Jon C. Hawthorne, left, and Gerald Calvi look through the boxes of toys that the Manchester Police Union has gathered this year. The union, of which Hawthorne is vice-president and Calvi is recording secretary, has purchased toys for five years to be distributed each Christmas to Manchester's needy children. The gifts have been given to Head Start, the local Welfare Department and Child and Family Services for distribution to about 100 youngsters. (Herald photo by Pearson)

Rate hikes

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The attorney for 10 Connecticut cities and towns waging a fight to prevent a rate hike by Northeast Utilities has filed a report listing six reasons why the hike should be turned down by the Public Utilities Control Authority. The report said Northeast is listing as assets properties soon to be sold; has phased out a plant still includes costs of running it on its lists of costs; has overestimated its fossil fuel consumption; and is making more money on secondary operations than reported.

Scientists turn King Arthur's table

LONDON (UPI) — Scientists have turned the table on the legendary King Arthur by announcing the round table on display in Winchester Great Hall could not possibly have been used by the fabled king and his knights.

An American tree expert, scientists from Harwell Atomic Research Establishment, experts on paint and others on Medieval carpentry have been working on the table in an attempt to prove or disprove the Arthurian legend.

The researchers announced this week that their studies indicated the table was probably made for King Edward III in about 1336, several hundred years after King Arthur was said to have lived.

Edward instituted the Order of the Garter, Britain's highest order of chivalry, in fulfillment of a vow to restore the round table of King Arthur.

Scholars have never agreed on the existence of King Arthur. Early Welsh literature and other ancient documents depict him as a great Celtic warrior who defeated the Saxons around the year 500.

The table, 18 feet in diameter and weighing 1.25 tons, has been in the Great Hall at Winchester for hundreds of years, and a great attraction to tourists.

"We have not destroyed a legend, because it was never more than fantasy that King Arthur sat in the Great Hall," said Martin Biddle, director of the prove or disprove the Arthurian legend. Winchester Research Unit. "We have created a legend by showing that the table is connected with one of England's greatest Medieval kings at the height of the age of chivalry."

Tree-ring tests made by Prof. A.C. Barefoot of North Carolina State University indicate that one of the pieces of timber used in the table was felled in 1336.

Radio-carbon tests carried out by atomic scientists showed another piece of timber was felled around 1330.

Social Security

Q. I'm 67 and have almost no regular income, but I do have a home and a car. Will that keep me from getting SSI payments?

A. If your home and car are of reasonable value, you may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. Call or write any Social Security office for more information.

Q. I get a disability pension from my company, but Social Security turned me down for disability payments. How come?

A. The rules for Social Security in deciding whether a person is disabled differ from rules in some other government and private disability programs. People who qualify under another program may not be eligible for Social Security disability benefits.

Q. My daughter is 16 and has a severe kidney ailment. Since she has never worked and neither my wife nor I get Social Security benefits, is there any way my daughter can get help from Medicare?

A. If either you or your wife has worked long enough under Social Security, Medicare can help pay the bills for your daughter if she has permanent kidney failure. Call or write any Social Security office for more information.

Q. My aunt is 81 and will soon enter a nursing home. Who should handle her Social Security payments if she is no longer able to?

A. A representative payee may be needed to handle your aunt's Social Security benefits in her best interest. You or some other relative or responsible person should discuss the matter with the people at any Social Security office.

Q. I'll be a December bride. I already have a Social Security card. Should I report my new name to Social Security?

A. Yes. It's important that your earnings both before and after the wedding be correctly credited to your record. Call, write, or visit any Social Security office to get a form for making the change. You will get a Social Security card showing your new name and the same number you now have.

Rehab loan program has broad implications

The rehabilitation loan program is one that will affect more than just the residents who apply for loans through the program.

"One of the best things we've ever done," is how Carl Zinsser, a Republican member of the Board of Directors, described the program at a recent board meeting.

And if the program lives up to its full potential, there seems little doubt that Zinsser's words will be accurate.

The program will not only provide low-cost home improvement loans to some Manchester residents, but also business for town banks, jobs for a depressed construction industry, and an improved appearance for the community.

The program is funded through Community Development block grant monies and provides subsidized home improvement loans to residents who meet certain income and geographical requirements.

The purpose of the program is to help rejuvenate existing neighborhoods through improvements to homes.

Residents who are accepted into the program may go to their bank and receive a home improvement loan at the full interest rate. Part of that rate, however, is paid through the federal funds provided for the program.

Thus, the bank gets its full allotment, but the borrower

Health inspector chastised for tile floor demand

Where are we living? Are we living in a back woods southern town where an egotistical rebel sheriff pushes the townspeople around and tells them to do things on just the premise that "he told them to."

This letter concerns the article in the Dec. 16 Herald in which John Juliano was told to file the wooden floor of his bakery by one such Health Department inspector. I for one think the inspector's reasoning should be an inspiration to us all. I for one was genuinely inspired. Mr. Juliano is now trying to get all or part of the $7,000 he cost him, reimbursed by the town.

Who the hell do these inspectors think they are? Possibly some might have a feudal perversion for power a la Adolph Hitler. Some others might know what their jobs warrant. I grew up in the neighborhood of Juliano's Bakery and Pizzeria and it holds some happy memories of my youth. I will remember the days of bread baking in the ovens, of Mr. Juliano kneading the dough on the wooden tables that stood on those wooden floors of the bakery. That bakery is one of Manchester's last links to a heritage of family businesses that put this town on the map and that has not been destroyed by, to quote Ms. Ferguson, "overzealous" officials.

An owlsh editor's notebook

Here are a few items left on our last minute Christmas shopping list.

For President-elect Jimmy Carter: The Acme Superjet Campaign Promise Eraser. Guaranteed to blot out of the voter's minds any statements made prior to Nov. 2, which he can't afford at 1977's prices.

For President Ford: Snow for his last visit, Colo., ski vacation as President.

For Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo.: Snow so he won't seriously push his demand that President Ford declare Vail a disaster area. After all it is bad enough the taxpayers have to pay to haul the stuff away without having to pay for snow for a ski resort. It would be cheaper to move the skiers to upper New England where the weatherman is promising snow this week.

For Congress: A new code of ethics. It seems the current one has some problems in that everybody subscribes to it but no one really practices it. Some congressmen have objected to an outside group devising and enforcing a code. But then again who in Congress do you think would really come up with an effective one. Wayne Hays, where are you?

For Ralph Nader: A telephone call from Plains. We think he and Billy Carter could get something going concerning the honesty and truthfulness of plastic Christmas trees.

For women's libbers: Tape recorders so they can play back and listen to some of the more silly things they have been saying. For example, last count, we were told for the 78th time in 1976 that men can't get pregnant. Yet to our knowledge none claimed they could.

For television networks: A new rating system based on the number of people who are not watching television at all — especially those who have their sets on just in case there might be something interesting or a miraculous original show for a change.

And our compatch special this week is our gift to the single young men in our community who have, thus far, survived Leap Year.

Marriage teaches you loyalty, tolerance, understanding, perseverance and a lot of other things you wouldn't need if you'd stayed single.

Local contractors are likely to get much of the work. This may help boost an industry locally that has not exactly been leading a resurgence in the economy.

Marilyn Walsh, administrator of the Manchester program, has said that all companies seeking to do work through the program must provide references from past jobs. This should prevent the poor construction work that has been reported in Farmers Home Administration-financed houses.

Local bankers have agreed to work with the program and have helped establish some of the guidelines, as did discussion sessions on the matter between the Board of Directors and Alan Mason, director of home services.

One banker, at a session on the program earlier this year, said, "I think it'd be super if all the banks in town made a joint announcement that they're involved in a program to upgrade housing in Manchester."

The formal announcement has not yet come, but the formal work has already begun. And if the program continues to be run as smoothly as it has thus far, it should be a great asset to the entire community.

