

Kenya to buy 12 F5 warplanes

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The United States Wednesday agreed "in principle" to sell Kenya 12 super-sonic F5 warplanes as the first step toward building up the African state's small armed forces.

A U.S. official accompanying Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld called the $75 million deal, which still must be approved by Congress, the "biggest single arms sales deal to an emerging African nation."

The agreement was concluded in principle during talks between Rumsfeld and Defense Minister James Gichuru, Finance Minister Mwai Kibaki and acting Foreign Minister James Ogoi.

Rumsfeld, who arrived Tuesday, will meet Thursday with President Jomo Kenyatta before flying on to Zaire.

U.S. sources said the delivery date of the F5 warplanes built by Northrop was uncertain and depended on U.S. assessments of Kenya's security problems.

The agreement coincided with Washington's effort, initiated by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during his Africa swing last month, to fashion a concrete Africa policy to counter what U.S. analysts call burgeoning Soviet influence in Africa.

Nairobi has increasingly become concerned at the large scale buildup of Soviet arms in neighboring Somalia and Uganda, both of which in the past have laid claim to Kenyan territory.

With 260 tanks, Somalia has the largest tank force in black Africa. It also has more than 30 combat aircraft, including the Russian-built MIG17 and MIG19. Uganda's Idi Amin also has about 30 combat aircraft, including some MIG19s.

Kenya has only six British-built Strikemaster aircraft and a handful of antiquated British Hawker Hunter warplanes.

All Americans urged to leave Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The United States today strongly urged all Americans to leave Lebanon in the aftermath of the slaying of two U.S. diplomats whose bodies reached Damascus with the first Western evacuation convoy out of war-torn Beirut.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman took issue with reports describing the overland exodus by car and bus as an evacuation. "It is not a formal evacuation in the sense that departure is voluntary and the embassy will remain open. But we are strongly urging all Americans to leave now," the spokesman said.

He described the new appeal as an "escalation" of the embassy's long-standing advice that Americans with "no urgent business" in Lebanon not to remain here. "Now we are urging in the strongest terms that all Americans still here take advantage of the British-led convoys and leave," he said.

There are about 1,900 members of the American community still in Lebanon — 1,400 American nationals with the rest being dependents such as Lebanese who married Americans.

The first British-organized convoy, mainly for embassy staffers and others who wished to join "at their own risk," left for Damascus this morning and arrived safely in the afternoon under the armed escort of Libyan and Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

With them was a blue-and-white pick-up van carrying the flag-draped coffins of U.S. Ambassador Francis Meloy Jr. and his economic counselor Robert O. Waring, along with their Lebanese chauffeur Zuhair Moghrabi who were kidnapped and killed by gunmen in the left-controlled sector of western Beirut Wednesday afternoon. A U.S. Air Force C130 transport had flown from Andrews Air Force Base near Washington to Damascus to receive the bodies and fly them home.

On board were U.S. envoy Dean Brown, who helped mediate in the Lebanese crisis last month, and Daniel Meloy, the slain ambassador's brother, the source said. It will stop on the way back in Athens to pickup Waring's wife and several other members of his family, the source said.

A few Americans and other nationals joined the first convoy of about 25 cars that left from the gates of the British embassy on Beirut's up-town western coast at 7:30 a.m. A larger convoy was due to leave Saturday but it is expected to be much smaller than its British organizers at first thought.

The Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. both began broadcasting instructions to foreigners to report at their embassies for evacuation. An American spokesman said the embassy's phone lines were "tied up" with inquiries but that as of this afternoon, only 30 Americans had actually turned up to register for Saturday's journey.

Hays is in a Barnesville, Ohio, hospital recovering from an overdose of sleeping pills.

Hays' office released the text of the letter he will send to Albert. Hays indicated in the letter he would try to regain the chairmanship of the administration panel if he is vindicated of the sex-scandal allegations.

"The charges which have been made against me and the current state of my health make it impossible for me to devote the time necessary to carry out my responsibilities as chairman," Hays said in the letter.

Albert said Hays offered no comment and he did not inquire of the Ohio Democrat of a report that he would not seek re-election in November. Hays has already won nomination for re-election.

Albert said he would call the Democratic Policy and Steering Committee together after he receives Hays' letter to nominate a successor, whom sources say will be Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., ranking Democrat on the panel behind Hays.

Hays to resign post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, will resign as chairman of the influential House Administration Committee on Monday, Speaker Carl Albert said today.

Hays, who has been accused of keeping his mistress on the government payroll, denied he will resign from Congress.

8th District probing possible arson attempt

Authorities are investigating a Thursday night arson attempt in which rapid response by an Eighth District fire fighter prevented a serious blaze at an Oakland St. barn.

Ted Lingard, Eighth District fire chief and fire marshal, said there are a few leads in the case, which involved a barn at 179 Oakland St.

Police said a plastic bottle with a rope wick, which apparently contained some type of flammable liquid, was found at the scene.

A neighbor told officials he heard his dog barking at about 11:30 p.m., looked out the window and saw two people near the barn. The neighbor turned on an outdoor floodlight and saw the two men run, jump into a car, and drive away.

The neighbor then saw flames near the barn and notified the Eighth District Fire Department.

The department sounded an alarm at 11:23 p.m., dispatching three fire trucks. But fire fighter Leonard Lusky of Rachel Rd., alerted to the fire by radio, ran to the barn from his home (about 100 yards away) and doused the small blaze with a chemical fire extinguisher before apparatus arrived, Lingard said.

Lingard said there was little, if any damage to the structure, which is owned by Marian Lisowski. Investigation is continuing.

Albert told reporters he talked by telephone with Hays Thursday "and he verified he would send me a letter on Monday stating he would try to regain the chairmanship of the administration panel if he is vindicated of the sex-scandal allegations."

"The charges which have been made against me and the current state of my health make it impossible for me to devote the time necessary to carry out my responsibilities as chairman," Hays said in the letter.

