It was good sledding weather

Democrats caucus to pick party leaders in house

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Victorious Democrats, who will control the new House with more than a two-thirds majority, met today to settle among themselves who will become the majority leader.

First they were scheduled to demonstrate unanimity with the choice of Thomas P. O'Neill as Speaker. The white-haired O'Neill, who has represented Massachusetts in the House for 24 years, is unchallenged in the House Democratic Caucus for the right to succeed retired Speaker Carl Albert.

But the caucus has a heated battle brewing for the second in command position O'Neill is leaving. Four veterans are seeking the post and Sunday they courted the four-dozen freshmen Democrats elected last month.

Rep. Phillip Burton of California is viewed as the frontrunner, closely followed by Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, with Reps. Jim Wright of Texas and John McFall of California trailing.

Many observers, including some of the candidates themselves, say the victory margin may be as little as five or six votes.

McFall, the current Democratic whip, was dealt a severe blow when he was linked to the current investigation of influence-peddling by agents of the South Korean government.

McFall, who admits accepting $4,000 from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park, Sunday told a meeting of new Democrats that he did nothing illegal.

"If you look at the facts you'll find there was no wrongdoing involved."

McFall told his new colleagues, who only questioned him for 15 minutes, compared with half-hour sessions they spent with the other contenders.

"There was no influence buying," said McFall, who put the money into an office expense account.

Burton and Bolling both said they would like to eliminate such loosely controlled office funds. Wright does not use such an account, which each House member has the option of setting up.

All 292 House Democrats elected to the 95th Congress, and the four delegates from the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam, can vote in the caucus. The balloting is secret, with a simple majority needed to win.

There are 142 newly-elected Republicans, and they plan to meet Wednesday. One seat is still undecided.

The only other Democratic House contest involves Reps. Thomas Foley of Washington and Shirley Chisholm of New York to succeed Burton as caucus chairman. Foley has the edge for that job.

There is no doubt O'Neill will be formally elected by the full House when Congress convenes Jan. 4, although there will be a token challenge by House GOP leader John Rhodes of Arizona, expected to be renamed by his party.

The four majority leader contenders appeared earlier Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program and struck the general theme of being able to work with the Democratic majority in Congress and the White House.

Missionary murders disrupt conference

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Blacks and whites at the Rhodesia Conference bitterly accused each other today of responsibility for the ambush slayings in northwestern Rhodesia of three Roman Catholic missionaries — including a bishop and a nun.

Open hostility between the two sides erupted as Ivor Richard, the British conference chairman, sought to find at least some common ground on forming an interim government to run Rhodesia in the transitional period before black majority rule. Richard, who was flying to London Monday evening for more consultations with Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland on the impasse at the six-week-old talks, had private individual meetings with all four black nationalist delegation leaders and also convened a full plenary session.

But the murder Sunday of 71-year-old German-born Bishop Adolf Schmitt and missionaries Father Possenti Weggarten, 65, and Sister Maria van den Bergh dominated the day.

Utilities face contempt citations

HARTFORD (UPI) — The judge who forced state officials to order Northeast Utilities to reduce rates, has told the giant utility to show just cause why it should not be held in contempt for trying to stall the rollback order.

Court of Common Pleas Judge William C. Bieluch Saturday ordered the hearing Dec. 13 at the request of the same consumers group that had sought the contempt order against the Public Utilities Control Authority.

The contempt hearing was requested by the Connecticut Citizens Action Group which has orchestrated the long legal battle to roll back rates.

"Northeast arrogantly continues to flout a mandate by the courts to stop charging consumers illegal rates," said CCAG attorney Alexander Goldfarb. "The rollback should take place immediately."

The PUCA Dec. 1, under threat of the contempt order, ruled the giant utility must reduce rates to pre-May 1974 levels while the panel considers the legality of the charges that have been in effect since then.

Northeast spokesman Bill Keveney said officials did not consider themselves in contempt of court.

"It appears it is our turn. First the court did this to the Public Utilities Control Authority," he said. "We view this as an obvious pattern of intimidation and do not believe we are in contempt."

Northeast Thursday formally appealed the order it roll back rates and company officials said their understanding was that filing the appeal had put a stay on the PUCA decision.

But the PUCA asked for a court order directing Northeast Utilities to reduce rates while an appeal of a ruling that the company roll back its charges is being considered.

The complicated legal matter began last spring when Bieluch ruled illegal a $47.7 million rate hike granted in May 1974. The state Supreme Court is considering an appeal of that ruling.

The PUCA had ruled last month Northeast could continue charging current rates while the appeal was being taken, but changed its mind this week when faced with a possible contempt of court citation by Bieluch. Bieluch's latest order compels Joseph R. McCormick of Bloomfield, president of Hartford Electric Light Co., and Anthony E. Wallace, president of Connecticut Light & Power Co., to show why they should not be found in contempt. The two firms are both Northeast subsidiaries.

At stake are the bills of 850,000 consumers who receive their electrical power from HELCO and CL&P. Northeast said rolling back rates would cost it $2 million a week.

The PUCA is currently considering a new request by Northeast for a $56 million rate increase. Under state law that case must be decided by Dec. 29 or the proposed rates go into effect automatically.

When that decision is reached, the rates approved will supercede the ones the PUCA ordered into effect Wednesday.

The three PUCA members said rates effective Oct. 22, 1976, would be calculated based on the charges in effect in May 1974 when higher rates went into effect.

The PUCA also is reviewing the 1974 rate hike and has said if it determines consumers were overcharged, refunds with interest will be ordered for the period from May 1974, to Oct. 21, 1976.

