Moses tells town to forget 8th District election case

Manchester Town Counsel Victor Moses has recommended that the town government forget about any action against the Eighth District for alleged violations of state election laws.

Moses said the matter — which involves illegal electioneering by Eighth District firemen during the Nov. 17, 1975 Buckland expansion referendum — will be dealt with along with the entire Buckland issue in Hartford County Superior Court.

The town and the district are now waiting for Judge Edward Hamill's decision on a lawsuit which seeks a determination of who has jurisdiction for fire protection in the Buckland area of Manchester. The Eighth District claims the November referendum complied with special acts and authorized district expansion to Buckland, the town, seeking to retain responsibility for Buckland, claims the district can't expand without town permission.

Moses' opinion of the election law issue stems from a state Elections Commission decision last month that Eighth District firemen had violated the law but there was nothing the state agency could do about it. A commission spokesman said local referenda are outside of the commission's jurisdiction, so a copy of the report was sent to the Town of Manchester to consider action.

In a memo to Town Manager Robert Weiss, Moses said, "After an examination and careful study of the report, it is my opinion that the find-

Economy brightening

HARTFORD (UPI) — The State Commerce Department says Connecticut's economy is improving daily, and the trend should continue into 1977.

Compared to last year, there has been major growth in all sectors, except construction, government and financial services, the department said.

"Based on the record of past recoveries, the overall rate of gain for the Connecticut economy meets our expectations," the department said.

The work is being done by Kapsia & Son of Glastonbury.

French premier fired

PARIS (UPI) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing fired independent-minded Gaullist Premier Jacques Chirac today. The move could force early parliamentary elections that might result in victory of a Communist-Socialist alliance.

Chirac, leader of the Gaullist party, technically resigned, along with his entire government. But he made it plain he felt Giscard had forced him out by not giving him enough leeway to run the government and the majority coalition in parliament.

The dismissal marked a complete break between Giscard and the Gaullist majority in the government coalition. Chirac is chief of the Gaullist party.

Unless this rupture is healed, France could be plunged into early parliamentary elections, currently scheduled for 1978, with an excellent chance for the Communist-Socialist alliance to win.

The Elysee presidential palace said the name of Chirac's replacement would be announced early this evening. There was speculation Giscard would name Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade or Foreign Trade Minister Raymond Barre. Neither has the political following of the popular Chirac.

In accepting Chirac's resignation rather than giving him a freer hand, Giscard was certain to find himself in an open quarrel with Chirac's Gaullist party, which holds more than three times the number of seats in the National Assembly held by Giscard's own Independent Republican party.

Band shell fund drive variety show Sept. 12

Ralph Macaroni of 32 Hawthorne St. is in charge of arrangements for a variety show scheduled for Sept. 12 at the site of the proposed Bicentennial Band Shell project on the Manchester Community College campus.

The program, which will be held in conjunction with the visit of the state's Bicentennial balloon to Manchester, will kick off the public fund drive for the band shell. The program, according to Macaroni, is being planned to show the city its performance as that Manchester residents may expect to see when the band shell is "for real" as to introduce the band shell site to the public.

The variety show will include performances by various local dance and musical groups including the 48-piece wind ensemble of the Manchester Summer Pops Orchestra, the Round Table Singers of Manchester High School and the Manchester Square Dance Club.

Macaroni, a music instructor at Hilling Junior High School, has been involved in the Bicentennial Band Shell project for many months. He directed Hilling's production of "Tall Tom Jefferson" to benefit the Bicentennial project.

He also was music director of the Little Theatre of Manchester's production of "Carousel" and "Promises, Promises." He has been named music director for the theater group's coming production of "Oklahoma!"

For more than 25 years, Macaroni has been choir director at St. James Church, and for the past seven years he has directed the Manchester Civic Chorus.

Town tax collections reported past the 50 per cent mark

James A. Turek, collector of revenue, said that 50.1 per cent of estimated property taxes for the 1976-77 fiscal year were collected during the month of July.

A total of $7,996,850.49 was collected last month on current and prior year property taxes and interest and lien fees.

This figure is just over half the $15,947,477 that the Board of Directors estimated for revenue from property taxes for the full fiscal year. Last year, 49.3 per cent of the year's estimated property tax revenue was collected in July, Turek said.

Property taxes make up the major chunk of non-educational revenues collected by the town. The total of non-educational revenue for 1976-77 is estimated at $18,107,387. Of this, $8,267,423.04 was collected in July.