Albert said Hays offered no comment and he did not inquire of the Ohio Democrat of a report that he would not seek re-election in November. Hays has already won nomination for re-election.

Albert said he would call the Democratic Policy and Steering Committee together after he receives Hays' letter to nominate a successor, whom sources say will be Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., ranking Democrat on the panel behind Hays.

Keeney St. students donate $1,821 toward refurbishing old school

The students at Keeney St. School chose appropriately for their Bicentennial project this year to focus their attention on the restoration of the old Keeney St. School, resulting in a donation of $1,821 toward the project.

Throughout the school year, children, parents and school staff worked on crafts which were sold at the Keeney St. School Bicentennial Fair early this month.

Children participated in a colonial costume parade, colonial games and watched demonstrations of colonial crafts. The income from the fair enabled the school to make their donation to the Manchester Historical Society which will use the money to furnish and equip the old school once it has been restored on the site at the Cheney Homestead.

Standing by the new site of the old Keeney St. School on the grounds of the Cheney Homestead, students in colonial costume from the present Keeney St. School listen to Miss Catherine Shea tell some of the history of the old school. As committee chairman for refurbishing the school, Miss Shea has just received a check from the children to be used for equipping the old school when it is moved to its new site. From left are Laura Barbieri, Grade 2; Lisa Palicki, Grade 3; J.R. Skoog, Grade 2, and David Mazzotta, Grade 3.

One ball game wasn't rained out

Although the sudden deluge about 6:30 p.m. Thursday may have dampened the spirits of many adults and forced some drivers to inch along Center St. through bar-keel-up waters, it didn't stop these youngsters from putting together an improvised version of water polo. The brief storm slowed traffic on the Center St. for about half an hour until storm drains could catch up with excess rain water. (Herald photo by Larson)

Panelists say society must learn to live with drug problems

By JUNE TOMPKINS Herald Reporter

A panel of four Manchester High School youths told an audience of about 100 adults Thursday night at Illing Junior High School that drugs in our society are a reality that we have to learn to live with.

Serving as panelists were Jane Zarnitis, Ann Filloramo, and Scott Garman, who was chairman of the event. Obbie Pet was panel moderator, and Dave Dumaine, director of the Youth Commission, was also a panelist.

Guest panelists were a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, and his wife who belongs to Al-Anon.

The second in a series of public drug symposiums was conducted solely by the youth in an attempt to promote better understanding between youth and adults on one of today's major concerns.

The only planned adult advisory participation at the meeting were the opening and closing remarks by Robert Digan, coordinator of youth services in Manchester.

The positive youth activities in the town were outlined by Dumaine, which included the Instructors of the Handicapped, benefit walkathons and bikeathons, scouting, hospital junior auxiliary and Camp Kennedy volunteers.

Dumaine said he thinks the public treats the youth poorly and wonders when they will stop treating them like renegades.

"Parents should be guiding lights instead of directional beams," he said.

As moderator of the panel, MHS senior Obbie Pet next introduced Jane Zarnitis, Ann Filloramo and Garman who had well-prepared presentations on various phases of the drug scene.

Jane called the adult middleclass women the worst offenders of the sleeping pill and amphetamine habit.

The AA member substantiated Jane's claim that alcohol is America's No. 1 drug problem. As an alcoholic, he said his illness had caused him to lose everything.

"Being a victim of alcohol, I cannot drink in safety. Alcohol affects our mental, physical and spiritual being. It is addictive. Marijuana is nonaddictive. I don't think it is injurious to health," he said.

He continued to stress the dangers of alcohol by saying it impairs judgment, causes personality changes and can cause fatal illness.

"I would rather see my 18-year-old smoke marijuana than drink alcohol," he said.

Carter talking clean sweep

By LEWIS LORD
By United Press International
Democrat Jimmy Carter is talking of winning every state in the November election, while President Ford is voicing hope the Republican party won't fall apart.

Carter, vacationing at Sea Island, Ga., told reporters he will campaign aggressively until the Democratic National Convention next month, although he already has at least 1,335 delegates — 30 more than required for the nomination.

"I am the nominee, we are going to go out and win every state in the Union," Carter said.

Carter said he was considering asking "12 to 15 distinguished Americans" to help him select a running mate. He said he wants a vice presidential nominee free of sex or money scandals.

"We had a spirited contest for the nomination," Ford told a group of ten — nine Republicans at the White House. "But all of us must strive to prevent it from becoming a grudge battle."

Ford said he believed his opponent, Ronald Reagan, shares his view that Republicans should work together at the national, state and local levels instead of fighting.

"It makes no sense for us to scramble down to the wire and have our party fall apart," Ford said.

Ford met again with John Connally, facing speculation the former state in the November election, while President Ford is voicing hope the Republican party won't fall apart.

Both Ford and Reagan planned to be in Des Moines tonight for a Republican dinner on the eve of the Iowa GOP convention.

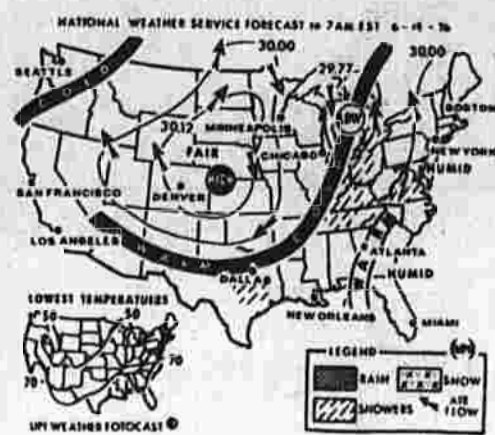

Ninety-five national convention delegates are being chosen this weekend by Republicans meeting in Iowa, Washington, Delaware and Texas.

Reagan is favored to win most of them but not enough to erase Ford's lead.