Carter says tax cut still not decided

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter said today a tax cut is one possibility to stimulate the economy, but that he had made no decision about providing tax relief.

Talking to reporters after voting for his brother Billy in the Plains mayoral election, Carter was asked about a statement by Thomas Brtram Lance, his nominee to head the Office of Management and Budget, that a tax cut is "almost a certainty."

"I wouldn't put it that strongly — that's one of the possibilities," Carter said. It was, he said, "too early to decide," and added, "We're assessing several possibilities."

He said that several proposals concerning a temporary tax cut were being considered and also ways of boosting employment. The government announced last week that unemployment has risen to 8.1 per cent.

Carter said he wanted to look at all economic indicators and that if he decided on a tax cut, it would be a "joint decision with Congress."

Lance said in a television interview Sunday that a tax cut would almost certainly come after the Carter administration takes office next month. But he acknowledged that a goal of reducing unemployment to 6.5 per cent next year probably cannot be achieved.

Lance, an Atlanta banker whom Carter announced Friday as his choice for the OMB, said "there are only so many things you can do" to improve the economy, and one of them is a tax cut.

"The choices are so limited that I think you have to consider that as almost a certainty," he said.

Lance said he was "sure" Carter was considering, among other plans, a proposal by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., for a $10 billion tax reduction.

Two other Carter advisers, former Federal Reserve Board member Andrew Brimmer and Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, also agreed — in separate television interviews — that a tax cut is needed.

Brimmer said he favored a tax rebate early next year while Miss Rivlin suggested the economy also could be bolstered quickly by "putting more money into public employment programs already on the books," rather than awaiting new programs.

Lance appeared on CBS-TV's Face the Nation. Brimmer and Miss Rivlin, both of whom have been rumored as possible Carter appointees, were on ABC-TV's Issues and Answers.

Although optimistic that Carter and Congress would "move fairly rapidly" to improve the economy,

Lance was pessimistic about major drops in unemployment next year. He said reducing unemployment from its current 8.1 per cent level to 6.5 per cent was "a good goal to have," but "I doubt from a practical standpoint that we are going to be able to accomplish that in 1977."

"I think it's going to be very, very difficult to do so," Lance said. "That doesn't mean that we shouldn't set a goal ... (but) I rather doubt that anybody could say that we are going to be able to reduce unemployment by 1.5 per cent next year."

In an interview in U.S. News and World Report, outgoing Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said he would wait until early next year when fourth quarter economic figures are in before deciding if a tax cut is needed.

He said if further economic stimulus is necessary, it should be in the form of a tax cut rather than increased federal spending.

Buckland industrial zone change delayed

By GREG PEARSON

Herald Reporter

The town has postponed until Jan. 10 a hearing for a zone change needed for the proposed industrial park in Buckland.

The public hearing, which will be conducted by the town's Planning and Zoning Commission, had been scheduled for Dec. 13.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss

said that the postponement will give the town a chance to provide "more complete information" at the hearing.

"The plans for the park will be further along, so we can better answer questions," he said.

He also said that two attorneys who have been interested in the case, Anthony Pagano and Bruce Beck,

Primary election exclusion of independents upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court held today that independent voters have no constitutional right to participate in primary elections.

The justices acted in a brief order without issuing an opinion. They affirmed a three-judge federal court decision which upheld Connecticut's law.

The three-judge court ruled that Connecticut's law was an appropriate means for the legislature to preserve "the integrity of the electoral process."

Connecticut has an interest, the court said, in assuring "that primary election results reflect the will of party members, undistorted by the votes of those unconcerned with, if not actually hostile to, the principles, philosophies and goals of the party."

The state law was challenged by Nathra Nader and Albert C. Snyder, independent voters who sought to vote in Connecticut's 1976 primary. They claimed that by limiting participation to party members, the state denied them their right to vote at a critical stage of the electoral process.

The three-judge court noted that Connecticut provides petition procedures for placing independent candidates on the ballot and that party registration, enabling a person to vote in the primary, is easy.

"Connecticut's voting laws clearly provide avenues for supporting candidates of one's persuasion without affiliating with an established 'major' political party," the court said.

Limiting primary participation serves the rights of those who wish to join a party, the court said, and lets party candidates know who can vote to nominate them and presumably who is sympathetic with the political goals of the party.

"In order to protect party members from 'intrusion by those with adverse political principles,' the lower court concluded, "and to preserve the integrity of the electoral process, a state legitimately may condition one's participation in a party's nominating process on some showing of loyalty to that party."

HARTFORD — The United Parcel Service strike is all but settled but the chances are it will do little to ease the Christmas mailing rush, according to Hartford postmaster Paul Donovan. The card and letter deadline is Dec. 10 and the package deadline is Dec. 3 for pre-Christmas delivery.

Medical examiner denies coverup in death of infant at school

FARMINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Elliot Gross, the chief state medical examiner, has denied that information surrounding the death of a newborn baby at the exclusive Miss Porter's School was being covered up. Dr. Gross said Saturday it would be at least two weeks before an official cause of death would be issued, even though the physical examination of the body was completed Nov. 16. According to a published report, the infant, found in a plastic bag under a student's bed, may have lived about two hours.

