The Town of Manchester would like all residents who may have in their possession town property like the signs above, or library books, or anything else of value to return it today and Sunday. Items can be deposited in designated places at the fire stations with no questions asked. The concentrated effort to get town property returned is being sponsored by the MOTION Committee of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

Walek property developers seeking M Zone designation

By GREG PEARSON

Herald Reporter
A second proposal for a Residence M Zone on the Walek property off Keeney St. will be brought before the Planning and Zoning Commission Monday night.
Plans for a new housing development that would require a Residence M Zone have been filed with the town planning office by four local businessmen — Atty. David Golas, Herman M. Frechette, Albert R. Martin, and Gerald P. Rothmann.
J. Eric Potter, director of planning, said that the PZC will now have to decide whether the second M Zone proposal is "substantially different from the first proposal, which was rejected by the commission on May 24."

If the PZC rules in favor of the second proposal, it will have to set a public hearing date where the proposal can be formally presented and the public can be given a chance to voice opinions on the matter. If the PZC rejects the proposal, the applicants would have to wait 12 months before they can bring the proposal back to the board. The first proposal to change the 70-acre Walek property off Keeney St. was turned down by the PZC after a stormy public hearing session, which brought out more than 400 persons.

The first proposal included 414 units. The new proposal sent to the planning office includes 247 units of housing, 127 homes to be built on 39 acres and 120 condominium units to be built on the remaining 31 acres.

This proposed housing would require the change in zoning from Rural Residence, which the Walek property now is, to Residence M Zone, which allows a mixture of single-family, duplex and multiple-family housing.

The PZC rejected the first proposal because it said the M Zone would allow a concentration of homes in excess of the density that characterizes the general area, that the tract could be developed along the lines of the area, and that Keeney St. is not adequate for the traffic an M Zone could generate.

Home builder accused of encroaching on pigs

A man who owns a pig farm on Hillstown Rd. has filed suit against an East Hartford developer and the Manchester building inspector because of houses he says are being built too close to his farm.

Anthony Botticello of 595 Hillstown Rd. said that houses being constructed by Vintage Homes Inc. of East Hartford are being built within 300 feet of his pig sty. This is a violation of state Department of Health regulations, the plaintiff said in the suit.

Botticello has also named Francis Conti, Manchester's building inspector, as a defendant in the action. He is included because the town issued the building permits to allow the homes to be built, Botticello said.

The suit seeks an injunction to stop further construction of the houses.

Patty Hearst begins prison term

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst today began serving a seven-year sentence for armed bank robbery, imposed by a judge who reduced a temporary 35-year term but said violence "will not be tolerated."

Unswayed by pleas for mercy, U.S. District Judge William H. Orrick Jr. Friday ordered the term for the 22-year-old newspaper heiress who stood before him in a light green dress, expressionless, pale and down to 90 pounds.

She will be eligible for parole in 16 months under the sentence for her part in the April 15, 1974, robbery of $10,670 from a San Francisco bank with the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army which had kidnaped her 10 weeks before.

The U.S. Bureau of Prisons ordered her taken to the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton, Calif., across the bay 30 miles southeast of San Francisco, to serve out her term.

Her chief attorney, F. Lee Bailey, immediately gave notice he will seek a new trial and filed a motion for her release on bail pending appeal.

"I expect vindication on appeal," Miss Hearst said.

"Your honor, she has suffered enough," said her other trial lawyer, Albert Johnson, asking immediate freedom for the heiress, who has undergone extensive FBI questioning and psychiatric examination since her capture Sept. 18, 1975.

Bailey asked the sentence to be limited to time already served — one year and one week.

But Orrick replied that although he had the "deepest compassion" for Miss Hearst and that she has "cooperated fully" with government agencies in giving information about her former companions, "Violence is not acceptable in our society and will not be tolerated."

He said the seriousness of the crime demanded an added prison term to deter others from acts of violence.

