Second Avalanche Strikes in France

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP)—A new avalanche of snow pushed down on a convoy of vehicles in neighboring Bourg-St. Maurice today, damaging some of the vehicles, but there were no reports of death or injury.

Amplifiers, bulldozers and snow plows raked to the scene of the new slide 20 miles from Val d'Isere. Rescue workers said persons living in the area had been ordered to evacuate Tuesday night.

The official government weather forecast said, "The risk of avalanches remains serious in the area. One man died in another avalanche Tuesday in the French Alps near Tignes."

Seven Coast Guard vessels and four helicopters searched the shoreline for signs of the plane and possible survivors. Worcester was identified as a spokesman for Virginia Polytechnic. Worcester was in Connecticut Tuesday at a meeting of an accreditation team visiting the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London.

The building hit Tuesday was a low-cost ski center for persons under 20. Some 70 of the guests were having breakfast on the ground floor when the mass of fresh powder snow struck.

The snow packed the dining room almost to the ceiling and became rock-hard, according to the first rescuers on the scene, including other guests who used their hands and feet to dig into the snow.

Many of the 31 injured were recovered after the first heavy snowfall. Police and soldiers trained dogs and cleared equipment.

No avalanches have hit the resort town for the past 50 years.

Federal Housing Slights the Poor

WASHINGTON (AP)—Families with sizable assets—including one with $35,000 in savings—have been accepted into a special federal housing program while poor families in sub-standard dwellings remain on waiting lists, according to a government watchdog agency.

The GAO, the investigating arm of Congress, remonstrated Tuesday in its criticism of the four-year-old plan, designed to supplement the nation's public housing stock.

The report made clear it considered there to be serious failings in the administration and operation of the program.

Moynahan Trial State's Witness Put on Probation

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP)—A 26-year-old West Haven man received suspended sentences Tuesday in Superior Court on two charges resulting from P. B. O'Sullivan's one-man grand jury probe into a local stolen goods ring.

The man, John Bishop, had testified as a state's witness in the jury trial of Paul Moynahan, an suspended deputy superintendent of police.

After a two-to-five year prison sentence and a one-year term were suspended, Bishop was placed on probation for three years.

He had testified in the Moynahan trial that he stole a color television set and that he was present when the set was diverted to Moynahan's home.

A jury returned a guilty verdict last week against Moynahan on a charge of receiving stolen goods. Moynahan's counsel has filed a motion to set aside the verdict and a motion for a new trial.

Bishop pleaded guilty June 27 in Superior Court to a charge of conspiracy to commit larceny. The other charge on which Bishop was sentenced concerned breaking and entering with criminal intent in Cheshire on May 6, 1967. Bishop also had pleaded guilty to that charge.

Washington Whirl: D.A. Probes Alleged Theft Of Letters by Mrs. Onassis

WASHINGTON (AP)—The New York district attorney's office Tuesday took possession of four allegedly stolen letters written by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

The letters were seized at the auction gallery of Manhattan tax auctioneer Charles Hamilton, who had taken the correspondence on consignment for sale on March 12.

The letters, written to former one of the letters stolen from her husband, Mrs. Onassis said she had no knowledge of the existence of only one of the letters stolen from her husband.

The investigation will be pursued routinely, Rogers said. He said that the letters were stolen from Mrs. Onassis's New York law office. Assistant District Attorney Frank Rogers said in a telephone interview Tuesday night that no arrest warrant has been issued in the case.

The last letter was mailed shortly after Mrs. Kennedy wed Aristotle Onassis.

The action by the district attorney's office climaxed a bizarre sequence of events throughout the day.

The letters from the former first lady to Gilpatrick—warn and personal spent a period from April 18, 1963 to Nov. 13, 1968.

Plane Hijacker Surrenders: Says He's Tired of Fleeing

MADRID (AP)—An American who says he hijacked a Delta plane after three hours, said he was tired of fleeing.

