Public participation plans for connector under way

State and federal transportation officials are beginning to plan a public participation phase of environmental studies under way on the proposed Interstate 84 connector in Manchester and East Hartford. The project includes widening of the Wilbur Cross Highway (I-84 and I-94) near the Manchester-East Hartford boundary and construction of an expressway linking the Manchester-to-Bolton stretch of I-84. Consultants preparing the environmental evaluation of the project are starting to meet with local officials to arrange public meetings on the plan. State and federal officials are inviting citizen opinions before the first draft of the environmental report is done. The draft report is scheduled for release in May. It will be followed by formal public hearings and preparation of a final report. The latest estimates on building the I-84 connector range from two years to seven years from now. The connector and widening project, which at one time was part of plans for an entirely new superhighway from East Hartford to Bolton, has been Wetherfield in the drawing boards for more than 10 years. The 7.2-mile segment of I-84 from Manchester's Spencer St. to Bolton Notch, which opened in September 1971, was referred to as a "road to nowhere" when it opened because it didn't connect to any other expressway. The consultant preparing the environmental statement is the Wetherfield engineering firm of Close, Jensen and Miller. Anyone interested in preparation of the environmental report should contact Robert Gubala, environmental engineer for the state Department of Transportation, 24 Wolcott Hill Rd., Wetherfield, 566-5704.

No apartment tenants take offer of shelter

Mrs. Ann Ronzello, the Manchester woman who offered shelter to burned-out tenants of the Great Meadow apartment complex in Rocky Hill Monday, said today no one took advantage of her offer. Mrs. Ronzello said she offered help to people before and she'd do it again. During the December 1973 ice storm, she took in several people when she regulated electrical power at her home and most of Manchester was still blacked out. Mrs. Ronzello says her efforts to help people have been very rewarding. "It makes life a little more interesting," she said.

HARTFORD—Complaints that some druggists are refusing to fill Medicaid prescriptions have prompted a probe by the state attorney general's office. Some druggists have reportedly refused to fill prescriptions since their fees was cut from $2.20 to $2.11.

Pleads innocent

NEW HAVEN (UPI)—Mark Harrington, 22, of Suncook, N.H., Wednesday pleaded innocent to charges that he set fire to an elderly man on a Meriden street last June.

Harrington is charged with the death of Lillian Bowen, 71, who was doused with gasoline and set on fire as she left a beauty parlor June 13. She died 24 hours later. New Haven Superior Court officials said Harrington's trial may not come up for several months because of a backlog of 500 jury trials. Harrington is being held on $100,000 bail at Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown. He was found driving to stand trial.

Manchester—A City of Village Charm

Three arrested after wild chase

By DOUG BEVINS and JUDY KUEHNEL Three men were in police custody this morning, facing several charges after a chase from East Hartford, through South Windsor, to a vacant farmhouse in Manchester. A search was still under way at noon for other involved in the case, which included the firing of a shotgun at an East Hartford policeman.

At one point during the chase, police considered a Connecticut Co. bus to set up a roadblock as the pursuit left East Hartford and entered South Windsor. The chase began at about 5:40 a.m. and by 9:15 a.m. authorities had apprehended the three men and seized a small arsenal of weapons and ammunition. Police gave this account of the case.

At 5:40 a.m., East Hartford Police received an anonymous report that a black man, apparently carrying a shotgun, was seen near Allen S. Goodman Inc., a wholesale liquor business at 180 Goodwin St., East Hartford.

Policeman Herbert Weeks was dispatched to the scene, and while en route he observed two suspicious cars leaving Goodwin St. and heading north on Ellington Rd. South Windsor Police reacted to the chase route. South Windsor officers stopped a Connecticut Co. bus and asked its driver to park the bus across Oakland Rd. at a roadblock. The pursued car, carrying three men who spotted the bus, pulled into a private driveway near Petersen's Hardware, 230 Oakland Rd. Weeks drove his cruiser into the driveway behind the stolen car.

Weeks didn't even have time to get out of his cruiser when two of the men in the stolen car jumped out of the vehicle. One of the men pulled a shotgun from beneath his coat and fired at Weeks.

Weeks, still in his cruiser, wasn't hurt. The shotgun blast went over the top of the cruiser, and the two men outside the stolen car began running. Weeks then jumped out of his cruiser, approached the car, and told the man remaining in the rear seat to "freeze." The man obeyed the order and was taken into police custody. In the back seat of the stolen car, police found a sawed-off shotgun with a live shell in its chamber, a .35-caliber revolver with six live rounds, and a bandolier (bullet belt) with 21 shells.

