NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Demonstrators trickled into New Haven today for a rally in support of Black Panthers on trial here for murder and kidnaping. Two companies of National Guardsmen — totaling almost 500 men — reported for duty early this morning.

A spokesman for the May Day committee, one of the organizers of the rally, said in mid-morning he believed about 2,000 demonstrators from out of town were in New Haven. He said he expected the main body of demonstrators to arrive later in the day. Rally sponsors had predicted a turnout of 35,000.

Four thousand federal troops were standing by in neighboring states and the entire Connecticut National Guard was alerted. A six-man Justice Department team of observers, headed by Assist. Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus, was in New Haven to relay information to department officials if state authorities decide federal troops are needed.

At midmorning, however, there was no evidence of uniformed officers around the New Haven Green, where the rally was to take place, across from Yale University.

Capt. Stephen J. Rechner, spokesman for the National Guard, said guardsmen would be stationed at posts at the city to "be deployed as needed on the request of civil authorities."

The Chicago 7 members were on hand for a morning news conference during which they stressed their feeling of solidarity with the Panthers and accused government authorities of a conspiracy against the Panthers.

"The U.S. government has its hands dripping with the blood of the Panthers and other black people," said David Dellinger, one of the 7.

The speakers said they hoped to keep the rally peaceful and would not allow the authorities "to provoke us" with a troop buildup.

Rechner said, meanwhile, the rifles the guardsmen would be carrying would not be loaded. He said the guardsmen would carry ammunition in belt pouches.

About 2,000 persons gathered on the Green late in the morning. Some lined up at a special cafeteria table set up in the Yale freshman quadrangle by rally organizers.

Before the news conference, representatives of Negro Puerto Rican groups in New Haven announced they had formed a "Community Patrol" to coun-

What's Big Rally Really All About?

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Justice for eight imprisoned Black Panthers is the issue behind a mass rally today — justice through a fair trial or justice by stopping the trial. The organizers of the demonstration do not agree which tactic to pursue.

Black Panther Chairman Bobby G. Seale, facing trial with seven fellow Panthers charged in connection with the slaying last May of another Panther, says he anticipates a fair trial.

"I say we want a fair trial; and I respect your Honor very much for allowing me to have a fair trial," he told Superior Court Judge Harold Mulvey at a bail hearing last week. The hearing is scheduled to continue May 5.

Although the other defendants and the Panther organizers of the rally do not rule out the chance of a fair trial, they are not optimistic about it.

The say Black Panthers have been denied justice in previous encounters with the judicial system, citing Huey Newton's manslaughter conviction in California and Seale's four-year contempt-of-court sentence in Chicago.

A Panther spokesman for the New Haven defendants said

Cambodian Policy Triggers Protests

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
President Nixon's revelation of new action in Cambodia set off swift and explosive reaction on some of the nation's college campuses.

Protest demonstrations continued into the early morning hours after the President's televised speech, and there were many calls for class boycotts.

Other students appealed for support of the President's action.

Princetonians called for a nationwide student strike. Nixon was burned in effigy at Schenectady, N.Y., an ROTC office was firebombed at Hobart College, Geneva, N.Y., and police moved in with tear gas and arrested two persons at Stanford University in California after a rock-throwing, window-smashing melee.

The son of astronaut Walter Schirra Jr., 18-year-old Walter Schirra 3d, was hospitalized after he was roughed up early today on the Stanford campus. Young Schirra is a member of the conservative Free Campus Movement, and university officials said he was injured while trying to prevent violence.

During the day, the protest grew. Among campuses planning antiwar rallies were Harvard, MIT, and other Boston area colleges; Indiana University; Purdue University; Union College in Schenectady, N.Y.; the University of Cincinnati, and Bloomfield, (N.J.) College. Frequently the rally calls were accompanied by calls for student strikes.

At Princeton about midnight, after a two-hour open forum that followed the President's speech, 2,800 students and faculty members voted 2 to 1 to stage a general strike.

One effect of the strike would be to cancel out Princeton's biggest social event, Houseparties Week-end, Princeton has 3,800 undergraduate students.

Yale students, who were already on strike and planning massive demonstrations today in support of the Black Panthers, showed no immediate reaction to Nixon's speech. Most of those who did not favor the pro-Panther protest had left the campus, while the militants were busy with preparations to demonstrate for the Panthers, who they feel have been denied justice in Connecticut.