The FBI said Rhodes was also accused of kidnaping the payroll clerk of the Amherst Coal Co. in Logan County, W. Va., two months before and holding him and his family until the company's $12,000 payroll was surrendered to him.

Rhodes said that if he was arrested, he would be glad to go to jail for nine months. He said that if he was not arrested, he would continue to flee.

Rhodes arrived in Zaragoza, 170 miles northeast of Madrid, on Monday and surrendered to American authorities at the U.S. Embassy official met him at the train this morning.

Rhodes said that if he was arrested, he would be glad to go to jail for nine months. He said that if he was not arrested, he would continue to flee.

Courreges Style Still High; Pucci Goes to New Lengths

Courreges arrived Tuesday for the opening of his spring collection. Prices range from $250 to $400.

Pucci, on the other hand, is going to greater lengths. He considers the minimalist young and fresh one visual expression of a permissive society.

Pucci's prints started as a chain symbol for the well-to-do, but have expanded to areas like underbusts, purses, perfume, ski clothes and soon, home furnishings.

A Speech For The Times

If we in Connecticut are honest... we should be able to have trust in us, particularly by one of our own.

It would be a tremendous thing... if we in Connecticut should prove able to galvanize ourselves into some greater vigor and consistency of social action in the directions which are at once so necessary and so difficult.

But it seems more likely to prove important and epochal for its long-range effects than for any instant miracles. It might be recognized, some day, as the speech which drew this country together into one honestly motivated people.

What the Ribicoff speech has done is to give us, from a political figure in a strikingly ideal situation for such a function, the landmark words which tell us exactly where we stand on our racial issue. These words are already out there, in the national consciousness. They cannot be blotted out again.

These are the words to which we refer: "The North is guilty of monumental hypocrisy in its treatment of the black man."

"Without question, Northern communities have been as systematic and consistent as Southern communities in denying to the black man and his children the opportunity that exists for the white people.

"The plain fact is that racism is rampant throughout the country. It knows no geographic boundary and has known none since the great migration of rural blacks following World War II.

"The institutional roots of racism — which dehumanize our prejudices and make it easier for us to defend them — are as deeply embedded in the large metropolitan communities of the North as they are in the small rural communities of the South.

"Our problem is not only the dual systems of education which exist 16 years after the Supreme Court struck them down in 1954.

"The more fundamental problem is the dual society that exists in every metropolitan area — the black society of the central city and the white society of the suburb.

"Massive school segregation does not exist because we have segregated our schools but because we have segregated our society and our neighborhoods.

"That is the source of the inequality, the tension and the hatred that disfigure our nation.

"We may flinch before some of the things these words seem to ask us to try to begin to do.

"We may fail to provide much initiative and energy for the kind of action such words should lead toward.

"But we can, for a beginning, be proud it is our State and our Senator have given this speech to the nation.

Frictions And Factions

Ten families live on our street. Three are Catholic, three are Jewish, and four are Protestant. One of the Protestant families is Negro. It would be difficult to find 10 households more varied in their tastes and opinions, and yet we all get on exceedingly well. To my knowledge, there has never been even a small misunderstanding among any of my neighbors, and I have begun to wonder why.

Such harmony is not the human way. Friction is a common by-product of man contact. Why is it our street is free of the normal measure of neighborly tensions?

The answer is not entirely admirable. Neighbors are a little like relatives — they're stuck with each other. So there is some impetus to avoid topics of conversation likely to generate electricity. When the neighbors get together, the talk seems deliberately impersonal, centering mostly on home improvements, real-estate taxes, the local school, and where — are you going — on your vacation.

Some of the subjects assiduously avoided are: The Pope's position on birth control; the attitudes of American Jews toward Israel, and family life among the Negro poor. These are much more interesting topics than ever arise at PTA meetings, but they are difficult topics for a motley group of neighbors to handle safely. There is too much danger that somebody will drop a remark that might be construed as hateful by somebody else.

And nobody on our street is eager to jeopardize the friendly, if slightly innocuous, relationships that exist among the neighbors.

