Ustinov Acceptable Rector Despite His Lack of Gravity

By LYNN HEINZELING
DUNDEE, Scotland (AP) — This is the place where Peter Ustinov has another calling. The actor and writer is a rector.

That does not mean he preaches sermons. A rector in a Scottish university is the students' spokesman and helps get publicity for the school.

Ustinov's ability as spokesman has never been questioned, but some people criticized in 1968 when the students of Dundee University chose Ustinov as their nonresident rector.

For one thing he had never got beyond prep school. For another, Dundee formerly was an integral part of famed St. Andrews, Scotland's first university, across the River Tay.

The Ultimate In Deficits

The state of Connecticut got a bargain the other day. But it was a bargain in a bad thing. Because it happened to be selling $75 million in state bonds at a moment when the bond market was favorable.

As it is, the state is scheduled to spend $46.70 to hire every $70 it borrows. This may compare unfavorably, but it is a bargain.

From any sound fiscal point of view, it can only be labeled a disaster.

The more the state does this, the more the state digs itself deeper into the financial hole from which it will never be able to pay cash for any of its capital expenditures.

Eventually the state gets so deeply in debt to such a deficit system that it is much too late to do anything about it.

But one can still figure out what the difference might have been, could the state ever have made some sincere effort to pay more and bond less as it went.

What the state pays out in interest alone in any modern biennium would have constituted, all by itself, a most generous state budget in other years.

If the state were free to spend, now, on its capital improvements, the amount of cash it now has to spend for interest on capital improvements borrowed for it could more than pay for its needs and also be free of any new mounting deficit.

The only good solution to the governmental debt problem is, of course, never to begin borrowing in the first place. Eventually, governments find themselves constrained to try to begin an attack on the problem through a program of gradual reduction of their bond indebtedness.

After the financial position in which the state found itself during the last session of the General Assembly, there was supposed to be some effort to restrain the use of new bond issues.

Yet the state has already issued so many bonds in this fiscal period as to find itself running a deficit in its appropriation for interest on bond issues.

That is about as unbound as any government can get, to be running a deficit in its fund for financing its deficits.

One Invention Never Comes: A scientist involved the humanities in testimony before a Congressional committee the other day.

Furthermore, Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, symbol of one of the many pinnaic achievements of science in our age, was invoking and paying tribute to the humanities as the tools man uses to recover from his occasional excesses of success with science.

As Dr. Seaborg pictures the human cycle, we occasionally get into periods of such tremendous scientific achievement that we are swept along until we may find ourselves far out of touch and contact and relationship with the institutions and values which once dominated our living.

We become conscious of a disorientation in the midst of our triumphs, an uncertainty with our scientific successes, and eventually we begin realizing that we had better reexamine all our progress to see what we think of the directions in which it has been taking us, and of the quality of the life it has been giving us.

The instruments of this self-examination, said Dr. Seaborg, are the humanities.

"They can conceivably lead us out of the 'despair and negativism' of our time. They ask not so much what man can do as why he should do one thing or another. They ask not how many days a man may live, but what kind of days they are. They ask not how far or fast a man may travel, but what he sees.

They ask not how many gadgets he has, but whether they free him as much as work does. If, in such examination, we find that all our glamorous and exciting scientific achievements have somehow left us less than we had before, that discovery of failure may, Dr. Seaborg feels, inspire us to draw back a little, and begin to do better.

He says that he believes "that one of the characteristics of the human race — possibly the one that is primarily responsible for its course of evolution — is that it has grown by creatively responding to failure."

"The only trouble is, if we may poke our way back toward what seems to us to be reality, that the chances still seem vastly greater that somebody will invent some new kind of bomb before anybody invents a new kind of human being."

After Bombs, Vandalism

After bombs were set off at the RCA, General Motors and Chrysler buildings in New York City Sunday night, the FBI was investigating the incidents. Police offered no indication as to whether they were related.

"We have taken this action to disrupt functioning of the machine of death and oppression," the caller said Sunday to the Associated Press. He said the caller was "second leading producer of armament for the United States government."

He made no mention of the subsequent New York bomb blast and said "we are a group of people" who vandalized three selective service centers for draft resisters Saturday.

Two persons were arrested in that incident.

NYC Graveyard Being Converted Into Playground

NYC Graveyard Being Converted Into Playground

NEW YORK (AP) — The 310-year-old graveyard at St. Mark's Church in the Bowery on the edge of the Lower East Side will be converted into a community playground.

The cemetery was founded by Peter Stuyvesant, who is buried in a vault under the floor of the church. Many of the graves have been covered with garbage and served as a hangout for alcoholics, drug addicts, dogs and juvenile delinquents.

