Psychiatrist Says: Parents Often Cause Youths' Drug Habits

Unlike authorities who blame the rise in drug-taking among young people on pushers or peer-group pressure, there is one youth-oriented specialist in town who emphasizes that parents' own psychological problems often push their offspring toward drugs.

Dr. Tanush Atoyan, psychiatrist-director of the Community Child Guidance Clinic, says that all young people coming to the clinic with drug problems have had one of three situations in common: (1) their parents had marital problems, (2) one or both parents was having emotional problems, or (3) the parents were unable to communicate with the child.

Of this last group, Dr. Atoyan says, they come to the clinic with anger, inadequacy or helplessness about establishing an ongoing communication.

There have been fewer young people coming to the clinic with drug problems than expected, Dr. Atoyan says, which seems to indicate that in all the cases they have handled, "There were usually family problems. We had to work close with the families or else we lost the child."

The Community Child Guidance Clinic, established in 1929 at 317 N. Main St., is supported largely by funds from the United States and State departments of Mental Health. About 40 per cent of its patients come from Manchester and Vernon with problems ranging from truancy and delinquency to drug addiction.

Dr. Atoyan says that many of these kids have trouble dealing with authority. "Their disrespect for and rebellion against authority," Dr. Atoyan says, often stems from an initial disrespect for parental authority, then from a displaced inability to cope with parental authority in society and other authority figures, including teachers and police.

This disrespect may start when "they find out their parents are practicing things that do not fit in with their own (child's) ideas. Then they're not respectful of them."

The child may have obtained these ideas from the parent himself, from his peer group, or from the media. "Parents may give him two messages," Dr. Atoyan says. "One is the ideal, and two, what they do themselves. The child becomes critical of the double message."

Young people may also be disrespectful of authorities like the police, because of an intellectual or cultural gap. If the child comes from a family that has an intellectual or cultural interests which he feels that, in general, the police do not share, he may look down on the police and not respect them.

But Dr. Atoyan feels that this reflects a bad attitude on the young person's part, since he should not expect a policeman to be especially capable at anything but his job, and should recognize that the job itself is necessary.

Most of the young people who clinic handlers, Dr. Atoyan says, do not have drug problems, but do have other problems, such as school problems, often because of personality difficulties with teachers.

Also, he says, "Other children may be the source of the problem. They may use this child program as a scapegoat and pick on him because of some idiosyncrasy that makes him look different. While people must be helped individually to attain psychological help, Dr. Atoyan says, the psychiatrist cannot do everything alone. Society itself sometimes must be changed, he says, to provide a more psychologically healthy environment.

"We live in different times. He does not seem to feel that a rejection of old, established groups by the young, and the founding for identity they pass through in the meantime, reflects anything wrong with socially approved groups.

It is just that drug-takers are "anxious, insecure and retiring types," Dr. Atoyan says, who do not reject groups approved by society, but join them, "with a stronger ego structure."

Sheinwold on Bridge

PROTECT YOUR TRUMPS BY FORCING A SWITCH. By ALFRED SHEINWOLD. If you have been looking for a really good bridge game for just two players, you'll be interested in Bridge-a, a new game devised by Joel Gains, a young New York schoolteacher and bridge enthusiast.

An interesting feature of the game is a special kind of card, the colon, which forces your opponent to switch to a different suit. Perhaps Gains got the idea for this card from the type of hand shown today.

West leads the king of hearts, and you take the ace. You ruff a heart in dummy, return with a club to ruff another heart, and then try to return again with a club.

Unfortunately, West ruffs and leads a heart to make you ruff. You must use three more trumps to draw trumps, leaving you with only one trump. West wins the hand.

Partner opens with one club, and the next play-a-card. You hold: Spades, 6-3; Hearts, 10-8; Diamonds, 7-5-4; Clubs, 9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1.

What do you say? Answer: Pass. You are on a trick short of the contract.

The simplest method to make the hand to suit West's trick from hearts, just as though you had played one of those new color cards. Refuse the first out heart trick.

