local government, praised the park and proposed zone change.

"I have seen the town's largest employer — the Cheney Brothers — shrink from 4,300 employees to 300. There is a vital need to attract new industry," Lupien said.

Other speakers for the zone change included Matthew Moriarty, mayor of Manchester; Vivian Ferguson, minority leader of the Board of Directors; and John Pingerra, representative for MAP Associates, developer of the proposed Buckland Commons project.

One person who spoke against the zone change and the proposed industrial park was Michael Dworkin, a Ludlow Rd. resident and owner of a local pharmacy.

Dworkin gave a 35-minute presentation, including several facts about recent air studies in the Manchester area. He said that federal air standards are not presently being met locally.

The increased traffic to the park and the possible Buckland Commons project would worsen air quality, he said.

"Although the benefits of the park are politically and economically expedient, I caution you to look at the environmental violations that would affect the health of Manchester's residents," he said.

Two Manchester attorneys — Bruce Beck and Anthony Pagano — also spoke in opposition to the zone change.

They both said that they were not opposed to the park or the J.C. Penney project, but were concerned about a "premature" zone change.

Beck read off a list of steps the park plans would have to go through before construction could begin, including approval from the state Department of Environmental Protection, and the town Board of Directors.

"Until all these steps are taken, this body should not approve the zone change," Beck told the PZC.

Pagano and Beck both said that they represent people whose homes would be taken if the project is built.

"Don't take away these people's homes unless we're sure we can get preliminary approval," Beck said in asking for a delay in the zone change decision.

signed by 71 per cent of those same neighbors who did not want sidewalk installation on Burnham St.

Under the park plans, the sidewalks would be installed, but the PZC could waive this requirement if the residents do not want the walks.

J. Eric Putter, town planner, said that there is "overwhelming evidence to support the change."

And Francis Maffe, of Croft Dr., said, "A planned park is better than a hodge-podge development. If problems do arise, a town agency would be more responsive to us (the residents) than outside private companies."

Maffe said that he was one of those who viewed a J.C. Penney Co. catalog distribution center in Ohio.

"I would be proud to have them as my neighbors," he said of the firm that is the proposed major tenant of the park.

A DEP sample of 34 locations throughout the state turned up four spots, including the Rogers Corp., where airborne asbestos exceeded the proposed standard.

A 30-day sample of air surrounding the Rogers Corp. factory found the average asbestos levels of .033 micrograms according to the DEP.

Louis Zipkin, division controller of the local factory, said that asbestos is used in its manufacture of phenolic moulding, which is better known as Bakelite. The moulding is made of phenolic resin and asbestos, he said.

"It's a pretty clean plant basically, with a mandatory policy of inspections. Periodic testing is carried on for health and insurance purposes," Zipkin said.

The firm has made a "significant investment in order to comply with regulations," he said.

High levels of asbestos were also found in the air surrounding the General Electric Plant in Bridgeport; the Raybestos-Manhattan plant in Stratford and around the Stratford and Norwalk toll stations on the Connecticut Tpk.

Gerald Okrant admitted he was "prejudiced" as chairman of the Manchester Economic Development Commission, but he called the park "a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for the Town of Manchester."

Frank Lupien, a frequent critic of local government, praised the park and proposed zone change.

"I have seen the town's largest employer — the Cheney Brothers — shrink from 4,300 employees to 300. There is a vital need to attract new industry," Lupien said.

Bell confirmation hearings open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate liberals were armed today with questions about Attorney General-designate Griffin Bell's role in Georgia's "massive resistance" to school desegregation during the 1950s.

"That will provide the jumping off point," a source close to the Senate Judiciary Committee's Democratic liberals told UPI as hearings opened on confirmation of Bell's nomination.

"I don't see him as in real trouble," the source said. "A lot will depend on how aggressive the Republicans are."

But he said "pitfalls" lie in Bell's path and one of the first may be the liberals' "concern" about whether Bell had the role of implementing segregationist policies of former Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver.

Local firm combatting asbestos problem

Elevated levels of asbestos fibers have been found in the air surrounding three Connecticut factories including the Rogers Corp. of Manchester, and at two toll booths on the Connecticut Tpk., according to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

DEP said Monday its scientists have developed initial data suggesting a relationship between increasing asbestos consumption in Connecticut and the rapid increase in deaths from mesothelioma — a rare type of cancer almost always caused by asbestos exposure.