According to UPI's tally, Ford currently has 1,009 delegates and $241,840 for the nomination. Reagan has 893 and $8 in additional campaign funds, plans 16 fund-raisers before the national convention. His campaign committee is officially pegged at $1.2 million and he said, "I think we'll get it paid off."

Comment session

Town officials came in for high praise Thursday night on a Benton St. couple, appearing at a Board of Directors comment session.

Deputy Mayor Pascal Pignano, who manned the session, said the compliments were directed at Jay Giles, director of public works, and his personnel for correcting conditions on Benton St. when brought to their attention.

The couple had complained of street lights out, of an open storm drain and of damage to their trash can.

Conversely, a man who resides on Anderson St. wanted to know when the town will complete a storm drain project in front of his home. He said it's been under way for two years and still is incomplete, despite numerous complaints and reports.

A woman who resides next to the Green School on E. Middle Tpk. complained of the traffic island and traffic light installed in front of her home. She said the placement makes it difficult for her to back her car out of the driveway, said the island is unsightly.

Opinion
Paradoxical aid ignores our own

Pennsylvania has apparently won the race to catch the rabbit — the Volkswagen Rabbit, that is. Officials of Volkswagenwerk A. G. in West Germany say they hope to be turning out the minicar from a plant at New Stanton, Pa., by mid-1977, provided that the state's legislature approves the deal.

The deal is a $260-million package of low-interest, long-term loans, bond issues, tax abatements and training grants Pennsylvania came up with. Close runner-up in the competition was Ohio, which had offered Volkswagen an abandoned tank plant in a Cleveland suburb and a virtual outright gift of $5 million, among other inducements.

Costs rise with consumption

Those tens of millions of Americans planning automobile vacations this year, as well as those who will stay home, are going to be paying more for gasoline. Gasoline consumption in the United States is already exceeding the rates forecast for 1976, and the traditional heavy-use summer months are still to come.

No major shortages are expected anywhere. But the only reason there won't be anything more oil, and that will mean higher prices because foreign crude costs more than domestic crude, oil industry spokesman says. It's a simple equation. More imports equal higher cost, higher cost equals higher prices. Price controls are a

Neither the state nor federal governments ought to get into the habit of bailing out financially troubled companies, of course. Once this kind of things got started, there would be no end to it. No company should be rewarded for poor management or be sheltered from the risk of free competition in the marketplace.

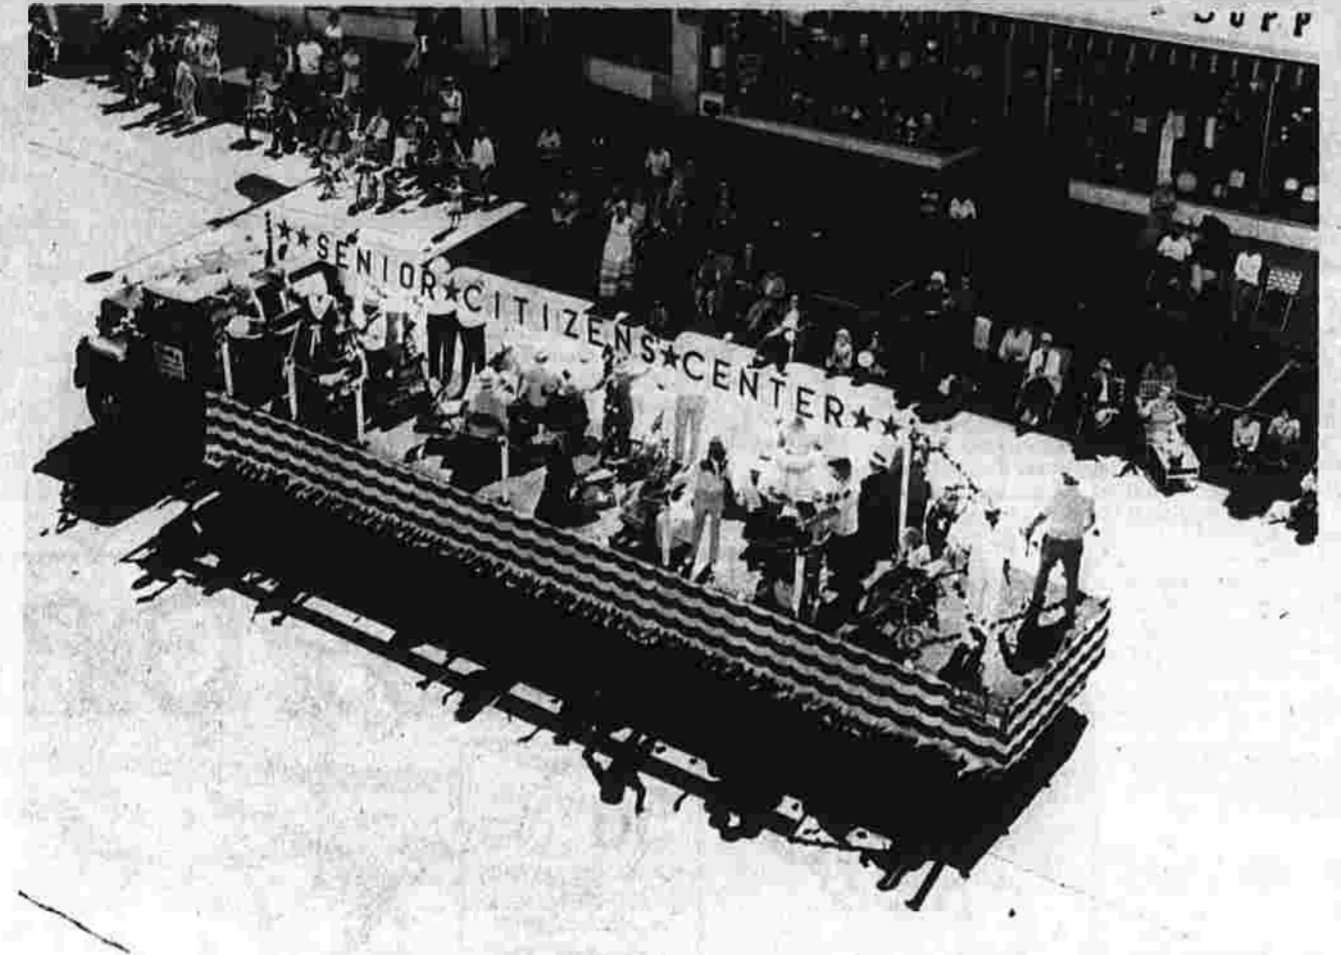

It is at least a little paradoxical, however, that had the same Volkswagen-type deal been offered to Chrysler, which originally built the New Stanton plant, or to General Motors or even to little American Motors, it would have been considered outrageous.

