

Adm. Robert E. Peary reached the North Pole on April 6, 1909 and is credited with being the first person there. He was not a Negro named Matthew Henson was the first.

Rear Admiral Donald B. MacMillan was also on that expedition. He gave a lecture about it one evening aboard the old Granite State. He said that Matt Henson was the best dog team driver Peary ever had on any of his arctic expeditions, and the person Peary had the most confidence in when hazards were the greatest.

The base camp where they had wintered was near the northern end of the west coast of Greenland. When spring came they were ready to make the dash for the pole. They started with several sleds and dog teams. All men and dogs lived on supplies from one sled until there was only enough left to sustain that crew and team until they could get back to the base camp.

The same system was repeated until there were only two sleds and six men left. They were Admiral Peary, Matt Henson (a black man) and four Eskimos. Peary's toes were frozen as he had trouble traveling. But they were near the pole. Henson went ahead with his team and broke out a trail to the pole so the others could follow.

As soon as each team arrived back at the base camp it loaded up and started back with supplies to meet those returning from the pole. Peary's toes had to be amputated. Mrs. Peary accompanied her husband on one of the expeditions but remained in the base camp where she gave birth to a daughter.

Admiral Peary had an old sea captain friend whose home was on the road from Haddam to Devils Highway and then to Lake Hayward. It is probably improved now but O.C. remembers it as only a dirt road leading up to the captain's old house on the north side of the road at the top of the high hill. That was many years after Peary's trip.

Near the house was an immense boulder. In honor of the old captain, a stone tablet was set into that rock. The old Moodus Drum Corps came up to help celebrate the unveiling and we were favored with a talk by the lady who had been born in the arctic base camp. Admiral Peary's daughter. She recalled how as a little girl she came with her father to visit his old friend in that old house. She remembered playing on that boulder.

A state forest fire observation tower was erected across the road from the old house. There is a wonderful view from the cap. Well worth the drive if it is still there.

Matt Henson died March 9, 1955, age 88 years. MacMillan made quite a number of later arctic expeditions, usually to take teams of scientists in various disciplines. For some reason, they did not understand then, they always lost radio contact with home when the ship passed certain zones.

There was something of a genius in Manchester, John Heinrich who lived on Bush Hill Rd. He was superintendent of Cheney Bros. electrical department. He studied and experimented a lot in electronics and radio. He believed he knew how to overcome the trouble that had always plagued MacMillan so he was taken along on one of the expeditions. He had no trouble. In fact he held a telephone conversation with his wife every evening he was away regardless of location or any conditions.

The United States Navy decided it wanted John so gave him a commission. Last time O.C. saw him he was a lieutenant commander. That must have been twenty or more years ago.

Value of property stolen increased during February

The value of property reported stolen in February 1976 climbed by 40 per cent over the February 1975 figure, Manchester Police Chief Robert Lannan said, but the value of stolen property recovered by police also increased—by 136 per cent.

Lannan's monthly report on police department activity specified that $7,294 worth of goods were stolen and $14,213 worth of goods were recovered last month. A year ago, the figures were $33,800 in stolen goods and $6,024 in recovered goods.

Other statistics in Lannan's report showed that nearly every facet of local police work is increasing. The number of arrests made by police was up from 117 in February 1975 to 163 in February 1976. Increases were noted for both misdemeanors and felonies.

Complaints received by police went from 1,871 a year ago to 2,158 last month.

Traffic accidents and injuries were among the few categories where a decline was seen. There were 176 accidents and 31 injuries in February 1976, compared to 206 accidents and 44 injuries a year ago.

Police attribute the decline in accidents and related injuries to the success of the recently established traffic services division. Two patrolmen, equipped with special cruisers and radar equipment, have been patrolling accident-prone areas and making more traffic arrests than usual.

In the traffic arrests category, the total remained about the same over the one-year period, but moving violations were up substantially and non-moving violations were down. Summonses were issued for 150 moving violations in February 1976; a year ago, the figure was 133. The only other police activity which showed a decline from February 1975 to February 1976 was in animal control. The number of complaints, collected animals and destroyed animals were down from a year ago, but the amount of fees collected was up slightly.

Vacancies filled

Town Manager Robert Weiss has filled two vacancies on the Manchester Conservation Commission by naming James Murphy of 21 Stone St. for the term expiring November 1977 and James McCarthy of 121 Bradford St. for the term expiring November 1978.

Murphy succeeds Harry Maidment and McCarthy succeeds Jay Stager, both of whom resigned. All four are Democrats. Appointments to the Conservation Commission are by the town manager, with the concurrence of the Board of Directors.

The weather

Partial clearing today, windy with high near 50. Becoming clear tonight with lows around 20. Sunny on Sunday with highs in the mid-40s. National weather map on Page 4b.

News summary

Compiled from UPI State

HARTFORD — Officials say six guards at the Somers state prison have admitted viewing parts of a state police exam before taking it. The six have withdrawn their job applications.

HARTFORD — A proposed settlement has been filed by the former Hartford Fire Insurance Co. stockholders who sued International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. in a merger controversy. The compromise filed in federal court Friday, if approved by the court, would give $1.25 in ITT common stock for each of the 22 million shares exchanged in the merger or require ITT to reimburse former Hartford stockholders for any tax liability in connection with the merger.

HARTFORD — State agencies will spend $37.7 million more than the $1.88 billion approved budget this year under a law signed Friday by Gov. Ella Grasso. The measure had overwhelming legislative approval because most of the overspending was required by federal or state laws.

BRIDGEPORT — A Superior Court grand jury has indicted on kidnapping charges three men already convicted on federal charges in the 1975 firebombing of Shelton's Sponge Rubber Products Co. The three, all from the Pittsburgh, Pa. area, were charged in connection with the abduction of three Shelton factory employees who were released unharmed after the firebombing.

WATERFORD — Noel T. Richard, 32, was returned to Connecticut from England Friday to face charges in a $100,000 theft from his employer, the International Armored Car Co. Inc. Richard, who turned himself in to British authorities, is being held on $100,000 bond.

Regional
BOSTON — The Boston Teachers Union today planned a state Supreme Court appeal of a judge's ruling allowing the Boston school department to lay off more than 700 employees. Suffolk Superior Court Judge Robert Sullivan Friday lifted a temporary injunction, imposed last month, which prevented dismissal of 400 teachers and 300 teacher aides.

National
SAN FRANCISCO — The seventh week of the Patricia Hearst bank robbery trial wound up Friday with a preview of what's to come. As Miss Hearst recuperated from the flu in her jail cell, lawyers sparred for advantages in the instructions Judge Oliver Carter will give the jury. The trial resumes Monday.

PARTRIDGE, Ky. — Within 59 hours, the Scotia Coal Co. mine killed 28 men in two explosions. Officials were trying to decide today whether to seal the mine and entomb the last 11 killed, or risk even more deaths by attempting to recover the bodies.

WASHINGTON — The Watergate special prosecutor's office has shifted its focus from the White House to Capitol Hill with charges that Gulf Oil's former chief lobbyist, Claude Wild, made illegal campaign contributions to two senators. Democrat Daniel Inouye of Hawaii and Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia. Each denied the charges.

International
LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Wilson, branded a "political thug" by rebels in his own party, has weathered a parliamentary confidence vote but the opposition says he leads a "dying and discredited government." Wilson's critics lined up Friday to take verbal potshots at him and his cabinet. Wilson didn't respond.

