Antiabortionists hostile to Carter

By LEWIS LORD
United Press International
Jimmy Carter, who had experienced nothing but friendly welcomes in his first two days of campaigning, is starting to encounter hostility as a result of his position on abortion.

As the Democratic presidential nominee spoke in a Lutheran church in Philadelphia Tuesday, right-to-life demonstrators marched outside holding a child's coffin with a sign reading "Abortion is Murder."

When Carter flew from Philadelphia to Scranton, Pa., he was greeted at the airport and his hotel by several hundred supporters and critics, the latter carrying anti-abortion signs reading "To be born again, one must first be born" and "True Christians respect life."

Carter, who has said he personally opposes abortions but wouldn't support a constitutional amendment to ban them, told reporters that the federal government last year financed 300,000 abortions although President Ford opposes the operations.

"I don't think there's much difference between my position and his," Carter said. "He's not an abortionist. I'm not either."

While Carter jettied about the Northeast, speaking in New York, Connecticut and Pennsylvania, Ford remained in the White House in line with a strategy of staying busy on presidential affairs.

Ford told ABC-TV that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger can stay in the Cabinet "as long as he wants to." He said Kissinger "may have been a problem in the primaries" but he doubts that Carter will make Kissinger an issue because he has a high approval rating in the polls.

Carter pursued the twin themes of morality in government and lack of sensitivity in the Ford White House. He said FBI Director Clarence Kelley should have been fired for accepting gifts and services from subordinates.

People have a right to ask, he said in Philadelphia, that "if the big shots in Washington get by with it, why can't I?"

"From the top on down, you got to have a commitment to the control of crime," Carter said. "When you see Richard Nixon lying and cheating and when you see the head of the FBI breaking a little law and staying there, what sort of inducement is that to young people not to break the law?"

Sen. Walter Mondale, Carter's running mate, told union members in Los Angeles that he and Carter will put Americans back to work by easing the availability of private construction money and speeding up public works programs.

New students greeted at regional center

Norman Fendell (center, holding papers), director of the Regional Occupational Training Center, welcomes students to the new facility as Manchester schools opened today for the 1976-1977 school year. The training center, a trade school for special education students, has an initial enrollment of 81 students, 43 from Manchester and 38 from surrounding towns. Arbitrators vote 4% pay hike for school administrators

By DOUG BEVINS
Herald Reporter
A three-member arbitration panel has voted 2-1 to recommend salary increases of 4 per cent in 1976-1977 and 5 per cent in 1977-1978 for Manchester school administrators and principals.

The dissenting arbitrator, Russell Post of Canton, called for a 1976-1977 increase of 3.5 per cent for elementary school administrators and 3.25 per cent for secondary school administrators, and a 1977-1978 increase of 4 per cent for all.

Post was the arbitrator selected by the Manchester Board of Education. The other arbitrators were Donald J. Dineen of Windsor, appointed by the school administrators, and University of Connecticut Professor William Roe, selected by agreement of both sides.

The arbitration award will be discussed privately by school board members Monday, Asst. School Supt. Wilson Deakin said. The administrators have already reviewed the recommendation but haven't commented on it.

Officials say the award doesn't carry much weight because it was a split decision. If either side rejects the award, negotiations will have to begin again.

The administrators group, representing about 30 employees, is the only school employe bargaining unit which hasn't reached a contract agreement this year with the school board.

Contracts have been ratified with teachers, secretaries, nurses and custodians. Tentative agreement has been reached with teacher aides but that contract hasn't been signed.

The teachers contract calls for salary increases of 4.75 per cent in 1976-1977 and 5 per cent in 1978.

1976-1977 and 5 per cent in 1978. Secretaries are getting a 5 per cent increase in 1976-1977 and will bargain for a new contract next year. The nurses' settlement was for increases of 5 per cent in each of two years, and custodians settled for 4.5 per cent the first year and 5 per cent the second. The tentative agreement with teacher aides is for 5 per cent in 1976-1977, with a new contract due next year.

Salary was the primary dispute in the administrators contract talks. The school board asked administrators to accept an increase of less than the 4.75 per cent given teachers, contending that local administrators are already much better paid than their counterparts in the Hartford area. Administrators reportedly sought an 8 per cent increase, contending they have more experience and more responsibilities than their counterparts.

Few opening day problems reported in local schools

By DOUG BEVINS
Herald Reporter
Manchester public schools opened today for the 1976-1977 school year with fewer problems than in the past, School Supt. James Kennedy said.

The highlight of the first day of school was the opening of the Regional Occupational Training Center, a trade school for special education students from Manchester and surrounding towns.

Kennedy and Town Building Committee Chairman Paul Phillips joined Director Norman Fendell in opening the training center to students this morning. The $1.4 million facility, about 99 per cent finished, is considered the first of its kind in the country, they said.

Initial enrollment at the state-financed center is 81, with 43 students from Manchester and 38 from area towns. Nearly all of the students arrived on time, at 8 a.m., and seemed happy with their new school.

Fendell, who spearheaded the eight-year effort to establish the center, said he spent a sleepless night worrying about the first day, but everything went smoothly.

Phillips, who kept watch on construction of the facility at Wetherell St. and Hillstown Rd., said the building will be completed in about a week. Installation of some equipment in the woodworking shop and "touching up" a few odds and ends are all the work remaining.

Elsewhere in the Manchester school system, Kennedy said there were a few, expected transportation problems and one or two areas of concern for size of elementary school classes.

The transfer of South School students to Martin School and Highland Park School appeared to go well, although one class at Martin School had too many students, Kennedy said.

Kennedy said school administrators are keeping a close watch on enrollments and will make adjustments in some classes if necessary. An enrollment total won't be firm for a few days, he said.

"It was an extremely smooth opening," Kennedy said, "and better than any in the recent past."

Most past problems involved ongoing construction programs, particularly in the junior high schools, Kennedy said, but that work was finished last year.

Peck defeats party choice

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
The grass root Republicans have spoken, a smiling Fred Peck said shortly after the final returns came in Tuesday night. The "words" of those Republicans meant that he will serve as the party's registrar of voters for the next four years.

Peck, who has been the Republican registrar since 1960, defeated Marion Mercer 961-693 in Tuesday's primary for the registrar's position.

Strong support for Peck from the senior citizens was cited by both candidates as a major factor in his winning. District Eight, which includes the Bluefield Dr. housing project for the elderly, went overwhelmingly for Peck, 178-36. Peck also lived on McKee St. in that area for 25 years.

Mrs. Mercer, who was the party endorsed candidate, ran well in her home district, District Five, winning by a 155-119 margin. She was only able to win two other districts, however, (Districts Four and Nine.)

Although the incumbent, Peck was the one who had to force the primary. The Republican Town Committee met on July 30 and endorsed Mrs. Mercer for the registrar's position, 44-18.

