and $1000 in cash, mostly in fifty- and hundred-dollar bills. Leduc also found a digital scale on the front seat of his car but did not seize it at the time.

The report said Leduc learned also that Adamson had a pending cocaine charge in Rocky Hill. Adamson's car was searched again and police found the scale had been moved underneath the front seat. Leduc then performed a test for drug residue on the scale which came back positive for cocaine.

Leduc arrested the two men on charges of possession of cocaine and brought them back to headquarters.

Under questioning, the two told police that Castagna was going to buy two ounces of cocaine from Adamson, the report said. Adamson purchased the cocaine in Hartford and left it in the grass on West Center Street, near Hartford Road, for Castagna to pick up later.

Adamson met Castagna at a local restaurant and the two left to pick up the drugs, the report said. An unidentified friend of Castagna's followed in another car.

When they got to the location of the drugs, Adamson dropped Castagna off and began to drive away, the report said. But he noticed that Castagna was having difficulty finding the two bags, so he stopped his car and walked back to assist in the search.

Castagna's friend remained by his car while the search continued and left when he saw Leduc's cruiser, the report said.

Birds come alive at library

By JACQUELINE BENNETT
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Julie Collier keeps company with an idiot, a psychopath and a peabrain and she's proud of it.

Actually those epithets are how Collier describes some of the birds of prey she showed at a presentation to an audience of about 30 people at the Whiton Memorial Library recently.

"He's an absolute idiot," Collier said of the red-tail hawk she brought describing how the bird relentlessly hunts its prey crashing mindlessly through fences and brush until it ends up beaten and ragged. All the birds which Collier cares for at her home in Massachusetts have been injured in some way. The hawk while hunting its food dove right into an oncoming car and is now blind in one eye.

"If you're a mouse this is a dangerous bird," said Collier, adding that it also hunts chipmunks and rats.

Because it is small, this type of owl is hunted by other animals but its tree bark-like color helps camouflage it. As owls age, their eyes become golden, but they can close their eyes to slits and still see clearly, thus the glow from the eyes can be hidden to projecting them.

MANCHESTER — The Board of Education's Finance Committee will issue a recommendation regarding the salary of School Superintendent Charles P. Kennedy, School Board Chairman Susan L. Perkins said today.

The committee's recommendation to the full board will be based — in part — on Kennedy's annual evaluation, which was discussed at a closed meeting on Tuesday. The recommendation will be made at Monday's school board meeting, which is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at 45 North School St.

Other than saying the Finance Committee would issue the recommendation, Perkins said she could not release any specific points of the evaluation until the board does so on Monday.

Local firms vie for pond contract

Serving Manchester, Coventry, Andover, Bolton, Hebron

By RICK SANTOS
Manchester Herald

MANCHESTER — Two Manchester engineering firms and one from Coventry are among 13 that have submitted proposals to design a preliminary plan to clean up Center Springs Pond.

The pond, which at one time was a popular spot for ice-skating and fishing, is no longer used for such activities because of the sediment in it. The pond-cleaning will make those activities possible again.

While the plans for the clean-up are moving along, Parks and Recreation Director Scott Sprague said Tuesday that the pond will not be ready for fishing this summer or ice-skating next winter.

By August, a committee of town staff members should be able to recommend one of the engineering firms to be contracted to design the preliminary clean-up plans, Sprague said.

Before doing so, the committee will narrow the list of 12 firms to about a half-dozen and invite them to make presentations on their plans.

The local firms competing for the work are Weston & Sampson Engineers Inc. of Manchester, and in a joint bid, Meehan Associates Consulting Engineers of Manchester and Grumman Engineering Associates of Coventry. Eight other Connecticut firms are vying for the job, including Aegis Inc. of Westfield.

Minute model's mother moans

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Amy," is having a terrible time because although she is a beautiful girl, she's short. At 17, she's only 5 foot 1 inch, and she feels as though she is being left out of the modeling world because the agencies will not hire girls her size...

Do you know of any modeling agency that will take a girl of Amy's petite size?

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter needs to know that beauty comes in all sizes, and there are careers other than modeling.

I spoke to Nina Blanchard, owner of one of the top modeling agencies in the country, and she agrees with Amy; there is no market in modeling for a girl who is 5 foot 1 inch.