The policy is useful and probably wise for people who live on the same street. It is less useful and less wise when it is applied to American society as a whole. National leaders and commentators frequently dodge difficult subjects for the same reason: neighbors don't want to hurt the feelings of this group or that.

There is, for instance, too little general discussion of the poor, whatever the need for people to restrict their offspring to the number they can afford to raise decently. Moreover, with an eye on population congestion, there should be greater encouragement of small families to matter what the household income may be.

Of the two concerns, the first is the more important in this country. It is contrary to the family's welfare and the general welfare for poor women to produce baby after baby. Both mother and children frequently become a burden to society, but the worst of it is that mother and children become steeped in squalor and misery.

When we think of the poor today, we think of the Negro poor. Thus the appellation that the poor are encouraged to limit their families is interested by black firebrands as a formula for "genocide." One might infer from this that the Negroes should meet in Negroes' out-breeding whites.

But it is obvious that the happiness and well-being of the poor, whatever their race, would be served if they brought their families under control. A poor husband would be less likely to desert his wife, thus dumping them on the welfare rolls, if he felt he could support them. It is easier to support one or two children than seven.

And a word about the so-called welfare mothers and their campaigns for "dignity." The welfare system in America deserves to be reformed, but it's doubtful any system of public assistance can offer dignity, although Mr. Lehman is also the Executive Secretary of the Hartford City Manager.

Another thread subject in our society is U.S. policy toward Israel and the attitude of American Jews toward that country.

I can't imagine an American Jew not feeling sentimental about Israel. The attacks of that land cannot be divorced from the memory of centuries of incredible persecution, and many Israelis experienced the horrors of Hitler at first hand. Israel is more than a renewed homeland. It is a sanctuary. Any Jew who has the wit and decency to empathize should have no trouble understanding this special feeling of 3 per cent of his countrymen.

But that is not the same as saying that "the security of Israel is vital to American interests." It is demonstrably not vital. If there were no Israel, would the peril to the United States be greater than at present? In what way does Israel's existence bear upon the security of America?

From the look of things, the Arab world seems unlikely to become a fortress of anything. And it might be argued that the Middle East confrontation poses more of a threat to U.S. security than a Middle East without an Israel.

I suspect that the Israelis themselves are not American. And certainly the Israelis have shown they can take care of themselves. (It would be pleasant if some other countries friendly to the United States were so successful.)

So the only intelligent policy for the U.S. Government is to continue to do what it's doing: Maintain the best relations possible with both sides and, in the event of a crisis, take whatever action is necessary to protect American interests.

To confuse this aim because of political pressure at home would be a disservice to all Americans.

The subjects I've touched on this week are ticklish because they rub against the emotions. But that's the kind of subject always most in need of discussion, because although misunderstandings might arise, there is no other way to eventually reduce the electricity.

So I hope some readers will be generous and count to 10 before sending me fiery letters. As it is, my next-door neighbor will be reading this and he'll probably never lend me his lawnmower again. EDWIN A. ROBERTS JR. IN THE NATIONAL OBSERVER

The Town Council and the Board of Education of West Hartford certainly deserve a round of applause for standing their ground and turning down Hartford's request for the use of Hall High School.

It is indeed refreshing and unusual this day and age to witness a Town's governing body responding to the understandable waxes of protest of their citizens against a well organized overplay by the Big City schemers.

But it is obvious that the happiness and well-being of the poor, whatever their race, would be served if they brought their families under control.

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

CAIRO — President Nasser's candid admission that neither Egypt nor its Arab allies have enough pilots to fly warplanes already in the Arab arsenal was only the tip of the very large iceberg of his growing problems.

The hard fact beneath that frank statement, made in a rare television interview (Metropolitan) last week, is the charismatic leader who has dominated Egypt and the Arab world for almost 20 years confronts two harsh conditions: The prospect that President Nixon will send another 50 Phantom fighters to Israel, further enhancing the Soviet Union's dangerous influence in Egypt, and the fact that political militants here, both in the Arab Socialist Union (ASU) and the army, are pressing on Nasser to forget the situation of peaceful settlement and grid for a 100-year war against Israel to regain occupied Arab territory, no matter what the consequences.