West cannot gain from leading hearts. Try it another way. Take the ace of hearts and ruff a heart. Now draw trumps. This won't work either. West leads hearts at every opportunity, and you get your own five trumps, one in dummy, one heart and two clubs. The total is only nine.

Now draw trumps. This won't work either. West leads hearts at every opportunity, and you get your own five trumps, one in dummy, one heart and two clubs. The total is only nine.

King Renominated by Acclamation

By BETTE QUATRALE (Herald Reporter). Incumbent 4th District State Rep. Robert D. King of Tolland was endorsed by acclamation of the Republican nomination to the post.

King will be seeking his fifth term in the state legislature, where he served as an assistant minority leader last season. He is a strong supporter of the gubernatorial challenger Wallace Barnes and is often described as a liberal Republican.

Speaking to the delegates following his nomination last night, King cited the support of tax reform as the "top priority" problem facing the next session of the legislature.

He placed the problems of re-apportionment in the number two category and cited the need for probate court reform, and liberation of the state's abortion laws as top priorities.

Delegates to the convention were Theron Blow, J. Lindy Childers and Donald Dewdney of Tolland; Edna Edwards of Ellington, and Shirley Moore, F. William McInrye and John McCaffrey of Somers.

King was nominated by his law partner, Donald Caldwell of Ellington, who expressed the hope King would be able to lead on the majority side of the house in the next session.

The Why of The V
Once again, modern scientific experts have discovered that old lady nature knows what she is doing, all the time. The reason why large migrating birds fly in a V formation is because that makes practical sense from the aerodynamic point of view.

What it does is to distribute, to the maximum advantage of the flock, the benefits of the updraft which comes off the wing tips of each flying bird. The lead bird has to work harder than all the rest, although it is considered possible that some of the updraft from the wings behind him can carry forward far enough to give him a little help too.

But for the flock as a whole, the dividend from this interesting-uplifting flight is impressive, increasing the distance they can cover in a single flight up to 70 per cent. Each bird finds and keeps its own proper place in the V formation because, in that place, flying is easier. If a bird should drop out of its proper place and angle in the air flow, it might find itself fighting turbulence instead of benefiting from beneficial updraft.

It is perhaps too early to know just what nature may be trying to tell us, but that familiar V sign in the sky. But one possibility that suggests itself is that perhaps the answer to the problem of the turbulence left behind by the new 747 planes is not, after all, to make other planes other planes to keep at a greater distance from the 747, but to study, from the birds, how to group all the litter planes in the optimum updraft formation in behind the 747, thus increasing the fuel mileage or extending the flight range by 70 per cent.

As has so often been demonstrated, if we were to take the language of the Declaration of Independence and sollicit signatures for it on a street corner, we would be just as likely to find it suffering wholesale rejections.

People have learned, in the last few decades, not to sign anything carelessly, particularly if it has seemed to have a radical atmosphere.

Let us suppose that, instead of seeking any quick street corner judgment on the document, we should submit its key language to ourselves for more thoughtful and leisurely consideration. What might the result be, then?

One answer is that we already spend a great deal of time among ourselves debating just what is meant by the key declaration of the Declaration — that reading as follows: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed, by their Creator, with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

What do we mean by equal? That we are all entitled to equal shares of whatever money can buy? That we are all equally entitled to each other's jobs? How many of us would sign that there is a Creator who handed things out to us?

And who decides what is permissible to whom, for whom, under that general title of "pursuit of happiness"? It would be quite likely that, if any group of us set out to try to agree on what we all meant by such proclamatory phrases, we might never come to the point where we would all be willing to sign such a document, much less add it to the meaningful pledge those heroic souls of 1776 appended — the pledge to each other of "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor."

The truth is — it's face it — that there is any truth in the opinions of all those historians and analysts who see this America facing a crisis, we are in trouble because there is nothing we want all together and for each other as much as we want our own individual privilege and opportunity.

A Compact And A Pledge
As has so often been demonstrated, if we were to take the language of the Declaration of Independence and sollicit signatures for it on a street corner, we would be just as likely to find it suffering wholesale rejections.