One person close to the investigation told the Hartford Courant there was a "no holds barred coverup" and the newspaper quoted students as saying some classmates and staff members had been aware of the girl's pregnancy. Gross denied that, saying, "This case is being handled just as any case would be. Asked if the delay on the cause-of-death report was unusual, he said "it may be hard to believe because you are not familiar with this office." The death is under investigation by our office. It will be at least a couple of weeks before the tests are complete," Gross said. He said he finished a physical examination of the body on Nov. 16, the day after it was found. Gross said the holdup in the cause of death was caused by factors other than the physical condition of the body, but he refused to elaborate. He said often chemical tests, interviews and microscopic examinations held up autopsy findings. The alumnae of Miss Porter's, one of the most famous girls' prep schools in the country, include Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Headmaster Warren Hance called an assembly to inform students and the staff of the investigation. He warned students not to discuss the matter. "It's a shame it happened, but my major responsibility now is to protect the rights of the children here," was the only thing he would say other than "no comment."

High court stays White execution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today granted a stay of execution on behalf of a second man who wants to die — Robert Excell White, who was scheduled to die in the Texas electric chair Friday.

Last Friday, the court temporarily stayed the execution of Gary Mark Gilmore, who was to have faced a firing squad at sunrise today in Utah State Prison. The court said it wanted to hear from Utah before going any further with a stay application filed by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund on behalf of Gilmore's mother, Mrs. Bessie Gilmore of Milwaukee, Ore. White's execution is blocked under today's Supreme Court order until his attorneys can file a formal application for review of his trial and sentence. The stay then remains in effect until the appeal is disposed of. Justice William H. Rehnquist voted to reject the stay of execution and allow White to die on schedule Friday. White's lawyers came to the high court on the ground that his professional duty to protect a defendant's interest did not end because of his death wish. White, who was convicted of the murder of a grocery store attendant in McKinney, Tex., has been on death row more than two years. He said any further delay would only "inflict needless hardship" on him. But the lawyers want the court to decide whether the Texas capital punishment law was carried out in accordance with the Supreme Court's series of opinions in cases which endorsed the principle of capital punishment and upheld the Texas law. The attorneys challenged the way White's trial jury was selected, the sentencing procedure and the inadequacy of the process by which his sentence was reviewed. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals affirmed White's conviction on July 14 of this year. No executions have taken place in the United States since 1967.

Carousel for rent

HARTFORD (UPI) — The restored 48-horse carousel in Bushnell Park will do more than rotate and make music if Tracy Cameron's idea catches on. Ms. Cameron, a local artist who oversees painstaking restoration of the merry-go-round, wants the community to use it for parties and special functions. She belongs to a nonprofit organization, Bushnell Park Carousel Society, whose goal is to maintain and promote use of the carousel, which has a Wuritzer band organ and is enclosed to ward off the winter chill. Ms. Cameron said Sunday that for $5, or less for a charitable affair, persons may rent the carousel for parties, weddings or just plain fun things. A group from Hartford Hospital already has signed up to rent the 35-year-old merry-go-round for an outing in April, she said.

Short-term aid funds received

The town has received $78,066, its first payment from a federal short-term assistance program. The money is a quarterly payment from the Anti-Recession Fiscal Assistance program, which will provide $1 billion across the country in emergency assistance. Payments to communities are calculated on unemployment figures and revenue sharing payments to the community through June 30, 1976. The first payments from the program were made this fall. The money is to be used to "maintain basic services" in Manchester. It cannot, except in special cases, be used for construction projects or purchases by the town. Dance festival NEW LONDON (UPI) — Connecticut College officials hope they can find a way to keep the American Dance Festival from leaving the campus for greener pastures. Talks broke down last month between the festival and the college over the $10,000 the college wants to charge the festival for use of the campus for summer productions. William Churchill, director of the college president, said Sunday a number of proposals were being explored to brook the money problem, including a possible tuition increase for summer dance students.

MACC News

By Nancy Carr executive director. Once again the MACC Seasonal Sharing Appeal to provide food and warm clothing to disadvantaged families during Christmas is under way. Your generosity of last year and the continuing difficult economic situation have led us to set a goal of $2,500 for this year. From among the many families facing hard times, social workers from the schools, town and state welfare systems, public health nurses, Head Start and the Department of Human Services, have tried to identify those most in need of help. It has been for them a most difficult task. If we do indeed reach our goal we will be able to provide almost 100 families (with several hundred children) with a box of food and small limited-use vouchers for the children to be used for either warm clothes or shoes and boots. Break Christmas. The continuing spiral of inflation and unemployment has pressed some of our Manchester families deeper into difficulty than ever before. Rising costs of basic necessities (food, shelter, warmth, medicines, medical treatment, children's clothing) have left many of our neighbors facing a bleak Christmas with lean shelves and empty pockets. In order to help more of our neighbors than ever before we, are hoping with your help to develop a fourfold Christmas giving program.

Seasonal sharing. Because of the wide spread use, we will continue to use all money collected through the appeal on warm clothing for children and food. Checks may be made available to MACC Seasonal Sharing Appeal, Box 773, Manchester. We do hope to provide a food basket for every needy family. Food may be left at the Salvation Army Citadel, 661 Main St. between the hours of 9 and 5. For some 300 patients in Manchester convalescent homes there will be no cards and gifts from family and friends. We hope to make these holidays a little more joyful with a small gift. Gift suggestions for men are shaving lotion, body powder, handkerchiefs, small containers (for change, etc.); and for women, small bottles of cologne, costume jewelry, perfumed soap. Welcome gifts are small lap robes for thin legs seldom used, or a warm shoulder covering. Please see that your gift is clearly marked with the contents. Gifts may be left at the MACC office, 741 E. Middle Tpke.