At a recent secret session of the ASU's central committee, for example, Nasser without virtually alone the challenge by militant activists to move to a total war footing. As more Israeli warplanes make their freedom of passage felt over Egypt, the more difficult will Nasser find it to keep the political solution open. Still, Nasser will never allow himself to be outflanked by this growing radicalism. If it gets too strong, he will join and lead it.

Complicating the political equation are indications that the Soviet Union, the chief and only important weapons supplier to Egypt, is putting stiff new conditions on President Nasser's latest request for help. He wants better small bombers capable of responding to Israeli air strikes on Cairo and more modern anti-aircraft missiles capable of ending Israel's total control of Egyptian airspace.

Nasser almost certainly flew to the Soviet Union on Jan. 23, and strongly hinted as much in his Metromedia television interview. (One piece of evidence: the otherwise odd fact that one of Moscow's few VIP planes, a gleaming IL-26 with gilded toilets, arrived here unannounced on that day, flew north and returned to Cairo the early afternoon of Jan. 26.)

The relationship had at least a visible chance of improving after Secretary of State William P. Rogers's notable speech in November pledging a "balanced" U.S. policy in the Middle East. For example, Nasser specifically agreed two weeks ago that King Hussein of Jordan should explore the settlement possibilities in proposals covering the occupied West Bank and Jerusalem which Washington made to the Big Four in December.

But President Nixon's decision to give a quick reply to the Israeli request for a new batch of Phantoms was a heavy blow to this highly tentative approach, because Nasser now assumes that the reply will be yes. If it is, it will fortify both political movements now working against him: It will raise the Soviet asking price for giving him more modern equipment and it will increase the rising clamor of militants at home that Nasser end the search for a political settlement and espouse an all-out war policy.

Accordingly, Nasser finds his situation almost certainly flew to the Soviet Union on Jan. 23, and strongly hinted as much in his Metromedia television interview.

Book Review

EDITOR'S NOTE: Stefan Lorant, a noted authority on Abraham Lincoln, is the author of a forthcoming book, "Lincoln: The Picture Story of His Life." The book is the culmination of 30 years' digging into Lincoln's pictorial history. It contains a hitherto unpublished photo of the 16th president, and a mocking piece of doggerel that had been lost for 104 years after Lincoln wrote it.

Lorant, a native of Budapest, came to the United States in 1940. He had already earned a reputation as "the father of the modern picture magazine." The following article was written for The Associated Press.

By STEFAN LORANT For my book on Abraham Lincoln I chose 103 different photographs of the Civil War president. Therefore, one might assume that Lincoln enjoyed having his picture taken. Nothing could be farther from the fact.

Lincoln disliked facing a camera. He went to the White House photographer's studio only because, after his nomination, pictures had to be sent across the country to show the electorate that the Republican presidential nominee was not "half-alleged and half-horse" as his opponents charged.

In 1860 newspapers could not print pictures for the process had not been invented yet. So thousands of photographs had to be distributed. Both Alexander Heiler in Chicago and Matthew B. Brady in New York photographed Lincoln.

But after his election Lincoln began to grow a beard and his pictures were necessary. The story goes that Lincoln grew a beard at the suggestion of 12-year-old Grace Bedell. It is a charming story, but one wonders if it is true. Lincoln had an uncanny instinct for what is now called public relations. He wanted to present himself as a kind of president, particularly since he was the first Republican party president.

All 15 presidents before him had been clean-shaven. Lincoln grew a beard. And to enhance his 6-foot-4-inch height, he put on a stovepipe hat which made him look like a giant.

The day after he arrived in Washington on Feb. 24, 1861, he went to Brady's photographic Parlor on the corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and Seventh Street. He sat himself down in the camera, said nothing, and appeared indifferent to what was going on around him.