Susan Pendleton at 100: Still Hoarding Life

By CLEMELWELL YOUNG
(Herald Reporter)

Miss Susan Pendleton of Hebron, poet, journalist, teacher, is 100 years old today. At 95 she was so furious with the honor die her age that she tore up all her birthday cards and scattered them in the garden. The nurses at the Natchaug Nursing home in Willimantic will probably forswear such protest this year. With a round of relatives due tomorrow for a gala Saturday afternoon celebration, Susan may even submit with a smile.

Susan — anyone who knows her realizes how preposterous it sounds to call her "Miss Pendleton" — contributed the daily news of Hebron to area newspapers almost half her life, limiting herself in her later years to the Manchester Evening Herald. She reluctantly retired from this part-time position in 1966, at the age of 96, but continued to submit occasional columns of Hebron history and sagacious digressions when her spirit moved and her memory cooperated.

One such column, appearing in the Herald last June, successfully combined a comparison of the number of pockets on men's and women's clothing, the fact that some people have a fear of being buried alive and a history of the Hebron Post Office from 1801 to 1968. Her daily Herald columns, equally shrewd and entertaining, were read far beyond the Hebron town line.

The daughter of a scholarly Hebron physician and a mother who loved poetry, Susan graduated from what is now Eastern Connecticut State College in 1901 and taught school in Hebron and Columbia before she went into journalism. She also assisted with Saint Peter's School of Liberal and Humane Studies, a scholarly summer school founded in 1923 under the auspices of the Episcopal Church in Hebron. On the faculty of this school was Austin Warren, a young English professor who later became a well-known critic and author, "but, more importantly, Susan's friend and mentor."

Susan would much prefer to be thought of as a poet. She has been scribbling away all her life, urged on at various stages by the late Professor Morse Allen of Trinity College, poet Willbert Snow, now retired from Wesleyan University, and Professor Warren, recently retired from the University of Michigan.

Susan's poetry has appeared in newspapers and "little magazines," and is anthologized in the 1932 edition of "Connecticut Poets." Prof. Warren selected 24 of what he considered her best poems for publication in a booklet, "They Will Remain," in 1966. The following year, at the age of 97, she received a citation from the Fine Arts Foundation of Connecticut "for her contribution to the field of American poetry."

Spurred by this acclaim, by Prof. Warren's friendship, criticism and encouragement, and by the fact that her manuscripts are now being collected for the archives of the University of Connecticut library in Storrs, Susan continued to write. The following, sent to friends, is among those written within the past two years. Titled "Not Yet?" it seems to symbolize her passionate interest in the simple things of life, and living:

I am not ready to die just yet.
Lend me another day.
I want to climb up to the garret again
And hear what the old boards say,
To lean my cheek on the dusty pane
And gaze at the far away sky.

Then find my way down on the rickety stairs,
Hoard it all in my heart to stay.

Many of Susan's later poems were written in the dark hours of the night during bouts with insomnia. Great-nephew Horace Sellers, who shared her home on Hebron Ave. after her sisters, passed away (Clara, at the age of 94), has kept Susan's downstairs bedroom-study just as she left it when she went to the nursing home last October. Letters and scraps of paper bearing poems lie on the table and shelves, or are hidden in the wall of books. Her venerable typewriter waits on the table by the window which overlooks the yard now running green and purple and gold with spring.

Susan asked to go to the nursing home last fall, not giving up her indomitable spirit, but tired of coping with a body that insisted on growing old. A broken hip had mended in this same nursing home about 10 years ago. Various other ailments had been cured — partly to spite the doctors, she said. But periodic shots of vitamin B-complex by the public health nurse could not stave off time forever. Susan agreed with relatives that she shouldn't be left alone in the old brick colonial while Horace was busy teaching or playing the organ.

Not one to send out change of address notices, Susan left her friends wondering what happened when the sprightly letters and columns of Hebronalia suddenly ceased. But Horace supplied the answer.

Last week Susan received early well-wishers while encooed in her wheel chair outside her cheerful room in the Natchaug Home, which is set on the side of a quiet hill outside the bustle of the city of Willimantic.

She was reading "A Taste for Honey" by H.F. Heard, true to her taste for mystery stories. As usual, all natural conversation was one-way. Being quite deaf (she admits it now), Susan reads her guests' side of the conversation as they hastily write it out on a scratch pad. She smiles, laughs, asks questions.

"What do you think of the President — Oh dear, I can't remember his name — Nixon, that's it — What do you think of him? I can stand him better than I thought. He's got some good points."