Toys for Joy. Developed to put a little sparkle into our Christmas program, all toys will be given to Manchester children in need. Please do not wrap the present but include the paper and ribbon. We will "match up" your gift with a little boy or girl as carefully as possible. Adopt a child or family or grandparent. A program to make your giving more personal. Ages and sizes are provided. We ask those wishing to adopt a child to make a Christmas visit part of their sharing. Don't be late. The deadline for Seasonal Sharing is Friday, Dec. 17. We need the last four days to determine just how far we can stretch your generous gifts. Don't be "too late" to share your Christmas with those less fortunate. Note: Whoops — my error: It was Cub Scout Pack 251 not 261 that collected and brought canned goods to the Emergency Pantry. Apologies. We also want to thank the U.I. Society East for their donation to the Pantry. We wish to acknowledge a very generous donation from Manchester AARP Chapter #1275 who have donated $158 to the Seasonal Sharing Fund.

Penney complex pluses outweigh minuses

"An absolute gem" is how Ralph B. Henderson, director of catalog operations for the J.C. Penney Co., described the 400-acre industrial park proposed for Buckland. His appraisal is probably somewhat overexuberant, which is to be expected from a biased observer with a vested interest in the park. But overall, the park proposal does appear to be a positive one - A chunk of industrial growth that will add more to the community than it will take away. The most obvious positive factor is jobs. In peak season, the J.C. Penney catalog distribution center, which would be the major tenant of the park, would employ up to 2,700 people, according to figures from the firm.

The number of full-time jobs created would be at least 1,700, according to Penney. These would be filled soon after construction is finished (planned completion is mid-1980) and would be filled primarily by local people. The company has said that only about 40 executives would be "shipped in" by Penney for the Manchester plant.

The increased number of jobs would not just mean a reduction in the local unemployment rate. The "spin-off" effect of more jobs would effect many businesses and pocketbooks. More people working would mean more money to be spent on movies, on food, on cars...the list is endless.

The J.C. Penney industry would be a non-polluting one. No manufacturing would take place in the two-million-square-foot building. The primary operation would be the packing and shipping of catalog orders.

The center does not however, present an all-positive good proposition for Manchester. There will be drawbacks, and one will be traffic congestion.

With at least 1,700 new jobs, there could be an increase in the number of cars traveling into, out of, and around Manchester. This will mean more car exhaust in the air; more noise to be tolerated by neighbors.

Penney officials have said that at other centers there is an average of about 120 out-

FBI's domestic espionage was nasty business

WASHINGTON - Concerning the latest, rather nasty, revelations about the FBI's domestic espionage operations, I am constrained to tell a personal story. It will have to be a once-upon-a-time tale, to protect the innocent - or, at least, the unconvicted. The reader will search in vain for any clue as to who was keeping the Washington store on the day I got a phone call from an FBI official. "I've got a story for you," he said. "But it must be strictly understood that what I tell you is in confidence. Even this phone call is in confidence. You'll have to quote anonymous sources."

Well, I agreed. What else? The official had previously passed on tips that proved out. And, of course, I was not about to write the story, whatever it was, without getting somebody in authority to confirm it and permit use of his name if necessary. So I met with the official in a hash house across the street from FBI headquarters. I had a martini; after looking around, he ordered a Bloody Mary. "It looks like plain tomato

Reflections

Manchester's first Eagle Scout has retired. Recognize him? Then try this: He was the only sports editor in Connecticut who also was a Sunday School superintendent, it was reported.

That make it any easier? During World War II, he was office manager for the Rationing Board. He went into religious news publications where he became director of the Lutheran Council in the USA News Bureau.

Erik W. Modean has retired. It says so right here, in The Lutheran, the magazine of the Lutheran Church in America. The copy came to us from Bob Ahlness of 45 Castle Rd., who is general agent for the Lutheran Brotherhood Life Insurance Society. He thought we would like to let Manchester know about Erik's retirement.

We didn't have to tell Eva Trueman at 33 Severn St. about it, she's Erik's sister, and she provided the photo that accompanies Reflections. Erik told us a little bit about his retirement and about his reflections of his old home town in a telephone conversation Friday from his New Jersey home.

We remember Erik when he was sports editor of The Herald, because we used to bring in basketball scores to him, up on the old second floor of the Bissell St. side of our plant. He was sports editor from 1928 to 1941, when he took the Rationing Board job. Erik told Albert P. Stauderman, in part on moral grounds, but let that pass. What that creep wanted me to do was also journalistically impractical. Even a reporter still wet behind the ears doesn't try to check evidence with which to confront other sources. You still can't, or shouldn't, print hearsay. It was a nasty story, but I'd have pursued it had my informant shown me material in an FBI file reporting that the officials involved had been in contact, with, say, a known Soviet spy. Thus, I was not surprised at the contents of the late J. Edgar Hoover's private files, released by the Justice Department in response to a Freedom of Information Act request. There is reference after reference to allegations that various politicians, government officials and celebrities were homosexuals. So what else is new? Every reporter in town knew that Hoover and some of his minions suffered from an obsessive preoccupation with homosexuality, that they were avid collectors of rumors about sexual escapades of well-known personalities. They also suffered from the evil naivete of the poolroom yokel. They actually believed the press would publish such trash. Their most notorious effort was to smear the late Dr. Martin Luther King. They would all but hold a reporter down trying to get him to listen to tapes produced by bugging King's hotel room. But it was juicy stuff, they argued, King was an itinerant and voracious ladies' man. Maybe so. But a man's private life is news only if it adversely affects his performance in a public job. Ugh. One's inebriated squirm. No wonder the crazies who want to raze the FBI building and replace it with a parking lot have gotten so much attention. Under Hoover and his sleazy little kitchen cabinet, the FBI went looking for it by its unremitting voyeurism in the name of national security. A look at Hoover's private files reminds us all that it almost happened here.