major factor in the erosion of the conservation ethic. The rollback of domestic crude oil prices and extension of price controls under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act was followed by a trend back to bigger cars and higher gasoline consumption. While the political rhetoric exhorted consumers to conserve energy and stressed the need to reduce America's reliance on foreign oil, the legislation pointed us the other way by decreasing incentives to shore up domestic energy supplies. That, of course, oil the the industry's argument. But whether or not most Americans agree with it, there is no escaping the simple equation: Higher gasoline consumption is going to mean higher gasoline prices, no matter where we get it from.

Teen-age turnabout

The "old-fashioned" teenager is making a comeback, say school officials interviewed by UPI in California. Interest in traditional activities like pep clubs and student elections is on the upswing. The appeal of the "counter culture" is fading. Boys are wearing letterman's jackets again, and girls are wearing dresses, at least for proms. "We came out of the rebellious '60s, through the sullen early '70s, and now we're back to the old spirit," says one principal. "They (students) are still extremely casual," says another, "but the wild hairdos, the unspeakable jeans — they're gone."

One reason behind the trend, the officials believe, is the current nostalgia for the 1950s and early 1960s, which to today's teenagers seems to represent an idyllic, happier time — and certainly was, compared to the Vietnam-era strife they grew up in. This is all welcome news, but we wonder. Nostalgia fads come and go in cycles, like everything else, and what one generation would not want to look glamorous to the next. Will school officials of the 1980s be faced with a return of the scruffy and rebellious teenager of the 1960s?

The Manchester Senior Citizens float was a crowd-pleaser in Saturday's Bicentennial Parade.

Graduation brings back old memories

WASHINGTON — June was for the lovers then, too, but not so much was made of it. We teenagers fell in and out of love quietly, we didn't inflict our traumas on the community. Today, having watched Georgetown Prep dispatch Mark off to Colgate, what I remember most about my special June was how hot it was in Town Hall for graduation — not commencement — exercises, and the last two bucks I earned toward a pair of black and white winged-tip shoes to go with my blue serge suit. I mean earned, Mac. Digging up almost a half acre of garden for a grouchy old man on South Street was making it by the sweat of one's brow — and chest and arms and legs and back. (Since late April, Mark has made $5.50 an hour soliciting money by telephone for the Ford Campaign Committee, a job that has no political or special significance for him or his father.)

Andrew Tully
I could have been a good dancer by then because the best dancer in town was named Bea Mason and she was my first cousin and she used to try to teach me how to cure the stumbles. But Pavlova would have given up on me — then and today. It was nice of Bea to try, though, because her date — later her husband — was my friend Red Volpini, a star athlete and a veritable Fred Astaire on the boards. I'm not sure about Jana, but I had a good time at the Prom despite my social deficiencies. We each had two chocolate walnut sundaes at Pelouquin's during intermission. Then, after I drove her home in my brother Ben's car, I joined some regular fellows and we went to a joint on Central Street and had two beers apiece. I was sick at 3 o'clock in the morning. Dick Taylor and I ran into a kid we both detested and he told us everybody in town knew we'd been out "lapping up booze." He thought that was a clever, worldly way to put it. That worried us. "You suppose we've got a rep, now?" Dick asked. I said no, nobody would believe that, guy, but I kept on being worried all the way to the "Res" for a bracing swim. After the swim, we went back to town and bought a pack of cigarettes called Wings for a dime. They were pretty awful, but I smoke worse stuff now, trying to kick the habit by cutting down on the tar and nicotine content. We smoked three cigarettes apiece in the old, unsmoked bowling alley of the YMCA and felt like men of the world and vowed to drive across country to San Francisco that summer and see LIFE. We did, one summer later, but we didn't drink another beer until we got to Reno, where there was a saloon that served a free lunch. The beer came from Canada, and neither of us got sick.

Striking a nuclear power balance

WASHINGTON — Now that Californians have voted against bogging nuclear power — and with that issue coming up in a number of other states — it is a good time to review where we stand in this controversial field. First, nuclear power plants are neither so safe as government mathematicians promise, nor so dangerous as Ralph Nader's men claim. Nuclear power may, in the end, turn out to be roughly as dangerous as the automobile — and that is dangerous enough, as we all know. But not sufficiently fearsome to stop us from driving, or even to pass or to enforce laws taking dangerous drivers off the street permanently. The danger, of course, must be balanced against the need. And the conclusion reached at scores of conferences I've attended on energy requirements is that possible new or expanded energy sources — solar, geothermal, wind, offshore oil, hydrothermal and the like — are either so far down the line or so limited in potential for the next 30 years or so because of a lack of scientific or engineering know-how or because of current cost, we must either throw ourselves on the mercy of the world's oil cartel countries or buckle down to developing and producing nuclear power as safely and quickly as possible.

