

Ex-Aide Tells Why JFK Chose LBJ

NEW YORK (AP) — Former presidential aide Kenneth O'Donnell says John F. Kennedy chose Lyndon B. Johnson as his running mate in 1960 because he felt that if elected he would be unable to "live with" Johnson as Senate majority leader.

O'Donnell, who served in both the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, said that four years later Johnson wanted Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana as his vice president for the same reason — to remove him from the key Senate leadership post.

O'Donnell's observations in the Aug. 7 issue of Life magazine are from a book he is writing. In addition to domestic politics, the account offers new background on early decisions on America's involvement in Vietnam.

O'Donnell said Kennedy, after consulting with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Mansfield in 1961 and 1962, agreed with both on "the need for a complete military withdrawal from Vietnam" but planned to withhold announcement until after the 1964 election.

Mansfield confirmed Sunday that Kennedy had "definitely and unequivocally" made the withdrawal decision in the spring of 1963, the Washington Post reported in today's editions.

On the selection of Johnson for the vice presidency, O'Donnell quoted Kennedy as offering this explanation at the 1960 Democratic convention:

"I'm 43 years old, and I'm the healthiest candidate for president in the United States. You've traveled with me enough to know that I'm not going to die in office. So the vice presidency doesn't mean anything."

"I'm thinking of something else, the leadership of the Senate. If we win, it will be by a small margin and I won't be able to live with Lyndon Johnson as the leader of a small Senate majority. Did it occur to you that if Lyndon becomes the vice president, I'll have Mike Mansfield as the Senate leader, somebody I can trust and depend on?"

On the Vietnam involvement, O'Donnell wrote:

"President Kennedy first began to have doubts about our military effort in Vietnam in 1961, when both Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Gen. Charles de Gaulle warned him that the Asian mainland was no place to be fighting nonnuclear land war."

"MacArthur was extremely critical of the military advice that the President had been getting from the Pentagon," he wrote. "MacArthur went on to point out that there were domestic problems—the urban crisis, the ghettos, the economy—that

FDA Hits Mouthwash Advertising

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says eight mouthwashes offer little more than lip service.

As a result, the agency today ordered the manufacturers to knock off advertising claims of killing bad breath, curing sore throats, or ridding common colds.

If they desire, the FDA says, the firms may continue to advertise "a pleasing effect to the mouth." But no medical claims.

The makers and their products: Johnson and Johnson's Merin Oral Antiseptic, Lever Brothers' Pepsodent Antiseptic Mouthwash, William S. Merrell Co.'s Cepacol, Warner Lambert Pharmaceutical Co.'s Sterisol, Purdue Frederick Co.'s Betadine, Iodine Pharmaceutical Co.'s Iodine, Kadesonol Corp.'s Eudemon Mouthwash and Gargle and Merck Co.'s Tyrolaris Mouthwash.

The FDA said a National Academy of Science study showed the mouthwashes had little or no germ killing power and "all were found to be ineffective."

Nuclear Sub Unleashes Navy Missile

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)

With an observing Soviet spy ship kept at a distance by a U.S. destroyer, the nuclear submarine James Madison today successfully unleashed the Navy's new multiple warhead Poseidon missile.

After the firing, the Russian fishing trawler moved in and crewmen scooped up pieces from a plastic membrane pierced by the missile when it broke out of its launching tube in the deck of the Madison. The pieces floated to the surface.

To do so, the trawler, the Laptev, maneuvered near a Navy support ship, the U.S.S. Oboliv, on the observation island, and Navy officials said it was violating international law by not giving the U.S. ship right of way.

The Madison fired the two-stage rocket launch.

It was the first submerged launching for the Poseidon.

The trawler forced an earlier postponement of the shot when it probed to within 200 yards of the James Madison during a practice firing run July 24.

The bullet-shaped Poseidon, being developed as a deadly deterrent in the U.S. nuclear arsenal, rode a column of steam

U.S. Reported In Cambodia Air Action

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes were reported flying combat missions in support of Cambodian troops southwest of Phnom Penh today, while to the north of the capital Cambodian and Communist troops battled in the streets of Kompong Thom.

Little ground fighting was reported in South Vietnam, but the U.S. command reported 33 enemy rocket and mortar attacks in the past 24 hours, the largest number in a day since June 28. The command said all the casualties were Vietnamese, including 10 killed and 24 wounded in the town of Glong Trom in the Mekong Delta.

In Laos, Indochina's third war front, a new peace initiative got under way, but there was no prospect of speedy and decisive developments.

U.S. Air Force Phantoms were reported in action in Cambodia in support of five government battalions massed on the slopes of the Kiri Rom plateau for an attempt to retake the 2,000-foot-high area from Viet Cong and North Vietnamese who captured it last week.

