Labor uneasiness concerns Meadows patient advocate

Walter Joyner, a patient advocate at the Meadows Convalescent Home, has expressed concern about the possibility of new labor problems at the home.

He is especially worried about what a strike could mean to the patients. "The trauma that goes with the possibility of another strike really gets to the patients," Joyner said.

Recently, however, two Massachusetts homes owned by Geri-Care have apparently had contract disputes stemming from an alleged breach of agreement between management and the union.

long it will take to complete the review. "Usually it's a matter of a few weeks if it's all straightforward," he said.

Legal cost allocation litigation in fire jurisdiction explained

By GREG PEARSON

HARTFORD (UPI) — Court of Common Pleas Judge Robert Satter upheld Thursday a Connecticut Freedom of Information Commission ruling that marriage licenses and death certificates are public records.

Satter, in the first decision of his kind, ruled against Health Commissioner Douglas L. Lloyd, who had argued disclosure of the records would be an invasion of privacy.

The case resulted from a commission ruling that the Stamford registrar of vital statistics must allow the public to inspect its alphabetical lists of marriages and deaths, and its actual licenses and certificates.

Some years the town provides less than $7,000 worth of services to the Town Fire Department, other years it provides more, he said.

But, presently, the yearly payment of the District's expense in the Buckland fire jurisdiction case has come from the General Fund budget because of an annual $7,000 contribution by the Town Fire Department.

Some years the town provides less than $7,000 worth of services to the Town Fire Department, other years it provides more, he said.

He said that about ten per cent of this year's $71,500 budget for the department will go to collecting taxes from the Town fire district. (Ten per cent of the department budget would be $7,150.)

The fire jurisdiction case involves the dispute between the Town of Manchester and the Eighth Utilities District over who should provide fire protection in the Buckland section of Manchester. A state Superior Court ruling in favor of the District, but the Town is appealing the decision to the state Supreme Court.

District officials have expressed concern that District residents are paying for both sides of the legal proceedings.

He said if costs for such services do not meet the charge, the charge will be increased.

"We want the charges to reflect the cost," Weiss said.

Ice skating season over

Ernest J. Tureck, park superintendent, said that there will probably be no more skating this winter at the Center Pond Annex.

Tureck, speaking Thursday night at the Advisory Recreation and Park Commission, said that last week's warm weather caused an overflow in the annex area.

During this short period, a large amount of dirt and clay was deposited on the ice, he said.

From all indications, it would be impossible to bring that rink back to skating for this year," he said.

Skating will continue at other town ponds, weather permitting, Tureck told the commission.

Democratic leaders gather at fete

Democrats gathered in Hartford Friday night for the party's $100-a-plate Jackson-Jefferson-Bailey fundraising dinner at which an estimated $125,000 was netted for party coffers.

Wright said Congress was in the process of "writing the toughest, most stringent code of ethics anywhere in the world" for government officials.

But, he said, once that is done, "I don't anticipate anyone will pat Congress on the back. They'll find something else to criticize."

Wright said with a Democratic president and large Democratic majorities in Congress a "new era of cooperation has begun" between the executive and legislative branches.

"I think President Carter has bent over backwards to cooperate with us and we have bent over backwards to cooperate with him," Wright said.

HARTFORD (UPI) — U.S. House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas says Congress did nothing wrong in giving itself a pay raise and says any criticism is just an example of public resentment of lawmakers.

Wright Friday night defended Congress against charges it had taken the easy way out by adjourning without voting on the pay raise and that insuring members would get a $13,000 salary hike.

"I don't see any problem with the way the law was carried out," said Wright. "No matter what it does, Congress is always criticized."

Mandatory emission inspections premature

Should Connecticut have mandatory motor vehicle exhaust emission inspections? There is no doubt that auto and truck emissions contribute substantially to the low air quality of the Greater Hartford area, and at certain times of the year and under certain atmospheric conditions, there is a health hazard.

But, will inspections in one state really solve the problem or merely become an economic burden on vehicle owners? Two things are needed before mandatory inspections should be imposed.

One is a uniform federal emissions standard so that Connecticut vehicles can travel anywhere without penalty if they are in compliance, and out-of-state cars will not be getting by with a lower standard. Connecticut is a small state and straddles the New York-Boston corridor. Unless all states around us have the same emission standards, Nutmeg motorists will be paying out good money for air quality that we won't be getting because of outside polluters.

What would it cost? The Connecticut Automobile Association estimates the proposed emission inspection law now before legislators $73 million over the next five years.

Even if that figure is overstated, the fact remains that in the absence of uniform national emission standards, whatever is spent may be largely wasted.

Second, we think the present art of emission control needs a lot of technological improvement. We hear too often the story that fine-tuning over cars to meet emission requirements is a rather unsure thing. It is, we understand, not unlike a front-end alignment. It may be good only until you hit the next chuckle. Emissions tuning apparently is affected by too many factors to insure that even a quarterly tuneup will last three months.

