State

HARTFORD — Rep. Irving Stolberg, D-New Haven, apparently told he hasn't the votes to unseat House Majority Leader William O'Neill, has set his sights on House Speaker James J. Kennelly, who also looks unbeatable.

WEST HARTFORD — A $200 hike in fees for second- and third-year law school students, bringing the annual fee to the same level now paid by law school freshmen, has been approved by the University of Connecticut trustees.

HARTFORD — Dr. Chris Dowell says he wants to talk to his family first before deciding whether to resign as director of the Whiting Forensic Institute in Middletown. State Mental Health Commissioner Eric A. Plaut requested the resignation Friday because the institute has become polarized and needs a new person to take over the state facility for the criminally insane.

Regional

BOSTON — Charges by the American Trial Lawyers Association the insurance industry is "ripping off" American consumers have been labeled "irresponsible, misleading and inaccurate" by the Insurance Information Institute. The statement by Robert Begam, ATLA president, reflects a total lack of understanding of the property and casualty business, John L. O'Connor, New England manager for the insurance industry said.

BOSTON — Mayor Kevin White and his chief lieutenants were taking to the streets today, distributing leaflets and postcards aimed at urging a special state legislative session to help bail his city out of its financial hole. The city faces bankruptcy if the state does not come to its aid, according to a task force report issued this week.

WASHINGTON — The major issues that separated negotiators for 18,000 striking Teamsters and the United Parcel Service have been settled, but discussions continue this weekend, according to sources close to the talks. The tentative agreement is expected to be taken to the union membership next week and approval could be obtained by Wednesday.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — President Ford played golf in a light rain Friday and stepped up work on the federal budget by reviewing proposals for the fiscal 1978 recommendation he will submit to Congress in January before leaving office.

HONG KONG — China has been "marking time" on Sino-American relations because of the U.S. elections, but now is "looking for signs" from President-elect Jimmy Carter, according to diplomatic sources specializing in Chinese affairs. Chinese leaders appear to be prepared to wait for settlement of the thorny Taiwan issue as long as the United States takes a positive attitude toward China in terms of international issues, the sources said.

Syrians move into Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force marched into the heart of Beirut's suburban battleground today, halting house-to-house fighting that had raged almost nonstop for more than 19 months, a rightist broadcast said.

The broadcast of the Christian Phalangist party said a Syrian armored unit plunged into the township of Ain Rummaneh, and advanced about 500 yards, meeting no resistance.

The sudden move from the Syrians' advanced position at St. Michael's church past shell-gutted buildings up the Old Sidon Road neutralized a free-fire zone that had seen some of the heaviest fighting of the war, the radio said.

It put Syrian advanced units within 1,200 yards of Beirut's southern city limits.

Another Syrian unit rolled through the Moslem-held suburbs of Hadath and Leilaki to link up with Arab League troops at Beirut airport, the broadcast said.

Sporadic shelling and sniping continued on the front lines only a few hundred yards north of the Syrian columns, but combat subsided after a day and night of the bloodiest shelling and fighting since the current truce began Oct. 21.

Earlier today a rightist broadcast said a Syrian armored brigade crossed the Syrian-Lebanese border Friday night and advanced into the central mountains southeast of Beirut to bolster the Arab League peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

The broadcast also said gunmen shot and wounded Issam Al Arab, head of one of the leftist Nasserite parties in Moslem-held west Beirut, in an another apparent attempt to strike at political leaders following an abortive assassination move against moderate Christian leader Raymond Edde two days ago.

It said Arab was hit in his abdomen and legs and sent to a hospital and quoted one unconfirmed report as saying the leftist leader was wounded inside his office when two of his followers exchanged fire as a result of an argument.

The broadcast said two more Syrian brigades were expected to cross Lebanon and about 700 soldiers from the United Arab Emirates were expected in the country later today.

About 4,000 heavily armed Syrian peacekeeping troops early today dug into their positions in the suburbs and surrounded the capital before making their big push into the shell-blasted capital — tentatively scheduled for Sunday, rightist and leftist spokesmen said.

A rightist spokesman said both President Elias Sarkis and Col. Ahmed Al Hajj, commander of the enlarged 30,000-man Arab peacekeeping force, continued contacts with the warring factions to remove obstacles before the implementation of the second phase of the Arab-sponsored peace plan for Lebanon.

On the battlefronts, both sides reported sporadic artillery exchanges, machine-gun and sniping fire along the confrontation line stretching from the Beirut port district to the southern suburbs of Chiah and Ain Rummaneh.

They also reported heavy clashes in north Lebanon. Leftists reported clashes in southern Lebanon also but there was no comment from rightists on the situation in that area.

Casualties for the past 24 hours rose to at least 43 dead and 108 wounded throughout the city, most of them innocent civilians.

In Beirut, snipers raked the length of the six-mile-long confrontation line separating Moslem and Christian parts of the city.

Leaf collection continues

George Donnelly of the Park Department works on blowing leaves to be picked up by town crews. The annual leaf pickup is about a day behind schedule because of Wednesday's snow and slight mechanical problems. ## Buckland residents suggest changes in town's plans for industrial park

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

A committee of residents met with Town Manager Robert B. Weiss Friday night and presented a list of 11 changes it would like to see made in the proposed plans for the town's industrial park.

The committee of about 25 people represents residents of Burnham St., Croft Dr., and Windsor St., the areas that would be most affected by the park. It was formed Monday, Nov. 1 after Weiss met with homeowners in the area to explain the park plans. The committee was formed to work with the town to develop a plan that would suit both the neighborhood and the main tenant of the park, J.C. Penney.