WASHINGTON — A House Democratic caucus has reportedly discussed significant counter proposals to Gov. Ella T. Grasso's plans to balance state finances, including new taxes which the governor has promised to veto.

Friday's discussions behind closed doors by the first House Democratic caucus of this session came as Mrs. Grasso vowed to veto any tax hikes this year unless the lawmakers made every effort to find money elsewhere, especially in the veteran's fund and the longer work week.

"We discussed the whole fiscal situation," said House Majority

Flame of Freedom

Nearly 800 Girl Scouts and leaders of the Manchester-Bolton Girl Scout Association participated in the lighting of the Flame of Freedom late Friday afternoon in Center Park. The park soon glowed with candlelight as one after another lighted candles from the original Flame of Freedom. ## Two join, one quits the Democratic race

By United Press International
Democratic presidential campaigners gained two candidates and lost one.

California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. decided to enter his state's June 8 Democratic primary as a favorite son, and indicated he may enter other states.

Former Ohio Gov. Michael DiSalle announced formation of a "John Glenn for President Committee," although the senator and former astronaut said he is not a candidate and not interested in becoming one.

At a Washington news conference Friday, Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp withdrew from the race because of poor showings in the Massachusetts and Florida votes. He said he had neither the time nor the money to continue.

Ronald Reagan said President Ford misses his presidential powers for campaign purposes by disposing of such items as federal appointments, grants and projects to states with imminent primaries.

In his bitterest language so far, Reagan told a crowd in Illinois: "You're campaigning in Florida, and suddenly in one county, the President comes in and... tells them he will build a highway that really isn't scheduled to be built for a number of years... he is going to deliver a convention... build a new hospital... announce a $34 million expansion program for a military base."

Later at a Ford news conference, a questioner said Reagan has accused Ford of "vote buying" with federal projects in primary election states. "I've never been too bothered by an opponent's charges...," Ford replied. "I don't intend to do it in this campaign."

Tornadoes kill 7 in upper Midwest

By United Press International
At least seven persons were killed as tornadoes ripped across portions of Illinois and Indiana. A late winter storm belted portions of the upper Midwest and strong winds further damaged the wheat crop in Kansas.

Several tornadoes raced through the Chicago area Friday — one of them swooping down near a motorcade in which President Ford was riding. Two persons were killed and at least 60 injured.

Illinois Gov. Daniel Walker declared four counties in the area disaster areas.

Indiana Gov. Otis Bowen put the National Guard on alert, telling guardsmen their services may be needed in northern Indiana, where tornadoes left at least five persons dead and 48 injured.

Two persons died of heart attacks and three other persons were killed when the storm ripped through homes and house trailers in northern Indiana. State police at Schererville, Ind., reported more than $1 million damage in LaPorte County.

Blizzard conditions existed in the northern portions of Minnesota and Wisconsin late Friday as winds reached 60 miles per hour, blowing snow and reducing visibility. The winter storm also dumped some snow onto the tornado-ravaged portions of Illinois and Indiana.

Snow and blowing snot extended from upper Michigan, where a heavy snow warning was in force Friday night, and into eastern Nebraska.

Storm warnings were posted Friday night for Lake Superior and Erie and northern Lake Michigan. Gusting northerly winds blew through Kansas Friday. There were widespread reports of blowing dust and probable loss of more fields of wheat.

Tim Adrian, a farm director for radio station KNBL, said information from farmers indicates "most of the wheat in the larger wheat-producing counties in Kansas is in poor condition. There have been excessive losses due to wind erosion."

The National Weather Service in Topeka said no relief for wheat farmers is in sight.

A violent line of late-winter thunderstorms rumbled over southern Michigan, dropping tornadoes and causing scattered damage in several isolated areas.

Reports indicated damage was not extensive and there were no reported injuries.

Another group of severe thunderstorms rumbled through the central Gulf Coast states Friday. Strong, gusty winds hit some cities and large hail pounded other locations.

Heavy rain accompanied thunderstorms over parts of Mississippi and southern Louisiana, Jackson, Miss., reported it had received nearly an inch of rain by Friday night.

Better late...

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Feeling it is better late than never, the Kentucky House of Representatives Friday voted to ratify the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

The bill calling for Kentucky's ratification of all three amendments, which became part of the federal Constitution over 100 years ago, passed 77-0 and was sent to the Senate.

Kentucky has never ratified the three amendments which were adopted in the wake of the Civil War to guarantee greater equal rights, especially for blacks.

The state never voted on the 13th and 15th Amendments, while the House rejected the 14th Amendment on Jan. 10, 1867.

The 13th Amendment, ratified in 1865, abolished slavery in the North Carolina race of 1868, guarantees equal protection of the law; and the 15th, ratified in 1870, guarantees the right to vote.

himself "if not 'the' frontrunner, was in California at the time but was returning to Illinois today for a final campaign swing against the other two Democratic contenders there — Sargent Shriver and George Wallace.

Henry Jackson lost an all-or-nothing bid for the support of a coalition of liberal unions in Ohio. The coalition instead will support Democratic delegates pledged to both Carter and Morris Udall in the state's May 8 primary.

Jackson also withdrew his active candidacy in the North Carolina race March 23. He said he would concentrate instead on the delegate-rich New York contest April 8.

Gerardo Parente arrived in Connecticut about Dec. 1 with Jose Alberto Kaplan, another concert pianist from Brazil, to fulfill a schedule of concerts and personal appearances in the state and around New England.

Their appearances were sponsored by the Partners of the Americas who arrange cultural exchange visits between Connecticut and her sister Brazilian state, Parabiha. They were hosted by participating members of the Connecticut Parabiha Partners of the Americas.

It was toward the end of Parente's visit during February that he had time to respond to invitations to play for the elderly.

He found their need and desire for the arts, specially represented by music, sadly wanting.

He was impressed with their desire for good music. He said after he played some folk music and some popular type music, he announced a chorale by Bach which brought a distinct sign of satisfaction from his elderly listeners.

One convalescent home resident, a former pianist, was observed silently fingering the music in her lap as Parente played.

The "forgotten people" he called them as he theorized how the elderly could benefit from musical offerings from volunteers. He feels music is a kind of language therapy that reaches most everyone.

Wholeness

Can modern man do without religion?
Not if religion is... the conviction that... between the way one ought to live and the way things really are, there is an unbreakable interconnection." (Clifford Geertz) For when this interconnection is broken, there is a break at the innermost core of our being.

Members of the Unitarian Universalist religious community are dedicated to healing that breach. It is, they believe, an effort each must make for him or herself... but which is more likely to succeed — and far less lonely — when it is made in the company of others who share those hopes.

If you would like to know more about the Unitarian Universalist approach to religion, call or visit:

News for senior citizens

Hi! Here we go again, and let's get right into the action at the center. We start with Tuesday when our Senior Bowling League was knocking over the hardwood at the Parkade Lanes with the following results: In the men's Class A group, Clarence Peterson won the high triple with 563; the high single was won by Lenzy Bjorkman with a 215; in the Class B group, Adeline Rizza won both the high triple and high single with a 331, and 128.

In the women's Class A group, Edna Christensen won the high triple with a 467, and Marie Bolis won the high single with a 172. In the Class B group, Adeline Rizza won both the high triple and high single with a 331, and 128.