Every time Lincoln faced a photographer his expression froze into a smile. Nothing life vanished from his face. His son Robert could not understand why his father "smiled" in a melancholy mood before the camera; why he always seemed so sad, so gloomy.

Among the 103 photographs I chose there is not a single one depicting Lincoln with a smile. Yet, when he told a story he laughed, and he smiled often.

His secretary John G. Nickey noted "laughter" was powerless before a face that moved through a thousand delicate gradations of line and contour, light and shade, sparkle of eye and curve of the lip, in the long gamut of expression from grave to gay, and back again from the rolicking playfulness of laughter to that serious, faraway look that with prophetic intuitions beheld the awful panorama of war, and heard the sobs of grief and suffering. There are many pictures of Lincoln; there is no portrait of him."

So why did he look so melancholy? Was it self-consciousness? Was it because he knew that people considered him ugly?

People called him everything from "original gorilla" to "hunch-backed, pigeon-toed, shag-headed shapeliness skeleton." A stationer in New York would not hang his name on a photograph because "he would not have such an ugly-looking fellow's picture in the store."

When he posed before a camera he looked dejected. One observer noted that "melancholy dripped from him," yet when he talked or told a story his face grew animated, and "the dull, listless features dropped like a mask. The melancholy shadow disappeared in a twinkling."

Herman White of the Chicago Tribune wrote of Lincoln: "The eye began to sparkle, the whole

Book Review

Paul Belmondo and Dustin Hoffman popularizing the "homey" hero, many think of Lincoln as good looking.

Some saw him differently even in his lifetime. The poet Walt Whitman said Lincoln had "a face like a Hoosier Michael-angelo, so awful ugly it becomes beautiful." And Lincoln's one-time law partner, Billy Herndon, said, "Sometimes it appeared to me that Lincoln's face was just fresh from the presence of his Creator."

THE BODY HAS A HEAD. By Gustav Eckstein. Harper, $12.95. To say that this book is about the human body is only a start. science, theater, art—even com- on Freud, the analysts, sleep, dreams and computers.

This is a big book, almost 600 pages. Occasionally the author becomes so engrossed in providing a complete exposition that his narrative slows down. But Eckstein has smoothed out those humps of physiology, and describes landmark experiments. He tosses in odd facts: The sense of smell registers "garlic" if one molecule in 50,000 is in the air. Male canaries have singing sort of informative, mind-opening book that prunes the reader to keep up with its intellectual challenges. And such a book comes along rarely.

South Windsor Board Gets Report On Problem Pupils

While crowds of enthusiastic teenagers cheered their teams on to basketball glory in the nearby gymnasium, a more serious Board of Education met in the high school library to discuss the latest state report on the state of education in South Windsor.

Several changes in school policy were voted on during the course of the meeting. Superintendent of Schools Warren J. Keane reported that the school year as a whole had been a successful one.

Another facet of the department's activities involves psychological testing. This is done to identify children who are having difficulty in school.

The program is educational. The officials point out, and it is not compulsory. There is no penalty for non-compliance.

Tons of Debris Line Streets In Carnival Wake

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mardi Gras has flamed out and all along downtown streets and sidewalks began the job of cleaning up thousands of tons of debris, beer bottles and paper cups.

Half a million persons celebrated the Carnival, but the cleanup was a daunting task.

Preliminary C-DAP Goals Get Cursory Board Review

The preliminary goals and objectives of Manchester's proposed Community Development Action Plan (C-DAP), received a cursory review by the Board of Directors last night...

C-DAP Director John Harkins, at the start of last night's informal meeting, distributed copies of the goals and objectives to each director...

Director James Farr requested that "the next time we get C-DAP data, please get it to us in enough time to study and digest..."

An open, public meeting has been scheduled for next Thursday, when Manchester citizens may discuss the goals and objectives...

Among some of the recommended goals and objectives are: to establish a cultural affairs program, under a full-time professional director...