From Susan Pendleton, a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, all her life in the midst of staunchly Republican Hebron, this was quite an admission.

A custodian walked, by, bent over Susan briefly. "How are you today?" he asked. "Big funny man," Susan called after him. She always did have a way with men.

Asked if she had written anything since she entered the home, Susan said no. Evidently the necessary regimentation of an institution does not lend itself to quiet ponderings on life at midnight. "Tell Tony (her Herald editor) I think of him often but I can't write anymore," she said.

"Aren't you pleased to have reached 100?"

"No!" she replied, shaking her new short hairdo, which was very becoming. "I'm not. I wish I were dead."

"If you're wishing," she was asked, "why not wish for 16 or 25 instead?"

She accepted the suggestion, which is verified in one of her recent poems, entitled "Mother Earth":

I think I would like to be living once more.
It was sweet, it was hard. It was cruel.

Miss Pendleton in 1908

I would like to find out who picked up the thread,
Who came out ahead in life's quarrel.
I would like to fight life all over again,
Brave it out as I tried to before.
I don't like the angels. I don't like the saints.
I don't like the sanctified choir.
I would like to come back to the earth that I know,
Fight it out to the end of the score.

Miss Susan Pendleton

Wall Street's Problems Make Prediction Difficult

By JOHN CUNIFF, AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street is getting uneasy with new problems these days before it is able to rise above the old ones.

Perhaps never before has there been such a confluence of muddy issues spilling onto the desks of analysts, problems with which even the State Department foreign affairs specialists would have difficulty.

The association of the war in Indochina is giving nightmares to analysts who based their hopes of a rising market on a reduction of hostilities in that area. Their theory in recent weeks has been this:

"War might have been good for industry in the past, but it surely isn't anymore. Look at those terrible profit statements. And see how war has brought inflation. A cool Southeast Asia would warm the stock market just enough."

Although one war is one war, too many for analysts who understand balance sheets but not balance of power, these securities scholars are also being forced to keep an eye on the continued and potentially explosive Mideast.

Foreign affairs are very much a factor in this market, but analysts of foreign affairs by securities men lack credibility. Few investors are willing to buy stocks because of a military or political forecast by a securities analyst. And so they remain almost catatonic.

Domestically speaking, it is also difficult to determine the thinking of those who guide the American economy. High interest rates were supposed to curtail heavy spending. But something has gone wrong with that theory.

Capital spending plans—the plans of business and remodeling and expanding—were supposed to be falling off by now. Instead, business seems to be raising its intentions to spend.

That, at least, is the opinion of some private economists who have surveyed the field, and whose conclusions include a simple forecast of still higher interest rates and a prediction of a possible money panic.

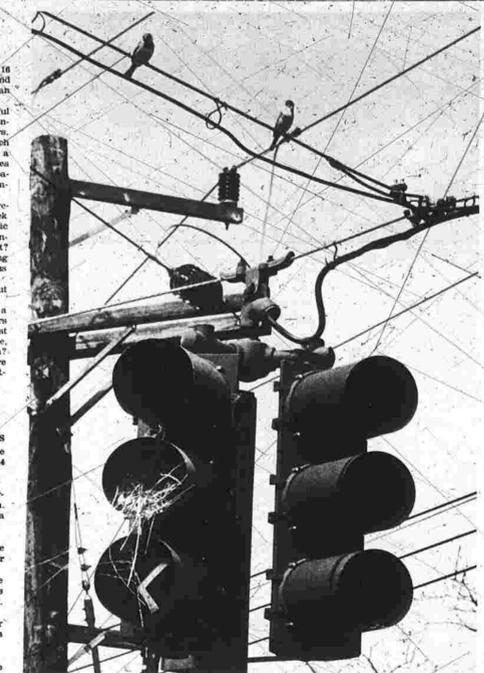

Elliot Janeway, an author, economic consultant and financial adviser, has been warning for some time about the possible panic. He sees business and government locked in a battle to borrow from an insufficient supply of lendable funds. He suggests credit controls, and possibly a continued market dip.

The continued demand for money by corporations is explained partially by their need to modernize in order to make themselves more productive and thus offset the higher costs of inflation. But in so doing they contribute to inflationary pressures.

It isn't only the solvency of other companies, or of the entire economy, that concerns many analysts today. Their own firms are in trouble, many of them anyway, and this fact contributes to a lack of investor confidence.

It seems reasonable to assume, for example, that a small investor "who reads of mismanagement, paperwork problems and thefts in brokerage houses isn't going to be enthusiastic about turning over his money for investing.