Penney has not made a formal announcement that they want to locate a two-million square foot distribution center in Manchester, but they are expected to do so soon.

A member of the committee, William Anderson, of 340 Burnham St., said, "We want to sell the company on what we're asking."

"The main issue is cars and trucks," he said, referring to the concern of the residents that the park might mean increased traffic along their roads.

This concern was reflected in the list of demands presented by the committee. (The entire list will be included in Monday's Herald.)

The list included relocation of an access road from Burnham St. to the park, and relocation of the Windsor St. section north of Burnham St. to 400 feet east of the present location.

The committee also asked for a timetable on all changes to be made, which they would have to approve. "We need to have some sense of time commitment for all changes," Bob Spencer, a resident of 376 Burnham St., said.

Spencer made a formal presentation of the 11 issues. Weiss then replied individually to each of the demands — some — such as relocating Windsor St., could be enacted by the town, some would require further consultation with the company, he said.

Weiss said that he expected to meet with a representative from the firm next week to discuss the changes the neighbors sought. The committee asked to be represented at the meeting.

"The input comes a little bit differently from people directly affected," Anderson said.

Spencer asked that the full committee be present at this discussion session. But, Weiss suggested that 25 people facing one representative would "scare that person to death."

Weiss said that four representatives from the committee could be present at the session. The committee agreed to this arrangement and selected Floyd Tucker, Steve Penny, Frank Gallant, and Ray Smith to represent them when their suggestions are presented to the J.C. Penney official.

Weiss also said that a tentative date of Nov. 29 has been set for a company representative to meet with the full committee in Manchester.

A change suggested by Anderson appeared to be the one that might raise the most problems in the near future. He asked that a parking lot on the north side of the proposed Penney building be moved to another area where it would be farther away from Burnham St. homes.

Ronald Cote, a representative of the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce who was at the meeting, said afterwards that this issue could be a "critical" one.

"It may require both sides to give a little," he said.

Another change requested by the committee — moving the date of the hearing on the zoning change from Dec. 6 to Dec. 13 — will be looked into by Alan Lamson, assistant town planner. The committee felt that the Dec. 6 meeting date would be too soon after the proposed Dec. 3 trip to Columbus, Ohio, to view a Penney facility similar to the one that is being proposed for Manchester.

Six people from the neighborhood, as well as Weiss and a representative from the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce are expected to go on that trip.

Weiss called the session an "excellent" one.

"They're a very open group. They're taking a rational approach to the project — how it can be accommodated to the neighborhood, and how the neighborhood can be accommodated to it," he said.

Rhodesian peace conference session postponed to Monday

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Britain postponed a meeting of the Rhodesia conference at the last minute today at the request of four African nations which began a mediation effort with black nationalists to keep the talks going.

Conference chairman Ivor Richard postponed today's session until Monday, the official announcement saying only that this was done "on request."

But high conference officials said the request came from observers from Tanzania, Zambia, Mozambique and Botswana who were interceding with the leaders of the four black nationalist delegations.

The four leaders were demanding that 12 months be set as the specific time limit for majority rule independence before any other issues could be discussed — something which Richard could not accept.

Richard has said that although independence within one year would be desirable, legal and constitutional steps may take 15 or 18 months.

"If the conference collapses, it will be Britain's fault for insisting on 15 months instead of 12 months," said black leader Ndebele Sithole, after meeting with Richard Friday.

"We have not been given any new evidence that convinced us to change our position. We are still insisting on 12 months," said Bishop Abel Muzorewa, another black leader.

A spokesman for another black leader, Joshua Nkomo, said "We may ask for adjournment of the conference if the chairman does not satisfy our position that independence can be arranged within one year."

For the white Rhodesian group, headed by Foreign Minister Pieter Van der Byl, the date issue is "peripheral" and the conference should get down to discussing the shape of the interim government.

Conference officials said this issue will produce even wider disagreement both between the white and black factions as well as within the nationalist groups.

Manchester upgrading sewerage facility

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

A recent report by the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) blamed inadequate sewage treatment for the polluted condition of the Hockanum River, but Manchester is taking steps to upgrade its treatment plant.

The report classified the Hockanum as one of the state's most polluted and recommended upgrading of the sewage plants in both Manchester and Vernon.

"They have indicated to us that they do want us to upgrade our treatment," Jay J. Giles, director of public works, said. The town has already begun work on the process, he said.

A Boston engineering firm, Metcalf & Eddy, is working with DEP on the upgrading process.

Bob Lubker, a project engineer with the company, said that the town is presently in "facilities planning," which is step one under an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) construction grant program. Under the grants, EPA pays 80 per cent of the cost, and the town and state split the remaining cost.

Lubker said the facilities planning involves studies to determine future waste water output by the plant. This includes drawing up population projections and studying present waste water loads in Manchester.

Future grants will include actual construction work and improvements to the plant, but these projects will not be done for some time.

"You're talking about several years before the implementation of the final plans," Lubker said.

The state hopes that through improved water sewage disposal and correction of other pollution factors, the Connecticut River and its tributaries, including the Hockanum River, will again be swimmable.

According to Giles, Manchester deposits about 6 million gallons of water per day into the Hockanum. This water is treated to different degrees.

"Some of it may not be treated to the degree DEP wants," he said.

Lubker said, "The ultimate goal is to improve the town's sewage plant and to improve the quality of the town's discharge into the river to meet DEP requirements."