Peck, however, decided to petition for a primary. He received 788 signatures, almost double the total needed, by the Aug. 13 deadline.

He credited hard work as part of the reason for his win. Pointing to a new pair of shoes, he said, "I wore one pair out."

"There's no substitute for personal contact and going door-to-door," he said.

Mrs. Mercer felt the date of the primary might have hurt her more than Peck.

"Mothers with children, these are the people who would vote for me," she said. Tuesday, many of those mothers were busy getting ready for the opening of school today and were unable to vote, she said.

She said there is no bitterness about the loss.

"We're all Republicans. We all now have to work together for the same purpose—a victory in the election in November," she said.

Republican Town Chairman Thomas Ferguson, who backed the candidacy of Mrs. Mercer, also said the primary would not cause any bad feelings in the party.

"I'm sure I can accommodate myself to work with Mr. Peck," Ferguson said.

"If he works as hard at his registrar's position as he did at winning the primary, we'll have a helluva registrar," he said.

He added that the primary was not a vicious one and would create interest, rather than divisiveness, toward the party. Turnout for the primary, almost 20 per cent, was higher than expected.

The primary for registrar in Manchester resulted in the same outcome as a similar race in East Hartford.

Harry M. Borst, East Hartford's Republican registrar for 21 years, did not receive the party's endorsement to run again, but he still defeated party-endorsed candidate Mary Finnegan 607-173.

Voting in Manchester's ten districts went like this: District One, Mercer 31, Peck 74; District Two, Mercer 72, Peck 123; District Three, Mercer 64, Peck 76; District Four, Mercer 116, Peck 80; District Five, Mercer 155, Peck 119; District Six, Mercer 68, Peck 78; District Seven, Mercer 44, Peck 95; District Eight, Mercer 36, Peck 178; District Nine, Mercer 64, Peck 51; and District Ten, Mercer 43, Peck 87.

The happy winner

In case you can't tell, this man was the winner in Tuesday's primary for Republican registrar of voters. Fred Peck flashes the smile of a winner after learning he had beaten Marion Mercer by a 961-693 vote. (Herald photo by Dunn)

NAUGATUCK — About 3,600 striking members of the United Rubber Workers at Uniroyal Rubber Co. have voted near unanimous approval of the three-year contract which ended their 20-week strike. The new pact could raise wages 36 per cent and tire prices 16 per cent, the company said. The average URW worker now gets $5.50 per hour, plus $3.55 an hour in benefits.

BRIDGEPORT — Samuel J. Tedesco, 60, was scheduled to be sentenced Thursday as the first sitting Superior Court judge in state history convicted of a felony. He was convicted June 29 of notarizing a false signature on a liquor permit for a country club partly owned by his family. He could be jailed for three years, fined $1,000 and removed from the bench.

BOSTON — Tight security will be imposed at the trial of Susan Saxe, formerly on the FBI's most wanted list and charged with murder and bank robbery. Jury selection in the trial will begin next Wednesday.

WASHINGTON — A federal judge has ordered former Nixon aide John Ehrlichman to start serving time in prison next week. Ehrlichman was sentenced to a term of 20 months to five years for his involvement in a 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Luis Echeverria, the balding, bespectacled president of Mexico, snatched protest signs from two pickets protesting Mexico's prisons.

HACKENSACK, N. J. — An investigation of the "black market" baby business has resulted in the indictment of seven persons, including five lawyers, who allegedly sold infants to adoptive parents at prices up to $5,000.

NEW YORK — Some of the dozens of FBI agents ordered by an appeals court to testify about illegal FBI burglaries in New York may circumvent that order under an agreement with the FBI's parent government agency. The Justice Department Sworn statements are among the alternatives to personal testimony before a grand jury which are being considered.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Today marked an anniversary for Richard Nixon, but it was doubtful there would be any celebration. Two years ago today, Nixon was granted a pardon by President Ford for any crimes committed as president. Nixon had resigned a month earlier.

International

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's top aide on African affairs, William Schaefe, arrived today to brief President Julius Nyerere on U.S. peace initiatives in southern Africa and pave the way for an expected visit by the secretary next week.

Directors take no action on rehab loan policies

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Members of the Board of Directors spent over an hour Tuesday night firing questions at Alan Mason, director of human services, about the rehabilitation loan program.

The program, also known as the housing improvement program, is sponsored by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). It will provide subsidized home improvement loans to low and middle-income families who qualify under certain financial and geographical guidelines. The program is intended to improve and rejuvenate existing neighborhoods in Manchester.

The board has already appropriated Community Development funds for the program. They were scheduled to act Tuesday night on two matters affecting the program: guidelines drawn up for rehabilitation loans by Mason, and a request by Mason to hire an individual to oversee the program.

No formal action was taken on either matter Tuesday night. Both will be acted on at the board's next scheduled meeting, Tuesday, Sept. 14.

Mason told the board that there were three alternatives for the hiring of a staff member to head the program. Manchester could 1) Hire a new staff member at a cost of $12,000-$15,000 per year. 2) Share Vernon's rehabilitation loan administrator on a 50-50 basis at a cost of $5,000 per year. Vernon is willing to go along with such a plan. 3) Hire an individual through HUD under an Inter-Personnel Governmental Act (IPA) contract. This would cost the town about $8,000 per year for a 35-hour-per-week staffer.

One board member who spoke favorably about hiring an administrator for the program was Phyllis Jackson.

She said she usually does not support the hiring of new staff members, but in this case she felt an exception was reasonable.

"This particular program should be able to eliminate some of the blight in poor areas," she said.

Carl Zinsner called the program "one of the best ones we have going under community development."

On another matter, Jay J. Giles, director of public works, spoke to the board on the Public Works Employment position ordinance, which was adopted by the board in 1975. Giles thought it qualified for the requirement of the program. Among the nine were public works center, improvements to the water system, and work on the Adams St. bridge.

The board took no formal action on any of the scheduled items. All the matters, including approval of the fact-finding report on the fire fighters and a change in the town disability pension ordinance, will be acted on at the Sept. 14 meeting.

Debate site picked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first debate between President Ford and Jimmy Carter will be held in Philadelphia's Walnut Street Theater, campaign sources said today.

The League of Women Voters at first wanted to hold the Sept. 23 debate between the presidential candidates in Independence Hall, but the old theater was chosen instead, sources said.

The ornate, Grecian-style theater was designed by architect John Haviland and built in its present form in 1808, making it the oldest physical structure of a legitimate theater in the country. A program to restore it began in 1970.

Independence Hall probably was rejected because it is not large enough, and the historic old building is considered too fragile to stand up to heavy tourist traffic.

Philadelphia was favored as an appropriate site because this is the High school credits offered

This fall the Manchester Adult Evening School, in addition to its regular program, will be offering some high school courses for Manchester High School credit.

These courses will be open to adults, high school students and non-high school graduates.