An ironic coup de gras may have been administered to this market, in which about $200 billion have been trimmed from

Zoning Officer Issues Warning To Auto Shop

Thomas C. Monahan, the town zoning regulations enforcement officer, has sent a letter to Bruce A. Cantrell and George Trueman, the owners of Foreign Cars of Manchester regarding the many complaints he says he has received about the operations of the car repair shop at 174 W. Center St. Monahan listed five stipulations that were laid out when owners of the shop, said today the zoning board of appeals granted the special exception letter for the foreign car repair shop.

The five conditions set by the zoning board when they granted the special exception were: Repairing to be done between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.; no repairs on Sunday; in violation of the zoning regulations to be done inside the building; no street parking; no junk outside of the building.

Bruce A. Cantrell, one of the owners of the shop, said he sometimes returns to the shop on his own time, but nobody has come to the building, he said, "all the cars are movable; they all have engines."

He said no one had complained about his operation since he read about some complaints in the paper a while ago, but nobody has come to him to complain. Cantrell said he thought the zoning regulations were being enforced in a well-blended manner, the "foot in well-blended."

Bennet Teachers of the Year

Miss Martha Gunther, reading consultant, and David Nording, industrial arts teacher, voted "teachers of the year" by the student body of Bennet Junior High School. The awards were given to them at a tea held yesterday afternoon in the Franklin Building cafeteria. The plaque, for her outstanding service to students and faculty, was awarded Mrs. Alva Holzkowski, guidance director, who was unable to be present. Andrea Burr, Student Council president; Sue Moreau, vice president; and Janice Reault, chairman of Teacher Appreciation Week, made the presentations. The continuity of the annual event was emphasized by the presence of Miss Dale MacLean, teacher of Spanish at Bennet, who was president of the Student Council in 1958, when the awards were inaugurated. Serving yesterday were Patricia Jackmore, Abby Ellis, Beth Brown, Pamela Horton, Wendy Mrosek, Karen Frost, and Laurie Horwitz. During the week, teachers were given lotteries, pens, boxes of chocolates, carnations, and plastic folders for papers.

Once Again, Open-Ended War

The fact that United States military force has now officially crossed another national boundary is a fact enough in itself.

But even more ominous than the fact, the action itself, is the language and mood of the President who ordered it.

Mr. Nixon, last night, got back to all the same terms with which Lyndon Johnson first plunged us deep into this open-ended commitment in Southeast Asia.

The American Presidency was, once again, speaking in terms of victory or defeat, when the one lesson we really discovered a long time ago is that this is a war that cannot be ended that way by conventional military means or terms.

The American Presidency was, once again, employing the argument that we must risk more American lives in order to protect American lives.

It might be pointed out, in a tragic sort of commentary on the whole war, that American casualties from the most recent fighting in Vietnam, in February, were 20 percent higher than in the same period in 1969.

Mr. Nixon's concept of the war, last night, was the same victory or defeat proposition Mr. Johnson once entertained. His argument — that we must get in deeper to get out sooner and more successfully — was the same, argument Mr. Johnson employed.

His logic — that we must protect American lives by committing American action and American lives to new and wider battles — was the Johnson logic.

It is Mr. Nixon's special addition to the Johnson rhetoric, it was his special twist on the word "humiliation." It was employed, usually, in the context that he had not become Commander-in-Chief in order to preside over the "humiliation" of the world's greatest, strongest, richest nation.

More Terror In The Streets... A news item describing how Russians are being troubled by terror on their streets, with drunken toughs molesting women who try to walk home from work, upsets some of our previous notions about the Communist regime.

And it would be something of a miracle if the armed flat should ever be able to accomplish its object and withdraw, instead of being drawn further in.

Our Changing Law Day... Nothing has been more grimly ironic in our time than the way our observance of Law Day has been shifted away from what was once the special intent of its founders toward a more routine service of less controversial nature.

As it was founded, Law Day had an international goal ahead of it, and this goal was the education of all nations to the realization that there had to be a rule of law in the world for everybody if there was to be survival for anybody.

As the observance of Law Day has been evolving, year by year, its possible broad international significance has dwindled, and its entirely sound but still narrower domestic significance has been receiving increasing emphasis.

Law and order in American streets, keeping order in American courts of law, maintaining "respect for police," are all exceptional goals, even though we always have to guard against the possibility that some of those talking most loudly about such things are people who might be likely to use law, courts and police in imposing brutalities of their own on their fellow men.