Col. Sar Hor, the government and deputy military commander of the province southwest of Phnom Penh, told Associated Press correspondent T. Jeff Williams that the U.S. Phantoms were dropping bombs and napalm on Kiri Rom and on enemy forces between his headquarters at Kompong Speu and Kiri Rom.

These forces have cut Highway 4 through the province, cutting off Phnom Penh's oil supplies from the country's only refinery on the coast and blocking reinforcements and supplies for the government forces at Kiri Rom. The provincial governor told Williams his immediate goal is to reopen the highway and meanwhile the government force at Kiri Rom is marking time.

There was no confirmation in Saigon of the reported American air action in Cambodia. Nixon administration spokesmen in Washington, in an attempt to head off congressional criticism, have said U.S. air activity in Cambodia would be directed against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong supply and troop traffic moving through eastern Cambodia toward South Vietnam. But Williams said Cambodian officials in the Siem Reap-Angkor area, in northwest Cambodia, recently told visiting newsmen that U.S. F105 jets from bases in Thailand were providing close air support for Cambodian forces around Siem Reap.

A military spokesman in Phnom Penh said 22 Cambodian troops and 11 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong had been killed in fighting Saturday and

In Caribbean Ferry Sinks, 200 Feared Dead

NEVIS, West Indies (AP) — A 75-foot motor launch designed to carry about 180 people on its ferry shuttles between the islands of Nevis and St. Kitts had aboard "probably 270 to 300 persons when it capsized and sank in five minutes Saturday, a government official said Sunday night.

Between 175 and 200 were feared dead. Forty-three bodies had been recovered by late Sunday, and there were 88 survivors. All were believed residents of the two islands except three Roman Catholic nuns — two from Canada and one from England — who were drowned.

The U.S. Coast Guard said some of the others might have been washed out to sea. But most were believed entombed with the boat's captain, James Ponteen, inside the steel hull in 130 feet of water about a mile off the southeast tip of St. Kitts.

Coast Guard divers were to inspect the hull later this week. Harbormaster Edrade Walwyn estimated the number of passengers aboard the ferry Christina when she went down Saturday, but he said ticket records were aboard the boat.

Lee Moore, information officer for the local government acknowledged that the government ferry "had on slightly too many passengers" and added, "We understand the capsizing was caused by uneven distribution of passengers."

The Coast Guard quoted an unidentified government official as saying the ferry "started leaning, and the people flocked to one side, with the result that it capsized."

Curfew Ends In Hartford

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Only minor disorders were reported Sunday night in the racially troubled North End as a dusk-to-dawn curfew appeared to be having effect in its third night.

Police said there was at least one looting incident and a 16-year-old youth was treated at University-McCook Hospital for gunshot wounds in the back, then released. The youth, Angel Rodriguez, was charged with breaking and entering and larceny under $250, police said.

Rodriguez was the 23rd person wounded in the city's disorders since Thursday.

Police today lifted the 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew which had been in effect for three nights in the North End.

Saturday night's incidents, which included minor episodes of rock and bottle throwing, hospitalized four persons — two of them with gunshot wounds. The conditions of both gunshot victims had improved by late Sunday night, and the other two were not seriously injured.

trouble soon after it left Baseterre, St. Kitts, on the 11-mile, one-hour trip to Charlestown, Nevis.

A survivor, Samuel Lake, 24, an electrician from Nevis, said: "From the time the boat left the pier I saw it was leaning to the right side. The captain made the boys shift their weight a mile out."

"All of a sudden she gave a heavy lean again. She started to come back, but a small motor boat cut in front of us, and I guess we swerved passing it. All of a sudden it made a lean, and that was it."

"It started leaning," said Diana Williams, 19, a bank clerk returning home to Nevis. "Everybody started jumping off. It went down suddenly. People were yelling; some with words, some just screaming. We started holding onto the boat. Then it went under, and everybody seemed to be hanging onto each other."

"At one time I was surrounded by dead bodies. I was the only living body in the water."

She said she stripped off her clothes and swam through the shark-infested water to shore.

Seventy-nine of the 88 survivors owed their lives to Phillip Miller, 37, who came to Nevis from Pompano Beach, Fla., four years ago and is a commercial fisherman.

His 37-foot cruiser, Sea Hunter No. 1, brought in 65 persons on its first rescue attempt, 62 of whom lived. The next trip he and his crew pulled 17 survivors and 27 bodies from the Caribbean.

"My crewmen were pulling in bodies of their own relatives," Miller said.

A friend of Ponteen said the captain told him eight hours before the final voyage that the boat was unsafe. Ponteen said he had decided to retire because

Many Flee As Hurricane Eyes Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Several coastal communities were ordered evacuated today and thousands of residents fled the approaching rains, menacing tides and winds of Hurricane Celia.

But some people refused to go, though the storm grew worse.

The Weather Bureau said tides of 10 feet could be expected and winds would reach 115 miles per hour. The highest earlier estimate was 7-foot tides—still high enough to cause widespread damage—and winds of 90 miles an hour.

