Along Winter Roads With Syrian Orphans

Connecticut Yankee
 By A.H.O.

It has been notable, from the start of this notable Connecticut oil pipeline, how wide-ranging and resourceful the whole body of Connecticut candidates has been in coming up with the answers to all our problems, big and small. Never have so many fine-sounding answers been given to so many policy questions by so many fine-looking candidates.

The scramble of the various candidates to be sure to solve every problem their rivals may have solved, or much better, to discover and solve some problem before the rival gets to it, has, on occasions, developed creative winners.

But because the candidates have all been working with extraordinary energy and zeal, and because they all have brain-trusts of one size or another busy discovering problems and working out solutions for them, the composite result has to be that the candidates have been faced and solved by every candidate.

One way to interpret this would be to say that the people of Connecticut are being offered, this year, a veritable feast of assurance for the future. The people of this state are being offered, this year, the most happy and fortunate of all elections.

We have an idea that is not how the voters themselves really feel about it. We think they are bored to death with the ease with which so many candidates solve so many problems.

We think they are desperately hungry for some candidate who would come along and confess that he didn't have the answer to this problem, or to that one. Such a candidate, if he ever did appear, might receive a raving ovation from the whole electorate.

For the electorate, as a whole, may be entertaining a sour on this great idea of solution. It is the idea that we may have to live with some of these problems for generations, and that we may be very lucky if we do succeed in just living with them, instead of dying with them.

Who knows? The kind of candidate the electorate might really identify itself with, and therefore support most readily, might be the candidate who does not have the answer, but who doesn't know how to get connected out of a financial hole without taking Connecticut to death, that he doesn't know how to end the war in Vietnam, that the drug problem has him stumped, and that he isn't yet, by himself, quite resolved the problem of what to do with employables in a country which has much more manpower than it really needs to produce luxury for itself.

Such a candidate might sweep both primaries and November election. If we see any slight sign of any candidate who hasn't solved everything, we will be sure to report the gladiolus tidings.

Alaska Oil Pipe Backers Reorganize to End Snarls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The eight companies seeking to build the long-delayed Alaska oil pipeline will reorganize their project management in the hope that a well-run company will emerge where there are now five committees now founders. Agreement on the reorganization has been reached among the five principal members of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS). It was learned today. Their plan has been sent to the five minority shareholders for approval.

Several TAPS members said the agreement could be reached by Saturday, although no date has been set for a formal announcement. For two years, the eight TAPS members have operated the pipeline project by consensus, without a chief decision maker, and without much efficiency. Initially it was believed that the results have marred the project in a number of ways, including a cumbersome decision-making system to oversee design and construction of the pipeline.

The ambitious Alaskan pipeline would run from the oil-rich North Slope 800 miles south, across mountain ranges and rivers, to the ice-free port at Valdez on Alaska's north shore. From there, the oil would travel by tanker to West Coast refineries.

The North Slope covers a 10-billion-barrel oil pool and is estimated to have more oil than the rest of the world combined. The end of the war in Vietnam, that the drug problem has him stumped, and that he isn't yet, by himself, quite resolved the problem of what to do with employables in a country which has much more manpower than it really needs to produce luxury for itself.

Such a candidate might sweep both primaries and November election. If we see any slight sign of any candidate who hasn't solved everything, we will be sure to report the gladiolus tidings.

Lombardi Discards Quest To Regain Police Post

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Anthony Lombardi, a former Hartford policeman acquitted Wednesday of a manslaughter charge, says he's giving up his efforts to get back on the police force because of all that has happened. "I regret that I can no longer be effective as a police officer because of all that has happened," Lombardi said shortly after the jury handed down its verdict.

Lombardi, 32, had been charged with illegally using deadly force when he shot his 13-year-old son, Joseph, in the air in a gesture of anger. Lombardi said he had been a police officer for 10 years and was a sergeant when he was shot. Another witness had testified that Lombardi was fired from the force because he was still withdrawing an application for reinstatement to the police force.

How Many Red Lights?