The Herald's Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON Jimmy Carter faces no greater test of turning his campaign promises into performance than in the area of national health insurance.

During the campaign the President-elect indicated he was leaning in favor of a cradle-to-grave approach run by Uncle Sam and financed entirely by tax dollars, wiping out private health insurance firms. Since his election, however, Carter has become more fuzzy on the issue, saying recently he favors an "incremental" approach to health insurance — something not envisioned in his pre-Nov. 2 rhetoric.

Carter has also stated his intent to give the nation a balanced budget by 1980, a trick that would be extremely difficult to pull off after implementing a comprehensive federal health system.

In the face of Carter's hedging, the Committee for National Health Insurance — comprised largely of prominent labor leaders, blacks and liberal Democrats — is doing its best to keep his feet to the fire.

"One of the greatest boaxes of this century," said the group's chairman, Leonard Woodcock, in a handbook just released here, "is the statement that national health insurance will cost $50 billion, $80 billion, $100 billion a year — or some other gigantic sum which neither the federal government nor the nation's taxpayers can possibly afford. Such statements are 100 per cent bunk."

Woodcock, who is president of the United Auto Workers as well as a leading candidate to the Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, added that "the truth is that national health insurance will not cost the American people one penny beyond what they are now paying for health care...costs will be shared by all citizens on an equitable basis."

Virtually everyone in a position to know here believes the real issue no longer is whether there will be national health insurance, but what form that insurance will take and when it will be implemented. There are now five major proposals being considered, ranging from one sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Rep. James C.orman (D-Calif.) which would give the government the largest role, to a bill that would just provide "catastrophic" cost coverage for all families.

The Kennedy-Corman measure is the one supported by labor and the one closest to the Democratic platform on which Carter ran. The proposal supported by the American Medical Assn., on the other hand, would require employers to offer workers a standard benefit plan and to pay at least 65 per cent of the premium costs. It would preserve the private insurance system and employ participation would be voluntary.

Although, as Woodcock noted, some very scary dollar figures have been thrown around, a newly released analysis by the Department of HEW indicates that the added cost of American health care would be the sorry way of Britain's socialized system.

"In Great Britain, the amount of money to be spent for health care is a political decision," an AMA spokesman, Chesley Wilson, told Scripps League Newspapers. "The same thing could be expected to happen here, with health care competing with defense and other major needs for tax dollars. Service inevitably would suffer."

It is true that medical emergencies financially destroy thousands of American families each year. The United States is the only industrialized country without some form of national health insurance system to prevent such tragedies.

Some form of national system will be — and should be — forthcoming. But it is to be fervently hoped that the private sector will still be pulling most of the strings. Otherwise — if you like what Uncle Sam has done to solve the energy crisis, you'll love what he'll do for your health.

Thanksgiving

A poem

If I were a turkey on Thanksgiving Day,

I would move my little tush and run away.

But if I were caught how gruesome it would be

With everyone taking and eating pieces of me.

But if I managed to get caught,

They'd chop off my head and I'd be bought.

I know some day it will have to happen.

After seeing kids wiping their faces with a napkin,

Some time I'll be in someone's oven being roasted.

While kids are having bread that's toasted.

Growing Older

Advertisers neglect 22 million buyers

By Law Cetta

This one takes the cake! A consultant panel of the National Advertising Review Board assures us solemnly that "the elderly are portrayed fairly and realistically in national advertising."

Translation: When senior citizens are used for background in ads and TV commercials, they are not pictured as dithering idiots. They are not shown as uglier or wild-eyed lunatics.

We thank the National Advertising Review Board. The prestigious board checks the content of national advertising for honesty and good taste. We think that it was very thoughtful of the board to make that study. As its publicity tells us, it "concentrated" many months of study and review on this question: "Does advertising, to any significant degree present old people in an unfavorable or derogatory manner?"

The board members worked up an answer which makes them glow with pride. The members, all important advertising and public relations executives, were part of the National Council of Aging. They interviewed newspaper and magazine editors. They talked with hundreds of companies which advertise extensively. They consulted with TV and radio networks.

The panel members themselves watched out for insults to us oldies in their individual reading and in their personal TV and radio viewing and listening. That way, they managed to select 150 print ads and the same number of broadcast commercials relevant to the study. None of the ads were deemed derogatory to the aged.

Now, dear readers, pretend that you are advertising copywriters. How long would you keep your job if you turned in copy "derogatory" to 22 million possible buyers? All right, don't answer that. It's a foolish question. Just think of the many millions of ads and commercials which appear. In how many ads are the buying concerns of oldsters mentioned even in passing?

We do come on strong and attractive in the field of stickums which keep our dental plates from falling out.

It may comfort the National Advertising Review Board to print media as a whole are equally guilty. There are few newspapers or national magazines which pay much regard to their readers. They are nice children. The real trouble is not the advertising neglect of older Americans. It's a matter of marketing neglect, manufacturing neglect, packaging neglect. Clothing makers are not designing wearables suitable for older women (or older men, either). Food processors aren't offering a wide variety of small-quality packages for elderly couples or widowed people.

It is safe to say that the business world will not consider us seniors unless we, ourselves, do something about the matter. Will readers of this column write to tell me what they think manufacturers should make especially and particularly for over-60s? Additional suggestions will be welcome covering special conveniences for seniors which we can't find in the stores.

P.S. To the Business World: Twenty-two million of us get an average of $200 per month in Social Security alone. That's $4.4 billion that we surely spend. What do you make that we'll want to buy?

Big and Little Sisters have Christmas party

The magic of the holiday season appeared Saturday in more ways than one at a Christmas party for the Big and Little Sisters program. About 75 participants in the program, which matches younger girls with an older female companion, met at the Emanuel Lutheran Church to enjoy the Christmas celebration. Santa Claus, played by Art Toff, made an appearance and distributed gifts and candy to the younger women in attendance. But the man who brought the loudest cheers at the party was Mr. Unusual, a magician whose bag of tricks ranged from multiplying ropes to handkerchiefs that changed color. Mr. Unusual, who also goes by the alias of Walt Umberfield, performed for about 20 minutes for the audience. The party included refreshments and, of course, Christmas carols.

Gale Cain, of the Youth Services Department, organized the party. She has been in charge of the Big and Little Sisters program, but is turning over that responsibility to Mary Deary, a student at Manchester Community College. Ms. Cain said that there are presently about 60 "matches" between big and little sisters, but there are still six or seven older volunteers needed.

The Social Action Division of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches helped pay for the cost of the party and also provided Santa, Mr. Unusual, and Sharon Dayton, a ukelele player who accompanied the carol singer.

FTC may study video games

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is trying to determine if those electronic video games so popular as gifts this Christmas can damage television picture tubes.

Officials said the Federal Trade Commission staff is exploring the possibility of a full-scale investigation to determine if there is some adverse impact by these games on TV receivers, one official said.

"We are conducting a staff investigation to determine if there is some adverse impact by these games on TV receivers," one official said. "But at this point there's no determination. You can't imply there's a problem just because there's an investigation. We're trying to be balanced."

Electronic Ping Pong, tennis and similar games are a hot-selling Christmas item due to recent mass production and technological improvements, which have brought the price of many of them down to under $100.

An independent newsletter, "FTC Watch," said the agency will approve and announce a full investigation later this week. It quoted commission sources as stressing that there is not sufficient evidence to show the games can in fact damage a picture tube, but the staff wants to make sur-

FTC Watch said more than 3.5 million of the video games have been sold, to the tune of $242 million a year.

Q. Some friends told me they had a free brake inspection on their car, compliments of the Department of Motor Vehicles. What's up? And can I get a free brake inspection?

A. Yes, if you happen to be stopped by one of the three MVD inspection teams conducting the federally funded random spot inspections around the state. The purpose of the program is to determine if the visual brake inspection is an adequate substitute for pulling a wheel.