The point is that until an engine can be adjusted to meet a uniform emission standard with the assurance that it will stay adjusted for a reasonable period of time, we may be achieving only short-term air quality improvement.

This is not idle speculation. Only recently one major auto maker had to halt production because its assembly line output was not meeting prototype emission standards demanded by the federal Environmental Protection Administration.

The question looms that if a manufacturer can't routinely adjust a new car to meet existing standards, how can we expect the run-of-the-mill mechanic in the average garage or service station to do it?

In summation: Mandatory emission inspections should be delayed until there are uniform federal emission standards established and technology advances to the point where those standards can be met economically and with assurance that the adjustments will remain effective for several months.

In the meantime, emissions tests might be included in the safety spotchecks now being conducted by the state police so that we can build up a track record on how well emission control devices are standing up under normal driving conditions.

Project Concern participation urged

Dear Sir: As you know, last year, our (East Hartford) Board of Education voted to phase out its participation in Project Concern.

At the heart of the problem was the fact that the Hartford Board of Education wanted the suburban towns to accept a flat fee of $700 per pupil in lieu of the per pupil cost to educate each child in any town taking Project Concern students.

In addition, the City of Hartford wanted to increase participation from 950 students in Project Concern enrollment in 1975-1976 to 1,045 in 1976-1977, to 1,140 students in 1977-1978, then to 1,235 students in 1978-1979.

The following towns agreed to accept more students at the $700 per pupil flat fee: Farmington, Granby, Manchester, Newington, Plainville, Simsbury, South Windsor, Suffield, West Hartford and Wetherfield.

To its shame, East Hartford voted not to participate. The East Hartford Board of Education should reconsider its position and vote to participate in Project Concern, especially since declining enrollments would afford space for central city students.

It would be ironic indeed if the courts eventually decide that the only way to desegregate the City of Hartford's school system would be to force suburban towns to accept more city children and East Hartford isn't part of Project Concern.

Very truly yours, Aldo J. Rovero 47 Rentscher St. East Hartford.

Grounding a 'special interest'

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters WASHINGTON - (NEA) - The hearing of the House Science and Technology Committee Feb. 17 wasn't telecast to room 116 of nearby Bethesda Naval Hospital - and therein lies a tale of the relationship between the infamous "special interests" and members of Congress.

The term "special interests" usually is applied to private organizations seeking to influence congressional policy making. But it also ought to refer to the federal departments and agencies which constantly lobby members of the House and Senate for more of everything - money, staff positions, programs, influence and prestige.

NASA The "special interest" in this case is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. NASA's administrator, Dr. James C. Fletcher, is an appointee of President Richard M. Nixon who reportedly is very anxious to retain his directorship under President Carter.

One major source of support could be crucial in that effort is Rep. Olin E. Teague, D-Texas, a 16-term veteran of the House and the highly influential chairman of its Science and Technology Committee for the past four years.

In hospital Teague checked into Bethesda Naval Hospital late last year for treatment of a World War II wound, and he probably will remain hospitalized for several more weeks.

Fletcher and his staff concocted a scheme which would demonstrate not only NASA's dazzling technical capabilities but also its concern for Teague: The committee session would be the subject of an elaborate, satellite-relayed, closed-circuit television broadcast whose entire audience would consist of one exclusive congressman.

Detailed plan A detailed plan was drafted and sent to NASA employees, at both the Washington headquarters and the agency's Lewis Research Center in Cleveland, were assigned to work on the project.

Cameras, sound equipment and special lights would be set up in the committee hearing room in the Rayburn House Office Building. Cables would snake from that room, down a corridor, into another congressman's office, then out a window to a bus and trailer parked outside the building. (The bus would be brought to Washington from Cleveland for the occasion.)

Via satellite From there, the signal would be beamed to a satellite hovering 23,000 miles above the earth, then re-transmitted back to the ground to a special receiving antenna mounted outside the hospital. Finally another set of cables would carry the program into Teague's room.

Although the distance from Capitol Hill to Teague's hospital room in suburban Maryland is only seven miles, the picture and sound from the routine hearings would have to travel more than 46,000 miles.

The cost of the project was incalculable, certainly running to tens of thousands of dollars and possibly hundreds of thousands of dollars - all of it coming from the country's taxpayers.

Teague rejected it Fortunately, Teague rejected the entire plan. (NASA says it abandoned the project after realizing the astronomical costs involved, but that version was disputed by every other source we interviewed.)

"It's my understanding that Dr. Fletcher originally broached the idea with Mr. Teague," said John L. Swigert, executive director of the committee. "Mr. Teague himself turned it down after we looked at the costs and complications."

Ramifications The outcome of that episode has broader ramifications because of the frequency with which members of Congress are routinely criticized for accepting questionable favors from interest groups.

In most cases, the big campaign contribution, the golfing weekend at a lush resort or the VIP treatment for the legislator was an idea concocted and an offer proffered by an interest group anxious to carry favor with the intended recipient.