The state currently restricts the amount of asbestos exposure allowed on the job, but has no controls on the amount that may be emitted into the air. In 1973, DEP proposed an airborne asbestos limit of .03 micrograms per cubic meter of air, but the proposed limit was never put into effect.

A DEP sample of 34 locations throughout the state turned up four spots, including the Rogers Corp., where airborne asbestos exceeded the proposed standard.

A 30-day sample of air surrounding the Rogers Corp. factory found the average asbestos levels of .033 micrograms according to the DEP.

Connecticut no-smoking day tomorrow

Were you one of the thousands of Connecticut smokers who said last year, "I'll try quitting smoking next year?"
Well, it is next year and as part of the effort to shatter the myth most smokers have that they can't quit, the Connecticut Seal-Lung Association is sponsoring its second annual "Connecticut No Smoking Day" tomorrow.
The idea is that if you can stop smoking one day, there is no reason why you can't stop for two days, two weeks, two years or forever.
The association's director of smoking education programs, Richard F. Straub, offers some advice to you who want to try stopping for one day tomorrow.
Motivation: You have to want to quit for your own reasons, not someone else's.
Develop positive reasons for quitting.
Timing: Though some can quit under most trying times, most do better when things are on a steady course.
Commitment: Be willing to stick to your decision to quit.
Patience: It may take a few days to learn to be a non-smoker.
Expect withdrawal symptoms and recognize them for what they are and cope — don't fight — with them and don't give in to them.
We suggest our smoking friends try stopping tomorrow just for the day if nothing else.
We think you'll find that it isn't as horrible as you might think — if you really are sincere about quitting.
If you do succeed in staying off the weeds tomorrow and want to continue to stay off of them, contact the CLA for more information.
The address is: Connecticut Lung Association, 45 Ash St., East Hartford, Conn. 06108. Telephone: 528-9437.
But for tomorrow you might try these hints:
Don't quit, forever, just stop for one day at a time. Tell your family and friends you're quitting as public commitment bolsters will power. Clear your house of cigarettes, ashtrays and other smoking reminders. Use physical activity to relieve tension. Keep your hands and mind busy. Re-emphasize your motives and reasons for quitting. And, if the craving gets too intense, take a few deep breaths or a glass of water to get you through the craving period.
It won't be the easiest thing you have ever done, but then again anything really worth while seldom is easy.

WASHINGTON — His cabinet chosen, Jimmy Carter is beginning to act as president, even though the office is not formally his quite yet. He has invited Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, to meet him early on during the new administration in the hope of clearing obstacles to a new agreement limiting nuclear arms.
The Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT) are one of the chief items of unfinished business which is inheriting from Mr. Ford, and the invitation is the strongest signal yet that he wants rapid progress. WASHINGTON — On the issue of a state right to bargain unanimously by legislating so-called right-to-work laws, Jimmy Carter's campaign utterances said he wanted it both ways.
That is, Carter said he would not introduce a bill to repeal Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which authorizes right-to-work laws. But he always added he'd be "delighted" to sign such legislation if passed by Congress.
Now it appears that Carter intends to push for repeal of Section 14 (b). His nominee for Secretary of Labor, Dr. F. Ray Marshall, has announced that he favors repeal, and also would support enactment of "common situs" picketing legislation which would give unions the power to shut down any construction project where nonunion workers are employed.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
DEAR ABBY: A recent copy of National Wildlife contained a story about "Rounding up Rattlers" in west Texas towns—an annual event apparently and one that stumped and shocked me.
The article tells how they put gasoline down the snake holes to force them to the surface. This produced 2,500 snakes last year. Here's what happened to them:
"Cold snakes were put into golf balls. Large snakes were 'juggled,' or tossed 20 feet into the air, then caught by the tail as they plummeted toward the ground floor. Some snakes were tossed the full length of the 30-foot enclosure, where they landed with a crunch."
The snakes are neither fed nor watered even though they may be kept for days or weeks.
The writer of the article said, "It's not easy to feel sorry for poisonous snakes. But I witnessed the Big Spring roundup from start to finish, and by the time the last skinning was completed, I was in a terrible mood."
I'm from New Hampshire, and my wild life is something to be treasured, not to be used in this horrible manner. If the general public knew about this kind of torture, I wonder whether they would stand for it.

