Wholesale prices drop

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Wholesale prices fell 0.5 per cent in February, the biggest monthly decline in nearly a year, the Labor Department said.

The overall decline reflected the fourth consecutive monthly drop in food prices and an easing of inflationary pressures on industrial goods.

Wholesale prices, which generally foreshadow prices paid by consumers, have either declined or remained unchanged over the past four months. But February's report showed the biggest single monthly improvement since a 0.5 per cent drop in March, 1975.

Following a 1.8 per cent leap last October, wholesale prices remained unchanged in November, declined 0.4 per cent in December and were unchanged again in January.

The February wholesale price report brought good news for President Ford, who has cited recent improvements in inflation and unemployment as evidence his go-slow economic policies are working. February's unemployment report was to be released Friday.

Wholesale prices for industrial goods rose 0.3 per cent.

Contributing to this improvement was a substantial decline in fuel and power costs caused in late measure by reduced crude petroleum prices under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act.

Food and farm prices fell 2.3 per cent, continuing a trend that began last November. Meat and dairy prices declined along with sugar prices - which had increased during January.

The Wholesale Price Index in February was 179.4, or 4.7 per cent higher than a year ago. This means that goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $179.40.

Food critics, particularly those in organized labor and on the campaign trail, have contended that the economic indicators will sour in coming months.

Udall files claim on liberals; Reagan opens Florida blitz

By LEWIS LORID
United Press International

Morris Udall is describing himself as the only liberal still in contention for the Democratic presidential nomination while Birch Bayh, who had hoped to make that claim, dropped out of the active campaign.

On the GOP front, Ronald Reagan is opening a four-day blitz in Florida before next Tuesday's showdown with President Ford. Ford, looking ahead to the Illinois primary the following Tuesday, starts a two-day Illinois trip Friday and may follow it up with a final Florida visit.

Udall, after finishing second in Massachusetts behind Henry Jackson, went to New York to urge liberals to unite behind him or see the nomination go to Jackson, Jimmy Carter or George Wallace.

Udall predicted the April 6 New York primary may be "the last chance we have to see a mainstream progressive get the nomination."

Udall predicted "a clean victory" for himself in New York. He said his Massachusetts win showed his strength in the big industrial states, which he termed the key to the nomination.

Three Democrats who fared poorly in Massachusetts - Fred Harris, Sargent Shriver and Milton Shapp - said they would keep campaigning.

Harris in Chicago said he expects to pick up many of Bayh's supporters because "a lot of what he says parallels what I'm saying."

"There are no conditions whatsoever that would lead me to withdraw," said Shapp.

Carter claimed Jackson ran a one-issue campaign in Massachusetts, focused on busing but he can't do that in Florida.

Udall branded the charge "malarky." The reason he ran full-page ads in Boston announcing he was against busing, Jackson said, was to counter "the misrepresentation by Gov. Carter, in which he said Sen. Jackson was a segregationist."

Wallace, campaigning in Florida, implied Carter was elected governor

Snow control deficit hinges on luck, weather and patience

By SOL R. COHEN
Herald Reporter

With a little bit of luck, with the cooperation of the weatherman and with the continued patience by town residents, Manchester just might get the season without a deficit for snow and ice control, is the message today from the town's acting superintendent of highways.

"All we can do is play it week by week, and the next three weeks will tell the story," said George Ringstone, who, in his usual job of highway department coordinator, should know where he speaks.

Ringstone said that, as of today, his $35,000 for chemical supplies still has about $9,000 left in it and his $40,000 budgeted for contracted vehicles still has $1,000. Where he is in his budget for town labor, with $25,000 budgeted and $40,000 spent, for a $15,000 deficit.

He said he won't call out contracted vehicles and labor unless a storm of over 2 inches develops, adding, "With a little bit of luck, we might make up the deficit for lower labor from other accounts. If we get that luck, and the weatherman must cooperate, we may not have to ask the directors for more money."

The weatherman appears to be cooperating, at least for the next few days. He's promised a change of showers for Friday and with temperatures in the 50s, and then clearing and fair weather through Monday, again with temperatures in the 50s.

Ringstone praised the patience shown by the public during and after the latest storm. He said he received one complaint Tuesday night and 14 Wednesday.