Ray Cromley
The problems of nuclear power are threefold — dangers within the power plant, dangers connected with disposal of waste material and dangers concerned with the worldwide accumulation of plutonium. None of these dangers can be reduced, eliminated. They can be managed, however, by the use of safety regulations. First, Reasonable regulations can be formulated for the location, internal construction and other safeguards necessary to prevent a catastrophe under all reasonable and not unreasonable circumstances. Regulations have been developed — but leave loopholes a mile wide, in fire safety for one. The safety rules must deal thoroughly with more than the reactor itself. They must in more detail deal with the plant in which the reactor is located and the environment — whether or not an earthquake fault line lies in the immediate area, for example. Prevailing winds and the location of heavy population belts must be considered, and what a minor fire might do to electrical conductors throughout the buildings involved. These improved safety regulations must be clear. They must be general enough to apply to all nuclear power plants. They must be debated and bugs ironed out in advance of enforcement. Once enacted, nuclear plants should be allowed with little formalism so long as regulations were followed to the letter. Meanwhile, there must be a step-up of research on safety as it relates to power plants. Second, Today and in the immediate future the disposal of waste material would pose no serious problem if nuclear scientists would put their talents to developing an economical method for separating dangerously radioactive material from the rest of the gunk. This would leave a bulk of problem material so small as to be negligible. Other solutions must be found for the long run. It is as certain, the history of science indicates, that given sufficient research, uses can be found for the bulk of radioactive materials now discarded. Once uses are found the disposal problem disappears. Third, Plutonium — there's real danger here. Once plutonium is produced in quantity and this material used in many lands, the danger of nuclear war increases — along with the danger of theft by extremists. It is possible to devise safeguards adequate on paper. But human beings being what they are, men will grow careless. My inclination therefore, is to go slow with the breeder reactor, which produces plutonium in quantity, and depends on today's nuclear power systems — with improvements — while attempting to leapfrog to fusion power. The more immediate danger is a German-French offer to export reprocessing plants for extracting weapons-grade plutonium from used reactor fuel. Deals with Pakistan, Brazil and possibly Iran are already in the works. There seems no recourse except for the U.S. and Russia to bar sales of enriched uranium to those who play this deadly game. Reports are the world supply of uranium does not today appear to be sufficient for the future. Satellite pictures, however, suggest strongly that with sufficient follow-through, we shall find supplies ample to support current types of uranium-fueled reactors up to and well into the period fusion plants are practical.

Parade debris draws comment
To the editor, Yes, the Bicentennial Parade was a splendid effort! While special commendations should go to the Bicentennial Committee, we must remember the people of Manchester. After all, it was they who left the mark of success on the town. It reminded me of other recent success stories like the Woodstock Rock Festival and the New York garbage strike. Those who had to clean up the next day know what I'm referring to. Apparently, the spoils of success haven't changed much over the years. Michael Joseph LaFrancis 89 Cider Mill Rd. Bolton

Thought for day

I have been discovering lately the difference between being loving and loving. Being loving has all the appearances of loving except that it is detached, it doesn't get personally involved. It is always kind, considerate, compassionate and patient. It's cool, comforting and comfortable and it usually makes you feel good — not ecstatic, but good. Loving, on the other hand, is never detached. It walks you through the pain and joy another is feeling. It can be angry and suffering; it sometimes creates scenes like turning over tables in the temple or weeping over Father, help us to disavow the delusion, whatever its consolation, and to choose the loving, whatever its cost. Beethoven, Moline Boys choirs plan Emanuel concert Monday

The reactivated Beethoven Glee Club chorus will join the Moline Boys Chorus in a benefit Bicentennial concert Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Emanuel Lutheran Church. Proceeds from the concert will benefit the Emanuel Church scholarship program, which provides financial aid for students from the church in post high school studies. The Beethoven Glee Club was organized in 1925 and was active until 1953 when it was disbanded. Earlier this year, the chorus was reactivated, with James McKay Sr. as director. The 40-voice boys choir from Moline, Ill., under the direction of Kermit Wells, will include several selections from "Tom Sawyer" in the concert. The choir is making a two-week

Mack broke up A's

It was back in my baseball card collecting days that Philadelphia Athletics manager Connie Mack decided to break up his three-time American League championship team.

FINLEY MACK

Forty five years later, Charlie O. Finley is not out of not only Mack's wheeling and dealing of his top stars from the Oakland club but threats to surpass the moves by Mr. Mack after the 1932 campaign.

It took Mack one year after his last flag winner in '31 to start unloading.

The first to leave Philadelphia were outfielder Al Simmons, third baseman Jimmy Dykes and centerfielder Mule Haas who were sold to the Chicago White Sox.

After two second place finishes in the American League's Eastern Division, the A's racked up five straight divisional titles, qualifying for the World Series three years running, 1972-73-74, and walked off with World Series championship rings after whipping Cincinnati, the New York Mets and Los Angeles Dodgers.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has held up the transfer of the current players involved from Oakland to New York and Boston.

It's one man's opinion that Kuhn doesn't have a leg to stand on and all involved will be wearing new uniforms and eligible to be in the lineup before the weekend.

The year 1938 found home run hitting first baseman Jimmie Fox.

centerfielder Doc Cramer and shortstop Eric McNair moving to the Red Sox for cash.

Thus, the top dozen players with the champion A's in a matter of four years were wearing different uniforms.

The collection of former Philadelphia players failed to win a pennant for Boston, incidentally.

While money, rather lack of it, was the reason Mack had to peddle his brightest stars to meet bills, Finley is a millionaire.

Charlie O. is also a shrewd businessman and he's not about to lose any money. He picked up a reported $3 million sending Joe Rudi and Rolie Fingers to the Red Sox and Vida Blue to the New York Yankees.

The A's Philadelphia version, never recovered when Mack went into the trading market on a full scale. It's hardly likely that the A's who now call Oakland home after an unsuccessful stay in Kansas City, will take a long time to come back as contenders.

Sal Bando, outspoken third baseman and team captain, summed it up rather nicely when he learned of the latest deals and said, "We will be shooting for last place, now."