On Sunday we spent the afternoon preparing for our Variety Show. That reminds me that tomorrow is the super big rehearsal. In the afternoon from 2:30 to 5 o'clock the chorus will be doing their stuff, and then at 6 p.m. to around 8 o'clock all those putting on their own acts will keep the place busy. For those going to be in both sessions, we ask them to bring sandwiches and we will supply the beverages of tea, and coffee, of course.

Next came Wednesday, and in the morning we had eight tables for pinocle games with the winners being Al Gates, 589; Gladys Seelert, 556; Ann Perras and Ernestine Donnelly, 551; George Last, 549; Edward Scott, 536, and Martin Bakstan, 535.

Arts and crafts In the afternoon while the arts and crafts class was busy making articles for the Variety Show, a few members were playing bridge with the following winners: Marge Reed, 3,330; Irene Foley, 3,580, and Mabel Loomis, 3,540.

By the way, Wednesday's paper mentioned we were in direct need of a flatbed truck. Up this this writing Thursday morning, we had a couple of contacts. We will be looking into this, but still hope that we will be hearing from others just in case.

This is about the final call for anyone wishing to take in that Las Vegas-Candy Canyon trip. Just leaving a tour of the Canyons should provide some interesting and exciting sights that will long be a memory you will cherish. If you are interested, then call our office right this week and join the gang.

Also from time to time, we receive word of a trip that sounds interesting, and so what we have decided to do is announce it, and then if you are interested we will fill you in a little, and give you the phone number where you can get all the inside information. In some cases we won't be involved, as it won't be our trip as such.

Just a reminder, all those going on the New Orleans trip must pay their balance on, or before Friday, March 19th.

A quiet day On Thursday, it was quite a day. In the morning we had a ball with our friends, Lee and Beverly Burton coaching us in the "Hustle," as well as other social dance steps.

After a delicious chicken dinner the gang moved upstairs for the afternoon entertainment. This was the afternoon for the men especially as we had Miss Manchester and Miss Connecticut as our guests. Mr. Richard Lawrence accompanied the girls, and explained to our group some of the history of the pageant, and then showed excellent slides of the girls doing their thing in competition last year.

Then Miss Lee Scott, Miss Manchester and Mary Cadorette, Miss Connecticut, talked and had a question and answer period. All in all it proved to be very interesting and enjoyed by all. We thank them very much for taking the time out of their busy schedule to visit with us.

We wish to send our heartfelt condolences to Helen Bumford, and Ann Vichi on the death of their husbands, and to Mr. Bahineau on the death of his wife, Agnes.

Menus for the week For Monday, steamed hot dog in a roll with sauerkraut, baked beans, cherry Jello with whipped topping and a beverage.

Wednesday, hot turkey sandwich, cranberry sauce, Harvard bread, chocolate pudding with whipped topping and beverage.

Thursday, St. Patrick's Day Feast, tender corned beef and cabbage with all the trimmings, horseradish sauce, Irish soda bread, creme d'menthe sundae and a beverage.

Friday, corn chowder, grilled cheese sandwich, chilled fruit and a beverage.

Schedule for the week Sunday: 2:30 to 5 p.m., chorus rehearsal, 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., variety routines will rehearse.

Monday, 10 a.m. to noon, kitchen social bingo games. One can of canned goods needed. Noon to 12:30 p.m., lunch is served, 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., pinocle games. Bus pickup at 8:30 a.m., return trips at 12:30 and 3:30 p.m.

Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., square dance class, 9:30 bus for shopping, 10 a.m., oil painting class, 1 p.m., senior Bowling League at the Parkade Lanes, and bus return from shopping.

Wednesday, 10 a.m. to noon, pinocle games, and crevel embroidery class. Noon to 12:30 p.m., lunch is served, 12:45 p.m., bridge games, 1 p.m., arts and crafts class. Bus pickup at 9:30 a.m., return trips at 12:30 and 3 p.m.

Thursday, 10 a.m. to noon, social dancing class. Noon to 12:30 p.m., Hot-Meal and meals on wheels, 1 p.m., Fun-Day featuring a program by the Manchester JC bus pickup at 8:30 a.m. and 12 noon. Return trip at 3 p.m.

Manchester weekin review Democrats re-elected officers

Manchester's Democratic town committee needed just over a minute Wednesday night to re-elect all of its officers for two-year terms — unanimously and without opposition.

They are Ted Cummings, chairman and in the post for over 15 years; Dorothy Brindamour, vice-chairman; Mary LeDuc, secretary; and Paul Phillips, treasurer.

The Republican town committee will meet Wednesday to elect its officers, with a new chairman assured and with all other officers expected to be re-elected.

Nathan Agostinelli announced several months ago he won't seek reelection as chairman. A screening committee may or may not have a recommendation next Wednesday.

Names being mentioned for the chairmanship are those of James Furr, Wally Irish Jr. and George (Ted) LaBonne.

Human relations The Board of Directors, after a meeting with the town's Human Relations Commission to discuss Manchester's Affirmative Action Plan, asked the commission to return in 60 days with its role in the plan defined. The board also asked the town manager's office to present a revised draft of the Affirmative Action Plan at the same time.

Parade Manchester's Bicentennial Committee said it is hoping to have the Goodyear Blimp, skydivers from the Connecticut Parachute Club and the Air National Guard's jets in town June 12 for the Bicentennial Parade.

Travel and business was as usual Wednesday and schools remained closed.

Friday, 10 a.m. to noon, kitchen social bingo games. Noon to 12:30 p.m., lunch is served, 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., netball games. Bus pickup at 8:30 a.m., return trips at 12:30 and 3:30 p.m.

Thursday program will be presented by the Manchester Jaycee's. Joseph Uccello will show a slide presentation entitled "Direct Deposit of Social Security Checks."

He will show also a short film entitled "Senior Power." This film deals with how a retired individual can protect himself against predators, obscene phone calls, purse snatchers, and robbery. So we hope to see you all next Thursday.

A trial date still appears weeks away in the court action over Buckland area fire protection. A suit against the Town of Manchester was filed by the Eighth Utilities District.

As part of the pleading process, Town Counsel Victor Moses filed a list of questions pertaining to claims in the writ by District Court Judge LaBelle. The latter has filed his answers and now Moses must file comments on LaBelle's replies.

Energetic solution: recycling garbage

For all the cries of alarm about the energy crisis and the depletion of our resources, Americans continue to throw away incalculable quantities of potential energy and mountains of materials — glass, plastics, rubber, metals — that could be reclaimed and recycled.

"With fuel oil costing $12 to $13 a barrel, it makes more sense to recycle garbage by extracting energy from it than it does to bury it in landfill or to incinerate it with no by-product benefit," says Charles F. Luce, chairman of Consolidated Edison.

Greater New York, for example, produces 18,500 tons of garbage a day. Manhattan alone contributes 3,900 tons — enough, say energy experts, to produce one million pounds per hour of steam capacity.

Because of diminishing supplies of natural gas and the high cost of fuel oil, the utility company that generates electrical power for the nation's largest city has announced that it is "exploring the possibility" of burning some of this garbage as a substitute fuel in its steam plants.

Indeed, it does. And as Luce points out, it can be done without polluting the air by means of properly designed plants.

Yet with the exception of a few cities like St. Louis, which is mixing municipal trash with coal to produce electricity, the nation continues for the most part on its merry, wasteful ways.

Americans of the next century may well look back and wonder where our common sense was.