The town had 9 trucks and crews standing and plowing Tuesday and has 10 out today. Only town labor and vehicles are being used and the men are working their usual hours.

One standby truck and crew were out on duty during the night, ready to go out on complaints.

"I'm asking the public to bear with us a bit," said Ringstone. "We're trying to do the absolute best we can within available funds and without asking for more."

The following five rules for safe driving are recommended by Ringstone. He says they're especially important when streets are slippery:

- SENSE (Use it).
- SLOW (Down).
- SAFE DISTANCE (Keep it).
- SPEED (Don't do it).
- STOP (Observe it).

Researchers try new approach in battle against cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In a radical new approach in the battle against cancer, government researchers are investigating the possible use of synthetic forms of vitamin A to try and prevent some types of cancer from getting a start in the body.

Although the work is highly experimental, it has progressed to the point where the National Cancer Institute is considering testing one man-made version of vitamin A in a few persons considered to be at high risk of developing lung cancer.

The unconventional research was outlined at a seminar late Wednesday by Dr. Michael B. Sporn, chief of the lung cancer branch in the NCI's division of cancer cause and prevention.

He emphasized that naturally occurring forms of vitamin A are too ineffective and, more importantly, too dangerous to use in large amounts in man. Large amounts of vitamin A cause liver damage and other problems. Safer synthetic forms are under development and

House rejects gay rights bill

HARTFORD (UPI) - The leading supporter of a gay bill of rights killed by the Connecticut House, surprisingly with no debate, says the rejection was due to lawmakers' lack of knowledge about homosexuals.

"I was prepared to sit here for at least two hours," said one legislative staffer. A minor measure on dumping fees considered before the gay bill was debated for more than 30 minutes.

Mrs. Hudson said the lack of debate probably was due to the strong lobbying drives by both supporters and opponents of the bill which left few lawmakers open to further arguments on the issue.

Mrs. Tanager argued discrimination against homosexuals was unfair and said it hampered the development of otherwise normal persons whose only difference was a preference for persons of their own sex.

The bill, which failed the House last year by 16 votes, was thought to have gathered some additional votes this year when it was amended specifically to exclude gays from the hiring advantages of so-called "affirmative action" programs.

The amendment was a compromise meant to attract lawmakers who felt it would be improper for

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

One thinks of a terrarium as a glass container, usually fairly small, planted with moss, small leafy plants found in the woods, and always with partridge berries as bright spots of red color.

This is a Christmas gift and, with a glass cover to keep the moisture inside, the leaves will stay green and the berries red all winter.

Terrariums can be made at any season, however, and this spring they seem to have become unusually popular. The Women's Club of Manchester saw a demonstration of terrarium construction recently by Miss Millicent Jones of Bolton and we have a picture of the finished planting.

This is a large terrarium, planted in what was meant to be a fish tank. The metal frame holds glass plates on the bottom and all four sides. It is 20 inches long, 15 inches from front to back and 11 inches deep. It holds a dozen or more kinds of plants.

The general scheme is a miniature hillside, sloping from back to front with a tiny pool of water appearing as a dark patch in the right foreground.

Taller plants are at the back with smaller plants toward the front.

Each plant is in its own small pot, with the pot sunk into the soil mixture of the "hillside" so that it does not show. Different plants, if this is desirable, can have different soil mixtures around their roots. Any plant, if it is not doing well or has grown too large, can be lifted out, with its pot, and replaced.

Other plants Miss Jones selected include a miniature tradescantia, a miniature "stitch-leaf" begonia, a small trailing African violet, jasmine and Pilea depressa, which Miss Jones says has the nickname of "creeping Charlie."

There is a stone that Miss Jones picked up on the beach in her native England, a clump of small shells that have become hardened together into a solid mass, and "some Bolton rocks."

Greater damage

Miss Jones, as we reported last year, is keeping many of her house plants at what most of us would think are very cold temperatures in the sun room of her home. It is fine when the sun shines in the windows on the south and west. It is cold, and sometimes colder, in the night with the radiators shut off.

Her losses this year have been greater than she experienced a year ago. One night, three weeks before we were there, the outdoor temperature had dropped to 11 degrees below zero and the temperature in the plant room fell to 22 degrees above zero.