People have learned, in the last few decades, not to sign anything carelessly, particularly if it has seemed to have a radical atmosphere.

The truth is — it's face it — that there is any truth in the opinions of all those historians and analysts who see this America facing a crisis, we are in trouble because there is nothing we want all together and for each other as much as we want our own individual privilege and opportunity.

We need no longer have a compact, we need to formulate ourselves a new one, which will posit for us the kind of society, the kind of America, in which we can believe so strongly and fervently that we are, in our turn and in our time, willing to lay down our lives and our everything we possess to the effort to make it become real, to make it work.

A country does not create itself, or run itself, or exist in geography. It is a sum of human beings, who willingly and voluntarily and gratefully make this compact with one another — to see and serve something bigger and more important to all than any individual fortune can be to anybody. In order to reach that kind of understanding and sense of compact, we may have to do some things more ably than we have done in the past. We need to lift our aspirations over some strange hurdles which were not even in view back then. We may have to make better and higher use than we have of the inestimable, beautiful privilege those men of compact in 1776 imagined, decreed, and won to hand down to us. We should try.

On Patriotism
Perhaps not enough Americans have been thinking about patriotism, as this Fourth of July season comes. It is an ambiguous concept and it ought to be clarified.

Never, perhaps, has the very idea of patriotism been under so much attack as in the United States today. The American flag, until a few years ago, a symbol which meant everything in the nation respected, has been made by a few a symbol of political malice.

The term "patriotic" as applied to organizations is even sometimes used as a slur on their motives.

Those who object to U.S. policies in Southeast Asia are often called unpatriotic. Like many blacks — have suffered discrimination for too long, should think hard whether their grievances will be served by trying to destroy the very essence of American nationhood.

The United States has always had, as stood for many principles which are vital to human freedom. Its system of free enterprise is the only one in the world that has stood for so long.

The answer lies in striving to fulfill the ideal of the American dream. The answer lies in the system work more adequately, modifying or reforming, improving, but not destroying.

Patriotism is not an ignominious ideal. It is love of country. It is memory and respect for what is worthy in the past. It is dedication to the future.

Little about humanity's struggle anywhere toward the light is without flaw. The strongest terms of criticism, even in great hours such as the American Revolution. Among the giants there were little men and stupid men. They often exhibited the limitations of common humanity.

Consequently, one again the President must choose between his Secretary of Defense and his Secretary of State. He must be cautious against sending U.S. troops into Cambodia and the general idea who instigate the withdrawal plan simply cannot be reduced even if Cambodia falls.

Today we can look clearly at the evils of the past, but look beyond them both to the nobility of the past and to the opportunity of the future. We need not reach the same old mistakes, but we can achieve greater social justice for the people of the world.

The Fourth of July oratory and its symbols, which many of us have not forgotten, may have been banal and meaningless. They were not really superficial. They reflected a very human dream — is dead.

The dream is that men can reflect their birthright and move steadily toward the fulfillment of their destiny. The United States is committed to these goals. It has helped toward their fulfillment. We must all move forward, proudly and soberly, gratefully. — ERWIN D. CANTAM — THE SCIENCE MONITOR.

A Thought For Today
Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches
Tomorrow we will celebrate the 141st birthday of our country. In the midst of our holiday-making, parades, picnics, feasting to the beaches and all the rest that makes up our modern American civil holiday, let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

It is good that it stands for. And at the same time let us ask Al-mighty God to help this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country. Let us not forget to pause and thank God for this country.

Connecticut Yankee
Cambodia Falling
By A.H.O.
The state political conventions have just held were full of apocalyptic pronouncements, most of them asserting that the "last hurrah" had now come for this political institution, the convention itself, or for some party leader.

Against such pronouncements, or trends, we would interpose, for the moment, only the warning that the political millennium is a fleeting thing, and that the leadership of the institution which seems past its time or outworn or corrupt to us, may be replaced by a younger citizen to appear at the hearing on July 6th in opposition to the proposed regulations.

There have been more losers than usual to denounce the convention system as if to prove that, without it, they themselves would have been the winners.