Tully TM column criticized by reader

To the editor, I am writing to comment on the injustice done TM by a one Andrew Tully in your evening paper recently.

In the presentation he spies his story with his own little private attack on TM. By examining his story you can see numerous unjustified slabs at this technique. He starts off labeling the procedure a trendy exercise. Then goes on to label it a fad, a harmless craze and then a mere superstition that it reduces stress and anxiety in the body. He continues his attack on celebrities that use it.

He then ends with a phrase "as I said, maybe TM is useful or at least harmless. I don't recall him saying much about its usefulness or maybe that was some other column. Maybe I am just a little too critical of Mr. Tully, but for someone who finds it possibly have researched TM he certainly comes to some pretty critical conclusions. As a fact TM is proven to reduce stress, slow metabolism rate, and generally produce all of the effect of a good night's sleep. To me a mediator I feel it quite worthwhile. Oh by the way I learned TM out of a book and the reason (as I feel) so many people are joining this craze is it works.

There is another point. Mr. Tully seems to think the issue involved is separation of state and church. If he feels about church the same way he feels about TM then I can understand why he can't reason out the need for a little less stress in school. After all a fat like religion just might start something.

Museum staff praised for good work

To the editor, This is the first time I have written to your fine publication and I hope that the following is suitable for publication in your column "Letters to the Editor." You have presented many fine articles about the museum and the Nature Center are varied and well attended.

When visitors stop by, with no admission charged, any day from 2 to 5 p.m. except Monday, they see new exhibits or new live animals.

Pamela Salomon, the executive director, deserves a big Bicentennial salute from everyone in town for the leadership she provides and the service she and her staff bring to the junior citizens of Manchester and many surrounding towns.

Sincerely, Richard T. Cartwright 413 Spring St. Manchester

Meadows Center praised for care

To the editor, We are moved to bring to the attention of your readers, the excellent care available in your column "Letters to the Editor."

When our husband and father, C. Elmore Watkins, spent two and one-half months in this nursing home prior to his death he received the utmost care and attention. Should the reader think that he was accorded special treatment please read on.

During the many hours we spent with him during his last week we observed the following:

A nurse and an aide spending twenty minutes to coax a smile from an elderly lady completely immobile and without apparent awareness, and succeeding.

Nurses running the length of the building at top speed to assist a patient in trouble. (Observed many times).

During the past two years, I have personally observed many, many excellent programs ranging in scope from the simple to the complex covering subjects from alphabet to zoos. Classes for our children at the museum and at the Nature Center are varied and well attended.

Nurses and aides gently leading the same elderly patient back to bed four times in the middle of the night with perfect good humor.

A patient in a coma being turned with tender care every two hours to insure his comfort although unconscious.

We talked to one senior nurse who had had many offers to go back to a hospital who said, "I don't want to leave. I just love these old people."

We were reassured and grateful because of this experience. We just don't think the personnel of this obviously well-run organization could have been nicer. We submit that they richly deserve recognition. We are thankful for them.

The Press and the American Revolution

George Rogers Clark and the Northwest

by Dr. Francis G. Wellet Worcester State College

Copyright 1975 American Antiquarian Society Early in 1778 western Indians, encouraged by the British, carried out a number of devastating raids into the Ohio, Illinois, and Kentucky country. Col. Henry Hamilton, the British governor of Detroit, was known as the "Hair-Boyer" because of his eagerness to purchase white scalps.

The British were trying to hold on to this vast western region, which they had controlled since the French and Indian War; but eastern states also had claims, based on colonial charters, to the region. With Indian parties attacking the outlying settlements and the British fastening their hold on the area, something had to be done.

After several American military efforts to gain control of the Ohio country and to take Detroit had failed, a famous frontier fighter came on the scene and won lasting fame as an heroic figure in the struggle for the west.

George Rogers Clark, born near Charlottesville, Va., was a tall, red-headed, and hardy frontiersman. Although only 23 years old when the American Revolution began, he was already an experienced Indian fighter familiar with the western lands. In 1777 Clark conceived the bold plan of seizing the old French villages in southern Illinois and Indiana (Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and Vincennes), which were now in British hands.

Late that year Clark went to Williamsburg, Va. where he got Thomas Jefferson, Richard Henry Lee, and George Mason to agree to his plan. Soon Gov. Patrick Henry persuaded the Virginia assembly to support an expedition, provide funds and authorize Clark to raise forces.

The stated purpose of the mission was to defend Kentucky, but the secret intent was to take Kaskaskia, other posts and, if possible, Detroit itself. Thus George Rogers Clark undertook a campaign to save the northwest. It is significant to note that his authority and support came from Virginia, which had claims to the territory, and not from the Continental Congress.

Although he had some trouble raising men, Clark finally started down the Ohio with about 175 troops. Hiding their boats about ten miles below the mouth of the Tennessee River, the party marched northwest through the forest toward Kaskaskia. By July 4 Clark and his men had crossed southern Illinois to a point near Kaskaskia on the eastern side of the Mississippi River.

Without firing a shot the Americans captured the virtually undefended town. Presently, Cahokia, a few miles to the north was occupied; and in August 1778 a force was sent to take possession of Vincennes. Clark then organized the whole region as the country of Illinois within the state of Virginia. Proudly he wrote home about his conquests, and the newspapers reported these victories.

Although we had not yet been however, Gov. Hamilton still had some fight in him, and at the head of a force of about 500 whites and Indians, he retook Vincennes without difficulty. Gov. Hamilton still had some fight in him, and at the head of a force of about 500 whites and Indians, he retook Vincennes without difficulty.

Clark learned about the fall of Vincennes from the British. He strengthened that fort and immediately set about raising a force to move against the British. By promises and threats he got about 200 men, half of them French, to march for Vincennes, Feb. 6, 1779.

It was a dreadful ordeal, struggling in the middle of winter across 170 miles of rain-soaked flooded country. Still worse, an early thaw made the crossing of several rivers very dangerous, since game had been driven off by high water, the men were on starvation rations. Clark was determined to succeed, but the conditions they faced were almost "too incredible for any person to believe."

Yet he kept going, even though they had to wade through shoulder-high icy water at times. When they finally got to high ground near Vincennes the men were ready to collapse.

Col. Hamilton was hardly ready for an attack — not expecting that the British would be so close. He had about one-half of his militia go home; and now many of his Indian allies fled. The British commander refused Clark's demand that he surrender immediately, however. At this point the hard-headed Clark took five captured Indians, tomahawked them in front view of the garrison and threw their bodies into the river. After this gruesome bit of showmanship by the enemy, Hamilton decided to give in.

Without question George Rogers Clark's forced march under most difficult conditions to retake Vincennes was a remarkable feat. He described it fully in private letters and in a journal published many years later. A shorter account of the expedition appeared in Dixon and Hunter's Virginia Gazette for June 26, 1779.

Vincennes and the other principal posts in the west remained in American hands for the rest of the war. Hamilton was taken to Williamsburg under heavy guard; although he escaped frontier vengeance, the "Hair-Boyer" remained in prison in Virginia for many months.

Clark went desperately to capture Detroit, but could not do so. While his capture of Kaskaskia and Vincennes turned out to be permanent, it did not stop Tory and Indian raids into the Ohio country and Kentucky. The Shawnee and Delaware in particular made numerous savage assaults on the frontier during the late stages of the war.