The church's pastor, the Rev. C. Michael Allen, a 42-year-old cleric, said the conversion of the graveyard into a playground is being financed by a $100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Another bomb went off minutes later in a GE appliance repair store in Brooklyn, breaking four panes of glass and causing a window casing but causing no injuries.

Police then posted special security watches on other GE facilities in the city. Two hours later a foot patrolman discovered a cylindrical metal bomb in a brown paper package in front of GE's headquarters.

The New York bombings resembled those of last year, when in a four-month period bombs exploded at a United Fruit Co. pier, the Marine Midland Grace Trust Co., the Federal Office Building, the Armed Forces Industrial Center, the Reynolds and Reynolds shop in Washington, D.C., and the New York City Police Department.

Survey Indicates Boston Drivers' Tab Higher Than in Any Other U.S. City

BOSTON (AP) — A motorist here pays more to own and drive a car than in any other part of the country—according to a new survey by the Automobile Legal Association.

Based on an average of 16,000 miles a year, a Boston motorist would pay 18.66 cents (cents and hundredths of a cent) per mile to operate a medium sized four-door sedan while the New York City resident would pay 14.16 cents.

The ALA survey considers the insurance, taxes, depreciation, and maintenance costs for similar cars in 28 cities.

At a Boston driver whose car gets 14 miles to a gallon of premium gas would cost about 26 per cent less to operate than the national average.

The only operation in the high cost of motoring, according to the survey, is the cost of the gas. In Boston as in most of the 28 cities surveyed, the cost of the gas is 14.16 cents per gallon, compared to 12.82 cents in New York, 11.90 cents in Denver, Colo., and 11.90 cents in Portland, Ore., the "last" city surveyed.

Providence, R.I., is 13.04 cents; Hartford, Conn., 12.7 cents; Boston, 12.45 cents; Portland, Me., 11.83 cents.

To make the study, ALA used a model new car—Ford Mustang—driven mostly for business purposes and insured for liability and property damage.

The survey determined that a smaller car, costing about $2,800, would cost about 26 per cent less to operate than the national average.

Fourth Haskell Son Now An Eagle Scout

Boy Scout history was made in Manchester Friday night when Richard Haskell II, received his Eagle Scout badge at a Troop 91 Court of Honor at the Spyles School at 7:30.

He is the fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Robert Haskell to reach Eagle Scout. That's the record.

The Court of Honor followed a potluck. Mayor Nathan Agostini was guest speaker, and opening ceremonies were conducted by Dallas Dodger.

Haskell was escorted to the stage by Eagle Scouts Gary Roberts and Steven Valcutts to receive his badge. Clyde R. Miller, scoutmaster, gave the charge.

The contract for the badge was not executed to the stage by the three other sons, John, David, and Peter. Before Mr. Haskell raised his fourth son to the highest rank in scouting, he was a member of the troop.

The new Eagle Scout then performed his first official duty by pinning his mother with her fourth mother's Eagle pin.

Herald Kretz, chairman of the troop committee, presented Mr. and Mrs. Haskell with an appreciation for over 17 years of devoted service and help to the troop.

Third Straight HLC Title for East Catholic

By TOM BARRETT
What's blue and white and red all over? The answer to this was hardly a joke as far as the South Catholic High Rebels were concerned Saturday afternoon when they defeated the 113 Rebels, but their third straight Hartford County Conference title by a surprising 74-50 margin.

Revenge could have been counted on as an added incentive for the Rebels, but their eagles flew past them en route to their third straight Hartford County Conference title by a surprising 74-50 margin.

South staked only in the opening minutes of the contest when it led by a 6-2 lead. Three minutes later, the Rebels tied things up. The Rebels tied things up. The Rebels tied things up.

Youth Group Plays Well

By JOHN GRUBER
Maha Woiig, a sophomore in high school, provided the highlight of last evening's concert by the Greater Hartford Youth Orchestra, which numbers several Manchester students among its personnel. She played a movement from Bruch's G-minor Violin Concerto, a work of extreme difficulty.

Bryan Huling, a high school senior, was also featured in a concerto this time for trombone, an unlikely instrument, but one for which Mozart apparently wrote, a fact of which I was quite unaware. It is not quite as effective as the one he wrote for bassoon, but young Mr. Huling did very well with it on the whole.

The viola section is a little weak, but this is easily understandable since it is an instrument usually tucked after the violin, and these young people have scarcely had time to get acquainted with the viola before they were called upon to play. The idea deserves a lot of credit, and they deserve it. Next time you hear of a concert offered by a high school group, you'll be astonished right down to your corse.