That doesn't justify acceptance of largesse designed to purchase "access" or "influence" on Capitol Hill. But if the recipients are to be judged harshly, more attention ought to be paid to the source of those oversized gratuities.

AND I SAID I DON'T CARE IF THE TOWN DOES HAVE CURBSIDE NEWSPAPER COLLECTION I WANT TO READ IT FIRST!

Marijuana: Good analysis, bad answer

Lee Roderick The Herald's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON - The nation's top drug abuse official, Dr. Robert L. DuPont, made headlines the other day when he urged removal of criminal penalties for privately using marijuana or growing it at home.

What went largely unreported, however, was DuPont's spokesman for the Oregon State Police says that in 1975, his department issued 1,281 citations for possessing that amount of the drug. In 1976, however, the department's citations for less than one ounce jumped to 1,907 - an increase of more than 50 per cent.

Makes no sense "Decriminalization of marijuana possession makes sense on economic (law enforcement) and humanitarian grounds," said DuPont, speaking before the Psychiatric Institute Foundation in Washington. "As a nation we are now in midstride moving toward decriminalization of marijuana possession. I am suggesting today that legalization should not be the next step. Rather, the step should be a thorough overhaul of our national policy toward tobacco and alcohol."

Civil offense Fight states, led by Oregon which had a civil rather than the criminal statute in effect for the full 1976 calendar year, have now passed laws imposing a mere civil fine for possession of small amounts of marijuana. Although DuPont, who is director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said in his speech that marijuana consumption rates "have not differed" in these states, there is evidence that in Oregon at least this is not correct.

Under Oregon's law there is no jail sentence and only a maximum fine of $100 for possession of less than one ounce of marijuana. A spokesman for the Oregon State Police says that in 1975, his department issued 1,281 citations for possessing that amount of the drug. In 1976, however, the department's citations for less than one ounce jumped to 1,907 - an increase of more than 50 per cent.

Need to know more DuPont argues that making marijuana use a civil rather than criminal offense would keep the wraps on it sufficiently until more is known about its potential harm. If ongoing research confirms, as scientists suspect, that marijuana is much more dangerous than DuPont's agency believes, tougher laws could be clamped on its use. That, at least, is the theory.

Along with many others, I don't relish the specter of otherwise law-abiding citizens receiving criminal penalties for using marijuana. But until these troubling questions are answered, the nation would be wise to keep what lid remains on marijuana.

possible to reenact prohibition." Good analysis In my opinion, DuPont has applied a generally good analysis but has ended up with a bad answer. The immense human tragedy associated with alcohol and tobacco should indeed alert us to the dangers of greatly increased use of marijuana. Yet while calling for lighter regulation of the former two, DuPont seeks to make marijuana more easily available.

He suggests this inconsistency even while admitting that, although his agency alone has spent $20 million for marijuana research in recent years, some very important questions remain unanswered.

Questions such as possible adverse effects on the body's immune response, basic cell metabolism, and reproductive functions.

Along with many others, I don't relish the specter of otherwise law-abiding citizens receiving criminal penalties for using marijuana. But until these troubling questions are answered, the nation would be wise to keep what lid remains on marijuana.

Power

Our flights into space to attain earth orbit, to put up satellites, to go to the moon or even farther to Mars gives evidence of the tremendous power that we have been able to harness and creatively use. Even before liftoff takes place, to have developed the transportation vehicles that moved the giant rockets from the assembly building to the launch site took incredible planning and power. But it's been done and many times over!

In the New Testament, we find frequent indications that POWER is also available to us as people; power that can move us on and keep us from getting tired down. BELIEVE is one of the power words that Jesus used. "All things are possible to him who believes" (Mark 9:23 RSV). FAITH is another one: "If you have faith... nothing will be impossible to you." (Matthew 17:20-21 RSV)

As we look forward to the beginning of a new week, let us not forget the sources of power at our disposal and the free opportunity we have to energize and use that power. Worship tomorrow!

Rev. Dale Gustafson, Emmanuel Lutheran Church

WASHINGTON - There wasn't a wet eye in my head when Larry Flynt, publisher of Hustler magazine, was sentenced in Cincinnati to seven to 25 years in prison for pandering obscenity and engaging in organized crime.

Hustler is the most explicit and tasteless of the commercial sex - or just - magazines. It is a package of evoking garbage, a crawling thing of the publishing trade, crammed with pictures and text about incest, bestiality, oral and anal intercourse, sodomy and other sexual deviations.

Predictable cry Predictably, the cry has gone up that Flynt's conviction will open wide the door to denial of the First Amendment's right to freedom of expression. Although I am in the business of expressing opinions in print, I do not share this alarm.

Rather, I embrace the dictum of the late Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes that the First Amendment does not permit the cry of "fire" in an overcrowded theater.

A civilized society should permit its separate communities to establish standards governing how much obscenity its members - by referendum or legislation - want to view on stage, screen, or in the pages of Hustler.