Reflections

What will Erik Modean do now? Free lance writing, for sure, he says, and he will be a consultant from his Maywood, N.J. home. He will be working at his profession in retirement. "I'll get to Manchester once in awhile. There are still relatives and a good many friends there. I once had hoped to retire to Manchester, and maybe someday I'll be back," he said.

He'd like to see the modern plant that produces your Herald. "I took a tour of the Milwaukee Journal plant recently, and I was flabbergasted; no linecuts, no turtles, no hot lead. I was lost. You'd be lost here, too, Erik. It isn't the same old plant; it's modern, it's all-electrical, it's clean. But you won't remember many faces.

There's a lot of fascinating reading in The Lutheran story by Stauderman. "Nobody runs a convention newsroom more efficiently than Erik Modean. That tribute came from Dr. George Cornell, Associated Press religion writer. Erik has been called the 'dean of the Lutheran press corps' and a 'tireless traveler on church missions.' The American Lutheran Church's Capital University conferred upon him a Doctor of Literature and cited Erik as an "ornament to the honorable profession of journalism." Dr. Modean was a founder of the Religion Newswriters Association, edited its newsletter and was president of its council.

Mr. Woodward Waesche, the bass soloist, was warmly received after the long and taxing bass recitative and aria. It was evident that the aria in particular extends Mr. Waesche's voice to the limits as he was called on to sing the powerful question "But Who May Abide The Day of His Coming." For me, the most concert, it was difficult to hear the woodwinds and brass sections, partly because they were used sparingly in the Baroque orchestra, mostly for orchestral coloration; but also because of the occasional overbearing string playing. The trumpet playing in the bass aria, "The Trumpet Shall Sound," was flawlessly played by Mr. Gary Patridge. The overall excellent playing and interpretation of tempos and styles is a credit to the conductor's hard work and knowledge of music.

The entire musical organization continues to grow and mature making it possible to share quality musical experiences with those who are interested enough to support their endeavors. Michael A. Orfitelli exciting soloist of the four was the countertenor, due in part to the rarity of the existence of countertenors (an exceptionally high male voice). However, Mr. Kenneth W. Fitch added to the unique voice, the qualities of clarity and sensitivity as he sang a part often sung by a woman's alto voice. The expressive nature of his voice and intense power lent itself to the beautiful aria "He Was Despised," as well as his other items. The soprano soloist, Ms. Marilee Gordon Plaks had a little light pleasant voice which was delightfully easy to listen to; more than likely due to her excellent control. The opera that begins the work is beautiful setting which starts off slowly and gives way to a lively fugal section. It was apparent from the opening section that the orchestra is still plagued by some intonation problems, especially in the cellos and basses, which were at times painfully unattractive and is the thinner upper register of the violins. Despite this problem, Dr. Heller continues to train and polish as was exemplified by an overall controlled style and discipline which has become increasingly more prevalent with each performance of this group.

Certainly the chorale deserves commendation for the job it did. Mr. Gillegie has done an outstanding job in obtaining the level of control and style apparent in the chorale. The clear diction and accuracy of even the most florid melodic passages combined to make their contribution to the performance most enjoyable. The opening chorus in Part Two, "Behold the Lamb of God" was beautifully sung and the fourth chorus, "All we like sheep" had to be one of the most musically tasteful offerings of the group all night, from its fast moving passages to the passion and warmth of its closing thoughts.

The soloists for the evening added tremendously to the work of the larger groups. The first soloist, Marshall Cooper, a tenor, sang, "Comfort Ye My People" and "Every Valley Shall be Exalted," both popular items from the "Messiah." In these and later segments, Mr. Cooper did a fine job, but seemed uncomfortable in the lower range of his voice despite the robust baritone quality he seemed to display.

'Messiah' performance called a significant gift

Michael A. Orfitelli exciting soloist of the four was the countertenor, due in part to the rarity of the existence of countertenors (an exceptionally high male voice). However, Mr. Kenneth W. Fitch added to the unique voice, the qualities of clarity and sensitivity as he sang a part often sung by a woman's alto voice. The expressive nature of his voice and intense power lent itself to the beautiful aria "He Was Despised," as well as his other items. The soprano soloist, Ms. Marilee Gordon Plaks had a little light pleasant voice which was delightfully easy to listen to; more than likely due to her excellent control. The soprano aria, "He Shall Feed His Flock," was tastefully done as was the final soprano aria, "Rejoice Greatly, O Daughter of Zion," she was joined by the violins who were called upon for some difficult playing in the tall and response type accompaniment. Throughout most of the

The opera that begins the work is beautiful setting which starts off slowly and gives way to a lively fugal section. It was apparent from the opening section that the orchestra is still plagued by some intonation problems, especially in the cellos and basses, which were at times painfully unattractive and is the thinner upper register of the violins. Despite this problem, Dr. Heller continues to train and polish as was exemplified by an overall controlled style and discipline which has become increasingly more prevalent with each performance of this group.

Certainly the chorale deserves commendation for the job it did. Mr. Gillegie has done an outstanding job in obtaining the level of control and style apparent in the chorale. The clear diction and accuracy of even the most florid melodic passages combined to make their contribution to the performance most enjoyable. The opening chorus in Part Two, "Behold the Lamb of God" was beautifully sung and the fourth chorus, "All we like sheep" had to be one of the most musically tasteful offerings of the group all night, from its fast moving passages to the passion and warmth of its closing thoughts.