"It's exactly what I expected," Miss Hearst's distraught mother, Catherine, said of Orrick's pronouncement. "She never had a break all the way — not from the press, not from the court."

Orrick, appointed to the case after the trial judge, Oliver J. Carter, died in June, sentenced Miss Hearst to seven years for armed robbery and two years for use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. However, he ordered the two terms to run concurrently.

He gave her credit for the 371 days she has spent in jail since her arrest.

Four persons die in head-on crash

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Four persons were killed Friday night when their car was struck head-on by one of two cars which were apparently drag racing, police said.

A fifth was taken in critical condition to Yale-New Haven Hospital. A police spokesman said a car carrying five persons had just turned off an exit onto Long Wharf Drive about 9:30 p.m. when it was struck by the second vehicle.

Identities of the victims were not immediately known, but police said the car carrying five persons was registered to Dirgda Camacho of Stamford.

A driver and passenger of the car which allegedly struck the Camacho vehicle were also taken to Yale-New Haven Hospital, but their injuries not believed serious, police said.

They were identified as Gary K. Ellsworth, the driver, and Vincent DeMayo, both of New Haven. Their ages were not available.

Police said a second car believed to be drag racing with the Ellsworth vehicle left the scene of the accident

Ford wooing Dixie voters; Carter tours California

By LEWIS LORD
United Press International

President Ford is wooing voters this weekend in Dixie — Jimmy Carter's stronghold — while the Democratic nominee concentrates on southern California.

Ford planned to campaign today from the steamboat "Natchez" on the Mississippi River near New Orleans, shaking hands with supporters on the big sternwheeler and making speeches at landings.

The President campaigns Sunday on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and in Mobile, Ala., then flies to Miami to address a police chiefs convention.

Carter scheduled a wide variety of southern California appearances, including talks with businessmen, Chicanos and black ministers, plus stops at the San Diego Zoo and the Los Angeles County Fair.

With an eye on his upcoming foreign policy debate, Ford hailed Friday's acceptance by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith of an administration plan to permit black majority rule in two years.

Ford, without mentioning Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, said the agreement was a result of "the skillful and energetic diplomacy we have pursued."

Carter stressed economic issues in Friday campaign stops in Houston and Dallas. He repeated his claim that 2.5 million Americans have lost their jobs in the two years Ford has been President.

"That's equivalent to the population of Mississippi, South Carolina, Oklahoma — a lot of people," Carter said.

"We've seen the cost of living go up in the last two years 14 per cent — a kind of quiet, legalized robbery."

Carter commented extensively for the first time about the flap over his comments on sex and religion in Playboy magazine.

"One of the major thrusts of the Playboy interview was that I would not foist my own religious beliefs on others using the authority of the White House," Carter said.

"I believe we should not condemn others because they are different from us or just because we think the degree of their sinfulness exceeds our own."

Both candidates campaigned among ethnic groups in Philadelphia, site of their Thursday night debate. Carter told a group of Polish-American leaders there has been "a very great tie" between the United States and Poland.

Ford told Polish and Italian audiences that too many ethnic neighborhoods are being disrupted and their property values downgraded. "This does not have to happen," he said. "I will do all within my power to see that it does not happen."

Sen. Walter Mondale, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, told a Connecticut labor organization that Ford has "been a miserable failure."

"He has put two and one-half million Americans out of work," Mondale said. "If for no other reason, he deserves to lose the election to find out what it's like."

Rhodesia accepts black rule plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger's shuttle plane was high over the western Atlantic Friday afternoon, just approaching Newfoundland, when Ian Smith made his broadcast to the Rhodesian nation.

The crew of the U.S. Air Force plane picked up the BBC's report from London and fed it into the plane's public address system. The secretary of state stood in the center aisle of the back compartment of the plane intently listening to excerpts of the Smith speech.

Wearing a white shirt and no tie, his hands stuck inside the waist of his baggy trousers, Kissinger listened silently as the Rhodesian prime minister fulfilled his part of the bargain they had struck last Sunday in South Africa.