Estimated revenue from educational sources for the year is $1,771,523. Of this, $654.01 was collected last month.

Zoning Board of Appeals gets a special message

The note was short, the message was simple, but Town Manager Robert B. Weiss deserves to be commended for sending it. Weiss sent the note Monday to J. Eric Potter, director of planning. In it, Weiss asked that notices of all meetings of the Manchester Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) and the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) be sent through his office for transmittal to the press.

An owlsh editor's notebook

By FLOYD LARSON

Both the major party conventions are now history. Neither party can be said to have nominated the so-called "dream ticket" that insures 100 per cent party harmony, party enthusiasm, and party victory in November.

As it always is in a democratic society and more particularly in one operating under what is loosely described as two-party system, concessions have been made to certain political realities — realities not all of us are to perceive nor evaluate, if we perceive them, the same.

President Ford in selecting Sen. Dole as his running mate is, we think, attempting to stake claim to the motorists passing by on Tolland Turnpike as well. These people deserve to know the reasons and reactions board members give when they rule on such an important matter. If the public is not to be notified of such a meeting, they at least deserve a representative of the press at the meeting to relay what happened.

extreme to earn their partisan commitment outside the voting booth, and the moderate-liberal Republicans have the balance of power. We think the emphasis put on party registration is overemphasized. We fear party labels are too often adopted for nonpolitical reasons. But even if valid to a degree the fact remains unaffiliated voters are a major bloc which must be weighed in comparison party strengths.

The Carter-Mondale team is not a dream ticket either since it seems bent on re-establishing the great alliance the Democratic party enjoyed under Franklin Delano Roosevelt — the solid South and the liberal movement, which is Camelot all over again only with a Southern accent instead of Bostonese.

Thus is we hear so much about the ability to campaign or articulate and so little about issues. Ford, we are told, has been a good President, but Carter will be better. The hardline Democrats will buy it, as will some others who have a facility of liking or disliking a play because of the acting rather than the script.

The wishing well in Luray Caverns, Va.

Split Republicans come out slugging

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — It is instructive to note that the text of President Ford's acceptance speech distributed to newsmen here just before he delivered it Thursday evening in Kemper Arena omitted any reference to a debate with Jimmy Carter. Yet, soon after launching into it, Ford said he was "ready to go before the American people" in such a confrontation.

The omission in the text reflects conflicting views from the President's advisors of how best he can overcome Carter's huge lead between now and Nov. 2. Should he wrap himself in the mantle of the White House and act "Presidential" during the next eight weeks? Or should he frontally attack the Democrat in debate in a rare gamble for an incumbent President? Mr. Ford himself apparently was torn on the best course to follow right up to Thursday night. His ringing challenge to Carter, however, was further evidence that GOP strategists foresee a hardwearing, no-holds-barred campaign as the one giving Mr. Ford the best chance of retaining his residence at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

Better evidence yet was his selection of Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas as his running mate. Dole, who has a well-deserved reputation of having a quick tongue, earlier in the week delivered the convention's most stinging attack on Carter.

"The Democrat (Republicans tend to drop the "ic") Party gave its nomination to a political quick-change artist," Dole charged in the speech that helped put him on the fort in Georgia suggests otherwise. In "streamlining" that state's government, Carter actually added a whopping 24 per cent more employees to Georgia's payroll. Carter's apparent weakness, however, probably will not prove as troublesome to the GOP as its own internal weakness. The party claims the allegiance of only about 22 per cent of Americans compared to the 46 per cent who call themselves Democrats. And even that tiny 22 per cent is somewhat misleading, given the party divisiveness that continued to be evident here even after Ronald Reagan's troops were forced to resign themselves to his defeat.

Reagan clearly was the darling of most of the delegates. The facade of unity projected on the last night of the convention couldn't disguise the hurt his supporters here — many of whom will now work for Mr. Ford, not because of the man, but rather because they find the alternative, Jimmy Carter, so unpalatable. But the GOP campaign will surely miss the enthusiastic cutting edge that a Reagan would have given it.

Although the GOP now finds itself on the same national, it ironically has, at the time, an excellent change to make new inroads among independents and even Democrats if it has the good sense to capitalize on a conservative mood that seems to be sweeping the country. It is traditionally the party of less government, more individual freedom, and a stronger national defense — all issues currently popular with the majority of voters.