The plants are hard to

This terrarium was planted by Miss Millicent Jones of Bolton as a demonstration for a Women's Club of Manchester. Glass container, holds a miniature hillside sloping to the front. Since it is newly planted, it contains mostly small green-leaved plants. Flowers will come later. (Herald photo by Pinto)

This was too low for many plants, but there were some surprising survivors. None of her citrus plants was killed by the cold. One lemon plant, old enough at more than 50 years to be called a tree, had leaves as green as ever and one huge lemon almost of grapefruit size. There was a smaller lemon in good condition and one small orange, evidently ripe. The geraniums, to her surprise, were "nipped" but all of her orchids survived without signs of damage. Even a gardenia showed no ill effects.

Isn't it Painless? Dental costs account for only 10 per cent of the $90 billion spent each year in the United States for private health care. That works out to less than $50 a year per person. The Conference Board, a nonpartisan research organization, notes that this low figure is not due to inexpensive costs but to a general lack of dental attention. More than 25 per cent of all Americans have never seen a dentist or haven't seen one for five years or more.

Justice House to give oaths to assistant registrars

Assistant registrars of voters, who will work in the Manchester Bicentennial 100% Vote Drive, will be sworn in by Chief Justice Charles S. House Monday in ceremonies at 8 p.m. in Manchester High School cafeteria.

After the swearing in ceremonies, James Quigley, field director of the 100% Vote Committee, will give details of the proposed voter registration drive. All those interested in participating in the drive are asked to attend this meeting, which is open to the public.

U.S. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, in a letter to Mrs. Lila Cohen, chairman of the 100% Vote Committee, said "I wholeheartedly support the Manchester Bicentennial Committee's drive to register every eligible voter in Manchester and to pull out 100% of the vote next November in honor of the Bicentennial."

The efforts of your committee are commendable. You are helping to incorporate one of the cornerstones of America, our free system of government, into our Bicentennial celebration."

U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker and Secretary of the State Gloria Schaffer, have also expressed their support of the drive to Mrs. Cohen.

In a letter to all local community organizations, Mrs. Cohen urged all Manchester citizens to support the program actively.

Scotland Yard said the bomb apparently was intended to explode in crowded Cannon Street station at the height of the morning rush hour. But the train had just pulled out for a depot.

The injured, five men and three women, were in the front car of a passing train. They were treated for cuts and shock at Guy's Hospital and released.

The bomb, estimated to weigh 10 pounds, went off in the second car of the eight-car train. It virtually destroyed that car.

Some statistics are important

Statistics are the lifeblood of modern politics. We are literally smothered in them from the cradle to the grave.

We probably wouldn't object too much if it weren't for the statistic that three out of four of us just don't understand how we can be told one set of statistics proves this point and another set proves the opposite.

The only statistics we really comprehend is final set of figures that tell us we are over-drawn or that we have an income tax refund coming (if some anonymous IRS auditor doesn't add things up differently).

Yet, despite the aversion most of us have for statistics, we are given data daily to point out dangers, progress, disasters, achievements, security and insecurity.

But despite the fact that eight out of 10 statistical studies aren't worth the statistically calculated distribution made of them, a few are and should be heeded.

The other day the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council reported its statistical study of public school spending in the state in 1975. That is it up 11.8 per cent is no surprising news nor is the statistical statement that enrollment has declined for the third year in a row and is expected to continue through 1980.

The important statistic is that West Hartford spent $1,834 per pupil in 1974-75 and Griswold, in southeastern Connecticut, spent only $799. It is this statistical disparity that supreme courts declare public school funding laws unconstitutional. It reminds us that Connecticut's present funding method has been declared invalid by a lower court and the state Supreme Court will be reviewing that decision.

And it reminds us that the $7 million or so the state has raised and another $7 million or so it plans to raise via the Instant Lottery won't close that gap.

Of course, statistically speaking, West Hartford may be spending too much per pupil and Griswold's contribution may not statistically be as much as it could pay for there are statistics by which we can measure ability to pay.

Right now the state legislature is attempting to cope with an estimated $37 million deficit in the current budget and ways and means to overcome a projected one much larger in the next budget.

The West Hartford-Griswold statistics should weigh heavily on their minds since an adverse court ruling would require many millions more for public education at a time when existing tax revenues just aren't producing it.