Blanchard said: "Tell Amy to dry her tears and learn to act because there is no height requirement in acting or commercials. And the rewards are just as good and sometimes better."

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I go to a restaurant we are served such large portions that we either have to ask for a doggie bag to take home what we can't eat, or we leave it on our plates to be thrown out.

At times we have ordered only one meal and an extra plate so we can split the dinner. This isn't always convenient because we both don't always want to eat the same thing.

The few restaurants that offer "lighter fare" serve diet foods. Why can't these restaurant owners realize that all people don't eat like harvest hands? I sometimes wonder if they realize how much food is wasted.

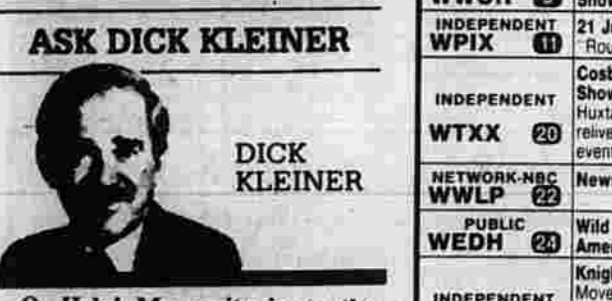

How can we get the restaurant owners to offer only half-portions? I can be the only person who writes to you to find out this problem corrected?

NOT THAT HUNGRY IN ORLANDO DEAR NOT THAT HUNGRY: If you are suggesting that restaurateurs offer half the food at half the price, please read on: Restaurant owners could not survive on half the price. Better leave the ways they are and give their customers doggie bags to take home their leftovers.

A. He was fouled out. As the focus of that show shifted to the Fonz (Henry Winkler), the family was simplified and Chuck was sacrificed. They sent him off to college, never to be seen or heard of again.

Q. Is the theme to "thirtysomething" available in record stores? — B.K., Racine, Wis.

A. Not at the present time. Q. Please explain why Peter Horton, who plays Gary on "thirtysomething," left the show. Will we be seeing him in another show or maybe a movie? — J.O., Erie, Pa.

A. Horton's ambition has long been to direct, and he decided to give that profession a shot. At the present time, he has no plans to resume acting. Q. Do you know if they are ever going to put out the complete episodes of the miniseries "North and South" on videotape for people to rent or buy? — F.S., Chicago

A. ABC tells me that, as of now, they have no plans to do so. That could, of course, change in the future, but don't let them in their stores presently. Along with ways to persuade children to eat nutritious foods, Ruland also provided low-fat, high-energy meal suggestions. But she says that some food, while providing vital nutrients, is too bland for children.

Open Forum Set an example

To The Editor:
Yesterday's Herald had a picture of President Bush, at the graduation exercises of the Air Force Academy, giving a congratulatory kiss to a female cadet who was graduating. This is, I believe, a breach of etiquette that seems trivial but has significant consequences.

In the latter part of the twentieth century the rules of etiquette regarding how men and women should treat each other have become somewhat confused. One basic rule, however, still seems to be valid. That is that we should treat other people with respect. In business, when men and women work together the general rule is to ignore gender. Within a work environment it is most polite for co-workers to treat each other the same, regardless of their sex. This rule of etiquette is even more appropriate at an Air Force Academy graduation.

It is extremely difficult to get into the Air Force Academy and even more difficult to be graduated from it. The cadets, in the picture, must have worked very hard to achieve this. She had to compete against other very intelligent, athletic and motivated cadets. Most of whom were men and (possibly) some of whom had to be convinced that a woman could measure up to the academy's standards. Choosing the Air Force as a career, she has (probably) had to work hard to be treated the same as a man. She will (probably) have to continue to work hard to retain this status. It is the policy of the Air Force and the law of the United States that she has the right to demand equal treatment.

The congratulatory kiss, from President Bush, contradicts her status as an officer in the United States Air Force. If I remember my military etiquette correctly, holding hands and kissing were not supposed to be done in public, while in uniform. I am sure that President Bush would not have given a congratulatory kiss to any male cadet who was graduating. As President, he is also the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces and, as such, he sets the tone for policy.