Each course will meet for three hours per week for a period of twelve weeks. The only exception is physical education which will meet for two hours per week for eleven weeks.

Since the material covered in each course will be equivalent to that covered in the same type of course offered at Manchester High School during a semester, the amount of high school credit granted will be the same — 5 high school credits per course (except physical education which will be worth 2 credits).

Participants can take one or two of these courses per term but no more than two.

There are no fees for Manchester residents taking these courses. However, non-residents will be required to pay a tuition fee of $20 per course.

The specific courses being offered are listed below. Adults can obtain further information about these courses (time, day and room) and a registration form by obtaining an evening school brochure from a local HARTFORD (UPI) — State Tax Commissioner Gerald Heffernan says entertainment is almost a $100 million business in Connecticut.

He said that assessment was based on the $9,528,419 collected last year under the 10 per cent admissions tax.

He said the receipts were up $14,419 or 1.53 per cent in the year ending June 30, compared to the year before.

Most of that was attributable to the opening of the Bridgeport and Hartford jai alai arenas.

The two arenas have already attracted over 1.23 million patrons, Heffernan said.

The Plainfield dog track has attracted 1.04 million customers.

The commissioner said 43 per cent of the tax's receipts come from entertainment events, 45 per cent comes from membership dues at social, athletic and sporting clubs and 14 per cent comes from cabarets.

The number of visitors to the state increased an estimated 10 per cent according to Barnett Laschever, director of tourism for the state Department of Commerce.

He said five state-owned facilities had 542,193 visitors last year compared to 500,453 the year before.

Advertising and liberty

Does advertising contribute anything to the world? Is mankind served by efforts to show that this brand of miracle suds gets clothes whiter than those miracle suds? Couldn't the $28 billion spent in America every year on advertising be better used elsewhere, say in improving the nation's schools?

Such questions have been asked not only by critics of this country's economic system but by conscientious advertising people themselves, and certainly by everyone who has ever been irritated by an interruption to a television program for some inane commercial, "message." One leading member of the advertising profession has met the questions head-on.

Rather than being an expensive parasite on the social structure, "advertising is as vital to the preservation of freedom in my country as the free exercise of publishing a newspaper or the free exercise of building a church or free exercise of the right of trial by jury," asserts Tom Dillon, chairman of the board of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc.

For one thing, he points out in an address reprinted in the BBDO Newsletter, the ad agency's house organ, part of that $28 billion allegedly wasted on local and national advertising pays the entire cost of running all the radio and television networks in the United States and all the 5,526 individual radio and TV stations. Another part of it provides the bulk of the support of 1,819 daily and 6,824 weekly newspapers and 9,872 consumer, trade and technical magazines.

Without the financial support of advertising, says Dillon, not only would there be no practical freedom of economic choice, there are very serious questions whether there would be any practical freedom in politics and religion.

"What good is freedom of the press unless you have a press and the paper to put it in, and a way of distributing the paper?" he asks. "You may

An owlish editor's notebook

By FLOYD LARSON

We have been hearing a lot lately about the so-called "smoke" laws which would automatically terminate government agency's existence unless it could justify its continuance.

Now if we were a long-time member of the Congress or the Connecticut General Assembly, we would resent the inference of such a proposal.

After all, isn't this one of the things congressmen and state legislators are supposed to be doing?

But, the fact is they are not for many reasons - a few of them even valid - been the watchdogs over the public purse they were intended to be under the Constitution. The real root of our runaway bureaucracy is our collective unwillingness to say no to even the most expensive proposals.

The decision-making role of Congress and state legislators has been abdicated to the bureaucracy which, in turn, has become self-perpetuating.

The answer then may not be an automatic review of the problems and assessing its worth on the basis of past performance and current need, will be used to preserve the status quo.

For example, most of us know there are a lot of government agencies that exist not to solve problems but to provide jobs for people. Now it does not take too much moxie to realize that once you have one of these jobs, it is kind of stupid to solve yourself out of work.

Do problems create demands for public funds or does the relatively easy access to public funds create problems?

Perhaps one of the most difficult areas in which to apply a sunset law would be national defense for not only are you dealing with one of the largest hunkers of the national budget moneywise, it is enormous employment for many non-government jobs directly and indirectly related to defense spending.

Any significant shift in a weapons system, we know, leads to all kinds of personal ramifications and has spawned countless agencies to deal with these problems which in the end may be good politics but not necessarily good defense.

We have provisions to help local communities to cope with the impact of a large non-paying military facility on a community. We have provisions for helping local communities to adjust to the impact of a military facility being mobilized.

Often the price tag is cheaper to leave things the way they were. Thus we have soft spots in our defense that reflect political considerations such as jobs in the civilian sector rather than military realities.

No politician will touch it with a 10-foot pole. But to the real motivation for a manned bomber fleet of B52s or B1s is that we don't quite know how to absorb the manpower that would be released into our economy if we went to an all-missile defense accenting hardware rather than manpower.

We may see votes cast in the name of national security for the B1 next year, but the real reason may be those pressures from Omaha, the plane-making districts, and military commanders whose jobs hinge on the size of their commands.

and now some comments from the man on the street."

President Ford's vetoes and Congress' arrogance

WASHINGTON - Jimmy Carter is making a campaign issue of the 55 vetoes cast by President Ford during the two years he's been in office. The Democratic nominee is on shaky ground in this accusing Mr. Ford of "negativeness," however, since two Landonite presidents in this century - Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman - cast 104 and 70 vetoes respectively during the same amount of time.

In a lengthy document just released by the White House, the President's vetoes are defended as being necessary to "restore fiscal integrity" to the federal budget. The document, entitled "The Ford Presidency - A Portrait of the First Two Years," adds that "44 vetoes have been sustained - at a savings to the taxpayers of $9.2 billion."

"The veto provided by the Constitution as a check against excessive action by Congress, has assured that special interests are not advanced to the detriment of the national interest," President Ford, recognizing this fact and the fact that a President must, by the nature of his office, represent the entire Nation, has used veto power to restrain the growth of an already bloated federal government.

Although federal spending continues upward and upward, the rate of such spending growth has in fact been slower than in any year since Ford's vetoes. In fiscal year 1975, federal spending was nearly 21 per cent higher than the previous year. The rate slowed to 12.6 per cent in 1976 and is projected at 9.4 per cent in 1977 if - and this is a big if - the man in the White House next year continues to curb Congress' high-spending ways.

The White House claims that the vetoes of spending bills have gained "the average American household more than $150 a year." Whatever else can be said for or against the President's 55 vetoes, his power to act then as authorized in Article I, Section 7 of the Constitution, is indisputable.