If you are stopped by one of the inspection teams, you will be asked to participate on a voluntary basis, after you meet two conditions — your car passes the visual inspection and the odometer shows over 25,000 miles.

Q. There's usually some joker in a free offer. What's it really going to cost me?

A. Absolutely nothing. The inspection of your brakes will be at no cost to you. Q. OK, I'm convinced free is free. How do I proceed now?

A. If you are stopped at one of the roadside inspection and agree to participate, the MVD inspector will give you a list of official inspection stations where you can go to have the brakes checked. You will also receive a card for the garage to fill out and return to MVD.

Q. I'm now at the garage. What does the garageman do?

A. The mechanic will pull at least one wheel on the car, and inspect linings, cylinders, drums and other parts of the braking system. Q. Something's wrong with my brakes. Will MVD suspend my registration or license until I have them fixed?

(Questions may be sent to MVD INFO, Department of Motor Vehicles, 80 State St., Wetherfield, Conn. 06109. Motor Vehicle Department offices are open Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, 8:30 to 4:30; Thursday, 8:30 to 7:30; and Saturday, 8:30 to 12:30.)

Carter introduces latest appointees

Carter's new Secretary of Defense, Harold Brown; his new Secretary of Labor, Ray Marshall; and the second woman to be appointed to the Cabinet, Patricia Harris, who will be Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, stand after being introduced by President-elect Jimmy Carter at a news conference Tuesday afternoon in Princeton, Ga.

Special interests grumble about Carter choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With all but one Cabinet job filled, the Women's Political Caucus said Jimmy Carter is leaning heavily on "Mike Machos" chosen from an elite "old boys network." There were equally harsh rumbles from other interest groups Tuesday. The U.S. Conference of Mayors said the President-elect showed "a striking insensitivity to the problems of cities" in naming Patricia Roberts Harris as housing secretary. The National Association of Homebuilders agreed. AFL-CIO labor leaders publicly praised the appointment of Ray Marshall as labor secretary, but some said privately they were angry at being told so late in the game that Marshall — had been Carter's top choice all along. The head of the Consumer Federation of America, Carol Tucker Foreman, said her impact on the selection process was "minimal." She was consulted "frequently and effectively" on the secretary of agriculture, but not at all on the secretary of commerce and treasury, she said. While most interest groups failed to get all they wanted, the women's caucus voiced the most wide-ranging complaints. Gloria Steinem, Rep-elect Barbara Mikulski of Maryland and other caucus members told a news conference they have not even been able to get a hearing with Carter while establishment figures have slid into the top jobs. Even though Carter appointed two women to the Cabinet, Ms. Mikulski said, the overall Carter family smacks of the elite circle which traditionally holds power. "There is an old boys network that has worked before and continues to work and it is the same people calling each other up and recommending themselves," she said. "Pete Preppy says, 'I think I'll recommend Ted Terrifico.' And Ted Terrifico in turn recommends Mike Macho."

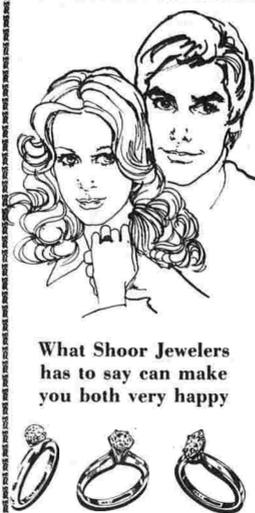

Connecticut's Bethlehem post office deluged with Christmas card mail

BETHLEHEM (UPI) — For the person who has everything, a Christmas card mailed from the little town of Bethlehem. By Christmas, more than 100,000 cards will have been cancelled and mailed by the post office staff. The postmaster, Mrs. Jean Majauskas, three part-time clerks and two rural route carriers. Bethlehem, named in 1739, is nestled in the rolling Litchfield Hills where the landscape is dotted with dairy farms, white-steeped churches and stone walls. The post office, just down the road from the village green, is bustling at Christmas time. "We have 33 rubber stamps which can be applied anywhere on the envelope except on the postage stamp. Each is two inches square and they all say, 'Bethlehem, Conn., the Christmas town,'" said postal clerk Mrs. Bernice Osterhoudt. The seals, designed by local artists, depict Christmas scenes such as the Madonna and Child, carolers, the Christ Child in a manger, the Magi, a Santa Claus, a Christmas tree, and the Guardian Angel. One larger than usual cachet, a star, was designed by the nuns at the Regina Laurus Priory, about a mile down the road. Many visitors flock to the priory at Christmas time to see the many-figured creche, the work of 18th century artists. "Our most popular cachet this year is the newest one designed by Connie Drainville of Woodbury — Santa with a sack of toys standing beside a tree and holding out a doll — but a lot of people ask for their old favorites," Mrs. Osterhoudt said. If you visit this town of 1,923 residents, you can stamp the cachets on your own cards, choosing among the red, blue, green and purple ink pads. If you send a card to be mailed and do not specify a cachet, the envelope will be stamped with the latest design. "Many people, especially stamp collectors, have written from all over the country saying they want the Dec. 23 postmark. We do them up ahead of time and keep them in a tray. We actually mail them Dec. 26," she said.

New England unemployment drops

BOSTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston Tuesday reported unemployment in New England during October dropped to 7.7 per cent. In the same month a year ago it was 11.1 per cent. In its report the bank said the jobs rate in Massachusetts in October was down to 7 per cent compared with 12 per cent in October 1975. New England's unemployment rate in October was the lowest since 1974 and was the first time since 1970 that the region's rate was lower than the nation's. Nationally the jobs rate rose to 7.9 per cent in October. The bank said the October statistics show the New England economy appears to be catching up with the national picture. "Despite continuing problems in such areas as construction, statistics indicate a substantially improved regional economy at the end of the first full year of economic recovery," the bank stated.

TAX SHELTERED RETIREMENT SAVINGS.
An ordinary worker could retire with $290,592.48 in his tax sheltered Heritage Savings IRA (Individual Retirement Account), based on today's interest rates and tax laws. The worker in our example would deposit the $1500 annual maximum at today's 7 3/4% interest from age 30 to age 65. The tax savings alone would put him $153,345.89 ahead—just because he used a Heritage IRA account. The Heritage IRA account sure is a BETTER WAY to save for retirement—$153,345.89 better in this case. These figures are for IRA accounts with a $1500 annual deposit maximum. Keogh accounts for the self-employed accumulate even more funds with a $7500 maximum. If you don't have a pension, ask at any of our offices about tax sheltered retirement savings. You pay no income tax on the money you deposit and none on the interest it earns. You are taxed only as you withdraw funds during retirement when you are likely to be in a lower tax bracket. DEADLINE DEC. 31. To qualify for IRA or Keogh you must act by December 31. Now is the time to arrange your tax sheltered retirement savings account.

Politics Pearson

By GREG PEARSON

A Manchester man has been named to the Inaugural Host Committee for President-elect Jimmy Carter's inaugural, scheduled for January 20. Stanley Weinberg, who along with his wife, Barbara, supported Carter from the beginning of the Georgian's campaign, will serve on the committee that will organize the inaugural events. "I will act as a liaison for the state in terms of the inauguration," Weinberg said of his responsibilities. He will host one of the inaugural parties for Connecticut guests. Much of his work will be done locally, but Weinberg will also be traveling occasionally to Washington to do work connected with the inauguration.

Here is a special two-part Yuletide trivia treat. Anyone answering both questions right deserves an extra candy cane in his or her stocking this weekend. Part one — Can you name the elected official in Manchester who has served the longest consecutive number of years? The answer to part one — Fred Peck, Republican registrar of voters, who was first elected to public office in 1964 as constable. He served as constable until elected to his present post in 1969. The answer to part two — Ed Tomkiew, who has served as town clerk since 1956. Even if you didn't answer both parts correctly, you still deserve the wish of a very happy holiday season. Merry Christmas to all!