The official policy of the Air Force is to treat men and women in the Air Force, equally. This policy seems to have been validated by the experience of Operation Desert Storm. However, President Bush's congratulatory kiss, may be interpreted that women need not be treated the same as men, in the Air Force. It would be a shame if all the hard work this young woman to achieve her goal were negated by one thoughtless act. It would be a shame if all the effort to achieve sexual equality within the Armed Forces were negated by one thoughtless act. It is a shame that a person who can cause significant harm by one, seemingly trivial act would act thoughtlessly.

Limits on terms possible

During a recent debate on a campaign financing bill, Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., offered an amendment that would have limited U.S. senators to two consecutive six-year terms in office. He lost, 68-30.

The last time the Senate considered this matter was in 1947, during the debate on a constitutional amendment that would limit presidents to two four-year terms. Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel, D-Texas, proposed a one-year term for senators. He got only his own vote and lost 82-1.

Clearly, term limitation for legislators is an idea whose time is slowly coming. Actually, it's an idea that is slowly coming back. Term limits were included in the Articles of Confederation but were left out of the Constitution mainly because the convention delegates who wrote it in 1787 did not want to lead it down with detail. But Roger Sherman of Rhode Island spoke for many when he declared the nation should be governed by "citizen-legislators" who "return home and mix with the people. By remaining at the seat of the government, they would acquire the habits of the place, which might differ from those of their constituents."

Thanks to George Washington's decision to limit his own tenure to two terms, voluntary limits became a tradition in both the executive and legislative branches and were endorsed by the likes of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln. Prior to 1880, only about 54 percent of all incumbents sought re-election and only 43 percent retained their seats. Then came the standing committee system. Seniority and the crucial character trait of survivability became important. By 1902, 78 percent of incumbents were seeking re-election and 70 percent were succeeding. By 1952, those figures stood at 89 percent and 82 percent.

How have they managed to pull it off? With an immense insurance system they have constructed with your money. With computers that are bursting with names and addresses of environmentalists, veterans, business people, union members and ordinary voters. With free mailing privileges that permit them to send out millions of pieces of propaganda every year. With staff salary budgets of nearly $500,000 for each House member and between $1 million and $2 million for each senator. With countless hours of "free media." With liberal benefits. With unfair laws that allow than parades. The difference between the parade season and the last one can be seen by the change in buzz-phrases. Last year it was being said that "America was in decline." This year we're talking about a "New World Order."

There is a relationship between the two phrases: If America is in decline, an American in decline wouldn't have done it, and couldn't have done it. Only a global community with leadership allows us to think about a New World Order. The NWO is not substantial, yet it is only a moment—defined by negatives, not positives; defined by opportunities, not realities.

We have a world that is, finally, unthreatened by totalitarianism of the right (fascists, Nazis); unthreatened by totalitarianism on the left (Communists, Soviets); less threatened by bandit states. Churchill said if we could get through those messy parts of the 20th century, we could enter "the broad sunlit uplands."

The parades are saying that, thanks to America, such a broad sunlit unthreatening situation now exists, for the first time in a long time. That gives us an opportunity to let the blessings of free politics, free markets, free speech and free science hold sway. As and if that happens, the human condition can improve in ways yet unknown and unloved.

The parades tell us to seize the moment. If we use it wisely, we have the opportunity to let the sunlight in.

Trafficant lambasts fellows

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — He publicly calls members of Congress prostitutes. He says they don't own their vote. He says the Congress is too big, that half the members should pack their suitcases. He claims that if Americans really knew how their government was being run there would be a "revolution!"

Meet Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio. Since his election in 1984, he has crisscrossed one of the chummiest clubs in the world: the U.S. Congress.

He is a populist, a rebel with a thousand causes, but also one who speaks his mind. In the more lenient days of the House's past, Traficant might have blended in with a pack of establishment members. But he has turned so many heads with his foul mouth, messy hair and cowboy boots.

To his detractors, he is loud and hysterical. And even some of his colleagues who abhor his style acknowledge that Traficant may be in tune with how Americans really regard their government. Many of his Youngstown, Ohio, constituents think he would make a fine president.

Traficant represents a forgotten region of America, a region once dotted by factories and smokestacks, but now a graveyard of closed-down mills. His protest in Congress has been a continuous filibuster delivered in 60 second bursts. Every member of Congress is entitled under the rules to one-minute speeches on anything. Traficant is seldom tongue-tied.