Court admitted risk And that, of course, is exactly what

Andrew Tully

Well, sir, Hustler has a circulation (unfortunately) of 2.5 million. But if that bundle of smut has "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value," Ronald Reagan is a Communist.

Still, none of this means that what is called a "consenting adult" may not continue to read and even enjoy Hustler. It doesn't mean that certain creeps, for dough, may not continue to publish such voyeuristic adventures in sexual trash. What it does mean is that a small town in Maine may keep such stuff off its newstands.

Credit rating hurt Although each case technically applies only to the jurisdiction in which it was tried, some critics of the Cincinnati decision point out that jailing a publisher, as the Cincinnati judge ordered, could jeopardize the future of his publication. Jack Gallagher, a Hustler official, told reporters the case "had not helped" the company's standing with creditors and with Dun & Bradstreet, the financial credit rating service.

Well, Gallagher, things are tough all over. A 12-year-old kid from Washington was described as a good home confessor in Washington the other day to the "sexual mutilation" of a 9-year-old girl. He said he got the idea out of the pages of Hustler.

The magnitude of the improvement, said Norman L. Greenman, president of Rogers, "was due to a combination of better economic conditions and new products and applications."

Charles G. Heckler
COVENTRY — Charles G. Heckler, 74, of Brewer Rd. died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Actor Andy Devine dies at age 71

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — Andy Devine, squeaky-voiced master of comic Western movie "sleekick" parts, died Friday night at the age of 71, the University of California at Irvine hospital said.

The rotund Devine, who was hospitalized last July for pneumonia and kidney problems, began his career in silent film days and like many silent screen actors, was almost ruined when sound pictures revealed he had a strange voice.

But in Devine's case, the voice was so strange it ensured his career.

At one time, who had studied dramatics and played football at Santa Clara College in California, stepped into the silent world, and started making adventure films and westerns.

The advent of talking pictures nearly ended his career. When sound came in they threw me right out into the street," he once told an interviewer. "With my voice they thought I'd clear the theaters."

His weight shot up. Directors decided they could make use of his high, gravelly voice and he became the rotly-poly comedy sidekick of college leads and western stars. His first such film was "Spirit of Notre Dame."

For more than 40 years he worked more consistently than most leading men, including a five-year stint on the Jack Benny radio show. Directors even created roles to get him in a film.

Devine, a native of Flagstaff, Ariz., was credited as an extra in mob scenes for several years before he got his first acting role as a baseball player in "The Collegians," a series of shorts.

He once estimated the number of films he made at "several hundred," but forgot the total number.

Devine, born Oct. 7, 1905, was the son of a hotel owner. He carried the first flag with 48 stars in ceremonies when Arizona became a state.

His pictures included "The Flame of New Orleans," "The Michigan Kid," "Canyon Passage," "Stagecoach," "Island in the Sky," and "Around the World in 80 Days."

He costarred for two years with Roy Rogers in a series of films later seen on television. For seven years he was "Jingles" on Guy Madison's "Wild Bill Hickock" series.

Later, with his trademark voice mellowed by the years, he made a series of westerns, including a two-part film, "The Sportsman," which was a factory whistle and a log horn, he sported multi-chop sideburns, tropical specs and bushy eyebrows, so Disney hired him for a two-hour TV show, "Smoke."

Devine married Dorothy Irene House in 1933. They had two sons, Tad and Dinger.

Devine never really retired. He made radio commercials and occasional television appearances in his later years.

Anthony Crosland dies

LONDON (UPI) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland, who was felled by a stroke at his home last Sunday, died today, the Foreign Office said.

His wife, Susan, was at his bedside when he died, the Foreign Office said.

The Rt. Hon. Anthony Crosland MP, died peacefully at 12:40 a.m. EST today. The announcement came from the office of the Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, 59, to the post.

The sources said Callaghan had been planning to visit his country home at Aderbury last Sunday when he felt a pain in his chest.

But Callaghan now may elect to temporarily resign the Radcliffe Infirmary, Oxford, where his condition stabilized briefly Thursday, but deteriorated Friday evening.

An economics expert and moderate socialist, Crosland was named foreign secretary in April 1976 by Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Crosland, a shy intellectual man who preferred to stay out of the limelight.

Citizen tackles burglary suspect

His suspicions aroused when he saw a car pass his house several times, a Greenwood Dr. resident investigated and tackled a man leaving a nearby driveway with things in his arms, holding him until police arrived.

The suspect, Anthony R. Morrone, 18, of 9 Birch Mountain Rd. Ext., Bolton, was arrested at 1:30 this morning and charged with burglary third degree and larceny third degree.

According to police, the witness called to the accused to stop. When he didn't, police said the witness ran after him and tackled him, holding him down while a neighbor called the police.

Police said the accused was carrying a pair of ski mittens, a motorcycle helmet and a hand held spotlight.

The complainant had been watching the neighborhood from his house because the night before, he reported that a tape deck had been taken from his car, police said.

While the complainant was watching the neighborhood, he allegedly saw a car make several passes by his house. When he stepped outside, he saw the accused walking away from the victim's driveway, police said.