Clark's exploits did not end fighting and bring peace dramatically to the west, they did establish firm foot-holds in this country for the United States. Without them the British and Indians would probably have pushed the frontier of white settlement much farther to the East. These conquests, too, unquestionably influenced thecession of the huge territory to the United States at the end of the American Revolution.

George Rogers Clark, however rough and harsh at times, did much to establish American power in the turbulent Ohio country; and he will always be remembered in history and legend as the greatest hero of the American Revolution in the west.

Today's thought Forgiveness may be "God's trade" as some one said, but it has at least one condition: that the recipient be forgiving of others. It is the mark of the small and the mean to harbor grudges and resentment. It is not merely that an unforgiving attitude shrinks the spirit, it is a denial of the small and the mean to harbor grudges and resentment. #### Rowe defended again

By the time this paper reaches your hands, the University of Connecticut basketball team will be playing Hofstra University in an NCAA first-round test at the Providence Civic Center.

The NCAA berth marks the third straight year the Huskies have gained entry into post-season play. Bids to the NIT at Madison Square Garden in New York were extended the two previous campaigns. UConn also has been invited to the ECAC Tournament the last two campaigns, winning it and the NCAA last time around.

The Huskies have averaged 17 wins the last four years. Not many New England schools can match UConn's achievements. Any idea how many schools have had four straight winning campaigns? Know how many have been in post-season play three years running? If you bother to check, the answer is two and I'll let you figure out which universities fit into what inquiry.

Despite all this, UConn Coach Dave Rowe has been subjected to heavy criticism from time to time. It was particularly brutal at mid-season when things weren't going too well. All the wolvers crawled out of the woodwork and took their best shots. They haven't had much to howl about lately and one wonders when they'll surface again.

New England fans are some of the toughest in the country. They also can be the most loyal. The barbs tossed at Rowe didn't do much for his high blood pressure but he took it. It has to be asked—why the criticism?

Fans remember the NIT game three years ago against Boston College and say Rowe blew it. If you remember, UConn was in foul trouble. That's why they slowed down. Otherwise the Huskies probably would've finished up with the end of their bench on the floor. Too bad some memories are long.

UConn now is regaining some of the national prominence it held in the '60s and early '60s under Hugh Greer and Fred Shabel. Rowe should get the credit for it, not the blame. He has built the program up—not torn it down as some mysteriously claim.

Rowe has done well, over 100 wins at UConn in seven years, and his success is due to the players. Any coach will tell you how well he does depends on the personnel. And this year Rowe has on the floor what he calls "a kind of team. It plays with discipline, plays with poise and plays defense."

Fair weather friends

When everything is going well and the sky is bright, everybody is your friend. That's what happened to Rowe when he first came to the state university and really wasn't expected to win right off the bat. But people have become accustomed to a winner—a big one. When UConn doesn't win when expected, Rowe feels the heat. And it boils down to one thing. It's known as the "what have you done for me lately" syndrome. Too bad it exists.

In correlation to this, Manchester High hoop coach Doug Pearson says he is forewarned. He led this year's team to a CCLL title and a 21-3 record and everybody wants to be his friend. The Manchester Board of Directors gave him a raise and a resolution commending him for a job well done. What happens if next year the Indians are 10-10? Will the sentiments remain the same? Will those who want to be his buddy this year feel the same if that occurs? I doubt it. That's the syndrome. That's also when he finds out who his real friends are. This he should prepare himself for one day. It's almost guaranteed to happen.

Bits and pieces

UConn is very much interested in Lee High's 6-7 center Sly Williams. The Huskies will be battling over 100 shots for his services and sources say Providence and Rhode Island have the inside track. The NCAA berth should help UConn's recruiting efforts—a point Rowe agrees with.

"Kids know they'll get the exposure and be under the bright lights if they come here," he stated. The NCAA berth has already helped Hofstra land new talent. Flying Dutchman Coach Roger Gaekeler reports he highly sought after player signed (letter of intent) the day after his club made the tourney.

Baseball practice for schoolboys starts Monday. Karim Herbes of Manchester holds the UConn women's swim team 200- and 500-yard freestyle records. Lee High, co-champion of Manchester in the I-Division quarterfinals, will meet Weaver High of Hartford for the state championship today at 4 at the New Haven Coliseum. Weaver is the favorite...Have a nice weekend.

There is a second coaching opening at Manchester High with the announced retirement of Dick Sollandek last Monday night at a Board of Education meeting.

Sollandek, physical education teacher at the school for 30 years, is long time swim coach who has produced several fine teams.

Backstrom nets three, Whalers back in first

HARTFORD, (UPI) — It was a night of firsts for the New England Whalers Friday at the Hartford Civic Center as they beat the Cleveland Crusaders 8-2.

Veteran center Ralph Backstrom registered the first three-goal hat-trick in his three-year World Hockey Association career.

Coach Harry Neale collected his first victory as bench boss of the Whalers after replacing Don Blackburn Thursday. Neale formerly coached the Minnesota Fighting Saints who folded recently.

Backstrom authored 10 hat tricks during a long National Hockey League career, most of them with the Montreal Canadiens.

"I felt motivated after this tonight but the coaching change didn't have much to do with it," Backstrom said. "It was a must-win situation for us and because there was a lot of money on the line."

The victory moved the Whalers into first place in the East Division race, one point ahead of Cleveland and Cincinnati. The Whalers face another crucial division matchup tonight at Cincinnati. The triumph also snapped a five-game home winless streak (0-4-1).

Backstrom, now with 23 goals this season, keyed a second-period surge with a pair of tallies assisted by Dan Bolduc and Gary Swain. Backstrom's third goal came at 18:07 of the final period.

Bolduc, a member of this year's U.S. Olympic Hockey team, is on a 10-game amateur tryout with the Whalers. The assists were his first two points in WHA competition.

Also scoring for New England in the second period were Swain, Roscoe Parment and Tom Webster. Tom Earl had a first-period goal for the Whalers. The goals by Swain and Earl came in shorthanded situations.

In that classic fairy tale the tortoise beats the hare in a race after the hare had built up a seemingly insurmountable lead then confidently dozed off for a nap before he had reached the finish line.

The Rutgers basketball team is quite like the hare, a team that runs on high octane for an entire game and lives by its fast break. Princeton, on the other hand, resembles the tortoise, a slow plodding club that uses more patterns than a quilting bee.

It's just the kind of club that can give Rutgers fits. "Playing Princeton is like being caught behind a school bus in a heavy fog," says Rutgers' star, Phil Sellers. Patience is the key to beating Princeton and one stage built a commanding lead that "dozed off" and let the Tigers catch up.

"We play exciting basketball, our players like it and our fans like it," says Rutgers' coach Tom Young. "We don't play 50-point games. We don't like 50-point games."

Pity-point games, however, are Princeton's specialty. In their previous meeting with Princeton this season, Rutgers won, 75-62, but the game was very close until the last three minutes when one of the Tigers' key players, Armond Hill, fouled out. In that game Rutgers at one stage built a commanding lead that "dozed off" and let the Tigers catch up.

MIAMI (UPI) — Sportswriters who travel the PGA tour obviously live a good life, like everybody else, they still find things to complain about. This week, one of those things is Mark Hayes, who holds a one-shot lead going into today's third round of the $200,000 Doral Open Golf Tournament.