"I find it highly suspicious when the American people know more about the political views of Captain Kangaroo than they do about the man who may next serve on the Supreme Court of this nation!"

"The American people are taxed on it. They are fed up with taxes, sales taxes, property taxes, boat taxes, goat taxes, luxury taxes. Now the president wants to tax their smoke, tax their snuff. What next, ladies and gentlemen? Will Congress tax sex in America?"

In this particular instance, I have resolved my doubts by determining to include this woman's opinion in our editorial column. Bishop Ronald H. Haines said in a written statement.

Elizabeth L. Carl, 44, is to be ordained tonight at the Church of the Epiphany, where she is an assistant minister.

Haines' statement said the prospective priest "has for a number of years lived in a loving and intimate relationship with another woman" and added that he, like many others, is attempting to "understand the mysteries of human sexuality."

"The Scriptures passages (on human sexuality) were written in one historical context and must be applied in another, and therein is our struggle," Haines said.

Carl will not be the first avowed homosexual to be ordained an Episcopal priest, but church officials were not able to say Tuesday how many others there are.

There is no church law forbidding ordination of homosexuals, but a resolution passed at the 1979 Episcopal Church General Convention said it was "not appropriate to ordain practicing homosexuals or those engaging in sexual relationships outside marriage," said Jeffrey Penn, a spokesman at the church's national headquarters in New York.

Episcopal bishops began ordaining women in 1974.

The SLA and Palestinians were seen masting armor on their opposite from lines on the bluffs between Sidon and the SLA-held Christian town of Jezzine.

The spokesman said Israeli-backed militiamen of the South Lebanon Army and Palestinian gunmen fought a one-hour artillery duel in the area after the air raid, but no casualties were reported.

"I was cutting fodder with a small tractor when I hit that rest in the earth. They swarmed over there, and they kept going after me. They chased me for about 250 feet," Diaz said.

"Many of them were swarming around me. I cut some branches and parties went away. They kept trying to chase them away. They kept coming at me, many settling on the place that was most exposed — my head. I kept squashing them with the palm of my hand," Diaz said.

Sample of the bees were sent to the USDA lab.

A swarm of Africanized bees trapped last October near the border city of Hidalgo was the first trapped in the United States. The bees crossed the Rio Grande from Mexico.

They are descendants of African queen bees that escaped from an exportation in Brazil in 1957 and began breeding with the more docile European bees normally used for agriculture in the Americas.

Civil rights bill heads for passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic civil rights bill is headed for House passage despite a veto threat from President Bush, following a biting debate that centered on the politics of race as much as on the measure itself.

"This is a shame and a disgrace that in 1991 we're still debating whether we should protect our fellow American citizens from discrimination," said Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., an organizer of sit-ins and freedom rides in the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., led the Republican contention that the Democrats' legislation would force employers to use hiring quotas to avoid lawsuits. "This bill codifies racial preferences... a quantum leap back from Martin Luther King's dream," he said.

"After a Bush alternative and a liberal plan were defeated Tuesday, the Democratic proposal was cleared for House passage today. Both sides watched for how close it would get to 268 votes, the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a veto.

The Senate has not acted on its version of the legislation. If a House-Senate compromise eventually emerges — and congressional leaders expect it will this year — the veto showdown would not come until final version cleared both houses and was sent to the White House.

The House bill is designed primarily to overcome a series of 1989 Supreme Court rulings that Long drawn-out court battles... (are) not a good solution," said Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y.

House Republicans were overwhelmingly with Bush. But his all-out veto threat was not a response to the court decisions, was beaten, 266-162.

Gay woman to be ordained as priest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Episcopal bishop of Washington says he will ordain a gay woman as a priest.

The decision announced Tuesday comes despite a resolution approved by a church convention in 1979 saying ordination of gay people was "not appropriate."

"In this particular instance, I have resolved my doubts by determining to include this woman's opinion in our editorial column. Bishop Ronald H. Haines said in a written statement.

Elizabeth L. Carl, 44, is to be ordained tonight at the Church of the Epiphany, where she is an assistant minister.

Israel continues Palestinian air strikes

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked guerrilla bases around Sidon today for the third time in 48 hours, killing three guerrillas and wounding nine.

The raid came a day after Israel's biggest attack on targets in Lebanon since the Jewish state invaded its neighbor in 1982.