Pothole delays airplane flight

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — An Allegany Airlines flight from Hartford, Conn., to Minneapolis, Minn., made an unexpected drop Friday night — into a pothole on a Buffalo International Airport runway.

An Allegany spokesman said flight 295 had landed at the airport for a planned stopover. He said the plane was taxiing when its right landing gear became stuck in the hole. Sections of the airport have been undergoing renovation recently.

The passengers were transferred to another plane to continue the flight to Minneapolis, the spokesman said.

Meeting planned Monday

Court orders utility to roll back rates

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Northeast Utilities lawyer plans to meet Monday with the acting chief justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court to discuss a high court ruling ordering the utility to immediately roll back its rates by $47.9 million.

The Supreme Court Friday said a rate hike granted Northeast Utilities two years ago was invalid and ordered the roll back. In ruling the 1974 rate increase invalid, the high court said they could not be used as the basis for computing new rates the utility is requesting from the Public Utilities Control Authority.

The decision means Hartford Electric Light Co. customers' bills will drop by an average 15.2 per cent and Connecticut Light and Power Co. customers' bills by an average 8.8 per cent to the rates of two years ago.

State Consumer Counsel David Silverstone said the high court decision could mean not only a roll back but also refunds dating back to May 1974. If the court decision results in refunds, the utility's 850,000 customers could get back between $60 and $75 million.

Palmer S. McGee Jr., chief trial lawyer for Northeast, arranged a special meeting Monday with acting Supreme Court Chief Justice Alva P. Loiselle at the court on its ruling.

The unexpected decision resulted from litigation involving a Court of Common Pleas decision last March that found the rate increase granted by the Public Utilities Commission illegal.

The decision threw into doubt the plan of the Public Utilities Control Authority, successor to the PUC, to reopen the 1974 rate case Tuesday as the agency said it believed was required by the Court of Common Pleas ruling.

The utility currently is seeking a new rate increase, which opponents had argued could not be considered until the legality of the 1974 increase was settled.

Layoffs closed foundry

Manchester
week in review
Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's experimental foundry in Manchester was ending operations this week after an announcement that the East Hartford-based company was reducing its employment by 500 engineers and supporting personnel.
A total of 75 foundry employees received layoff notices Wednesday, along with hundreds of others in East Hartford. Pratt & Whitney said it would maintain a "skeleton crew" of 12 employees at the local foundry.
Pratt & Whitney President Bruce Torelli attributed the layoffs—which were forecast last month—to a decline in commercial aircraft engine orders.

Penney in news
More news developed this week about the J.C. Penney distribution center proposed for Manchester.
The Board of Directors granted the Manchester Economic Development Commission the authority to prepare plans for the industrial park in Buckland that would include the Penney facility.
Town Manager Robert Weiss, participating in a workshop for local government officials, talked about the state and regional cooperation that helped interest Penney in the Manchester site.
A trip to Ohio has been scheduled Dec. 3 to view a J.C. Penney facility. The Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce will sponsor the trip, which will include Weiss and some neighbors of the proposed site.

Health, social services
A joint committee of representatives from Manchester Memorial Hospital and Rockville General Hospital discussed a possible merger of the hospitals' pediatric and maternity departments. Of concern was travel by patients if there is a merger. Further study is planned.
Town directors this week approved an outreach worker for the elderly. The federally financed position is designed to help senior citizens get community services.
A food depot was established this week at the Manchester Shopping Park to provide Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets for local people in need.

Public safety
A serious Thursday afternoon fire caused minimal damage to a storage shed at the L.M. Gill Welding and Manufacturing Co., 1422 Tolland Tpk.
Up until Wednesday, when a surprise snowstorm caused problems in central Connecticut, local fire fighters were busy with a number of Community College, filed a complaint with the state charging that college officials discriminated against her in a decision not to renew her contract.

Public works
Water was the issue in several public works stories this week. Water mains, swimming pools, and Hilliard Pond.

The town Water Department reported improved quality in North End water. The department will continue its program of flushing water mains to upgrade quality.
The Advisory Board of Health recommended that proposals for improved water circulation at Globe Hollow Swimming Pool be presented soon to the town Board of Directors. If approved, the planned system could be installed by next summer.

The Conservation Commission this week endorsed the purchase of Hilliard Pond for its appraisal value, using state and federal funds to pay 75 per cent of the cost. Within the next two months, the commission will ask town directors to authorize the purchase for open space.

Follow through needed

We are of an age that generally takes campaign promises with a substantial amount of salt—a grain or two generally not being sufficient. We may be completely in accord with what we are being told prior to elections, but deep in our hearts we know some things are more easily said than done. But we do feel this tacit understanding between politician and voter is sometimes abused. This is particularly true when some allegation of wrongdoing is raised and we have headlines to the effect that the errand individual, or political party, or committee or even corporation will be brought before the bar of justice in some form or other. Gloria Schaffer, in her unsuccessful bid to unseat Sen. Lowell Weicker, presents a case of what we are talking about.

In the waning days of the campaign she alleged Mobil Oil Corp. advertisements in Sunday supplements concerning the oil issue were, in effect, favoring her opponent's point of view and therefore violated the federal election laws concerning corporation political activity.