The soloists for the evening added tremendously to the work of the larger groups. The first soloist, Marshall Cooper, a tenor, sang, "Comfort Ye My People" and "Every Valley Shall be Exalted," both popular items from the "Messiah." In these and later segments, Mr. Cooper did a fine job, but seemed uncomfortable in the lower range of his voice despite the robust baritone quality he seemed to display.

Mr. Woodward Waesche, the bass soloist, was warmly received after the long and taxing bass recitative and aria. It was evident that the aria in particular extends Mr. Waesche's voice to the limits as he was called on to sing the powerful question "But Who May Abide The Day of His Coming." For me, the most concert, it was difficult to hear the woodwinds and brass sections, partly because they were used sparingly in the Baroque orchestra, mostly for orchestral coloration; but also because of the occasional overbearing string playing. The trumpet playing in the bass aria, "The Trumpet Shall Sound," was flawlessly played by Mr. Gary Patridge. The overall excellent playing and interpretation of tempos and styles is a credit to the conductor's hard work and knowledge of music.

Blood clot or heart attack?

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—What's the difference between a heart attack and an embolus? When a person is put on Coumadin does this mean that he has had a heart attack? How can a blood clot go through the heart, enter the lungs and not be called a heart attack? I am talking about the case of my son. I am very worried about him.

No one knows where the embolus came from. Can you guess? His legs were minutely examined, and it was stated that many clots originate in the legs but yet there is no sign of them on an examination.

My son has a job and travels in his own car or in airplanes. He has been instructed to exercise every 45 minutes. I presume to get the circulation going in his legs.

He was told that he only needed to take Coumadin for three months and that period is almost up. Yet a friend of his has been on Coumadin for the past 10 years; is that possible?

I lost my wife from a heart attack even though she had been taking the same medicine for blood thinning. The doctors restricted my wife's activity very severely, yet the doctors encourage my son to do things such as going out to drive golf balls. Any light you can shed on this would certainly be appreciated.

Dear Reader—Used in the sense of your son's problem, an embolus means a blood clot. It's clear from the rest of your letter that the doctors think that the blood clot or blood clots went to the lungs. Most blood clots of that type do form in the veins in the legs. Your son's doctors are perfectly correct in saying that they can examine the legs and not be able to detect the presence of a clot within one of the deep veins.

The clot that breaks loose from any location follows that blood stream just like a log going down a river. It rides with the blood stream through the right side of the heart. The blood comes out of the heart and goes to the lungs. The clots lodge in the lungs and never get back to the heart.

A heart attack is entirely different. Your wife had an obstruction in one of the arteries to her heart muscle. The similarity is that both can cause chest pains. Since it is important to keep the blood thinned in both cases, it is common to use anti-clotting medicines such as Coumadin in the treatment of both conditions.

A message of thanks from a little girl

Editor's Note: This essay was written by a sixth grader in one of Manchester's public schools. The teacher thought the message was so moving that she asked The Herald to print it.

"Thanksgiving" "This is a true story because it really happened to my family last year. "My mother was out of work for over four months and times were very hard for her to meet all bills and food she bought was just what we needed. She was very worried about having a nice meal on the table for us. She couldn't afford to buy a turkey with all the trimmings but she said what she would get would be just as good because Thanksgiving is not a day for eating turkey and all sorts of goodies, but most important was to be thankful that we had food on the table, a roof over our head, and our health.

"Mom was sick but she said it could have been a lot worse. She said with people starving all over the world and dying from war, we should be thankful that we were in peace and had food on the table.

"A few days before Thanksgiving our church came to our house with a nice ham, fruits and vegetables and we had a nice dinner. "I am thankful for all those people who helped us. Now whenever there is a collection of food for the needy and now that mom is back to work, she gives what she can to those who need food.

"I hope and pray that I never forget the lesson I learned from this gift. That we should be thankful that we live in a country, that there are people who really care and I'm thankful for that. "The End."

Buckland industrial

(Continued from Page One) had asked to see plans of the industrial park before the zoning hearing. This probably could not have been done before the December date. Beck and Pagano had filed a freedom of information complaint against both the town and the state for communication and information about negotiations with the J.C. Penney Co., which will be the major tenant of the park. Both complaints were dropped, however, when the town and state provided the attorneys with copies of written material dealing with the Penney negotiations. Weiss also said that the state's plans for I-291 may be more firm by the January date. The state agreed to relocate the highway to accommodate the industrial park. Home rehab program under way

Today is the first day that applications for the town rehabilitation loan program are being accepted. Marilyn Walsh, coordinator of the program, said that about five people picked up applications this morning. She was expecting several more people to come in during the afternoon. The program offers federally subsidized home improvement loans to residents who meet geographical and income limits. The idea of the program is to improve, or "rehabilitate," existing housing in a section of town. Money for the program will come from federal Community Development funds. Anyone interested in finding out more about the program or receiving an application should contact Miss Walsh, who works in the Human Services Department at the Municipal Building.

Monster hunters finding teapots

BOSTON (UPI) — What is hidden in the murky waters of the Loch Ness in Scotland? Teapots. Dr. Robert Ballard, a geologist from the Rhode Island Oceanographic Institution, said there's lots of debris in the lake including coffee residue dumped by boats and various "artifacts, such as teapots." "There seems to be more teapots in Loch Ness than anything else," said Ballard, quoted in the Boston Sunday Globe. Ballard said a National Geographic Society expedition he went on uncovered no trace of the so-called Loch Ness monster. He said he was interested mainly in studying the geology of the lake but an attempt was made to attract the lake's animals by pouring blood into the water and using fish as bait. Members of a different expedition to the lake this year, Dr. Robert Rines and Charles Wyckoff of the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, were to give a report in New York City today on their findings. They found no solid evidence of the existence of the creature, but would like to conduct further research. A member of the academy expedition, Martin Klein of Salem, N.H., wrote for a recent issue of Technology Review, an alumni magazine of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, that there is a large stationary object on the lake bottom more than 300 feet down. Klein said the object, discovered by sonar, "has a carcass-like shape," but "it would be wild speculation to make any assumptions about this target without further investigation."