"Celia deepened and dropped in pressure," said Russell Mozeney, Corpus Christi meteorologist.

Hurricane force winds of 75 miles an hour were forecast for 1 to 2 p.m. with the main portion of the hurricane striking about 4 p.m. "in or just to the south of the city."

The Corpus Christi Police Department asked the sheriff's department to notify citizens of Rockport and Aransas Pass: "Emergency evacuation should start immediately."

Mozeney said, "We're calling for evacuation of Mustang Island, Padre Island, Rockport and Aransas Pass—and all other low-lying areas."

The islands are finger like sand spits running much of the length of the middle and lower coast and are favorite vacation spots. Aransas Pass and Rockport are about 30 to 40 miles north of Corpus Christi.

"The mood of those who fled was soured by Bill Roman, 65, of Palacios, who declared from a refuge at Bay City: "When they holler hurricane, I'm gone."

Powder Ridge Party's Over

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

MIDDLEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — State police arrested at least 70 people on a variety of drug charges Sunday as thousands of young people departed the site of the Powder Ridge rock festival.

A few hundred youths remaining at the festival site kept up an impromptu rhythm band and flute music, camped in tents, or sold their remaining drugs. Many of them said they too would be gone soon, although a few vowed to be the last to leave.

The festival was banned by a court order last Monday, but an estimated 25,000 youths showed up and provided their own rock fest.

The prosecutor enforcing the order had ruled there could be no music, and early in the festival the owners of the ski resort complied.

But by Saturday night the audience had taken matters into its own hands. Amplifiers were hooked up and more than 10,000 listened to little-known rock bands playing on two hillside.

Thousands more milled between the bands, hawking drugs in an area in front of the ski lodge that came to resemble a marketplace.

The bands had announced there would be more music Sunday night but most of the audience had left by sundown and the plans fell through.

Young people laden with packs trudged out to the highways to hitch rides to points as distant as California. By nightfall, state police were removing barricades from town roads and, once again, allowing normal traffic on them.

Police had refrained from entering Powder Ridge in uniform during the festival, and had told the crowd they would not forcibly break up the gathering.

But on Sunday police began arresting dozens of persons as they left the festival site, charging them with offenses such as the sale and possession of marijuana, LSD and prescription drugs.

Sixteen undercover agents of the state police worked in shifts around the clock during the festival. During their surveillance of persons alleged to have sold drugs to police agents, photographs were taken of the transactions, said State Police Capt. Wayne Bishop.

A total of 300 arrests were made since the festival crowd began arriving in the middle of last week.

About half of the arrests were for hitchhiking.

Dr. William Abruzzi, a general practitioner from the small town of Wappingers Falls, N.Y., has a simple explanation for his

Jesuit Sought by FBI Calls Himself 'Criminal for Peace'

By BETTY MEDSGER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — "If I were a Black Panther, I probably would've been killed by now. But I am white and I am a priest and that seems to make a difference."

A fugitive from justice, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, was explaining why he thinks he has eluded the FBI since April 9, the date he and other members of the "Catonville Nine" were ordered to prison.

"If I were black, a few other people would've been mistaken for me and arrested by now," said the 49-year-old Jesuit.

In an interview that took place in a building in New York, the address of which was unknown to the interviewer, Father Berrigan described the new development he and his supporters are trying to create in the civil disobedience philosophy.

"Everything was worsening since Catonsville," he said, referring to the burning May 17, 1968, of draft records in Catonsville, Md. The "Nine" — all Catholics and Italy, were convicted June 6, 1968, of charges of robbery and assault.

"We were planning to follow through and take the consequences of prison, but since then we've been forced to rethink what good men do, what non-violent men do — so many things — courts can't work for political prisoners."

The conclusion: "Good men" not only break "unjust" laws; they also evade the "unjust" punishment ordered by the law that protects the war makers.

Then, what of the nights that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a "mentor" of the Berrigans and their peace movement followers spent in Birmingham and assorted jails? Was Dr. King foolish, according to the new Berrigan theory?

"No, no, he wasn't," says Father Berrigan. His next words are very measured: "I think if he were alive today he would be willing to take this same step."

"We're not defenseless or silent. Since he died, this is one way to not be silent. The earlier steps are not enough now."

Described by friends as "prettily devout," Father Berrigan now sees his fugitive status as a "new way of being a Jesuit." He speaks as though he would like to open a new seminary to train people in how to exist in the underground.

He has gotten along there quite well himself. He estimates that about 200 persons have been involved in harboring him or making arrangements for him to be harbored. They have been mostly nuns, priests, and academic types. Each week, he says, he meets with three or four groups. The hideouts reportedly dot the east coast and the Midwest.

Asked if he should not be willing to face the consequences of his acts — years in prison — he replies: "I'm paying the price; in a way I'm in prison now."