One writer asked: "Once you get past the fact that Mark Hayes is from Oklahoma, what do you say?" "Nobody had an answer."

The message is that the mild-mannered Mr. Hayes is bland. That may be true but there are a couple of contradictions about him that deserve attention.

He isn't very big at 5-11 and 160 pounds, but he can hit the ball farther than most of the other players on the tour. Secondly, he has never won a tournament but he's won a whole lot of money.

Hayes shot a 68 Friday to go with his opening round 67. That adds up to 135 and gives him his one-shot lead over Hubert Green.

Other players talked about his surprising length of the tee, but all to the 28-year-old Oklahoman will admit to it: "It hit it a little longer than the average player. I guess."

As far as winnings, he ranks 12th on the money list this year with $27,237 so far, and he won nearly $50,000 last year.

He came here after a fifth-place finish at the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago and eighth last week at the Citrus Open in Orlando.

Win or lose here, he seems determined to pick up another respectable check.

Hayes hopes that check is for the $40,000 first prize, but if it isn't, he is confident that his first tour win will come soon.

"I feel like I'm on the verge of winning one, but I'm not going to try to force it," said the fourth-year pro from Oklahoma State University.

"I'm not going to try to shoot 62 like some of these guys can," he said. "I'm trying just to play good solid golf and let the birdies fall where they may."

"If it's my week, I'll win." His length of the tee helped him Friday, as he got two birdies-4s by twputting.

Gusty winds kept scores up. There were only five players under 70.

He isn't very big at 5-11 and 160 pounds, but he can hit the ball farther than most of the other players on the tour. Secondly, he has never won a tournament but he's won a whole lot of money.

Hayes shot a 68 Friday to go with his opening round 67. That adds up to 135 and gives him his one-shot lead over Hubert Green.

Other players talked about his surprising length of the tee, but all to the 28-year-old Oklahoman will admit to it: "It hit it a little longer than the average player. I guess."

As far as winnings, he ranks 12th on the money list this year with $27,237 so far, and he won nearly $50,000 last year.

He came here after a fifth-place finish at the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago and eighth last week at the Citrus Open in Orlando.

Win or lose here, he seems determined to pick up another respectable check.

Hayes hopes that check is for the $40,000 first prize, but if it isn't, he is confident that his first tour win will come soon.

"I feel like I'm on the verge of winning one, but I'm not going to try to force it," said the fourth-year pro from Oklahoma State University.

"I'm not going to try to shoot 62 like some of these guys can," he said. "I'm trying just to play good solid golf and let the birdies fall where they may."

"If it's my week, I'll win." His length of the tee helped him Friday, as he got two birdies-4s by twputting.

Gusty winds kept scores up. There were only five players under 70.

MIAMI (UPI) — Sportswriters who travel the PGA tour obviously live a good life, like everybody else, they still find things to complain about. This week, one of those things is Mark Hayes, who holds a one-shot lead going into today's third round of the $200,000 Doral Open Golf Tournament.

HARTFORD, (UPI) — It was a night of firsts for the New England Whalers Friday at the Hartford Civic Center as they beat the Cleveland Crusaders 8-2.

Veteran center Ralph Backstrom registered the first three-goal hat-trick in his three-year World Hockey Association career.

Coach Harry Neale collected his first victory as bench boss of the Whalers after replacing Don Blackburn Thursday. Neale formerly coached the Minnesota Fighting Saints who folded recently.

Backstrom authored 10 hat tricks during a long National Hockey League career, most of them with the Montreal Canadiens.

"I felt motivated after this tonight but the coaching change didn't have much to do with it," Backstrom said. "It was a must-win situation for us and because there was a lot of money on the line."

The victory moved the Whalers into first place in the East Division race, one point ahead of Cleveland and Cincinnati. The Whalers face another crucial division matchup tonight at Cincinnati. The triumph also snapped a five-game home winless streak (0-4-1).

Backstrom, now with 23 goals this season, keyed a second-period surge with a pair of tallies assisted by Dan Bolduc and Gary Swain. Backstrom's third goal came at 18:07 of the final period.

Bolduc, a member of this year's U.S. Olympic Hockey team, is on a 10-game amateur tryout with the Whalers. The assists were his first two points in WHA competition.

Also scoring for New England in the second period were Swain, Roscoe Parment and Tom Webster. Tom Earl had a first-period goal for the Whalers. The goals by Swain and Earl came in shorthanded situations.

In that classic fairy tale the tortoise beats the hare in a race after the hare had built up a seemingly insurmountable lead then confidently dozed off for a nap before he had reached the finish line.

The Rutgers basketball team is quite like the hare, a team that runs on high octane for an entire game and lives by its fast break. Princeton, on the other hand, resembles the tortoise, a slow plodding club that uses more patterns than a quilting bee.

It's just the kind of club that can give Rutgers fits. "Playing Princeton is like being caught behind a school bus in a heavy fog," says Rutgers' star, Phil Sellers. Patience is the key to beating Princeton and one stage built a commanding lead that "dozed off" and let the Tigers catch up.

"We play exciting basketball, our players like it and our fans like it," says Rutgers' coach Tom Young. "We don't play 50-point games. We don't like 50-point games."

Pity-point games, however, are Princeton's specialty. In their previous meeting with Princeton this season, Rutgers won, 75-62, but the game was very close until the last three minutes when one of the Tigers' key players, Armond Hill, fouled out. In that game Rutgers at one stage built a commanding lead that "dozed off" and let the Tigers catch up.

One writer asked: "Once you get past the fact that Mark Hayes is from Oklahoma, what do you say?" "Nobody had an answer."

The message is that the mild-mannered Mr. Hayes is bland. That may be true but there are a couple of contradictions about him that deserve attention.

Hare, tortoise symbolize Rutgers-Princeton clash

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Remember the children's bedtime story about the tortoise and the hare? It may be symbolic of today's NCAA Eastern regional showdown between third-ranked Rutgers and 18th-ranked Princeton.

In that classic fairy tale the tortoise beats the hare in a race after the hare had built up a seemingly insurmountable lead then confidently dozed off for a nap before he had reached the finish line.

Parish mission starts Sunday

St. Joseph's Church of Rockville will sponsor a Family Renewal Parish Mission starting Sunday with a service at 7:30 p.m. and continuing through March 18 with a Mass each day at 10 a.m. and a service each evening at 7:30.

The Rev. Arthur Meloche of Retreats International will be the missionary. His talks will cover the topic of growth in the areas of freedom, faith, hope, eternal life and love.

Tuesday evening, there will be a penitential service, with visiting priests present to hear confession.

Thursday evening, after a talk on "Growth to Eternal Life," there will be a communal celebration of the Sacrament of the Sick and the renewal of baptismal vows.

Those eligible for receiving the Sacrament of the Sick include anyone over the age of 65, those who have a chronic disease or illness, and those afflicted with a serious disease or a chronic health problem. Special seating will be arranged for those in wheelchairs or using crutches.

Baby-sitting will be available at the each of the morning Masses.

Rev. Arthur Meloche

The Rev. Aloysius Kisluk, pastor of St. Joseph's, has invited all residents of Vernon, Tolland and Ellington to attend the mission and receive the partial and plenary indulgences which are gained through attendance.

The guest missionary was pastor of St. Mary's Church in London, Ont., Can., when, at the request of John Cardinal Wright, he was released from his pastoral duties to conduct specialized retreats and parish missions in the United States.