As Smith's flat Rhodesian voice accepted the conditions, one by one, Kissinger's face was expressionless, his lower lip protruding. When Smith finished speaking 6,000 miles away, Kissinger nodded and walked back to the private, front compartment of his plane.

The Rhodesian part of the African shuttle was finished.

A black majority government will take over in two years and be formally granted independence by the British parliament.

The remaining question as the shuttle ended was what did the various countries get out of the negotiations. As explained to newsmen aboard the plane, here's what each is hoping for:

— The United States: a halting of Soviet expansion and influence in southern Africa and a corresponding increase in American influence and prestige without any great commitment of money and no commitment of American manpower.

— Great Britain: an end to the constitutional crisis that began 11 years ago when Rhodesia declared unilateral independence under conditions Britain considered unfair to the vast majority of Rhodesian citizens.

— Rhodesia: the avoidance of a military solution that was increasingly hopeless and the possibility of a multiracial future for those whites who want to remain and some compensation for those who want to leave.

— South Africa: a check on Soviet intrusion into southern Africa and some time in which to achieve an accommodation with its own racial problems.

— Black Africa: another independent African state and a setback of neocolonialism.

Tolland-School St. railroad crossing to be repaired

The railroad crossing north of the Tolland St. and School St. in East Hartford intersection will be repaired Sunday. School St. from Tolland St. to Park Ave will be closed for the day.

SENIOR CITIZENS NEWS

Attention all you Gold Card holders. I need to talk to you all for a couple of minutes. First, may I ask you a question? Since you received your gold card do you feel that you have saved at least $1 in all the times you have used it?

So now I have a big problem, and I need your help. As you know we no longer have a mini-bus and after having one for a couple of years many of our seniors sure miss getting rides in it. In fact, quite a few of our members cannot participate in our programs because they have no means of transportation.

Yes, you guessed it. We are going to start a fund raising program just so that we can buy our own, and this time we may settle on a station wagon. Now if you answered my first question yes, then I'm going to ask you a very special favor. Will you all give me a special favor? Will you all give me a special favor? Will you all give me a special favor?

I feel so sure that you folks are going to cooperate and get behind this project that I predict we will reach our goal by Oct. 30. To do this, it means that you will have to start right away in making your own donation, or better yet, slip by with it. One lady asked if it was alright if she gave me more than $1, and naturally I said, "Why sure because every little bit helps."

So, there it is folks. I started the ball rolling, and hope you will all join in and help us that much needed station wagon. This is telling you more about it from now on.

Flu shots free. Once again, may I remind you of the swine flu shots that are free to all you folks Friday, Oct. 8, from 3 until 8 p.m. at the Manchester High School Cafeteria.

Some of you folks are feeling in pretty good health, and therefore don't feel that you need it. My advice to you is to get it now.

By WALLY FORTIN

to you is to check with your doctor, and I'm pretty sure that he can explain the seriousness of this type of flu, and the importance for everyone to get the shot.

Here is a bit of news that may be of interest to many of you. On Saturday, Oct. 2, at the Manchester High School, there will be a big day of fun and excitement. It will be known as Town Meeting '76 Manchester, and will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The idea is for everyone to get together and help identify the basic challenges such as economics, political, cultural, and spiritual, needs to Manchester's future.

There will also be a local entertainment, singing and lots of good old fashioned fellowship. Sounds like an interesting day for everyone. There will be provided for you seniors at no cost. In fact, the whole day including the meals are free.

Plan on joining the fellowman at this very interesting and sociable day.

Penn Dutch trip. By the way, you folks who are going on the Penn Dutch trip this coming Monday are reminded to get here at the center around 7:30 a.m.

Last Monday evening our Senior Golf League held their annual banquet, and had a wonderful turnout. A good gesture on the golfers part was to include their wives, and part was more of a family affair.