Meanwhile, at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, Congress is busy casting its own kind of vetoes of White House actions in a process far less well defined by the Constitution. Powerful Democrats on Capitol Hill have banded together to, in essence, kill or delay the President's appointments to a host of key federal jobs. The obvious intent in many of the cases is to delay action until next year in the hope that Democrat

Carter will then be able to fill the slots with his own people. At least 70 such nominations have been bottled up by Senate committees. Included are several law enforcement posts in the areas of U.S. attorney, U.S. parole commissioner and U.S. marshal, more than a dozen federal judgeships, and at least nine appointees as commissioners of regulatory agencies and other federal units.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield has publicly denied that there is any conspiracy to delay White House appointments until after the November election, but other senators and staff aides have acknowledged that that indeed is the intent by the committees. Also victimized by such delaying tactics are some key policy decisions which likewise are chiefly the prerogative of the President. Notable among these is the decision of whether to go forward with plans to procure the first three copies of the Air Force's proposed new strategic bomber, the B-1.

Senate and House conferees are meeting this week to decide whether to appropriate the B-1 production funds now or whether to hold up the decision until February of next year as suggested in the Democratic Party's national platform - when Jimmy Carter might be in the White House to possibly scrap the plane altogether.

Arguments can be made for and against both Mr. Ford and Congress in their checkmating of each other. It is more than a little disturbing, however, when even issues of the most urgent importance to the nation's security are given short shift in favor of election-year politics.

On balance, this writer comes down in favor of the President's position. Democracy is more than rule by the majority - it also consists of providing a voice for the minority. And Mr. Ford, through his constitutionally provided veto power, has provided that voice.

His actions, granted, are a product of his party's weakness on Capitol Hill. But if they do indeed add up to "negativeness," then the like actions of Congress, which is dealing from strength, add up to arrogance.

The real problem of problem drinkers

Since drunken drivers are said to be responsible for at least half the nation's annual toll of traffic deaths and accidents, it would seem to make sense, if possible, to remove these menaces from the highway before they cause accidents, not after. To see if it is, in fact, possible is the object of a $797,000 federally funded experiment currently being conducted in the District of Columbia. Since April, more than 4,000 applicants for drivers' licenses in the district have been asked to fill out a questionnaire designed to identify "problem drinkers," which includes:

- fulfilled alcoholics as well as those with less chronic drinking habits.
- Psychologists have established that certain personal situations and attitudes and health problems can be indicators of problem drinking. Thus in addition to direct questions about drinking habits, the Washington questionnaire asks such things as: "Would you describe yourself as being lonely a good deal of time?" "With whom do you live - Alone? With friend? With relative? With wife or husband? With ex-wife or ex-husband?"

What critics of the experiment are afraid of is that what is voluntary now could be made mandatory in the future and that license applicants identified as problem drinkers would be required to undergo some form of medical evaluation or treatment or education as a condition for obtaining a license. The people in charge of the project admit they are thinking of just that.

Now in a well-run society, not only potential alcoholics but potential criminals and anybody with any kind of life-adjustment problems would be identified early and helped before caused difficulties for himself and others.

But psychology is still an inexact science, and this is still supposed to be a society where a person is considered innocent until proven guilty by what he does, not by what someone thinks he might do. Those who complain that the Washington experiment is a gross invasion of privacy and evidence of excessive Big Brotherism are not being paranoid. The fact is that we already have plenty of people who have un-

Or true or false: "Sometimes I feel very guilty." "I usually sweat at night." "I sometimes feel that I am going to pieces."

Responses to the questions, which are entirely voluntary, have been put into a computer and indicate that about 15 per cent of those questioned so far are problem drinkers, say officials.

Lower bond bid denied

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — James Michael Klein, 38, accused of the shooting deaths of his former wife and her maid, failed to win reduction of his bond from $250,000 to $50,000. Superior Court Judge Kenneth Zarrilli turned down the request at Klein's arraignment Tuesday on two counts of murder in connection with the June 2 shooting deaths in Greenwich. Zarrilli told the New York City garment district executive there was a reasonable chance for conviction based on preliminary evidence and ruled the higher bond was "proper". Klein was held in the Bridgeport Correctional Center.

When no one came to pick up the couple's 6-year-old son from school, police investigated and found Joanne Kim Klein, 32, a former model and her maid, Martha Lema, 28, of Columbia, South America, dead in the $215,000 Klein home. Both had been shot twice. Police said there were no signs of forced entry nor any indication of a robbery. Klein told police after the slayings he met his former wife to discuss financial matters the day the bodies of the two women were found. He and Mrs. Klein were divorced.

Peterson upsets party choice in bid to face GOP's McKinney

GROTON (UPI) — Geoffrey G. Peterson of Westport, having won the party-endorsed candidate in the 4th Congressional District Democratic primary, today faced an uphill fight against Republican incumbent Stewart McKinney. Peterson Tuesday rolled up large margins virtually throughout the affluent Fairfield County district in beating Charles B. Tisdale, the first black ever to win either major party's convention endorsement here.

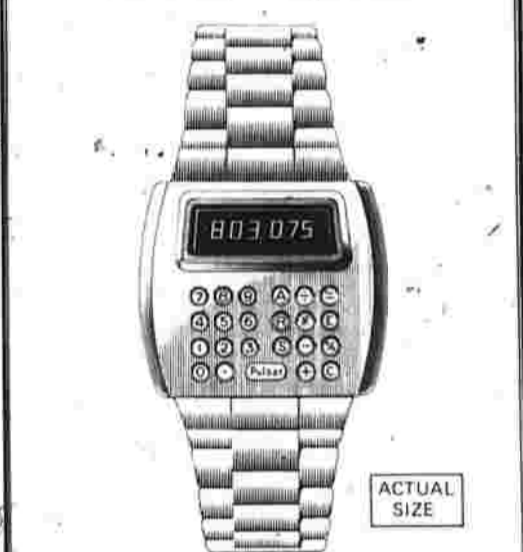

Peterson, a protege of Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, said the results were a victory for the people over Bridgeport's political machine, which opposed his candidacy. "I think one of the major differences was that I didn't believe the conven-

Big weekend for golfers

Manchester's biggest golfing event of the season will be coming up this weekend with the 30th edition of the Manchester Open which will offer $3,500 in cash or merchandise.

UConn head coach Larry Navias reported the snap from center to the punter must be executed in eight tenths of a second to be successful. The distance is 13 yards. For years Manchester boasted at least one player with the UConn varsity football squad but none is listed from here.

College gridders

Bill Liska is working with 72 football candidates at Central Connecticut State College and one is listed as the toughest in the school's history. Coach Carm Cozza is looking over 18 gridders at Yale.

Brown's defeated in ASA nationals

It was a short stay in Chattanooga, Tenn., for Brown's Tires in the National Amateur Women's Softball Slow Pitch Tournament.

The locals, Connecticut champions, bowed out in successive starts last Friday and Saturday in the double elimination play. The Minnesota Spokes notched a 5-2 win over the Tires in the first test.