Mills in Connecticut

Cheney Bros.' silk mills in Manchester — the first in the U.S. and once the largest in the world — are still there, but not all of the mill buildings are still used by the firm.

This photograph of one of the Cheney mills, made by Connecticut photographer Harriet Gans, is part of an exhibit on mill buildings by the Hartford Architecture Conservancy. See Page 7.

A town hit by gambling fever is spotlighted in a one-hour NBC Reports special to be presented on NBC-TV Wednesday at 10 p.m. The program focuses on the small town of Plainfield, Conn., and tries to measure the social and economic impact on its recently opened dog track on the town and the townspeople.

NBC studies dog track

A network television study of Plainfield, Conn., which has the first dog track in the state, will be featured on "NBC Reports" Wednesday at 10 p.m. on Channels 20, 22 and 30.

The program attempts to measure the social and economic impact on the small town and its townspeople. Other questions studied by the network:

Does legalized gambling create new gamblers?
Does it take money away from the poor?
Does it take advantage of the weak-willed?

Does it lower the standards of morality? Does it provide the revenue its supporters claim?

Does it bring in new business?

The NBC-TV special will also examine other gambling programs in Connecticut, such as the state lottery and nonprofit poker games.

The special took three weeks to complete, and NBC-TV's cameras traveled into many Connecticut homes and businesses.

Forbes & Wallace FORBES IN MANCHESTER PARKADE

FORBES IN MANCHESTER PARKADE

DEAR DICK: On the show, Happy Days, Richie used to have a brother. Could you please tell me who he was and what happened to him? TOMMY HUGHES, Mobile, Ala. You're right. When the show began, there was the character of Richie's brother, played by Gavin O'Herlihy, the son of that fine actor, Dan O'Herlihy. But they decided the part was superfluous, so wrote him out by having him go off to college. If they need him, they can bring him back. DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me if Cher's real name is Cher? MRS. CHER PERRINE, Killeen, Tex. Curious question for a woman with your name to ask. But, yes, Cher has always been called Cher. Her real name is Cheryllyn - Cheryllyn Sarkisian Bono Allman, so far. DEAR DICK: What happened to Beacon Hill? I have never enjoyed a show as much as this. My friends, neighbors and my three college sons enjoyed it, too. If Beacon Hill is off the air, where can I write to be heard. IRENE KNASIAK, King of Prussia, Pa. Beacon Hill has folded, victim of low ratings. What it needed was a few more Knasiaks to watch, but, alas, most people thought it a huge disappointment. If you want to write, write to your local station and/or CBS in New York. It won't do a bit of good, of course, but maybe it'll make you feel better. DEAR DICK: Some months ago, perhaps even a year, Otto Preminger was on the Tonight show and referred to a certain book as being "the best ever written about Hollywood." Will you please try to find out what the book was. Do you agree? If not, what book(s) do you think are the best? GEORGE H. WALTERS, Tucson, Ariz. Unfortunately, nobody in either the Tonight show office nor in Mr. Preminger's office remembers what that book is. Even Otto's assistant, charged with remembering things, has forgotten. So, obviously, I cannot agree or disagree with his choice. There have been many excellent books on Hollywood. If you want a history, Ezra Goodman's "The Fifty Year Decline and Fall of Hollywood" is still one of the best. If you want to read about the glamor and peccadillos, David Niven's current best seller, "Bring On the Empty Horses," has plenty to keep you interested. DEAR DICK: No one seems to know the truth about Cat Stevens and his supposed terminal illness. Is it just a P.R. stunt or is it true? M.A.L., Garden Grove, Ca. Neither. It is certainly not true, but no responsible public relations person ever starts sick rumors about sicknesses. It's just one of those nasty rumors that inexplicably sweep the nation periodically about one star or another. It's just Cat's turn. He's well and healthy. DEAR DICK: Recently, I heard Hal Linden sing a song on Dinah Shore's show. All I remember are the lines, "You made me so very happy, I'm so glad you came into my life." What is the name of the song and has anyone recorded it? B.G., Wakeman, Ohio That was a big hit song called "You Made Me So Very Happy," and recorded by Blood, Sweat and Tears some years ago.

Manning has major show

Robert Manning's retrospective show at Bushnell Memorial Hall's Promenade Gallery, running through April 8, consists of a selected group of 19 pieces in two major areas.

The first area is what Manning calls "recordings" or "representational drawings." The second he calls his "landscapes of the mind."

Manning, who says his work constantly goes back and forth between the two disciplines, notes that the "recordings" are often the most popular of his works while the "landscapes of the mind" are extremely personal visions.

"Remembrances of past awarenesses — extremely personal things such as sexuality, stuttering as a child, religion — have been a fertile source of inspiration," Manning said.

The 19 pieces in the Bushnell show, he said, represent a variety of work done from 1968 to the present. The show, which he calls "A Personal Vision," consists of paintings, watercolors, pen-and-ink drawings, collages and mixed media.

The four oil paintings in the show were completed between 1968 and 1971, Manning said. In recent years, he has concentrated on drawings, watercolors and collages.

Manning is associate professor of fine arts and art department chairman at Manchester Community College. He is also co-director of MCC's Stairwell Gallery, 146 Hartford Rd.

Manning, a graduate of Bulkeley High School, attended the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts, received his B.F.A. Degree from the Pratt Institute, and attended graduate school at the University of the Americas in Mexico City, Mexico. He holds an M.A. degree in art education from Hartford Art School, University of Hartford, where he has taught graduate courses.

On the cover Mills in Connecticut

The Hartford Architecture Conservancy (HAC) is presenting a photographic essay on "Mills in Connecticut" as its salute to the Bicentennial. More than 30 photographs by Harriet Gans, a Connecticut free-lance photographer, will feature mills which continue to operate today as they did in the Industrial Revolution, and others which have been adapted to new use.

The exhibit opens Tuesday at the Wadsworth Athenaeum, Hartford, and will remain on display through May 30. The public is invited to view Ms. Gans' interpretation of the esthetic qualities and durability of a wide range of mill buildings — from the one-man grist and sawmills powered by "overshot" wheels, to the large textile mills of Eastern Connecticut and the heavy industrial complexes of the Naugatuck Valley.

HAC, a nonprofit organization working toward the preservation of architecturally significant and reusable buildings, was founded two years ago to protest destruction of Hartford's older buildings. Mills are vivid example of structurally sound buildings which can be renovated or recycled for other uses, such as residential, office, or commercial complexes.

HAC hopes to illustrate the value of mills, past and present, through this visual survey, which includes Punemah (Norwich), Cheney Gans' interpretation of the esthetic qualities (Williamantic), and Sanadyn-Capewell (Hartford).

Ms. Gans, a former New Yorker, studied at the University of Mexico, the University of California at Berkeley, and Columbia University.

Israel's top star: she's his cousin

By SOL R. COHEN

She's Israel's top actress, and, if not for an unfortunate accident you might have seen her in "Fiddler on the Roof," and she has a Manchester connection.

She's Hanna Meron and she and I are first cousins, although we've never met.

Her father and my mother, now deceased, were brother and sister. There were others but they disappeared during World War II. In fact, the village they called home in Poland was wiped off the map.

Miss Meron's father visited us several years ago and turned out to be a delightful man. He now lives in retirement in Israel.