Legislators respond to nuclear survey

A study by the Connecticut Citizen Action Group (CCAG) shows that most incumbent state legislators are concerned about public safety in connection with nuclear power.

Of the 197 legislators who responded to the CCAG survey, 78 said that they felt public safety is threatened in at least one area of nuclear safeguards.

Two area incumbents in the House had remarks about nuclear power safety.

Rep. Aloysius J. Ahearn of Bolton, who represents the 58th District, said, "As long as potential risk is great, and uranium is skyrocketing in price, we ought to move with discretion."

Thirty-seven of those polled said that they oppose any further construction of nuclear power plants in the state, while 40 said they favored continued construction.

Rep. Muriel T. Yacavone, who is from East Hartford and represents the 9th District, said, "I believe we should make a big effort to cut back on wasteful energy use. Incentives for development and education on alternate sources of energy should come from state government."

Incumbents and their challengers in the Nov. 2 election were also asked about a direct initiative process, which would allow citizens to petition to place legislation or amendments on the ballot for popular vote.

Of the incumbents who responded 52 were opposed to the idea and 47 favored it. Challengers to the incumbents showed overwhelming support for the direct initiative procedure. While 87 favored it, only 13 were opposed.

Will teachers' new power take a toll?

Under a banner proclaiming that "Teacher Power Is Now," the Reporter, a publication of the National Education Association, notes that summer 1976 marked a turning point for America's teachers — "the time when teacher power matured into political power."
Consider these signs of maturity:
— At their annual meeting in Miami Beach in June, nearly 8,000 teacher delegates paved the way for the association's first endorsement for a U.S. presidential candidate.
— In July, 172 teacher delegates and 93 alternates joined with other representatives of labor to become a "major force" at the Democratic National Convention in New York City.
— In August, another group of teacher delegates and alternates, 50 strong, traveled to Kansas City to add their views to the decision-making at the Republican National Convention.
Teachers have come to realize, says the association's president John Ryor, "that we are a formidable force in the life of this nation." Through participation in the political arena, "we will have the means and the will and the way to finally begin to achieve quality education in America."

Mike Mansfield: A giant step down

WASHINGTON — This city, already sadly short of men and women of genuine integrity, is a poorer place yet today than it was just last week. Mike Mansfield has stepped down.
"The Senate will never be the same again," said its Republican leader Hugh Scott of Mansfield, who is carrying a remarkable 16-year stint as a Senate Majority Leader by a current official visit to China. When he returns, the congress he has served for 34 years will have adjourned and an era without a single remaining giant in the Senate begun.
At a time which saw his favorite President assassinated, the nation reeling from a great civil rights struggle, the agony of a long and terrible war in Southeast Asia which few Americans ever genuinely understood, and the fall from grace of Richard Nixon. Mike Mansfield, perhaps more than any other man, was America's anchor.

Lee Roderick

The Herald's Washington Correspondent also one who cooperates, who listens and whose word is his bond.
Pennsylvania's Hugh Scott, who, as Mansfield's GOP counterpart, has worked hard in a glove with him since 1969 to fashion Congress legislation into the country's law. Among other Scott traits, Mansfield said he will miss "the bon mot of which he is a master, and which so often has sent the media to their dictionaries and myself to distraction."
But the day still clearly belonged to the 75-year-old senator from the Big Sky country. Mark Hatfield of Oregon said he wished his two sons "could grow up and embody his qualities." Charles Percy of Illinois said, "as a member of the minority, I have been touched by the great courtesy and fairness he has routinely accorded us. He never stammered. He never cut us off. In fact, he was so fair and cooperative with us that the partisan difference was never very apparent."
Utah's Jake Garn, a newcomer to the Senate, called Mansfield "an even bigger man, and an even greater man than the nation knows." Adlai Stevenson of Illinois added that Mansfield didn't resist changes in the Senate as he might have been expected to as one of its senior members: "Newer members pressing for improvements in the organization of the Senate and in the ways it conducts its business have found in Senator Mansfield a willing ally and a wise counselor."
In his own eloquent farewell remarks, Mansfield said, "so long as the Senate persists, I am confident that the liberties of the American people will be maintained and the government of the Republic will remain receptive to their needs and aspirations."
The late Herbert Hoover might well have had this statesman in mind when he said, "the imperative of this nation at all times is the leadership of men and women who cannot be intimidated, who are not concerned with applause meters, nor those who sell tomorrow for cheers today."
Arizona's Paul Fannin, a two-term Republican called an "anomaly among politicians," by Mansfield, "a self-effacing man, never one to seek the limelight. A dynamic man, he is