The suspect, who refused to identify himself other than by the name Jesus Christ, also had several shells in his pockets, police said. He was taken to East Hartford Police Headquarters and was being held on $25,000 bond this morning. Meanwhile, South Windsor and East Hartford Police were full pursuit of the two men who ran from the Oakland Rd. address. State Police from the Hartford barracks were called for help, and they responded with nearly 20 officers and cruisers and several dogs to track the suspects. Snowmobiles were also summoned to the scene. The search began in a desolate area.

China mourns death of Chou

HONG KONG (UPI)—China's collective leadership proclaimed almost a week of national mourning today for Premier Chou En-lai to permit 60 million Chinese to pay tribute to the man who played a vital role in the birth and growth of the People's Republic of China.

It was announced that funeral services would be held Thursday for the 78-year-old Chou who died Thursday morning after a four year battle against cancer. Observers assume the funeral will be held in Peking, the capital of the People's Republic.

Chou's death elevated Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping to the highest point of his stunning political comeback from the disgrace he suffered during China's Cultural Revolution of the 1960s. It was considered almost certain he would succeed Chou as Premier and continue the current Chinese policies.

Peking radio announced that according to Chinese custom no foreign government will be invited to the funeral. This apparently scotched reports by Japanese Foreign Ministry sources in Tokyo that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would attend the funeral.

Teng has carried out the day to day duties of the premiership while Chou was ailing and it was he who conferred with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during their recent visit to Peking. American diplomats said they expected no change in U.S.-China relations although Chou was reported to have got along with Kissinger far better than Teng.

Although Chou and his allies mourned Chou, there was scant recognition of his death in the Soviet Union, now a foe of the nation with which it once formed a powerful alliance. Only a few words were carried by the Tass news agency and printed in the Russian papers.

President Ford sent a message of condolence and former President Richard M. Nixon, who met Chou during his 1972 visit to China, said "only a handful of men in the 20th Century will ever match Premier Chou's impact on the history of the world."

The Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and the State Council, which Chou headed for more than 25 years, announced the most elaborate memorial services ever held for any leader of the young People's Republic of China.

Saturday and Sunday were set aside for people to pay last respects to his remains. Mourning ceremonies were scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The main, final memorial service was set for next Thursday.

Chou's death removed from the Chinese leadership one of the world's most influential diplomats—a brilliant scholar with unflinching energy who emerged from wars, famines and party struggles with ever-increasing power.

But his death was not expected to have any effect on the leadership lineup since Teng had already stepped into Chou's shoes. The 71-year-old Teng is now considered the second most powerful man in China. Only Chinese Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung, himself 82 and ailing, carries more clout.

The diminutive Teng, a former party secretary general, was purged in 1966 during the Cultural Revolution and returned from political limbo in 1973.

Political observers say his return to the political summit is so remarkable it could be compared in the West only with Richard Nixon's winning re-election as president.

Since 1973, the hunch-backed Teng has been restored to the party's powerful politburo, elected a vice chairman of the party and named a member of the politburo's standing committee. Last year he became the first civilian chief of the general staff of Chinese armed forces.

Chou and his wife, Teng Ying-chao, had no children.

Chou became well-known in the United States in the late 1940s when President Harry Truman dispatched Gen. George Marshall to Chungking in a futile effort to reconcile the Nationalists and the Communists and avert the civil war that was to end in Communist victory in 1949.

When the People's Republic was established on Oct. 1, 1949, Chou became premier and foreign minister. He never relinquished the premiership but resigned from the foreign ministry in 1958.

Chou and his wife, Teng Ying-chao, had no children.

Wholesale price index drops in December

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Another big drop in food prices sent the Wholesale Price Index down 0.4 per cent in December for the first decline in the key inflation barometer in six months, the Labor Department said today.

There was a dramatic improvement in wholesale prices in 1975, but a sharp decline in prices in December brought the index down to 178.7 from 179.1 in November.

The department said food prices for wholesalers and grocers plunged 2.5 per cent in December to more than offset increases for nonfood items and services. The index for all items advanced 0.1 per cent in December, unchanged from November.

But the total number of employed persons increased by 2

Voters accessories to public spending

A recent remark by Yale University president Kingman Brewster has been widely, and approvingly, quoted:

"Until we can devise ways by which the inflationary consequence of a congressman's vote is traced to him with the same particularity which attaches to a ye or nay on a revenue bill, we will not cure the disease of public spending motivated by the desire to achieve re-election.