The other day, in the Penn Central Park Avenue Tunnel into the heart of New York City, a third rail short-circuited, leaving two trains in the tunnel without power, and starting fires on the railroad which produced clouds of smoke in the tunnel.

The particular kind of accident has happened many times, over the years. It has not always happened, of course, with two trains inside a tunnel. The fires caused by such short circuits have usually been small and easily extinguished.

This time the situation was dark and the smoke was thick. The functioning of the train crew was a shade of red, and so that passengers were left unaccompanied and uninformed for a long period of time inside the cars, with the peril of the third rail presumably waiting for them if they tried to find their way out of their predicament in the dark.

There was a point at which the passengers might have gone into a state of panic, and did not. So the accident turned into a relatively harmless thing of some 85 trains held up for a few hours, and some 20,000 people, in addition to the few hundred directly involved in the frightening experience, were kept in the dark.

But there were present all the ingredients of a mass catastrophe, which could have taken hundreds of lives. Aid the question is, what is it going to take to wake people and authorities up to the continually increasing dangers of our steadily deteriorating railroad system?

It is going to take the catastrophe itself to make us all realize that the progressive neglect of standards of maintenance and repair, the progressive incompetence of high management and the progressive decline in the morale of the employees must be brought to a halt by some drastic means?

How long are we going to keep heading straight through the red signals? It may be, of course, that we should agree on the degree of the existing danger more easily if we had more agreement on what the cure may have to be. We have all been brought up to think that there is something immoral and wasteful and inefficient about having the government try to run the railroads.

New England Loses Again

Poor little old New England just doesn't have the votes, that's all. And it hasn't seemed very sharp, either, in any of that legislative horse-trading by which it might accumulate strength beyond its own numbers.

The almost automatic result is another defeat in Congress—defeating the President ever to abandon the present quota system for controlling the import of oil to this country.

This means that New England, which reputedly pays the highest price for oil of any region of the United States, cannot look forward to any kind of relief from that change to a tariff system which was recommended, earlier this year, by the presidential task force which has been studying the problem.

It also means that the President, if he ever intends to do anything to alleviate the New England problem, is probably going to have to do so by direct means, and not, as he and his advisers may have hoped, by some gesture of compromise hidden inside some use of the tariff power.

Perhaps the President, some day, will want something from New England. Perhaps the oil industry, some day, will want some helpful votes from New England. In any case, New England's chances of oil price relief seem to depend almost entirely on some such cynical possibilities, rather than on the actual merits of the New England case.

"I Do Not Understand" There are a good many aspects of the current scene that I confess I do not understand. I do not understand, for example, how it can be believed that—in whatever cause they're used—shouted obscenities and mindless vandalism bring anything but discredit to that cause.

I do not understand how understanding is served by burning books or banks—or by flaunting the Vietcong flag while desecrating our own. And I do not understand what it is that our society has done to some of its sons and daughters—very few, I am sure, but so often described as among the gentlest and brightest of your generation—that drives them to seek peace along with the tactics of terror.

White Faces In The Mirror

The good people of Warren, Michigan, had placards up the other day for George Romney, a former Governor of Michigan who is now Secretary of Housing and Urban Development in the Cabinet of President Richard M. Nixon.

The city of Warren is a suburb of Detroit. It has 130,000 inhabitants, most of them employes of the area's automotive industries. Of its 130,000 inhabitants, there are 26 families who are black.

We need, I think—if I may offer a modest prescription—three things. We need to restore confidence in our ability to solve our own problems. In short we need confidence in ourselves—and in each other.

We need to change. Another factor influencing Rostenkowski was his knowledge that Rep. Torbert MacDonald of Massachusetts, chairman of the House subcommittee that drafted the House version of the bill, would actively oppose the plan to dump particularly the well-heeled republican party—haven't dared attack the bill outright. Its chief sponsor, Russell Hemenway of the liberal National Committee for Effective Congress, has skillfully played down all partisan angles.

If it goes to a Senate-House conference, however, it goes behind locked doors, with an infinite variety of techniques available to opponents to stall it there indefinitely.