Antitrust charges of Finley dropped

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal court judge dismissed antitrust charges made by Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, but set a trial date on whether Kuhn had the authority to ban the sales of three A's players.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr Tuesday threw out three counts of Finley's seven-count suit, saying it was "well established" baseball was exempt from the antitrust laws.

Finley still could sell Blue to the Yankees, since Blue has signed a three-year contract. But once the season ends Finley and Finberg will become free agents and Finley would be unable to sell or trade Blue.

'Good Guy Award' tag to Tanner in net defeat

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — After three hours of playing one of the greatest matches in the history of the U.S. Open until 1 a.m. Wednesday morning, Hie Nastase won back the fans and Roscoe Tanner got the all-time "Good Guy Award."

Nastase and Tanner, two of the most powerful servers in tennis, fired missiles at each other for five grueling, spectacular sets, running up 25 aces between them on a slow, clay court.

But all the fine shots, all the brilliance of a match that produced a record of 329 points and a 7-5, 6-7, 16-7, 6-4 fourth-round victory for Nastase, was eclipsed by the controversy of one call and the sportsmanship of Tanner.

Marchibroda back on job

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Ted Marchibroda, who returned as head coach of the Baltimore Colts Tuesday after resigning last week, said the important thing now is to get his team ready for the weekend clash against New England.

Marchibroda resigned after complaining of front office interference. He said he was returning to the club with "full control of football matters and an additional year added to my contract."

The most important factor is not that Ted Marchibroda is returning but that the players remain together, he said during a news conference Tuesday at St. Mary's Seminary, the training site for the Colts' first five players to have a good practice today and to get ready for New England on Sunday.

Nelson accepts job with Bucks

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Although he admitted he will "miss the Celtics tremendously," 14-year NBA veteran Don Nelson Tuesday accepted the job of assistant coach of the Milwaukee Bucks.

Windsor cut

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Veteran tight end Bob Windsor was released by the New England Patriots in a surprise move Tuesday.

Close call

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dodger catcher Steve Yeager, struck in the neck by a splintered "half of a baseball bat," will be released from the hospital Wednesday and will rejoin his team in eight to 10 days, his doctor said Tuesday.

Tanner battled safely through three break points while serving at 4-4 in the fifth set before Nastase fired a winner down the line. Tanner, pausing briefly to look at the shot, ran by it and off the court, straight to the ice box. He opened up a soda while the crowd booted the call.

Sitting behind the baseline, ignored by umpire Merle Erwin and the players, was burly veteran linesman Adrian Clark, his left hand signaling the ball was out. Four times Clark pointed outside the line and finally he stood up and motioned to Erwin.

Tanner and Nastase switched sides of the court but Clark continued to protest the resumption of play. Clark straddled the line and the spot where he thought the ball had landed and the crowd chanted "out, out." Finally, referee Charlie Hare was brought out to make a ruling. Hare said 30,702 people filled through the iron gates of the West Side Tennis Club, 14,418 at night.

Manuel Orantes, the defending champion, spotted 1971 Ulistet Stan Smith two sets before bringing him out with a bagful of shots to win 6-3, 6-1, 2-6, 6-7, 6-1.

Second-seeded Bjorn Borg narrowly missed being upset by 15th-seeded Brian Gottfried, coming back from two sets down and 0-2 in the third set to win 7-6, 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 2-6.

Borg said he thought the long match might have been good for him. "Sometimes it's good to have tough early matches like the 20-year-old Svede said, 'It strengthens you for later on.'"

- The following tips for defensive driving provide some sound advice on how to begin driving defensively.
- 1) See the possible accident situation in time to take evasive action.
 - 2) Get the whole traffic picture by watching not only straight ahead but to the sides from where cars or pedestrians may come into your path.
 - 3) Make sure your car is adequately lighted and has reflective material on door edges and bumpers to increase visibility at night.
 - 4) Get into proper lane well in advance of intention to turn.
 - 5) Use correct signals in advance of intention to turn.
 - 6) Flash brake lights to warn following driver of intention to stop and check his actions in your mirror.
 - 7) Sound horn when necessary to warn other drivers or pedestrians of your presence.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was engaged to marry a registered nurse, but all of a sudden she changed her mind. Now she wants to wait a while because she became interested in a man she had as a patient a few months back.

He's a cop who was shot during a holdup. A bullet hit his spine and he is paralyzed from the waist down, so I can't understand how he can do her any good as a husband.

She tried to give me back the diamond, but I told her I wanted her to continue to wear it to remind her of her promise to marry me. The last time I saw her, she wasn't wearing it, and she acted very cold.

I have a full-time job that pays good money, and I am in perfect health. Please let me know what you think this man can do for her, being paralyzed, confined to a wheelchair and unable to work. Thank you.

PUZZLED IN NEW YORK

DEAR PUZZLED: What this man can do for her concerns her and the man. In any case, I suggest you accept the engagement ring she wants to return because now that she is interested in another man, your engagement is off.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a secretary in a one-girl office with a great boss. The problem is with the salesman. Since I'm the only girl, they make all sorts of passes at me. One old goat who's old enough to be my father asked me if I played around.

Abby, I love my job and make excellent money for a girl my age (18), and I'm not about to quit because of these jerks.

I used the money because my parents are dead, and I support myself. I try to be friendly, and sometimes I talk around with the men, but I've never given any of them the least little bit of encouragement.

I know they read your column. So please print this. They may see it and leave me alone.

DEPRESSED IN DEWEY

DEAR DEPRESSED: Apparently your "friendliness" and "kidding around" have been misunderstood. If a girl is "all business," a man rarely suggests any monkey business. And if he does, he can be set straight in a hurry.

DEAR ABBY: One might think that at age 60, I'd be used to people who call attention to the fact that I'm unusually tall. But it still bothers me.

Please remind your readers that if unusually tall people don't pass a mirror, they can forget about their height for a while—until some heartless dolt says, "I like to stand next to you because it makes me feel so small." Or worse, "Say, how tall ARE you anyway?" If the answer is, "I'm 6 feet, 2" or "3" or "6," what's the difference?

We tall folks have enough problems trying to find clothes to fit us and comfortable furniture without remarks from "normal" people who mean well but spoil our day by reminding us that we're freaks.

TALL IN TILLAMOOK

DEAR TALL: Here's a short order for all you other people who know better but sometimes forget: If a person is unusually tall or short or fat or thin—he knows it. And doesn't want to be reminded.

For Thursday, Sept. 8, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Another day to let an intermediary do the talking to secure gains to which you are entitled. Choose someone trustworthy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Let the lessons of today be booster today. Though you may be dubious about this person, he has a way of generating only good things for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Use this day to match up agreements of the past. It is a good time to bring lost allies back into the fold.