Police brought the accused to headquarters where he is held in lieu of a $200 bond. Court is March 14 at East Hartford Circuit Court.

Eugene J. Russell, 26, of 126 Smith Dr., East Hartford, was arrested Friday at 3:35 p.m. and charged with fourth degree larceny (shoplifting) at Marshall's and criminal mischief third degree.

The criminal mischief charge was lodged after suspected damage in the cell, in which Russell was being held.

Music unit asks state for $1,000

Andover
The Andover Rural Music Committee will submit a $1,000 budget to the Connecticut Commission on the Arts, from which it receives matching funds.

The committee has been discussing whether it should sponsor a summer arts program. It is inviting comments from residents for help in making the decision.

The committee will sponsor a performance of Peter Driscoll, pantomimist, March 11 at the Andover Elementary School. There will be a performance during the day for the children and an evening performance for the general public.

A variety show is being planned for the end of April. Some of the proceeds from the show will be donated to the Joie Breton Fund. Anyone interested should contact Ruth Munson, 742-7305.

The committee is now arranging for performances of about 20 entertainers at the town two-day arts festival which will be sponsored by the music committee, the Art League and the Arts Festival Committee.

The committee accepted the resignation of member Nancy Crane. Anyone interested in being a member should call Mrs. Munson, Jacqueline Engles, or any other committee member.

Hot ashes caused damage

East Hartford fire fighters douse fire at rear of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Szydlowski Friday afternoon. Officials said the blaze apparently started after Mrs. Szydlowski emptied fireplace ashes into a paper bag and placed it under the back porch.

Pinewood and rubbish kept there caught on fire and flames spread to the porch and then to the kitchen area inside. A smoke detector inside the home was set off, alerting Mrs. Szydlowski to call the fire department at 12:48 p.m., officials said. No one was hurt.

Officials back hospital plans

Vernon
Vernon Mayor Thomas Benoit and Town Planner John Loranger both strongly back the $1.8 million expansion program proposed for Rockville General Hospital.

The mayor said Thursday afternoon he was unable to attend a meeting Wednesday night of the advisory committee of the Health Systems Agency. The meeting was in Ellington and some 100 persons attending from area towns also unanimously backed the hospital plans.

Last year the hospital proposed a $2 million expansion program which would have enlarged the pediatrics and maternity facilities, the emergency area, and the outpatient services area.

This proposal was rejected by the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care. The commission recommended that Rockville Hospital consider merging its maternity and pediatrics departments with those of Manchester Memorial Hospital.

The HSA will conduct a public hearing on the proposed expansion program March 24 at 7:15 p.m. at the hospital.

The HSA will conduct a public hearing on the proposed expansion program March 24 at 7:15 p.m. at the hospital.

Mayor Benoit said he understands that one of the HSA's concerns is financial backing from the towns. He said he doesn't feel this is a justified concern as past history indicates the willingness of our towns to support their hospitals.

He said in making the decision concerning the expansion program, HSA should consider the distance involved for area residents having to travel to Manchester or Hartford for hospital care. He said many of the older people do not drive and taxi or bus transportation isn't always available in all forms.

"Well it takes gasoline to drive to Manchester or Hartford."

The HSA will conduct a public hearing on the proposed expansion program March 24 at 7:15 p.m. at the hospital.

David Dagon, 25, joined the East Hartford Fire Department in 1975. He is a member of the rescue team.

Dagon has completed his emergency medical technician training.

An oddity about his short career on the force so far has been the frequency with which he appears in newspaper photographs of accidents and fires. His fellow fire fighters like him about it but he says it has been pure chance.

News for Senior Citizens

Hi neighbor! Well, our Variety Show isn't that far away and so far everyone involved is working very hard. We can still use a few more volunteers as ushers, and most of all, we need lots of help to sell our tickets.

The show is scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings, April 1 and 2, starting at 8, and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m.

We need people to come in and pick up a handful of tickets and then do some selling for us. Here's a chance for some of you who do not have the time to be in the show or help us as often as you'd like to do something important for us.

Another reminder that the center will be closed on Monday, but will be open the remainder of the week. However, we will not be serving any meals at all for the week, because our students and cooks have their vacation. We will have hot water available for anyone who wish to bring sandwiches in order to stay for the full day's activities.

Getting back to the Variety Show, we need to borrow a few tambourines and wonder if any of you folks have one. If so, you'd be glad to let us use it, please drop it off or call our office and we'll pick it up.

Next week Gloria will be back in action and so will our Ceramics Class. Also on Wednesday afternoon the craft class will be busy making things for the big show and could use more help.

The action here at the center starts with our Senior Bowling League at the Parkside Lanes with the following results: Women - Class A (over 100 for being so considerate and kind to us.

Windham upsets Tribe, three-way tie in CCIL

By LEN AUSTER Herald Sportswriter

What started off beautifully ended in disaster as Manchester High was upset by Windham High, 60-54, in a wild and woolly CCIL basketball tilt last night at Clarke Arena which was packed by over 1,200 paid customers.