In Philadelphia from 1901 to 1964, the A's were in Kansas City from '65 to '68 and then on to Oakland.

Kuhn ready to approve

NEW YORK (UPI) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn today is expected to approve three of the most controversial deals in baseball history.

Kuhn met with Charley O. Finley, owner of the Oakland A's and representatives of the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees and officials of the American League for about 95 minutes Thursday. He probably will announce his formal approval of the sales today or within the next 48 hours.

Finley, the "agily ducking of the baseball establishment," announced Tuesday night the sales of Joe Rudi and Rolie Fingers to the Red Sox and Vida Blue to the Yankees—each for $1-million. The sales virtually dismantled the 1972-74 World Champion A's in much the same manner that Connie Mack broke up the 1929-30-31 Philadelphia A's.

The decisive argument presented at Thursday's meeting was the pledge made by Finley—that he intended to use the $3 million he received for the Red Sox, the three players to "rebuild the A's."

"We will rebuild and fast," Finley said, when he announced the sales. "I think the commissioner called the meeting because he wanted to know how we went about making the clubs."

"I think the commissioner called the meeting because he wanted to know how we went about making the clubs," added Finley. "I think he was happy with our presentation."

Finley also said that Brad Corbett, owner of the Texas Rangers, was "a hypocrite" for demanding that the sales be declared void. He said the Rangers' owner had tried to buy Oakland outfielder Don Baylor on the same day he sold the other three players.

Finley said that he was "tired and disappointed" but that he was determined to resist the demands of players for "unjustly high contracts."

Kuhn entered the picture under a section of the Major League Agreement, which went into effect Jan. 12, 1971, giving the commissioner broad powers in "the interests of the good of the game."

Having convinced himself of Finley's intentions to rebuild the A's, however, Kuhn had every right to fall back on the precedent of 45 years ago when Mack broke up his three-time American League championship clubs.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's first commissioner, who came to power after the 1919 Black Sox World Series scandal, took no action in that instance. Mack had purged his own club once before—in 1919 when baseball had no commissioner but was ruled by a National Commission—and no action was taken in that case either.

Sox poorer in cash but richer in talent

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Boston Red Sox left Oakland today, poorer in cash but richer in talent.

The Oakland A's were back in fifth place in the American League West, wondering if they have the manpower left on their squad to pull them any higher.

Boston, third in the East and loser of two previous games to the A's, defeated Oakland 8-3 Thursday night.

After the game, Boston headed south to Anaheim for a series with the Angels and Rudi and Fingers went with them, even though Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who met Thursday with Boston and Oakland officials in New York, had not yet approved the sale of each for $1 million to the Red Sox.

They watched Thursday night's game from the pressbox and Fingers commented "It's not much fun to be in limbo like this."

Rudi said "I'm not sure I know why the commissioner even had to have his meeting."

After the third inning Fisk homered off Texas. Wayne Garland, second baseman, hit a home run and his third win of seven decisions.

Boston struck for three runs in the fifth inning on a home run by Evans following Cecil Cooper's single. Two outs later, Rice followed with a solo blast. The Red Sox knocked out Mike Torrez (6-8) in the second with another run on a single by Rico Petrocelli and Cooper and Evans' double.

In the end it was NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, veteran political wheeler-dealer, who reopened broken-down talks very early Thursday morning and smoothed out an agreement acceptable to both sides.

Under the plan agreed to around 10 a.m. Thursday, the San Antonio, Denver, Indiana and New York Nets franchises will be added to the NBA as expansion teams at an entry fee of $12 million cash per club.

Players from the Utah-St. Louis and Kentucky franchises, which were bought out by the remaining ABA owners for an estimated $3 million each, will be put into a dispersal draft along with players from previously folded ABA clubs. All 22 NBA teams, including the four newest members — will select the players in reverse order according to their winning percentage last season. Specifically, the Chicago Bulls will choose first when the draft takes place sometime in the next week or so. The Bulls probably will take Kenyon Martin, Artis Gilmore, who they originally drafted in 1969.

Under the merger plan, rosters of ABA teams have been frozen retroactive to May 1, 1975. Any player on the Nets, Nuggets, Spurs or Pacers who also were drafted by NBA clubs will stay with their present teams.

Players in the dispersal draft pool who were selected by NBA teams in previous years become free agents and any club that picks them must also pick up the remainder of their present ABA contracts.

The ABA owners have agreed to pay up in full the contracts of all players not selected in the dispersal draft.

The last-minute appearance of the dispersal draft plan caused Seattle Supersonics owner Sam Schulman to cast the lone dissenting vote among the 18-member NBA board of governors.

"I voted against the merger as a protest against the dispersal draft plan, but I am in favor of the merger itself," said Schulman.

"Those things happen," said Yankee reliever Sparky Lyle, who got his 10th save. "Errors happen and it makes it exciting."

Richards had no explanation why Orta failed to tag up and said "All I could do is ask him why."

Catfish Hunter won his sixth straight game from the White Sox with his fifth victory in his last six decisions and said, "It was pretty humid. It took a little bit out of me and I was glad to see Sparky."

Terry Forster worked six innings, taking his fourth loss, and Clay Carroll finished. Richards had one complaint about either of them.

"We gave them one run when three guys ran into each other on a pop fly," he said, "and we could have had another run easily. I can't find fault with either of the pitchers."

Coch of Year

Stan Olander, who built Manchester Community College baseball team, has been named CCAA Coach of the Year.

Olander has a two-year regular-season record of 24-11 at MCC. In his first season in 1975, MCC lost to Housatonic Community College in the state CCAA finals.

MCC plays a competitive 50-games, which includes a Southern trip, a fall program, and a Greater Hartford Twilight League schedule.

Olander's club won the CCAA crown with a 7-1 victory over Housatonic.

The home run was the eighth game-winning RBI of the season for Kingman — tops on the club.