Since the tides which have been sweeping Connecticut politics in recent years have frequently been more the result of some berserk lunar madness than of rationality, we would not presume to quarrel with the various pronouncements.

In the realm of personalities, it may well be that John Bailey, having fended off the fierce charge of the young bull from New Haven, has won himself nothing more than the privilege of making the time and reason of his own "last hurrah" more voluntary than it would have been had Marcus triumphed in the convention.

And when it comes to political institutions, it may well be that the next session of the Legislature is going to agree to abolish state political conventions as such and leave the nomination of future state and congressional tickets to a direct primary.

Before this reform took place, it seemed a fair, logical estimate that nothing could ever make the old low-dominated, rotten-borough kind of state legislature look good. But the irresponsible, undisciplined, unprincipled indulgence in self-gratification which has dominated the last two sessions of the General Assembly has come close to making the wicked old days seem a blessing.

These may be the things which are now going to happen. John Bailey is suffering from what is the fatal defect for anyone holding a position of power. He is not really hungry any more. He has had it all. He would rather be pleasant than tough. And when a political leader slips into such a mood, he had better start formulating his own graceful plans for retirement.

The political convention system actually has far fewer evils today than earlier in its history, and they show on the surface more. The backroom maneuvers are less privileged than they used to be; the public imagination makes them more lurid than they are; in this politically fertile year of 1970.

Form Committee
To the Editor, We have formed a Fair Housing Committee to oppose the new density regulations proposed by the Planning Commission. There is a housing crisis in the city. During the past year, few houses have been built which are within the means of people of low and moderate income. The proposed regulations would make it almost impossible to build apartments in Manchester, which would accommodate young families with children and would encourage the construction of efficiency and one-bedroom units. The regulations would also discourage the construction of larger luxury apartments. The proposed regulations set standards of land use which, if applied to single family houses, would be patently illegal.

Hickel Takes Tour of the Wilderness

By J. HUNTER HOLLOWAY
Associated Press Writer

WASH., July 8 (AP) — Walter J. Hickel surrendered his big quarry today in favor of a helicopter on the third day of a five-day inspection of the area's recreational resources.

The secretary of the interior, a stocky man who appears more at ease high in the mountains than behind a cluttered Washington desk, left a remote lodge for a day-long tour of the crowded campsite at nearby Yellowstone National Park.

The helicopter is the only modern means of transportation the secretary has used during his trip here. Saturday morning he is scheduled to take a raft voyage down the turbulent Snake River.

The excursion in the company of national park officials, was the secretary's third outing in as many days during his environmental inspection; he hopes will uncover a method of bringing the wilderness to "the inner man, in the inner city."

"Every kid in the ghetto should be able to spend a month out here," the former governor of Alaska said Thursday while on an eight-hour ride in the Tetons high above this hamlet on scenic Jackson Lake.

At one point, just below towering, snow-capped "Farewell Bend," Hickel commented to other six members of his party: "In the East, you have to drive to go to heaven."

"The problem," the tanned cabinet member said, "is getting the people here—beyond the roads."

He said easily on his somewhat skittish mount, the man responsible for most of the nation's natural resources philosophized: "That's one of the problems in this country, the approach taken with the cities. We—both Republicans and Democrats over the years—have spent billions of dollars attempting to improve the physical surroundings of those in the cities."

"That's the inner man, in the inner city, we should work with. Let's try to change his outlook. Bring him out here, where he can ride it without toilet and running water, and he loves it. He'll whole perspective—outlook."

Hickel said the Park Service is confronted with the problem of providing recreation for a beautiful back country "with out cutting it."

"That's something we've got to do, but how?" he asked. He is tabulating the feasibility of establishing a "Tetonville trolley," operating "by the Park Service to carry hikers and members of the service striking distance to other, more remote regions."

istry would not comment on the reports.

The Foreign Minister Than Khoman told a meeting of the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization in Manila that his government must be forced to take military action in Cambodia if there is increasing danger of the North Vietnamese moving south.

This wouldn't mean a withdrawal of United States troops, but the U.S. Senate's approval of the Cooper-Church Amendment this week made this unlikely.