Actually, the flight from the FBI started out to be a symbol. Instead of turning themselves in April 9, Father Berrigan, his brother Philip (a Jesuit priest) and three others decided that as a symbol of their unwillingness to cooperate with the system they would refuse to go to prison. Three of them were captured relatively soon, as all five of them had expected to be.

But for Daniel Berrigan and Mary Moylan, a nurse convicted in the case and also not yet captured, the symbolic gesture has become a new life style. Father Berrigan says it is a new movement.

Father Berrigan admitted this week that he had expected to be caught April 17 when he spoke to about 15,000 persons at an anti-Vietnam war rally at Cornell University. A friend approached him on stage while the lights were off and asked if he would like to split.

"A group of us were willing to try it without knowing whether it would work," he said.

He says people from all over the country have volunteered to help. One of the unidentified persons who led the interviewers to Father Berrigan this week said, "Understand this is not just a Catholic thing. I'm Jewish myself. The number of people who want to support him is growing by leaps and bounds."

The "invitation" said Father Berrigan, always comes from a friend of his. Not engraved, but instead done carefully from pay phones instead of possibly tapped private phones, a Berrigan friend will approach, say, a priest or a married couple and say something like: "In the name of peace, will you harbor

Black, White Wed in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A white law clerk and his black bride were honeymooning today against Mississippi's laws banning interracial marriages.

"We're merely two people in love," said Roger Mills, a 24-year-old native of Boston, Mass., after his marriage Sunday to Berta Linson, a native of Mississippi and a legal filing clerk in the Jackson law office where Mills is employed.

She is also 24.

"It's nothing new," Mills said. "It's been happening for years, but this is the first time the state of Mississippi ever officially sanctioned it."

"We wanted a quiet wedding but the Southern National party prevented it by stepping in."

The couple applied for a marriage license two weeks ago but was blocked by a state court injunction obtained by the Southern National party. The conservative political organization contended the marriage would violate state laws against whites marrying persons with one-eighth or more Negro blood.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Harold Cox cited U.S. Supreme Court decisions which voided similar laws and ordered the state to issue the license. His action came only hours before the clerk's office closed Friday for the weekend and permitted the wedding to take place as scheduled Sunday.

The ceremony before 200 guests in a Negro Methodist church was performed by the Rev. Rims Barber of Greenville, a white minister with a National Council of Churches antipoverty agency. He told the bride and groom they had set an example for the world to follow.

"THE WAY I HEARD IT"

By John Gruber

There is genuine mourning in the musical world over the death of George Szell who has been permanent conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra since 1946. During this long tenure he raised the orchestra to a level that made it very probably the finest symphonic organization in the United States and one of the very topmost orchestras anywhere in the world.

Szell was born in Budapest in 1897, so he was 73 when he died last Thursday night. His family moved to Vienna during his infancy and he began the study of piano in that city at a very early age. It was soon apparent that he was musically precocious, and at the age of 11 he debuted with the Vienna Symphony, playing his own rondo for piano and orchestra.

By the time he was 17 he had progressed to the stage where he conducted his own symphony with the Berlin Philharmonic and played Beethoven's "Eroica" concerto on the same program. Despite some early successes as a composer, and as a pianist, it was as a conductor that he was to become world famous.

Sometime in his teens he met Richard Strauss who became very interested in him and secured him the post of conductor at the Municipal Theater in Strasbourg, which was then the German city. Here he remained for two seasons.

In 1919 he became music director of German Opera in the city of Frankfurt, capital of the then new state of Czechoslovakia which had been carved out of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. There was considerable agitation for the post to be given to a Czech and Szell left after two years. He rose to being the Incidentally, Prague wanted him back as soon as they had gotten rid of him, for they were unable to find a Czech of his abilities, but Szell never returned on any sort of permanent basis, although he made numerous guest appearances, conducting German opera there.

In 1950 he came to the U.S. for the first time where he conducted the St. Louis Symphony for a while, and then went to Scotland where he was when World War II broke out. He then moved to Vienna during his infancy and he began the study of piano in that city at a very early age.

unworthy reputation. Beyond that, it might make it difficult for business-like governmental inspectors on the job to enforce top-flight performance in the contract.

Nobody expects the members of Congress to move, of their own accord, to give up the privilege of announcing, with modest pride, that such and such a firm in their district is about to receive a contract of so many millions or billions.

Still, the very basis of taking pride in making such an announcement has to be the inference that a little special influence was possible, that something a little better than routine examination of bids had been made to happen for the firm lucky enough to be in the Congressman's district. The practice ought to be halted. We think the public, after a while, could learn not to miss it.

What Students Are Taught

With due respect for the distinguished individuals involved, we doubt that especially penetrating insights into the causes of campus disruption are likely to result from either the typical panel investigation being run by former Governor Scranton or the typical apology for students offered last week in Vanderbilt Chancellor Board's report to President Nixon.