South Windsor social studies course causes concern

The material of the course is often brutal and gruesome. Fifth and sixth graders are too young to be confronted with such profound questions about mankind as are in MACOS.
— MACOS, drawn up by experimental psychologist Dr. Jerome Bruner, has highly psychological undertones.
Such objections have been voiced recently by news commentator Hughes Rudd on TV Channel 3, teacher Mrs. Sheila Burgess, columnist James J. Kilpatrick, Congressman John B. Conlan, radio commentator Donald Cole of station WHS, and many, many others.
Mrs. Burgess stated that she taught MACOS one year and refused to teach it again. She felt the program was negative, one-sided, and gave a dishonest view of man.
Another matter of great concern is that MACOS does not attempt to raise scores on standardized tests. It is ungraded and untested. As a principal in our school system told a small group of parents which I attended, MACOS does not aim to teach hard facts, but concepts such as what makes man human. For this reason, Farmington removed MACOS from its schools, replacing it with a more basic history course. In so doing, Farmington decried the psychological nature of MACOS.
The question is: Will South Windsor once again teach a course until it founders before the course is replaced? We cling to modern math until textbooks were no longer updated by publishers, due to the failure of the methods.
We kept French in elementary schools until it became quite evident that students gained little from the course. Some citizens may remember how long it took for our schools to re-examine reading with a more basic phonetic approach.
Will our Board of Education and professionals cling to MACOS under the guise that it teaches students to think even though little of value is given to them to think about?
I hope not. We now have a fifth grade social studies book which teaches American history. Board member John Giordano commented that this book is a "survey" of American history, but needs to be followed by more in-depth studies of American history in 6th grade. This would be a good opportunity to assure a solid social studies program through such a text, as MACOS will be reviewed by the school board in the near future.
Parents, if your concern is for more basic education of definite worth in our system, come to that meeting. You can play a big part in achieving such changes in our school system if you make yourself seen and heard. Check the agenda of board meetings listed in this paper for the upcoming board discussion on MACOS and plan to be there.
Sincerely,
Mrs. Patricia Sprengelmeyer