In its world significance, Law Day means that the individual nations must somehow learn to submit themselves to the same rule of law in the whole world as each of them naturally seeks to maintain inside its own borders.

This means that they must learn to surrender their own right, as individual nations, to make war upon one another, and to leave the exercise of a true police force function among themselves to a world organization to which all are subject but which none can dominate.

Unfortunately, not all those who are so rightly and logically insistent upon the existence of a rule of law and order for their own town, state or nation are at all convinced that the same kind of need exists in the world as a whole.

In fact, many of those who are most insistent that there within a nation must submit themselves to a rule of law are the most forceful in claiming for the nation itself the right to live outside any rule of law where its own activities out in the world are concerned.

This is not only an inconsistency; it is also a contradiction of the world's greatest continuing danger, as can be seen from looking at any of the world danger spots where individual nations, ourselves included, are doing what United Nations law would forbid, if we conceded it were law.

So, on Law Day 1970, at least a stray thought for the kind of law all must someday accept and honor if they wish to preserve any other kind of law.

CAMPUS UNREST, SPRING 1970, BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON... President Nixon's attempts to ease school desegregation in the Deep South, a vital part of his South strategy, are running into a Southern crossfire that may compel the Administration to file several state suits to compel desegregation.

Jerry Leonard, the assistant Attorney General in charge of civil rights, sent letters of warning to five Deep South states earlier this month that state suits might be filed after a 30-day grace period from the date of the letters.

Leonard's first letter went to state school officials in Arkansas. It was dated April 14 — exactly 20 days before the Alabama gubernatorial primary. George Wallace is running in that primary against incumbent Gov. Albert Brewer, who is planning to gain the governor's office.

More to the point, even the Administration's best political friends in the South realize that it is far more palatable for local school boards and state officials to how reluctantly to Federal court orders than to move voluntarily. Accordingly, these politicians say privately they are not at all displeased by the prospect of Federal court action brought by the Justice Department.

Consequently, to avoid that show of Federal compulsion — even after next Tuesday's Alabama primary — Mr. Nixon has sent Leonard and Robert Kennedy as goodwill missionaries to all five states: Arkansas, South Carolina, North Carolina, Mississippi, and Florida.

Martian, a conservative, is on leave as general counsel for the Health, Education and Welfare Department. His current assignment is staff chief to Vice President Spiro Agnew's Cabinet committee on school desegregation.

The assignment of Leonard and Martian is to persuade school districts that have refused to draft desegregation plans to do so immediately. Otherwise, they are being warned that Attorney General Mitchell will file a state-wide suit, starting in the suit against the state of Georgia last December, compelling desegregation by court order.

Although the Administration would much prefer not to file more state-wide suits, it has ruled out enforcement action. In the South, HEW "guidelines" have been issued. The administrative remedy, action by the Federal courts is the only alternative. Federal court

"How Jesus Meets Us" For Christ did not send me to baptize but to preach the gospel, and not with eloquent wisdom, lest the cross of Christ be emptied of its power. For the word of the cross is folly to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God. For it is written, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." I have used many avenues to come to men, through the language of music or art or beauty, but He chose the spoken word. Because He chose the word, and the simplicity of His message, He chose to speak to us in the language of the Bible. He chose to speak to us in the language of the Bible. He chose to speak to us in the language of the Bible.

Quotations BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS "It would hardly be a one-term President and do what I believe was right that to a two-term President, at the cost of seeing our country become a second-rate power and to see this nation act in a manner that is unworthy of the first defeat in its proud 191-year history." President Nixon in his Cambodia speech.

"This is not only a tragic occasion which will broaden the hearts and increase the sympathy of the people, but it is an outright admission of the failure of Vietnamization." Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Min., of President Nixon's speech.

Capital Works Projects On Agenda for Tuesday

The Board of Directors, when it meets Tuesday night for its monthly session, will be asked to approve three allocations, totaling $18,000, from the Capital Improvement Reserve Fund.

It approved, the allocations will leave the fund with a $1,738 balance and will bring to about $70,000 the total amount for capital improvements in the current fiscal year.

The three allocations to be considered Tuesday are: $7,000, to repair flood damage at Charter Oak Field; $4,000, for drainage improvements on Thompson Rd.; and $3,000, for storm-drainage improvements on Bush Hill Rd.

Town Manager Robert Welles has placed to the Board of Directors a resolution for the Charter Oak Field flooding with the State Highway Department. He said that the state will reimburse the town for the $4,000 expenditure.