The decision, coupled with Wetherfield's win (58-54) over Simsbury and Penney's victory (65-53) over East Hartford High, means the 1977-78 CCIL title will be shared three ways.

Each winds up 134 in league play while Windham with the win garners the No. 4 spot at 11-7. Manchester, Wetherfield, Penney and Windham will all take part in the CCIL playoff which begins Friday. The site (probably Clarke Arena) isn't set and the pairings have to be announced.

CCIL Standings table with columns for team name and record.

Manchester led at the end of one quarter, 18-10 and at the half, 28-25. There were 25 turnovers, 21 fouls and only 30 successful basket tries at the end of 16 minutes of play.

The Indians could manage only one field goal in the third stanza while the Whippets, now 12-7 over-all, tossed in eight to take a 41-36 lead into the final period. Manchester ripped off the first eight points of the Jeff Kiernan, who saw many six minutes of playing time, tallied just three points.

Eagles rally for 15th victory

By DAVE ROBACK

The saying "The hurrier I go the behinder I get" is not exactly proper English but it would be a proper way of describing the final 10 minutes of basketball between East Catholic and St. Paul.

A costly error, a forced game plan, and execution of it proved to be the downfall of the Falcons as they dropped a 59-53 decision to the Eagles last night in Bristol, thus cancelling any of State Tournament participation.

The victory places the Eagles' final regular season ledger at 15-5 while St. Paul drops to 9-11 and out of post-season play. But St. Paul, 9-11 in HCC, will participate in the HCC playoff beginning Thursday at the University of Hartford against top-ranked 10-0 South Catholic. East, 8-2 in the HCC will oppose 5-5 St. Thomas Aquinas in the other bracket of the playoff.

The Eagles, who enjoyed the lead since the 7-45 mark of the second period, found itself in a strange situation near the end of the third quarter as a fired-up Falcon squad cut a seven point deficit to one, 35-34. Foul shots by Rick Halleck and John Burke suddenly gave the Falcons the edge, 38-37, at the end of the period.

A driving Tim Reynolds' layup made it 40-37 but the steady inside play of Gary Carlson and Jeff Heim put East back on top, 45-44. The Eagles then went to a steady and deliberate type of offense thus forcing the Falcons to force a shot and to run a fast-moving offensive plan in order to catch up.

But a bit of anxiousness hit the locals also as they committed three straight turnovers. But St. Paul didn't capitalize on the situation and instead fouled Mark Dumais, who converted fouled Dumais into a one-and-one. A technical foul was slapped on the Falcons for entering a player not registered in the box with 26 seconds left. Dumais converted the penalty and he and Carlson made both ends of one-and-one situations to put out the game.

East Catholic (59) Heim 4 1-3 9, Carlson 6 7-9 19, Donnelly 1 0-1 2, Thompson 3 0-0 6, Dumais 3 7-9 17, Lindsey 2 0-1 4, Hall 0 0-0 0, McElhannon 0 0-0 0, Murphy J 0 0-0 0. Totals 22 15-22 50.

The first look at the New England Whalers for Mrs. V. Vian Doll of 136 Center St., Manchester, proved to be a lucky one last night.

Leading all the way, Cheney Tech outdistanced Rocky Hill 80-76, in Charter Oak Conference basketball action last night in Rocky Hill.

The win improves the Beavers' conference mark to 5-12 and aggregate docket to 5-14 while the Terriers slip to 2-1 in the COC and 2-17 over-all with the loss.

George Prasser and Kevin Tyler each had 20 points for Cheney with Tyler adding 17 tallies and sophomore Dave Gammache with Gary Hunter had 19 points and Jeff Anthony and Mike Spellman 12 apiece for Rocky Hill.

Penney's first period score came with a five to three advantage. Landon made several great stops before the Bulls' top scorer hit the red lamp. Lyle's tally was on a power play as was Napier's second.

The Whalers had a five-pointed edge over the Bulls in the standings.

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren
DEAR ABBY: I don't know who to turn to. I just found out that my 18-year-old daughter is on the pill. She's crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame. She has a steady boyfriend I thought was nice. I never dreamed this was going on.

Dear Abby: I have been married to Paul for six months, but one of his habits is really driving me out of my mind. When he sits down to eat (whether we are at home, dining out or are guests in someone's home), the first thing Paul does is to salt everything that requires seasoning - and I mean he salts it up hot good! Abby, he doesn't even TRY it first; he just pours the salt on.

Dear Abby: Is it possible for a man to be in love with two women at the same time? I'm a divorcee, and this man I'm dating has never been married. When we met, he told me quite honestly that he had been seeing another woman, but that he wanted to date me anyway.

Waterbury chicken auctioned for $45,000

By RUSS MacKENDRICK
From now on let's treat Waterbury with due respect. This "Running Chicken" fancy cancellation has just turned over at $45,000—said to be the highest auction price for any U.S. cover to date.