Confessions of a smoking backslider

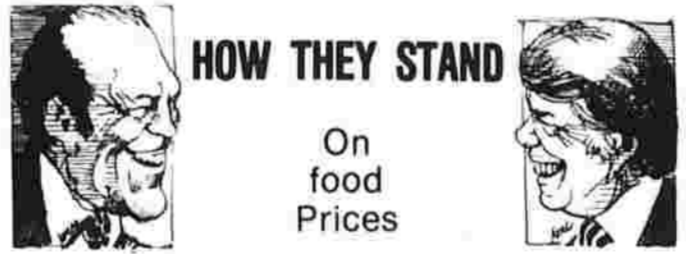

WASHINGTON — As one of smokers' few failures, I am pleased by the finding of a cancer research group that the low tar, nicotine cigarettes I now consume can reduce the danger of death from both cancer and heart disease.
My weeds are the lowest in both tar (12 mg) and nicotine (1.2 mg). I still miss those delicious tar-and-nicotine-poisoned cigarettes I enjoyed for so many reckless years, but I am not tempted to return to them. My present brand is virtually tasteless, but it serves my nagging craving, even when I'm struggling to write a simple declarative sentence.
So, although I flunked Smokers' course, it did improve my character. I would not now walk a mile — even 100 yards — for a Camel and no longer wonder whether that cowboy brand would really make me irresistible to females.
Besides, I might have become what I use to call "unputtable" had I kicked that habit 100 per cent. That worried (to drop a name) Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, who occupied the chair next to mine at Smoker's seances. Stewart, a congenial soul with a very sense of humor, said it this way one night: "I want to stop smoking, but I'm not sure I'll enjoy being that self-righteous."
He was right. I didn't smoke for two whole months, and drove family and friends crazy with hourly reports on my state of wholesome. People avoided me. A friend named Knox, an old-shoe Greek scholar, threatened to get up a petition to have me dropped from my club if I continued to harass members with the statistics of my new-found purity.
Anyway, I backslid. There was a cigarette here, a cigarette there. I found myself surreptitiously burning them among addicts of "medium" tar-nicotine cigarettes.
The Hammond group also made me happy with another finding, to wit, that people who smoke pipes and cigars have double the lung cancer death rate of nonsmokers. I am sorry for pipe and cigar smokers, but as a citizen who can't stand either a pipe or a cigar, I shall use Hammond & Co.'s statistics to ward off family attempts to persuade me to switch to one or the other.
To repeat, I'm sorry I failed those nice folks at Smokers. But their loss is society's gain. Had I gone much longer without a cigarette I might have become a mass murderer.

Andrew Tully

For a long time, of course, I accepted the probability that I would be cut down before my time by some dread disease. Meanwhile, I lit another butt.
Now, along comes Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond, whom I will forgive for parting his name on the side because he gives me another chance. Dr. Hammond and associates conducted a study which showed that deaths from lung cancer among smokers of low tar-nicotine cigarettes were 26 per cent less than deaths among smokers of high tar-nicotine cigarettes, and 16 per cent less than among addicts of "medium" tar-nicotine cigarettes.
The Hammond group also made me happy with another finding, to wit, that people who smoke pipes and cigars have double the lung cancer death rate of nonsmokers. I am sorry for pipe and cigar smokers, but as a citizen who can't stand either a pipe or a cigar, I shall use Hammond & Co.'s statistics to ward off family attempts to persuade me to switch to one or the other.
To repeat, I'm sorry I failed those nice folks at Smokers. But their loss is society's gain. Had I gone much longer without a cigarette I might have become a mass murderer.

The lighter side: The eye has a mind of its own

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The human eye performs a number of reflexive actions. We may, for example, blink or bat our eyes without being aware we are doing it. Our eyes may fill with tears at times when we are trying to avoid weeping. They may roll up in their sockets, betraying the astonishment we wish to conceal.
And whether we like it or not, the eye will occasionally ggle.
That last reaction, known in medical terminology as "roving eye," is, I think, the central factor in the controversy over Jimmy Carter's revelation in Playboy that he had "looked on a lot of women with lust."
There may be legitimate grounds for disagreement over whether the Democratic presidential candidate's interview with the magazine was politically prudent.
But from a purely physiological standpoint, individuals cannot be held accountable for amatory eyeball movements, we are not.
One of the world's leading authorities on the "roving eye" phenomenon is Dr. Werner von Glinz, an ophthalmologist who does research on a Capitol Hill street corner outside the House office building where Elizabeth Ray once worked. Despite his heavy schedule of experiments, which take place each time a congressional secretary passes by, he agreed to an interview, which I hope to sell to Playboy as a sequel to the Carter q. and a. Excerpts follow:
Q. Dr. von Glinz, what causes ogling anyway?
A. Putting it as simply as possible, ogling results from overloading the retina with stimulatory images. In other words, when we get an eye-ful, we ggle.
Q. What's the difference between ogling and leering?
A. Leering is a conscious ocular manifestation of ardor. When one deliberately looks on a woman with lust, one leers. Ogling on the other hand is an involuntary transfiguration of the eye on a lust-inducing object. It's a matter of the sensory nerves of the eye responding to external stimuli even though one may be trying to get one's mind on something else.
Q. Are you saying that a person has no control over his ogling?
A. That is correct. When it encounters a lust-inducing object, the eyeball functions independently of conscientious mental direction. The luster literally cannot take his eyes off the luster.
Q. Then there's no reason for a wife to get upset when her husband ogles another woman?
A. Right. If the other woman is an eye-ful, he can no more keep from looking on her with lust than a liberal can keep his nose from jerking when he hears the word "reform."
Q. Is there any cure for "roving eye," like maybe special glasses?
A. If the luster is myopic or astigmatic, ogling can be prevented by hiding his glasses. Otherwise, the only thing that helps is wearing blinders.