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
Dante Fortuna will back you today once she sees you're willing to exercise some initiative. Bead the lope in the den.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22)
Your thoughts are bold and imaginative today, but you'll be far more successful in carrying as big a load out of serving you than with an individual.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Financial gain will be uppermost in your mind today. Your chance of increasing your bank balance lies with those involved with your work or career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
The initiative and leadership are yours today, but you will accomplish more by letting those under you feel the winning ideas are their own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
It's more advantageous for you to let an intermediary do the talking to secure gains to which you are entitled. Choose someone trustworthy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Imaginary you know that you can do all the things expected of you. What you may not know is that Lady Luck is sitting on your shoulder today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Someone you're talking with has a good idea and doesn't know what to do with it. Take it and move ahead. You're the guy to exploit it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
If people want to do things for you today, let them. They'll get them out of serving you as you'll enjoy their services.

Air Force law enforcement specialist

It's a man's world, or so they say, but a lot of capable young women are taking their place right along side them.

Joann Dwire, an airman first class in the U.S. Air Force, is one of them. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dwire of 9 Coleman Rd., she has recently returned from a tour of duty in Thailand and Okinawa.

Joann's dad, retired now from Pratt & Whitney Division of United Technologies Corp. in East Hartford, also served in the Air Force. He worked there three years, went into the service, and was employed by P&W another 17 years before retiring. Her mom was employed by Civil Service.

Your neighbor's kitchen

By Betty Ryder
An easy-going young man of 23, Don Ryan of 59 Strickland St., a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, likes to cook and dreams of opening a "classy" restaurant some day.

Don, who graduated from Manchester High School in 1970 and from the Culinary Institute in New Haven four years ago, is now employed at The Brownstone in Hartford.

He previously worked at Ocean House in Rhode Island and speaks highly of Frank Lattuca, who formerly headed the Hotel and Food Management Program at Manchester Community College and who was instrumental in securing Don a job at Ocean House. Frank has spent several summers in charge of the food program at Ocean House and is currently serving on the faculty in the food program at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Don says the untrimmed cakes can be frozen until ready for use. This recipe makes 3-8 inch cakes.
Welding Cake
3 lbs. raisins
2 lbs. dates
21 oz. sugar
1 lb. dried prunes
1 lb. candied cherries
1 lb. orange peel
1 lb. lemon peel
1 lb. dried candied pineapple
Don prefers to purchase the raisins, dates, prunes and pineapple from an organic health food store. Mix above all together. Add 13 oz. honey, 3 oz. salt, 1 1/2 oz. ginger, 1 1/2 oz. cloves, 1 1/2 oz. cinnamon. Soak fruit for two days in 3 1/2 gallon of sherry wine. After two days, 3 lb. 5 oz. sugar, 2 lb. 6 oz. butter. Cream together, add 15 large eggs, mix and add to fruit. Then add 4 lb. 2 oz. bread flour. To entire mixture add 1 lb. 12 oz. chopped walnuts. Fill cake pans almost to top and cook in slow oven 325-350 degrees for 1-1 1/2 to 2 hours. If making five cakes at one time, use 300 degree oven otherwise they brown too quickly. When cool, wrap in plastic wrap to store.

Nobody loves me but Julia Child

Sometimes I come across a recipe in a woman's magazine that so completely captures my imagination, I ignore the fact that it calls for 26 ingredients, requires constant stirring, and has a long exotic name and decide that I MUST make it for my family.

Yesterday was one of those rare days and the recipe that caught my attention was for an authentic Southern Chicken Gumbo. "Elegant," I said to myself as I read the recipe.

"Delectable," I thought as I put the necessary ingredients into my shopping cart at the super market. "Heavenly," I murmured as the spicy aromas began to fill my kitchen. When the kids came home from school it was to find me happily aprooned, humming "Dixie" under my breath as I stirred the pot on the stove.

"What is this stuff?" asked John, sticking his nose dangerously close to the bubbling sauce.

"This," I said grandly, "is a classic Southern dish."

"Ma's on one of her Julia Child kicks," explained John to the girls. "Better fill up on cookies before dinner."

Later, when we sat down to the table, the atmosphere was romantic. Old South, a lace tablecloth, a silver candleabra, and shiny green magnolia leaves for centerpiece.

"Dinner is served, y'all," I said, surveying the table with pride. The kids approached their plates gingerly. I waited a moment for their reaction and then cried, "For heavens sake, will one of you say something?"

"Why does it smell so funny?" asked Kate sniffing suspiciously.

"What are those little red things?" asked John lining up the pimento pieces on the side of his plate.

"There's so much junk in here I can't find the chicken," complained Sara.

"You kids are impossible!" I cried. "Do you realize this is a gourmet dish? You'd pay plenty for it in a fancy restaurant!"

Then I turned to my husband who had been very quiet.

"O.K.," I said accusingly. "What about you? Do you appreciate the fact that this chicken gumbo took me three hours to prepare?"

"It's not bad," answered my husband. "Not bad at all. But, I'll never understand why you go to all this fuss. You know me, I'm just a simple meat and potato guy."

Sometimes, I think I'm traveling with the wrong crowd.

Of Consumer Concern

Vanity appeals

Vanity often can be costly and consumers need to recognize vanity appeals. We are naturally flattered when we are given an award or chosen for some honor, but it is important to remember that this gimmick is sometimes used by operators of questionable promotions.

Several "vanity" publishers, among which have been those who offered to include consumers in a business or biographical directory, recipe book or book of poems, have been under investigation by various private, state and federal authorities in the past.

Consumers interested in a publishing offer should do some research before they send in any money. They should check with a public library or trade association to find out if the group has an established reputation or if it has published a book in the past.

Be suspicious if you are asked to send money or buy the publication in order to see your name in print. Often such publications are merely part of the scheme to obtain money from the persons solicited. Usually anyone who responds to the advertised offer is "selected for inclusion" in the book.

Never send money until you know the risks and benefits involved. You may well be a success in your field, but always ask yourself why you're being solicited. Legitimate awards usually don't have expensive strings attached.

Answers to questions of general interest will appear in this column. Address questions to: "Of Consumer Concern," Dept. of Consumer Protection, State Office Building, Hartford, 06115.

Did Mother Nature make girls dumb at mathematics?

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK, UPI Education Editor

Did Mother Nature make girls dumb at math—and boys, wizards?

Consider: 10 per cent of those studying for a doctorate degree in math are female. The rest, male. They learn from men teachers, for the most part.

Sociologist Lucy Selis of the University of California at Berkeley finds math a "critical filter" tending to eliminate women from many fields—including chemistry, physics, engineering, architecture and medicine.

Dr. John Ernest, of the University of California at Santa Barbara, in a report, "Math and Sex," says peer influence has something to do with the female's poor performance in math.

The Ernest study, distributed by the Ford Foundation, makes these points:

—Through elementary school, girls and boys tend to think their own sex does better in all subjects.

—By high school, math boys and girls tend to think that boys do better in math.