Stamps and coins

It is the handiwork of Mr. John W. Hill, who served Waterbury as clerk and/or postmaster for 53 years. In the course of having fun with a pocket knife and some cork stoppers, he made hundreds of designs that are now avidly collected by cancellation enthusiasts.

Around the time of these hellawhooping headlong birds (1869), it was up to the postmasters to supply their own "killers" and the Waterbury creations are far and away the most desirable.

Since the cork carvings were fragile, some lasted only a day or so. It is surprising that the one here with its wingtips and wide-open toes was able to survive three applications. But here it is, as used on one-cent Franklin stamps on the 29th of November out of Waterbury, CT. (Note the "CT"—not so new!).

There was a total of 109 Waterbury fancies in the auction, bringing in $153,000.

The nearest thing to the chicks was an elephant for $6,250, then a Brideport fireman and a soldier's head, each $5,000. Other skyhigh values were a dog's head, duck, eagle, man with pipe, man with top hat, skull and crossbones, star and crescent, and diamond rosette. A discussion with a poultry expert brought out the cherry point that the chickens are not running scared, they are running happy, as at feeding time, for instance. Something about the position of the head and the wings.

Handy paperback
Hot off the press: The first edition of Linn's World Stamp Almanac. It is a paperback, 25 chapters, 718 pages including an index. (Price: $10).

One most welcome section is called "Stamp Issuing Entities." Besides what is in Scott or Minkus, you will find Bamra (1888-1894), Banat Bacska (1919), Chios, Coamo, Vilnius, Zalaya — and dozens of other little-known stamp places with bits of their geography and background. Where else could you look if those names turned up in your philatelic reading?

There is a survey of worldwide books and periodicals and of the libraries and museums where they might be found.

They tell where and how to order from postal agencies—from Abu Dhabi to Zambia — usually giving the printers of the stamps. (We know that anything from Courvoisier or De La Rue can't be too bad).

There is a repeated reference to SODAs (standing order deposit accounts) — whether or not a country will accept them, and the minimum amount.

A flip through these pages disclosed the following "entities" that do not sting us for postage and handling: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Republic of China, Christmas Island, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Greenland, Malawi, Monaco, Nauru, Penrhyn Island, St. Vincent, Swaziland, Tuvalu, and Russia. May have missed one or two but these are definitely the good guys.

The book has a review of stamp happenings from 1970 through 1975 with much brief older history. Here you can settle arguments such as "Who was the PMG that had the Mammarskjold inverts reprinted...to satisfy the demand!?"

There is a section on postal regulations and rates. We are on a rate plateau just now because the ink was already dry on my copy and the information was seemingly still valid.

Bulletin board

Local precancel specialist and MPS club member Richard Hopper got a silver award at the ARIPEX, a national show at Phoenix, Ariz.

MPS auction and envelope-stuffing night on Feb. 22, 7 to 10 p.m., Mott's Community Hall.

Stamp and coin bourse at Andover, MA, tomorrow, and another one at Orange, CT, Legion Hall, 630 Grassy Hill Rd.

Canada hit by Citizens Band boom

By INK DIPPER
Canada is experiencing a CB explosion. It's not as large as the one that hit the U.S. within the last 18 months, but it's still significant.

The country's Department of Communications (counterpart to the U.S. Federal Communications Commission) estimates that there will soon be 1.2 million Canadians licensed to operate CB transceivers. Right now there are just over 200,000 legal CB sets in Canada and an unknown quantity of people operating without licenses.

The latest FCC report shows that more than eight million persons of businesses hold U.S. licenses, and it's probably safe to assume that several million more operate on the citizens band without a license.

Keep in mind, though, that Canada's population is about one-tenth that of the U.S., so the per capita use of CBs in Canada might one day surpass the U.S. Mark.

What's causing the increasing popularity? A lot of the same things that have sparked the growth here. Canadians want to keep up with radar and speed traps, they like the instant convenience of CBing for obtaining highway information, and the CBs have proven themselves time and again during emergencies.

But Canada is also, for the most part, a rural country. People in far-flung areas use their radios as a way to keep in touch with neighbors. The CB becomes a party line for Canadians in isolated areas who, even though they might have telephones, still enjoy the companionship of a dozen or more other CBers who ratchet-jaw into the night.

The growth in Canada has given the Doc some of the same growing pains encountered by the FCC. In some urban areas, the original 23 channels have become congested. And the flood of license applications has been almost overwhelming.

To cope with congestion, the DOC has allocated 17 new channels — the same new frequencies allotted for U.S. CBing — and set April 1 as the day the new channels can be opened. The lag, DOC officials explain, is because the DOC fiscal year runs from April to March 31, and the channel expansion will coincide with the new year.

Just as in the U.S., the channel expansion in Canada has prompted CB retailers to offer price cuts on 23-channel units to clear their inventories for the 0-channel stock.