Right now, statistically speaking, it appears a 50-50 chance that the legislature may be forced to enact an income tax by the courts.

Which leads us to another statistic: We'll be willing to give 10 to 1 odds now that if an income tax is enacted, any reduction in the sales or property taxes will be temporary, if any. The only sure thing — statistically or otherwise — still seems to be death and taxes.

Pornography termed threat to civilization

To the editor,
If an American is concerned about the direction our country is going in and would like to turn back to our forefathers for a point of reorientation, where would they look? America was fostered in the spirit of courage, piety, and nobility. Somewhere along the way directly opposing spirits worked their way into the picture.

Consider the permissive and profligate spirit of pornography that has spread across the country in the way of X-rated movies, literature, and merchandise. Some of this debilitating, mind-altering literature may be found in the racks where children buy some of their reading material and in stores where the necessary daily milk and bread are sold.

I am sure that in many Americans, the spirit of chastity, wholesomeness, honesty, integrity, and nobility still lives on just as it did in our forefathers, yet there lingers a doubt about whether there is a spirit of true vision or perspective for the future of this our land, that has no doubt been blessed over and above other lands, at least, up to now.

Any thinking American does not want another Denmark, but that is precisely where a gutter-standard in literature, art, and recreation can take America. Pornography affects in the same way smog, raw sewage, and industrial pollutants do; pornography corrodes, ravishes, and "smells." It is an open sewer flowing through our streets.

Communists forbid pornography.

in America it is encouraged. Communists seem to understand much better than we do the truth that Arnold Toynbee wrote in "A Study of History," I quote from Pages 275 and 276 in the abridgement.

"In tragic life, God wot, No villain need be! Passions spin the plot: We are betrayed by what is false within."

This flash of insight (from Meredith's "Loves Grave") was not a new discovery. We find it in earlier and higher authorities. It reveals itself in the last lines of Shakespeare's "King John."

"This England never did, nor never shall, Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror. But when it first did help to wound itself, Nought shall make us rue, If England to itself be true."

Toynbee continues: "It likewise reveals itself in the words of Jesus. (Matt. xv.17-20). 'Whosoever entrench in at the mouth goeth into the belly and is cast out into the draught. But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies. These are the things which defile a man.'

Toynbee says further on: "We are faced with the fact that, of the twenty-one civilizations that have been born alive and have proceeded to grow, thirteen are dead and buried

Editor's Note: Candidates for the political nomination of their parties, and other political leaders, were invited by Newspaper Enterprise Association to contribute articles concerning presidential character: What sort of person should be elected President on Nov. 2, 1976, and why? Following is one of these contributions.

By Charles M.C. Mathias Jr. There is a temptation to take the easy way out of this assignment and to describe the qualifications and character essential to the next President of the United States in terms of those past presidents whom I most respect. But, I am afraid, the resulting picture would be no more revealing than those composite photos which put together the best features of several movie stars hoping to produce the ultimate in physical beauty. Regrettably, they invariably turn out to be pretty unappetizing specimens where the parts of the different faces compete rather than harmonize with each other.

The outcome here would be much the same, I think, if I were to propose that the next President have the intelligence of Thomas Jefferson, added to the wit and compassion of Abraham Lincoln, and infused with the energy and forward thrust of Teddy Roosevelt. It sounds good, but how, and in what proportion, should Such things happen, of course. But what makes this case news is that police acted under a new Supreme Court interpretation of the so-called Miranda Rule of 1966 which requires that authorities must advise a suspect of his rights to remain silent, to have a lawyer, and to be told that anything said can be used against him.

The Miranda Rule still stands. But in December the highest bench decided by a 5-2 vote that after a suspect exercises his right to remain silent about one crime, police may still question him about another so long as he is again advised of his rights.

That would seem to be obvious, right? Preposterously, however, the Michigan Supreme Court had vacated the conviction of one Richard Bert Mosley for a 1971 murder. It stated grounds were that Mosley illegally had been questioned about the murder after he had refused to talk about another offense.

It is strange like the Michigan one that makes one wonder whether certain judges are oblivious to the facts presented to them. Mosley had been picked up for questioning about a series of robberies. He invoked Miranda and interrogation ceased. Two hours later, other detectives informed Mosley of his rights and he did not object to questioning about the murder. When police told him he had been named by an accomplice, he made "self-incriminating statements."

had exercised his right to silence about the robberies the police could not "question him further."