The Board of Directors will consider $4,000 from the Water Reserve Fund, for permanent repairs to the trenches of the Hartford Rd. water-main installation. The Board will also consider $3,000 from the Sewer Reserve Fund, for lowering the existing sanitary-sewer lines in Pine Hill. In addition, it will consider three more allocations from the Water Reserve Fund totaling $21,000. All three are for unutilized

That was the amount approved by the Board of Directors. Welles has explained that the total cost of the two tanks, exclusive of fees, will come to $188,000.

Of the $17,100 from the Lookout Mt. tank, $13,800 is for its installation and $3,300 for purchasing the quarter-acre parcel where it will stand. The Board will consider approving a $3,500 transfer of funds from the Recreation Department Account to the Treasurer's Account. The $3,500 is to pay the added cost of conducting our elections without outside interference. — Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., in a telegram to Atty. Gen. John N. Vernon $400,000 School Budget Cut Approved by Town Board 8-2

A motion passed by the Board of Representatives last night calls for a $400,000 reduction in the proposed Board of Education budget of $4.4 million.

The motion for the cut, made by Arthur Callahan, was passed in an 8-2 vote, with Frank DeTolla, a Democrat, and Stuart Neff, Republican, voting against.

The education board was asked to cut the current budget and the year with a deficit in the area of $110,000. Superintendent Raymond Ramsdell instituted an austerity program in an effort to keep the deficit figure as low as possible. Mayor Frank McCoy also did the same with the general government budget.

Assuring the representatives that he was not trying to wave a red flag, Ramsdell pointed out that any large cuts made in the budget would mean that programs would have to be cut. At the same time, he said, he would like to see the town make every effort to pay its overdue taxes during the next year.

The superintendent charged the Board of Representatives with the responsibility of maintaining the quality of education and requested his previous state-of-the-art report be read.

Four members of the Board of Representatives who are also members of the taxpayers of Education found themselves sitting on the opposite side of the fence last night. Frank DeTolla, one of the four, did not agree with the amount of the cuts, but he did not object to the program.

Miss Edith Casali, chairman of the Board of Education, said she would like to see the program work in summer programs, who substitute teachers have to be paid so much and

Why classes are limited to a certain number of students. Education Board member Albert Smith challenged McCarthy's line of thinking, saying that the board should cut some more as some of the figures were only estimates.

Mayor McCoy then said, "Your job is to tell us how much to spend," he admonished the Board of Representatives.

Coming to the defense of the education board, DeTolla, exclaimed that about 70 per cent of the budget is imposed on the town by the state. However, he questioned some areas where he thought the board could make some reductions.

He specifically suggested getting school operating times in an effort to cut down on the number of buses but was told the board contract is on a mileage charge basis.

DeTolla returned to the subject of salaries, free time, fringe benefits and such. He said, "The teachers should be paid what they are worth. I've been with this system for 30 years and I don't think I've ever missed you or our needs."

The superintendent charged the Board of Representatives with the responsibility of maintaining the quality of education and requested his previous state-of-the-art report be read.

Charles O'Flann of Board of Education, again noting that so much of the program is mandated by the state, and when selecting representatives to the General Assembly, he said, "I want people who will represent the 'silent majority,' as well as the 'noisy majority.'"

Andover Duffey Delegates Charge Primary Dividing Party

Dennis Keenan and Mrs. Jane Carberg, Democratic Party delegates to the State Convention, have expressed in a letter to Andover Democrats their views regarding Tuesday's Primary and the opening candidates, Andrew Gasper and Mrs. Susan Loebe.

"We are surprised and disappointed that those who preach party unity are the first to depart from the party," they said. "We are sure that the party will be divided by the actions of those who are not party men."

"The annual budget meeting of the Town of Andover will be held tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Andover Elementary School. The finance board has pointed out that if the budget is adopted, the tax will be 92.5 mills based on a grand list of $2,665,544. This is an increase of 12 mills over the present rate.

The finance board states in a message to Andover voters, "We therefore suggest that any candidate examine each new if it will do anything to reduce the needs and to which you want the town committed."

"Expenditures" indicates that once a new service is established it is never eliminated, but is usually expanded so that annual cost continues to grow and mushroom far beyond originally estimated figures.

"They added, 'Attending these meetings and voting at them is the only way you can have your say in the amount of local taxes you must pay. The appropriate laws made at these meetings determine the expenditures which your town and school district can make during the coming year. It is these expenditures which determine your tax rate.'