—When asked why they do poorly on a math exam, high school girls tend to attribute the failure to lack of ability. High school boys of the same capability usually say they did not work hard enough.

—The attitudinal patterns of both self-image and peer group, unfortunately, are reinforced by those of the teacher.

Ernest and associates found that both female and male teachers believe girls do less well than boys in math.

Despite these assumptions and the poor math performance among high school and college females, educator Sheila Tobias says: "There is no known connection between the sex gene and dyscalculia or brain dysfunction in performing calculations."

Tobias, associate provost at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., helps run a math anxiety clinic funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

She reports on that program and others in Ms. Magazine. In an interview, she talked about mathophobia among females.

"Research shows," she said, "adolescent girls trying to do female act dumb at algebra." The girls think it will make them more female to let the boys outperform them in math. The next stage: math avoidance.

Tobias says once this negative stance is taken, it snowballs.

Under terms of the grant from the government's Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education, those at Wesleyan with mathophobia are diagnosed, tested, interviewed and helped—through therapy and counseling.

"Math anxiety is a serious handicap," Tobias said. "It is handed down from mother to daughter with father's amused delight. Your mother never could balance a checkbook," he says fondly.

"Once a person has become frightened of math, she or he begins to fear all manner of computations, any quantitative data and words like proportion, percentage, variance, curve, exponential."

At Wesleyan, math anxiety is viewed as emotional and cognitive in origin. Teacher-therapists attempt to tackle the problem on both levels.

At Mills College in Oakland, Calif., Prof. Lenore Blum runs a precalculus workshop for females.

Blum does not believe that the approaches to math anxiety need to be either psychological or remedial.

Her course relies on peer-taught workshops to provide individual help and a support system. Blum and associates believe math anxiety is reduced substantially if women have at least one positive experience in learning math.

There are these other developments:

—Math for Girls is an eight-week, discovery-oriented course for 6-to-14-year-old girls, conducted at the Lawrence Hall of Science, University of California, Berkeley.

—The Mathematical Association of America has established a visiting lectureship program. Women and Mathematics, geared to tenth-grade girls. Information: Ellen L. Poami, St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N.J. 07306.

—A Discovery Course in Elementary Mathematics and its Applications is part of a pilot program directed by Alice Schaffer, Math Department, Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.

Social Security

Q. My doctor sent Social Security a report describing my disability. I can't work at my job, but my claim was turned down. How come?

A. Possibly you hadn't worked long enough in jobs covered by Social Security. Also, to qualify for disability payments, you must be unable to do any substantial gainful work for which you're suited by age, education, and experience. You may no longer be able to do heavy lifting, for example but probably could adapt to lighter work.

Q. I have a severe kidney disorder and need special treatment. I've always been under civil service and have no Social Security earnings record, but my wife has. Can I get help from Medicare in paying for the treatment?

A. If your wife has worked long enough under Social Security, you may be eligible for Medicare on her record. Medicare helps people under 65 who need long-term dialysis or a transplant for permanent kidney failure. Call or write any Social Security office for more information.

Q. I have a wife and three children. My physical condition is getting progressively worse, and I was thinking of applying for Social Security disability benefits. About how much can we get?

A. The monthly benefit amount is based on a worker's average earnings over a period of years. The average Social Security disability payment to a disabled worker and family is $475 a month.

Q. I understand my 27-year-old mentally retarded son who lives with me may get monthly Social Security checks on my record when I die or start getting retirement or disability benefits. Can't he get some kind of payments now?

A. He may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments, depending on his income and resources. Since he is an adult, any income you or your other family members have will not affect his eligibility. However, his SSI payments may be reduced by one-third since he lives at home.

Q. I get SSI checks because of my disability and recently received a questionnaire to fill out. Since my condition hasn't improved, why must I answer these questions?

A. The law requires the Social Security administration to ask everyone who gets SSI checks certain questions from time to time. This helps us make sure beneficiaries are still eligible for these payments and that checks are issued for the correct amount. Although your disability hasn't changed, there could be changes in your income, resources, or living arrangements that could affect the amount of your SSI check.

Big Thompson River homes being rebuilt

By JOHN J. SANKO, BIG THOMPSON CANYON, Colo. (UPI)—Mrs. Jacob Zudeima glanced out the window of her flood-damaged home and pointed across the Big Thompson River to where the house of a neighbor once stood.

There was nothing left except an open patch of ground. Farther down the canyon, a 15-foot-high pile of debris stood near the river banks.

"It belonged to a woman by the name of Mrs. Marshall. During the half hour that the water came up and rose so fast, her home was completely swept away."

It has been more than a month since heavy rainfall over the Rockies sent a 19-foot wall of water roaring through Big Thompson Canyon, one of Colorado's most scenic areas. After shocks of the July 31 mishap still are being felt.

Cleanup crews have recovered 129 bodies from the debris. Officials believe the death toll may reach 156 and some bodies may never be found.

Damage to real estate in the canyon was estimated at $17 million, not including such losses as bridges and roads, cars, home furnishings and personal equipment. The total loss is believed to be more than $30 million.

Much of the heavy debris has been removed from the canyon but the work will not be completed until mid-September. A dirt road has been gouged through the canyon for four-wheel-drive vehicles but officials have not yet decided whether to rebuild it.

The flood destroyed 323 residences, 95 mobile homes and 52 businesses. There were 100 small private bridges which were wiped out.

The flood also had serious economic consequences on businessmen in nearby communities. Estes Park, which is largely dependent on the summer tourist trade, lost much of its trade.

"A lot of marginal businesses will fold this year," said Corky Rogers, executive director of the Estes Park Chamber of Commerce. "Some areas in Estes Park have lost at least 50 per cent of their business. And the economic effect also has been felt by businesses in Loveland, Greeley and Grand Lake."

Many people believed Estes Park was inaccessible after the flood and stayed away despite a massive $30,000 advertising campaign by community businesses.

Ken Wright, co-chairman of a special advisory committee set up to coordinate long-range recovery efforts, said plans now were being made to make sure reconstructed homes and businesses are located in safer areas of the canyon.

"One thing is for sure," he said "They will not be allowed to go in like they were before because of the hazards. We must adjust our living habits and patterns to nature's needs."

Mrs. Zudeima, 57, and her husband, a retired doctor who formerly practiced in nearby Greeley, are among the few residents who have returned to the canyon. Their home is 1 1/2 miles below the community of Drake, which was virtually wiped out by the flood.

"The couple has no electricity in their home and they can still smell propane gas from a leak in a nearby tank. They use candles for light and cook their food on a Coleman stove."

"We're back to primitive living," Mrs. Zudeima said. "But this is our home and we couldn't see any point in leaving it. There is repair work that has to be done. We like the challenge. I think the challenge to stay and take care of our home was greater than the desire to leave."