The loss was the second of the season for Hough, a knuckleballer who has risen to the status of reliever ace with Mike Marshall on the Dodgers' staff. He had shut out the Mets for three innings Wednesday night.

Ortiz 4, Rangers 1 Reggie Jackson's three-run homer in the eighth inning lifted the Orioles score in the second inning on singles from the Phillies and gave reliever Gene Garber the victory. Mike Schilling hit his 17th home run for Philadelphia, which dealt Gary Lavelle his fourth setback.

"They got some cheap runs," Sox Manager Paul Richards said, "but so did we."

The last two Sox runs were unearned, both of them scoring on a throwing error by first baseman Chris Chambliss, who tried for a forcout at the plate with the bases full and threw wild.

"I loved the Bruins, my teammates, all the great friends I made here, and the fans," Orr said in a copyrighted interview with Will McDonough of The Boston Globe. "I can't find a single thing to complain about — not even the writers."

Orr said his last year with the Bruins, when he underwent two operations on his left knee, was "totally frustrating." He said he hoped to start skating again in August.

Orr, a high-scoring defenseman, said he didn't expect any trouble assisting in the more-defensive Chicago style. "I'll do anything Chicago they want me to do," Orr said. "I'll play it any way they want. Now all I want to do is play again."

Tom Cieslowski, an All-American selection as collegian last year, will be a hammer throw contestant. De Aviss of Springfield is the New England long jump record holder with a leap of 23 feet, 11 inches to his credit.

Reid paces Open

DULUTH, Ga. (UPI) — Young amateur Mike Reid respects all those big-name golf stars he's playing against in the U.S. Open, but not enough to keep the him from being their pants off in the opening round.

He was the only man able to break par over a course where the fairway grass was left too long by accident.

While his idols like Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller, Nate Irwin and Tom Weiskopf were struggling with the high Bermuda grass, Reid, 21, became the first amateur in five years to take an Open lead Thursday by putting together a string of three straight birdies and posting a 3-under-par 67.

That was good enough for a three-club lead over five professionals tried for second and even though that lead might not hold up in today's second round, Reid said he wasn't planning to worry about it.

"I'm not going to let the lead bother me," he said. "I'm going to enjoy it for as long as I can. It's going to be fun."

EHHS grads look to 'times'

East Hartford
SHEILA TULLER

After 6 p.m. showers moved the assembly audience inside to East Hartford High School's auditorium for graduation exercises, the skies started to clear.

Principal John Callahan asked the waiting crowd to be patient while maintenance crews reset the outside stage and the gathering filed back to the football field. Callahan made the decision to change sites at the last minute because more people could witness the graduation ceremony outside.

The dark skies started to turn blue as the royal blue gowned men graduates led the procession to the field to Pomp and Circumstance. By the time the women graduates wearing white gowns were seated on the bleachers, the sun was shining again.

Thomas Galeota, class president, welcomed parents and guests. His greeting closed with the words, "We will experience good times and bad in our future just as we did during our high school years. The times together, will be the times of our lives — the commencement theme.

The class then sang "Times of Our Life." During the ceremony they also sang "Graduation Day" and "Our Praise Fits the Air," the school song.

Janet Felton, salutatorian, spoke on "The Times of Our Past. She brought back memories of the past four years.

Valuedictor Kathryn Trail continued the theme stressing commitment means beginning and ending spoke on "The Times of Our Future." She wished she could offer her classmates a formula for ment means beginning and ending spoke on "The Times of Our Future." She wished she could offer her classmates a formula for guaranteed success. She suggested being honest, helpful, friendly, and tolerant as a means to success in the family, on the job, and in the community.

Principal Callahan announced the assembled graduates had fulfilled the school requirements and earned an EHHS diploma. He presented each graduate to Emory Daly of the Board of Education who awarded the blue bond diplomas. Daly was assisted by Mrs. Marie Callen, 20-year secretary to the principal, who is retiring at the end of this school year.

Callahan also announced awards and scholarships that were presented at an awards assembly earlier in the month. Thirty members of the class were State of Connecticut Scholars. Callahan said this number was far above most area schools.

He also recognized Cynthia Dagon, Barbara Novak, and Agnes Pustai for perfect attendance during their four years at EHHS.

At the beginning of the ceremony, the invocation was given by Rev. Alva Decker. The benediction was given by Rev. William Flynn. Both had daughters in the graduating class.

Before the class officers, Thomas Galeota, Laurie Crispino, Nora Lee, Laurie Crispino, and Tymotee Wood, led the recessional back to the school, class president Galeota handed his red, white, and blue tassel. The 370 graduates folded his lead in unison.

With one loud cheer, the caps flew. The only shower that fell on East Hartford graduation ceremony last night, was a shower of mortarboards.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother is 88 and lives with my sister. Every time my sister wants to take a trip, my mother insists that I stay with her. The problem is that it is not always convenient for me, but she absolutely refuses to have a "sitter," as she calls them.

Mother has over half a million dollars in the bank and investments that pay her a very handsome steady income, so she can well afford a live-in companion.

When her daughter's demands are unreasonable, tell her so. If you're both retired and have ample income, so is your mother's. Her husband resents the fact that we are not free to make plans. We are both retired and have ample income, so is your mother's. Her husband resents the fact that we are not free to make plans. We are both retired and have ample income, so is your mother's.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and now planning my wedding. I have three older sisters who are all married. My problem is that I can't afford to have more than four attendants.

Everyone in my family (especially my mother) has been pressuring me to have my sisters in the wedding party, or at least to have my oldest sister as my matron of honor.

I love my sisters very much, and don't want to hurt them, but I think a wedding is the time to show friends how much you love them. My sisters already know how much I care for them.

Also, my friends are much prettier and can do more class than my wedding than my sisters can. Is there anything wrong with my feeling this way?