As with other statements of a similar nature, the implication is that politicians will do anything to get themselves re-elected. That goes without saying. Nobody will argue about that.

But again, what seems to be totally ignored is the fact that it takes two to tango in this matter. If the voters insist on rewarding the big spenders by returning them to office again and again, the voters are at least accessories after the fact.

To complain about inflationary government spending while ignoring the responsibility of the electorate in a democracy is like lamenting about the rise in automobile thefts and burglaries while ignoring the fact that criminals don't buy stolen goods from each other — they sell them to law-abiding citizens happy to make a good deal.

Brewster also seems to be saying, however, that voters are unable to see the connection between their congressman's vote on a particular issue and its effect on inflation, and until they can see the connection, spend and elect and elect will continue to be watchwords of politics.

This may be so, but in this regard the people are no different from the best economic minds in this country who cannot agree on what causes, or cures, inflation. But as it may, it is time we recognized that the contempt so many Americans feel for politicians is a two-edged sword. If politicians will do anything to get elected or re-elected — well, who elects them and re-elects them?

Nonscents make sense

Consumers should brace themselves for a barrage of advertising in 1976 for room air fresheners. This time, however, the hucksters will have something to be enthusiastic about.

Several different brands are being readied for the market containing newly discovered chemicals that actually remove bad odors rather than just making them.

Present deodorizers overpower unpleasant odors, usually with strong perfumes. But tiny amounts of the new "malodor counteractants" almost instantaneously remove any unwanted odor and leave a fresh-air smell. The counteractants were discovered serendipitously during routine screening for possible new fragrances and are said to have been thoroughly tested, both for effectiveness and safety.

But even mindful of Murphy's Law, which in this case could be stated, "If any new product can possibly be suspected of being hazardous to somebody or something, it will be," we reserve our own enthusiasm.

The United States and China after Chou En-Lai's death

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

UPI Senior Editor — WASHINGTON (UPI) — Both Sir Winston Churchill and that talkative senior American official who travels abroad Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plane have had apt words for deciding what the death of Premier Chou En-Lai means for Sino-American relations.

Churchill said in 1939, "I cannot forecast to you the actions of Russia; it is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma."

Read "China" for "Russia." And that senior American official, asked recently upon leaving Peking to say what would happen after the passing of Chou and Chinese Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, made an especially teddy bear face.

He said, "Anyone who says he knows the answer to that is either a fool or a liar."

But if a definitive answer must wait upon events, there are some useable hints and omens. These include:

Senior American diplomats say privately they do not expect Chou's passing in itself to have any immediate effect on U.S.-Chinese relations.

They report Peking is not guided by any one person's whim but by an almost awesome and very chill policy reasoning. Thus, China did not move into ping pong and then heavier diplomatic sport with America for any but the toughest of geopolitical reasons, chiefly a fear of Russia.

Chou died Wednesday but had been a weaker and weaker voice in Peking for more than a year as illness consumed him. Thus his influence on Sino-American policy, of which he was an architect, probably had dwindled to near nil months ago. And no great change in Washington-Peking relations appeared.

A far greater time of nail-biting in Sino-American relations will come when Mao dies. He is 82 and able to cross conversational swords with visiting VIPs still. President Ford and Kissinger on their China visits reported no signs of Mao's leadership collapsing.

But collapse it will. And that will bring on a crunch. For no Peking leader but Mao has been credited with making

Trading a hypotenuse for poetic license

WASHINGTON — That was a poignant little news item out of Los Angeles the other day. It reported that a high school boy had run away from home because he was flunking geometry and feared parental wrath. Possibly there were other, more complex reasons for the kid's defection from the family hearth, but it is easy to believe that his struggles with geometry were at least a collateral factor. If so, the youth has my understanding, and sympathy.

Undoubtedly, a knowledge of geometry is a good thing. Engineers and other men of technology, I believe, swear by it. I don't suppose we could have acquired the atom bomb without geometry. But for some high school students it can be a kind of gratuitous torture. Aspell, as it were, on the rack. A taste of the hemlock. To argue that geometry is, after all, merely logic is no comfort to the sprout who finds it the world's greatest mystery.

A few light-years back there was a high school sophomore in a New England town who was introduced to geometry and as a result almost became the world's greatest bareback rider. Several times he had his meager possessions packed, ready to depart for the sawdust ring, and each time he was deterred only by limited finances. Even in those days, 20 cents didn't go very far.