Austere weddings ordered
SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — South Korean weddings, funeral rites and tombs must be toned down or indulgent families may face fines of up to $1,042, the Health-Social Affairs Ministry said today. The crackdown came after President Park Chung-hee remarked at a cabinet meeting that some tombs were so ornate they tended to cause public indignation and could affect national harmony and unity, the ministry said. The government adopted family regulations in 1973 that ban printed announcements of weddings and funerals, outdoor displays of flowers on such occasions, and gift-giving at such functions.

News for senior citizens

By WALLY FORTIN

Hi! The big excitement here at the center happens tomorrow when we celebrate our annual Christmas party. Action starts with a noontime meal/dinner with all the trimmings. This will be a change from the turkey and ham you will be having over the holidays. Santa Claus will be visiting us, and helping to pass out the Christmas presents. The afternoon will have a sing-along, with a surprise guest as we get into the Christmas spirit singing carols. The news here saddened everyone on Monday morning when we heard that we lost two of our members, Joseph Fontanella and Lyla Steele. Lyla was a very active member, and was doing an outstanding job in helping us with our card games. We send our sincere and heartfelt condolences to members of both families.

Setback winners
Action here at the center starts with last Friday afternoon when we had 35 players for our setback games with the following winners: Herbert Laquette, 137; Bernice Martin, 132; Sarah Wilson and Vivian Laquette, 130; Archie Houghtaling, 129; Al Chielman, Renee Maire, and Oscar Cuccupico, 122, and Grace Windsor, 121. We all had a great time at Restland Farms, and are already looking forward to next year.

New Year's dance
Here is an important announcement that our gala New Year's Dance will be held on Wednesday evening, Dec. 29. Action will start at 7:30 and around 10:30. We are planning on lots of excitement, noise, and goodies to eat, prizes, and lots of dancing to the tunes of Lou Joubert and his band. The students will not be with us as school is out, so therefore we will be planning on lots of excitement, noise, and goodies to eat, prizes, and lots of dancing to the tunes of Lou Joubert and his band.

Sterling bid lowest for police forms
Sterling Printing, of 485 E. Middle Tpk., is the apparent low bidder for the printing of reports forms for the Manchester Police Department. The firm bid $2,119 for the printing of 18 different forms needed by the town police. Quantities ranging from 1,000 to 5,000 were needed for each of the 18 forms. Sterling Printing's price was lower than ones submitted by Allied Printing and Prestige Printing, both of Manchester. Maurice A. Pass, director of general services, said that the bid is within the budget appropriation for the printing. "Actually, it's lower than what we had expected," he said.

Local Democrats outspent most GOP challengers

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Local Democratic candidates who won re-election to the State Senate and Assembly in 1976 outspent their Republican challengers, in one case by a ten-to-one margin.

In five of the six district races that Manchester residents vote in, the Democratic campaign cost more than the Republican. In the sixth, the Ninth Assembly District, the expenditure report from Republican candidate Marilyn K. England has not yet been received by the Secretary of State's office. Reports had to be postmarked by Dec. 17, 45 days after the election, to avoid a $50 late fee.

The reports filed at the Secretary of State's office show that Sen. David M. Barry ran the most expensive campaign. He spent $8,338.

But, the greatest difference in campaign costs was recorded in the Third Senatorial District.

Sen. George Hannon Jr., of East Hartford, a Democrat who won his second term in the senate, spent $5,204.54.

Challenger Anthony Stoppa, also of East Hartford, who did not become an active candidate until Oct. 1, filed an A-19a form, which means that his campaign did not spend or receive more than $500.

Hannon's expenses included a return of $607.04 to the East Hartford Democratic Town Committee at the close of the campaign.

The East Hartford senator received a $500 contribution from the Connecticut Insurance Political Action Committee of Hartford.

He also received $300 from the following: Matthew Moriarty, 75 Forest St.; the East Hartford Democratic Town Committee; and William F. Grant Jr., 700 Silver Lane, East Hartford.

A $250 contribution was given by Marshall J. Mott of West Hartford.

Sen. Barry, who won his fourth overall and second consecutive term to the senate, outspent his Republican challenger, David Cohen, by $1,700.

Cohen, who listed receipts of $4,447, spent $4,627.38 trying to unseat

Barry. The Republican from Glastonbury received a total of $1,042.20 from the Manchester Republican Town Committee and $300 each from the South Windsor and Glastonbury Town Committees.

Contributors to Barry totaled $6,495. The largest contributors were the Fourth Senatorial District Democrats and the Manchester Democratic Town Committee, which each donated $500.

Barry also received $250 from the Connecticut Education Association Political Action Committee of Hartford.

A spaghetti dinner held by the senator raised an additional $614. Barry also listed a total of $1 contributors who gave between $10 and $100, the largest total of smaller-donation contributors listed by any local candidate.

Barry's expenses included $904 for the publication of flyers and handouts and $883 for postal expenses.

The closest final expenses between two opposing candidates occurred in the 12th Assembly District, where Rep. Theodore Cummings, who was re-elected, outspent Republican challenger Walter Joyner by less than $200.

Cummings' expenses included final expenditures and receipts at $2,762.80. He returned a total of $920.63 to the Democratic Town Committee, meaning an actual expenditure of $1,842.17.

Almost half of Cummings' expenses, $831.20, were for newspaper advertisements.

Joyner received and spent $1,946.50, but he also returned money totaling $500, to the Republican Town Committee. Thus, his actual expenses were $1,446.50.

He received two contributions, totaling $500, from the Republican Town Committee. The Committee to Elect a Republican Legislator, which listed no address, contributed $250.

Cummings received $250 from the Democratic Town Committee, and $100 each from Arnold Lawrence, of 571 Porter St., and Carmine Filoramo, of 888 Parker St.

Beg Schroeder to stop playing drums

Charlie Brown (Donald Gaston) holds his ears as Snoopy (Lisa Perry) begs Schroeder (Jenny Kohut) to stop that nonsense on the drums and play some Christmas carols during "Charlie Brown's Christmas Problem," which was presented Tuesday at Verplanck School. Leslie Frasher was narrator for the play, which was written by Mrs. Mary Kaibfleisch, music teacher at Verplanck. Other members of the cast are Amy Burgess, as Lucy, Robert Raimondo, as Pippin, and Bart Carlisen, as Linus. The program included carols from around the world, and songs were sung by every grade. Illegal alien faces shoplifting charge

A 26-year-old man alleged to be an illegal alien from China and who has been living in Manchester was released today under a $3,000 bond by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service district office in Hartford.

Yan Chen Yan, who lists his address as 7 Lilac St., is scheduled to appear before a U.S. Immigration judge.

Investigation found that a Connecticut driver's license at the Lilac St. address was registered in Yan's name.

He has been in the country ever since apparently, Maloney said.

Yan's birthplace is listed as mainland China.

If Yan concedes to being an illegal alien, the judge would make findings of deportability, Maloney said.

If deported, Yan would have the option of designating the country to which he would be deported, Maloney said.

Yan came to the United States as a visitor on a travel document from New York City, but investigation found that a Connecticut driver's license at the Lilac St. address was registered in Yan's name.

Officials mum

Fireman reported suspended

Town officials would not comment today on a report that a town fire fighter has been suspended from duty for two weeks without pay for his refusal to fight a fire while he was off duty.

Town Fire Chief John Rivosa and Assistant Town Manager Charles F. McCarthy Jr., declined to confirm or deny that Albert Constantino of 174 Oak St. has been suspended from duty.

According to unidentified sources the town fireman disobeyed an order from Rivosa at the site of a major fire at a multi-family home next door to Constantino's home. Constantino eventually reported for duty after Oak St. was destroyed much of the three-story house and left five families homeless.

Rivosa said today "I still won't utter a word about the matter," which he called a "rumor." "I don't know who would have given out such information," he said. "I don't think my firemen would talk," in such matters.