She made a grandstand play of going to the giant firm's headquarters in New York City and holding a press conference there to get fuller coverage of her allegation. She followed up with a promise to haul the matter

South Windsor FISH needs community backers

A few months ago I heard the disturbing rumor that the FISH unit at the Church of the Good Shepherd in West Springfield, the first FISH unit in this country, had folded. I would like to believe that isn't true, but I'll have to admit it is possible. I know for a fact that the East Hartford organization is no more. It struggled valiantly for months and even years, but finally drained in an impossible volunteer-to-need ratio. Vernon FISH took a few dying gasps, and then went under. The idea that seemed some 2,000 community groups had sprung up—may, in fact, be dying faster than it is growing. Why is this happening, and where do we in South Windsor stand? Most people who are FISH volunteers are so because they are grateful for their own blessings and willing to share them (time, transportation, etc.) with someone who has a need. In recent years publicity-wise, if we all work together, South Windsor FISH will be afloat for a long time! June Cottle 166 Clinton Dr., South Windsor

The effect of these factors was obvious during our recent drive for volunteers when it took twice as long to fill our needs than it would have four or five years ago. Even now we are still lacking two transportation and two telephone volunteers. The FISH concept demands less from its volunteers in areas where the "we can help" greatly outnumber the "we need help," and this has been one of our major reasons for success. Even now, however, many social patterns are changing and our needs are growing. The number of "for sale" signs you see, the number of households

Trial rhetoric may be restricted

Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON — Sam Shepard, the Cleveland osteopath who was tried in the mid-'60s for allegedly cutting fatal incisions in his wife's torso, had a smart lawyer named Bill Corrigan, a pixie Irishman who made good dough convincing juries black was white. During recess, after Corrigan's opening, reporters noted Corrigan's characterization of his client as a

U.S. spending vs. tax 'loopholes'

Lee Roderick

The Herald's Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON — During the campaign, President-elect Carter reminded us of the inequity in a Madison Avenue executive being able to deduct his $50 business lunch while a truck driver can't write off a $1.50 sandwich. From that appealingly simple premise, however, Carter purposely was vague on how he'd go about closing such "loopholes" in the tax code. An examination of the tax structure quickly shows why he has spoken in generalities rather than specifics about closing loopholes, since the overwhelming majority of those who benefit from special tax provisions are not the so-called "fat cats" but rather the millions of average wage earners in America.

In 1972, for example, 53 per cent of personal income in the U.S., about $500 billion, escaped Uncle Sam's income tax dragnet. The single biggest "loophole" was the personal exemption of $750 per person, which accounted for $155 billion in tax-free income. Another $93 billion of income that year went untaxed because it was derived from social programs such as Social Security, veterans' benefits and welfare payments. Also not taxed was income included in the standard deduction, which is most often taken by lower to middle-income persons and which amounted to $70 billion in 1972.

Not many seriously would argue for eliminating those sacrosanct "loopholes" in the law. President Ford, in fact, gained mileage during the campaign by urging an increase in the personal exemption from its present $750 to $1,000, a tack Carter himself might well take in trying to stimulate the economy. Other major categories escaping the federal income tax bite in 1972 included: $58 billion for payment of state and local taxes, $27 billion for interest, $13 billion for charitable contributions, $10 billion for dental and medical expenses and $10 billion for such miscellaneous outlays as child care and casualty losses.

It is perhaps easier to take aim at these "loopholes," but most of those who do so live in glass houses since, again, it is middle-income citizens, not the rich, who chiefly benefit from them. For example, nearly $20 billion of the $27 billion worth of interest went for home-loan mortgages. Carter himself underscored the keen sensitivities involved in trying to tamper with this item. Late in the campaign President Ford accused him of wanting to do away with such deductions—a charge Carter heatedly denied. Just where in tarnation, then, are these really unfair loopholes that ought to be closed? There are indeed some of this type, ala that $50 business lunch. Unfortunately, however, eliminating them probably won't help lighten the average taxpayer's load, since they account for some a tiny proportion of national income. A former Treasury Department official, Edwin S. Cohen, noted recently that in 1970, 15,323 Americans had adjusted gross incomes of $200,000 or more, and 15,211 of them paid 44 per cent of the adjusted gross in federal taxes. That left 112 wealthy citizens who paid no federal income tax. Even if those 112 instead had contributed, say, a huge $100 million to the Treasury, however, in 1976 it would be Uncle Sam devouring $1 billion every day—that would be enough to keep the wheels of government grinding for about 45 minutes. The point of all this is that, while there are special interest loopholes that can't reasonably be justified, to close the truly significant ones would increase—not decrease—the tax load on average citizens. There is an alternative approach to freeing Americans from an increasingly onerous tax burden. That approach is through reducing the federal budget which, as of the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, has hit the billion dollar mark with a built-in deficit of $45 billion.

Given the expensive campaign promises of Jimmy Carter, however, the likelihood is for still more, not less, federal spending, while the mirage of "closing tax loopholes" continues to be dangled before the American electorate. Calder, a friendly man, almost always wore a rumpled bright red shirt. When he signed checks, he often used a paintbrush. Some storeowners kept them and put them in frames.

Calder referred to as a "hotshot mechanic" in his autobiography, said Calder sometimes brought rods and pipes to be bent at Carl and Wall's Garage in Woodbury for his mobiles during the 1940s.

"He hung some mobiles in a quonset but behind the garage until he got to making the enormous mobiles and the stables and then he went to the wedding companies," Burdick said. "Back in the war years, he'd sometimes stop in at the Tollgate Tavern in Woodbury where they had square dances. He was a regular fellow. He'd dance with the gang. They had a grand time and so did he," Burdick said. Dick Kitzney, who worked at Carl and Wall's when he met Calder in the 1930s, was puzzled when he saw one of Calder's early mobiles.