Consider, for example, the differences in the two bills. The Senate version becomes effective 30 days after signing and applies only to Presidential and Congressional races. The MacDonald version specifically exempts 1970 and applies to government contests as well as to all primaries.

The Fumbling Democrats

WASHINGTON — A series of inexcusable blunders by the very Democrats who stand to profit most from passage of a proposed law limiting campaign television spending has ended any chance of the new law taking effect in time for the 1970 elections.

Indeed, delays in bringing the bill to the floor of the House, in the opinion of some party strategists, could imperil the bill itself, quite apart from its application to this fall's Congressional elections.

To guard against loss of the spending-limitation bill (probably the single most important piece of legislation to today's Democratic leadership) House Democratic leaders reached a strategic decision at a closed-door meeting of Democratic whips last Thursday (July 29).

The decision: To strongly recommend to the entire Democratic membership that the House version of the bill be brought to the floor at once for passage before Congress leaves town Aug. 14 for its summer recess. Once passed, the Senate version of the bill, which passed the Senate April 14 and which specifically applies to the 1970 election, would immediately be substituted for the House version. The bill would then go straight to the White House for President Nixon's signature.

From Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma, the majority leader, and Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana, the party's deputy leader, on down through the ranks of some 12 of the party's 19 assistant whips, that strategy won total agreement. In addition, there came a consensus to call a special caucus of the party for Aug. 6, at which the leadership would gain maximum agreement underwriting its basic strategy.

Then the trouble began. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, chairman of the House subcommittee that drafted the House version of the bill, would actively oppose the plan to dump

Thought for Today

"Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt creep in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This day is all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on yesterday."

Court Rejects Challenge To State's Primary Law

(Continued from Page One) NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—"It may well be that the plaintiffs have strong feelings about this legislation," the court said.

Three men bent on running for office had asked the court to declare unconstitutional a provision that says a prospective candidate for district office must get 20 per cent of the delegate vote in the district convention.

The suit was filed by James E. Tansley and William J. Verrier, veteran Democratic state senators from the Waterbury area, and Peter Rotolotti Jr., a candidate for district office.

The court noted that the legislature could reasonably conclude that the "strength of weak" grounds existed for districting and probate districts and that the challenged statutes are constitutional.

Section Two Absentee Ballots Ready Next Week For Servicemen

Absentee ballots for use in the Nov. 3 state election will become available next Tuesday to members of the Armed Forces and to their spouses and dependents, living where they are stationed.

Secretary of State Ella T. Grasso today urged all members of the Armed Forces to submit applications for absentee ballots, either on the official state application form, which is available from each town clerk in Connecticut, or on the federal application form provided by the federal department of agency.

Members of the Armed Forces who are in active service of the army, navy, air force, marine corps, coast guard, coast and geodetic survey, public health service and merchant marine of the United States, and all regular and reserve components thereof.

Any member of the Armed Forces who will be absent from the town in which he is qualified to vote during the hours of voting is eligible to receive an absentee ballot, the secretary noted. On application, the ballot and a copy of the proposed absentee ballot will be sent to the voter's home.

The families of servicemen, Mrs. Grasso said, can assist in the preparation of absentee ballots by notifying the town clerk or registrar of voters within the town of their residence of the names and addresses of members of the Armed Forces and their spouses and dependents living where they are stationed. The town clerk will then mail absentee ballots to them.

Mr. Grasso urged Armed Forces personnel to make application for their ballots early in order to insure their timely receipt for casting in the election. The ballots must be marked and mailed back to the town clerk no later than 10 p.m. on Nov. 2.

State regulations make no provision for absentee ballots for the Aug. 12 and Aug. 19 primaries.

Town GOP Supports Meskill and Weicker

The Manchester Republican Town Committee has formally endorsed the candidacies of Cong. Thomas Meskill for governor and Cong. Lowell Weicker for U.S. senator. The two are the Aug. 12 Republican primary.

Meskill is being challenged for the GOP nomination by State Sen. Wallace Barnes of Farmington. Weicker is being challenged by State Sen. John Lupton of Weston.