McCarthy said he is constrained by the law from commenting on personnel matters. Such cases are handled "in-house" he said.

The Freedom of Information Act clearly defines the areas of confidential information which would apply to this case, McCarthy said.

Constantino could not be reached for comment today, but when contacted earlier this week, he became angry at the alleged charges and refused any comment, either to confirm or deny the report.

The suspension, reported to have taken effect Dec. 15 and Constantino has until today to appeal it. There will be no indication so far that he will appeal the suspension.

Constantino has been a member of the Town Fire Department for about six years.

He is also survived by a brother, Paul Hinder of Reno, Nev.; a sister, Mrs. Marion Haskell of Glocester; and three grandchildren.

The funeral and burial will be private. Watkins Funeral Home, 142 E. Center St., is in charge of arrangements.

There are no calling hours. The family suggests that any memorial gifts may be made to the Memorial Association of Greater Hartford, 310 Collins St., Hartford.

Cheney's Johnson

Johnson's high school graduation was during the depression when jobs were hard to find. Grateful for anything, Johnson found work with the First National Stores in East Hartford and worked his way up to assistant manager. During the later depression years, he returned to his vocation in production control at Hartford Special Machinery Co.

Expansion of vocational training programs in the public high schools is fine. "I'm all for it," Johnson said. But, he added that the high schools can't compete with the vocational training schools because, for one thing, the high schools can't afford all the necessary machinery and equipment that the vocational schools must have for their specialized training programs.

Johnson's enthusiasm and comments about vocational education are expressions of himself even though he minimizes his personal involvement with it.

His concern with the Cheney Tech students over the years is expressed through his own work. "We live in this world and we help our own being by helping others."

He sums up his time spent with Cheney Tech as having liked what he's done for 30 years. "I did my best as I saw it."

Apparently he will not put his drafting board and tools in moth balls. "I hope to do some more teaching, maybe in adult school or in correctional institutions, wherever they'll have me," he said.

Also, he and his wife, Mildred, plan to do some travel traveling — south for the rest of the winter, and then maybe west. "I've never been west of the Mississippi River," he said. Plans also include more time with their four children and three grandchildren.

Succeeding Johnson will be Gerald Blanchard, who has been a classroom teacher and counselor at Cheney Tech since 1974. Blanchard also coaches varsity basketball, and is assistant coach for junior varsity soccer and baseball.

A graduate of Central Connecticut State College, Blanchard taught at Albert I. Prince Technical School in Hartford and was also guidance counselor there before coming to Cheney Tech.

He was a student, and that has carried me through. The same idea applies to parents," he said.

Johnson said many of today's vocational education teachers cannot teach because they are not in the classroom. "I've never been west of the Mississippi River," he said. Plans also include more time with their four children and three grandchildren.

Commenting on vocational education and where it's at today, Johnson said, "It takes a war to shake things up, and ever since World War II the emphasis on vocational education has been there."

She wants Heidi home

By MAL BARLOW

It's been three months since I talked to my Heidi," said Mrs. Roberta Griffen of East Hartford. "For all I know, he's told her I'm dead."

Roberta, 21, was referring to her daughter, Heidi Ann Griffen, 4, and her ex-husband, John Griffin, 32, who she suspects is now somewhere in California with Heidi.

Her story began with her marriage to John when she was 17. Their daughter was born Nov. 10, 1972. "We were both too young," she said.

At one point during the marriage, she said she walked out on John. He sought and won a divorce March 4, 1975 from Judge John Alexander in Hartford.

The divorce decree awarded custody of Heidi to Roberta as well as $35 per week child support. Roberta was living with a girl friend in the Elmwood section of West Hartford. Heidi was attending a nursery school there during the day.

John lived nearby and was working. He took Heidi on Fridays and Roberta took her back on Sundays.

This system worked fairly smoothly until Roberta moved to Hartford. She said she was evicted from an apartment there March and did not have another place to go to care for Heidi.

She asked John to please take care of Heidi during the week while she set up another home, he agreed.

"He promised to return her," said Roberta.

She went to see Heidi where John kept her while she got another home. She last saw her in mid-April.

Then one day she phoned John's home to speak to Heidi and the phone was disconnected.

Dial-a-ride funded

By MAL BARLOW

The Town Council voted unanimously Tuesday night to fund a dial-a-ride program with $17,000 through June.

Councilman Henry Genga told the council the program could be rolling before the end of February.

It will provide rides within town to people 65 and older and to the handicapped. All they need to do is call a central dispatcher who will send the dial-a-ride vehicle to their door.

The council also authorized Mayor Richard H. Blackstone to set up a contractor supplying the service, the town's representative to the Greater Hartford Transit District, and a member of the town staff appointed by the mayor and council.

The committee will work with the mayor in the early stages of the program. It will monitor it and give advice to the mayor on how to run it and how to change it if necessary.

The $17,000 was taken from a contingency fund by the council. The mayor said $1,000 of it is for paper work required and $16,000 is to pay the contractor for the service.

Genga said 50 per cent of the total spent will probably be reimbursed by the federal Urban Mass Transit Act program. The other 50 per cent will be paid by the town.

Mr. Clarke, at the close of discussion Tuesday on the program, said he was pleased by the town's progress. She proposed a champagne christening of the program vehicle as it prepares to pick up its first rider.

Rovero quits HRC

In a surprise move, Aldo J. Rovero Tuesday announced in a letter to Mayor Richard Blackstone his resignation from the East Hartford Human Rights Commission.

Rovero was recently elected the commission's chairman. The former chairperson, Mrs. Marcella Fahey, has been appointed to the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities for a five-year term.

The mayor had renominated Mrs. Fahey for another term on the local commission ending December 1979, by a nationwide outcry from gamblers. They charged that tapping their winnings for immediate withholding taxes would take away money the gamblers would use in later races or games.

Race track operators also complained the withholding tax law would take away money the gamblers would use in later races or games. Suspension of the withholding tax law does not mean, however, gamblers will not have to pay federal taxes on their winnings.

Public bickering follows report on Peter Reilly investigation

HARTFORD (UPI) — A report on the state's handling of the Peter Reilly case has led to public bickering among members of Connecticut's criminal justice system.

Superior Court Judge Simon A. Cohen said Tuesday Chief State's Attorney Joseph T. Gormley "should keep his mouth shut" regarding the controversial case that brought calls by legislative leaders for a special prosecutor.

Cohen's blunt comment was in response to Gormley's contention the Monday judge acted hastily when he dismissed a manslaughter charge against Reilly, 21, in the 1973 slaying of his mother, Barbara Gibbons.

Cohen, in a telephone interview published by the New Haven Register, said of Gormley, "In a case that's pending I think he should keep his mouth shut."

"He's completely wrong," Cohen said. "Gormley's contention the Monday judge acted too hastily. The judge declined to expand on his remarks, according to the newspaper."

EHEA reacts strongly to overstaffing charge

The East Hartford Education Association reacted strongly to claims by the school system administration there are 17 too many teachers this year.

The number 17 was arrived at by dividing the number 25, considered the target size class in the system, into the number of students. The result gives the ideal number of teachers.

Update claims the time of year is wrong to make changes as children are settled and losses in their educational progress could occur.

The EHEA in its newsletter "Update" attacked the thinking behind the number 17.

"It's wrong because ratio staffing is not responsive to kids and the needs of kids," said an editorial in Update.

Bolton educators study reorganization of schools

By DONNA HOLLAND
Herald Correspondent

A feasibility study on reorganization of the Bolton school system, prepared by administrators for the Board of Education, was discussed by board members at a special meeting this month and will be discussed again at a special meeting Jan. 6.

The administrators said the community school board, administration and teaching staff are concerned about decreasing enrollment and increasing per-student expenditures. The study has been undertaken in response to those concerns and to provide information so the school board can make realistic, sound plans for Bolton High School's future.