Meanwhile, a military tribunal in Phnom Penh began the trial in absentia of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's ousted chief of state, on charges of treason. The charges, read in a small courtroom filled largely with foreign newsmen, accused Sihanouk of giving the Viet Cong permission to enter the country and collaborating with them in various ways, of sabotaging the economy and of violating the constitution.

Premier Lon Nol and the other officials of Sihanouk's government who deposit him while he was in Europe arranged the trial in an attempt to undermine the prince's great popularity with the country's 7 million peasants. It is generally assumed that the court will find Sihanouk guilty.

An official said before the trial began that the charges carry a maximum penalty of death and a minimum penalty of 50 years in prison. Sihanouk is in Phnom Penh but has set up a government in exile, and the government assigned two attorneys to handle his defense.

Meager Turnouts Plague Youth Planning Sessions

The problem of attendance hindered the Town Youth Commission again last night when only four of some 24 members showed up for a monthly meeting.

Last month, only five members showed up for a meeting. Necessary both times, to hold unofficial meetings.

The members present last night discussed the "Youth Yellow Pages," a booklet describing youth services in town, applications for new members; plans for the fall; and progress in the development of two teen buildings at the Nike Site.

Christopher (Toby) Welch said a town civic group, which he would not identify, has indicated a willingness to donate funds so that one of the proposed teen buildings at the Nike Site can be renovated. He added that Mayor Nathan Agostini, as chairman of the Town Board of Directors, said the town would try to match the amount that the organization raises.

Chairman Eric Simmonin informed the group that a teen paint company has offered to paint the town paint for the teen buildings at cheap price.

Welch and Simmonin said they worked all during the high school exam week to clean up other buildings at the Nike Site. The turnout of volunteers to help them was disappointing.

Welch also said that no one attended a June Nike Site meeting at a youth forum in May which lists a number of people who would like to be distributed. The turnout of volunteers to help them was disappointing.

Perkins Case: Informer's Tale Has Truth, Problems Too, Courant Told

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — The New London Courant states attorney says there is "some truth" but also some "problems" in the information provided by an alleged state police informant about the death of a man who was identified as a member of the "Youth Yellow Pages" group.

Spending on the "Youth Yellow Pages" group, Robert Digan, commission advisor and coordinator of youth services in town, said he had not told anyone that he had been at the school when the Perkins brothers were shot. "I tell them all the same thing I'm telling you. I don't know anything about this. All I can say is wait till the grand jury. You'll see I don't know anything about this."

The Hartford Times article said that the identified informant now living in Maine had tipped state police to the burglary attempt, accompanied the brothers to the school, and later was released from the jail service and given a car by state police. He could leave the town.

The Times article also said that state police earlier arranged his release from jail on the condition that he inform on the activities of the Perkins brothers.

After the two brothers were killed, four state troopers testified at a coroner's inquest into the deaths. All four said one of the Perkins brothers was armed and fired the first shot before state police returned the fire.

All four of the troopers involved in the Perkins shooting, resigned from the state police in mid-May of this year.

Jottings from the Home of the Mets

"Hope you don't get tossed out of that computer game between the Dodgers and Yankees," was the message on a telegram received by Gil Hodges, Mets' manager, after he was tossed out for the second time in his career last week. "It was sent by Mayo Smith," Hodges said on Wednesday as he talked at Shea Stadium in New York.

Smith, a close friend of Hodges' manager in the Detroit Tigers. "I'll get even with him yet," Hodges said with a smile.

"Computerized baseball games are for computerized people," Hodges added. "Why, the other day they had a TV striking out three times in one game and he never struck out that many times in a whole season. And another guy got a home run who could hardly get the ball out of the infield."

One man's opinion: Peebles Reese was a faster runner than Phil Huzarotto of the Yankees. The speaker was Gil Hodges. "Reese used to take those little steps but he couldn't match Reese," Hodges said. "He had Dodger teammates. The best base runner Hodges ever saw was Jackie Robinson. He had the speed and the know-how and was daring," Hodges related.