Not that it's difficult to list some of the obvious factors in student unrest—the war, the draft, student boredom, the tortured course of the decade that has been the whole of a 20-year-old's politically conscious experience. Yet when you have said all that an unsatisfied feeling remains; you are left still wondering why all those things worked themselves out the way they did.

What these explanations leave out is the power of ideas. This is also an area most inquiries are likely to overlook, though one would think examining events at universities without reference to ideas would be like examining events in banking without reference to money. To an important extent, surely, student disruption grows out of the intellectual currents of our time. In this and other ways we are only beginning to understand these currents have grown extraordinarily pervasive to the interests of society.

A number of scholars have in various ways touched on this malaise among the intellectually oriented elite. To take only the academic luminaries, we think of Daniel C. Batfield, Nathan Glazer, Edward C. Banfield, Zdzislaw Brzezinski, Daniel Boorstin. We might also add Michael Lerner, for his article on "The big city" in The American Scholar, and Andrew M. Greeley, for his recent and perceptive contribution to the New York Times Magazine, "Intellectuals as a 'Silent Group'." It might also add the error Scranton's group to ask such people whether student disruption might be related to the current mood of the adult intelligentsia.

For our part, we are quite convinced that disruption by students has deep roots in the attitudes of professors. This is not merely a matter of an academic fringe actually advocating anarchy, though that plays a certain part. Nor is it merely a matter of the typical faculty lacking the courage and cohesion to discipline unruly students. For a faculty could hardly be expected to expel students for an excess of zeal in expressing the very attitudes the faculty is so proud to have instilled in them.

Chief among these is the notion that the life of the nation and the world would prove quite tractable if only everyone listened more to the intellect. The intellectual has always felt himself never before the 1960s had this feeling found wide support. A growing social class oriented to the intellect, almost complete penetration of the media, acceptance at court during the Kennedy era.

As the intellectual class grew in prestige and influence, though, the content of its thought grew only in dogmatism. The Vietnam war became not only mistaken but immoral; American society became irredeemably racist. The dogma carries a suspect tinge.

Too many of the mistakes in Vietnam were made by representatives of the intellectual class that gave the State Department its undersecretaries, the White House its basement advisers and the Pentagon its civilian whiz-kids. Too often the demagogues of racism served mostly to make the demagogue feel virtuous. But no matter, the conclusions became part of the intellectual class-creed, and history may yet view the 1960s as the decade in which the prevailing liberal orthodoxy reduced itself to an absurdity.

For many students, university experience during this decade amounted to a force-feeding in these doctrines: That intellectual prescriptions can solve all problems (even those that have resisted solution for a millennium), that the proper prescriptions are those favored by the intellectual class (no matter how narrow a social stratum it occupies), that failure to adopt these "obvious" prescriptions mean political leaders are stupid or venal (never that they are sensitive to a broader range of society or a broader range of reality).

There are of course outstanding professors who apply their critical skills even to this creed, but they are few. The intellectual class is remarkably inbred; a sample survey of political scientists finds, for example, that only 12 per cent of them voted for President Nixon. Given an intense and one-sided socialization in this narrow class, students not surprisingly develop a sturdy sense of self-righteousness, which is the stock-in-trade for those who would occupy buildings, close campuses and buy professors who dissent from the dogma.

The recent outbreak of disruption is not too surprising in light of the intellectual pre-eminence that did so much to foster the disruptions have also proven their first casualty. How will serious men take an intellectual class that is unable to govern a university, but presumed to govern the whole society? -- WALL STREET JOURNAL

Inside Report

Finch For Norton For Hickel?

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — A top-level play that would put Robert Finch in as Republican National Chairman under the 1970 election is under quiet discussion within President Nixon's political high command.

The contemplated switch depends on many unpredictable, most important of which would be a decision by Secretary of Interior Walter Hickel to resign.

Hickel, whose mini-revolution inside Mr. Nixon's Cabinet just after the Cambodian intervention made him something of a hero, definitely won't resign before the election. But Hickel now has on his desk a fat contract from a major East Coast publisher who wants him to relate his experiences inside the Nixon administration.

The fact that he has not yet said no to the publisher is seen by Hickel intimates as a clue that he will decide to quit the Cabinet around the new year. He definitely will not sign any book contract while still working for President Nixon.

Hickel's resignation would open the way into the Cabinet for Rep. Rogers Morton, Maryland, now Republican National Chairman, who wanted the Interior job after the 1968 election. With Morton out of the National Committee, the President's close friend Bob Finch would be asked to take over with broad political powers.

Finch already has charge of all Cabinet-level political operations in his new role as Presidential coordinator. But Finch in about becoming National Chairman, on grounds that he would be more valuable without the distraction of operating the National Committee.

Political insiders deny that ideology would play any part in a Finch move to the National Committee. Rather, the point of the move would be to put Mr. Nixon's oldest confidant in position to organize the party and the Administration for 1972.