The town committee's action came at its meeting last night. Meskill is the state Republican gubernatorial candidate in the First Congressional District.

The action was by voice vote, with none opposed. It was recorded in the minutes as unanimous. In addition to formally backing the party-endorsed candidate, the committee voted to work for active election, through personal efforts and through financial contributions.

Unanimous vote was taken were Mayor Nathan Agostini, candidate for state comptroller; State Rep. Donald Genovesi, an announced candidate for re-election; and Deputy State Rep. Donald Genovesi, an announced candidate for re-election.

One of those issues, he said, is the $200 million estimated deficit in the state budget. "I have always felt," Agostini said, "that a candidate who proposes programs and doesn't take the people behind them is absolutely immoral."

Genovesi, who had announced only Tuesday night that he will seek re-election, received a standing vote of thanks for his decision.

He, in turn, thanked the committee members for their participation in going to the polls. "It was a hard one to make," he said.

It Was That Kind Of A Day For A Cookout

Nurses bring cool drinks, hamburgs, hot dogs, salads and desserts to the 45 patients at a cookout on the shady grounds of Manchester Manor Nursing Home. Records of songs from the early 1950's through the great band era were played for quiet listening and for dancing at the home's first cookout, yesterday afternoon and evening. The patients needed no sleeping pills last night—sign that the event was a success, one nurse said. The home plans a recreation event each month. (Herald photo by Pinto)

The wedding is planned for Sept. 5 at the Church of the Assumption.

Heralding Politics

Roger B. Bagley of 64 Dale Town committed members and other Democrats, I feel at the moment that our party will not run a candidate to oppose Judge Wallcut.

The Republicans followed a similar action last November, when they declined to endorse a Republican candidate for state representative from the 18th Assembly District.

The district now is represented by Democrat Francis Mahoney, who has announced that he will seek re-election.

Bagley, when he resigned his post, said it was to avoid any possible question of conflict of interest. His daughter, Miss Daryll Bagley, has a contract to teach kindergarten at Manchester.

Bagley, an attorney, has been associated with the Travelers Insurance Co. since 1964. He is a member of the Republican Town Committee and is a former chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Republican candidate in the 18th Assembly District is incumbent Donald Genovesi, who is a Democrat. He is a member of the Republican Party, professor of chemistry at the University of Connecticut, and a chemist residing in Guatemala.

Members of the Greater Hartford Chapter of the national Republican Society, the moderate wing of the Republican Party, prefer State Sen. Wallace Barnes as the GOP nominee for governor.

Nazaroff Takes Stand In His Own Defense

By DOUG HEVINS (Herald Reporter)
The manslaughter trial of John Nazarov of Manchester continued yesterday in Hartford County Superior Court, and Nazarov took the witness stand in his own defense.

His attorneys, John Berman and Courtney Bourne, had Nazarov relate most of the details leading up to the January shooting of George Vilbrin, also of Manchester.

The defense began its case late Tuesday afternoon, after Asst. State's Atty. Joseph P. Shelley Jr. rested following the testimony of Nazarov's girlfriend, Joanne M. Breton of Rockville.

The trial began Tuesday of last week. Nazarov, 27, is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Vilbrin, 32, during a traffic argument that followed a traffic accident at Spruce and Oak Sts. on Jan. 8.

Nazarov was originally charged with first degree murder, but the charge was lowered to second degree. On March 18, a grand jury returned to indict him on the murder count, and the manslaughter charge was filed.

Testimony Began
Nazarov's testimony yesterday was corroborated by Miss Breton's testimony Tuesday. They related about the same facts as the coroner's inquest that revealed late in February. At that time, Deputy Coroner Wil-

Ham J. Shea Jr. found that after they had spent a few hours at the home of Nazarov's friend, Mark Kneec at 48 Madison St., Nazarov and Miss Breton decided to go to the West Side Italian Kitchen. After leaving the restaurant, Nazarov decided to look for his car, a Valiant, which had been missing for two days. Testifying that he suspected that his wife had it, Nazarov and Miss Breton proceeded to the 200 Maple St. home of Mrs. Nazarov.