But the police did not "question him further" about the robberies. They questioned him about a second crime. Was the appeals court suggesting that it would have been okay if the police had released Mosley and then picked him up again to ask about the murder?

That doesn't make sense; clearly, the authorities had reasonable cause to suspect Mosley of murder. Had they released him, intending to rearrest him, say, the next day, he might have disappeared.

In the New York case, the youth had invoked Miranda when police asked him about a rape. Meanwhile, other detectives brought in a man who said the suspect had boasted about taking part in several armed robberies. The detectives advised the suspect of his rights, then confronted him with the story that he had bragged about "getting away with" the robberies. The youth broke down and confessed to those offenses.

Justice Potter Stewart might have been discussing the New York case when he wrote for the majority in Mosley that Mosley could have cut off questioning at any time. Said Stewart: "The requirement that law enforcement authorities must respect a person's exercise of that [Miranda] option counteracts the coercive pressures of the custodial setting."

Again preposterously, Justice William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented. Wrote Brennan: "Today's distortion of Miranda's constitutional principles can be viewed only as yet another step toward the erosion and, I suppose, ultimate overthrow of Miranda's enforcement of the privilege against self-incrimination."

How so, Mister Justice? Those incriminating facts say that Mosley was not denied his rights under Miranda; he was duly informed of them in both cases before questioning began. Brennan's answer was that the new ruling failed to ensure "that a confession is not obtained under the influence of the compulsion inherent in interrogation and detention."

Well, I agree that the scenery had atmosphere of a police station are to be a tough grin, and — I hope — somewhat intimidating. But that's where cops have to do their work. So far, there is no law that says suspects must be interrogated in the Police Commissioner's drawing room or at Radio City Music Hall. Twaddle is sometimes amusing, but not when uttered by justices of the Supreme Court.

Charles McCurdy Mathias, Jr., was born in Frederick, Md., on July 24, 1922. After graduating from Harvard College, he gained a law degree from the University of Maryland in 1949. A city attorney in Frederick, Mathias was elected to the State House in 1958. In 1961, he was elected to the House of Representatives, where he served until his election to the Senate in 1968. A ranking member of the District of Columbia Committee, and a respected member of the Appropriations and Judiciary Committees, Mathias has been instrumental in shaping the Campaign Finance Law and the law requiring more disclosure of government information. Mathias is married and the father of two children.

nography is illegal and that communities are free to enforce their own standards of what is offensive against those who would peddle pornography material for profit.

We need to ask ourselves, do we really want this kind of smut in our land? If we don't, are we going to be true to ourselves and speak out against it and stamp it out so we can get on with the calling of a higher and nobler life, so that our children can have a sure sense of direction and don't have to seek answers in drugs and alcohol.

Education is the practice of freedom, an attitude toward life and a never ending process. It brings around the full development of a person and helps people adjust to their environment.

Mathias: Time to tell the truth

Candidates given more money

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Election Commission approved an additional payment of nearly a half million dollars in public matching funds Wednesday to the campaign of Sen. Henry Jackson, who won Tuesday's Massachusetts Democratic presidential primary.

The FEC certified a $495,071 payment to Jackson, bringing his total federal matching funds to $1.8 million — more than any other Democrat except Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

At a meeting Wednesday, the commission also awarded another $252,977 to Wallace, giving him a total $2.446 million in public matching funds — more than any other candidate of either party.

It approved an additional $175,375 to GOP contender Ronald Reagan. With that amount, the former California governor's total matching funds reaches $1.427 million, compared to President Ford's total of $1.027 million.

Beside Jackson and Wallace, other Democratic primary candidates who received further matching funds, and the amounts they will receive, were: Fred Harris $60,350; Sen. Birch Bayh $47,990; Jimmy Carter $44,883; Rep. Morris K. Udall $40,350; Sargent Shriver $22,700; and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp $1,907.