HOW THEY STAND
On food prices
Gerald Ford
Jimmy Carter
"I can tell you that the farmers are producing. Our big problem — let's be frank about it — is the middleman profit. The farmer doesn't get it and the consumer doesn't get it, and one of the jobs that the Department of Justice must do is to get it back to the farmer and the consumer. This has not been the case under Earl Butz, whose orientation is toward grain speculators and food processors."
— Under the leadership of his administration and Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, we have made solid gains in agriculture. The last three years have registered the highest net farm income in America's history. This has not been the case under Earl Butz, whose orientation is toward grain speculators and food processors.
— We should maintain a predictable, small and stable reserve of agricultural products. This carefully managed reserve would support farm incomes when prices are low, help avoid shocks to the inflationary spiral, provide assurance of supplies to our foreign customers and facilitate a regular flow of food aid.

Breakfast program begins on Monday

Hebron Starting Monday, a pilot breakfast program will be run in the Hebron Elementary and Gilead Hill Schools. With good results, it will continue. When buses arrive at the schools, children waiting breakfast will be sent to the cafeteria. Following breakfast, the students will either return to the playground or go to class.

for free lunch will get breakfast free. The breakfast will not be served to adults and there will be no a la carte milk sales to students or adults. The menu will attempt to introduce the students to a variety of foods.

Out-of-town students pay much more

East Hartford Next summer nonresidents will pay more tuition to attend East Hartford's summer school program. Assistant Superintendent Sam Leone's report to the Board of Education on the 1976 summer program said several out-of-town youngsters attended classes. They paid a minimal tuition fee.

Leone said several area towns have discontinued summer school programs and other charge higher tuition fees than East Hartford. He recommended, in view of these facts, tuition rates be increased here.

New faces on old shows

Many of television's returning programs have dropped old characters and introduced new ones. Among them are (clockwise from top left) Roz Kelly as Pinky Tuscadero, Fonzie's new girlfriend on "Happy Days";

Richard Hatch as Inspector Dan Robbins, the new sidekick for Karl Malden on "Streets of San Francisco"; and Robert Shields and Lorene Yarnell, a mime couple joining the cast of "Sonny and Cher."

'Horrors of the Deep'

Monsters are lurking around every reef when zoology professor Eugenie Clark discusses "Horrors of the Deep" in this week's installment of "Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier," the Courses by Newspaper feature on Weekend Page 7.

Ms. Clark, a noted expert on sharks, writes about monsters in fact and fiction and considers whether men or the creatures of the deep are the real predators.

"Horrors of the Deep" is the third of 16 articles in the series. Future topics include "lectures" on science and myth, marine resources, policy and sea power, and men and women at sea.

The Western returns

Most television viewers searching for Westerns on the small screen have had to do with reruns of "Bonanza" and "Gunsmoke" in the last few years, but the once-popular pioneer-type drama returns to television this fall with "The Quest," starring Kurt Russell (left) and Tim Matheson.

They portray brothers searching for their long-lost sister, who had been abducted by Indians in a raid in which their parents were killed.