Thought

The universe is very old, but it had a beginning, obeys certain laws, and must originally have been set in motion. Science has no explanation to offer as to its origin. According to science, the planet Earth, on which we live, came into being on account of an almost incredibly rare accident. No other planet is known where all the numerous conditions are present which make life possible, or, at any rate, life as we now know it. Is all this due to chance? Ought we not rather to conclude that to attribute everything to an extraordinary succession of chances is to undermine science itself. When we bear in mind that a platypus object remains stationary until some outside force impels it to move, it is clear that there must be some cause, yet to be discovered, to account for the motion of the heavenly bodies. The Old Book starts with the words, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Submitted by: Rev. Magr. Edward J. Reardon, St. James R.C. Church

Calder painted it black

By JANE ANDERSON ROXBURY (UPI) — Alexander Calder's sculptures and paintings were known for their bright splashy colors, but the clapboard house in this rural town where he lived and worked for 30 years was not. Calder painted it black.

Calder, who died Thursday in New York City, bought the house with his wife, Louisa, who survives him, two years after they were married in 1921. Most of the house burned in a 1943 fire caused by a short circuit in an icebox. Calder used a workshop. When the house was rebuilt a year later, Calder had the exterior painted black. "I never heard why he painted it black except black was one of his favorite colors. Black, to him, was one of the primary colors," said Talcott Clapp, a friend for 30 years.

In 1946, Calder used a large pressurized tank of water to extinguish a brush fire that threatened a barn at the home of a neighbor, the late Leroy Anderson, the composer. "We always said, 'Sandy saved the barn.' I drove to the Calder's house and he came right down with a tank of water he kept after he had the fire at his house," Mrs. Anderson recalled.

Calder, a friendly man, almost always wore a rumpled bright red shirt. When he signed checks, he often used a paintbrush. Some storeowners kept them and put them in frames. Calder referred to as a "hotshot mechanic" in his autobiography, said Calder sometimes brought rods and pipes to be bent at Carl and Wall's Garage in Woodbury for his mobiles during the 1940s.

"He hung some mobiles in a quonset but behind the garage until he got to making the enormous mobiles and the stables and then he went to the wedding companies," Burdick said. "Back in the war years, he'd sometimes stop in at the Tollgate Tavern in Woodbury where they had square dances. He was a regular fellow. He'd dance with the gang. They had a grand time and so did he," Burdick said. Dick Kitzney, who worked at Carl and Wall's when he met Calder in the 1930s, was puzzled when he saw one of Calder's early mobiles.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS by Eugene Brewer

Christian baptism has long been a center of religious controversy. It need not be for all who accept the sole authority of the Bible, for its teaching is plain.

Proper subjects of baptism are one facet of the question which the Baptist demanded repentance of those requesting baptism. Matt. 3:7-8 Jesus made belief a prerequisite of baptism. Mark 16:15-16, "Whoever believes and is baptized will be saved." Acts 2:38-39, "If those believing with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, will be baptized."

Infants and young children are incapable of meaningful faith and repentance - hence are incapable of true baptism. I beseech you who are trusting in an infant "baptism" to do so no more - lay aside this human perversion of the deeply significant Christian ordinance, and obey God by being truly baptized!

Pastoral counseling available

Ministers receive many calls for help in personal problems. When two people sit down and converse under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, solutions to problems often emerge.

Sometimes a parishioner prefers to talk to someone other than his own clergyman. Then what? There are other counseling services available.

Recently the Rev. Felix Davis left Second Congregational Church to become a full-time counselor in Manchester. In addition, the Capitol Region Conference maintains a Counseling Center at the Hartford Hospital for individuals, couples and families.

Not all of us are in need of a professional counselor but all have need of God's help. Reliance on Him and the awareness of His love can change a seemingly hopeless situation.

A chuckle

Frequently fellow ministers share with me fodder for this column. Not long ago I preached for a friend in New Hampshire who told this story about a minister in a nearby church.

Years ago when my son was just a toddler we started out for a walk on a very cold day. On the level sidewalk all was well, but when we started up the hill he hit a patch of ice and slipped.

I am small and weak. I need your strength and wisdom. Let me walk in beauty, and make my eyes ever behold the red and purple sunset.

Make me always ready to come to you with clean hands and straight eyes.

So, when life fades, as the fading sunset, My spirit may come to you without shame.

Sharing our faith - In dialogue

In a recent column the importance of dialogue within the home and within the church is stressed. It is also of great value between Christians and non-Christians.

The Roman Catholic Church is to be commended for what the "Christian Century" has called "the most flexible and conciliatory phase of its 2,000-year history."

It has been my experience that groups which meet to share their faith and listen to one another not only learn another's point of view but find their own beliefs sharpened and clarified.

"The moral authority of Mao"

This is the heading of an editorial in a recent religious publication. It does not overlook Mao's ruthlessness and egomania but indicates that these negative factors are "overmatched by Mao's moral authority and authenticity in leading the world's most numerous people to self-reliant nationhood and self-respect."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Seymour and I have been married for six years and have no children to the us down. He has just informed me that he was going to Aspen for a four-day skiing trip with "the boys." This he laid down the law as to what I may and may not do while he is gone.

DEAR WIFE: Tell Seymour you won't make any promises, but if you should decide to go somewhere, you'll be happy to call HIM if he lets you know where he can be reached. And if he calls and you aren't home, he shouldn't think you dropped dead because you still plenty of life in you!

DEAR ABBY: When you hear that someone who has a terminal illness, how can you let them know you care? I don't feel I should be like that, but I don't want to let them know that you are in my thoughts and in my prayers. Silence shows indifference.