The establishment of a regulatory agency for industrial parks, a proposal to erect a one-million gallon storage tank near the old Nike Site...

Realistic pay for the directors, to compensate for time devoted to various needs and recreation here, safety here, cultural here, and so forth...

Encouragement of joint ownership units, such as condominiums and cooperatives...

Police and fire response to all emergency calls within five minutes of the call...

When broiling meats or bacon on a rack, place one or two pieces of dry bread in the broiler pan to soak up the drippings...

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Peril at the Drive-In

Not all the trials and tribulations at a drive-in movie take place on the screen. Sometimes, misfortune also befalls a member of the audience. If a patron does suffer an accidental injury, may he hold the management liable?
 To begin with, the management has a basic duty to maintain the premises in safe and orderly condition. Take this case:
 A drive-in had a special "KID-DY ZONE" where children could amuse themselves while their elders were watching the movie. On a roadway running alongside this zone, debris of all kinds was allowed to accumulate. One evening, the tire of a passing car hurled a bottle cap into the play area, striking a child in the eye.
 In a court test, the theater was held liable for the child's injury. The judge pointed out that similar incidents in the past had given the management plenty of warning that the littered roadway was a source of danger.
 Furthermore, the management is supposed to enforce prudent rules of safety. In another case, a theater made no effort to keep its patrons from sitting outside their cars on warm evenings. Yet it provided no lighting for the aisles—and no attendants to guide the oncoming vehicles.
 When a car struck a patron sitting near an aisle, the theater was held responsible. The court said the way the place was run, it was "a stage setting for tragedy."
 Still, some mishaps are not fairly blamable on the management. Thus:
 A patron heading for the snack bar tried to walk through the narrow space between a parked car and a listening post. Bumping into the connecting cord, he knocked the speaker box against a woman seated inside the car, inflicting an injury on her head.
 The hapless woman never could locate the walker. So she decided to sue the theater instead, arguing that its arrangement of listening posts and connecting cords was a "dangerous condition."
 However, the court held that the theater was not at fault than she was. The judge said the management could reasonably assume that the average patron, knowing how a drive-in theater is set up, would have better sense than to walk into a cord.

Still Want To Bet On A Horse?
 Ocala, Fla. (AP) — Man still can travel a mile on horseback much faster than he can on foot, but in the past 100 years he's gained ground over his four-legged friend.
 In 1875 the world speed record for man on horseback was 1:43 1/2, set by an unidentified fellow on a horse named Kaed. At that time the record for a man on foot was 4:24 1/2, set by Walter Slade of England.
 The present record for a mile by a horse is 1:21.4, held by a horse named Dr. Fager with Braulio Baeza aboard. The present record for man on foot is 2:31.4, set by Jim Ryan of the United States.
 Thus, while the horse has improved his speed for the mile by about nine seconds, man has upped his speed by 38 seconds.
 "The training techniques of preparing an athlete for track and field events has been greatly improved even over the last 10 years," Nerald said, "while horse trainers perfected their art the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th century."
 "Also, in the last few years there has been a great improvement in the speed of the racing surface for a man. For a long time he was running on cinders; now he is on a hopped-up track. Horses have been racing on the same kind of dirt track for almost a century."
 Another important factor, said Nerald, is that track and field athletes may use drugs, but drugs are outlawed in horse racing.
 "It is significant that the horse cracked the great speed barrier, the 1:35 mile, in 1962 where man didn't beat the four minute mile until 27 years later," Nerald said.
 Experts agree that Dr. Fager's mile record was by far the most impressive. He carried 122 pounds—two more than any other record-breaker—and won the Washington Park Handicap at Chicago by 10 lengths on Aug. 24, 1968.
 "What is the ultimate for a mile for a man on horseback?" "I seriously doubt there will be a 1:31 mile in this century," Nerald said. "If you look at the fastest fractions of the record races by intentionally buckpasser and Dr. Fager, you would get a 1:31 mile."