The program airs Wednesday nights on NBC-TV, and the critics say it might survive the ratings race, despite tough opposition from CBS-TV's "Blue Knight" and ABC-TV's "Charlie's Angels." If it doesn't, it's back to the reruns.

Today, Sept. 25

Mark Shera portrays J.R. Jones, cousin of CBS-TV's "Barnaby Jones," Thursdays at 10 p.m.

Pony Express celebrated in medal, stamp

By RUSS MACKENDRICK

Here is a Pony Express medal, with a Colt 45 in action, and on the reverse, an 1849 Prairie Trek. James Earle Fraser, the artist who gave us the buffalo nickel, created this piece in 1952 for the Society of Medalists (Weston, Conn.) It has been shown recently as a part of the exhibit "A Century of American Sculpture" at the Equitable Life, NYC.

Stamps and Coins

Horse lovers will appreciate the accurate portrayal of the pony going at full speed. They can see another good gallop on the 100th anniversary stamp of 1960 (Scott number 1154). (The first Pony Express stamp was not so fortunate. (No. 894). Here the animal doesn't seem to know what to do with his legs, like the fabled centipede who got to thinking about which one to move first.

If you check that 1960 stamp, with its map, and the route as shown — St. Joseph to Sacramento — you might well wonder about the inscription on the medal that says "Ten Days to San Francisco."

It is not a goof — it's just that Fraser was celebrating the 90th anniversary of the "Little Pony" route from the Comstock Lode in Nevada to San Francisco. This line was run from 1862 to 1864

by Wells, Fargo & Company.

The original route, the "Big Pony," famed in song and story, was started in April, 1860, and lasted only 18 months. (The names have nothing to do with the size of the steeds).

The distance was 2,000 miles and it was covered, at least one time, in ten days — to win a bet of $200,000. This was also the amount eventually lost by the proprietors before they gave up the ghost.

The mail was put into a special 4-pocket saddlebag called a "mochilla." This can be seen on the medal and on both of the stamps. The letters were taken off the train at St. Joseph, ferried across the Missouri River, and rushed by relays to Sacramento. The rates were high, $5 for half an ounce, back when money was money.

A hoped-for government subsidy did not come through and the line was taken over by Wells Fargo in late 1861. They continued it for a while until it was evident that it could be replaced by stagecoach and telegraph.

About 35,000 letters were carried, some with Wells Fargo stamps inscribed "Pony Express." These, of course, are eagerly sought after. We were warned of many, many fakes, so don't pay a fortune for one unless it has a certificate of authenticity.

Copies of the medal are available only to members of the society above, but it is not too difficult to get into the happy group

Also they will have the privilege of getting all the available back issues at the original price of $2. The first one was the se-tenant quartet in 1972, Wildlife Conservation — remember the seals, cardinal, pelican, and bighorn sheep? Although the plan goes into effect in far-off November, we are urged to get on board now. See the front page of the Sept. 20 issue of Linn's.

Two shows on

The colossal Hartford Civic Center event is on today and tomorrow. (Southern N.E. Coin and Stamp Exhibition and Bourse). If you do go, be kind to the dealers — the price they have to pay for their table space you just wouldn't believe.

And on Sunday only, perhaps a fall foliage trip to Burlington for the 12th annual exhibit and bourse of the Litchfield Hills Stamp Club. (Lewis Mills High School, 1 to 5 p.m.). Somehow they didn't give their show a name, thus missing the chance to shake up Philately with a LITCHFEHILLPEX.

The Manchester Philatelic Society will meet at Mott's on Tuesday evening the 28th for a circuit book and trading night. Preparations are already under way for the annual MANPHIL (Conn. Phil Soc. hosting), in November with Jerry Caron as chairman.

— dead easy in fact. That is what the publicity is all about.

Subscription sale

The USPS Stamp Panels will be sold on a subscription basis beginning in November. These will have at least 4 com-mems mounted with a transparent cover, plus steel line engraving and a background story. Charter subscribers will receive a free binder with name embossed in gold.