The Zudeimas still can remember the night of the flood, when they sought refuge in their garage and listened to the car radio. Their neighbor, Eulah Marshall, 77, of Wichita, Kan., was swept away in the flood.

"We knew she wasn't feeling well that day," Mrs. Zudeima said. "We watched her house go first. The fire place was still standing, then it was gone, too."

Scientists listen for immortals

BOSTON (UPI)—Somewhere in the universe immortal beings may hold the keys to the destiny of the human race.

"I fear we have been making a dreadful mistake by not focusing all our searches on the detection of the signals of the immortals. For it is the immortals we will likely discover."

Sounds like a line from Jules Verne or H.G. Wells, but it isn't. It was written by Dr. Frank Drake, director of the National Astronomy and Ionosphere Center at Cornell University, for Technology Review, a alumni magazine published by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Drake is the director of operations for the world's largest radio telescope, the 1,000-foot dish at Arecibo, Puerto Rico. Personnel at the facility spend several hundred hours a year hunting for radio signals from intelligent beings on planets of other stars.

It has, so far, been a fruitless task. Seemingly insurmountable odds were made more difficult by time limits and inadequate equipment. But the theory that alien intelligences exist has not been challenged in scientific circles for years, Drake said.

However, the idea of searching for signals from immortal beings is new and could, if accepted, radically change scanning techniques now used, said Drake.

Part of the problem is immortal beings are new and could, if accepted, radically change scanning techniques now used, said Drake.

"Immortals must have a fantastic obsession with safety," Drake wrote, "and every device and vehicle must be so constructed as to present no lethal hazard under any circumstance."

"More importantly, the reverence they would attach to the preservation of individual lives would drive these immortals to avoid physical threats on another planet, even over the cosmic time scale," he wrote.

"An immortal civilization's best assurance of safety would be to make other societies immortal like themselves, rather than risk hazardous military adventures," said Drake.

"Thus we could expect them to actively spread the secrets of their immortality among the young, technically developing nations," he said. "This hypothesis suggests that the numbers of their signals may well be much greater than we imagine."

Drake said in order to cover the entire sky, a radio telescope would have to point in 20 million directions. By being extremely selective, the number of channels monitored could be cut to about 10 million, he said, making about 100 million readings to be taken.

Adults Only
Developers of a large trailer park decided to set aside a special section for adults only. In setting this in that section, they put in a requirement that occupants must be at least 21 years old.

It wasn't long, however, before a young couple bought a lot and moved in with two small children. Inland neighbors promptly filed a lawsuit to get them out.

In a court test, the newcomers invoked the Constitution.

"According to the Fourteenth Amendment," they said, "there must be no discrimination. This restriction clearly discriminates against everyone under 21."

But the court upheld the restriction and ordered the defendants to depart. The court said the Constitution does not forbid all discrimination but only discrimination that is unreasonable and separating adults from children is reasonable.

In other ways too it is lawful to discriminate against—or in favor of—the young. For example, Children may be forbidden to frequent bars.

Children may be prohibited from driving automobiles. Children may be given milder punishment for their crimes.

Children may be allowed to travel at lower fares.

In each case there is a valid reason for treating them differently from adults. But if there is no such reason, there must be no such discrimination.

In another case, a state passed a statute requiring hunting licenses—but only for those over 21.

Adult sportsmen called this unconstitutional and a court decided they were right. Since the purpose of the statute was to protect wildlife, the court could find no logic in letting young people hunt more freely than their elders.

The lighter side: Special report on handbag vigilance

By DICK WEST WASHINGTON (UPI)—Spokane of rotten jobs, which people are wont to do on Labor Day, I have run across what may be a new low in abysmal employment.

But first, a little background music, professor. Fearing perhaps an attempted hijacking, Congress has taken a number of new security precautions this year.

Whereupon I was struck by the thought that this cop had what must be one of the worst jobs in the world. I mean, what could be more dismal than spending your working hours purring into women's purses?

The only worse job I can think of would be spending your working hours inspecting the contents of auto glove compartments.

I have never—God forbid—peered into a strange woman's purse, but there have been occasions when I have been obliged to look for something in a purse belonging to a woman I know.

Wait. Let me amend that. You may think you realize you don't really know this woman whose purse you are poking around in.

At some point, for example, you come to a layer of keys. Fully half of them belong to a deranged folk singer who tries to smuggle a banjo into the Senate gallery in his girl friend's purse.

About town
Fellowship Club of Community Baptist Church will open its season Saturday with a progressive dinner.

Grass ad raises eyebrows
CRANSTON, R.I. (UPI)—Ruby Plushner placed an ad in a local newspaper selling "Home Grown Grass" for $1 a baggie.

"First time ever sold publicly," she said. Plushner, Friday wore it as the truth.

"I've never sold my grass publicly," he said. "I've given it away or had it taken away."

Plushner first thought of selling the grass at six bags for $5. But conscience got the better of him.

"I couldn't feel right about taking $5," he said. "But a dollar bill, a dollar's not money anymore. No one cares about a buck anymore."

So, when the responses rolled in, Plushner went out to his garage and dug into a barrel of Kentucky Blue, newly moved from his back yard.

He threw a free slip of paper reading: "The grass is always greener in the other guy's yard."

Plushner's grass dealer is his gardener. "He cuts the grass and puts it in a big barrel in the garage," she said. "That's my supply. In fact, the barrel's for sale, the whole barrel for a dollar."

Plushner said he cleared the plan with narcotics squads but got a call from the Attorney General's office.

"I sent them a big generous-sized free sample," he said. "They didn't call back."

Now he's thinking of selling "genuine pot." Genuine clay pot, the kind you grow a cactus in.

The campaigning senator

By JOHN MROSEK
While the most prevalent political topics at the moment are grain embargoes, platforms and the like, another yearly political phenomenon is emerging once again. As newscasters analyze developments, the candidates are out in the field, campaigning at fairs, carnivals, shopping centers, beaches, picnics and at any event where people are. Such a road is being traveled by U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. in his bid for re-election to a second term. Waging a vigorous and active camaign, Weicker has been meeting people in Connecticut from Brooklyn to Bristol and Salisbury to Stamford. Annually, the voter is inundated by campaign gimmicks and Weicker has given his share of bumper stickers, pins and jar openers. But what brings the most favorable response from the voter is Weicker's direct personality and unusual political style. Weicker has engaged in the traditional political rituals in his campaign. Still, he has done more than just shake hands at factories and deliver speeches at Republican diners. He's visited many unusual places and events... for instance, a VJ Day parade in Moscow... or a village bar in Southbury where a horse has been known to enter and consume a mixed drink... or, it could be the legion game at which Weicker was asked to throw the opening pitch from the pitcher's mound to homeplate and did so on two bounces. So the next time you see your junior senator walking barefoot on the beach with shorts and a T-shirt, you'll understand his way of meeting the people.