DEAR ABBY: I finally accepted a blind date with a girl I call "Patty." I say "finally" because a relative of hers who's a friend of mine had been trying to arrange a date between me and her for a year.

DEAR ABBY: I was stuck on how to accept her invitations. Better learn to say NO before you wind up saying "I do."

LTM's 'Oklahoma' disappoints reviewer

By JUNE TOMPKINS

The Little Theatre of Manchester (LTM), long noted for its high scoring performances, took a nose dive on the performance chart for its latest production, "Oklahoma!"

One's history of success is bound to contain a combination of hits and misses, and lest anyone thinks that Little Theatre will not rise again, it will. Little Theatre has that essence of quality that carries it above and beyond the majority of area little theater groups.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical scored a long-running hit on Broadway after it opened several years ago. The show is full of captivating tunes and the story is as American as apple pie. The songs like "Oh, What A Beautiful Morning," and "The Surrey With the Fringe on Top" will last through several generations. And the lovely "People Will Say We're in Love" arouses the feeling of romance.

The orchestra, directed by Ralph Maccarone, had the audience humming under its breath as the tunes followed one another during the introduction.

The play tells the love story of Laurey and Curly which is enhanced by involving a "villain," so to speak, in the swarthy character of Jud Fry. Aunt Eller is a sharp and provocative old gal who understands what young folks are all about, and is not averse to breaking up a melee if she has to.

There is a cast of ranch hands and farm girls who complement the story with song and dance.

A traveling peddler, an aggressive farm lassie, and a farm boy who has been to Kansas City all help to spice the story.

Ali Hakim is the suave peddler who always has a trick or two up his sleeve and who sweeps Ado Annie, the aggressive farm lassie, off her feet, but with no less finesse than Will Parker, the young farmer who has been where "everything's up to date in Kansas City."

There is a dramatic hassle toward the end of the play prompted by jealousy and Jud Fry is killed when he falls on his own knife.

The orchestra, as usual, does well under Maccarone's keen direction. Some of the songs like "People Will Say We're in Love" and "Out of My Dreams" were performed at a faster tempo than I like to hear. The orchestra, also as usual, was heard above most of the solo singing, but that is a physical problem that exists where the orchestra is not in a pit under the stage.

There were few solo voices that were capable of competing with a full orchestra, anyway.

Playing the lead as Curly is Mike Adams who also played the lead in the Manchester High School production a few years ago. Adams is a handsome young man with a mop of dark curly hair and a jaunty swagger that becomes the part of Curly, but his singing at times was not on pitch. He lacks stage experience for a mature company like Little Theatre.

Chris Hand is a lovely, demure Laurey with a voice pleasant to hear, but its quality is sometimes lost in the fast tempo of her solos.

Joe French gave to Jud the looks and interpretation required of a jealous farm hand seeking Laurie's affections. Mary deManbey as Ado Annie is a doll-faced girl who does well in attracting the attentions of the slick peddler and Will, played by John M. Roy.

The peddler is played by Vin Liscomb, no stranger to LTM audiences. Liscomb, with a few other LTM veterans in the cast, do their best to make "Oklahoma!" what it should be.

Probably the star of this particular show is Jayne Newirth as Aunt Eller. A competent actress and comedienne, she contributes a full measure of talent to the musical.

The choreography is lively. Particularly artistic is the dream sequence at the end of the first act.

The staging is contemporary and gives one the impression at first that the action is part of a vaudeville act on an empty stage. The mellow hues chosen for the girls' costumes, however, are very pretty and well coordinated.

Recognized for excellent direction of past LTM musicals, James Quinn need not be criticized for a lesser good performance this time. Let's say it was an unfavorable combination of many things.

"Oklahoma!" plays again tonight, and next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at East Catholic High School.

Pollution: Is the sea dying?

Editor's Note: This is the tenth of 16 weekly articles in the Courses by Newspaper program, "Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier," published each Saturday in The Herald's Weekend magazine. Are the oceans dying? Is man's pollution destroying the vital life-support system of the water which covers three quarters of the earth?

Such dire predictions have been made by some very distinguished people, Jacques Cousteau and Thor Heyerdahl among others. Like many other complex questions, the answer must be yes and no. The patient has symptoms of illness, but this is not a dread, incurable disease. A prescription for recovery and a long and healthy life are well known, but like a child the ocean cannot treat itself. It is up to us, the human race, to supply the cure if we but have the will and the patience to do so.

Pollution problems are most acute in the harbors, estuaries, and nearshore coastal waters of the world.

These waters constitute no more than 1 per cent of the surface area of the world oceans, and a much smaller fraction of the total volume of seawater. Early civilizations built cities on navigable waters. Cities automatically concentrate populations, resources, and waste materials; and, from the beginning, concentrated waste materials were discarded into the nearest waterways or into the streets or on land, where the next rain would wash them directly or eventually into the sea. The Romans were great engineers and built aqueducts to carry water for many miles to their cities, but they did not close the natural cycle to return the organic waste to the land from which it had originated. We are still slavishly following this fallacy today.

While these inshore waters are receiving the greatest impact of man's pollution, they are also of the greatest value for man's other desired uses of the ocean. Food organisms abound in them. Some spend their entire life cycle within an estuary; others use inshore waters as breeding or nursery grounds, as routes of migration, or as rich feeding grounds. Perhaps 80 to 90 per cent of commercial and sport fish depend upon the estuary for part or all of their life cycles. Some delicacies, like the clam, the oyster, and the crab live out their lives there.