The study begins with an introduction about Bolton High School, built in 1964 to house 450 students. This year there are 238 students enrolled at the school. The peak enrollment year was 1972-1973, when the enrollment totaled 301 students.

According to the administrators, there are two conditions which could affect the projections: The number of homes on the market because of employe transfers at United Technologies Corp. and planned subdivisions which could add 57 homes to the community by 1979.

The administrators listed several advantages and disadvantages of system reorganization from the existing kindergarten-to-Grade 8 and Grade 9-to-12 setup. Reorganization could bring either a kindergarten-to-Grade 7, Grade 8-12 system, or a kindergarten-to-Grade 6, Grade 7-to-12 system.

The advantages and disadvantages do not apply to both reorganization patterns equally.

Advantages listed

- Continued viability of the high school.
- Higher level community support for the high school's continued existence.
- Continuation of high quality and varied academic, athletic and extracurricular programs.
- More effective and efficient use of the high school staff and building.

Disadvantages:

- The level of development of Grade 7 and Grade 8 students might pose behavior and social problems as they interact with Grade 9-12 students.

- Parental dissatisfaction with age grouping, resulting in increased student withdrawal from the system.
- Some cuts in elective offerings for Grade 9-12 students.
- Cuts in sports programs for Grade 7 and 8 students.
- Elementary programs adversely affected by a decrease in the need for full-time teachers of physical education, music, art and industrial arts, and less efficient use of central physical plant.

Students subjected to homogeneous groupings at an earlier grade level than they are now.

- Younger students will require more structure than older students and any compromise will neither satisfy that need nor allow the flexibility normally given to more mature students.

The administrators said advantages can easily become disadvantages and vice versa, depending on many variables.

Times Farm Camp gets TV sponsor

HARTFORD (UPI) — Television Station WFSB will sponsor The Times Farm Camp which provides summer camping in Andover for about 500 underprivileged children each year.

The 66-year-old camp had been sponsored since 1920 by the Hartford Times, which ceased publication in October.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Dan Gold, senior vice president of Channel 3, and Norman Ruderman, president of the Almada Lodge-Times Farm Corp., a tax-exempt charitable corporation which operates the camp.

As sponsor, WFSB will be responsible for fundraising activities at the camp, including an annual public campaign, Gold said.

The camp's annual budget is $70,000 with a goal of $45,000 from the public campaign.

The camp is located on 275 acres in the towns of Coventry and Andover and offers two weeks of resident camping to 500 kids at no cost to the campers' families.

Gold said the station has asked the name Times Farm Camp be retained. "The Hartford Times meant a great deal to this community and we see this as one means of keeping its memory alive," he said.

Cemetery question goes to attorney

Vernon
A proposal concerning the consolidated care of Vernon cemeteries, presented by the Grove Hill Cemetery Committee, will be referred to the town attorney before being acted on by the Town Council.

The proposal was presented Tuesday night by Rev. John Lacey, chairman of the cemetery committee. Pastor Lacey asked the council at its last meeting to put the Elmhill, Barnforth Rd. and Dobson Ave. cemeteries under the care of his committee.

The committee now has three members and it was suggested it be increased to five and that it be responsible for the administration, operation and care of all town-owned cemeteries.

The committee further proposes that all funds now being used for the care and operation of Elmwood and the other two cemeteries be given to the committee in addition to the funds now being used in the care and operation of Grove Hill. The money would be used for the care of all four cemeteries.

These funds would include income from perpetual care, trust funds, the sale of lots and from town budget appropriations.

The committee also asks that the increased responsibility of the committee be given consideration in determining the appropriation for cemeteries.

The council is now starting charter revision procedures and the committee asked that the revised charter include the Town of Vernon Cemetery Committee and that it be a description of its responsibilities.

The Dobson and Barnforth cemeteries are not in active use but do need care. John Booth, who now serves as sexton of Elmwood, will continue to care for that cemetery but be under the supervision of the committee.

Vernon charter unit named

By resolution Tuesday night, the Vernon Town Council appointed a 15-member Charter Revision Commission and directed it to make a report and present a revised charter in one year.

The resolution stated that not more than one-third of the members could hold any other public office in town and not more than a bare majority could be members of any one political party.

Each of the town committee chairman named five members and Mayor Thomas Benoit suggested three others. They were all approved unanimously by the council.

Two of those appointed have served on previous charter revision commissions.

Seymour Lavitt (D) served as chairman of the Charter Revision Commission for the former City of Rockville.

John Daigle (R) was a member of the Charter and Consolidation Commission and twice served on Charter Revision Commissions.

Thomas Wolf (D) served as co-chairman of the original "Citizens Committee for Consolidation."

Mary L. Glenn and Christine Lattis represent the League of Women Voters; Bernie Cantor is a local Realtor; Stanley Sadak represents the youth of the town.

Others named were: Frederick McKone, Herbert Slicer, Edward Riordan, Ruth Ventura, Leonard Jacobs and Councilman Thomas Dooley.

Overbrook project delayed again

Vernon
The Overbrook Heights drainage project has hit another snag concerning easements needed before it can get under way.

In connection with this, the Vernon Town Council Tuesday night voted to spend up to $2,000 for engineering surveys and maps and other necessary data.

Leister Stillson of the Soil Conservation Service said 19 temporary easements had been obtained but three property owners refused to grant them.

But Town Atty. Martin Burke told the council permanent easements are needed in order to go ahead with the project.

Stillson said in other towns where similar work has been done, only temporary easements were obtained because the property owners will benefit from the work.

Burke said he disagreed "because you are trespassing on someone else's property."

The project in that area will cost about $55,000 and will be federally funded. The costs connected with obtaining easements will not be covered by the funds. The 19 property owners were willing to grant temporary easements but the council doesn't know what reaction there will be to the request for permanent easements.

The council discussed the problems with the three easements that haven't been obtained and Councilman Thomas Dooley said he would oppose paying the property owners. The property could be taken through condemnation if necessary.

Stillson said the engineers tried to dodge the project around those properties where easements haven't been granted, but he feared this could cause legal problems.

If the stream could be made narrower it might not be necessary to obtain easements but it was felt by the engineers that this wouldn't be feasible.

Stillson told the council that the money for the project has to be approved by September 1977 or it will be released to another town.

School superintendent asks six per cent budget increase

South Windsor
In the first of a series of Board of Education budget sessions this week, School Supt. Robert Goldman proposed a school budget for 1977-1978 of $7,545,800, $421,000 more than the current year.

Although the proposed budget represents nearly a six per cent increase, it still allows for elimination of five, and maybe seven teacher positions.

All proposed staff eliminations are at the elementary level.

According to the projected enrollment, classroom size is usually 22

students per class in kindergarten through third grade, 25 per class in Grades 4 to 6, and 25 per class in the middle and high schools.

According to these guidelines, Goldman would like to add two-and-one-half positions at the secondary level.

Also suggested is the addition of a Spanish class at the middle school level. However, according to school board member John Giordano, there is already a teacher in the system able to teach both Spanish and French, eliminating the need for another position.

Feds deny two bids for Bolton projects

Bolton has received notification from the Economic Development Administration that two of its five applications for federal funding of local projects under the Public Works Employment Act have been rejected. First Selectionman David Dreselly said Tuesday night.

The applications for Bolton Lake recreational development, costing $368,500, and for a solid waste transfer station, costing $223,530, were both rejected. The reason given for rejection was because the applications were incomplete and were incorrectly prepared.

The deficiencies in the applications prevented the federal bureau from accepting them so they were automatically rejected. There was no time for them to be corrected and resubmitted, Dreselly said.

Both applications were rejected by the Economic Development Administration on Dec. 3. The rejection notices were received by Dreselly on Dec. 7.

The other three applications still pending seek $970,000 for a gymnasium and site improvement at Bolton Elementary-Center School, $907,000 for a cafeteria-auditorium addition at Bolton High School, and $177,500 for a town garage and dog pound.