Andrew Tully

Court would frown on repeal of 14 (b).
That straw was flung by the highest bench last month when its members ruled unanimously in favor of the First Amendment rights of a school teacher in Madison, Wis.
The teacher, Albert M. Holmquist, stirred up a fuss when he addressed a meeting of the Madison Board of Education in 1971. He objected to a proposal under consideration by the board which would have required nonunion teachers to pay a so-called "agency fee" to a union in order to keep their jobs.
Incredibly, the union — Madison Teachers Inc. — claimed that Holmquist's remarks constituted big labor-debts

For Wednesday, Jan. 12, 1977
ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's unlikely you'll depend too heavily on others. However, today you may just find that and be severely disappointed. Be realistic as to whom you can rely upon.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you don't think your money is going to make things harder for yourself, careful planning lightens the burden.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Watch out for salesmen types today who promise you the moon. You could end up with the size and not the steak.
CANCER (June 21-July 21) A couple you're anxious to conclude may not be as easy to finalize as you anticipate. A strong second opinion will be required.
LEO (July 22-August 22) Time may be taken from your routine today to help another. Although you won't welcome the intrusion, you'll still go it, out of the love of your heart.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22) Pleasurables whine carry a high price tag today. Going on a spending spree will cause you buyer's remorse later.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct 23) Don't let family problems in public today. Outdoors will be of small or no help — and you could cause them embarrassment if they feel forced to take sides.
SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22) Usually you're a rather private person. Today, you have a tendency to tell tales out of school. You could regret talking too impulsively.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21) Casual acquaintances will fare better from your generosity by than will persons to whom you're really indebted. Get your orders.
CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19) When you kind others in opposition to your ideas today, back off. Once they hear they can't do as they please, they'll be thinking.
AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18) Before making up with anyone in your past, be sure their arms are equally idealistic. A selfish associate could cause problems.
PIECES (Feb 20-March 20) Leo (July 23-August 22) Time may be taken from your routine today to help another. Although you won't welcome the intrusion, you'll still go it, out of the love of your heart.

Celestial light it sheds, To cheer this vale below; Its distant lands its glory spreads, And streams of mercy flow.
Tru wisdom it imparts; Commands our hope and fear; O, may we hide it in our hearts, And feel its influence there. (taken from The Psalms: A new collection of Hymns.)

League heads offer little support in violence cases

Voice at East Catholic

Big John LaFontana, varsity football coach at East Catholic High and former pro player, handles the dual job of official scorer and announcer at home Eagle basketball games this season.

BOSTON (UPI) — A typical scenario in any pro sport: Player for Team A comes into contact with player for Team B. Each gets angry at the way the other has treated him. A scuffle develops. Officials break up the fracas and assess penalties and/or ejections.

If the confrontation is unduly violent, the league commissioner must decide the matter. Too often, too little is done and thus a tone of violence is set.

Such an incident took place two years ago when Dave Forbes of the Boston Bruins rammed his hockey stick into the eye of Henry Bouche, then of the Minnesota North Stars. The National Hockey League suspended Forbes temporarily, but Hennepin County Attorney Gary Flakne thought court action was needed as a lesson to those who, under the guise of sports, would commit criminal assault.

Forbes' trial ended in a hung jury and the case was dropped with nothing being settled.

However, Flakne still feels professional athletes should be tried on a case-by-case basis to eliminate thinly shrouded muggings in athletic contests. Flakne aired his feelings last week in an article in the January issue of Trial, the publication of the 22,000-member Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

In a companion article, Forbes' attorney — Ronald Meshbesher — urged creation of a government regulatory agency to police all sports.

Neither plan, however, reaches the heart of the problem. The real answer in stopping such attacks lies in swift and fair action by the executive board of the individual league involved.

Let the National Hockey League, for example, punish a Forbes by imposing heavy fines and/or lengthy suspensions. Let the league make the cost of fighting so dear, that few will dare step out of line for fear of losing their livelihood.