DEAR ABBY: IOWAN wrote: "The man who wanted to sue his parents for having circumcised him as an infant is lucky he wasn't living in the 18th century. In those days they castrated young males to combine the power of the adult male singer with the high range of the female alto or soprano."

You replied, "That's news to me." Abby, in my town, I heard one such singer. He was called "castrato" and it was common knowledge how the castrato was created.

I have been singing for about 75 years, but when I was a kid in my teens and had just started taking voice lessons, the Vatican choir came to my town on tour. One of its members was a pretty man in his middle years who sang with a pure soprano voice and again, everybody knew he had to be so.

I was told that he was one of the last to have had the castration operation before he was outlawed.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother is 88 and lives with my sister. Every time my sister wants to take a trip, my mother insists that I stay with her. The problem is that it is not always convenient for me, but she absolutely refuses to have a "sitter," as she calls them.

Mother has over half a million dollars in the bank and investments that pay her a very handsome steady income, so she can well afford a live-in companion.

When her daughter's demands are unreasonable, tell her so. If you're both retired and have ample income, so is your mother's. Her husband resents the fact that we are not free to make plans. We are both retired and have ample income, so is your mother's.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and now planning my wedding. I have three older sisters who are all married. My problem is that I can't afford to have more than four attendants.

Everyone in my family (especially my mother) has been pressuring me to have my sisters in the wedding party, or at least to have my oldest sister as my matron of honor.

I love my sisters very much, and don't want to hurt them, but I think a wedding is the time to show friends how much you love them. My sisters already know how much I care for them.

Also, my friends are much prettier and can do more class than my wedding than my sisters can. Is there anything wrong with my feeling this way?

Panelists say society

His wife described the fellowship and understanding Al-Anon gives to one who lives in a family where there is an alcoholic.

Ann Filloramo reported on marijuana studies which proved there is no evidence to suggest marijuana causes brain damage. "Marijuana has not been proven either safe or unsafe," she said.

Garman suggested a need for legislative changes concerning marijuana. He accused the police of harassing the youth when found with marijuana. He wondered if adults get the same treatment.

He felt that two-thirds of the existing marijuana laws generate tension between the youth and the rest of the community.

"Police treatment antagonizes the youth and interferes with adult-youth communication," he said. "We ask the police to recognize us as valid, even though we are inexperienced," he said.

He suggested improvement in communications between the youth and adults through continued seminars such as this one.

More than once during the meeting, Garman expressed his disappointment because no one from the Manchester Police Department was present, especially after he had made sure someone would be there.

Reasons given by the panel for using marijuana were the sensation of feeling high, to escape reality, and for pleasure.

Asked if he was defending drugs, Garman replied, "I will defend marijuana as long as it's not abused."

Although much of the question and answer period was about the use of drugs and marijuana, the panel made it clear the purpose of the meeting was not to determine whether it was right or wrong, but to improve communications with the adults.

Several adults observed that those attending showed there were a few who were at least willing to listen.

Garman noted that if the parents don't want to listen to you, you won't get anywhere at all. In another reference to the police activities, he mentioned the recent crackdown on marijuana in the town, but not on burglaries.

Another youth in the audience suggested that the school hire seven new counselors to work with the youth offenders instead of seven new policemen.

Adults in the audience spoke about building up a resource of inner pleasure so one wouldn't have to resort to drugs for pleasure; getting your (the youths') intelligent heads together and thinking of something more positive; not condemning the youth all the time, and why do we expect our kids to use better judgment than we did.

Some youths in the audience agreed with the panel that use of marijuana, and some other drugs, by them is only experimental. "We can't be naive all our life," they agreed.

Panelists and young audience members frequently said this is a stage we're going through. Also frequently stated was that the drug scene is a reality we have to learn to live with.

Generally, the panel was praised for its responsibility in conducting the meeting and although no particular conclusion was reached, one could say there were about 100 adults who did listen to the youth on a warm summer night at Iling Junior High School.

Globe Hollow revised operations explained to recreation board

Members of the Park and Recreation Advisory Commission Thursday heard a variety of reports on recreation matters including the revised system of hours at Globe Hollow Pool.

Recreation Director Melvin Siebold said the system of clearing the Globe Hollow pool of bathers for a one-hour period while it is being chlorinated has met with public acceptance.

That was one move that came about as the result of criticism by the Advisory Board of Health over the condition of the water there.

Some members of that board wanted the water there completely refiltered as it is in a standard-sized swimming pool. Globe is a paved and improved natural swimming area.

Siebold told the rec commission that the state Department of Health considered that costly and impractical and has recommended other steps.

One of them is to direct the water from Globe Hollow Reservoir, which feeds the pool, into the shallow pool area where it will cause greater exchange of the water. It now flows into a deep area.

Public Works Director Jay Giles is now working out a method to redirect the flow.

Siebold said he was told by a representative of the state Health Department that only one test of the water in the past five years has shown unsatisfactory conditions, and broadcasting chlorine on the surface of the water, the method which has been in use, its most satisfactory method of chlorinating that pool.

The rec commission also heard the following reports:

- Programs will open June 28 at 12 town playgrounds, this year including those at Green, Hale, and Robertson schools.

- Work is going forward on repairs to Verplanck pool.

- No more complaints are being heard about availability of tennis courts since a system of supervision has been in effect. Siebold said a sign-up system will be instituted soon.

- Rules will be put into effect which give handball and racquet ball players priority over tennis players in use of the handball courts at Charter Oak Park. Conflicts between the two groups have resulted in complaints, Siebold said.

- Dredging silt from Center Springs Pond should be done in July or August, if it is to be done, Park Superintendent Ernest Tureck reported. The Board of Directors has indicated it is willing to spend $10,000 for that work if the money becomes available.

- Vandalism at recreation facilities has abated somewhat although it continues to be a concern to the commission. Siebold said if citizens realize they can report instances of vandalism to police without being identified and without having a police car drive up to their homes, the situation will improve.