The overall toll in this week's attacks was 22 killed and 62 wounded.

The spokesman said Israeli-backed militiamen of the South Lebanon Army and Palestinian gunmen fought a one-hour artillery duel in the area after the air raid, but no casualties were reported.

New tapes reveal Nixon maneuvers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Out of the echoes of long-ago conversations, taped by an indiscriminating robot system, come more of the workings of Richard Nixon's White House. And the words are just as earthy as they were years ago and just as fascinating.

Here is the president of the United States, vintage 1973, talking about John Dean, his chief counsel in the then-boiling Watergate scandal.

"I think he's out to save himself. He's going to play every card that he can and, a desperate man, he may want to bring the president down, too ... There's no other choice (than) to fight like hell. This is an evil man."

And at another point in that dinner-hour conversation with chief of staff H.R. Haldeman on April 25, 1973:

"I always wondered about that taping equipment, but I'm damn glad we have it, aren't you?"

As the whole world knows, it was that taping equipment with its ubiquitous microphones that did Nixon in.

The famed Watergate tapes, all 4,000 hours of them, have languished in the rot-proof vaults of the National Archives as if they were in a Pandora's Box waiting to be sprung open. Their public release has been argued and delayed endlessly by litigation.

On Tuesday, some 60 hours of recordings that had been used by Watergate prosecutors to build their case were let loose on the world. About one-fourth of them had never been heard by the outside world.

There again a listener could hear the broken, incomplete sentences spoken by Nixon and the characters that peopled the great Watergate drama: crewcut taskmaster Haldeman, bushy-browed No. 2 lieutenant John D. Ehrlichman, former Attorney General and Nixon pal John H. Mitchell, ruthless aide Charles Colson and presidential counsel Dean, who snatched to prosecutors.

If one didn't know the story, these transcripts would make no sense. They are difficult to follow even if you were prone — in Nixon's phrase — to wallow in Watergate.

On April 12, Colson assured Nixon that the man in the street "just doesn't give a damn" about Watergate.

"It's the elite," said the president. "It's with the elite," Colson agreed. "But the worse place it is, is with the party people."

Said Nixon: "That's what I mean by the elite. I mean the finance contributors and all those assholes."

On Sept. 15, 1972, when the Watergate burglars were indicted, Dean and Haldeman ruminated about how they were going to use the Internal Revenue Service and the FBI to get the Democrats after the election — and knock off a tax commissioner, too.

"I'll look forward to the time that we have the entrance to the Department of Justice and IRS totally under our control," the president said.

Dean mentioned he had approached IRS Commissioner Johnnie Walters about getting the tax files of a political enemy.

"Throw him out of the office," Haldeman said. "Dean's in control of the broken, incomplete sentences ..."

Entries up for 16th annual MCC Relays

By JIM TIERNY
Manchester Herald
MANCHESTER — Fifth-year director of the Manchester Community College New England Relays Jim Balcome was observing the action during the track and field portion of the Relays last year when he stopped in his tracks and concluded, "We've arrived."

A new and added twist, instituted by Balcome, to Sunday's race will be a 2.8-mile race/walk beginning 10 minutes after the road race.
In the track and field events, 125 entries have already been received along with 140 for the road race. Balcome expects close to 400 competing on both the track and road.

Mattingly provides spark as Yanks trim the Brewers

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly was concerned his presence in the lineup might slow the New York Yankees down. All his worries ended in the fourth inning.
Mattingly returned Tuesday night after missing six games with a dislocated pinky and hit a home run with two outs in the fourth to help spark the Yankees past the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3. It was the Yankees' ninth win in their last 12 games.
Todd Stottlemyre (5-2) set down the first 11 Yankees before Mattingly hit his fourth home run to give New York a 3-1 lead.
"Tom was a big run to get us going," Mattingly said. "Todd was in a groove and things seem to go our way after that. I wanted to contribute right away. I didn't want to bog the team down."

If California's Chuck Finley wasn't very sharp in pitching his second-bitter and striking out nine for the third time this season, somebody could be in for a humiliating night when he is.
"Finley got tougher as he went along," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after the Angels beat the Red Sox 3-0 Tuesday night. "But I think I've seen him a lot sharper than he was tonight."