The commission was split over a proposed opinion of its general counsel on what restrictions there should be on spending in the dual campaign of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who is running for reelection to the Senate and as a favorite son presidential candidate in Texas. The majority of members disagreed with General Counsel John G. Murphy Jr., who thought there should be no restriction on Bentsen's spending for his Senate campaign. They said there should be a ceiling, since the Senate campaign practically will benefit Bentsen's "presidential" campaign, although the two are technically separate.

Racial bias questioning limited in juror selection process

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday, in a cautiously worded opinion fully supported by only five justices, that a black criminal defendant in state courts is not always entitled to ask prospective jurors if they are racially prejudiced.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the majority, declared that in the absence of special circumstances tending to emphasize the defendant's race, a state trial judge has discretion to reject a juror's request that jurors be specifically questioned on that point.

But in a footnote, Powell said although there is not always a constitutional right to such questioning, "the wiser course generally" is to ask jurors questions designed to bring out if they are racially prejudiced. He suggested this should be the rule in federal trials.

Wednesday's decision narrowed the scope of a 1973 decision which held that a South Carolina civil rights leader was entitled to specifically ask jurors if they were racially biased.

Powell said that case was special because "racial issues were inextricably bound up with the conduct of the trial."

In this case, the high court reversed a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in Boston that the defendant, James Ross Jr., either be given a new trial or be freed because the Massachusetts trial judge refused to ask questions about race prejudice.

Ross was convicted of assaulting a white security guard at Boston University.

Mike Quesnel breaks finger

Underdog already, Manchester High's basketball team may be further handicapped Friday night against Lee High of New Haven as it was learned leading scorer and rebounder Mike Quesnel has a broken finger on his shooting hand.

Celts' Don Nelson draws foul. Joe Bryant of 76ers made contact.

76ers surprise Celtics, Cowens

NEW YORK (UPI) - The Philadelphia 76ers have been on the verge of collapse for at least three months. Funny thing, though, they never fall apart.

"They play like a bunch of girls," said rugged Boston center Dave Cowens of the 76ers earlier this season. If that's true, Wednesday night the 76ers showed the Celtics how effective Women's Lib can be.

Sacked by 38 points from Doug Collins, 31 from Fred Carter, 25 from George McGinnis and some terrific team defense, the 76ers whipped Celtics' playoffs Cleveland, 108-92.

In the NBA, Detroit beat Seattle, 114-110, Houston downed New Orleans, 113-105, and the Celtics, with Detroit outscored the NBA's Atlantic Division, 6 1/2 games behind the Celtics.

"We have very little strength at center," but the 76ers didn't need it as they practically picked the Celtics apart, with center stealing the ball seven times, McGinnis three and Collins twice.

After Paul Silas's basket, the Sixers then ran off 12 straight points to make it 118-92 with 2:55 left.

Cowens was high scorer for the Celtics with 24 points. Elsewhere in the NBA, Detroit beat Seattle, 114-110, Houston downed New Orleans, 113-105, and the Celtics, with Detroit outscored the NBA's Atlantic Division, 6 1/2 games behind the Celtics.

"I feel that the most important matches are the doubles, and we still have our doubles teams intact. We have two of the best doubles combinations in the world. The USA, on the other hand, has the two best (Ashie and Connors) singles players in the world."

"I predict that the winner hinges on the two doubles matches," Stolte concluded. Predictions, to Ralston, are "just a waste of time. It's on the court that counts. 20-8, and kept the momentum up in the fourth quarter to expand its lead to 91-81. Curtis Rowe and Eric Canadinas, 4, Golden Seals 2. Yvan Cournoyer scored two goals for Montreal and Guy Lafleur and Jacques Lemaire got one each. Both of California's goals, by Fred Abern and Rick Hampton, came on power plays.

Maple Leafs 4, Blues 1. Darryl Sittler scored his 34th and 35th goals for Toronto, which has won six of its last seven games. Jerry Butler scored the only St. Louis goal against Wayne Thomas.

Bruins 5, Kings 3. Johnny Bucyk scored three goals for Boston and goalie Gerry Cheevers remained unbeaten through six games as the Bruins stretched their unbeaten string to 11 games. In their last 19 outings, Boston has lost only once while winning 16 times. Los Angeles remained only two points ahead of Pittsburgh in their duel for second in the Norris Division.