So this boy, for whom life should have been filled with beauty of a two-base hit and clandestine drags on a Sweet Caporal, suffered through a year of horror. The geometry book may as well have been in Sanskrit for all it meant to him. He could not solve the simplest problem. He not only could not define hypotenuse, he couldn't even pronounce it.

It helped only somewhat that the geometry teacher, Miss Buntington, was the most beautiful woman in the world. Mostly, it made the boy feel like the world's worst heel when she labored long and patiently with him only to meet with failure. She did her best, and her perfume was heady wine, her voice touched by a dulcet compassion, but this was a boy who would have successfully resisted a 10-year geometry tutoring course by Cleopatra. Triangles, right angles — the boy never really understood what was equal to what, and why.

Naturally, he flunked. He was informed by the comely Miss Buntington, in fact, that it seemed unfair to the other, ordinary failures that no lower grade had been created to mark him for the really spectacular dullard he was. Back home, the male parent ruled there would be no more Saturday night movies until he made a passing grade. That year, the boy missed six months of Richard Nixon and Boris Karloff while he toiled at his impossible chore. There were days when he got passing marks, but these were few because they depended upon the girl sitting in front of him holding her head as such an angle that he could get a good look at her paper. Priscilla was a pretty girl, but she had the most maddeningly correct posture in North America.

So let us suffer a little with that Los Angeles runaway. Obviously, there are young males who should be excused from geometry and permitted to white away the school hours studying Shakespeare and learning how to speak French like a native. It seems to me fair enough to trade in a hypotenuse for a poetic license.

Agencies draw wisdom from shallow pools

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower warned, on his retirement, of the military-industrial complex.

Add now, the federal bureaucracy — university complex, less publicized, but as powerful.

A dozen universities regularly furnish an abnormally high percentage of the higher ranking bureaucrats in the major agencies of the government.

A handful of schools year after year receive a sizeable percentage of all research contracts given to academic institutions.

Some major schools reportedly cooperate with agencies of the government to give accreditation and mythical job appointments to certain individuals so that they will be eligible for high-paying influential government posts under special regulations, replacing men and women who have worked their way up through civil service channels.

Then there's the matter of overpayment. The various departments of the government regularly pay excessively high rates to certain universities and other favored academic groups for hurried superficial studies which would not meet the standards imposed by open competition in a free marketplace.

On occasion, I have been asked by friends in the government, as a personal favor, to look over one expensive study or another carried out on matters in which I had some background and experience. I have been shocked, both by the price the government paid for these pieces of research, and by the low quality of much of the material. In some instances it was quite clear that the researcher, usually a Ph.D., had clipped and pasted material from newspapers, books, pamphlets and other such sources, then typed them together with some limited continuity. The research, in short, was abominable. The quality of the language was frequently submarginal. It was frequently difficult to determine what the author was driving at. After a careful study of his paragraphs, it became clear that he was hiding some obvious, simplistic statement behind polysyllabic words in order to make the reader believe he had deep insight into the situation.

In modern English, not a few of these studies are ripoffs. Yet the government agencies go back, time and again, to these same favored universities and private academic groups.

Recent studies have shed some light on these connections. There seems to be a definite pattern of personnel circulation between certain colleges and universities and certain departments, agencies and bureaus of the government. Graduates and professors regularly move into departments, where friends and associates are located, then back to the university or to special research institutions which have become "holding groups" for scholars out of government, perhaps because of a change of administrations, until the time is ripe to move back into the federal system in higher positions. These men, in turn, bring in their proteges who, more frequently than not, receive rapid promotions.

Sometimes, more commonly today than in the past, the circle is enlarged to include certain major corporations. In the main these companies themselves seem to have been heavily infiltrated by the men from the same academic institutions.

One might suppose offhand that these colleges and individuals were chosen for their excellence. As indicated above, the examples of the work I have seen suggest this is not always so. The favored colleges are not always those with the highest reputations. A goodly number of the nation's higher ranking institutions are not represented in appreciable numbers in the upper ranks of the bureaucracy. They are not numbered in the "in" group.

I suggest the growth of these cliques forms an unhappy pattern, dangerously narrowing the base on which government decisions are made.

Democrats expect caucus contests

About 50 Manchester Democrats braved the cold Thursday night and attended an informational and planning meeting of the Democratic Town Committee. The information and planning meeting concerned the townwide caucus Jan. 21 for the 80 seats on the town committee.