State office answers Bolton election query

Under a recently enacted state law the Secretary of the State Board of Selectmen was sought by Town Counsel Jerome Walsh to clarify the Board of Selectmen election provisions in the new town charter.

It is conceivable that the Board of Selectmen could consist of five unaffiliated persons. Also possible is a first selectman of one party and four selectmen of other parties.

Selectman Leon Rivers said many townspeople have the misconception that the town charter allows just three persons of one political party on the Board of Selectmen. The maximum from one party is actually four.

Coventry school board to decide bus contract

The Coventry Board of Education is expected to take action on the school bus contract at tonight's special meeting, board chairman John Lewis said today.

The Massachusetts Bus Co. has met the two conditions set by the school board after two narrowly avoided repossession attempts at Coventry school buses. The bus company was having apparent financial trouble and the finance company backing the bus company attempted to repossess the buses.

Arnold Elman, superintendent of schools, reviewed the required performance bond Tuesday, he said. The amount of the bond is $84,600. This amount covers the cost of continuing the contract for the remainder of the school year. The contract expires in June.

Receipt of the performance bond must meet the two conditions set by the school board two weeks ago for continuing the contract.

The board told the company to provide insurance certificates by Dec. 23 and a performance bond by Dec. 13 or the contract would be canceled Dec. 24.

The insurance certificates were provided last week.

After seeing the bond, Mrs. Lewis said the board has some question about the fact that the bond is made out to the board from the Sullivan Bus Co., not the Massachusetts Bus Co.

Edward T. Sullivan, the company's president, dissolved his partnership with Duncan McDonald this year. The change in company name resulted at that time. The board's contract is with the Massachusetts Bus Co., however.

Town Atty. Abbott Schwebel is reviewing the bond and will report his finding to the board executive session before tonight's meeting, Lewis said.

Indians handle Conard zone

By LEN AUSTER

While still not at the level it would like to be, Manchester High handled Conard High's zone defensive pressure more than sufficiently to dump the undermanned Chieftains, 77-50, in CCIL basketball action last night in West Hartford before an intimate crowd of 250.

"We played better but we do have a long way to go," stated Manchester coach Doug Pearson. "We made some good passes and got the ball underneath but you can't expect a complete turnout in one game."

Manchester last Friday had a terrible time against a zone defense by Hall High. "We have to continually get better. We're not satisfied yet. We have to box out better under the boards but we did play much better than our last game," the third-year Indian coach cited.

The victory hiked the Silk Towners' league and over-all ledger to 3-1 while the setback drops Conard to 1-3. The Chieftains were without the services of high-scoring guard T.J. Calabrese, injured in last Friday's loss to Windham, and forward Brian Ozark, out sick. "They (Conard) were very shorthanded and it made a big difference," Pearson underlined.

Manchester jumped to a quick 10-4 lead with Scott Hyde and John Pisch each netting four points. Conard made a run at the Indians reminiscent to the Hall encounter but the locals were able to withstand the flurry and lead at the turn, 18-12.

Pisch added 10 points in the second canto and 6-7 center Jeff Kierman six as the locals stretched the margin to 38-20 at intermission. The locals hit on 16 of 32 first-half field goal attempts while Conard was 10 for 35.

Best not enough as Hornets bow

Playing their best game of the young season but once again falling victim to a scoring drought, East Hartford's Hornets gave CCIL leading Hall High a scare before dropping a 61-53 basketball verdict last night in East Hartford.

Hall improved its record to 4-0 while the Hornets have dropped all four outings. East Hartford's next tilt is Thursday night at home against Enfield High. Led by the zone-riddling shooting of freshman Tyler Jones, who netted eight third-quarter points, the Hornets took a 42-37 lead into the final stanza.

Girl hoopsters bow

Dropping its second straight, Manchester girls' basketball team bowed, 69-41, to Conard High in West Hartford last night at Clarke Arena. The Silk Towners now sport a 2-2 record while Conard upped its mark to 5-0.

Eagles lose in thriller

Highly-touted Clay Johnson, shackled practically the entire game by personal fouls, came up with the vital rebound, his only assist of the night, which set up Mike Giorgio with the tie-breaking basket at the buzzer.

Giorgio's layup just beat the clock and gave a well-coached Holy Cross five of Waterbury a thrilling 60-58 win over East Catholic High at the Eagles' Nest before 650 fans in a battle of undefeated teams.

Penney consistent in staging upset

Penney's consistency and air-tight defense was the key in the Black Knights' 47-40 victory over previously undefeated Wethersfield High in a CCIL basketball tilt last night at the Eagles' hardwood before a sparse crowd of 300.

The Knights employed a strong 2-1-2 zone defense and in the first two quarters completely stymied and able to score only 14 points. Wethersfield used a man-for-man defense which also had a great deal of success. Penney did a little bit better on offense and led 22-14 at the half.

Turnovers, fouls hurt Tech again

Haunted by a bevy of turnovers and fouls, Cheney Tech fell to its fourth straight basketball setback, dropping a 68-48 verdict to COC foe Portland High last night at the Beavers' hardwood before a good crowd of 300.

Mike Fitzgerald led all scorers for Portland with 27 markers. Prasser had 10 points for Cheney with Dave Mills next best with eight.

Bingo helps beat Celtics

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI)—The fourth period of the Cleveland-Boston contest Tuesday night sounded more like a church social than an NBA basketball game.

"Bingo! Bingo!" screamed the public address announcer as Bobby "Bingo" Smith swished all six of his shots, including three of the 20-foot variety, to spark the Cavaliers to a 108-101 victory over the Celtics.

It was Boston's first visit to the Richfield Coliseum since the Celtics eliminated the Cavs from the Eastern Divisional final playoffs last season and 18,127 fans enjoyed every second of the victory.

After Boston had sliced a 14-point, third-period Cleveland lead to 87-86 with 9:01 left in the game, Smith flipped one in from the top of the key. He later connected on a 20-footer after the Celtics had moved to within one point, 91-90, with 5:08 left.

"It sure felt good to get those baskets. I missed some really easy ones earlier in the game," said Smith, who finished with 20 points.

Smith, who hit on four of 10 from the field before going on his fourth-period spree, put the game out of reach with a 20-footer and a driving layup after 15 Boston cut the lead to 101-99 with 1:46 left.

"Our running game depends on our offensive rebounding and that is what got us our big lead in the first half," added Smith.

Impressive Knicks not smooth but have found win formula

NEW YORK (UPI)—Red Holzman thinks his team "still has a long way to go." If so, the rest of the NBA may be playing for second place.

"From the point of the team knowing each other, we're still not smooth," Holzman said. "I still say we have a long way to go if we were 38-0, instead of 15-14."

It was New York's third victory in a row and fifth in total in five years Tuesday night, a 133-103 triumph over the Detroit Pistons.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Islanders are now where they figured on being all along—in a close battle for first place in the Patrick Division with the Philadelphia Flyers.

"I've anticipated this from the beginning of training camp," said veteran Ed Westfall, who scored two goals to back Billy Smith's goaltending Tuesday night in the Islanders' 3-0 shutout over the Boston Bruins.

The victory lifted the Islanders back into first place by one point over the idle Flyers, who had passed New York in the standings on Sunday night.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

A public service feature of the American Bar Association and the Connecticut Bar Association.

Marvin decided he had a good claim for damages after hurting his shoulder in a golfing mishap.

agreed to the terms upon which this membership was bestowed.

"It says we are not responsible for any injuries even if we are negligent."

However, the court pointed out that the "not responsible" clause was buried in a thicket of legal verbiage.

Such clauses are often used in sports and entertainment activities to protect the management against lawsuits.

Hence, the courts tend to disregard these clauses if they reasonably can.

In another case such a statement appeared on the tickets sold at a roller skating rink.