A footnote: Hickel is under no pressure from the White House to quit. In fact, some top Republican politicians feel he is the President's single biggest political asset in the Cabinet. But Hickel remains in fundamental disagreement with some Nixon policies and is not happy that the Interior Department has been stripped of major environmental functions.

The intricacies of California Democratic politics are building up an increasingly open feud between two aggressive, charging anti-war Congressmen: Rep. Allard K. Lowenstein of New York and Philip Burton of California.

Talking to colleagues in the House Democratic cloakroom, Burton has not concealed his irritation with Lowenstein for coming to California to endorse Rep. John V. Tunney, Democratic nominee for the Senate.

The reason: Burton wants California liberals to withhold their endorsement of Tunney until he openly endorses Chavez's grape-worker strike. With Chavez nearing success, Burton felt Tunney might be ready to break his neutral stance. Now, he grumbles, with a prestigious liberal like Lowenstein coming west to endorse Tunney, his strategy has been undercut.

Moreover, Burton is furious over Lowenstein's intentional snub during his California visit. Speaking in Burton's home town of San Francisco, Lowenstein lauded two Congressmen from the bay area—Democrat Jerome K. Wadley and Republican Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey—as participants in his new role as Presidential coordinator.

Approaching Lowenstein on the House floor after his return to Washington, Burton made his displeasure known in animated language.

A footnote: Lowenstein's aid to Tunney was invaluable. At the Los Angeles home of Democratic National Committee man Steve Reinhardt, Tunney was attacked by liberal firebrands who backed Rep. George Brown in the primary. Lowenstein lectured them effectively on what to beat Republican Sen. George Murphy.

We live in a society that constantly demands instant gratification. One has only to watch television to know that there is a pill for every problem. No wonder so many people are turning on to drugs to get good feelings.

If a person tries drugs a few times and stops, it may be considered experimentation. However, if a person continues to use drugs, there is something more involved.

Many people are of the opinion that smoking pot is not a serious problem. True enough, not all pot smokers go on to harder drugs, or become drug addicts. Most addicts, however, did start out as pot users.

Most pot smokers will project some kind of behavior problems.

I do not consider myself an authority on drug abuse, but as the mother of three drug addicts, I have acquired some very valuable first hand knowledge.

When a parent becomes aware that his child is using drugs, it is usually a very traumatic experience. I can relate to this all too well. The first thing you have to know is that you are not to blame. This is very important. You may have contributed to your child's problem but no one is responsible for anyone else's behavior, only the person that behaves. You must then accept the fact that a problem exists. It will not go away if it is ignored.

There are many places where help is available. I only wish it had been so when I first learned of the drug problem in my home.

Mark it at the Drug Advisory Center daily and a concerned person until nine Thursday through Saturday. Manchester now has a Hot Line to help with problems every night until 8 a.m. except Sunday.

Concerned people are joining Panda on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. Panda has a very comprehensive program outlined for himself, but it needs the efforts of many, many more people to function effectively.

Manchester has a serious problem. I think that the growing use of drugs in our community is only a symptom. There is a great need for education and a real commitment between all our citizens. The drug problem is not only a police matter or medical problem, but rather one that we all must share.

Hayakawa's Cure

We think we remember when B. I. Hayakawa, now president of San Francisco State College, was something of a middle road moderate on the controversial college scene.

His appearance before the President's Commission on Student Unrest, in Washington the other day, was a startling illustration of what kind of "polarization" if that word has to be used, is taking place in this country today.

President Hayakawa has, in the course of his own campus policies become more and more the hero of the disciplinarian right. The more they have applauded him the more he rises to please them. Trying to please them, he has to keep reaching for something new and fresh and original and starting to say. Down before the President's Commission, he reached the headlines with very little trouble.

His straight-faced recommendation was that this nation adopt a system of compulsory national service for all youth at 18, the service to be of two or three years duration, and civilian or military according to the choice of the individual student.

Then when they got to college, President Hayakawa said, they would know what they wanted to get from college, and wouldn't be found treating colleges like play pens as, he said, the young immature activists of the present college scene do now. He saw no weakening of his own case or recommendation when he admitted that "bright students have been the principal troublemakers." They specialize in making trouble, he said, because they are bored otherwise.

President Hayakawa's suggestion is, in any case, not only certain to be received with great popular acclaim from all of us who remembered how zealously we improved each shining hour of our own educational period, but also likely to entice some of our social planners. Why not be sure, before we let these young people return to their campuses, that they have really learned their lesson? Why not, if they still show signs of being too bright or too bored, keep them in that compulsory national service for a longer period, perhaps, if necessary, until they have reached either an age or condition of real responsibility?

But perhaps we trespass upon Dr. Hayakawa's platform future. A suggestion certain to be so well received will need continuing amplification from its author.

Announcing Defense Contracts

One of the many impressive and sound recommendations made by the President's special panel studying the nation's defense effort doesn't stand much of a chance.