WHA. Bernie MacNeil scored his second short-handed goal of the game after 23 seconds of overtime to lift Cincinnati past Cleveland and Norm Ullman and Tim Sheehy scored two goals each as Edmonton beat Calgary, 6-4.

Aetna World Cup shows 'new look'

By EARL YOST

Officials promised a "new look" to the 1976 Aetna World Cup tennis matches starting tonight at the Hartford Civic Center but they didn't expect last minute withdrawals of Rod Laver and Dick Stockton.

Instead of the usual opening match featuring celebrities from the entertainment world, a mixed doubles match will be staged tonight with Fred Stolte, Australian captain, teaming with Sweden's Ingrid Bentzer against Dennis Ralston, American captain, and Wendy Overton.

That was announced in advance. The biggest bombshell in the eighth annual WCT matches were dropped yesterday when Stolte said Laver was scratched due to illness in his family and Stockton, who was most impressive in both a singles and doubles practice session yesterday, was ruled out due to back misery by Ralston.

Laver was the No. 1 drawing power with the Aussies who have won five of six previous Aetna events. The second major change announced was the fact the No. 1 or No. 2 players from each team will not play in tonight's singles matches, but the No. 3 men, Australia's John Alexander and Bob Lutz of the USA.

"I predict that the winner hinges on the two doubles matches," Stolte concluded. Predictions, to Ralston, are "just a waste of time. It's on the court that counts. 20-8, and kept the momentum up in the fourth quarter to expand its lead to 91-81. Curtis Rowe and Eric

Neither the Atlanta Flames nor the New York Rangers appear to be anxious to put a lock on third place in the Patrick Division, although the Flames are likely to get stuck with it by default.

The Rangers, a playoff team for the last nine years, admittedly are facing their last chance to keep alive that streak. But they saw their winless skein extended to six games Wednesday night when Rick Blight scored with only 25 seconds left to give the Vancouver Canucks a 3-3 tie.

Atlanta, meanwhile, has looked like anything but a playoff team in the past month with only four victories to show for its last 22 outings, including a 3-2 loss to the Detroit Red Wings Wednesday. Still, the Flames own a nine-point lead over New York with time running short.