While trying to convince voters that Gerald Ford rather than Jimmy Carter truly represents their best interests, the GOP is thus saddled at the same time with a rear guard action against those ideologues who militate against a broadening of the party's base of support. It's all enough to make Abraham Lincoln, the philosophical father of the Republican Party, shudder a bit in his grave.

Country dancing is really regal

By JUNE TOMPKINS

Herald Reporter You can take a dance out of the country, but you can't take a country out of the dance. Based on an old adage, those words aptly describe the old English dance style that is enjoying a revival during this country's Bicentennial.

The Carter-Mondale team is not a dream ticket either since it seems bent on re-establishing the great alliance the Democratic party enjoyed under Franklin Delano Roosevelt — the solid South and the liberal movement, which is Camelot all over again only with a Southern accent instead of Bostonese.

Thus is we hear so much about the ability to campaign or articulate and so little about issues. Ford, we are told, has been a good President, but Carter will be better. The hardline Democrats will buy it, as will some others who have a facility of liking or disliking a play because of the acting rather than the script.

Frank and Joy Van Cleef of 70 Garth Rd. perform a graceful allemand during a country dance routine. liking the people you dance with." She has taken dancing lessons of various styles for many years, and several years ago joined a country dance society. In the group where her husband does the dance calling, Mrs. Van Cleef frequently teams up with him in demonstrating a dance pattern.

Fortunately, the group has a talented combination of musicians that provide the tricky tunes. Known as the Village Assembly, several college students play the early English melodies on piano, mandolin, flute, double bass, fiddle, guitar, harpichord, accordion, life, hammered dulcimer and viola de gamba — some members playing more than one instrument.

It would be easy to spot Frank and Joy Van Cleef in a group of country dancers; they dance with the elegance and grace that comes from the love and understanding of the art, and years of sharing mutual enjoyment in its performance.

Mrs. Van Cleef's dance essay will be available for reference at Mary Cheney Library.

Each dance tune is played eight times through to allow for a full performance of the dance and the use of varying instrumentation highlights the repetitions.

Father and son sue each other

Two Manchester men, father and son Sidney Ellis and Neil Ellis, are involved in a series of lawsuits filed in Hartford County Superior Court involving the First Hartford Corp. and its subsidiaries.

The court clerk's office said Sidney Ellis has filed suit against the corporation, headed by his son, claiming the firm may be improperly transferring its assets to elude financial difficulties.

Among the lawsuits are a claim by Sidney Ellis for repayment of a $450,000 loan and $187,000 in salaries, and a counterclaim by Neil Ellis that Sidney Ellis owes the corporation $300,000.

Neil Ellis declined comment on the matter when contacted by The Herald today. Lawyers for Sidney Ellis also declined comment.

Neil Ellis is president of First Hartford Corp., a diversified firm whose subsidiaries include Manchester Modes Inc. Sidney Ellis is former president of Manchester Modes.

Police etch CB radios Saturday

The Manchester Police Department is planning an "Operation ID" Saturday, offering to etch Citizen Band radio units with the owner's driver's license number.

The program, to be run by Detectives Robert Hennequin and Russell Holyfield and Community Relations Officer James McCooe, is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the police station parking lot.

With a small engraver, the officers will etch the license number onto the CB unit, and keep records of the license, the serial number, and information about the unit.

McCooe said the etched identification would be helpful to police if a stolen CB unit is recovered.

Thefts of CB radios are continually increasing, McCooe said, and the etched license number may make it more difficult for a thief to "fence" the stolen goods.

Detectives said the Manchester Police Department is receiving at least one report of a stolen CB unit each day.

Lifeguards keep vigil as residents cool off

Lifeguards.

The unmentionables. They are constantly in the public eye—high above the masses perched in their raised chairs with bronzed skin which distinguishes them from the rest.

Yet they go unnoticed unless a bad accident or drowning occurs. Then they get all the publicity—the kind they'd rather do without.

Who, what are lifeguards?

For one, those patrolling and keeping a sharp eye out at the pools in Manchester are well trained. Each has passed a Red Cross advanced lifesaving course which covers 21 hours of work. And each must pass a 36-hour Water Safety Instructor (WSI) course which is a review of advanced lifesaving and "teaches you to be a good teacher."