Raymond L. Miller Gardens, a six-story highrise with 84 one-bedroom apartments for elderly single people, stands about half a block east of Main St. opposite the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. in East Hartford. Town officials and leaders of the Housing Authority dedicated the building Saturday afternoon.

Miller Gardens dedicated

The Raymond L. Miller Gardens elderly housing highrise off Main St., East Hartford, was dedicated Saturday afternoon. The six-story building housing 84 one-bedroom apartments brings the total number of elderly housing units run by the Housing Authority to 549, said Nick Giamalis, executive director. Miller was the president of the First Federal Savings during the years of the East Hartford based bank's most rapid growth. His widow attended the Saturday ceremonies at the highrise and spoke briefly. The authority built the highrise exclusively for singles. There are no couples in it. Of its 84 residents, about a dozen or more are men. The recently built Meadow Hill Apartments at 101 Connecticut Blvd. has 120 one-bedroom apartments designed for elderly couples. In the past, most units designed for single elderly people were inefficient, said Giamalis. So Miller Gardens is a first for East Hartford. Other buildings and complexes in East Hartford for the elderly are Shea Gardens with 50 units, Rockambeau Apartments with 50 units, Elms Village with 65 units, Heritage Gardens with 46, Highlands with 54, Hutt Heights with 30 and Daly Court with 30. The total of 549 units for the elderly are managed by the Housing Authority. The authority also manages 330 units of low-income and moderate-income housing. There are 150 units at Columbus Circle, 80 units at King Court, and 100 units at Hockanum Park. The units range from one to four bedrooms in size. The authority's waiting lists for all the housing, especially the elderly, are long. "We could refill (Miller Gardens) within two weeks," said Giamalis. "The need for this type of housing is increasing all the time," he said. Without the elderly housing built with state and federal funds, said Giamalis, "the elderly would be in dignity at all. They would be waiting to die in basements and attics." East Hartford is doing well by its elderly citizens compared to other state cities, he said.

Abandoned factory destroyed by fire

MERIDEN (UPI) — Firemen worked through the night dampening down embers from a spectacular blaze which started in an abandoned factory building and quickly spread to a nearby lumber yard. One fireman was treated for smoke inhalation at Meriden-Wallingford Hospital and later released. Fire Chief Robert Redican would not speculate on the origin of the blaze. The fire started in the block-long Charles Parker Co. lavatory factory on Hanover Street about 2 p.m. Sunday, and leaped over to the adjacent Lyon and Billard Lumber Yard, engulfing a storage shed. The factory was owned by Carabetta Enterprises. Huge swirling columns of black smoke could be seen for miles away. Traffic was snarled and rail service temporarily blocked as a result of the fire. Firemen spent the night hosing down the embers. Hundreds of onlookers covered the streets of downtown Meriden straining to see the blaze. Meriden firemen had help from several neighboring fire departments. A fire department spokesman said the fire caused "extensive damage" to the factory and lumber yard. He said firemen had trouble extinguishing the blaze "because there's so much wood, oil, and 'saint,' which keeps catching on fire."

Reilly celebrates freedom but controversy continues

FALLS VILLAGE (UPI) — While Peter Reilly celebrated his long-awaited freedom with friends this weekend, controversy continued to surround the bizarre 1973 slaying of his mother, Barbara Gibbons. Reilly paraded Saturday night with about 15 friends, including Pulitzer Prize winning playwright Arthur Miller, in the small village where his mother was killed three years ago. Most of the guests at Alexander's Inn were citizens from the community who formed a committee to support Reilly shortly after he was arrested on Sept. 29, 1973, on charges of murdering his mother, Barbara Gibbons. Miller did much to give the case national attention. Reilly, 21, was convicted of first degree manslaughter on April 12, 1974. Last March 25, he was granted a new trial on the basis of new evidence by Superior Court Judge John Spziale. A subsequent charge of manslaughter was dismissed against Reilly on Nov. 24 when statements were disclosed for the first time that placed Reilly eight miles from his mother's home at the time of her death. The statements made by an auxiliary state trooper and his wife were revealed by State's Attorney Dennis Santore who succeeded the original prosecutor in the case, John Biganchi, who died suddenly last August. Reilly said at the party in his honor that if the state police have a suspect in the case, he hopes they have the right person because he would not want anyone to go through what he did. On orders from Gov. Ella T. Grasso, the state police have reopened their investigation into the slaying. Thus far, spokesmen said police efforts have produced information that could further implicate Reilly.

Lobsters thriving among dredgings

NORWALK (UPI) — Lobsters the savory crustaceans who are scavengers, seem to thrive in areas of dumped dredge wastes, further complicating the controversy over the Army's dumping of dredging wastes in Long Island Sound. According to an article in the New Haven Register Sunday, lobsters like the underwater disposal sites and congregate at them in great numbers. Lobstermen say the Eaton Neck dump site, eight miles from Norwalk, is a haven for the delicious crustaceans. Although the site has not been used for dumping for several years, the lobstermen say their prey have set up shop in the area and should be there for sometime. Lobsters, scavengers by nature, are extremely territorial and have a tendency to stay in one place for a long time. Lobstermen feel the site, moved in a few years back and laid their eggs. "The site is a very valuable lobstering area, many lobstermen contend that it is the finest lobster fishing ground in Long Island Sound," the Register quoted David J. Fallon as saying. Fallon is the senior aquatic biologist with the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. Fallon said he was not sure that dumping by the Army Corps of Engineers was the reason for the large lobster population in the area.