"I think every manager in baseball feels sorry for Leo Durocher. It's hard to understand how a team with the potential of the Cubs can win so few straight games," Hodges noted. "How long would it take a manager to lose three or four games in succession?"

Pitchers are not allowed to play infield positions during hitting practice with their bats. "We just don't allow it," Manager Hodges said. "It's not fair to a pitcher to have a chance of getting hit with a bad pop or a line drive and also have to throw the ball better than when pitching and could injure his arm."

"I just hope that we can play the same way for the next 10 to 12 weeks," Hodges said. "The manager Bob Schefing reported, 'We've lost our last three weeks.' The former Detroit Tiger manager, now front office executive reported."

Ed Kranepool, sent down to the minors by the Yankees, is playing leftfield with Tidewater. Bill Denney, former Wilson High in Middletown, is playing pinch hitting and doing well with Tidewater, Bob Schefing said.

Will the synthetic playing fields have any effect on the outfielders? Danny Murtagh, a long-time second baseman in the National League and now manager of Pittsburgh, supplied the answer. "I can't see any difference. Alvin and Max (Gene Alley and Bill Mazeroski) have drawn a bye for the new stadium in Pittsburgh July 26 which will feature AstroTurf."

Inability to win big on the road has been costly to the Pirates. The club is 18-24 away from Forbes Field, 13-10 in one-game games and 26-22 in night contests. The club was 17-10 in the outfielders' batting averages.

Harvard Stadium Pats' Home in '70

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Patriots of the National Football League hope to make Harvard's Ivy-covered stadium a showcase for the team's draft choice, defensive end Phil Olsen of Utah State. The Patriots' supply announced completion of signing all 14 draft choices by getting Olsen to agree to terms Thursday. However, they declined to disclose any details of the contract for the 6-6 All-American 260-pound left brother of mighty Merlin Olsen of the Los Angeles Rams. Olsen, who played for the Patriots for seven years, had hoped to play pro football on the West Coast.

Three games ago against Pittsburgh, Olsen was named to the All-American team. He is expected to be a first-round pick in the draft. Olsen, who played for the Patriots for seven years, had hoped to play pro football on the West Coast.

Shea Stadium should be hoping on Sunday, Aug. 23 when the Cincinnati Reds come in for a doubleheader against the Mets. The club has already pugged the one million mark in paid attendance the first club in the majors to make this boast.

Mets have but one player with more than 17 home runs. Tommie Agee has 22. He is expected to be a first-round pick in the draft. Olsen, who played for the Patriots for seven years, had hoped to play pro football on the West Coast.

Off the cuff: "Anyone for tennis? There was a tennis game in progress one morning this week at 1 o'clock. That's right, 1 a.m. at the new courts at Charter Oak Park which are equipped with metered lights — you pay and you can play." — Ray LaCaze, coach of the tennis team at Camp UConn.

The final is scheduled for Friday. Rosewall will be the defending champion since he won four straight decisions without defeat with the Bob Wolf Club in the Boston Park League. LaCaze pitched and won four straight decisions without defeat with the Bob Wolf Club in the Boston Park League.

By EARL YOST Anxiously awaiting and preparing for the 1971 Deaf Winter Olympic Games is a 19-year-old Bolton girl, Susan Mozzer. Her parents reported that she has been skating only two years but has already won many medals and trophies. Mozzer, 11, is a graduate of the Ansonia School for the Deaf in West Hartford.

Mrs. Billie Joan King of Long Beach, Calif., faced her old rival, Margaret Court of Adelaide, Australia, in today's women's final match which all the experts agree could go either way. Mrs. Court has been playing the better tennis throughout the tournament. But she is suffering from torn ligaments of the left ankle and will have pain-killing injections before going on court.

Mrs. King kept in trim Thursday by partnering Rosemary Krantz, a women's doubles partner of Kerry Melville and Karen Krantz, 6-2, 6-6, in the semi-finals.

Mrs. Court just rested. "The doctor told me to keep my ankle up as much as possible," she said. "I scarcely put it down several times daily. Normally, I would prepare for a final with some hard practice, but if I can't rest, I may not be able to play at all."