Inshore waters are also in great demand for recreation, and the greater the density of population the more critical it is to have clean beaches, safe swimming, good fishing, and fine boating.

Insulting the sea

What have we done to preserve the value of this resource? We have discharged untreated or inadequately treated domestic sewage, so that many beaches are no longer safe for swimming, and wide expanses of productive shellfishing grounds are closed because the contaminated meats might cause human disease. We have discharged toxic industrial wastes which interfere with the life cycle of resident or migratory species of fish. Vast areas could, indeed, be deserts today if it were not for the remarkable ability of seawater to purify itself and to recover from the insults imposed upon it by man's thoughtlessness.

This degradation of the marine environment can be reversed, and is being reversed in many areas.

Our engineers know how to treat domestic sewage so that the effluent can be safely released into adjacent waters; how to treat industrial wastes so that the objectionable materials are recovered — in some cases at a profit. However, not everyone has learned yet that the only real solution is to close the cycle as nature does automatically and has done since the origin of life on earth. The organic material and plant fertilizers in purified domestic pollution can, and should, be returned to the land to stimulate plant growth in parks, forests, and even agricultural lands. Our mineral resources are not inexhaustible and should be recovered and reused rather than being discharged at sea where they are forever lost.

Recycling of everything possible should be our ultimate goal, though it will clearly not be easily attainable or cheap. It is the only true solution to the problems of pollution.

Polluting the high seas

But what of the open oceans, the high seas beyond the edge of the continental shelf where the depth of water exceeds 600 feet? Since the average depth of the ocean is about 2 miles, more than 99 per cent of the seawater occupies this open ocean space. We have, until recently, firmly believed that our puny efforts could not affect this vast sea. The first atmospheric test of an atomic bomb over Bikini in 1946 shattered this illusion. Soon the radioactive fallout from this and later tests was identified not only near the test site but throughout the world ocean.

Since then, scientists have looked for, and found, other man-made pollutants in the open ocean thousands of miles from shore.

Which pollutants are of prime concern in these deep offshore waters? Domestic pollution, of great concern in shallower waters, is recycled by the natural marine ecosystem long before it reaches the open sea. Many of the toxic heavy metals are precipitated and do not move very far in the oceans.

Most of the deep sea pollutants are carried in the atmosphere. Among them are fallout radioisotopes, mentioned above, and the products of the combustion of fossil fuels, both coal and oil, which include many toxic heavy metals as well as oxides of carbon, sulfur, and nitrogen.

Perhaps most critical of all are the artificial organic compounds man has created, such as the insecticide DDT and polychlorinated biphenyls. These exotic organic compounds are of particular concern because they are nowhere produced in nature, and the ecosystem has not evolved mechanisms to recycle them as adequately as it does natural products.

Oil pollution

Oil pollution of the oceans originates

from many sources, including tankers traveling from the large producing areas in the Near East to the heavy users in industrialized areas, such as the United States, northern Europe, and Japan.

The routine operations of ships add directly to the oceans nearly two million tons of oil annually — about one-third of the total input, but nearly ten times more than the accidental spills which receive so much publicity. Thor Heyerdahl reported visible evidence of oil pollution on 43 days of his 57-day drift across the Atlantic on the papyrus raft, Ra.

Crude oil is a complex mixture of many compounds, some of which are very toxic to marine organisms. These are even more concentrated in refined fuel oils, and inshore spills of these have decimated marine populations and lesser effects persist for several years.

When crude oil is discharged in the open sea, some evaporates, some dissolves in the water, and some forms a surface slick which gradually weathers, producing tar balls as the persistent end products. These, ranging from droplet to football size, sink to the bottom or accumulate on beaches where they are more of a nuisance than a hazard. Oil is ingested by marine organisms and decomposed by marine bacteria — how fast or how effectively is not yet well known; but, if oil were not recycled in this way, a thin film would cover the entire ocean.

Although contaminants have been identified throughout the world ocean, there is no proof that they have damaged the marine ecosystem except in local, inshore waters. All of them are now under some control or regulation. None of these control is perfect, and only time will tell whether they are adequate to protect the vast areas of the ocean from degradation.

Qatar has variety

By RUSS MacKENDRICK

We don't get any Q's without U's in the English language so here is a special treat: Qatar (pronounced Cotter, or perhaps Carter, if you are from Down East).

Qatar is a sand-dune sheikdom, but it is not one of the Trucial seven that so bombarded us with stamps before they became the United Arab Emirates. Qatar toyed with the idea of being in that group but finally decided on independence. They joined the United Nations in September 1971. (Beating the UAE by two months.)

The stamp with the picture of Sheik Khalifa is part of a set issued to commemorate their fifth anniversary as a nation. The bird stamps came out earlier in the year. The birds lack names, (bad, bad) but they are said to be "magnificent...in striking color." They were lithographed in

Stamps and coins

Holland by the firm of Enschede.

There are six in all. The ones shown are a sandpiper and cormorant (5 and 10 dirhams) and a falcon (2 riyals). (100 dirhams makes a riyal which equals about 22 cents)

Qatar had stamps as early as 1957, but only in the way of overprints on British numbers. Their own designs were ready in 1961, showing a dhow, mosque, and guess what — an oil derrick!

The place, about the size of Connecticut, is a peninsula tacked onto Saudi Arabia. It sticks out into the Persian Gulf just north of Abu Dhabi and the other sand-duners. With a population of only 90,000, Qatar stands 15th in the world's oil production — hence the smile on the face of the sheik.