Man killed in accident in Andover

A 45-year-old Willimantic motorist died Sunday night after suffering serious head and chest injuries in a two-car head-on crash on Rt. 6 in Andover, State Police said today.

Rollard Roy died at Windham Community Memorial Hospital about an hour after the 6:18 p.m. traffic accident, authorities said.

Two passengers in Roy's car, as well as the other driver involved, Randall A. Dumais, 28, of Willimantic, suffered lesser injuries and were treated at the Windham hospital, police said.

Preliminary investigation indicates that Roy's eastbound car crossed into the westbound lane of Rt. 6 near a hill crest between Burdick Brook Rd. and Wales Rd., police said.

Dumais, driving west over the hill, was unable to avoid the head-on collision, police said.

The Andover Fire Department was summoned to help extricate occupants of Roy's car. Andover and Columbia ambulances were used to take the injured persons to Windham, police said.

State Police at Colchester are seeking information in investigating the accident. Anyone with knowledge of the crash is asked to call Trooper Coleman, telephone 537-2321 or 643-6904.

Roy was one of seven Connecticut residents killed in weekend traffic accidents. The other fatalities:

• Barry Post, 35, a Hamden police sergeant, killed early Saturday in a one-car crash on Interstate 91 in North Haven.

• Raymond Parks, 27, of Darien, who died late Friday after being hit by a car while he was crossing the Merritt Parkway in Norwalk.

• David J. Deitz, 33, of Waterbury, killed in a two-car crash early Saturday on Rt. 8, Harwinton.

• Marie Pankowski, 39, of Darien, killed Saturday night in a two-car crash at a Stamford intersection.

• Two elderly nuns, killed Friday night when they were struck by a car while walking near St. Mary's Rest Home on Steele Rd., West Hartford.

The two sisters of Mary were identified as Mary Jude Martin, 61, and Mary Aileen O'Connor, 72. A third sister, Mary Laurin Fortin, 61, was critically injured but St. Francis Hospital officials said she is expected to survive.

New rules on building take effect

Vernon residents are reminded by Charles Vassilopoulos, town sanitarian, that, effective Oct. 25, building regulations prohibit building conversions to year-round use or additions to buildings unless certain provisions are met.

The inspector said all current requirements of the public health code for the installation of subsurface sewage disposal facilities have to be satisfied before building permits are issued.

He said there is an exception to allow a single room addition as long as it doesn't decrease the area available for sewage disposal.

He said building permits will not be issued until the plans for necessary sewage disposal systems are approved.

Vassilopoulos also reminds those who have home swimming pools that they should take proper precautions in the handling of hypochlorites and their storage until the next pool season.

He said while calcium or lithium hypochlorite and chlorinated compounds (swimming pool chemicals) in powder, granular or tablets form are not in themselves combustible, they could be mixed with foreign materials such as household products including ammonia, paint products, solvents, acids or dirty rags.

He said, the pool products should be stored in a cool, dry, clean and well-ventilated area in the original container and in a building away from the house.

Police said rocks and bricks were found inside the buildings. The monetary amount of damage has not been determined.

Hunting down a book

John Keney of 82 Deerfield Lane, South Windsor, hunts down a book in the stacks at the South Windsor Public Library.

Snow, ice must be cleared

Vernon and Rockville property owners or occupants are reminded they are responsible for clearing snow and ice from the walks in front of their property, and sanding if necessary, after every winter storm.

Ronald Hine, public works director, said the town ordinance on snow removal will be enforced by the police department. The ordinance provides for a fine of not more than $50 for violations.

Hine said his department removes snow from walks or town-owned property but the department has no other responsibility.

Private contractors or residents plowing driveways are urged not to pile the snow in the roadway.

The department has placed roadside barrels filled with salt and sand in 30 different problem spots, Hine said. In addition, sand and salt mixture is available to residents at two locations: The recycling station on West St. and at the corner of Tunnel Rd. and Warren Ave. This service is for private use only.

Hine also urges motorists to use caution in driving. He said roads may become dangerous even when there is no snow, because water running into roads may turn to icy patches.

Rick Monday hot item on baseball trade mart

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Suddenly, Rick Monday, the fellow who kept the American flag from being burned, has four clubs at the winter baseball meetings all fired up trying to get him from the Chicago Cubs.

Baseball

The Dodgers, Orioles, Phillies and Brewers all are after the 32-year-old first baseman-outfielder, who won national acclaim by keeping two individuals from putting a cigarette lighter to the flag at Dodger Stadium last April 25.

Wrigley Field, but Bob Kennedy, recently named the Cubs' new general manager, doesn't feel they should give up two of their quality players for even such an imposing one as Luzinski, who had 16 RBIs, 21 home runs and a .304 batting average with Philadelphia last season.

Monday hit .272 with 32 home runs and 77 RBIs last season, his fifth with the Cubs and 10th in the majors. The Cubs would like 27-year-old lefthander Doug Rau from the Dodgers if they do trade Monday but the Dodgers don't want to part with the National League's No. 2 ERA pitcher of last season, Rau compiled a 16-12 record with a 2.57 earned run average.

The Cubs, who have a new manager in Herman Franks, are interested in the Expos after playing out his option. Monday could take over at first base, held down by Dick Allen last season. For their part, the Cubs could use Luzinski's big bat at