At a gym, a woman skidded on a slippery spot in the locker room.

On the other hand, such a clause will usually stand up in court if the message gets across successfully.

The contract language was perfectly clear. Furthermore, the woman had plenty of time to read it.

Rainbow dispute resolved

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The Order of Rainbow for Girls in Iowa will rejoin the international organization because officials have agreed to drop an unwritten "white only" rule.

Chamberlain said the parent organization will allow each chapter to "accept any and all petitions for membership or affiliation regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

"Since this new policy eliminates what we in Iowa considered as discriminatory membership practices,"

The 138 Iowa chapters already had begun to organize a statewide group after the international order suspended the assemblies because 12-year-old Michelle Palmer, of Indianapolis, a black girl, was initiated into the Indiana chapter.

"We're delighted they finally changed their position. We were ready to stay segregated if they didn't change their policy," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain said officials prided themselves in being the only order to successfully challenge the unwritten policy.

Officials at the international headquarters in McAlester, Okla. may have been aware of the problems the discriminatory rule caused.

During the 1975 session of the General Assembly, Public Act 75-601, concerning shelf life pricing, was enacted.

The Act reads as follows: "The price at which any food, as defined in section 19-212 of the general statutes, is offered or displayed for sale or sold at retail shall not be increased during the shelf life of such food."

Each increase on each food item during its shelf life shall constitute a separate offense. The law was effective Oct. 1, 1975.

Upgrading water system could cost $7 million

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Upgrading Manchester's water to meet new federal standards will cost at least $7 million, according to a study completed on the town's water system.

The study, compiled by Weston and Sampson of Boston, recommended that the town construct a new water treatment facility at Globe Hollow and abandon the present Cooper Hill and Line St. treatment plants.

Jay J. Giles, director of public works, said that the $5,000 study outlines the steps the town should take to meet new, more stringent, federal water regulations that will go into effect in June 1977.

Water from town wells meets the standards of the new law, but water from surface supplies—reservoirs—does not.

The amount of well and surface water used in town is divided almost evenly. At maximum output, wells can produce 5.2 million gallons per day (mgd), while surface supplies can produce 4.9 mgd.

The study, incidentally, said that the total output of 10.1 mgd. would be enough to meet the average needs in the year 2010.

But, while the town can meet the water needs for the future, it could at this time, meet the water quality required next year.

To bring the entire water supply up to meet year's standards will require the large expenditure, according to the study.

The study evaluated nine different options for improving water quality in town. The least expensive proposal was the construction of a new, large water treatment plant at Globe Hollow.

This plan, which called for the abandonment of the two existing water treatment facilities, would cost $7,059,000, according to the study. This includes the construction of the facility and needed equipment, and the installation of piping that would be necessary to bring water to the treatment plant.

"The water from all the service supplies would be treated at the one plant," Giles said.

The proposal to abandon the Cooper Hill plant is one that does not please Giles.

Manchester residents in November 1972 approved a $50,000 referendum for renovations to the Cooper Hill facility. Those improvements were completed in 1974.

"That part of the study to abandon the plant bothers me. We just spent all that money to renovate it," Giles said of Cooper Hill. He explained that the improvements at the plant were made before the new regulations originated.

"We have a plant that was meeting regulations when opened. Now that the standards are changed, the plant will no longer meet regulations," he said.

One of the proposals evaluated in the study was to improve the existing Line St. and Cooper Hill plants and build two additional smaller plants to meet standards. This would cost $8.5 million. Another proposal, to build the new plant at Globe Hollow and upgrade Cooper Hill, would cost $7.6 million.

Giles said that the existing facilities cannot be expanded to meet the full future needs. The Line St. plant is over 50 years old, and Cooper Hill is on too small a site to allow for adequate expansion.

But, Giles disputes that upgrading that plant will cost as much as the study says.

"I disagree on how much it will cost. I have to see more in black and

Water comes from many sources

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Manchester's water system is interspersed with wells and bodies of water that act as suppliers to the faucets of all the town homes.

It is not easy to pinpoint the one water source that feeds one home, however, according to Frank Jodanis, water and sewer administrator.

Parts of town, such as Rockledge and the northern part of Manchester are "sealed off" areas where the water source can be narrowed to a couple of possibilities.

But, the center of town, including Main St. and its side streets, is what Jodanis termed a "slush bucket," and is fed by several water sources.

The Rockledge area is the southeastern part of Manchester, which is fed by the Porter and Howard reservoirs.

"This section is sealed off from the rest of the system," Jodanis said. "The sources are fixed. You know where your water is coming from," he said.

The two reservoirs feed the area east of Parker and Porter Sts. and north past Middle Tpke., almost to Bredon Rd. The area extends east to Greenwood and Dale Rds. Those residents near the Bolton town line are serviced by private wells.

A second small, separated section of the water system includes Lookout Mt. and the extreme southeast section of town. This is also serviced by the Howard and Porter reservoirs and by wells along Charter Oak St.

The northern section of Manchester, that north of Middle Tpke., is fed by two main water sources. Two large wells on New State Rd. service most of the northern section west of Main St., while the Risley reservoir and two small reservoirs off Lydall St. supplies water to the northern section east of Main St.

Jodanis said that the two wells and the three reservoirs are "well-balanced" and supply water to about the same amount of property before converging near Main St.

There are also wells located on Bredon Rd. and at the intersection of Parker and Lydall Sts. to provide service to north end homes, but most of the residences are serviced by the New State Rd. wells and the reservoirs.

The Green Manor development in the northeast section of town is not included in this setup. Those condominiums have a separate water system fed by a well on Progress Dr. Defining the water sources for the remainder of town, the center and southwest section, becomes a bit more confusing.

Jodanis' term of "slush bucket" is an apt one. The area is serviced by several sources in varying degrees, depending on water levels.

The key to the area seems to be the water storage tank at the Nike Site. The water level at the tank triggers wells that service the area. If the tank's level drops another well will be "called on" to provide needed water for the center and southwest of town.

The main wells are three located along Charter Oak St. Another well is off Love Lane near Middle Tpke., and there is also one off Fern St.

Two reservoirs, Buckingham, located in Glastonbury, and Globe Hollow, also provide water for the area. Water from Buckingham reservoir is pumped through the Line St. filter plant and then sent on to the center of town. Water from Globe Hollow is dispersed to the Cooper Hill filter plant and then delivered where needed.

Occasionally, when water levels in the central section are low, water from the Howard and Porter reservoirs, which are fairly close to the Bolton town line, will seep through to service the center of town.

Disability Rights Center critical of medical gear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Disabled Americans who must use wheelchairs or other medical devices are stuck often with expensive but inadequate or ineffective products, a public interest group said Tuesday.

"Many members of the medical equipment industry continue to deny their customers minimal expectations of reliability," said the Disability Rights Center in a statement. "Quick warranty repair, reasonably priced merchandise, or products customized to the needs of the user are legitimate consumer demands."

By disguising themselves as extensions of the medical profession, "the group said, 'medical equipment dealers have eluded these requirements of responsive marketing.'"

The center, funded by Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Inc. and by the Levin Foundation, released a report on consumer experiences in three areas — wheelchairs, home respiratory equipment and artificial braces for women who have undergone surgery.

One survey of wheelchair users, it said, showed 34 percent of those asked were not satisfied with the product, with complaints that included "faulty brakes, shoddy and sometimes flammable upholstery and unreliable wheels and tires."

In addition to high prices the report cited retail distributors who sometimes "have no expertise to offer consumers" and "slow and inefficient service of the product."

It said little or no training often accompanies home respiratory devices, so poor care and cleaning of the product sometimes results in a setback for the patient and a return to the hospital.

A survey of women who underwent mastectomies revealed that while 90 percent were satisfied with the product, some complained "that sales personnel were unresponsive to their needs and sometimes crudely insensitive to their fragile emotional state."