Mrs. King will be trying to equal the record of the Venus and Louise Brown by winning the women's title for the fourth time. Her previous triumphs were in 1966, 1967 and 1968.

STAFFORD SPEEDWAY Every driver would like to see history repeat itself Saturday night at 8:15 in the 100-mile NASCAR modified National Championship race at Stafford Speedway. A year ago, Steve McQueen won the race, beating his old nemesis, Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va.

Hendrick leads a host of nationally ranked NASCAR modified chaffers due at Stafford, including Fred Webster, Ed Fienke, and Jerry Cook. Cook, the top driver in the country, has signed entry blanks in search of the $1,000 and 250 national points awarded the winner.

Steve will also be putting the track record of 21.09 on the line. The entire field will take time trials, the fastest 10 cars going to the 100-mile race. The remainder of the field will qualify through heat races.

Gib Gilbert Golf Leader

LONDON, Ont. (AP) — Gliby Gilbert, the longest-hitting golfer who came from nowhere to win the Houston Championship earlier this year, credited a telephone lesson from his old tutor with his first-round lead in the $125,000 annual Open Golf Tournament.

"I missed the cut at Cleveland last week," Gilbert said, "and played bad in practice, and then next week's British Open." Gilbert said he was doing well in his first round, but he was not sure he could keep it up.

"I guess he could visualize what I was doing. He knows my game better than I do. He told me I was too wristy, bringing the club back too fast with my hands." Gilbert said he was doing well in his first round, but he was not sure he could keep it up.

"So I made a correction," Gilbert said. "I was using a seven-iron and the first round was a disaster. Just off his pace in this starved national championship, however, were George Archer and veteran Art Wall, a pair of former Masters champions tied at 68.

John Kennedy, a two-year-old veteran who is 30, in the clubhouse before, and Toronto assistant pro Gary Pitchford followed by Steve Oppenheimer, amateur, and veteran Art Wall, a pair of former Masters champions tied at 68.

Students Earn Cadet Honors
Three Manchester students earned recognition from Norwich University, Northfield, Vt., during the second semester of the 1969-70 college year: Richard E. Rein, class of 1971, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Rein, 75 E. Middle Tpke., was named to the dean's list.

To qualify for the dean's list, a student must attain an academic quality-point average of at least 3.0, the equivalent of a "B" grade in all subjects.

Cadet Rein was promoted to the rank of major in the Corps of Cadets for the academic year 1970-71.

Michael D. Belcher also 1971, son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Belcher, 363 Spring St., was promoted to the rank of cadet major.

Stephen J. Lewkowicz class of 1973, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Lewkowicz, 5 Bates Rd., was promoted to cadet corporal.

To receive rank as a commissioned or non-commissioned officer in the Corps of Cadets at Norwich, the nation's oldest private military college, a cadet must be proficient in academic and military subjects and must have demonstrated exemplary qualities of leadership.

Extended Forecast
The extended outlook is for mostly fair and cool weather Monday and Tuesday.

In the old days, an important part of the celebration of our Nation's birthday began the night before.

The first objective was to get control of the bell in the Center Church steeple. The group of young men selected for this job were chosen for their daring. The only way to get into the church was to crawl through one of the narrow basement windows and, hanging onto the ledge with both hands, drop to the basement floor some seven or eight feet below. There was no knowing what object volunteer might drop onto, crippling him for life.

That hazard past, there was the climb in the dark to the belfry tower and attaching a strong cord to the clapper and throwing the other end to the boys below. They, in turn, carried it down to a group of trees which stood where the Mary Cheney Library now stands, where it could be tolled from time to time throughout the night.

There is no record of anyone being caught; of course, no normal adult would want to make the ghostly trip to the belfry tower.

This was before Manchester had a police force. Remember those first three "Keystone Cops" the Hartford police let us have, tall steel helmets, long belted coats, dangerous looking billy clubs and all?

They had the keys to all the stores so that they could not only catch thieves but have a good nap when needed. One night the boys somehow got in and snatched the club, helmet and belt from one of them while he was sound asleep.