Their philatelic purity is a little better than that of most sheikdoms, but Scott does banish a few of their stamps to the back of the book into their "For the Record" reservation.

There are fewer than 500 issues and nearly all are cheapies, even among the early overprints, so there is a chance to go for an entire country without any insuperable snags.

Qatar has coinage, too — five pieces minted in 1973 are shown in the big Krause & Mishler catalog (spoken of as the Sears, Roebuck of coins). They are all of a similar neat design, 1, 5, and 10 dirhams in bronze, and 25 and 50 dirhams in copper-nickel. There is Arabic writing on one side and a modeling of palms and a sailboat (that dhow again) on the other.

Set up a study unit

Professional "joiners" already in the American Topical Association may go a bit further and set themselves up as a study unit. There is a survey in the recent "Topical Time" describing 31 of these — such as the Casey Jones Railroad Unit, Space on Stamps, Lighthouse, Maps, Medical Subjects, and so on.

Any 10 members wherever located may apply for a charter. There is an Astronomy Unit with the president in Wisconsin and the secretary in Texas. They all have a publication and dues. One asks for $3 plus 12 SASE's per year.

The Gems, Minerals & Jewelry Unit hopes to get together with nonstamp lapidary and gem groups for joint exhibitions.

Bulk rate stamp debut

The new bulk rate stamp of 7.7 cents will have its first day at the American Stamp Dealers' show in Madison Square Garden on the 20th. (The show runs Nov. 18 through 21). Bulk users will get precanceled rolls of 500 and 3,000. The USPS will take care of collectors with plain stamps, 10 at a time, or 30 if you want to make sure of a line pair.

(Manchester Philatelic Society members may get these at face from their agency secretary, Harry Cion)

Something to do

Events tomorrow: The Southern N.E. Coin Dealers' exhibit and bourse at Pulaski Plaza, Hartford; Second Sunday Stamp Bourse, Holiday Inn, Meriden; and the same, plus an exhibit, at the Cardinal Spellman Museum in Weston, Mass.

Russ MacKendrick of Manchester writes about "Stamps and Coins" each Saturday in The Herald's Weekend magazine.

Weekend

Weekend, an entertainment and television supplement, is published each Saturday by The Manchester Evening Herald, Herald Square, Manchester, Conn. 06040. Deadline for Forum of the Arts: Eight days before publication. Advertising deadline: Five days before publication.

West Bank presents

The West Bank Singers present Charles Fidler, baritone, Friday at 8:15 p.m. at Trinity Episcopal Church on Sigourney St., Hartford, in a recital of songs by Brahms, Ravel, CoCocq, Milhaud and Chavez.

CB skip signals saving lives

By INK DIPPER

CBers are saving the lives of people hundreds of miles away, thanks to "skip," a phenomenon caused when radio signals bounce off the earth's atmosphere.

The Federal Communications Commission has a regulation prohibiting CBers from talking to anyone more than 150 miles away. But it has taken no action against people involved in these long-distance rescues.

Skip fluctuates during the year, usually peaking in the summer months when the atmosphere picks up extra energy and becomes reflective.

But skip can also be caused by sunspots, eruptions on the sun's surface which grow more intense every 11 years. The sunspots shoot out extra ultraviolet rays, charging the atmosphere with more energy and making it reflective.

Sunspot activity is just around the corner. The high activity, which will last three to five years, starts in 1978 and will probably peak in the early 1980s.

More people in trouble will be relying on skip to contact emergency aid.

One of the most dramatic skip-related rescues came recently when a group of North Carolina CBers monitored a distress call from a sinking pleasure boat in the Bahamas.

The boat, with four persons aboard, was going down fast when Jocelyn "White Widow" Goodwin picked up the call. She and other CBers, sometimes straining to understand the weak signal, were able to relay the information, via telephone, to the U.S. Coast Guard. The Coast Guard was able to save all aboard the boat.

Skip signals often crowd out local communications, and some CBers will find themselves unable in emergencies to contact nearby CBers. They will be forced to "shoot skip," as it is called by CBers, and make contact with a distant person who can relay the message to the proper authorities.

A CBER, before he shoots skip in an emergency, should ask himself if the end justifies the means. Is the situation dire enough to justify breaking the law and bothering people hundreds of miles away?

A flat tire on the interstate wouldn't qualify, but an automobile wreck — with injuries — would if there was no other way to send for help.

CBers shooting skip in emergencies should forget everything they know about 10-codes and slang expressions. Both vary from state-to-state and even county-to-county, so a person six states away might use different codes and slang.

Skip signals are fickle, so messages should be short and clear, giving the nature of the emergency, location, extent of any injuries and who to telephone for help.

The police in the nearest town are usually the best people to suggest for sending help. Even though the emergency may be out of their jurisdiction, the police would know to whom the message should be routed.

Like any other call for help, a skip call should be made on channel nine, the emergency channel. If no one can be raised on channel nine, other frequencies might be tried, but with frequent rotation back to nine. People trained in handling emergency calls monitor channel nine from Maine to California, so no matter where a skip signal falls, there's a better chance on channel nine of finding someone who knows what he or she is doing.

Skip should always be a last resort. Try to contact someone locally so the message can be relayed by a person familiar with the geography and who to call in emergencies.

Constantly punching away on skip might break through to a local CBER, and no matter how weak his signal is, he's still a better bet than skip.

CB Convac, appearing each Saturday in The Herald's Weekend magazine, is authored by Ink Dipper (KYZ-3916), the editor of The CB Times-Journal.