All lifeguards have at least eight hours of training in basic first aid and the more recent additions to the staff have been trained in cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR)—mouth-to-mouth and closed heart massage—as part of the WSI course.

This, however, doesn't necessary mean you have a good lifeguard. Experience is a key word. "The first time you see it, you won't recognize someone drowning. You'll recognize it but won't think (react)," explained Bill Brindamour, assistant swim coach of the Manchester Rec Club and a lifeguard for nine years. "Rookies" can recognize when someone is in the advanced stage of trouble—but not beginning. "That's why we always have experienced guards in the chairs with rookies," offered Globe Hollow guard Marj Taggart, a four-year veteran.

What are the responsibilities? Brindamour has a simplified

Police report

William J. Bellody Jr., 20, of 21 Farmstead Dr., South Windsor, has been charged with making an improper turn in connection with a Monday afternoon Jeep-truck crash at W. Middle Tpk. and Hawthorne St.

Bellody was the driver of a truck which was in collision with the Jeep driven by Ross C. Grant, 23, of 23 Burke Rd., Rockville, at about 3:15 p.m. Grant, freed from his badly wrecked vehicle by the Town Fire Department's heavy rescue tool, was still in critical condition today at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Bellody, who wasn't hurt in the collision, was issued the summons Tuesday. Court date (not mandatory) is Sept. 3.

Arrests made by Manchester Police included:

- Duana J. Magowan, 23, of 36 Woodbridge St., charged on a court warrant Tuesday with two counts of issuing a bad check. Court date is Sept. 12.
- Bruce P. Tupper, 29, of the Connecticut Valley Hospital, Middletown, charged on a warrant Tuesday with two counts of third-degree forgery. Police said the charges stem from alleged cash withdrawals from a local bank savings account. Court date is Sept. 13.
- James M. Finley, 17, of 809 Main St., charged on a warrant Tuesday with third-degree larceny. Police said the charge stems from the Aug. 7 report of thefts of a radio and money from a truck parked on Laurel St. Court date is Sept. 13.

State Police probing check theft at MCC

State Police are investigating the alleged theft and cashing of several Manchester Community College payroll checks, authorities said today. John V. Gannon Jr., MCC's associate dean of students, said nine checks mailed to MCC employees have been discovered missing, and eight of them have been returned after being cashed fraudulently.

The theft was reported to State Police last Friday, about a week after the checks were mailed, officials said. State Police are investigating the matter because MCC is a state agency; local police aren't involved.

Officials suspect arson

HARTFORD (UPI)—Fire officials said arson was the probable cause of a three-alarm fire in a vacant building which spread to two adjacent structures and left eight families homeless while injuring two fire fighters.

There was "no question" the Tuesday blaze was set, according to Fire Marshal Ralph Marone.

The fire was first reported at 8:45 p.m., and grew to three-alarm proportions by 9:21. It was brought under control by 10:30, after it spread from the four-story brick building at 127 Albany Ave. to 125 Albany Ave. and 92 Chestnut St.

Fire fighters Paul Barr, 36, of Newington and Bill Jackson, 33, of Windsor, were treated for smoke inhalation at St. Francis Hospital. About 70 fire fighters battled the blaze.

The neighborhood has been the scene of numerous blazes at vacant buildings. The building burned Tuesday night was extensively damaged, as

New paper debuts

HARTFORD (UPI)—The city's afternoon daily newspaper, The Hartford Times, today began publication of a tabloid morning newspaper called "The Hartford Times Morning Line."

The newspaper has an orange sun rising behind the all lower-case nameplate at the top of page one, which was dominated in the first edition by a large picture of a three-alarm fire in Hartford.

The bold front-page headline "Alarm Fire Called Arson" was in all capital letters. The back page of the 44-page edition was devoted to sports.

Your neighbor's kitchen

By Betty Ryder

Had a nice note from Jan Warren who is now residing with her family in Mississippi.

She said she tried the recipe I had for "Beefy Tater Puff" which appeared in this column on Aug. 4.

"Last week I made your Beefy Tater Puff and had no leftovers... so that means it was a success," she wrote.

I'm hoping that as soon as she and her family get established in their new home she will send along some real Southern recipes for y'all (and me, too).

Discussing various recipes with a co-worker the other day, we decided that the key to good cooking is experimenting. One person may make a spaghetti sauce one way; another may use the same recipe and the results taste entirely different. It must be that extra pinch of this and that, that we cooks always manage to add on an individual basis.