At the east end of Hartford Rd., in front of the long building on the south side of Charter Oak St. which housed the town's leading stores, there was a large open area. All during the night hard working young patriots worked, dragging into this square miscellaneous pieces of rolling stock and home and farm utilities. There were two horse dump carts, lumber box wagons, surries with fringed tops, hay tadders, ploughs, churns, and always three or four out-houses or Chic Sales. Over the door of a double Chic Sale, one year was a sign, "Ladies' Waiting Room." A couple of fellows riding bicycles had managed to take this down from the Goetz Bakery at the North End which had an ice cream parlor, and between them, still riding their bikes, carry it down to the square.

This sort of celebration came to an end when a hearse and two fine hacks were somehow dropped into Gould's Pond at the foot of the falls.

There were no real nuisance laws, but it was generally understood that there was to be no firing of guns or fire crackers 'till daylight. But one of the fellows had a little brass cannon which had a terrible bang. Beginning as soon as it was dark, this was fired in various parts of the town, the firing squad moving quickly from one part to another. One year, the protests from annoyed citizens became so great that the sheriff and one of the selectmen hitched up horse and buggy and went out to find the culprit. It was not until four o'clock in the morning that they ran across two of the boys and sleepily headed for home and dragged the offending brass cannon behind them.

The conversation which took place is remembered as follows: "The sheriff: 'You weren't planning to use that till daylight, were you boys?'" "The boys: 'Oh no, sir, we are just taking it home to get it ready.'"

Then on closer look they found the two boys were their own sons! There was a whispered conversation in the buggy and then the sheriff said, "How would you like to be sworn in as deputy sheriffs, wear an official badge, and scare the daylight out of those kids who are keeping the old folks on edge with their infernal noise?" "Boys in unison: 'Great!'" "The sheriff: 'A truce was agreed upon and the whole town slept happily ever after.'"

PZC To Hear Bids Monday

In addition to its hearing on proposed new density regulations for apartments, the Planning and Zoning Commission will hold public hearings on two requests for group dwellings and one for a zone change when it meets Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building hearing room.

Developer Raymond F. Damato is seeking a special permit to construct more apartments at the rear of "The Mansion," his recently refurbished seven-unit apartment building off Otis St.

The 2.5-acre site is in a Residence A Zone, and under the regulations could contain a maximum of about 25 units. If Damato's request is granted, he said he would construct two-story townhouse apartments of colonial design. He did not specify a number but indicated it would be "considerably" less than the maximum.

He said access to the apartments would be via a drive north and west of the existing building.

The Mansion, once the R.O. Cheney home, was purchased by the late E. J. Holl and turned into apartments during World War II. It was known as Pioneer House during war days because it housed workers for the Pioneer Parachute Co., then located on Forest St.

Most of the homes surrounding it are single-family dwellings.

Another request for a four-apartment addition to his Carriage House Apartments on E. Center St. at Pitkin, is being sought by developer Warren Howland.

A single building of brick construction and similar in design to the existing apartments would be built on a 14,000 square foot parcel just west of the existing site.

According to Howland, it would contain three rental units, plus a janitor's apartment.

No Herald Tomorrow

In observance of the holiday, The Herald will not publish tomorrow, July 4. To all our readers, we say: Have a safe and happy holiday and we'll be seeing you again on Monday.

Parking facilities would be at the rear only and the new construction would be blended to the existing apartments, Howland said.

He said he would lease the land from developer Alexander Jarvis, who owns it. About two years ago, Jarvis was denied a change to Residence C Zone that would have paved the way for his own apartment project on the 70 by 200 foot parcel.

Monday's zone change request is from builder Andrew Ansaldo, who wants to change a 3.8-acre parcel of his land in Ansaldo heights from Rural Residence to Residence AA.

The parcel is just north of Thayer Rd., a dead end, and is bounded by AA zoned properties on Spring St. and by farmland of Paul Lentil off Gardner St.

Before your children use their new games, paste or tape the directions for playing the game in the inside of the box lid to keep from losing them.