The panel recommended an end to the nice custom by which, whenever the executive branch at Washington is about to award a defense contract, it extends to the senator or congressman from that state or district the privilege of announcing, 24 hours in advance of the formal award, that the award is about to be made.

It wasn't that the panel objected directly to the idea of having members of Congress try to make a little political hay out of the ritual, if their constituents were that glib.

What the panel feared was the possibility that the contractors involved might believe that they owed their good fortune to their Congressman. This would spread cynicism among the contractors, and give government itself an

Heralding Politics

By Sol R. Cohen
Mrs. Vivian Ferguson of 78 Forest St. has declared her candidacy for the Republican nomination for state representative from the 20th Assembly District.

The district now is represented by State Rep. N. Charles Boggi, a Democrat. Boggi is seeking nomination and election to his second consecutive term. He is being challenged for the Democratic nomination by Mrs. Phyllis Jackson.

Mrs. Ferguson, wife of Herold Ferguson, writes the weekly Herald column, "From Your Neighbor's Kitchen." Active in the affairs of the Manchester Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, she is chairman of its Gift Shop.

Her candidacy is her first try at public office. Her father, the late Harry Frank, was a Republican town director.

The Republicans will endorse their candidate for the Republican nomination for the 20th Assembly District. The Democrats will endorse their candidate Aug. 18 at 8 p.m. at Manchester High School.

The only contest is the one between Boggi and Mrs. Jackson, for the Democratic nomination in the 20th Assembly District.

Democratic State Rep. Donald Goveal and Republican Rep. Bagley, in the 19th District, is expected to be named to oppose incumbent Republican State Rep. Francis Mahoney.

The temporary Manchester headquarters for Cong. Thomas Maselli, the party-endorsed candidate for governor, is at 27 Tuck Rd., the home of Roy Thompson, Maselli's local campaign coordinator.

The temporary Manchester headquarters for Sen. Edward Marcus, candidate for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator, is at 260 Main St., the business address of Paul Phillips, Marcus' local campaign coordinator.

Manchester Mayor Nathan Agostini, GOP candidate for state comptroller, spoke in the Bar-B-Que sponsored by the Lion Republican Town Committee.

His schedule today calls for appearances in Hingham and Middlefield, Middletown and Meriden. It includes an interview over a Meriden Radio Station.

The Manchester Republican Town Committee will have its annual Chicken-Bar-B-Que sometime in September, on the Dougherty Lane in Center St. Town Chairman M. Adler Dobbin has promised that "as much of the state ticket as possible will appear."

Maselli will be in Manchester early Friday night in his campaign visit. He will attend a reception at the home of Town Councilman John Rice, given for town committee members and their spouses. If he arrives in Manchester early enough, he will spend some time greeting shoppers.

Democratic Town Chairman Ted Cummings has declined comment on reports that he is being urged by Manchester Democrats to accept appointment to the Board of Directors, to fill a vacancy. Democrat Richard Wylie is resigning from the board, effective the end of this month, because he is moving to Pennsylvania.

Cummings would neither deny nor confirm the reports.

The committee will campaign actively for State Rep. John Lupton of Weston, candidate for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator.

The chairman of the committee is Antoni N. Sadiak, Jr., of Rockyville, son of the late former U.S. senator.

Another member is Everett Palaska, Republican town chairman of Killington.

State Sen. Wallace Barnes, who is challenging Maselli for the GOP nomination for governor, said Saturday that one of his chief goals as a governor would be to make Connecticut a drug-free state.

He promised to be "the most uncompromising adversary any senator, in or out of office, ever encountered."

He said he would consider reducing criminal liability for drug users, especially minors, "since they are largely the victims of people far more dangerous than they are."

Make Voters

A 9 to 6 p.m. voter-making session will be conducted Wednesday in the Manchester town clerk's office in the Municipal Building.

It will be the last chance to sign up with a party for those who want to vote in the Aug. 12 Republican primary or the Aug. 19 Democratic primary.

To become voters, eligible applicants must be at least 21 years of age, must have been Manchester residents for at least six months, and must be U.S. citizens.

The following year, O'Donnell says, Mansfield returned from a visit to Southeast Asia and "emphatically advised, first, a curb on sending more military reinforcements to South Vietnam and, then, a withdrawal of U.S. forces from that country's civil war."

After criticism from Mansfield in 1968 for his support of the Diem regime in Saigon, O'Donnell says, Kennedy told him he agreed the United States should withdraw but told him that "if he announced a total withdrawal... before the 1968 election, there would be a total conservative outcry against turning him to the president for a second term."

O'Donnell was White House appointee under President John F. Kennedy and after Kennedy's assassination Nov. 22, 1963, he remained under President Johnson as a special aide until after the 1964 campaign.

He also says that Johnson was clearly opposed to the Robert Kennedy would try to force himself into the vice presidential race.