That was the method used by Mary Hasson of Reading, Vt. who was named winner of the 1976 H.P. Hood New England Recipe Contest. Her winning entry was "Hostess Shrimp Pie."

A June graduate of Green Mountain High School, Mary took her favorite recipe of Quiche Lorraine and created something new by replacing the traditional bacon of the recipe with one of her favorite foods—shrimp.

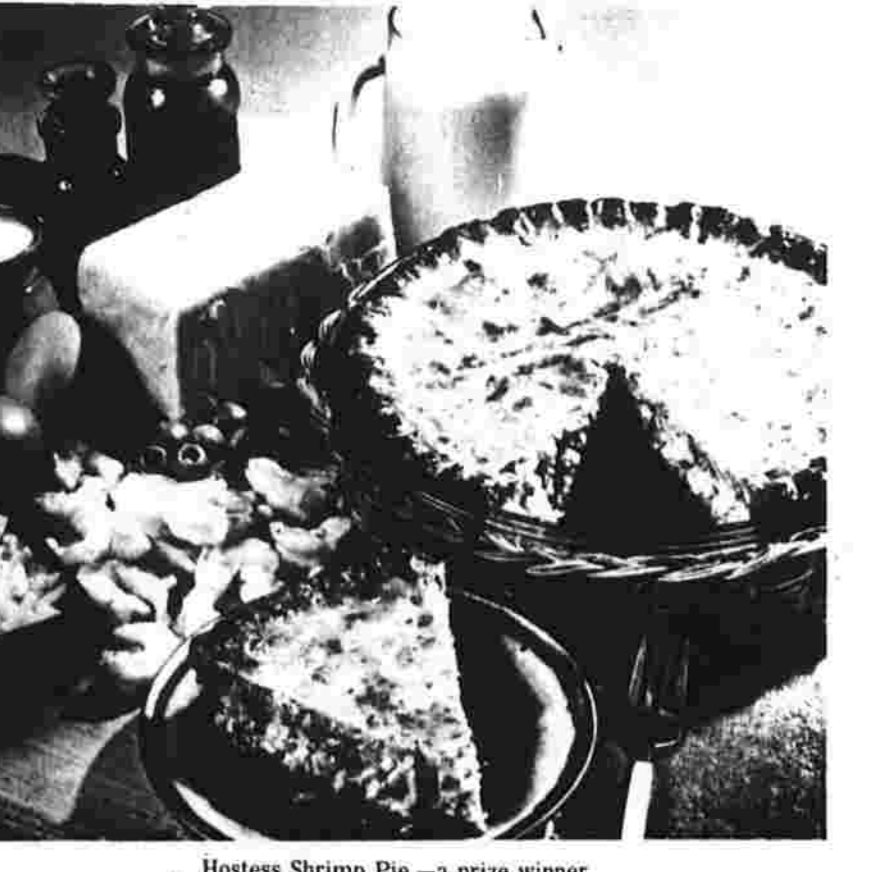

She admits that on her first trial, the recipe came out something of a dud. The shrimp alone was not sharp enough to stand up to the custard blandness of the Swiss cheese, eggs and milk that make up most of the filling.

Subsequently, she added a sharp cheddar cheese to the crust and chopped olives to the filling. The result was Mary's $500 first prize over 1,500 high school and junior high school entrants from all over New England.

Here's Mary's mouth-watering treat for brunch or luncheon.

Hostess Shrimp Pie

1/4 cup butter
1/4 tsp. cayenne
1/4 tsp. paprika
1 tsp. salt
2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 tsp. cream of tartar
2 tsp. sugar
1/4 cup shortening
1/4 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 lbs. chopped parsley
1/2 to 3/4 cup light cream
Cream butter, cayenne, 1/4 tsp. salt and the paprika. Sift flour, baking powder, cream of tartar, sugar and remaining salt in bowl. Cut in shortening. Add cheese and parsley. Stir in enough light cream with a fork to form a soft dough. Divide

On second thought

By Jan Warren

Don't miss the historical markers!

Shortly after we moved to Mississippi, my husband arrived home with a state guide book and plunked it on the kitchen counter. 'I have just divided Mississippi into six equal parts and I think we should concentrate on one part at a time, starting this weekend.' 'What's the big rush?' asked Tom. 'The big rush,' his father responded, 'is that we have only two years to do the entire state!'