Let the commissioner of baseball and his staff sort out the reasons for on-field brawls and act accordingly. Then, if a player feels he was unjustly punished, let him ask for a league review or seek a court ruling as a last resort, as Meshbesher has suggested.

The proposal for a governmental regulatory agency is a scary one. Such a body, aided by the executive boards of the individual leagues, would be excellent for setting guidelines in all sports. But the government should not routinely interfere with sports violence.

Flakne maintains legal action should be taken against offending players because "the mere act of putting on a uniform and entering the sports arena should not serve as a license to engage in behavior which would constitute a crime if committed elsewhere."

But the mere act of playing in a professional game — where win at all costs is stressed and nurtured by the owners of each team — puts competitors in a war-like situation.

Despite Flakne's contentions, such incidents are far removed from a barroom brawl, where a person simply can choose to walk away from a potentially explosive situation.

The reasons for the on-field assault can be assessed by the game of officials in conjunction with the executive board of the league. Hearings should be held quickly and action taken within days. A hockey player would be reluctant to battle with his stick if he were to be sidelined without pay for the season for using the tool as a weapon.

A cheap shot artist would need to break into one's nose deliberately to be drummed out of the National Football League for the season. A baseball player going berserk during a melee would be buying seats to the team's games instead of playing the rest of the season after assaulting opposing players.

Again, the first line of the law has to be the game official. He should immediately put the offending player(s) out of the game, then make a full report of the incident. The official's deposition plus replays of the incident could help the league make a clear-cut decision.

The 25-year-old Swedish right wing notched his second three-goal hat trick against the Flyers in a little more than a year to lead the Islanders to a lopsided 8-3 victory and within three points of first-place Philadelphia in the Patrick Division of the National Hockey League.

Providence No.1

BOSTON (UPI) — A one-point win and a convincing victory over regional opponent Massachusetts has given Providence College atop the UPI coaches' ratings of Division I basketball teams in New England.

The Friars, named first on 12 of the ballots cast by the 16 Division I coaches in New England, finished with 76 of a possible 80 points.

After beating then-top-ranked Michigan, Providence had to oke out their next two victories. But they dominated Massachusetts, leading by 11 points until the Minutemen closed the gap with a late-game surge.

Holy Cross, 10-1, picked up the other four first place votes and finished with a total of 66 points. The Crusaders rebounded from their first loss against Florida to whip Assumption and Fordham last week. Rhode Island stayed in third place, despite dropping a game to St. John's. The Rams, 8-3, received 39 points.

Massachusetts, 6-4 after a win over Duquesne and the loss to Providence, held fourth place with 36 points. Connecticut, 7-4 following a well played, triple overtime loss to Rutgers, remained in fifth place with 23 points.

Connecticut has a chance to climb in the standings with games scheduled tonight against the Friars at Providence and Thursday night at home against Massachusetts.

Manchesters' P. Wee's tied Windsor, 1-1, Saturday at the Hartford Arena and Sunday they deadlocked South Windsor, 2-2. Dan Weinbaum and Eric Trudon scored for Manchester in the second game with Keith Murray and Carl Florentine tallying for South Windsor.

Free agent draft today

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hoping to find a Tom Seaver or a Carlton Fisk among the stockpile, major league baseball's 36 teams conduct their annual winter free agent draft today at Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office.

Since its inception in 1966 there have been many players of All-Star caliber selected in the winter draft, but a rule change implemented by the colleges last January indicates that this year's crop of talent will be thinner than in past years.

The rule change restricts the signing of players, who have their senior year of eligibility left, to between school years. Previously, major league teams were allowed to sign players after the school year was over. Under the new rule,

It is believed mostly junior college players or college dropouts will be taken. The Montreal Expos will get the first choice in the regular phase of the draft because they had the poorest record in the majors last year. Teams then will draft in inverse order of won-lost percentage. The draft will be conducted by telephone hookup, beginning at 12:40 p.m. EST.

Manchesters' P. Wee's tied Windsor, 1-1, Saturday at the Hartford Arena and Sunday they deadlocked South Windsor, 2-2. Dan Weinbaum and Eric Trudon scored for Manchester in the second game with Keith Murray and Carl Florentine tallying for South Windsor.