Here they saw the Baker car, the Vilbrin car leave, and they followed them, ending up at Oak and Spruce Sts. There was a lot of commotion around Nazarov's car, with Mrs. Nazarov and Mr. Baker trying to get in. When Vilbrin appeared, and tried to pull Nazarov from his car, Nazarov said he was terrified.

Nazarov, testifying Vilbrin's alleged attack, remembered the nine-shot revolver he had in the floor of his car, grabbed it, and fired. Nazarov said Vilbrin was lunging toward him when he pulled the trigger. After the shooting, Nazarov fled the scene, and was arrested at 10:30 p.m. following a car carrying his estranged wife, Kenna, driven by a friend of hers, Mrs. Judge Baker. Also following Mrs. Nazarov was Vilbrin, in the former's car.

Miss Breton had picked up Nazarov from his job at the Boston Mfg. Co. in Hartford. In the afternoon, and they facts as the coroner's inquest that revealed late in February. At that time, Deputy Coroner Wil-

DAC Survey To Seek Ideas For Educational Programs

Beginning Monday, residents of Manchester will be asked to participate in a town-wide drug situation survey sponsored by the Drug Advisory Center and Public Attention to Narcotic and Drug Abuse (PANDA), in an effort to set up a base line for educational activities for the following year through the Drug Abuse Prevention Center.

The survey was designed by Mark H. Swerdloff, Coordinator of the Drug Advisory Center, and Frank E. Vogel, a state rehabilitation counselor, in an effort to determine what types of programs will be most effective in combating the growing drug abuse situation in Manchester.

Groups of concerned citizens will be contacted by telephone and postal card before they are visited by the Drug Abuse Prevention Center. Volunteers will have letters of introduction from the Drug Abuse Prevention Center to identify themselves.

All information collected in the survey will be held strictly confidential and used only for data purposes.

Dr. Stanley Fisher, director of the Rehabilitation Research and Doctoral Training Program at the University of Connecticut, has donated consultant time to help use the data meaningfully for the Town of Manchester.

It is expected that meaningful data which can be used to gear educational programs will be available in a short while.

Volunteers who are willing to help provide this service are asked to contact Mark H. Swerdloff at the Drug Advisory Center as soon as possible, so that they may be trained in surveying methods.

Vandals Steal Materials From Housing Project

The Mayfair Gardens housing project in the North End was broken into sometime over the weekend, resulting in extensive vandalism and loss of materials for the Rocky Marciano Center.

The total loss was estimated at $1,500. Eight buildings in all were entered. Walls were kicked in, and power and telephone lines were cut.

Three electric heaters, two hot water heaters, two power drills, and 200 feet of electrical extension cord were taken.

Israel Accepts Peace Plan

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel accepted today the United States peace proposal for the Middle East and agreed to a three-month cease-fire with the Egyptians.

A government announcement from rightist elements who had threatened to quit Prime Minister Golda Meir's coalition government if it accepted the American proposal.

In Washington, officials expressed hope that the cease-fire might be put into effect without delay. But they said they had no way of knowing if it would be maintained in the Arab East.

Egypt and Jordan have already accepted the plan, but Palestinian guerrilla organizations have split on the proposal with the principal commando outfit vowing to continue the fight.

The Israeli Cabinet reached agreement at its fourth meeting on the U.S. proposal, which encountered strong opposition from rightist elements who had threatened to quit Prime Minister Golda Meir's coalition government if it accepted the American proposal.

Saigon Barracks Bombed

SAIGON (AP) — A bomb ripped through the ground floor of a U.S. enlisted man's billet in downtown Saigon tonight, causing extensive damage to the building and a half dozen injuries.

American demolition experts said the blast was caused by a 40-pound plastic charge adjacent to the building and a half dozen injuries.

Some rock fans abandoned their cars as much as five miles away from the site, and today's night, it was the only music of the day.

But some said they didn't mind one called the civilian mind or one called the gathering "a massive act of civil disobedience" — with or without music.

By early Thursday evening, state police were estimating 10,000 youths on the slopes of the day.