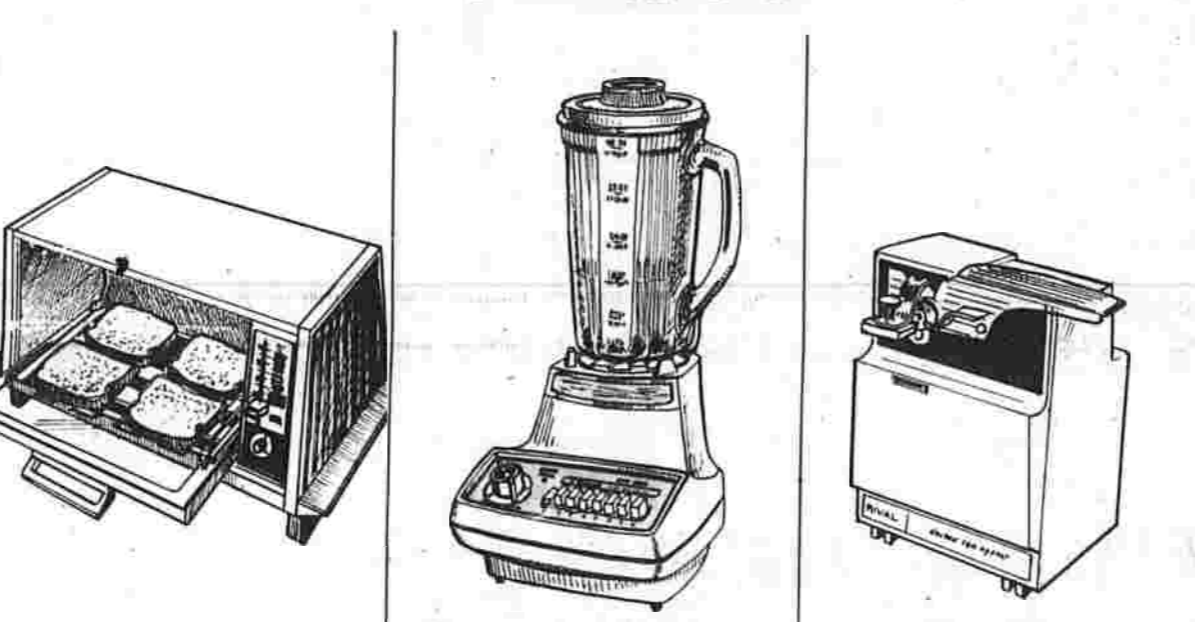

Despite their falling attempts, the Rangers still are hopeful of escaping the cellar. They'll have a chance to do something about it since they met the Flames twice this weekend, at Atlanta Friday night and in New York Sunday night. "Sure we have to win both games," said Greg Polis of the Rangers. "Anyone who says anything different is crazy. We can be only five points back and we still have a game in hand. We know what we have to do."

Mike Walton, making his return to the NHL after 2 1/2 years in the WHA, scored a goal and assisted on two others by Blight as Vancouver gained the tie. Phil Esposito, Pete Stenkowski and Polaris scored for New York. Rick Lapointe, Mike Bloom and Michel Bergeron stalked Detroit to a 3-0 lead. Atlanta unable to do anything against Glacium, finally broke through with less than eight minutes left while it enjoyed a two-man advantage. Claude St. Sauver scored the goal.

In other National Hockey League games Wednesday night, Montreal beat California, 4-2, Toronto beat St. Louis, 4-1, and Toronto beat Los Angeles, 5-3. In the World Hockey Association, Cincinnati edged Cleveland, 4-3, in overtime, and Edmonton beat Calgary, 6-4.

UMass, UConn paired tonight

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) - Top-seeded Massachusetts meets Connecticut and Providence plays Holy Cross tonight in championships.

UMass, left out of the playoffs last year despite winning the Yankee Conference championship, was 1-4 this season and again champion of the conference. Connecticut, 15-9, won a berth in the playoffs Saturday by virtue of a win over the University of Rhode Island.

"I'm delighted to be in the tournament," said UMass coach Jack Leaman. "UMass had an outstanding season. Each player on the team complements each other."

Leaman said Massachusetts and Connecticut were a "nice team match. We may be weak on one side of the fence and they cover us on the other side."

"The Friars and the Crusaders squared off last year in the regionals, with Holy Cross taking the decision. 'I don't relish the thought of playing Holy Cross,'" said Providence assistant coach Nick Macarthur. "We lost to Holy Cross last year in the first round."

The Crusaders had a rough second half after a strong start, but finished off the season with a strong effort in a win against arch-rival Boston College.

"The BC win gives us impetus going into the tournament," said Holy Cross coach George Blaney. Blaney said the key to the game would be to contain Providence guard Steve Struther.

The tournament will continue Saturday afternoon at the Civic Center.

Friday night's schedule now lists Newcombe against Arthur Ashe (USA), the No. 1 players, plus a doubles match, teams to be announced.

Saturday afternoon at 2, Ashe will meet Roche and Newcombe will face Connors in singles play.

Sunday, also starting at 2, Roche will duel Connors with a doubles match to follow.

"This will be the strongest USA team ever in either World Cup or Davis Cup play," Ralston said.

"We are up against the toughest team we have ever faced," Stolte added.

"Rod" (Laver) is disappointed and we are too," he said. "His absence will have some effect on our chances of retaining the cup."

Couch fied. NEW YORK (UPI) - Commissioner Dave DeBusschere of the American Basketball Association Wednesday fined Coach Hubie Brown of the Kentucky Colonels $1,000 for "conduct detrimental to the league" in connection with an incident during and after a game Feb. 27.

Brown received three technical fouls during the game between the Colonels and the New York Nets while protesting a foul call by referee Norm Drucker against Kentucky center Artis Gilmore.

Admission is free.

Justice Department to oppose Courant purchase of Times

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Department says it would oppose a proposed sale of the name, circulation and advertising lists and other intangible assets of The Hartford Times to The Hartford Courant.

Assistant Attorney General Thomas E. Kauper in charge of the antitrust division said Wednesday he could not promise not to seek an injunction to prevent such a sale as a violation of the Clayton Antitrust Act.

Other assets including the Times' building and presses were to be disposed of elsewhere. Kauper said he advised the Register Publishing Co. that the antitrust division concluded the sale to the Courant could be justified only if the "failing company" defense applies to its case.