Johnson's efforts to get Mansfield a running mate and him to become "resentful and peevish" over mounting presidential losses, O'Donnell says.

Dodd Prefers Hard Hats To 'Soft Heads'

NORTHFORD, Conn. (AP)—U.S. Sen. Thomas Dodd told members of the Operating Engineers Union at a meeting here Sunday that they should be proud of being called "hard-hats" saying it was a "badge of honor."

The 63-year-old lawmaker, who is seeking re-election as an independent, sported a hardhat himself. "I'd like to be known as a hardhat myself because I don't want to be known as a soft head," Dodd said.

"It was the hardhats of this country who built it," Dodd said. "Your fathers built it, my father built it and we don't want to see it torn apart and destroyed."

Commenting on the Senate campaign, Dodd said: "There are an awful lot of fellows who want my job and they're going to have a helluva job getting it, I'll tell you."

"I'll give them the campaign the likes of which they never saw. I guess they think I'm over the hill. I guess they'll find out I'm not."

He chided a would-be challenger, then took out after police officers summoned to investigate the disturbance.

More Revisions Seen For Welfare Reform

BY JOE HALL
Associate Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon's welfare reform proposal faces major revision in the Senate Finance Committee, but at least one member has assured the White House the program will go before the full Senate.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Dele., said he had received assurances to Nixon through a top White House official.

"In all my years on this committee, it has never killed a major piece of legislation by holding it up, even when the chairman and ranking members were opposed to it," he said.

If President Nixon wants a Senate vote on this bill in this session, I am certain the committee will see that he gets it."

At the same time, Williams, a strong critic of the measure in its original and revised versions, said bluntly, "This bill is in trouble in the committee as it now stands."

"I believe a big majority of the members will insist on changes before they will vote to report it out."

However, administration strategists in the Senate are not greatly concerned about any amendments the committee might adopt to cut back on the Family Assistance Plan which the legislation would set up.

They believe there will be enough votes on the Senate floor to knock out any such changes.

A more important uncertainty surrounding the fate of the legislation appears now to involve the issue of state and local assistance plan of a guaranteed annual income. It would provide a family of four with minimum payments of $1,000 a year, plus $500 worth of food stamps. State aid could provide for any supplements.

The measure would double the number of welfare recipients to about 26 million and add $4 billion to the present $5 billion federal welfare bill by allowing poor persons who work to receive benefits. The $1,000 payment would be gradually reduced for working recipients until earnings reached $3,000.

Senate leaders have agreed to return the session if legislative business is not finished.

The Finance Committee must hear Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson before it can begin on public witnesses. Hodgson will start his testimony Tuesday.

The committee staff said it had 40 requests from outside witnesses to testify on FAP and a related measure incorporating social security benefits and tightening the medicare and medicare health programs.

The staff estimates it will be well into September before testimony is completed. That would not leave much time for the session.

Jesuit Priest A 'Criminal For Peace'
By CLAY R. POLLAN

What man? Will you share his legal jeopardy? Condemned, like many priests, by the desire to change people, he thinks his confronting them with this "opportunity" to place themselves in jeopardy for him "can move people to more important ways of dealing with the law."

He said that if "this" continues for a few months he wants to extend his jeopardy to "this collar Catholic. These people—the hardhats—don't understand that the young are examining the wave for justice that they started years ago."

Father Bergin says he finds the roots for his action in the radical New Testament; not in high schools throughout the East and the Vatican. While loving the Jesuit community and its taint, he'll "never leave the church," he says. "I hope for institutional change."

"I think the Church right now is unrecognizable as a Christ's Church," he said. "The institutional church means zero to me. Jesus bleeds in the White House and in the streets. And the President goes to church. They admire each other's hypocrisy and their own. The alienation between the two institutions makes renewal impossible in either institution."

He continues to talk about his hopelessness and his despair. Though positive about his own action, he seems basically hopeless about the future. He says a vehicle for American students to help rebuild bombed cities is the only hope. "On the movement's powerlessness, he says, 'We're not the liberals. An account of us, we seek immediate and concrete goals. I think I've become somewhat like a Vietcong' in this regard."

The immediate and concrete goal of his present moment is to give hope through the continuance of this underground existence. "Every day I survive in the underground is a sign of hope—hope that the warmakers are not omnipotent. I would never retreat," he said. "If I push comes to shove, I will give up easily. He says he would not be surprised if in the end it will be an armed show that catches him. He has been informed of searches by the FBI at convents in New York City and at a wedding in Baltimore.

"For as long as I can stay out—I might be caught tomorrow—I want to remain a criminal for peace," he said.

It was time for him to move to the next hideout. On top of the plain shirt and baggy brown slacks he now put an old, worn dark sports coat. The old and an old workman's cap. With the youthful-looking haircut faded to a crew cut, he looked like a man going off to work. Except for the sandals and love beads. Someone was waiting to meet him. He turned to the center of the room and said, "ahalom."