Not all of the 50 attending are current committee members. Several Democrats came to hear the procedure for placing their names on the ballots and it was evident there will be contests in at least some of the 10 voting districts. Applications will be accepted beginning Saturday at 9:30 a.m. in the Democratic registrar's office in the Municipal Building, with next Friday

(Jan. 16) the deadline for filing. Because all available meeting rooms in the Municipal Building were being used Thursday night, the Democrats met in Woodruff Hall of Center Congregational Church. Town Chairman Ted Cummings, noting it marked the first time his committee had met in church, labeled it "a good omen for our continued well-being."

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible to teach a 61-year-old man to speak correct English? Joe (not his real name) went only as far as the fifth grade, and his grammar is terrible. I have corrected him in private, but he makes the same mistakes repeatedly in public, which I find very embarrassing. Most of my friends are well educated (so am I), and when Joe and I are in their company, I keep hoping he won't talk much because he is sure to say, "He don't" or, "We wa." He is a fine-looking man of good character who has made a remarkable success in business, but this one fault is too big to overlook. I guess what I really want to know is: Can a 61-year-old man who is smart in money matters learn proper grammar at his age? Or is it too late?

JOE'S LADY FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: A smart person can learn anything he wants to learn if he is sufficiently motivated. The questions here are, "Does JOE think he needs to learn?" And if not, how important is this fault to YOU?"

DEAR ABBY: That letter from ALL WORE OUT IN L.A. gave my husband and me a chuckle. It was from that poor oldie who wanted to know where she could buy some salt peter to slip into her husband's food. Salt peter must be one of those delayed-action chemicals because they gave it to my husband in World War II, and it just started to take effect. Sign me up!

PLENTY OF SLEEP IN ALTADENA

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I recently moved into a new home. We love the place, but we're having trouble with our landlord. He keeps dropping in on us unexpectedly. I have told him several times that he is welcome anytime, but to please telephone us first. Tonight at 10 p.m., this landlord came over to introduce us to his son. I was in my underpants watching TV on our bed, and my wife wasn't dressed, either. That nerdy man used his passkey and walked right into our bedroom! Abby, we like our privacy, but how do you tell a man who is 45 years older than you are to please be a little more respectful of your privacy without seeming disrespectful to him?

STATEN ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: Get a "Do Not Disturb" sign and hang it outside your door. It he drops in unexpectedly, again, "respectfully" point it to him.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question I'll bet many secretaries would like to have answered. In this day of no discrimination and Women's Lib, etc., how does one address a letter to an office of mixed sexes? It used to be correct to say, "Gentlemen," or "Sirs," even though the writer knew there were women in the office. My boss suggested that I write to "Dear Abby" for a real good answer.

SECRETARY...OVER 40

DEAR OVER: Try "To whom it may concern." If that strikes you as being too impersonal, how about "Ladies and Gentlemen"? If that's too formal, skip the salutation (it doesn't mean anything, anyway) and get right on with the message.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You may have some heavy demands placed on your bank balance today. Don't make things worse by buying necessities.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)
Others may find you difficult to get along with today because you persist in doing things your way. Give everyone a vote!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Problems confronting you today are likely to be of your own making. However, if you're aware of this, you can avoid serious repercussions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Situations with friends could become a trifle complicated today. If controversy arises today, you're likely to come out the victor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Give yourself a day of rest today. Relax. Get away from the serious business of making a day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Gauge your audience carefully today. If you see you're opposing unpopular issues, get off the subject. You won't make converts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Let your sense of fair play be your guide today. If you are expecting more than you would give under similar circumstances, back off.

Win at Bridge
Transfer use in slam bidding for his trump, but if South actually has both red suits, North's hand becomes very slammish. His second rebid of three spades shows his slam interest. Without slam interest North would rebid three hearts. Three north or four diamonds. South merely goes to four diamonds second bid to confirm the fact that he really holds a heart-diamond two-suit hand. North is really encouraged now and bids five clubs as a cue bid at the five level. South does not know whether North likes diamonds or hearts. It does not matter to him. He jumps to six diamonds, knowing that North will go to six hearts if he likes that suit. The slam with 16 opposite 12 is a cinch even though neither hearts nor diamonds break evenly.

Ask the Jacobys

A Florida reader wants to know what you should do with:

♠ K J 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♥ A Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♦ A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♣ A Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

The bidding is opened to your left with one spade; your partner bids two clubs and right-hand opponent two spades. We take a decisive stand here and either pass or bid three hearts. We do have a slight preference for the pass.

Berry's World

How do you use the Jacoby transfer on your way to a slam?

You start with the transfer and then bid a new suit. This new suit call is a game force. It may show a two-suit hand. It may just show a feature. South starts with a transfer to two hearts. His next bid of three diamonds is a game force. North has just 16 points.