Early in 1970, Hanna Meron was summoned to London by Topol, the Tevya of "Fiddler on the Roof." He wanted her to take a screen test for the role of his wife, Golda. She never made it.

In February 1970, her London-bound El Al flight had a stopover in Munich. She and the flight captain, an old friend and fan, strolled down to the airport lounge. The air was festive. It was Fasching, the German version of April Fool's Day. They had coffee, bought souvenirs and strolled back to the plane, spirits high.

Suddenly, a young man ran up to Miss Meron, pointing a gun. She said afterward he was a very handsome boy but with a horrible look on his face — a combination of blind hatred and fear. Her first thought was that it was part of the Fasching high-jinks.

Shouting it was an attack and that he was going to kill her, the Palestinian terrorist fired. She lost consciousness and woke up in the hospital. She had the feeling that everything would be alright — because her husband was bending over her, like in a dream.

But, everthing wasn't alright. She had been hit in a main artery and scraps of metal had lodged in her left leg. Two operations were needed to keep her alive. Then gangrene set in and she was sinking fast. She remembers that she wanted to give it all up but that something made her fight for life. She gave permission to have the leg amputated. Miss Meron remained at the Munich hospital for six months.

She went back to Israel and picked up her career where it had been left off, haltingly at first, then with more and more confidence, but always conscious of her artificial leg. She acknowledges it affects her acting.

Hanna Meron is Israel's only actress of international stature. She refuses all offers to travel, preferring to stay in Israel with her successful-architect husband and her children. The one time she accepted an offer was the one in 1970 from Topol, and she almost lost her life for it.

She is equally at home on the TV screen and on the stage — adept at comedy, drama, Shakespeare and in a gamut of roles ranging from darling to demon.

She has been described as an artist whose material is the very stuff life is made of, making her audiences roar with laughter, stirring them to tears or wringing them dry with every emotion in her repertoire.

Except for that tragic incident in the Munich airport, Hanna Meron might now have the worldwide recognition she deserves.

Pendergast directs Tri-Town 'Mousetrap'

James E. Pendergast of Manchester will direct Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap" in rehearsal by the Tri-Town Players of Vernon. It is his first directing assignment for the Players.

Pendergast has directed "The Tiger" and "The Odd Couple" for the Little Theatre of Manchester and "Born Yesterday" for the Glastonbury Players.

Assisting him in the production of "The Mousetrap" are Solange Quick, stage manager; Lee Hay, stage carpenter, and Sandy Fargo, lighting designer.

You'd be lucky to find this imprint

By RUSS MacKENDRICK

At some country auction in the springtime (coming soon!) you might bid for a bunch of old letters and find one with this design imprinted where a stamp should be. If it is the genuine article, the script calls for a whoop and a series of cartwheels and entrechats. Scott's Catalogue lists five varieties from $2,000 to $32,000 and you could be that lucky.

Stamps and coins

It is the Postmasters' Provisional that was applied with a brass handstamp by Edward A. Mitchell in the years 1845 to 1847. An act of Congress in 1845 set five cents as the minimum letter rate, and for the next couple of years, until the U.S. adhesives were ready, the postmasters were left to their own ingenuity in the way of indicating prepayment on the envelopes.

There were woodcuts, metal cuts, and whatever. An even dozen of places put these out. The New York postmaster had real stick-on stamps made from the die that was used for Washington's head on banknotes. The trickiest design was the one from St. Louis where two standing bears are apparently holding a hoop for a jump-through. There was a plain-Jane from Boscawen, N.H., of which there is only a single copy known.

New Haven had many more than this and then added to the lot with some hanky-panky. It was just too easy. All anybody needed was a freshly-inked stamp pad and Mitchell's magic brasswork. In 1871 he signed 20 more productions and another run of 30 in 1874. This much we know. And about the same time the notorious N.F. Seebeck and others had a whirl at it. Then in 1923 Mitchell's grandson made up a batch with the date in place of the signature.

Finally in 1932 the New Haven Philatelic Society bought the thing for $1,000 and presented it to the city's historical group for retirement and exhibition. To raise the money, though, they first printed and sold some 200 more copies with Mitchell's name rubberstamped in facsimile.

What brings it to the fore right now is this year's history kick, plus the fact that a California outfit is pushing some handsome cloisonne reproductions in silver and bronze.

For myself, I am about to go into training for that auction.

It takes two hands

The Kingdom of Tonga is marking the 100th year of its Constitution with the world's largest currency coin in pure silver. This whopper is 2½ inches across and weighs over 4 ounces. It is part of a set of 3 silver and 4 gold. The bullion value is stated to be 60 per cent of face, so you can't go far wrong — unless you try to pronounce the name of their unit, which is a pa'anga. One pa'anga is worth $1.50.

Tonga, the home of the pa'anga, is a group of Polynesian islands northeast of New Zealand.

They have stamps too, and even the hardest of philatelists have known to quail at some of the country's emissions. They have seen simulated coins, a heart, a dragon-like map, an oil well, a boxer, a six-pointed star, a coconut, banana, Red Cross and Boy Scout emblems, and a flying parrot. Not just pictures, but stamps in those very shapes!

Sold down the river

For Channel 24 addicts: Familiar figure John Quincy Adams was, man and boy, a numismatist. He put together a prized collection which the family donated to the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1913. Nothing is sacred however — they sold it all down the river to enrich their coffers in 1971.

• UConn

First rendition

The first public rendition of David Maker's "Observations of Epictetus the Slave," a work for orchestra and chorus, will be featured during an 8:15 p.m. performance by the University of Connecticut Concert Band March 17 in Jorgensen Auditorium.

Maker, associate professor of music at UConn and director of the Concert Band, will conduct the premiere performance. The vocal ensemble will be the University Chorale under the direction of David Castonguay, music lecturer.

Also on the program will be "Overture for Band" by Mendelssohn, "The White Peacock" by Charles Griffes, the first movement of Borodin's "Second Symphony," and "Circus Band" by Charles Ives.

The concert will also include a guest appearance by Alan E. Gillespie, UConn music professor, who will lead the Concert Band in Vincent Persichetti's "Symphony for Band" and "The Washington Post March" by Sousa.

Immediately following the concert, Tau Beta Sigma, the University band fraternity, will host a reception with refreshments for the audience, in the lower front lobby of the auditorium.

In alumni show

University of Connecticut Prof. John Gregoropoulos is one of six artists being featured in an "alumni" exhibition at the De Cordova Museum in Lincoln, Mass.

The exhibit, called "Update," devotes the entire museum through April 18 to the work of six New England artists.

At the Bushnell

Garrick Ohlsson, pianist, makes his third appearance Wednesday with the Hartford Symphony Orchestra at Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, at 8:15 p.m. A discussion of the program, "Hartford Symphony Previews," airs Monday at 8:30 p.m. on WTIC-FM.

Weekend

Weekend, an entertainment and television supplement, is published each Saturday by The Manchester Evening Herald, Herald Square, Manchester, Conn. 06040.

So you want to know why "nobody can buy like Mrs. B. . . ."

Because Bradlees is a different kind of discount store. I refuse to sacrifice quality for price. That's not my idea of value. Quality merchandise at the lowest possible price is what my customers have come to expect. So it's really no secret if nobody can buy like me. It may not mean they can't, it might just mean they don't care enough to want to try.

Use your BankAmericard or master charge at every Bradlees.

In this circular find exciting limited time only sale values, everyday low discount prices, plus super special purchases!