The glut of license applications has put a strain on the DOC, officials say, but they've been able so far to cope with it and not fall far behind like the FCC, which at times took up to 90 days to process an application.

An example of the DOC service is temporary licensing of American CBers traveling in Canada with their radio gear. Most applications from U.S. CBers for the temporary permits are answered by return mail. Canadians going into the U.S., though, have sometimes had to wait up to three months for the FCC to send them temporary permits.

Of course, DOC personnel are hoping that they can keep up with the increasing numbers of people applying for permanent licensing.

Moral Choices 5: Aging and the aged

Editor's Note: This is the fifth of 16 articles in the series, "Moral Choices in Contemporary Society." These articles, which explore the controversial moral dilemmas that perplex Americans today, were written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

By DANIEL CALLAHAN

To one who recently reached the advanced age of forty-six, the rapidly approaching prospect of old age is both entrancing and terrifying.

My children will be grown, my life will once again be my own. That is entrancing. But I am not altogether reassured by some of the elderly people I see around me, who spend a good deal of their extra leisure visiting hospitals, going to the funerals of old friends, and restlessly looking for something to do with idle time.

That's if one is doing relatively well.

Many of the elderly are in nursing homes, those cunning institutions created to make certain that the elderly are not under foot around the house. The prospect that I might end my days in one of those places — staring at walls or ever-blaring television sets — terrifies me, but only slightly more than the prospect of aging itself.

I am also puzzled.

History has delivered at least two conflicting images of old age. There is the image of lost youth, declining power, creeping decay and a final lonely passing on.

There is also the image of a crowning culmination of life, respect and honor, the loving circle of one's grown children with their children, and a peaceful death enhanced by the knowledge that a full and worthy life has been lived.

No doubt both images are true. Yet no one has satisfactorily explained to me why some of the aging realize one image and some the other.

One thing now seems certain, however. Slowly but surely we are almost guaranteeing that old age will be, if not outright misery (which will be the lot of many), then loneliness, poverty and isolation.

Modern medicine must share part of the blame. It has become increasingly ingenious at keeping people alive, but has proven singularly unable to do anything about the kinds of lives people live.

If the gift of life is another ten years in a nursing home, is that pure gain? Is life on a machine a benefit?

It seems a matter of simple justice and reciprocity, a point well-recognized by older cultures, which would have found bizarre the notion that parents owe everything to children, but children owe nothing to parents.

The fact that the elderly themselves say they do not want to be dependent upon their children does not remove the moral scandal.

The root of the evil is the equally strange notion that everyone should be dependent upon himself alone. It is a heady, but wholly false myth. No one is wholly self-dependent, not as a child, not as an adult, not as an old person.

Or consider the job market.

Perhaps it is reasonable that the elderly should be forced into retirement at a certain age and that youth should be given their chance to take over. But that is a very different matter from the other message our culture also delivers. If one is not a "productive" (that is, a money-making) member of society, then one is a pure liability.

These familiar complaints, however, do not get to the bottom of the matter. The problem of age for me is summed up in a phrase I have heard people, including the elderly, utter ever since I was a child: "I don't want to be a burden on my children."

What an understandable and yet, at the same time, strange thing to say. It is understandable because the prospect of helplessness and dependency is part of the fearful image of old age.

It is also very strange. Those same children upon whom one does not want to become dependent are the very ones who were for so long dependent upon the parents. If children need parents for eighteen or even now twenty years — for their life, their food, their housing, their education — why should it seem so wrong for children to take up the burden of caring for their parents when the latter's time of need and dependency has come?

The most obvious problem is that the proportion of aged in the population will continue to grow, from 9 per cent at present to 11 per cent within another 20 years or so. There will, in particular, be a very large increase in the number of those 75 and over, a great proportion of whom will need considerable care and attention if they are to survive.

But will they be allowed to survive? One price to be paid for their survival will be an increasingly expensive investment of medical resources.

The array of medical miracles which can stave off death is increasing, and so is the cost of those miracles.

Should the elderly have access to incredibly expensive open-heart surgery, or by-pass operations, or round-the-clock medical care? Why, some are now asking, should large sums be invested in research on diseases which afflict primarily older people (cancer, heart disease) rather than on diseases which impair the lives of younger people (genetic disease, for example).

These are pertinent and reasonable questions, which would arise even if we did not already have a problem about respecting the elderly.

Put in the context, however, of a growing indifference to the elderly, they become ominous.

If the elderly are already unwanted, but still at least grudgingly tolerated, the rising cost of medical care and technology may make the next step possible. That step is, in the name of medical scarcity, to begin denying aid to the elderly.

Our culture is still not so grotesque that it would act in an openly brutal way. It always needs its moral excuses.

Medical scarcity, rising costs, the needs of youth — they may do very well as those excuses, and all the more cleverly because there is more than a grain of truth in them.

They will not have to be invented. They will be there for the taking.

NEXT WEEK: Robert W. Tucker, professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University, analyzes the relationship between morality and politics in "Politics: The Domestic Struggle for Power."
